Freeman Caf. opens on Nov. 1

By K. Mun
Correspondent

Residence Life has voted to open Freeman cafeteria on Nov. 1 in whatever state it is in, said Doug Cooper, project manager.

The work that held back the opening was the carpeting and light fixtures, said Kevin Rakowsky, assistant director of Residence Life.

"New Jersey contractors are the worst I’ve ever worked with in that they promise you one thing and deliver another," Cooper said.

Rakowsky said the factors that determined opening under present conditions are that Freeman residents have been inconvenienced for too long and the coming cold weather may make the walk to Blanton cafeteria a problem.

A petition signed by 80% of Freeman residents, who have been without a cafeteria for two months, was filed on Oct. 17 with Residence Life demanding an extension to decrease the amount of meals on their meal plans and a full refund of the difference, said Donna Pericone, head of Freeman Campus Housing Entertainment and Educational Recreational Services (CHEERS).

On Oct. 16, Freeman residents received a letter from Residence Life stating that the residents had two days to file for an adjustment in their meal plans and when they did they would receive only half of the difference.

If a student lowered their meal plan from 19 meals ($695) to nine meals ($599), the difference would be $96, but the student would be refunded $48.

In spite of the petition, the refund will still be half of the difference, Rakowsky said.

"It’s bad enough that the cafeteria was closed for so long," said Pericone, "but it’s disappointing that Residence Life took so long to respond. I wonder if they would have responded at all if we hadn’t bugged them.

Freeman residents are now being served a continental breakfast (cereal, bagels, and beverages) in the lobby adjacent to Freeman cafeteria, Monday through Friday, from 7:30 a.m. to 9 a.m. until the cafeteria is open, said Rakowsky.

Rakowsky said that the reason for the delay was that a project that costs over $25,000 has to be cleared with the Division of Community Affairs (DCA), and that this process is very time consuming. If a job is under $25,000 then the work can start without going through the DCA using MSC’s annual permit.

The cost of the Freeman cafeteria work is estimated at $212,000, said Cooper. Cooper said that instead of paying one contractor and waiting a few years for the plans to clear with the DCA, the job was broken up into smaller pieces so the project could be finished under the annual permit.

"My bosses want the job done. They don’t want to hear it’s going to take two years because of codes," Cooper said.

The work began May 28, when asbestos was removed from the floor. "The problems snowballed," said Rakowsky.

The project ran into budget, bidding, and code problems so the work didn’t go into full swing until Aug. 1. By then it was too late to back out of the project because the work had already begun, said Rakowsky. The original promised date of completion of Sept. 22 was pushed back due to the late start.

New computers for Career Services

By Monica Stipanov
Staff Writer

Career Services has expanded its program to include a computerized resume writing lab, funded by United Parcel Service.

The lab, located at the Career Services office in Student Center room 1041, provides students with Macintosh computers, a laser printer, word processing software and a resume writing package.

"Since most students do not own personal computers, they now have someplace to go to produce resumes," said Maralyn Kinch, assistant director of Career Services.

The resume writing package includes Microsoft Word 4.0, a word processor, and Resume Tips/Templates, a resume writing program. The second provides preliminary questions that assist students in writing down experience and skills and also shows samples of resumes and cover letters.

Four different resume files are available which provide ideas about style and content to help students emphasize their particular interests.

"In addition to resume writing programs the lab has a number of other programs which will help students in all phases of the job searching process," said Kinch.

"For example, Job Quest is a program that does everything from keeping track of interviews to preparing business letters. Job finder is another program that can help the students identify various companies based on organization type, location, etc..." said Kinch.

In order to use the programs, students must already know how to use a Macintosh and have their own disk, to store information, which can be bought in the book store.

A student assistant will be available in the Career Service lab to help students, and Career Service counselors will also be available to critique resumes.

Students can sign up for a one hour block of time in the Career Service office. The resume writing lab is open on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

"Introduction to the Macintosh" and "Introduction to Word Processing" are free classes offered in Richardson Hall to teach students how to use the Macintosh computers. Students can call 893-4194 for details.

Vigil honors victims of racial violence

By Danielle Staten
Targum Staff Writer

Holding candles and chanting, "Too black - too strong," about 100 students and New Brunswick residents marched last night to commemorate blacks killed in racial violence.

The African Student congress held the vigil to "heighten the consciousness level of the people at the University" about racial violence, according to Marcus Reeves, chairperson of the congress.

"The struggle for equality still continues," said the Livingston College senior.

Escorted by the Rutgers University and New Brunswick police departments, participants marched down George Street and throughout the College Avenue campus, ending at Brower Commons, where Livingston College senior Leslie Oliver began the vigil by singing the black national anthem, "Lift Every Voice and Sing."

Shongo Sweet, president of Blacks United to Save Themselves, addressed the issue of physical violence. The Livingston College sophomore said forms of physical violence such as rape and hangings were used to "reduce a proud African people to colonized slaves before the emancipation."

Rutgers College junior Arrigo Rogers, ASC member, read a prepared speech by Steven Shearod, an independent candidate for New Brunswick City Council who could not attend the march.

"The root problem of economic violence is fear, hate and mostly greed," Shearod stated.

"(However) the selflessness and concerns that you are displaying tonight are exactly what we need to effect change in our communities," he stated.

Alvin Fair, owner of Studio One Photography on George Street, said the New Brunswick community wants students to become involved in its activities.

"We strive to make students feel comfortable within the community," he said, adding that the community tries to be involved in African-American activities at the University.

Garrett Turner, a 1989 Rutgers College graduate and former chairperson of the ASC said, "I think this program is particularly timely since Africans are still subject to racial violence whether it be from the police or from other persons outside the African community."

Cook College junior Cassandra Barnett, president of Black Women's Association for Black Unity, said, "I think the vigil is a needed response to the racial violence in the black community."

"It gives us a chance to show those racists that we will not sit down, but stomp on their attempts to kill the black race."

Campus Police Report:
Five non-MSC students arrested on alcohol charges

By William C. Hendrixson
Staff Writer

\[\text{Corrections}\]

Three errors were made in the Oct. 18 issue:
1. To have a call traced through the phone company, you must press *57.
2. The names of the marines involved in the flight program are Lt. Kevin Aimsworth and Staff Sgt. John Dolly.
3. The Bursar's name is Vil Maristela.

\[\text{Bomb Threats:}\]
- Oct. 20 at 4:36 a.m. Blanton Hall front desk received a bomb threat. Campus Police cleared and searched the building, and residents were allowed to return after an hour when nothing had been found.
- Oct. 20 at 3:17 a.m. Stone Hall front desk received a bomb threat, and the building was cleared for 20 minutes as Campus Police carried out a routine search. No bomb had been found.

\[\text{Stolen Property:}\]
- Between 7 p.m. on Oct. 22 and 6:30 a.m. on Oct. 23, a spray tank valued at $90 owned by a contractor working on campus was stolen from Richardson Hall.
- Between Oct. 10 and Oct. 19, eight dozen new sweatshirts were stolen from Panzer Gym. The thefts were from 24 dozen new sweatshirts recently delivered to the athletic department.
- Oct. 21 at 3:45 p.m., the top of a candy machine in College Hall was torn off. However, nothing was stolen from its contents.

\[\text{Miscellaneous:}\]
- Oct. 19 at 10:15 p.m. a male was arrested for underage possession and consumption of alcohol in lot 29 by Campus Police investigating a complaint of loud and boisterous behavior from several Clove residents. The males arrested were not students and the complaints stemmed from several people who were harassed by the suspects as they were passing by.

\[\text{Stolen Cars:}\]
- Oct. 18 between 12:30 p.m. and 5:20 p.m., a 1986 Oldsmobile Cutlass was stolen from lot 22. It was recovered intact the next day in Woodbridge.

\[\text{Miscellaneous:}\]
- Between 7:30 p.m. on October 19 and 2:15 a.m. on Oct. 20, a 1985 Chevy was broken into. The window was smashed in and a radar detector, rear louvre and car stereo were missing.

A small lake formed in front of the Student Center this week after heavy rains. The tiles were installed over the summer, but there seems to be a drainage problem.

Reid outlines vision of MSC's future

By George Olschewski
Staff Writer

President Irvin Reid's outlook for the twenty-first century was made available to the SGA yesterday. The five-page document described Reid's hopes for a modern institution for higher education. Reid sees the future MSC with:

1. A campus-wide global education program.
2. A distinctive, innovative new student program.
3. An academically strong, selective honors program that is ethnically diverse and characterized by a strong commitment to service.
4. A technologically sophisticated campus distinguished by an aggressive computerization of the curriculum and of campus life.
5. Graduate programs that are nationally recognized for their quality and uniqueness.

SGA President Anthony Susco said that Reid's outlook includes a campus-wide computer link which will enable a student in the Rathskellar, for example, to access information in Sprague Library, and for the MSC campus to someday become totally paper free.

Some who were present at the SGA meeting were not so certain of Reid's vision. One wondered if Reid's vision was simply a token gesture, to keep the student body settled down amid the tuition hikes. They also thought that Reid's vision of a computerized campus would cost a great deal of money, which could be put to better use by deferring tuition.

The International Student Organization (ISO) was appropriated $1,600 for a trip to Montreal, Canada. Representatives if ISO stressed the educational and cultural experiences of seeing another country, and cited past trips to various locales in the United States which were very successful.

The trip will take place over the Thanksgiving weekend, and all interested persons should see the Executive Board or members of ISO for details and sign-up.

The Greek Council previously had five executive board positions, but due to a recent restructuring within the organization, the decision was made that only four were needed. A bill was drafted, and passed, that combined the two posts in the SGA of vice-president and second vice-president into one vice-president position.

Record reporter speaks on MSC tuition protests

By Audrey Regan
and Steve Sukala

The reporter who covered last year's tuition protests at MSC for the Bergen Record spoke to journalism students about his experiences during the protest.

Covering the tuition hike was like being "a witness to history," said Tom Toolen, a 20 year writer, reporter, and editor for the Record. Toolen also taught at Fairleigh Dickenson University and wrote for the Daily News.

Toolen explained his reporting style to students, using the three articles he wrote on the tuition protest as examples. First Toolen said that he "looked for the center of attention...for someone who looked like a (student) leader," in order to find out firsthand what was happening.

Toolen's next step was to call MSC officials to see how serious the protest was. Toolen cautioned journalism students about totally trusting the authorities. "Organizations won't lie but they won't stretch the truth a bit. Your first duty as a reporter, before getting the story into the paper, is to report it as honestly and factually as you know how.

"One of the biggest problems with newspapers is no follow-up on stories," Toolen said.

He also stressed the need for accuracy, and not sensationalism, citing an incident at a Board of Trustee meeting last May, "The Herald had a story saying that the students jumped up on the stage and caused a mini-riot. It was a total lie, it was totally outrageous."

Toolen said that sometimes it was necessary to call in a story when there was no time to go back to the office and write it. After Toolen called in the first of his protest stories, he made sure that no new events were happening. "You have to constantly be timely. You have to be as recent as you can be."

Toolen himself had been a rewrite man at the Record. This involved taking stories in over the phone from reporters who had to make deadline. The story is then given shape and form by the rewrite man to achieve the final version.

Guest speaker at Drop-In Center

By Caroline Froehlich
 Correspondent

Gwen Roe, education and outreach coordinator for the New Jersey Self-Help Clearing House, was a guest speaker at the drop-in center for a training workshop on Sunday, Oct. 14.

The workshop covered issues such as starting a group, building shared leadership, how to have a successful first meeting and ways to keep a group strong.

According to the Self-Help Clearing House directory, a self-help group is composed of "peers," i.e. people who share a similar experience or situation. The group is primarily run by and for its members, who have a sense of ownership of the group. The group is voluntary and non-profit.

"The biggest challenge is finding others. The second is getting them to share the responsibilities of a group," Roe said.

Roe also said that confidentiality within self-help groups is critical and "people have to feel safe," but they do not have to be supported by professionals.

Vibrant groups are the ones who share leadership amongst their members, said Roe.

The main purpose of the New Jersey Self-Help Clearing House, founded in 1979 by Ed Madara, is to provide a network of self-help groups through computer printouts, over the telephone and in a directory listing.

There are over 3,800 self-help groups in existence and about 100 new ones start every year. The majority of people who contact the clearing house are looking to join existing groups but few call to start one, said Roe.

Roe also said that her involvement with the organization had been "a real education in terms of the human condition."

Some self-help groups meet several needs. They exist for not only emotional and physical problems, but for educational and political interests as well, said Roe.

The Drop-In Center staff is interested in helping people who are looking to join an existing group or start one.

Information from the workshop is available, and if you are interested you may contact the clearing house at 893-5271.

The Drop-In Center is located between Richardson Hall and the Student Center. All inquiries will be kept confidential.
A “crash course” in responsible drinking

By Ann Daly
Staff Writer

Alcohol, one of the most ancient of intoxicants, has taken its place in the campus spotlight once again.

As Alcohol Awareness Week continues (Oct. 22-Oct. 27), the message is spreading that drinking — one of the more common activities associated with college life — can lead students into life or death situations.

The National Council on Alcoholism, Inc., a national non-profit organization combating alcoholism, drug addictions, and other related problems, estimates that alcohol is over twice as popular among college students as marijuana, and over five times as popular as cocaine.

So far, films and presentations during the week have attempted to show students that alcohol is a speedy and deliberate drug that takes the human body from sobriety to stupor very quickly.

Getting students to drink responsibly, specialists feel, particularly in light of a Blanton Hall resident's hospitalization last week for alcohol poisoning, is the key to reducing some of these problems and saving lives — especially as far as drunk driving is concerned.

"Alcohol is a depressant," said a spokesperson for Mountainside Hospital's Alcohol Treatment Unit. "It's responsible for reducing judgment and physical coordination, and when students combine drinking and driving, it can result in arrests, injuries, or death."

Sgt. Debra Newcombe of the campus police said that there are no figures available on alcohol-related incidents on campus, but that many incidents reported involve alcohol.

She added that the only way campus police findings out about on-campus drinking is when there are incidents and enforcement actions.

Yet H. William Tackman, a Bergen County counsel on alcoholism and drug abuse, says drinking isn't the real problem — drunk driving is.

Tackman serves as the Commissioner of the New Jersey State Commission on Drunken Driving, an eight-year-old organization that advocates educating students on the virtues of responsible drinking.

"We don't tell them not to drink... That's idiotic, and it doesn't work."

But Tackman feels that to help students make responsible decisions about alcohol, the Drop-In Center staff offered the following tips:

- Limit the number of drinks to a sensible amount.
- Space drinks, and try alternating food and drink.
- Eat a meal, before or while drinking.
- Sip drinks to take in alcohol more slowly; never gulp drinks down.
- If you drink and drive in New Jersey, you're playing it safe if your blood alcohol content (BAC) is below .05%. Once you exceed that level, your thinking and reasoning powers are not clear. If a level of .10% and above is reached, you are driving while intoxicated (DWI), and face legal penalties including fines and imprisonment.
- To help students make responsible decisions about alcohol, the Drop-In Center staff offered the following tips:

Do you think students at MSC drink irresponsibly?

No, definitely not the majority of students. There are always some that do drink irresponsibly, of course, but I do not want to see a problem in the majority.

Sue Kuebler
Freshman | Mathematics

For the most part, yes, but irresponsible drinking here is a microcosm of society. Drinking in excess is encouraged by the irresponsible advertising of alcoholic products. On the other hand, I think cannabis should be legalized and taxed. You cannot smoke to the point of excess and be taken to the hospital; you can be taken to the hospital for drinking to excess, like that student recently.

Mark S. Lucey
Junior | English

No, they don't. They're just out to have a good time; drinking is a part of college life. There shouldn't be restrictions on those that are of legal age to drink, but students should know when to say when.

Looking back
by Chris Panepinto

Ten years ago this week, the campus was united in a fight against the state, while five years ago, the faculty was rallying for another professor...

Oct. 23, 1980

"TAG bill amended"
College students all over the state enjoyed a victory when Assembly bill A. 1972 was amended. The bill would have originally reallocated $4.5 million or 50% of the previous summer's tuition increase to the Tuition Aid Grant (TAG) program. The amended version reallocated a significantly lower portion of the funds, and was to be voted on in December.

"Unions at odds"
The New Jersey Education Association (NJEA) was seeking faculty support to oppose the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) as the MSC faculty's collective bargaining agent. The NJEA felt the AFT hadn't provided quality representation in discussing demands for the faculty's contract renewal with the state.

Oct. 24, 1985

"Faculty Senate criticizes handling of MacConnell case"
The Faculty Senate voted to censure MSC President Walters and the Board of Trustees for the suspension of professor Scott MacConnell in a meeting on Oct. 16. The Senate objected to his suspension without pay, and to the disciplinary actions imposed on him before the charges against him (allegedly taking $75,000 in Summer Fun receipts and property) had been proven. Finally, they argued that the Board's action was a breach of proper protection of a tenured professor.

On the road to law school

By Christian Rogers
Staff Writer

L. A. Law, n’est-ce pas?
Apparently not.
Yet being a law student in MSC's paralegal or pre-law minor programs can be a rewarding experience, said Jennifer Wiggins, vice-president of the campus' paralegal fraternity, Phi Alpha Delta.

Yesterday afternoon, the fraternity co-sponsored the eighth annual Law School Admissions Day in the Student Center Ballrooms with the department of legal studies and the student paralegal association. Over forty schools and law organizations were on-hand to answer students' questions about entering law school.

"Three hundred eleven students registered at the program," said Wiggins, 20, who added that two panel discussions about choosing and attending law school were also available, along with a film about the Law School Admissions Council.

Yet yesterday's presentation isn't the only preparation for law school available to the MSC students.

"A lot of the work that you do in law school involves research," said Wiggins, "and there's a course here called Fundamentals of Research that's important for that."

The fraternity, which was founded at MSC in 1987 and has 30 new members this year (the best new enrollment in the chapter's history," said Wiggins), is open to the whole campus community (not just paralegal or pre-law minors), because a person from any major can apply to law school.

"We have speakers and panel discussions about how to choose a law school, and how to survive once you're there," she said, "plus how to prepare for the LSAT's (Law School Admissions Tests).

"We used to have mostly political science majors, but lately it seems we're getting more diverse. There are more English, psychology, and business majors taking pre-law and paralegal minors," said Wiggins, a junior anthropology major.

This year, Phi Alpha Delta plans to offer more experience in the field of law through a mock trial competition, the first one of this kind offered on a college level.

While this experience as well as future speakers helps to make preparations for law school less painful, to Wiggins, the biggest reward from these events are the role they play in her future, the goal she hopes to achieve in becoming a lawyer.

"I'd like go into human interest or welfare law, combining anthropology and law to help the disadvantaged," she said.

Her role in "MSC law," no doubt, pushing her and other future lawyers into those bigger and brighter things.

Administration shows no Support for The Montclarion

Last week the administration sent The Montclarion a letter stating that they are behind the students working for the paper 100%. They claim to fully believe in the freedom and rights of the press and appreciate the efforts of the staff as it works to put out a responsible collegiate weekly.

We'd like to thank the administration for its claim of support, and we hope we can continue to print accurate and informative articles that inform the student population about what goes on at MSC. But we would like to see some action from the administration to support its claims.

Twice in less than a year The Montclarion's right to freedom of the press has been violated, and nothing has been done about it. Last May, when a photographer's film was taken the administration again did nothing. It is clearly against our First Amendment rights that her film was taken, yet no one has done anything to get the film back or investigate the incident.

How can the administration claim it believes in The Montclarion's First Amendment rights when it does nothing to ensure they are not violated? The fact is, the administration claims to support us, but when support is needed they are nowhere to be found.

The staff of The Montclarion sincerely hopes this will change, and something can be done to rectify this type of situation. A better working relation between the administration and our staff will ensure that the students of MSC will be given the most complete information in its newspaper.

Letters to the editor must be typewritten, accompanied by a name, year, and major, and submitted by Monday at 3 pm. The Montclarion reserves the right to edit all editorial letters for spelling, grammar, and brevity.

Student Voice by Ray Kalainikas

The wealthy on a local, national, and international level control the machinery of government. They use the machinery of government to steal money from their fellow human beings through the process of taxation.

The power to tax is the power to destroy.

Taxation is legal theft, and consequently immoral. But the vast majority of people do not understand this, because the wealthy have used the clergy to condition the people into accepting taxation as the moral course of the government. Two thousand years ago, a carpenter from Nazareth explained to the people that the political state does not have the right to tax the water, air, land, and human life, because such are the creation of the one Creator, and not of the political state.

Before the people could fully understand that the only moral means of operating government are payment for services rendered and accepted and voluntary cooperation, the clergy had the carpenter executed by the Roman authorities.

Today, the wealthy control the governmental machinery of taxation by controlling the major political parties and the media which reports on the activities of government. Contrary to appearances, there is no free press in our society. And the candidates running for the major parties are hand-picked to ensure that whoever wins will enable the wealthy to tax the people as they desire.

The only way the people will be able to keep their money and control the machinery of government is by voting on issues they elect to vote on, as opposed to voting on candidates that the wealthy select for the people to vote on. Initiative and referendum in a form that effectively gives control to the people is feared by the wealthy with a passion.

On Nov. 6, Bill Bradley or Christine Todd Whitman should not have your vote. Bradley will not take the side of the people on the Florio tax package, and neither does Whitman, for she conceded to the editorial board of the Asbury Park Press that a tax increase of $1.5 billion was needed (according to the story in the Oct. 9th edition) to fund the new state budget without cuts and with the added school funding ordered by the state Supreme Court.

Instead of a vote for Bradley or Whitman, pull back the metal slide above their stated political office in the ballot box, and write in the words, "Joe Referendum" as your write-in vote.

Let it be known that "Joe Referendum" stands for every citizen with the following political platform: 1. The right of the people to place a binding referendum on the political ballot. 2. The right of the people to recall any elected official. 3. Repeal of the Florio tax package (school-aid distribution formula included). 4. The elimination of any genuine state budget deficit by cutting state spending and personnel, as opposed to raising one extra dollar in taxes.

The Montclarion is printed on recycled paper
Response to the racism question

In response to the article, "Not A Question Of Racism" printed in last week's Montclarion, I would like Mr. Olschewski to know that there is nothing racist about allegedly falsifying records. Why? Because Coach Blanton is being treated on this campus by his so-called "fellow colleagues." Regardless if he did something wrong or not, why couldn't he live in dignity? Dr. Schleede, come forward to him before taking it to print?

You would think that since they are involved in the track team, that she would have had the common sense to make him aware of what she thought was wrong before she took it to print for the world to see.

You know why, because she, along with others would love to see him removed from MSC.

So I finally noticed a growing trend in the media, have you, blacks "getting a bum deal" on the news. You know why we call it racism, it's because the media only tells one side of the news, and seems not to be interested in both sides.

No one is interested to hear about the way that "so called" white police officer, who shot the black youth, has not served any time in prison for killing that young boy; no one is interested to hear that when the lawyer's report to this day inequality is the right way of life. Racism and prejudice is alive and well. I've seen it, I've experienced it, and I know it is all around me wherever I go.

You ask what our country has come to Mr. Olschewski, well, if the pigment in your skin was brown, you would know that this is how you would have lived in America. Instead, you should ask what the country is returning to.

Vice Pres. speaks about Blanton

John Blanton is a first-rate coach and a fine professional. To have had to witness yet another assault on him has been a disheartening experience, most of all, certainly, to Coach Blanton himself and to his team, but also to all of us who believe in fair play and in loyalty.

The young people who were here at the time of his appointment will recall that it was surrounded by controversy – none of it, of course, of his making. At the time, I learned, even more clearly than I had known before, what depth of loyalty lies between a coach and the members of his or her team. It was understood by the players and the coaches, had to win the confidence and support of the returning athletes. And he did.

Moreover, he recruited extraordinarily vigorously in his first year and last year, so that MSC has, at last, real teams, rather than a few individually excellent athletes. And while this necessary and important work of building a team was going on, Coach Blanton had the full support of the administration and, I believe, of the campus at large.

Even so, he was the totally innocent victim of repeated slurs and thoughtless insensitivity on the part of one or two individuals, whose First Amendment rights no one sought to deny. Coach Blanton endured these indignities with understanding. It was the insensitive on the part of one or two going on, Coach Blanton had the full loyalty of all those on the campus last semester. Let's keep that reputation on Nov. 9th.

It is everyone's right to choose what name it. Let's face it, there are those who will always have prejudice against beliefs. It is to be lamented that persons may occur. Thus, it is not always easy to assess the true records.

Coach Blanton never was aware that any records he reported were not, in fact, accurate. It is to be lamented that persons with pledges contrary to his reporting did not advise him personally directly at the time. He is now, in fact, appreciative of the corrections that have been provided.

Certain discrepancies still exist, and many of the times disputed are themselves incorrect due to conversion factors. Others may remain in doubt until or unless we can locate the missing material.

It is clear that Coach Blanton has earned the respect and loyalty of his student athletes. He deserves a lot of the entire college community.

Prejudice felt by pledges

This message goes out to all the prejudiced, ignorant people at MSC: Please, wake up!

Prejudice. It's an evil deeply embedded in our society. It's a venom that has infested the human race. It takes on many forms, and is often concealed by hypocrisy. It's spreaded in disguise.

Hard words? I can't find any others to describe just how horrible prejudice is. I strongly believe that prejudice is our world's real enemy. It creates problems, many conflicts, many wars.

The problem goes beyond skin color. That's only the surface, the obvious. The truth is that prejudice surrounds us daily whether we like it or not. There is prejudice against race, sex, social status, beliefs, religion, height, weight, you name it. It's there and I believe that if they don't do it, it's not "cool". There are also those who will alter their personalities in order to "fit in", and feel sorry for those poor, weak-minded individuals.

Unfortunately, MSC thrives with prejudice. I've seen it often, but only now have I been able to consider getting this letter out before they hit us home. Well prejudice has hit mine.

The particular type of prejudice I wish to talk about is prejudice against athletes. As an active member of a greek organization, I am very concerned with a few recent incidents regarding my "line" motto.

In case your mothers didn't tell you, if you don't have anything nice to say, you shouldn't say anything at all. Certain people on this campus feel that pledging on a line is senseless, stupid, and/or hazing. Well, that's your opinion. I strongly believe that prejudice is our world's real enemy. It creates problems, many conflicts, many wars.

It is everyone's right to choose what they want to do with their lives. Those of us who have chosen this as an organization or others like it should not have to hear everyone's voiced opinions or verbal attacks, especially when it is common knowledge that "lines" cannot respond to people other than their big brothers/sisters (except in class or work).

Who are any of you to say that our preference is "puppy love?" I give nothing but support to pledges of other organizations. If I don't, I mind my own business. I wish other people would do the same.

If someone feels that walking around with a brick, a paddle, a tray, or otherwise is a way to attain sister/brotherhood and will make them a better person, then do it by all means.

There are those of us, however, who feel that doing those things will not benefit us. We have pride in our letters because we pledge as a unit. Our type of pledging makes us united. Our sister/brotherhood bonds go way beyond our college years.

We don't pledge on lines to humiliate anyone or go on power trips. Everything we do has its special meaning. There is a reason behind everything that we do. If someone feels that our organizations, people just make fun of things they don't understand. Our process is much like the military system, except without the second generation. No one mocks the military, they mock us instead. I would just like to state that I hope my mother, father, and the rest of young adults are the future of this country, and of the world. Instead of causing friction amongst ourselves, we should be working towards peace and unity. Believe it or not, the solution lies in our hearts, and the road to a better tomorrow lies in our own backyards.

Our campus and organizations will one day be passed on to our children. Let's try to make them positive ones. Let's work hard towards a better future. Let's try to put our prejudices to the open-minded. Our way is not the right way. Everyone is different.

Prejudice is ignorance. Prejudice is fear. Fear hurts us all. This message goes out to all the prejudiced, ignorant people at MSC: Please, wake up!

Tuition rally organized

On Oct. 6 and 7, representatives from ten state schools met at Rutgers-New Brunswick campus to discuss affordability and accessibility at our state colleges and universities. Workshops were held covering such areas as campus organizing, fund raising, lobbying our legislatures, and universities. Workshops were held covering such areas as campus organizing, fund raising, lobbying our legislatures.

We hope MSC's SGA and all clubs and organizations on the campus will participate in this action. There will be a freedom yazılı salmon to be taken to Trenton on Nov. 9th.

MSC has an excellent reputation among our state schools as an active and involved participant due in large measure to the hard work of our organization to Trenton which occurred on our campus last semester. Let's keep that reputation on Nov. 9th.

We'll meet at the MET

By Alicia Difolco
Staff Writer

Imagine taking your date to the Metropolitan Museum of Art this weekend. Seriously. Holding hands while gazing at Cupid encircling Psyche in his arms, rendering her helpless by his power as he bends down to kiss her, certainly gets that heart of yours pumping.

The scene just described is a plaster geological display, doesn't it? Let it set for about fifteen minutes before serving.

After you take it out of the oven, look at it. Bears a strong resemblance to a gummy, wants to be a pile of cheese and sprinkle them with bread crumbs. Put a cover on the whole mess and you're all set.

Do this with an entire loaf of bread and for about fifteen minutes before serving. Bears a strong resemblance to a stoned worm for not knowing how to do something so ridiculously easy.

It's time for you to entertain. All your friends have had you over for dinner, and you have yet to return the social obligation. But as is the norm, you have definitely cash flow problems. How do you feed four people for under ten dollars? You don't. No, no, just kidding - of course you can!

First of all, since this column is in the “arts” section, go put on a C.D. of something. I recommend the Psychodelic Furs' latest, Book of Days. It's droning, dirge-like and depressing, sort of like a downbeat Depeche Mode. So, it's ideal for meal preparation time. On to the menu...

First, the beverages. Stick to water, it's free. Gather up some empty "designer" water bottles and fill them from the tray, and you're all set. Salad dressing, if needed. Voila! Salad is ready.

Next, the salad. Find out who's going to the menu...

Appetizers. Oooh, where's where it starts getting to be fun. Remember when you were a kid (yes, this is harder for me than it is for most of you), and you would take the center of a slice of white bread and roll it into doughy little balls? Do this with an entire loaf of bread and moisten the balls with water. While gummy, roll them around in grated parmesan cheese, pepper, or "Fruity Pebbles." Stack them neatly on a serving tray, and you're all set.

Now, for the main course. This is going to be a variation on "Shepherd's pie." There is going to be no connection with sheep dip. You will need the following ingredients (remember to buy the cheapest of each):

- Potatoes (your standard mashing type), about 3 lbs.
- Bread crumbs (mixed work nicely), 1 lb.
- Meat (ground - your choice), 1 lb.
- Mustard cheese (sliced), 1/2 lb.

Cook and mash the spuds. I'm not going to waste time telling you how. Ask your mother. If she's Italian, ask your father. He knows how to cook as well as she does, and is less likely to make you feel like a stumped worm for not knowing how to do something so ridiculously easy.

Do the veggies, but don't overcook them. Let them simmer for about 2/3 the recommended cooking time. Drain them. Put the pot to the side. Proud of yourself? You should be. Heck, before you know it, you'll be able to figure out how a door works.

Brown the ground meat. Personally prefer veal. Every male over thirty prefers veal. It's an age thing you wouldn't understand. Again, do not overcook. Drain. Get the hang of this.

All right, the first part of the preparation is complete. Now go find yourself a four-qt pyrex bowl. Square or round, it doesn't make much difference. Makes sure it has a lid. I prefer a clear one; it adds to the effect. Grease the inside with butter, margarine, oil, or whatever. Line up the ingredients you've prepped plus the cheese and bread crumbs.

Make an even layer of potatoes about 1-1/4" thick in the bottom of the cooking bowl. Over this, layer the mixed vegetables. Now add another 1 layer of potatoes. On top of this, spread the meat evenly. Add one final layer of potatoes. Don't feel obligated to use all of the spuds. If there is any excess, toss it out. Come on, this stuff costs next to nothing! As a final layer, spread out the mixture of cheese and sprinkle them with bread crumbs. Put a cover on the whole mess and you're all set. If there is any excess, toss it out. Come on, this stuff costs next to nothing!

Cooking time may vary depending on the stove, but figure at least thirty minutes, but no more than forty-five. If you want the top to be nice and firm and crusty, remove the lid for the final five or ten minutes of cooking time. If you want it to be a gross, gooey mess, leave it alone.

After you take it out of the oven, look at it. Bears a strong resemblance to a geological display, doesn't it? Let it set for about fifteen minutes before serving.

What sells on television? No, I'm not talking about the Super Snacker or Auri or Zamfir's Greatest Hits, Volumes 1-12. What really pulls in the bucks for the networks? Commercials, right? Well, that's half of it. But what's on in the ten minute slots between commercials? Programs. What zaps these programs to the top of the Neilsons? There are two:
Sex, and violence.
Remember Twin Peaks? Peakers do. Tell me there wasn't sex in there. What about the daytime soaps? My friend's niece asked me why the two people on TV were sticking their tongues in each other's mouths (she's only ten, and hasn't learned the worldly ways yet. Suprising, seeing how old she is).
Am I saying it's wrong? Absolutely not! We all like to see a little skin now and then, girls and guys alike. Radical Christian fundamentalist fascist neo-Nazi hi-this-and-the-other-face Jerry Falwell types don't like it. But every time
I hear about this, I remember that scene from Porky's II-The Next Day. You know, the one where all the anti-skin people are in the basement watching a skin film from The Reverend himself? 'Nuff said.

I do agree that young kids shouldn't be watching this, but when our society is so saturated in it, to the point of no return, what can we do? Censor? Ban?
Burn books? Pass laws? Cry? Throw a temper tantrum? These have been tried and almost all have failed. Advertisers have had their ads pulled. Granny Goodness has screeched and screamed to deaf ears. What do we do now? Let's all be good television viewers. Let's all sit back, and watch a little television.
If you don't like it, then, for goodness sake, TURN THE ELECTRIC SON-OF-A-GUN OFF! That's what the switch is for.

The Montclair/Thursday, October 25, 1990
With luck, you should be able to cut nice meat wedges and serve it with style. If it turns out like it usually does, you'll be scooping it out with a spoon. This should easily serve four, with plenty left over for extra helpings. It's doubtful anyone will want seconds, since it's incredibly heavy and filling.

As for dessert, don't buy anything. It's a safe bet that at least one of your guests will show up with a pie or cake or something. And if they don't, you know they'll sit around after the meal feeling terribly embarrassed for not having done so. Take advantage of this. Make them feel guilty. Let them think that you spent hours making dessert also, but that, due to some horrible misfortune, it had to be disposed of. Before you can count to ten, one of them will run out to pick something up. If you play it right you should be able to squeeze a pack of cigarettes and a T.V. Guide out of them too.

Strange Things

By Pete Quilla
Staff Writer

Strange Things happen when rock, hip-hop and industrial are poured into one searing, funky mix, which is probably why the experimental band Tackhead called their fusion-statement new album Strange Things. Their members include Skip McDonald on guitar, Doug Wimbish on bass, Keith LeBlanc on drums, Bernard Fowler on vocals, and Adrian Sherwood as sound mixer/FX.

All of the band's members have previous credentials that many musicians would die for: McDonald, Wimbish, and LeBlanc were once the core musicians of the pioneer rap group The Sugar Hill Gang; Bernard Fowler has toured with the likes of Herbie Hancock and the Rolling Stones; and Adrian Sherwood has mixed and produced the likes of Depeche Mode and Nine Inch Nails. The band's moniker is taken from the name of the beret-like cap that was worn by such people as Eddie Murphy in The Golden Child and by many young urban dwellers in cities across the country.

But enough about the band itself, let's talk about the music. The album is called Strange Things and while the music fits the title, it should not be thought of as strange at all. In fact, the adjective that would be best used to describe the music is Funky. Too damn fuckin' funky. Even though the first track, a song called "Nobody to Somebody", is weak because of its over-polished production and ancient top-forty like sound, the rest of the album hits you with an intense and voracious stomp.

Tackhead can even be complex, too, as exemplified by the track called "Wolf In Sheep's Clothing," which is about an arms-dealing politician who travels from "Brooklyn to Britian from Moscow to Bonn, sizing up arms deals at the back of the bar." (All of this happens without the public knowing any details, of course.) Other examples of this intelligent funk extravaganza are "Dangerous Sex", a song about the consequences of drugs, casual sex, and AIDS, "See The Fire Burning", a song about violence in poor and predominately African-American neighborhoods, and "For this I Sing", an anti-war song that asks the simple yet profound question, "Why can't we live in harmony?"

It should be noted that all of the members involved in this project are fantastic creatively and technically. McDonald, Wimbish, and LeBlanc are masters of making the music feel loose while keeping the band tight.

Fowler is a warm vocalist that can bring to mind memories of a young James Brown or a smoother version of Prince or Corey Glover of Living Colour. You may not understand what he is singing about, but it sounds good anyway.

On top of all of this is Sherwood, who samples and mixes like a DJ on an intoxicating musical high. He even gets a full spotlight of his talents on the album closing instrumental track, "Positive Suggestion", a track that suggests, "You are going to realize". That strange sound loop made me realize that this is a good band and a good album.

In short, I positively suggest to you to check out Tackhead and Strange Things. Who knows, strange things might happen to you as well.

Mark Jameson threw for 2 touchdown passes and ran for another to lead the Doobers past ZBT B. Jason Rosenberg had the lone score for ZBT B.

A Mark Daily TD interception and a Bob Richey touchdown pass to John Meredith lead the Banshees past the Black Knights. Also scoring TD's for the Banshees were Tom McMillian and Niles Furlony.

Rick Schannen's 3 interceptions was the major factor in stopping a high scoring Doober offense as the Gnats defeated the Doobers 28 to 8. Gnats' quarterback Brain Pray threw for 3 touchdowns to pace the attack.

The Gamblers and the Birds played to a 6 to 6 tie in a game featuring great defense. The Gamblers drew first blood as QB Ted Conley connected with WR John Fiore from 25 yards out. The Gamblers went into the half with a 6 to 0 lead.

The Birds came back in the second half to tie the game when Frank Quinn scored on a 40 yard TD run.

The game ended on a note of controversy when Vinnie Henrich was tackled by safety John Fiore in order to prevent a touchdown with 45 seconds left on the clock. An ensuing brawl forced the referee to end the game before time ran out.

The number one rated Bushmen ran into a tough Gnats defense that held them to 6 points for most of the game. With about 9 minutes to go, the Bushmen broke the tie as Scott Vega returned an interception for a touchdown.

Karl Monaco's 60 yard TD run with less than 4 minutes to go gave the Bushmen a 14 point lead which insured the victory.

The Birds got on the winning track by beating TKE 25 to 0. QB Drew Ryan threw for 2 touchdown passes to Corey Post and a TD pass to Frank Quinn to lead the Bird's offense. Quinn's TD catch was off of a screen pass and he had to dash 30 yards downfield to the endzone.

C's Comments

What?! We can't use our hands on the line of scrimmage?! You can't spin off of a tackle?!

I would have to say the flag football league has too many rules. A number of rules are totally ridiculous.

To anyone playing in the flag football league, I understand you being upset about the rules. Remember though, the referees did not make up these rules, they are there to enforce the rules. So, get off their backs!!

John Fiore did not make up the rules either. He doesn't deserve to be yelled at during a game. Get off his back, too!!

Many of the referees are untrained fill-ins. Considering the number of rules, I think that the referees are doing a pretty good job of officiating.

Most of the games I witnessed, I noticed the players were acting like spoiled infant brats towards the referees.

The game between the Birds and the Gamblers reminded me of a 7th grade gym class.

My recommendation is for the players to show up with their game faces along with intent of good sportsmanship. Lastly, I've seen players coming to games wearing bibs, diapers and needing pacifiers.

The MSC women’s soccer team notched its first Varsity NCAA victory in school history, Oct. 14, at home, with a 3-0 win over Mount St. Vincent. After losing their first 10 games, the team has now lost in their last three. The history-making victory was followed by a win at Temple, 5-1, and a tie at Seton Hall this past weekend, 1-1.

The inaugural victory against Mt. St. Vincent started as a defensive battle with both teams being held scoreless in the first half. However, in the second half MSC was not to be denied of their first win. Freshmen Nicole Sandomeno and Linda Hadshinow each scored a goal while Leslie Deluca chipped in with another score as MSC “got the monkey off their backs” and improved their record to 1-0.

MSC’s second win came at Temple with an impressive 5-1 victory. Junior Tash Snyder started the scoring with a goal 35 minutes into the first half, tying the score 1-1. Hadshinow had the dubious honor of scoring both goals in the contest. Eighteen minutes into the match she scored on a pass from Deluca and MSC was up 1-0. However, with five minutes left in the first half she tried to clear a shot and wound up scoring the lone goal for Seton Hall. MSC now holds a 2-1-0 record.

Considering this is their first Varsity NCAA season, MSC has a lot to be proud of. The schedule they have is difficult as they played several ranked teams, but definitely have made them better, Latartara said.

“The team should be complimented for sticking out through 10 games,” Latartara said. “They never lost their composure. They are gaining self-confidence and developing a good passing game. That’s the characteristic of this team—a controlled passing game.”

At season’s end, MSC will only be losing two seniors. With the addition of new freshmen to go along with the vastly improving returning players and standout goalie, Christina Hogan, MSC should have a solid team next year, Latartara said.

All of the promise and confidence MSC is starting to show could prove 1991 to be a banner year for the entire MSC soccer program.

The Bottom Line

Tonight at the Mirage Hotel in Las Vegas, James “Buster” Douglas defends his title for the first time since he dropped the KO bomb on Mike Tyson in Tokyo.

Douglas insisted that he was going to show up on the world his way. The former champion Mike Tyson said of Douglas—“He’s got the track record of a mutt. He quits.” While Douglas has been labeled as a quitter, Douglas insists that his coming out party on February 10 was only a hint of what was to come. Now the waiting is over for challenger Evander Holyfield who will finally get his shot at the title. Holyfield was ringside at the Douglas-Tyson bout and sat nervously as a scheduled June bout with Tyson and a multi-million-dollar payday was wiped out.

The fight was being billed as “Judgment Day.” Holyfield, under the watchful eye of Lou Duva, has an unblemished 24-0 record, 20 of which have come via the knockout route. Douglas’ record looks less impressive at 30-4-1 with 20 KO’s but is 7-0 since May 1987. Despite the seven fight win streak, all is not well in the champion’s camp.

Rumors have been circulating that relations between Douglas and manager John Johnson have been strained with Johnson having significantly less control over the champion since the Tyson upset. The picture remains even more unclear with the addition of Douglas’ father in the champion’s camp. The elder Johnson was previously a member of his son’s team but left in a dispute over his son’s fighting style.

Undefeated Evander Holyfield is an 8-5 favorite for tonight’s fight. The public has made Holyfield the favorite for three reasons. The first being the undefeated record, second-his chiled from stone physique, and lastly because so many believe that the Douglas victory over Tyson was a fluke. The question of whether or not the Tyson upset was a fluke will be answered tonight, but when you take a look at how Holyfield has beaten, it is all too clear that the challenger hasn’t fought a worthy opponent yet. Holyfield’s last three bouts were unimpressive knockouts of Aldisson Rodrigues, Seamus McDunnough, an English major at nearby St. Johns University, and Alex Stewart.

True there are many questions that need to be answered and will be answered tonight. The biggest question in regards to Douglas will be which “Buster” will show up? Will it be pre or post Tyson? In a recent ESPN interview with the former champion Mike Tyson said of Douglas—“He’s got the track record of a mutt. He quits.” While Douglas has been labeled as a quitter, Douglas insists that his coming out party on February 10 was only a hint of what was to come. Holyfield was ringside at the Douglas-Tyson bout and sat nervously as a scheduled June bout with Tyson and a multi-million-dollar payday to fight boxing’s biggest farce, George Foreman, if he can beat Douglas, while a Douglas-Tyson II matchup could net Buster over $50 million.

The key to the fight for Douglas is to set Holyfield up with the jab and keep him off balance like he did Tyson. The jab in the heavyweight division was a lost art form until Douglas rediscovered it. If the Douglas jab is non-existent, expect Holyfield to try to work his way inside and go to the body before trying to remove the champion’s head.

In the final analysis, Buster needs to show the world that he is for real and will do so tonight. Forget about the problems behind the scenes. Holyfield’s fragile and untouched jaw makes for an interesting match tonight. Whatever happens, the winner retains the title with a knockout somewhere between the sixth and eighth round.
Men kickers split a pair, beat TSC, lose to GSC

MSC men’s soccer experienced both the sweet taste of victory and the bitter taste of defeat last week after beating Trenton State 3-2 in dramatic fashion, followed by a heartbreaking 4-2 overtime loss to Glassboro State.

MSC trailed Trenton State most of the game, but rallied with minutes on the clock to beat TSC with two late period goals to win.

Tom Estes, the nation’s leading Division III scorer added two more to his total, including the winning goal and Carlos Arboleda scored once in the important victory over TSC.

The TSC victory was a short lived one for MSC, because two days later it would fall to Glassboro State.

MSC men’s soccer experienced both the sweet taste of victory and the bitter taste of defeat last week after beating Trenton State 3-2 in dramatic fashion, followed by a heartbreaking 4-2 overtime loss to Glassboro State.

Despite losing to Glassboro State, Coach Masur felt that his team outplayed GSC and only lost because of mental lapses.

“Tough week for us. The Glassboro game was the toughest we played all season. We are now 13-3 on the season and very hopeful of an NCAA birth. If we continue to play well and continue to win we might have a good chance of doing well in the post-season.”

In the losing cause against GSC, Guillermo Siles and Tom Estes each netted a goal.

Women’s tennis finishes 6-4

The MSC tennis team finished the 1990 season Saturday with an 8-1 victory over Hunter College. The 8-1 triumph in the season finale was extra special as they finished the season at 6-4, for its first winning season since 1984.

Second year coach Brian McLaughlin has helped turn around a team that had won just one match in the previous two campaigns in a winning program. McLaughlin attributes the turnaround to a solid work ethic which included his players taking part in an informal spring season. In addition, the team cut their summer vacations short by one week in order to return to practice early to prepare themselves for the 1990 season.

According to McLaughlin, the team's turnaround is directly attributed to top singles players Barri Pollner and Alina Wilezynski and a strong supporting cast including juniors Ann Snow and Alison Drake. The team's talent pool proved to be even deeper with Beth Polito, Michelle Lekulich, and Katie Morita cloning and producing at the number five and six slots. It was a combination of hard work and team depth that enabled them to capture big victories over Rider, FDU Teaneck, and Kean and in the process gained respect and raised some eyebrows on the New Jersey tennis scene.

It seems that the MSC tennis team has found the hard work ethic to be a constant both on the court and in the classroom. Coach McLaughlin was quick to point out that the tennis team has a collective GPA of 3.38, the highest among all Fall Sport teams at MSC.

The Red Hawks pounded Salisbury State last Saturday 30-15, as both the offense and defense played an impressive brand of football.

Coming off a lackluster 21-0 win over WPC last week, Coach Giancola made sure his players were ready for the weekend and traveled to Lincoln University. He says, "We worked hard during the week to play a complete game and we did just that."

QB Steve Banas showed what he is capable of on the field. This time he showed up big and strong as he completed 19 of 29 passes for 234 yards and three touchdowns.

Banas connected with wide receiver Ernie Harris for two of those scores, the first was a 27-yard marker at 12:05 of the second quarter. Harris had a fine performance with five catches for 108 yards, and showed promise for the future, as he is just a sophomore.

As the Red Hawk offensive machine rolled on, the defense did its job as well, holding Salisbury's every attempt at a score. The Salisbury offense could only manage three first downs, and incredibly was held to -15 yards in the first 30 minutes of play.

The men's team competed against five other teams and edged out Lincoln University, in Pennsylvania, to compete in the Cheyney Invitational. The men's team competed against five other teams and edged out Lincoln University, in Pennsylvania, to compete in the Cheyney Invitational.

As the MSC Red Hawk football team prepares to battle against conference rival Trenton State this week, the key will be constructing a game plan without the services of Al-American defensive end Paul Cioffi.

In the fourth quarter of the WPC game on Oct. 13, Cioffi was ejected from the game with seven minutes remaining for stiff arming an offensive lineman in the face.

The penalty for ejection from a New Jersey Athletic Conference game, states the player cannot participate in the following conference game.

Their offensive tackle came up under my chin with a cheap shot. And when I retaliated with a stiff arm slap to his face, the referee kicked me out of the game," Cioffi said.

The interconference game was an intense battle. So intense that WPC had been whistled for four unnecessary roughness calls prior to Cioffi's ejection.

On the ensuing MSC drive, which was posted a 27:41 time, 19th overall. The only substantial Salisbury drive, was a 74 yard march, as Gull QB Len Ansetta hit wide receiver James Johnson for a 43 yard touchdown, to make the score 30-9. Salisbury attempted a two point conversion, but an attempt by QB Len Ansetta was ruled incomplete.

Finally, with just five seconds left in the game the Blanton connection hooked up again completing the scoring 30-15, as the PAT failed.

The MSC men's and women's cross country teams packed up their gear last weekend and traveled to Lincoln University, in Pennsylvania, to compete in the Cheyney Invitational. The men's team competed against five other teams and edged out Lincoln University, in Pennsylvania, to compete in the Cheyney Invitational.

The close running by MSC didn't start there, as John Enwright finished 12th overall with a time of 27:51. Teammate James Smith followed in 11th best steps, posting a 27:41 time, 19th overall. Defeating Lincoln University, a team MSC has not fared well with in the past, was especially sweet for Coach Blanton as it brought the team up to second in the state.

On this note Blanton smiles and then says, "This is a big thrill beating my former alma mater."

Let it be known, Lincoln University is no pushover, as it is the reigning Indoor/Outdoor Division III National Champion. The fact that MSC also faces Lincoln in indoor competition, and Blanton says, "This is a big boost in confidence for the winter months."

Keeping up the pace for MSC, the women's team also did a decent job, finishing second to Delaware State in a field of five teams.

The women's cross country team, a 3.1-mile course is the requirement and over the weekend no female completed it in less time than MSC's own, Jennifer Welch. Welch ran a 17:51, which was her best time of the season yet. It's no surprise that Welch has been running strong for the team, as Coach Blanton says, "She has run extremely well for us."

Kathy Papke did some strong running of her own as she stayed close to Welch for the first 2.5 miles and finished second overall with a time of 18:00. Papke was followed by Alicia Hennessy's 18:37 time, which qualified her for fourth place. Both Papke and Hennessy recorded top personal times on this course.

The men's cross country team has been competitive since Blanton arrived several years ago, but he says that finding the number four and five runners has been a problem. Therefore, if the good fortune of the women's team continues and Blanton fills the four and five spots with consistent runners, MSC would be a genuine power for opposing teams to contend with.

The men's team on the other hand, has had its share of problems. The number two runner last year, Kevin Miller is out with a knee injury. The ankle injury to Wesley Peters, the number one runner, left him absent earlier in the season, but he has since returned and given the team a much needed boost.

But perhaps the biggest reason is that this men's team is mostly comprised of freshmen runners. Coach Blanton notes that their times have not been particularly good because the adjustment from a high school course to a college course is two miles. In high school, the distance is 3.1 miles, whereas in college the standard course distance becomes 5.1 miles. The two miles is a considerable distance more and Coach Blanton relates this as part of the team's failure to perform well this year.

However one will realize once these runners gain experience, and more strength, their times will decrease, in turn creating an overall improvement for the team.

This weekend both teams compete in the Collegiate Track Conferences Championships in Van Cortland, N.Y.
