Hacker causes computer chaos

By Renee McDonell

The MSC computer network system was broken into by a hacker on an outside terminal who deleted user accounts and created files that displayed obscenities on terminals.

The Sun system of Richardson Hall and the computer center's mini computer were broken into between July 15 and Aug. 12. No arrests have been made and the incident is still under investigation.

Lynn Truesdell, assistant vice-president for information services, said that all the files that were deleted were retrieved and the vulgarities removed. Ten computer staff members, with the help of AT&T and Internet, shut down the system in order to modify 3000 accounts, examine all log-in procedures and make changes restricting access of certain accounts.

The computer network was back to normal operation procedures on Sept. 20 after an overall review and correction of the computer security system.

Truesdell said that to get into each account, users will have to know both the account number and password. All the accounts now have less potential access, but students, faculty and administrators will still have access to what they need and want.

Truesdell also said that the best precaution for users to protect their accounts is to keep passwords and account numbers to themselves and to create passwords that aren't easy to guess.

MSC to spend $40 million on campus construction

By Jennifer Thees
Correspondent

Construction on a $40 million facility addition and renovation plan will begin in fall 1991 and last approximately one and a half years.

According to Jerome Quinn, director of MSC facilities and planning, the funding of this plan is mostly coming from the Jobs, Education and Competitiveness Bond Act, a state bond for such ideas. Last year's tuition increase will pay for what the bond does not cover.

The improvements planned for the 220-acre campus are:
- An 8.6 million addition to Sprague Library. The south and east sides will have a 40,000 square foot increase.
- A $1.3 million addition and renovation is planned for the music building.
- An addition to the maintenance receiving department, next to the football field, as well as the construction of a facility across the street for Campus Police.
- A 90,000 square foot academic building for the School of Humanities and Social Sciences will be constructed on lot 13.

Quinn said that no additional parking accommodations will be made to compensate for the loss of lot 13. Quinn also said that construction of the parking garage has been delayed until later years.

"These facilities are desperately needed by our college. We have the lowest square foot-per student ratios among the nine state schools. These facilities will go a long way to relieve the shortage," said Quinn.

C1C subsidized $3300

By Richard E. Buckley, Jr.
Staff Writer

Tony Susco, SGA president, defended Class One Concerts (C1C) after $3,300 was lost in subsidizing Tuesday night's rap concert promoted by C1C.

Tickets for the show were $3 for students and $5 for non-students, but no tickets were purchased prior to the concert. On Tuesday at 8:05 p.m. Susco and members of C1C decided to open the concert to everyone free of charge.

"If C1C charged $3 a person and 30 people showed the SGA would have had to subsidize the rest ($3,290) and that would have been around $110 a person. By opening the doors, 250 students showed and the SGA subsidized the concert for $13 a student," said Susco.

Susco justified the action by explaining that it served the "greatest good for the greatest many." "They did their best to produce a show and they publicized it as best they could. I'm pleased with how things turned out," he said.

Several legislators argued that the electronic bulletin board in the Student Center Cafeteria was a waste of money because no one looked at it. After a heated debate, the SGA decided to keep the message board for now, said Susco.

STAND was appropriated $175 to pay for half of the air fare for Philip Agee, an ex-CIA agent who will be lecturing at MSC on Oct. 2.

There were appropriations of $750 to be used for alcohol awareness week in October, and $1,500 to the SGA for two busses to a leadership conference.

Cheria Dubin was voted in by the SGA as freshman representative. The Math Club was granted a class II charter.

Guess What...

Part-time MSC student Ingrid A. Saez of Paterson, a 27-year-old paralegal secretary, recently won $50,000 in the Pick-6 Lotto Bonus Million Game.

Saez, the second prize winner (the $1 million first prize was won by a North Plainfield resident), was one of 305 finalists who won a spot in the drawing by matching, in exact order, the five-digit Bonus Million Game number picked on Mondays and Thursdays during the Pick-6 Lotto game. Saez, a sophomore, plans to use the money for tuition and clothes.

Robert DeLaune, a 1990 graduate, is the first MSC student to be accepted to the master's degree program in market research at the University of Georgia. DeLaune is receiving a full scholarship, summer employment and an internship with Coca-Cola in Atlanta. DeLaune was a student of Paul Scipione of the marketing department.

About 40 students from Montclair are expected to attend the New Jersey Student Conference for Educational Rights which will be held Oct. 6-7 at Rutgers University, New Brunswick.

The students will join their peers from Rutgers, William Paterson College, and Essex County College to discuss plans for a rally in Trenton to protest tuition hikes. Invitations were also sent to Glassboro and Trenton state colleges.

Angel Mossucco, president of Students Toward a New Direction (STAND) at MSC and a legislator of the SGA, will be attending the conference. "We are organizing to show Trenton that we want a tuition freeze and will not accept another hike," she said.

Master plan for expansion

By Monica Stipanov
Correspondent

The master plan for the expansion and renovation of facilities on campus was introduced by the MSC administration at a presentation on Monday in the Student Center.

Administration officials and the plan's architects described the renovations and new construction that will begin next spring on the $40 million project.

President Reid said that MSC owed thanks to "the citizens of New Jersey (who) showed their support for higher education by voting for the Jobs, Education and Competitiveness Bond Act (JEC)."

Thomas H. Auch, Vice President for Administration and Finance said that money from the bond act can only go towards funding improvements of campus facilities. The funds cannot go to other college costs, such as salaries. For every dollar the state gives MSC, the college must contribute fifty cents.

Additional funding will be provided by the state, college reserves, contributions and $2 per credit of the proposed tuition hike.

Last May, the master plan committee hired H2L2, a Philadelphia-based architectural firm, to oversee the expansion and renovation of a number of campus facilities.

The H2L2 architects stressed their plan to blend the new construction with the existing buildings. They said they didn't want to "just drop stuff in," but they would borrow building styles already on campus in an attempt to "unify the campus."

They have completed projects at 40 colleges and universities, said Reid.

Another firm, Furnstahl & Simon, will be handling the work on the Calcit Fine Arts building.

Once approval is given by the Board of Trustees, MSC will advertise for bids next summer. Construction on campus should be finished in 1993.

Students organize statewide in response to rising tuition

An article from The Daily Targum in Rutgers New Brunswick

By Lisa Tozzi
Targum Correspondent

In response to the increasing cost of higher education in the state, New Jersey college students have organized a Student Rights Coalition. The Coalition - comprised of student leaders from Rutgers, as well as state colleges such as William Paterson, Trenton State and Glassboro State - is patterned after an active student lobby organization in the City University of New York system. Last year, the CUNY group was successful in forcing New York to rescind a tuition increase.

The New Jersey coalition will meet at Busch campus Oct. 6 & 7. The meeting will mark the first time students of state schools have formally joined forces to work for students' rights.

"It's the first time New Jersey has ever organized a front of student leaders," said Melissa Spirt, Rutgers College Governing Association president. "The CUNY system has had wonderful success. New Jersey has been slow to set up something like this," she said.

Spirt said that group's focus has been to prepare for the National Week of Action for Students' Rights Bill. There are three main components of the bill:

- Allowing student governments to control the allocation of student fees.
- Guaranteeing the organization of a state student union.
- Granting students of state colleges a referendum vote, giving them the right to fund independent not-for-profit organizations on term bills.

Rutgers already has two of the three provisions, according to Wendyann Vodak, Douglas College Government Association student affairs committee chairperson.

"We're lucky in comparison to the other state schools," she said. "Our student governments already have control over student activity fees and we already have a referendum vote for organizations like (New Jersey Public Interest Research Group), but we have to work for all state schools."

According to the William Paterson College representative to the coalition, Darrin Fedder, the passage of the bill would allow the group to become a powerful lobbying force in New Jersey since the student fees would be used to fund the student union.

"We would be able to hire a staff that could devote time to organizing students," he said. "Right now, we're not organized so we have no real say in Trenton."

Fedder said the key to success is mobilizing the entire campus of each school.

"An alliance must be set up between the student activists and the rest of the student body," he said. "You have to show students this affects all of them. Someone would have to be insane not to want to see lower tuition."

Livingston College Governing Association vice president Carolyn Wheeler agreed: "I've been to a lot of these meetings. The only way this one will be successful is if you can mobilize the entire campus."

"Rutgers students tend to use the same tactics over and over again. We have to show students how this affects them," she said. "Anyone can go to this meeting in October - it's not just for student leaders. Anyone who is concerned with rising tuition costs should go. This is a crucial time in education - this is something we should all care about," said Wheeler.

Ten years ago this week, students were cutting classes for a cause, while five years ago one of the professors was hoping he wouldn’t be cut out...

Sept. 25, 1980

□ “Strike to kill TAG bill”
In response to the state’s efforts to reallocate approximately $5 million originally intended for state colleges, MSC student leaders called for a boycott of Friday and Monday classes. According to state officials, this money, collected over the summer via a $2-per-credit tuition increase, would be reallocated to diminish the TAG (Tuition Aid Grant) program. Several other state colleges followed MSC’s example.

□ “Students out in the cold”
Freeman Hall residents were outraged when they learned they would be evicted over winter break to make room for winter session students. Those students who were staying for the session were required to purchase a meal plan that cost an additional $11 per week.

Sept. 26, 1985

□ “MacConnell must return money or face possible dismissal”
Scott MacConnell, an MSC professor and producer of the summer fun program, was instructed by the Board of Trustees to make a full restitution of the program’s money and property (estimated at $75,000) that he allegedly stole. The college filed charges which would result in his suspension and ultimate dismissal if the matter was left unresolved.

Chart provided by the National Fire Protection Association

Contributed by Domenick DiSimone
Fire Safety Officer

Each year 80 per cent of all fire fatalities in the U. S. occur in homes. Nearly 5,000 people died in home fires in this country in 1988, the most recent year for statistics.

This year Fire Prevention Week is October 7 to October 13. Both on and off campus, people are encouraged to hunt for fire hazards, and to make their homes (or dorms) as safe as possible.

Fire Prevention Week is sponsored each year to focus attention on the need for fire prevention education. It was first proclaimed by President Warren G. Harding in 1922 to commemorate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871, which killed 250 people and left 10,000 homeless.

On campus, fire drills will be conducted in all buildings during the week. They will be unannounced, and students and faculty are encouraged to take the alarms seriously.

Here’s what you can do to prevent fire hazards:
- Don’t use any open matches, candles or incense.
- If anyone smokes, make sure there are large ashtrays available that won’t tip over. Never smoke in bed.
- Don’t leave appliances such as irons and curling irons on for long periods of time. Make sure all appliances are in good working condition. They should have a sticker a (from UL laboratories, for example) showing that the product is tested and safe.
- Check for electrical cords and plugs that are cracked, worn or frayed, and for overloaded electrical outlets. If you must use extension cords, plug only one appliance into each cord and don’t run extension cords under rugs, furniture, or across doorways or heavy traffic areas. Replace worn cords and seek help from an electrician if you are unsure.
- Dispose of unnecessary trash that could cause a fire. Also, lamps get hot. Never store any clothes, curtains, and papers too close to the lamp or heater.
- Never leave cooking unattended. Wear short or close-fitting sleeves when cooking, and keep pot handles turned inward so that pots can’t be pulled or knocked off the stove. Keep appliances clean. Remember, to extinguish a grease fire, turn off the burner and cover the fire with a large lid.
- Keep all exits clear. Check that all doors and at least one window in each room are not blocked by clothes, shoes, books, furniture, and other items. Make sure windows open easily, and know at least two ways out of each room.
- Finally, always respond to fire drills, and stay away from the building once you are outside. A little inconvenience might one day save your life.
MSC has finally begun to make plans to join the world and start recycling. The plans for spending 2,000 dollars on new trash receptacles for aluminum cans is a step in the right direction, but it is far from being enough. Other state schools, like Rutgers, take recycling very seriously, and have effective programs for recycling. Up until now, MSC's only attempt to ease the burden on New Jersey landfills was allowing a private contractor to place a dumpster on campus for recyclable material.

The private garbage hauler keeps all of the money made from our college's untapped resource. It is time that the administrators realize the value of reusable garbage. The school spends incredible amounts of money on paper products for faculty and facilities such as the computer labs, but does not try to realistically recycle any of its used paper.

If even a fraction of the paper that ends up in the garbage found its way to recycling containers, the school could sell it for a profit, and maybe tuition wouldn't have to be raised every semester.

The Conservation Club has worked hard for years to increase awareness of recycling and set up a real program to deal with the increasing garbage crisis. It is beautiful that the administration plans to work closely with them as more recycling programs emerge in the future.

It is only logical that as the landfills increasingly become overcrowded and more and more of our garbage has to be shipped west, recycling will become more popular. One of the most effective weapons in the war against garbage is education, and colleges such as MSC being institutions of higher learning should advance to the front lines, and set a standard for other mass garbage producing institutions to follow.

College students who like to think of themselves as intelligent individuals would gladly cooperate with new recycling programs and help them to succeed. It will be our tax dollars of the future that will have to pay the price for irresponsible garbage management today.

Letters to the editor must be typewritten and submitted by 3pm monday. Name, major, and year are required for publication.

MSC recycles plans (Finally!)

Vietnam.

Vietnam, Vietnam, Vietnam. Since the crisis in the Gulf began, all I've heard is people whining "Vietnam." Well, guess what, to compare the Iraq crisis with Vietnam is like comparing apples and dumptrucks.

Vietnam was an uprising which the French had been fighting for decades before the U.S. decided to intervene. The Middle East conflict is where one powerful, but economically-depleted country (Iraq) owed weak but rich countries (Kuwait, Saudi Arabia) lots of money, and decided to find a creative way of not paying them back.

Now suddenly, many groups are using the crisis in the Gulf to try to rally support for whatever cause is fashionable this week-most recently, supporters of Lyndon LaRouche.

My problem here is what "The Montclarion" reported, rather than what it failed to report. In the article, Mr. Ham and Mr. Olsheski both failed to note the "peace-loving" LaRouche happens to be a fascist (can't imagine why the guy's in jail). Secondly, as far as being "lied to by the Government" is concerned, I stood for 10 minutes as Mr. Ham lied to me about how pulling troops out of the Mid­East would solve everything from the budget to the environment. (I'm sorry, but I don't think a U.S. withdrawal will solve the homeless problem).

In fact, withdrawal seems to be, for a lot of people, a cure-all. The most vehement argument is that "The Arab people want us out." Which Arab people are these? The Saudi-Arabians don't want us out. The Egyptians, Turks, and Syrians don't (and if you asked Kuwaiti refugees what they wanted, guess what they'd say). So who are these Arab people who want us out? (Hang on, that'll floor ya). The Iraqi people. Something else which should be addressed is a naive which Saddam Hussein has played well against the American people about the U.S. involve­ment. This is not (NOT) the U.S. vs. Iraq, rather it is the United Nations standing in unity against Iraq.

So right there you've shot down 90% of the anti-American arguments. And frankly, I've become tired of groups like "LaRouche for Justice" and "STAND" to name two insulting my intelligence with poorly thought-out propaganda.

Somewhere STAND tried to connect the Gulf crisis with Florio's tax increase. (I couldn't figure it out either). I went to their "Open Forum," and knew I was in trouble when someone said "All governments are bad, we need to rise up!" (Cheque please!)

As I put it in a speech to STAND: Feelings like these are not uncommon. Just a half a century ago, when a house painter came into power of an aggressive European nation, many said "We have no business interfering in the business of other nations." On this premise the nations of the world failed to act as Adolf Hitler's Germany gobbled up much of Europe and North Africa and slaughtered millions of innocent people.

After the end of the bloodiest periods in the history of civilized man, the nations of the world realized the importance of acting quickly against those who feel they have the right to dictate their will upon others.

Just over a month ago a radio broadcast cried out, "To all kings, presidents, and nations of the world, Kuwait is pleading to the world for help!"

Ask yourself this: if you were walking down the street and you came across someone who had fallen and couldn't get up, and they asked you for help, could you walk by?

In this day of moral disintegration, it would be criminal to stand by while a large aggressive militant country took personal gain by invading a small weak country.

Luckily, the nations of the world have acted in unity, to peacefully stand against Iraq.

However, you must fairly judge the facts so graciously given a room in the dorms. Japan, South Korea, Egypt, Syria, Iraq, acted in unity, to peacefully stand against "just in case!* military and/or economic support to many other countries have committed assistance that the U.S. committed forces the Marines, my oldest brother is a fighter pilot. Who knew they had a navy?) and many more including the Soviet Union (Who has aid to the Middle East, and troops in the gulf "just in case").

Let's face it, no one wants war, least of all me. My father is a Colonel in the Marines, my oldest brother is a Lieutenant in the Marines, and I'm not the youngest, so if war breaks out, I'll probably lose 3/4 of my family. However, STAND would have you believe that the U.S. alone is trying to use the crisis for "imperialism" in the region. Anyone with an ounce of intelligence can see this is not just a self-serving view of the small-minded. This propaganda made me want to throw up.

Yes it is an issue, but it is not the main issue (not even close). The main issue is that during the Iran/Iraq war, Kuwait lent Iraq 1 billion dollars. After which Iraq decided if there was no Kuwait, there would be no debt. That is the main issue.

Secondly, the U.S. and (other countries) have citizens, peoples lives which are in danger (one American dead, another shot) by a leader who cares more about personal wealth and power than his own people.

Innocent people-or tuition (get real)! I do not ask you to agree with my view. However, I do ask you to be listening and be responsible and intelligent when judging the actions of others. Otherwise, you yourself may be judged unfairly (ie. racist attacks are created when people believe the lies they create).

If your problem is with the price hikes of Mobil and Exxon (for example) then you will achieve more by addressing those companies directly. NOT by attacking the service men and women of all the nations who are proud to have volunteered for the military buildup on the Saudi and Turkish borders. Also the U.S. Government already set a 5 billion dollar cut back, so no, the defense budget will not grow. (Oh by the way, these cutbacks will cost the jobs of thousands of service people).

Whatever happened to the facts? Responsibility! How about an intelligent assessment of right and wrong? These were blantly absent in the construction of this platform.

One of the drawbacks of being a large, advanced, industrial nation is the responsibility to stand up against territory and fanatical aggression, and unfortunately when diplomacy fails, force is necessary.

Pulling the troops out of the mid-east will not solve any problems. In fact, the presence of US forces is the only reason women and children have not been released.

In the past month, I've come to a realization: People are hypocrites. Friends of mine who would scream and holler for freedom, are now packing for Canada (Well, guess what - Canada's in this too, so try Mexico).

So, what does this come down to? "Freedom when it's convenient?" or "freedom for me?!" (It's funny, I wonder how much these people would gripe if we had done nothing and gas was $2 a gallon). How sad. I'm so tired of attitudes like: "Someone should do something about crime, and hate, and violence, and selfishness, but it's not going to be me." Now someone has stood up against crime and selfishness, (4/5 of the world!) has said "Iraq, Get Out!"

Now, if anyone in my country has acted the way it has; the way I would if someone wrongly attacked you.

The paper was eager to Bring this controversial letter, but when it came to the cross-country meet last week, we received a one-sentence article while all of the other sports received substantial articles.

It was never mentioned that Jennifer Welch placed sixth in 19:55 improving her time by 52 seconds from last year. Kathy Papke placed thirteenth in 20:40 which was 19 seconds better than last season. Alicia Hennessey placed twenty-fifth in 21:07 which was 56 seconds better than last year. Carla Roberts, Danielle DeBose and Michelle Marowchek who ran the course for the first time all ran well and contributed to the teams sixth place finish.

We would just like to see our coach's name cleared because he did not knowingly falsify any records. We would also like to see more positive publicity toward our program and less negative publicity. If there are any controversial issues involving our program in the future we would like to be consulted before the paper prints an article in order to defend ourselves.

We, Montclair State College Cross-country and Track and Field team, feel the issue of the missing record book was handled unprofessionally. If Dr. Schleede, the writer of last week's article concerning Coach Bionton's falsifying records, had concerns about the records she should have confronted him before she slandered him.

When Coach Bionton arrived at MSC the men's record book was mysteriously missing. An official spokesman for the athletic department said that Coach Bionton was told those times mentioned in last weeks article were to be accepted as records until the missing record book was found. Since there was no way to know what the records were since he did not have a record book to refer to.

Not only did Dr. Schleede negatively publicize Coach Bionton, she also unnecessarily mentions the athletes' names to which these records were accredited.

SGA w/o Treasurer

Dear All,

If your problem is with the price hikes of Mobil and Exxon (for example) then you will achieve more by addressing those companies directly. NOT by attacking the service men and women of all the nations who are proud to have volunteered for the military buildup on the Saudi and Turkish borders. Also the U.S. Government already set a 5 billion dollar cut back, so no, the defense budget will not grow. (Oh by the way, these cutbacks will cost the jobs of thousands of service people).

Whatever happened to the facts? Responsibility! How about an intelligent assessment of right and wrong? These were blantly absent in the construction of this platform.

One of the drawbacks of being a large, advanced, industrial nation is the responsibility to stand up against territory and fanatical aggression, and unfortunately when diplomacy fails, force is necessary.

Pulling the troops out of the mid-east will not solve any problems. In fact, the presence of US forces is the only reason women and children have not been released.

In the past month, I've come to a realization: People are hypocrites. Friends of mine who would scream and holler for freedom, are now packing for Canada (Well, guess what - Canada's in this too, so try Mexico).

So, what does this come down to? "Freedom when it's convenient?" or "freedom for me?!" (It's funny, I wonder how much these people would gripe if we had done nothing and gas was $2 a gallon). How sad. I'm so tired of attitudes like: "Someone should do something about crime, and hate, and violence, and selfishness, but it's not going to be me." Now someone has stood up against crime and selfishness, (4/5 of the world!) has said "Iraq, Get Out!"

Now, if anyone in my country has acted the way it has; the way I would if someone wrongly attacked you.

The paper was eager to Bring this controversial letter, but when it came to the cross-country meet last week, we received a one-sentence article while all of the other sports received substantial articles.

It was never mentioned that Jennifer Welch placed sixth in 19:55 improving her time by 52 seconds from last year. Kathy Papke placed thirteenth in 20:40 which was 19 seconds better than last season. Alicia Hennessey placed twenty-fifth in 21:07 which was 56 seconds better than last year. Carla Roberts, Danielle DeBose and Michelle Marowchek who ran the course for the first time all ran well and contributed to the teams sixth place finish.

We would just like to see our coach's name cleared because he did not knowingly falsify any records. We would also like to see more positive publicity toward our program and less negative publicity. If there are any controversial issues involving our program in the future we would like to be consulted before the paper prints an article in order to defend ourselves.

SGA w/o Treasurer

12:00 pm last Friday was the deadline for all petitions for SGA Treasurer candidates. At this time, we counted (quite easily) that no petitions had been turned in. I considered several reasons for this, such as publicity and the scheduling of the election procedure. But there is one falacy I'd like to address, it is the belief that THE STUDENTS ON THIS CAMPUS JUST DON'T CARE.

This campus is made up of a diverse student population that has to carry a course load along with a full-time or part-time jobs, caring for children, paying rent, maintaining a car, and paying for their own education.

These circumstances don't give our students much time to dedicate time past their studies and work commitments. But this campus is host to almost 100 organizations where members dedicate their time to benefit others besides themselves. The commitment involved for the Treasurer position is no exception, it requires no less than the work involved in a full-time job and the responsibility towards a $600,000 budget.

Elections will still be held for the opportunity for a write-in candidate to run for this position from Sept 28th to Oct 3rd. Also there will be two referendum questions concerning alcohol policy on this campus.

If the students on this campus want the Student Government Association to present the strongest arguments about the proposed changes in the alcohol policy on this campus, the students of this campus must exercise their right to vote.

Did maintenance forget Clove Road Apartments?

Picture the scene: We almost vomitted from the stench of old urine. Disgust and revulsion set in as we looked on in dismay at the graffiti, hardened egg and crusty toothpaste that so eloquently decorated the walls. Surely, this description is not uncommon for a subway station in the worst part of NYC. Unfortunately for the residents of 108A, the above scene describes their Clove Road apartment.

The former residents of the apartment apparently left in this state. However, they graduated on May 25th. We moved in on Sept. 5th, with 3 long months in between. Go figure. And that's not all - The maintenance man, who supposedly seems worth it when every shower is ice cold, the refrigerator freezes everything, and the sinks spray water in every direction.

Is the light fixture with wires exposed dangling dangerously from the kitchen ceiling a fire hazard? And what are we to do for heat as winter approaches, since the radiators are all broken? "Use the stove" you might say. Well, we would if THAT weren't broken too.

Since it's "unsafe" to live here because the window is shattered, we have been so graciously given a room in the dorms.

Operating within a Narrow Margin

Christian Rogers
Staff Writer

How much trouble can two people get into on board a train speeding through the Canadian Rockies? If you’re a deputy district attorney protecting a murder witness from hired killers the answer is: Quite a bit. That is the basis of Peter Hyam’s new suspense thriller Narrow Margin.

As the movie opens we are introduced to Carol Hunnicut, played by Anne Archer, who in the first ten minutes of the film witnesses the murder of her blind date in his hotel room. Fearing for her safety and the safety of her witnesses she flees to the Canadian wilderness and hides out in a remote cabin.

Enter Robert Caufield, played by Gene Hackman, a Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney who is obsessed with putting the mafia boss responsible for the killing behind bars. Caufield goes to the cabin to retrieve Hunnicut, who is more than reluctant to testify about the top level mob slaying to which she was witness. Caufield exposes Hunnicut’s character is very two dimensional and much of her dialogue is flat and phoney. Is the audience meant to like Carol Hunnicut because she was exceedingly nasty and unlikable and her attitude about self preservation as opposed to doing what is right? It must be very frightening being threatened with death by a couple of mafioso killers but there is a moment when common sense must take over, but for Carol that moment never seems to come.

The high points of this film are the tense and exciting moments at the film’s climax which occur mostly while the main characters dangle outside the moving train. Since the train is in such a remote area and the communications have been cut there is really nowhere for Robert Caufield and Carol Hunnicut to go until there is nowhere left to run inside the train. The two fugitives are then forced in a final attempt to escape the hit men by climbing onto the top of the train. Followed closely by their hunters, a desperate and thrilling struggle ensues and makes for an extremely exciting sequence that finds the audience wincing. In some ways the film reminded me of a Road Runner cartoon. The train screaming down the tracks and the Coyote seeing the tunnel just a few seconds too late.

Overall Narrow Margin slips in just under the wire for an enjoyable night at the movies. For what the plot lacks in the way of originality and surprise the acting and breathtaking sequences off, on and hanging outside the speeding train more than make up for it. I recommend this film to those people who enjoy a good action/adventure film and don’t mind that the plot twists are a little obvious.

To maintain clarity, each book recommended below will be described as follows: title, creators, short general description, a direct quote from a recent issue, the publisher and the price. The order selected is totally random. Due to space limitations, I’ve omitted a number of books of comparable quality. So it goes. You may note that there is not one dagnned turtle in the bunch. That is intentional.

Narrow Margin, written by Neil Gaiman (original writer, Alan Moore), drawn by Mark Buckingham. What if benevolent, omnipotent super-beings from another world actually did come to earth? Well, they would create a “golden age” fulfilling all our needs, thereby rendering all of human history

Greetings and Salutations, MSC. I would like to send out a thanks and a “bless you” to all who have supported me. In this, I mean compliments, put-downs, criticisms, ideas, and dedication. Without you, I am nothing. Anyhow, the drama is over. Now, back to our regularly scheduled program...

Cypress Cardholders: Our 1st single this week goes out to all you fearless partygoers. You have all braved the “wrong-line” of Clave Road. Your dedication was inspired by Ted “Parrot-head” Connolly, a Clove resident. The song is “Let’s get Drunk and Screw” by Jimmy Buffett. The 2nd dedication is to the new freshmen who live on campus and have what is now considered more detrimental to your well being than a credit card. I’m talking about the card we all have that entitles us to shorten our lives everyday, the Meal Card. Your song is “What have I Done to Deserve This” by the Pet Shop Boys.

1st String: I just got a copy of the new George Michael CD, Listen Without Prejudice. Vol. 1. Those of you who are expecting something along the lines of Faith are mistaken. This is a more personal and stripped down version. One track that shines is “They Won’t Go When I Go.” It’s a haunting yet soulful rendition of this Stevie Wonder classic. By the way, his vocal raps are at his finest. The strongest message conveyed is to shed the image. This would explain the title, cover, & video. This is a summation drawn from the cut, “Freedom 90.” He sings, “...today the way I play the game has got to change...I just hope you understand, sometimes the clothes do not make the man.”

2nd String: Eric Clapton will release a 2-CD set tentatively called Live At The Royal Albert Hall. It’s a 22-live song set with special performances including Robert Cray. It’s due for a November release... A recent release is a spoof on 2nd String’s As Nightly As They Wanna Be... It’s called After The Jews. The Album is titled As Koster They Wanna Be...Michael Jackson’s Bad album tallied for $30,000 on the auction block (did I mention how tacky it is?)... High Strung: “Release Me” by Wilson Phillips, is the #1 song in the country for 2nd week in a row... “Cracks” by the Boys have the new #1 single...Nailing the top of the album chart for a 15th week in a row is MC Hammer with Please Hammer Don’t Hurt ‘Em...

String You Along: What is the song most performed in the History of Music? Last week’s answer was “because I’m not planning on going solo...” This is probably the most ironic lyric George Michael ever wrote in his life and days. Unfort...

3) "The Saviour", written by Mark Millar, drawn by Nigel Kitching. Say hello to the Antichrist. He's a media clerks-in fact any damn body he feels like, because he's crazy. First Published.
4) "Hate", written and drawn by Peter Bagge. This book is to "Archie" as "Twin Peaks" is to "Dynasty". Mr. Bagge makes us laugh at the social, sexual, and alcoholic misadventures of typical young adult Buddy Bradley. ..."Look at the fallin' apart! I look and feel like an old geezer! Look at that posture! It's no wonder my clothes ache all the time...I need new underwear too...this pair is shot."
Fantagraphics Books, $2.00.
5) "Hellblazer", written by Jamie Delano, drawn by various artists. The incredibly dark and depressing life of a British post-punk antihero. From all outward appearances totally amoral, John Constantine nevertheless habitually finds himself saving the world, and therefore his own skin, from an assortment of demons. When he's not having a nervous breakdown..."I keep trying to kill it, but it just won't die. All my life it's been pervading in me, sending me scrabbling under stones, sifted through cess-pits and middens...looking for something worse than itself. And each ghastliness it led me to, would claim a sacrifice in place of me." D.C., $1.50.
6) "Yummy Fur", written and drawn by Chester Brown. The early issues contained lead stories of sexual politics and back-ups featuring adaptations of the New Testament. In more current issues, the lead feature has shifted to autobiography, which is even stranger. "So, the next day, May 25, 1975. Chester Brown had just abandoned his first Playboy magazine under this old board in this empty open field near the Brown's home."
Vortex Comics, $2.50.(Adults Only).
7) "Badger", written by Mike Baron, various artists. I'll let Mr. Baron describe this book in his own words: "Badger, a self-styled crime fighter, meets out bloody justice to Jaywalkers, ticket scalpers, indifferent teenaged fast-food clerks-in fact any damn body he feels like, because he's crazy." First Publishing. $2.25.
8) "The Sandman", written by Neil Gaiman, various artists. In his latest issue, Morpheus, the god of dreams and sibling of Death. He is in essence responsible for the content of the non-waking hours and our continued existence rather pointless. And they would occasionally make oral contact with us..."She took me, there in the wood, in the mill, while the wind and the thunder roared and ripped through the darkness outside. One pitch softball play began this week with games being played on Thursday and Sunday nights.

Gamblers 21 Busters 5

Dan Weiss went 3 for 5 with two grand slams and 10 RBI to lead the Gamblers to a victory over their Freeman Hall rivals.

ZBT 7 Mid-Digs 1

Tom Branton lead ZBT to victory with a strong pitching performance and a two run homer. Vinny Vollorea provided the big bat for ZBT with 2 home runs and 3 RBI.

Gamblers 16 ZBT 8

After coming off of a big victory against the Mid-Digs, ZBT ran into a tough and better rested Gambler team. The Gamblers exploded for 6 home runs. Leading the way for the Gamblers was Carl Buffalino, who went 3 for 5 and put together a strong team. This year, for one-pitch softball, he has done it again. Fiore picked up former Midnight Toker, John Cuna. Cuna was a major part of the Midnight Tokers championship team in 1989. Fiore also picked up 3 base hits. Mike Ketchem, sluggers Dan Weiss and Ron Clark, and pitcher Mike Strauss. Fiore's biggest acquisition had to be slugger Steve "Mo" Mulhearn. Mulhearn had been a dominating player in past years in the league and he lead his team to the 1989 championship game of spring softball.

This game was a pitcher's duel between the Banshees' Ferris and the Gambler's John Fiore. The score was 3 to 3 until the 6th inning when the Gamblers exploded for 10 runs against the defending champs. Leading the way for the Gamblers was Steve Mulhearn, with a Grand Slam and a two run home run. Ron Clark also hit a grand slam for the Gamblers in that same big inning.

Very vindictive vegetarian in Victorian vehicle visited vacuous vagrant on a vernal Valentine's Day to deliver his vile victuals.
It’s hard to say and even harder to swallow. The Mets are on their death bed. The Mets, a team with such high expectations, an unbeatable pitching staff, and a newly improved batting order, are playing a style of baseball known as “Come and get it if you can.” It’s simple to see. The Pirates have won when the Mets have won and lost when the Mets have lost. The Flounders from Fishing have had several opportunities, make that TOO MANY opportunities to make a race of it. But instead, the Mets resemble a racehorse coming down the stretch with nothing left at the wire. As cynical as it may sound, are they really in this, or does the team get too many opportunities to blow it?

However, you had the chance to see him play baseball during his short stay in New York. If you did not watch the Mets Monday night’s match-up between the undefeated Cincinnati Bengals and the wireless Seattle Seahawks looks like another Bengal cake-walk. However, the key is games are won on the field and not on paper.

The Bengals tattooed, pasted, and flattened the Patriot’s 41-7 at Riverfront Stadium Wednesday night. It was the first time during the young season that the Seahawks showed signs of being a real NFL team.

Everyone who watches football knows all about the Bengals. Quarterback Boomer Esiason and his supporting cast are in the clubhouse was nothing more than a shadow of one loss. There’s a whole season left to play.

Jet quarterback Ken O’ Brien and Charger QB Mark Vlastic showed the Bengals that it given time to throw any quarterback can exploit the middle of the Bengal’s defense as well as the secondary. This is where Seattle’s Dave Kreig will be looking to go when he puts the ball into the air. In two of their previous three games, the Cincy secondary was not able to stop receivers Al Toon and Charger wide-out Anthony Miller. The next challenger will be Seattle’s Brian Blades who had five 100 yard receiving games last year, tops among AFC pass catchers.

The Seahawks running game got some added punch with running back David Fenner who carried 22 times for 144 yards and 3 touchdowns against Denver. Fenner along with backfield mate John L. Williams makes for a solid and underrated backfield. Williams is a solid runner but does his best work catching passes out of the backfield.

Our pals in Vegas make Cincy a 3 point favorite. Before you all overcrowd the Bengal Boat, bring a life jacket. Take the Bengals and drown. Take the Seahawks and fly high. It’s just too damn hard to win in the Kingdom on Monday Night. Seahawks 22 Bengals 16

Paul’s Preview

by Paul Cioffi with Matt Wintner

Saturday’s matchup against Wagner resulted in a 23-14 Wagner victory. The Hawks now find themselves at 2-1 as they head into a showdown against Ramapo.

Ramapo is being billed as the NJAC team of the 90’s. Montclair State was the NJAC team of the 80’s and this game may see a changing of the guards. However, the king of the mountain is still MSC and it’s up to Ramapo to do something about it.

THE LOSS

“Going into the Wagner game, our team had great expectations. The loss to Wagner left a sour taste in our mouth, but we are even more pumped up for Ramapo. We can’t live our lives in the shadow of one loss. There’s a whole season left to play.”

THE NEW KIDS ON THE BLOCK

“Ramapo is young, aggressive, and making their best bid to win the NJAC. Considering the fact that they haven’t beaten us for 10 years, I don’t foresee this one getting away from us. Although we can’t live in the past, we must regain our composure and simply spank them because it’s all on the line.”

WHAT COUNTS

“Ramapo has talked about a good ballgame for a month but when it comes to it, its won on the field. The little battles on the field don’t matter. It’s the outcome of the war that matters.

GRANTED

“James Grant is the inspiration and focal point of their team. Ramapo lives and dies with Grant. Therefore if we stop Grant, we know what happens to Ramapo.”

Going into Saturday’s 12th annual Pride Bowl against Wagner College, MSC was undefeated, hadn’t allowed a single touchdown and sported one of the most leathal backfields in all of Division III football.

After Saturday’s game, MSC still had the lethal backfield but neither of the other two previously mentioned held up, which made Montclair such a heavy favorite over Wagner.

MSC was upset 22-13 by Wagner in a game that could easily have been won, had it not been for turnovers and ultimately penalties.

Freshman quarterback Steve Banas was intercepted four times, two of which led to Wagner scores.

Banas’ first interception of the game came early in the first quarter, leading to a Wagner 21-yard field goal and an early 3-0 lead.

MSC regrouped and mounted an impressive 53-yard, six play scoring drive with 58 seconds left in the opening quarter. On the final play of the drive, tailback John Walker, who rushed 27 times for 103 yards and two TD’s, dashed into the end zone to give MSC a 6-0 lead. Jim Young’s PAT was good and MSC lead 7-0 heading into the second quarter.

Mid-way through the second quarter Wagner kicker Walt Lopez booted a 43-yard field goal to cut MSC’s lead to 7-3.

MSC and Wagner each mounted successive drives late in the second quarter but were unable to capitalize, MSC would get a blocked field goal and Wagner because of an interception by senior defensive back John Hernandez.

The Hawks took a 7-6 lead into halftime, but the second half only brought disaster.

On MSC’s first possession of the second half, Banas’ weakly- thrown pass was intercepted by a Wagner defensive lineman and returned to the Montclair 24 yard line.

However, the Red Hawks’ defense held tough, and Wagner was once again forced to kick a field goal. Wagner took a 9-7 lead with 12:22 left in the third quarter.

Late in the period Wagner pulled off two big defensive plays of their own to shift the game’s momentum in their favor.

MSC, feeling the urgency to go for the touchdown, decided not to kick a field goal and instead went for the first down with 4th and 2 to go on the Wagner 36 yard line.

John Walker was given the task of running the ball and he was dropped behind the line of scrimmage by a Wagner safety blitz. Wagner took possession and sensed an upset in the making.

With 7:58 left in the 3rd quarter, MSC’s highly rated defense was stunned by a 65-yard touchdown by Greg Harris, who shared MVP honors with Montclair State defensive end Paul Cioffi.

Until that run MSC had not allowed a touchdown in 11 quarters of play.

MSC’s offense continued to struggle and was forced into punting situations throughout most of the game.

Late in the 3rd quarter MSC fumbled on a punt and Wagner recovered on the MSC 2 yard line.

MSC’s defense, which had been dominant throughout the season, was now forced to try to hold Wagner’s surging offense to at least a field goal.

With things going their way, Wagner’s Greg Harris rumbled into the end zone for his second TD of the game to give Wagner a 22-7 edge with the addition of the Lopez extra point.

MSC’s next two possessions ended in a fumble and another interception.

Still, early in the fourth quarter the Hawks switched to no huddle offense and found some success through the air.

Banas, who completed 15 of 30 passes for 151 yards, and 4 interceptions, started to gain some confidence and the mighty Hawks were on the march again.

Banas connected with Ernie Harris for a 35 yard pass and then threw another 10 yard strike to Steve Pecchinini.

The Hawks, after starting deep in their own territory, now found themselves on the Wagner 3 yard line.

John Walker’s 2 yard touchdown run, his second on the day, brought MSC to within 7 points of Wagner 22-13, with 9.54 left in the game.

MSC elected for the 2 point conversion instead of the PAT, but Banas never made the conversion.
