Hacker causes computer chaos

By Renee McDonnell
Correspondent

The MSC computer network system was broken into by a hacker on an outside terminal who deleted user accounts and created files that displayed obscenities on terminals.

The Sun system of Richardson Hall and the computer center's mini computer were broken into between July 15 and Aug. 12. No arrests have been made and the incident is still under investigation.

Lynn Truesdell, assistant vice-president for information services, said that all the files that where deleted were retrieved and the vulgarities removed.

Ten computer staff members, with the help of AT&T and Internet, shut down the system in order to modify 3000 accounts, examine all log-in procedures and make changes restricting access of certain accounts.

The computer network was back to normal operation procedures on Sept. 20 after an overall review and correction of the computer security system.

The repairs were made at no expense to MSC, as staff members received no extra pay for overtime and weekends, and AT&T and Internet were under contract.

Truesdell said that he thinks that there was no criminal motive behind the break-in because "most hackers do it for fun and the challenge and not for illegal purposes."

"The hacker was able to get into the system by looking through system authorization files. Once he found an account with a password that he could guess easily, he had a place to start looking for ways to get into the system further."

Extra security has been placed in all of the systems to prevent future break-ins.

Truesdell said that to get into each account, users will have to know both the account number and password. All the accounts now have less potential access, but students, faculty and administrators will still have access to what they need and want.

Truesdell also said that the best precaution for users to protect their accounts is to keep passwords and account numbers to themselves and to create passwords that aren't easy to guess.

MSC to spend $40 million on campus construction

By Jennifer Thees
Correspondent

Construction on a $40 million facility addition and renovation plan will begin in fall 1991 and last approximately one and a half years.

According to Jerome Quinn, director of MSC facilities and planning, the funding of this plan is mostly coming from the Jobs, Education and Competitiveness Bond Act, a state bond designed for such ideas. Last year's tuition increase will pay for what the bond does not cover.

The improvements planned for the 220-acre campus are:

- An $8.6 million addition to Sprague Library. The south and east sides will have a 40,000 square foot increase.
- A $1.3 million addition and renovation is planned for the music building.
- An addition to the maintenance receiving department, next to the football field, as well as the construction of a facility across the street for Campus Police.
- A 90,000 square foot academic building for the School of Humanities and Social Sciences will be constructed on lot 13.
- Quinn said that no additional parking accommodations will be made to compensate for the loss of lot 13.

Quinn also said that construction of the parking garage has been delayed until later years.

"These facilities are desperately needed by our college. We have the lowest square foot-per student ratios among the nine state schools. These facilities will go a long way to relieve the shortage," said Quinn.

CIC subsidized $3300

By Richard E. Buckley, Jr.
Staff Writer

Tony Susco, SGA president, defended Class One Concerts (CIC) after $3,300 was lost in subsidizing Tuesday night's rap concert promoted by CIC.

Tickets for the show were $3 for students and $5 for non-students but no tickets were purchased prior to the concert. On Tuesday at 8:05 p.m. Susco and members of CIC decided to open the concert to everyone free of charge.

"If CIC charged $3 a person and 30 people showed the SGA would have to subsidize the rest ($3,290) and that would have been around $110 a person. By opening the doors, 250 students showed and the SGA subsidized the concert for $13 a student," said Susco.

Susco justified the action by explaining that it served the "greatest good for the greatest many." "They did their best to produce a show and they publicized it as best they could. I'm pleased with how things turned out," he said.

Several legislators argued that the electronic bulletin board in the Student Center Cafeteria was a waste of money because no one looked at it. After a heated debate, the SGA decided to keep the message board for now, said Susco.

Saez, the second prize winner (the $1 million first prize was won by a North Plainfield resident), was one of 305 finalists chosen in the drawing by matching, in exact order, the five-digit Bonus Million Game number picked on Mondays and Thursdays during the Pick-6 Lotto game. Saez, a sophomore, plans to use the money for tuition and clothes.

Robert Dellaume, a 1990 graduate, is the first MSC student to be accepted to the master's degree program in market research at the University of Georgia. Dellaume is receiving a full scholarship, summer employment and an internship with Coca-Cola in Atlanta. Dellaume was a student of Paul Scipione of the marketing department.

About 40 students from Montclair are expected to attend the New Jersey Student Conference for Educational Rights which will be held Oct. 6-7 at Rutgers University, New Brunswick.

The students will join their peers from Rutgers, William Paterson College, and Essex County College to discuss plans for a rally in Trenton to protest tuition hikes. Invitations were also sent to Glassboro and Trenton state colleges.

Angel Mossucco, president of Students Toward a New Direction (STAND) at MSC and a legislator of the SGA, will be attending the conference. "We are organizing to show Trenton that we want a tuition freeze and will not accept another hike," she said.

Part-time MSC student Ingrid A. Saez of Paterson, a 27-year-old paralegal secretary, recently won $30,000 in the Pick-6 Lotto Bonus Million Game.

Master plan for expansion

By Monica Stipanov
Correspondent

The master plan for the expansion and renovation of facilities on campus was introduced by the MSC administration at a presentation on Monday in the Student Center.

Administration officials and the plan's architects described the renovations and new construction that will begin next spring on the $40 million project.

President Reid said that MSC owed thanks to the citizens of New Jersey (who showed their support for higher education by voting for the Jobs, Education and Competitiveness Bond Act (JEC)).

Thomas H. Auch, Vice President for Administration and Finance said that money from the bond act can only go towards funding improvements of campus facilities. The funds cannot go to other college costs, such as salaries. For every dollar the state gives MSC, the college must contribute fifty cents.

Additional funding will be provided by the state, college reserves, contributions and $2 per credit of the proposed tuition hikes.

Last May, the master plan committee hired H2L2, a Philadelphia-based architectural firm, to oversee the expansion and renovation of a number of campus facilities.

The H2L2 architects stressed their plan to blend the new construction with the existing buildings. They said they didn't want to "just drop stuff in," but they would borrow building styles already on campus in an attempt to "unify the campus."

They have completed projects at 40 colleges and universities, said Reid.

Another firm, Furnstahl & Simon, will be handling the work on the Calcia Fine Arts building.

Once approval is given by the Board of Trustees, MSC will advertise for bids next summer. Construction on campus should be finished in 1993.

Students organize statewide in response to rising tuition

An article from The Daily Targum in Rutgers New Brunswick

By Lisa Tozzi
Targum Correspondent

In response to the increasing cost of higher education in the state, New Jersey college students have organized a Student Rights Coalition.

The Coalition - comprised of student leaders from Rutgers, as well as state colleges such as William Paterson, Trenton State and Glassboro State - is patterned after an active student lobby organization in the City University of New York system. Last year, the CUNY group was successful in forcing New York to rescind a tuition increase.

The New Jersey coalition will meet at Busch campus Oct. 6 & 7. The meeting will mark the first time students of state schools have formally joined forces to work for student rights.

"It's the first time New Jersey has ever organized a front of student leaders," said Melissa Spirt, Rutgers College Association president. "The CUNY system has had wonderful success. New Jersey has been slow to set up something like this," she said.

Spirt said that group's focus has been to prepare for the National Week of Action for Students' Rights Bill. There are three main components of the bill:
- Allowing student governments to control the allocation of student fees.
- Guaranteeing the organization of a state student union.
- Granting students of state colleges a referendum vote, giving them the right to fund independent not-for-profit organizations on term bills.

Rutgers already has two of the three provisions, according to Wendyann Vodak, Douglas College Government Association student affairs committee chairperson.

"We're lucky in comparison to the other state schools," she said. "Our student governments already have control over student activity fees and we already have a referendum vote for organizations like (New Jersey Public Interest Research Group), but we have to work for all state schools."

According to the William Paterson College representative to the coalition, Darrin Fedder, the passage of the bill would allow the group to become a powerful lobbying force in New Jersey since the student fees would be used to fund the student union.

"We would be able to hire a staff that could devote time to organizing students," he said. "Right now, we're not organized so we have no real say in Trenton."

Fedder said the key to success is mobilizing the entire campus of each school.

"An alliance must be set up between the student activists and the rest of the student body," he said. "You have to show students this affects all of them. Someone would have to be insane not to want to see lower tuition."

Livingston College Governing Association vice president Carolyn Wheeler agreed: "I've been to a lot of these meetings. The only way this one will be successful is if you can mobilize the entire campus."

"Rutgers students tend to use the same tactics over and over again. We have to show students how this affects them," she said.

"Anyone can go to this meeting in October - it's not just for student leaders. Anyone who is concerned with rising tuition costs should go. This is a crucial time in education - this is something we should all care about," said Wheeler.

Ten years ago this week, students were cutting classes for a cause, while five years ago one of the professors was hoping he wouldn’t be cut out...

Sept. 25, 1980

□ “Strike to kill TAG bill”
In response to the state’s efforts to reallocate approximately $5 million originally intended for state colleges, MSC student leaders called for a boycott of Friday and Monday classes. According to state officials, this money, collected over the summer via a $2-per-credit tuition increase, would be reallocated to diminish the TAG (Tuition Aid Grant) program. Several other state colleges followed MSC’s example.

□ “Students out in the cold”
Freeman Hall residents were outraged when they learned they would be evicted over winter break to make room for winter session students. Those students who were staying for the session were required to purchase a meal plan that cost an additional $11 per week.

Sept. 26, 1985

□ “MacConnell must return money or face possible dismissal”
Scott MacConnell, an MSC professor and producer of the summer fun program, was instructed by the Board of Trustees to make a full restitution of the program’s money and property (estimated at $75,000) that he allegedly stole. The college filed charges which would result in his suspension and ultimate dismissal if the matter was left unresolved.

Statistics from 1988

Contributed by Domenick DiSimone
Fire Safety Officer

Each year 80 per cent of all fire fatalities in the U.S. occur in homes. Nearly 5,000 people died in home fires in this country in 1988, the most recent year for statistics.

This year Fire Prevention Week is October 7 to October 13. Both on and off campus, people are encouraged to hunt for fire hazards, and to make their homes (or dorms) as safe as possible.

Fire Prevention Week is sponsored each year to focus attention on the need for fire prevention education. It was first proclaimed by President Warren G. Harding in 1922 to commemorate the Great Chicago Fire of 1871, which killed 250 people and left 10,000 homeless.

On campus, fire drills will be conducted in all buildings during the week. They will be unannounced, and students and faculty are encouraged to take the alarms seriously.

Here’s what you can do to prevent fire hazards:

Don’t use any open matches, candles or incense.

If anyone smokes, make sure there are large ashtrays available that won’t tip over. Never smoke in bed.

Don’t leave appliances such as irons and curling irons on for long periods of time. Make sure all appliances are in good working condition. They should have a sticker a (from UL laboratories, for example) showing that the product is tested and safe.

Check for electrical cords and plugs that are cracked, worn or frayed, and for overloaded electrical outlets. If you must use extension cords, plug only one appliance into each cord and don’t run extension cords under rugs, furniture, or across doorways or heavy traffic areas. Replace worn cords and seek help from an electrician if you are unsure.

Dispose of unnecessary trash that could cause a fire. Also, lamps get hot. Never store any clothes, curtains, and papers too close to the lamp or heater.

Never leave cooking unattended. Wear short or close-fitting sleeves when cooking, and keep pot handles turned inward so that pots can’t be pulled or knocked off the stove. Keep appliances clean. Remember, to extinguish a grease fire, turn off the burner and cover the fire with a large lid.

Keep all exits clear. Check that all doors and at least one window in each room are not blocked by clothes, shoes, books, furniture, and other items. Make sure windows open easily, and know at least two ways out of each room.

Finally, always respond to fire drills, and stay away from the building once you are outside. A little inconvenience might one day save your life.
MSC has finally begun to make plans to join the world and start recycling. The plans for spending 2,000 dollars on new trash receptacles for aluminum cans is a step in the right direction, but it is far from being enough. Other state schools, like Rutgers, take recycling very seriously, and have effective programs for recycling. Up until now, MSC's only attempt to ease the burden on New Jersey landfills was allowing a private contractor to place a dumpster on campus for recyclable material.

The private garbage hauler keeps all of the money made from our college's untapped resources. It is time that the administrators realize the value of reusable garbage. The school spends incredible amounts of money on paper products for faculty and facilities such as the computer labs, but does not try to realistically recycle any of its used paper.

If even a fraction of the paper that ends up in the garbage found its way to recycling containers, the school could sell it for a profit, and maybe tuition wouldn't have to be raised every semester.

The Conservation Club has worked hard for years to increase awareness of recycling and set up a real program to deal with the increasing garbage crisis. It is beautiful that the administration plans to work closely with them as more recycling programs emerge in the future.

It is only logical that as the landfills increasingly become overcrowded and more and more of our garbage has to be shipped west, recycling will become more popular. One of the most effective weapons in the war against garbage is education, and colleges such as MSC being institutions of higher learning should advance to the front lines, and set a standard for other mass garbage producing institutions to follow.

College students who like to think of themselves as intelligent individuals would gladly cooperate with new recycling programs and help them to succeed. It will be our tax dollars of the future that will have to pay the price for irresponsible garbage management today.

Letters to the editor must be typewritten and submitted by 3pm Monday. Name, major, and year are required for publication.

NOW-let's be honest, when Kuwait asked the world for help, the first to respond were England and France. It was not until Saudi Arabia asked for the United States' assistance that the U.S. committed forces to the region, in the intention of deterring continued aggression. Since that time many other countries have committed military and/or economic support to Saudi-Arabia, including Germany, Japan, South Korea, Egypt, Syria, Morocco, Australia, the United Arab Emirates, Turkey, Belgium, Can­ada, the Netherlands (The Netherlands? Who knew they had a navy?) and many more-including the Soviet Union (Who has a navy, and troops in the gulf "just in case").

Let's face it, no one wants war, least of all me. My father is a Colonel in the Marines, my oldest brother is a Lieutenant in the Marines, and I'm not the youngest, so if war breaks out, I'll probably lose 3/4 of my family.

However, STAND would have you believe that the U.S. alone is trying to use the crisis for "imperialism" in the region. Anyone with an ounce of intelligence can see this, but STAND will use a self-serving view of the small-minded. This propaganda made me want to throw up.

Yes, it is an issue, but it is not the main issue (not even close). The main issue is that during the Iran/Iraq war, Kuwait lent Iraq billions of dollars. After which, Iraq decided if there was no Kuwait, there would be no debt. That is the main issue.

Secondly, the U.S. (and other countries) have citizens, peoples lives which are in danger (one American dead, another shot) by a leader who cares more about the oil industry than about his own people.

Innocent people-or tuition (get real!)

I do not ask you to agree with my view. However, last month I asked a friend who would scream and holler for freedom, are now packing for Canada (Well, guess what-Canada's in this too, so try organizing)

So, what does this come down to?

"Freedom when it's convenient?" or "freedom for me"? (It's funny, I wonder how much these people would gripe if we had done nothing and gas went $2 a gallon). How sad. I'm so tired of attitudes like: "Someone should do something about crime, and hate, and violence, and selfishness, but it's not going to be me." Now someone has stood up against crime and selfishness, (4/5 of the world!) has said "Iraq, Get Out!" and our government in my country has acted the way it has; the way I would if someone wrongly attacked you.

Did maintenance forget Clove Road Apartments?

Picture the scene: We almost vomitted from the stench of old urine. Disgust and revulsion set in as we looked on in dismay at the graffiti, hardened egg and crusty toothpaste that so eloquently decorated the walls. Surely, this description is not uncommon for a subway station in the worst part of NYC. Unfortunately for the residents of 108A, the above scene describes their Clove Road apartment.

The former residence of the apartment appears to fulfill this description. However, they graduated on May 25th. We moved in on Sept. 5th, with 3 long months in between. Go figure. And that's not all - the apartment is not "unsafe" to live here because the window is shattered, we have been so graciously given a room in the dorms. You yourself may be judged unfairly (ie. racist attacks are created when people believe the lies they create).

If your problem is with the price hikes of Mobil and Exxon (for example) then you will achieve more by addressing those companies directly. NOT by attacking the service men and women of all the nations who are proud to have advanced, industrial nation is the responsibility to stand up against territory and fanatical aggression, and unfortunately when diplomacy fails, force is necessary.

Pulling the troops out of the mid-east will not solve any problems. In fact, the presence of U.S. forces is the only reason women and children have been released. In the past month, I've come to a realization: People are hypocrites. Friends of mine who would scream and holler for freedom, are now packing for Canada (Well, guess what-Canada's in this too, so try organizing)

So, what does this come down to?

"Freedom when it's convenient?" or "freedom for me"? (It's funny, I wonder how much these people would gripe if we had done nothing and gas went $2 a gallon). How sad. I'm so tired of attitudes like: "Someone should do something about crime, and hate, and violence, and selfishness, but it's not going to be me." Now someone has stood up against crime and selfishness, (4/5 of the world!) has said "Iraq, Get Out!" and our government in my country has acted the way it has; the way I would if someone wrongly attacked you.

When is the last time you picked up a comic book? Ten years ago, perhaps? Well, they've changed. First of all they cost more than they used to. Second, in the past decade, the medium has exploded. The variety of product now available is astonishing.

A number of false starts during the past half-century, publishers have finally realized that they need not pander exclusively to children and anal-retentive adults. Although, they still manage to keep the market covered just as television and movies do. There are now comics genuinely targeted to a mature and literate readership. I'm not referring to the schlock filled with gratuitous sex and violence that consistently surface whenever "adult" comics are mentioned, not that they don't have their place, but to those that show a real fondness for the form and respect for the reader.

Granted, you may still have a sense of nostalgia for the characters you knew as children (I'll grudgingly admit to reading a few of these). But, let's face it, Superman is still strong, Peter Parker still has the dander in his bite, and Bucky doesn't have a fondness for dressing young ladies in skimpy, brightly-colored outfits. These are "factory"-produced funnies. The best (and worst) work usually comes from smaller, independent publishers, although, to be fair, D.C. Comics has been allowing its people a great deal of creative freedom lately and it shows.

To maintain clarity, each book recommended below will be described as follows: title, creators, short general description, a direct quote from a recent issue, the publisher and the price. The order selected is totally random. Due to space limitations, I've omitted a number of books of comparable caliber. So it goes. You may note that there is not one damned turd in the bunch. That is intentional.

1) Beautiful Stories for Ugly Children, written by Dave Lovepre, drawn by Dan Sweetman. Picture Hans Christian Andersen dropping acid and going on a road trip. Hold it together, twist it into a mobius strip, and you'll have a vague inkling of what to expect....Debbie didn't want to be anyone else's trash and when the train finally came, we went inside without them." Piranha Press(D.C.), $2.50. 2) Narrow Margin, written by Neil Gaiman (original writer, Alan Moore), drawn by Mark Buckingham. What if benevolent, omnipotent super-beings from outer space did come to earth? Well, they would create a "golden age" fulfilling all our needs, thereby rendering all of human history

Greetings and Salutations, MSC. I would like to send out a thanks and a "bless you" to all who have supported me. In this, I mean compliments, put-downs, criticisms, ideas, and dedication. Without you, I am nothing. Anyhow, the drama is over. Now, back to our regularly scheduled program...

Campus Dedication: Our 1st single this week goes out to all you fearless party-goers. You have all braved the "front-line" of Clove Road. Your dedication was inspired by Ted "Parrot-head" Connely, a Clove resident. The song is "Let's Get Drunk and Screw" by Jimmy Buffett. The 2nd dedication is to the new freshmen who live on campus and have what is now considered more detrimental to your well being than a credit card. I'm talking about the card we all have that entitles us to shorten our lives everyday, the Meal Card. Your song is "What have I Done to Deserve This" by the Pet Shop Boys. The 3rd dedication follows: title, creators, short general description, a direct quote from a recent issue, the publisher and the price. The order selected is totally random. Due to space limitations, I've omitted a number of books of comparable caliber. So it goes. You may note that there is not one damned turd in the bunch. That is intentional.

2nd String: Eric Clapton will release a 2-CD set tentatively called Live at the Royal Albert Hall. It's a 22-song set with special performances including Robert Cray. It's due for a November release. A recent release is a spoof on 2 Live Crew's As Nasty as They Wanna Be. It's titled As Nasty as They Wanna Be...Michael Jackson's Bad Duke told me he sold $30,000 on the auction block (did I mention how tacky it is?)

High Strung: "Release Me" by Wilson Phillips, is the #1 song in the country for 2nd week in a row. "Crazy" by the Boys have the new #1 black single...Nailing the top of the album chart for a 15th week in a row is MC Hammer with Please Hammer Don't Hurt 'Em.

String You Along: What is the song most performed in the History of Music? Last week's answer was "because I'm not planning on going solo..." This is probably the most ironic lyric George Michael ever wrote in his 80s days. The #1 song next week, peace, love and brutal honesty, MSC.

Narrow Margin

As the movie opens we are introduced to Carol Hunnicutt, played by Anne Archer, who in the first ten minutes of the film witnesses the murder of her blind date in his hotel room. Fearing for her safety and the safety of her family, she escapes to the Canadian wilderness and hides out in a remote cabin.

Gene Hackman, a Los Angeles Deputy Guard­ian, thrust into an extrodinary situation.

Enter Robert Caufield, played by Gene Hackman, a Los Angeles Deputy District Attorney who is obsessed with putting the mafia boss responsible for the killing behind bars. Caufield goes to the cabin to retrieve Hunnicutt, who is more than reluctant to testify about the top level mob slaying to which she was witness, but in the process of locating her witness Caufield exposes Hunnicutt's whereabouts to hit men sent to silence her.

Hunnicutt and Caufield escape amid a flurry of machine gun fire to a Vancouver-bound train only to discover that the killers have boarded with them. Now begins a tense and deadly game of hide and seek aboard a train screaming down the tracks and the

The high points of this film are the tense and exciting moments at the film's climax which occur mostly while the main characters dangle outside the moving train. Since the train is in such a remote area and the communications have been cut there is really nowhere for Robert Caufield and Carol Hunnicutt to go until there is nowhere left to run inside the train. The two fugitives are then forced in a final attempt to escape the hit men by climbing onto the top of the train. Followed closely by their hunters, a desperate and thrilling struggle ensues and makes for an extremely exciting sequence that finds the audience wincing. In some ways the film reminded me of a Road Runner cartoon. The train screaming down the tracks and the Coyote seeing the tunnel just a few seconds too late.

Overall Narrow Margin slips in just under the wire for an enjoyable night at the movies. For what the plot lacks in the way of originality and surprise the acting and breathtaking sequences off, on and hanging outside the speeding train more than make up for. I recommend this film to those people who enjoy a good action/adventure film and don't mind that the plot twists are a little obvious.

John Fiore, the "George Steinbrenner" of S.I.C. sports, always seems to find a way to pick up talented players and put together a strong team. This year, for one-pitch softball, he has done it again. Fiore picked up former Midnight Toker, John Cuna. Cuna was a major part of the Midnight Tokers championship team in 1989. Fiore also picked up 3rd baseman Mike Ketchum, sluggers Dan Weiss and Ron Clark, and pitcher Mike Strauss. Fiore's biggest acquisition had to be slugger Steve "Mo" Mulheam. Mulheam had been a dominating player in past years in the league and he lead his team to the 1989 championship game of spring softball.

All these acquisitions have given the Gamblers three wins against strong opponents with an average margin of victory of 11 runs...The team with the loudest and most loyal fans has been

This was a pitcher's duel between the Banners' Ferris and the Gambler's John Fiore. The score was 3 to 3 until the 6th inning when the Gamblers exploded for 10 runs against the defending champs. Leading the way for the Gambler bats in the 6th inning rally were Steve Mulheam, with a Grand Slam and a two run home run. Ron Clark also hit a grand slam for the Gamblers in that same big inning.

John Fiore, the "George Steinbrenner" of S.I.C. sports, always seems to find a way to pick up talented players and put together a strong team. This year, for one-pitch softball, he has done it again. Fiore picked up former Midnight Toker, John Cuna. Cuna was a major part of the Midnight Tokers championship team in 1989. Fiore also picked up 3rd baseman Mike Ketchum, sluggers Dan Weiss and Ron Clark, and pitcher Mike Strauss. Fiore's biggest acquisition had to be slugger Steve "Mo" Mulheam. Mulheam had been a dominating player in past years in the league and he lead his team to the 1989 championship game of spring softball.

The Bottom Line

It's hard to say and even harder to swallow that the Mets are on their death bed. The Mets, a team with such high expectations, an unbeatable pitching staff, and a newly improved Darryl Strawberry have been looking at the heels of the Pirates for over three months. Unfortunately for the Mets and their fans, the Pirates have been unphased by it all.

Jimmy Leyland's Three Rivers Crew has not run away with it yet, but they are playing a style of baseball known as "Come and get it if you can." It's simple to see. The Pirates have won when the Mets have won and lost when the Mets have lost. The Floundermingers from Flushing have had several opportunities, make that TOO MANY opportunities to make a race of it. But instead, the Mets resemble a racehorse coming down the stretch with nothing left at the wire. As cynical as it may sound, are they really in this, or does the team get wired. As cynical as it may sound, are they really in this, or does the team get wired. As cynical as it may sound, are they really in this, or does the team get wired.

How about a round of applause for the Yankees. They may be tucked away deep in the American League East's basement, but things are looking up.

First it was King George that was bid a fond farewell. Tears of joy were shed by the fans as King George, who had five 100 yard receiving games, the Cincy secondary was not able to stop receivers A1 Toon and Charger wide-out Anthony Miller. The next challenger will be Seattle's Brian Blades to or even attempted to play with the Seahawks.

The Bengals tattooed, pasted, and manhandled the Patriots 41-7 at Riverfront Stadium while the Seahawks lost a heartbreaking 34-31 overtime contest with the Broncos in Denver. It was the first time during the young season that the Seahawks shows signs of being a real NFL team.

Everyone who watches football knows all about the Bengals. Quarterback Boomer Esiason and his supporting cast of James Brooks, Tim McGee, and Rodney Holiman combines to create the best offensively minded team in the AFC thus far. However, the Bengal defense is vulnerable to the pass even with All-Pro David Fulcher anchoring the secondary. The Bengal run defense is also questionable and suspect.

Jet quarterback Ken O'Brien and Charger QB Mark Vlastic showed the Bengals that if given time to throw any quarterback can exploit the middle of the Bengal's defense as well as the secondary.

The performance of the Bengals' Dave Kreig will be looking to go when he puts the ball into the air. In two of their previous three games, the Cincy secondary was not able to stop receivers Al Toon and Charger wide-out Anthony Miller. The next challenger will be Seattle's Brian Blades who had five 100 yard receiving games last year, tops among AFC pass catchers.

The Seahawks running game got some added punch with running back David Fenner who carried 22 times for 144 yards and 3 touchdowns against Denver. Fenner along with backfield mate John L. Williams makes for a solid and unerroned backfield. Williams is a solid runner but does his best work catching passes out of the backfield.

Our pals in Vegas make Cincy a 3 point favorite. Before you all overcrowd the Bengal Boat, bring a life jacket. Take the Bengals and drown. Take the Seahawks and fly high. It's just too damn hard to win in the Kingdom on Monday Night. Seahawks 22 Bengals 16

WHAT COUNTS
"Ramapo has talked about a good ballgame for a month but when it comes to it, its won on the field. The little battles on the field don't matter. It's the outcome of the war that matters.

GRANTED
"James Grant is the inspiration and focal point of their team. Ramapo lives and dies with Grant. Therefore if we stop Grant, we know what happens to Ramapo." P.C.

Going into Saturday's 12th annual Pride Bowl against Wagner College, MSC was undefeated, hadn't allowed a single touchdown and sported one of the most lethaii backfields in all of Division III football.

After Saturday's game, MSC still had the lethal backfield but neither of the other two previously mentioned held up, which made Montclair such a heavy favorite over Wagner.

MSC was upset 22-13 by Wagner in a game that could easily have been won, had it not been for turnovers and ultimately penalties.

Freshman quarterback Steve Banas was intercepted four times, two of which led to Wagner scores.

Banas' first interception of the game came early in the first quarter, leading to a Wagner 21-yard field goal and an early 3-0 lead.

MSC regrouped and mounted an impressive 53-yard, six play scoring drive with 58 seconds left in the opening quarter. On the final play of the drive, tailback John Walker, who rushed 27 times for 103 yards and two TD's, dashed into the end zone to give MSC a 6-0 lead. Jim Young's PAT was good and MSC lead 7-0 heading into the second quarter.

Mid-way through the second quarter Wagner kicker Walt Lopez booted a 43-yard field goal to cut MSC's lead to 7-3.

MSC and Wagner each mounted successive drives late in the second quarter but were unable to capitalize, MSC's offense continued to struggle and was forced into punting situations throughout most of the game.

Late in the third quarter MSC fumbled on a punt and Wagner recovered on the MSC 2-yard line.

MSC's defense, which had been dominant throughout the season, was now forced to try to hold Wagner's scoring offense to at least a field goal.

With things going their way, Wagner's Greg Harris stumbled into the end zone for his second TD of the game to give Wagner a 22-7 edge with the addition of the Lopez extra point.

MSC's next two possessions ended in a fumble and another interception. Still, early in the fourth quarter the Hawks switched to a no huddle offense and found some success through the air. Banas, who completed 15 of 30 passes for 151 yards, and 4 interceptions, started to gain some confidence and the mighty Hawks were on the march.

Banas connected with Ernie Harris for a 35 yard pass and then threw another 10 yard strike to Steve Pecinnini.

MSC elected for the 2 point conversion instead of the PAT, but Banas never got control of the ball and it slipped out of his hand before he could throw it.

Tuesday night at Sprague Field, the Red Hawks lost the first game of a four game homestand to conference rival Kean 1-0. The loss to Kean dropped Montclair to 2-3 on the season and 0-2 in the NJAC. The Red Hawks are in the midst of a three game tailspin and have scored only once in their last four contests.

Despite the slide, first-year coach Deb Ballway has seen his team improve. The team's record has dropped below the .500 mark, after opening the season 2 in the NJAC. The Red Hawks are in a big game coming up against Ramapo on Saturday.
