Music building broken into
Apx. $12,000 in equipment stolen from McEachern in two weeks

By Joanne Leonard
Correspondent

Approximately $7,000 worth of music equipment was stolen from the McEachern Music Building between 1:30 a.m. and 8:45 a.m. on Friday, December 7th, Sergent Debra Newcombe of Campus Police said.

Just two weeks ago, $5,000 worth of computers and instruments were taken from the music building. The music building has been broken into four times in the last two years said Gina Balestracci, music department administrator.

Balestracci said that the security situation in McEachern is worse than it seems. She said that memos have continually been sent back and forth between administration and the music professors complaining of poor security, but nothing has been done.

"The locks have been in place for 25 years without ever having been changed. We have been told that they won't be replaced until Master Plan C is completed in 1995," Balestracci said.

McEachern Music Building has been burglarized four times over the last two years. The locks in the building have not been changed since 1965 and won't until Master Plan C is completed in 1995.

President Reid gets $8,000 salary increase

By Michael Frazee
Correspondent

President Irvin Reid was given an $8,000-a-year raise by the Board of Trustees which will make his annual salary $93,000, said Tom Auch, Vice President of Administration and Finance.

The increase will make Reid the highest paid president of the nine state colleges in N.J. Seven of the nine college presidents are tied for second making $87,500, according to Fitzgerald's Legislative Manual of the State of New Jersey.

Money for the raise will come from general revenue, 70 percent of which comes from the state and 30 percent from tuition, Auch said.

The raise, which will take effect on January 1, 1991, comes after the recent 13 percent tuition increase and at a time when Reid is asking each academic and administrative office to cut its budget by 10 percent.

When Reid was asked if he thought his raise was appropriate at this time, he smiled and declined to comment.

Most students polled on the raise had the same question as Susan Comito, Bohn Hall Resident. "What did he do to deserve this?"

"We took into consideration the total budget of college and its sources, and based on his performance, in our judgement it was fair to give it to him," MESC Board of Trustees member Joseph R. Harris said but declined to give specific examples of Reid's performance.

At the Nov. 15 public meeting of the board, Dr. Joan Ficke, Internal V.P. of the Faculty Union, objected. "I felt that it sent a poor message to the students and families who are struggling with tuition."

"The union feels that the timing was poor and it was higher than the raises to many faculty, professional staff and librarians and it was unfortunate given the financial climate," Ficke said.

Six students activated in Marine Reserves

By Stephanie Dawson
Correspondent

Five MSC students in the Marine Reserves left Saturday, Dec. 8, and one on Wednesday, Dec. 11, for active duty to serve in the Middle East.

Michael Devine, James Lloyd, Stanley Zon, William Frank, Richard Adams, and Micheal B. Boll, all between the ages of 20-24, were sent first to California for a two to three week desert training period.

"Presently, there are about 50 MSC students on active reserve for the Marines, Army and Air Force but only five students have been sent at this point," said Kenneth Key, Advisor to the Veteran's Society. Key also said that after the holidays he foresees more reserve units being reactivated.

Due to the fact that the students were unable to finish the semester, the students had the option of being graded on work completed so far, taking an incomplete or withdrawing from the class and receiving a full refund," said Dr. Edward Martin, Dean of Student Affairs.

"No student at MSC will be penalized for serving their country," Martin said.

The existing policy at MSC is that if a student wishes to take an incomplete, he has four to six weeks to make it up after the semester has ended. While the people in the reserves have the option of making up the grade whenever they return.

"The men involved will be over there for at least 6 months to a year," said Key.

"This is the first time colleges and universities had to deal with this problem and MSC has the option of modifying any policies when certain situations arise. We will work with every person involved on an individual basis," said Martin.

None of the students called to duty could be reached for comment.

John Devine, whose brother Michael was called for active duty and was unable to finish the semester, said that he doesn't support the reasons why Americans are in the Middle East but "I support the boys."

President Reid realigns administrative divisions

By Craig Sackett
Correspondent

Citing an effort to achieve “additional administrative efficiencies,” President Reid recently realigned the responsibilities of the school’s administrative divisions, said Jesse Rosenblum, vice president of Institutional Advancement.

In the change, departments will be shifted to improve organization and improve along functional and structural lines.

“Efficiencies, combining, focusing and directing the operation so it has a greater sense of focus and is not spread all over (are the purpose of these changes),” Rosenblum said.

Elsewhere: Ramapo College president and 6 aides to take pay cuts

By Caroline Hendrie
Bergen Record Staff Writer

With his campus reeling from state-imposed budget cuts, Ramapo College President Robert Scott said Tuesday that he and six of his senior aides will take pay cuts for the rest of the fiscal year.

Scott, who is paid the state-allowed maximum of $93,500 per year, said he will accept a 5 percent salary reduction, saving the college about $2,500 by June 30. His half-dozen senior staffers will see their paychecks trimmed by 4 percent, for an additional savings of roughly $5,000, he said.

“We want to show the campus community that we take our professional responsibilities seriously and that we care about Ramapo,” Scott said.

“We also hope it will attract attention to Ramapo and show people at the Department of Higher Education and the State House that Ramapo as a young institution faces challenges older campuses don’t face.”

Because Ramapo was built only 20 years ago, Scott said, the school had to foot the bill for more of its facilities than most of the four year state colleges, and it carries a greater debt burden.

With about 4,500 full- and part-time students, Ramapo is the smallest of those schools.

Scott’s announcement came on the eve of a college Board of Trustees meeting at which he plans to discuss the school’s strategy for dealing with the loss of $2.3 million in state aid this year, and an additional anticipated cut of $1.3 million next year.

Those plans call for reducing the size of the staff at the $4,500-student school, in part by not renewing contracts. But the president said he would not recommend layoffs, which he said are extremely hard to impose under state regulations.

The college also will consider economizing by further limiting enrollment, reevaluating basic skills tutoring, and finding more ways to cooperate with other institutions, Scott said.

Reid cuts Non-personnel account budgets by 10%

By Lisamarie Auletto
Correspondent

A 10% cut in non-personnel accounts has been enacted by Dr. Irvin Reid, President of MSC, to every administrative and academic office on campus.

“We all need to be aware that the budget is tight. This is the most visible way to all be a part of saving a dollar,” Provost Richard Lynde said.

Non-personnel accounts include supplies, Xeroxing, equipment and travel reductions but will not affect faculty or administration positions. “We cannot afford to do without faculty,” Vice President of Administration and Finance Thomas Ansch said.

“At least classes can go on. Instead of layoffs or furloughs, we have hit our operating expenses. We are doing all we can not to affect the quality of the classroom,” Reid said. “Electricity is one of our biggest expenses. It seems that we can not do too much to help in this area, except maybe turning off a few lights when not needed.”

With Governor Florio tightening the state expenditures, this is the harmless way of cutting expenses without affecting our academic programs,” said Lynde.

Reid said he is trying to preserve an 8% cut for next year. He said that there will be higher tuition, but nothing like last year.

He said that there will not be many classes, leaving students with a smaller choice.

“There is a hiring freeze in the administration. We cannot afford to replace any of the openings in administration,” Lynde said.

“There are, as of now, 100 vacant positions in administration. Unless it is a very critical position, we can not afford to replace it. The position is then gone,” Reid said.

“The sets in mind to be cautious about all expenditures,” Lynde said.

Policy on final examinations

1. All final examinations must be given during the regularly-scheduled examination period. The Schedule of Courses lists days and times of final examination for each class period.

2. No final examination may be given during the last week of classes before the examination period.

3. If no formal examination is scheduled, the class must meet for one hour during the scheduled final examination time for a class evaluation session. Thus, all classes are required to meet during the final examination period.

President Reid has the privilege of being the highest paid state college president in N.J. at $93,000 a year. No wonder he’s smiling.

has its raises spread out over the life of the contract at four, four-and-a-half, and five percent increases. Reid’s increase is more than nine percent and all at once.

Student alternate to the Board of Trustees, Paul Prior, defended Reid. “He does a lot for MSC and there is no doubt in my mind that he deserves it. He’s constantly tried to raise funds and lobby the governor and legislators and he has fought for the global education program in my mind that he deserves it. He’s Prior did say that one thing about the raise bothered him. “The board did nothing to explain his salary increase to the campus,” said Prior.

Angel Mossucco, President of Stu­dents Toward a New Direction said, “Instead of taking raises the administra­tion should do its job by making this college accessible to students from all incomes and backgrounds.”

Professor speaks about planning trip to China

By Felicia DiMartino
Correspondent

Relatively inexpensive trips are available to China, but only for candidates who pass a difficult competition, said a professor of the marketing department who has travelled to China.

Professor Mohammad Firoz spoke on “Designing Your First Trip to China” yesterday to a small group of students and faculty. Firoz went to China for a conference on economic development in November of 1989.

The Chinese government welcomes foreigners that can help the country such as teachers and educators, Firoz said. Firoz said the biggest problem that travelers may meet in a foreign country is not knowing the language. He recommended carrying a local-language dictionary, and to use body language.

He said that the first thing travelers will notice when they arrive in China is how different the airport is. There is no tunnel from the airplane to the airport, and passengers must go down stairs to get to the airport. There are no escalators or moving walkways, no TV screens displaying schedules and no chairs. You must ask for the schedules and sit on either the floor or on your suitcase.

While in China, the traveller will never find sugar, cream, spoons, forks, sweets, dessert or cold water, Firoz said. The water must be boiled for 20 minutes before it can be used, and the people carry around bottles with tea leaves on the bottom to fill with hot water for their drink.

Americans have to exchange their money in a Chinese bank after they arrive. The exchange rate is four foreign exchange certificates per dollar for Americans, but Chinese citizens get six yuan, the local currency. This allows the government to legally charge foreigners more than residents for products. Foreigners are not allowed to use local money except through the black market, which is possible at times, Firoz said.

“The department will miss him after his many years of loyal and dedicated service...especially his sense of humor,” said Roland Flynn, the chairman of the Chemistry Department.

Zabady is a Marine Corps veteran of World War II where he served a year. In 1963, he received a Masters of Science in Chemistry from the University of New Hampshire. He did his graduate work at the University of Denver, Montana State University and Cornell University.

In 1959, he was part of a team of 50 chemistry professionals, 25 teachers and 25 chemists who developed a new approach to teaching chemistry. The product, Chem Study, is still being used in chemistry classes across the U.S.

Prof. Zabady said that “(today’s) students are more sophisticated, know that they want to succeed...are more determined, and desire to succeed” than his students in the past were. He also feels that his best students today are better than they were in the past.

“He is an excellent teacher and will be sorely missed,” Flynn said.

His retirement plans include both business and pleasure. His wife has a long list of chores waiting for him. Painting his new plans with the chef and soon opened a 1988 Pontiac was found by its owner and Campus Police with a broken window in lot 18. An AM-FM stereo cassette was stolen from the vehicle.

Montclarion appropriated $40,000 for new computers

By Bridget Douglas

The SGA appropriated $40,000 for a new computer system to The Montclarion and $5,000 to a SILC football team to attend a National Internurals Tournament.

Richard E. Buckley, managing editor of The Montclarion, said that the present equipment is 20 years old, the chemicals used for it are corrosive, and the vapor cause dizziness. The equipment is costly, breaks down often, and the company it is from is going through layoffs and bankruptcy.

“The current system is outdated and hazrardously dangerous to our health. We as students would like to work on state-of-the-art equipment that will better prepare us for the professional world when our education is completed at MSC,” said editor-in-chief Michael Walmley.

According to Cynthia Barnes, who organized the party, students were not allowed to attend, however on the front page of Insight, the administration-backed rag, the entire campus community was invited. “During these times of financial difficulty, the opportunity to get together as a community is important, even if the celebration is not as lavish as those held in previous years,” Reid is quoted as saying on the cover of Insight. Winners in English contest honored in celebration

By Russell Blackwell
Correspondent

Poetry, dance, dramatic readings, and awards were all part of the English Department's annual year-end reception yesterday at Kops Lounge in Russ Hall.

Three scholarship awards were presented at the reception to David Craig, Valerie Kalfrin, and Nancy R. Villano for submissions to a creative writing contest held by the English club.

Prof. Muriel Becker of the English Department said, "We had one hundred and six submissions from approximately seventy people." She added that the contest was "all student judged. Judging consisted of a committee of twenty-six students in the Teaching English Secondary course and all members of the English club wholistically."

Becker said that all submissions were read by at least three or four people and all twenty-six students selected the winners after hearing them read in class by Becker.

Craig, who wrote Salvation, received $100; Kalfrin, who wrote Poetic Licence, received $50; and Villano, who wrote Unanswered Screams, received $25.

"The monies for the prizes in Humanities originate with the Memorial Book sale. This is held every spring," said Becker. "The book sale is held to memorialize recently deceased faculty. This year it will be for Dr. Raymond Paul of the English Department."

"Surprised and then nervous," was the way Craig felt being in front of the thirty or more people in attendance. "My writing is very personal, it's one thing to write it and one thing to read it." He commented that the piece he won with "disturbing" to him to read.

Kalfrin felt "happy and honored. I never won anything before and the poem that won means a lot to me."

Alice Miller, English Department Chair, presented the awards to the recipients. She said to them, "I am proud of you as English majors."

In addition to the English Department and English Club, the Organizations of Students for African Unity (OSAU) and the International Students Organization (ISO) took part in this annual event by sponsoring a dance-drama entitled "Drum Voices," and a poetic reading by the Poet Laureate of Illinois, Eugene Redmond.

Redmond, in addition to being the Poet Laureate of Illinois is also a professor of English at Southern Illinois University.

Green said the students who want to practice until the early hours are free to do so whenever they wish. "It's ridiculous, we want to know why security isn't here after midnight carding people," Green said.

Newcombe said that as far as security in McEachern is concerned, the Campus Police are responsible for looking after the building on the weekend but, as the incident was on a Friday night, the responsibility fell to the custodial center of the college.

Fred Hurtadl, assistant building manager, said that they were only responsible for the Student Center and the rest was up to Campus Police.

Sgt. Vicky Whittle said that McEachern is a very difficult building to keep secure.

Students often stay in there with the permission of an instructor, but according to policy, it is their own responsibility to inform the Campus Police when they leave the building so that it can be locked.

"It was an inside job," Balestacci said. "The security is terrible in this building. Lord knows how many others there are with the same key. There's nothing left to steal."

Green said that students are advised to carry their instruments around with them at all times, because the lockers are so easy to break into.

major degree of opposition," said Rosenblum. "He (Reid) did it in the best interest of the institution."

The realignment will not cost the school more money or result in a loss of administrative jobs as it is currently planned.

"Any savings will go to enhance and restore much of what is taken away. We're not going to know until we're well into it what kind of efficiencies can be made," said Rosenblum.

He said that "there is no back up plan" currently for the readjustment if it does not accomplish what it is supposed to do.

The changes which have taken place include the transfers of Institutional Research from Administration and Finance to Academic Affairs, Internal Auditing from Administration and Finance to the Office of the President, the assignment of Student Center operations to Student Affairs and the creation of Institutional Advancement. Many other changes will occur in the near future as a result of these first changes.

The Offices of Admissions, the Registrar and Financial Aid will be transferred to Academic Affairs. Career Services, Cooperative Education, and Continuing Education will be consolidated into what will be called the Office of Cooperative and Lifelong Learning.

Career Planning will be in the division of Institutional Advancement. Institutional Advancement will also be gaining audio-visual and graphic/photographic services in the transfer, as well as the television center which will simultaneously incorporate the School of Fine and Performing Arts within Institutional Advancement.

Information Services will handle telecommunications and administrative computing, becoming known as the Office of Administrative Support. Academic computing will move to a new body entitled the Office of Instructional and Research Support.

Administrative support will form the new Montclair State Computing, Telecommunication and Information Center (MSCTC). In July, MSCTC will be transferred to the Office of the Provost.

"Reid felt there needed to be a realignment to enhance efficiency and to place certain operations where, because of the nature of the operations, it would be compatible and supportive of the major divisions of the institution," said Rosenblum.
Tell it to the judge: Clove residents take legal action

By Anthony DiPasquale
Staff Writer

As sisters, Jessica and Meghan Kane have shared a lot of things. Here, for example, they've shared an apartment. Soon they may be sharing a court date with Residence Life.

The Kanes are seeking legal council for the second time in the past two years to help them with a disciplinary problem. Last year, one of Jessica Kane's roommate's friends stole her jewelry in order to buy crack. One evening later in the semester, Jessica said, her roommate, who was intoxicated, physically attacked her.

Jessica took her roommate to court, and the student was later fined and sentenced to a year's probation. This time, the Kanes have been documented for a noise violation at the Clove Road apartments, and have been banned from the premises. Their apartment was already on probation because of an illegal party earlier in the semester, but the sisters say that by being dismissed from their apartment, they are being treated unfairly.

How's it hanging?

Decking the halls with a twist

Students gaze at the upside-down Christmas tree, suspended from the ceiling in Life Hall, which has caused more than one double-take this holiday season. The tree and its needles, sprayed to prevent fallout, seem to be dealing well with the new twist; however, the decorations are reverting to gravity.

occupants in the apartment before they are documented.

According to Jessica, her sister was asleep when she came home from a bar with a few friends. "I didn't bring more than four because I knew we were on probation," she said.

Yet according to Jackson, two noise complaints were made to the night security guard, who called the unit manager. Jackson said that the unit manager went to the apartment and warned Meghan not to make any more noise; the noise persisted, she said, and the residents were documented for an illegal party.

The Kanes have appealed their documentation for an illegal party, in addition to their dismissal from the premises. There were only eight people in the apartment and no alcohol, they said, while the incident report says that there were nine people present with alcohol.

"When the unit manager came, she told us there were four complaints," Jessica said. "When we had our Residence Life meeting, they told us there were three, and in our appeal rejection, Kevin Rakowsky (director of Residence Life) said there were two. What's going on?"

Dean of Students Edward Martin, who was brought in last year during Jessica's dispute with her roommate, said that all residents should be aware of their right to appeal if they feel they are caught in a "mousetrap" situation.

"These residents shouldn't feel they are being victimized just because they have been victimized in the past," said Martin.

Jackson, however, said that the residents' previous record has no bearing on their present situation. "These residents are being treated the same as anyone else on probation," she said. "They aren't looked through a microscope by the unit managers, and it doesn't matter if they were documented for a party or a noise violation. Both are grounds for dismissal."

The Kanes, however, say that their lawyer feels they have a strong case of harassment. "Many other residents are still living at Clove after getting in trouble several times," Jessica said. "My old roommate wasn't banned from Clove, even though she was convicted in a Little Falls court for assault. Why are we?"

Take this quiz:

Are you

(a) someone who can write well
(b) someone who enjoys photography
(c) a person with an eye for design
(d) a person who likes working with others, and meeting different people across campus

Alpha Kappa Psi performs holiday magic for youngsters

Members of the national co-ed business fraternity Alpha Kappa Psi visited Holly Center in Hackensack on Sunday with presents, food, and a party for 50 disadvantaged children. Service committee members Gerard Gomez, Jill Hricko, Cammy Jarvis, Coles Hruse, and Amy Van Varick organized the event, which included a Santa Claus played by Steve Wyka. Bob Richey (top left) provided magic tricks and made balloon animals for the children, while other members such as Cheryl Symington (bottom left) helped open gifts and spread holiday cheer. Gomez said that the children enjoyed themselves so much that the fraternity plans to return for Easter.
Administrations: Practice what you preach!

The MSC administration would like us to think that students do not need alcohol at parties to have a good time. They are even pushing to have alcohol banned from the last remaining refuge, Clove Road.

Yet at President Reid's Holiday Party, alcohol was made readily available to everyone, faculty and student alike, enjoying the festive celebration. We are not saying that alcohol should not have been served, but we would like the administration to examine the reasons for its presence.

Could it be, perhaps, to establish the "party" atmosphere and give everyone the feeling that they are not at a funeral, but are indeed at a relaxing celebration? The answer is yes, and those are the same reasons why the students feel the need to make alcohol available at their parties.

Just because students like to drink beer at a party after a hard week at school doesn't make them alcoholics, just as an administrator having a couple glasses of wine to ring in the holidays is not harming himself or the MSC image.

It is true that some students become destructive after drinking, but these are the exceptions. Going off campus has a designated driver, then students safe? Hell no! If the administration wants to ban alcohol from Clove Road Apartments fun! People were not afraid that if they threw a party, they would get into trouble.

Fall semester 1990: parking lots desolate before a football game; the new off-campus bars, Fatsogary's; weekend parties at Clove Road few and far between. Why? Probably because you're only allowed to have fifteen people inside the apartment for a registered party. Which basically leaves room for 45 people out of approximately 2,500 to party at Clove on the weekends (social center of MSC). By the way, rules are strictly enforced.

Where does this leave the other 2,455 students who don't remember this policy, "Voo-Doo" economics policy. For those approximate 1500 students who want to wind down and have fun, this leaves them with one legal alternative, going off campus. Are these students safe? Hell no! If the administration thinks that each car going off campus has a designated driver, then they seriously need a reality check. Many times the person most "sober" is designated to drive home. Usually this person has had at least a six pack and a shot. I'm sure that person's reflexes are 100%.

Or you can go off-campus and party.

Next year, this administration plans to go one step further and ban alcohol from Clove Road, thus making MSC a dry campus.

The administration seems to think that a dry campus will give this campus a better overall academic reputation. Is this really their reason for banning alcohol on campus? We don't think that they are that ignorant.

Other state-run institutions such as: University of Vermont, Delaware University, University of Connecticut have wet campuses and uphold very high academic standards.

If the administration's intention is to create a better academic institution, then they should go about this through other channels besides banning alcohol. These channels being higher admission standards, and higher standards in the classroom, as well as hiring top of field professors when the chances arise.

Also a better repertoire with the alumni will benefit the school tremendously. Perhaps if more social functions, such as tailgate parties were offered to the alumni, they may just reciprocate and donate funds back to the school. This method works for over 90% of the other institutions around the country.

So what is the real reason behind the administration wanting to ban alcohol? Do they offer alternative social functions for the students? We doubt it. We have seen morales at this school come to a stand still. Many freshmen and sophomores tell us that they are transferring due to the lack of social activities on campus.

Recycling: Just do it!

Your friend has a Bar None candy bar and tosses the wrapper. Where? On the lawn while you are strolling by Calcia. You notice. You say nothing. Live and let live, you think and O.K. You will teach by example. Good!

And next time you have a minute maid orange juice at MSC and he/she is along your way, you can in the recycling place Where's that? The 1st and 3rd floor of the Student Center in the BIN marked ALUMINUM CANS ONLY. Or at College Hall in the CANS ONLY box by the 1st floor vending machines.

The cigarette he/she lights up after classes were held, we were lucky to leave this week is a marine reserve by the 1st floor vending machines. The cigarette he/she lights up after classes were held, we were lucky to leave this week is a marine reserve by the 1st floor vending machines.

Now multiply that by your Bar None wrappers, "Coke" can, new biodegradable cups from the cafeteria, original term paper copy, and peach juice bottle cap. You've got the picture. One messy cant be described in one word. Thanks for nothing.

Bring our troops home right now

Very many students and their families understand that a U.S. war in the Middle East is not in their is. For though the abstract contenders are "Iraq" and the "United States", the front line troops to fight and die will be the young working and middle class people of both countries.

According to Harvard Professor, John Kenneth Galbraith, "the people facing possible extinction, are young men, women, and children, from the poorer families of our republic" (NTY 11/7).

This is confirmed upon examining the situation. For since there's presently not a draft, it's the enlisted women and men and the reservists who are being sent to war. Yet, who are these people and why have they joined?

One enlisted man from Griffins Air Force Base in Rome, N.Y. lives a sadly representative situation. When his wife was interviewed about his being in Saudi Arabia, she frankly replied that "It's his job...and if he can't find another, he can't help but re-enlist" (NTY 11/15).

Others are students, in those being called up from MSC. One boy forced to leave this week is a marine reserve who's been put on active duty for the next twelve months! He joined the reserve so he could earn money to pay for tuition, and is now being deprived his promised education in order to restore Kuwait's dictator to his throne.

As from this sample, the overwhelming majority of people in the military are either struggling to get an education, or young husbands and fathers who need a job, or underprivileged high school graduates with little, if no other viable choices.

Those of the last category are largely entrapped by the rhetoric of the U.S. military. This is demonstrated by endless television advertising and on-sight recruitment at the poorest high schools. A further method is a generic letter and pamplet packet sent out to young men, and my 18 year old brother recently received.

It blithely tells unsuspecting young kids that now is a great time to join the military, enticing them with the promise of money for college or technical school. It's ridden with the word "opportunity" and many kids haven't balanced, yet a prospect in relation to the military that at this time is at best a lie, and at worst a death sentence.

For reports show it near certain that at least four major oil companies will show "profit increases of more than 40 percent from the report of a comparable fiscal quarter last year" (NYT 9/16). Further, these companies are hiding some of their gains by "stashing them in reserve" for future expenses.

This gross deception is apparently a widespread practice in the oil industry. According to a Salomon Brothers' analyst, it happens that whenever a company gets extraordinary profits, its owners "develop some extraordinary program to hide those profits" (NYT 9/16)! So to veil the fact that they are far from suffering, companies attempt to nominally allying themselves with us, cringing that "our" oil is at stake.

Fighting this war will provide none of this. Instead, racism is rampant throughout our communities, and is being encouraged within the military! (This latter phenomenon was told to me by a campus marine who's brother has just completed boot camp.)

Throughout training the troops are being told repeatedly that all Arabs are "Raeheads". In his words, they're "programming them to be prejudiced against Arabs."

Further, families are being broken apart, education is being abandoned and incomes be lost, by all people who joined seeking the opportunity to help themselves, as well as to protect our society.

Yet whom are they protecting?

The sad epitome of the situation has been stated in a cartoon which pictures a big oil man addressing a young boy going to war. The businessman laments: "I'm sorry you have only one life to give for my company." And when the shooting begins, as is promised by the January 15 deadline, many people will lose their lives.

Many, many others will lose friends and relatives. This must be opposed now. Our leaders are using all their ready weapons — that is, our fathers, sons, boyfriends, husbands and brothers, as well as all enlisted women — to fight their profit war.

The military is using fabricated racism to artificially install hate into the minds of our troops; hate against a group of similar men who be forced to fight. It hides the reality that if their country loses, or if their country wins, the troops of neither side will benefit. The way of life for the overwhelming majority of people in the United States will not be improved if the U.S. elite regain control of that oil.

Oil is available in many countries, including our own; yet it's a U.S. ally — the Soviet Union — which has the largest supply, and would gladly sell it for U.S. usage. Further, other energy sources can be utilized (a practice, of course, which the oil company profitizers are against). These examples again reiterate that the interests of the students and workers are not why are leaders are preparing an offensive.

Our leaders want control over that area, and they won't give it up without a fierce fight — using us.

When asked what he most wanted to tell students, the marine I talked with told me "I wanted them from going into the military."

Bring the troops home now.

Residence life gives warning

As you know, Bohn Hall and several other buildings experienced illegal break-ins over the Thanksgiving holiday weekend. A majority of our campus and friends had their personal space violated by unknown assailants. The Office of Residence Life is very concerned about this situation and are doing everything in our power, in conjunction with campus police, to resolve this matter.

Another break is upon us. As we prepare to leave, I must strongly encourage you to take your valuable belongings home. i.e. stereo, CD players, jewelry, etc. The Office of Residence Life is working with campus police and Statewide Security to provide additional coverage in the buildings during the winter break. It is always a vulnerable time and we need to work together to insure a safe environment.

I would also like to encourage you to take advantage of the "Identigrafs" program to identify your valuables, which will be held in all the residence halls early February. Further details about this program will be made available at a later date.

We are a part of you who are graduating the best of luck in all your endeavors. To the rest of you, we look forward to welcoming you back in January.

On behalf of the Residence Life staff I would like to wish all of you a very happy and healthy holiday season.

Director of Residence Life

For our final installment, I'm taking the easy way out. Here's an official "WHIZ THRU OR DROP—OUT OF COLLEGE GAME." All you need to play is the game below, one single die, a pen and pad, and markers for each player (I advise using small dead insects which can easily be obtained in the student center cafeteria). Play is simple.

Start at the beginning, roll the die to determine the number of squares moved and obey the monetary demands made in the space you land on. Working from an original balance of $10,000, keep a running tally. If your account drops below $0, you're out of school, out of the game, and out of luck. The first person (if any) to graduate wins.

Edward Scissorhands is a terrific and enthralling new Christmas film from director Tim Burton (Batman, BeetleJuice). The story begins when a curious Avon saleswoman walks into a nearby castle. Well, she doesn't do much business here, but she stumbles upon a strange looking teenager with scissors for hands. His name is Edward (Johnny Depp) and his late inventor was Vincent Price. Being that Edward was lonely, Peg (Dianne Wiest) decides to take him home to do a makeup job on his scars. Edward lives with the family and meets Kim, Peg's daughter (Winona Ryder), and her obnoxious boyfriend Jim (Anthony Michael Hall). Edward's scissors become useful in and out of the home, but they become more of a problem.

The film boasts some exceptional performances by Winona Ryder and Diane Wiest. Johnny Depp makes a great presence with his title role and gives it much depth and development. Edward Scissorhands could have been an extremely gory and violent NC-17 film, but director Tim Burton always kept the family in mind. There are other good performances from Kathy Baker, as the erotic Joye who tries to seduce Edward, and by Alan Arkin (in a good, but limited performance). This is a great fantasy film that doesn't have the cliches of other Christmas movies. Edward Scissorhand provides a refreshing break from otherwise boring movies this season. The visual imagery and the sound track are especially helpful to the film.

Speaking of sound, this was the second film released in the 70mm Cinema Digital Sound format, a new six channel stereo surround sound process that's more efficient than Dolby Stereo Six-Track. With the rising prices for tickets to the first run movies, it pays to have this new 96db digital sound format. The sound was crisp and full, but was limited by Ziegfeld’s NYC theatre sound track system. There was a complete absence of "pops" and hiss. The overall sound resembled that of a compact disc, never before possible in movie theatres.

Everyone should have a chance to see Edward Scissorhands because its quite an interesting and unusual film, one they would expect from Tim Burton. If possible, try to see the film in Digital Sound because it will leave you with a better insight about the film and new technology that was used.
What do you get when you take a paperbag, a magic market, a chair, and a person in his or her underwear? You get a very bizarre art project that is being shown now in the Calcia Art building. Jonathan LeVine and Mauro Manfroni are two fine arts students who are the creators behind this project. They go this idea originally from a more conservative one in which people would go into a controlled environment with hats and wear them any way they thought would interpret themselves, then they would photographed for a final installation. One day when Jonathan was in class, he was inspired by a thought, “I was kind of looking around, and I was kind of in a weird mood, and I wondered what everyone would look like naked in the room.” He told Mauro about his new idea and from there they toned it down to people to wearing underwear, and a paperbag over their head. “We thought a lot more people could do it if it was anonymous,” Mauro added. They set a goal of photographing one hundred people in this environment in the beginning. They both remained optimistic and would end up getting a total of fifty people. Mauro said that, “some of the people had thought of two to three different poses each so there are around seventy-five photographers altogether.” So how did they get so many people to even venture into this informal project? They speculated that a lot of the people came to the shooting by word of mouth. They put flyers up all over Calcia describing their endeavors, and from that people came themselves, or told their friends who came as well. Mauro thinks “it was a chain reaction, people were talking about posing, and they tried to get their friends to do it, and then they would do it themselves.” They told me that four to five teachers even posed in their underwear. And some of the teachers felt obligated to pose in an informal way. Which brings us to the purpose of their project. They started off with a bazaar idea, and “might have wound up with a whole different meaning behind it because of people’s inhibitions about their bodies.” “You see the media’s influence on people’s attitudes about their body, they open a magazine or watch t.v., and see all of these beautiful bodies that society has set a standard for, this project could very well wind up being a statement about people’s social inhibitions,” Jonathan argued. The response to their project has been overwhelmingly positive among the people who posed and most of the teachers. Although, they said some classmates took what they were doing in the wrong way. Some of the older students in their classes thought that they were exploiting people and that this whole idea was totally pornographic. “Some people were genuinely offended by us asking them to pose,” Mauro added. They also said that more women posed than men. Jonathan thought, “possibly because I think society says it’s o.k. for women to take off their clothes, you see that happening more often in the media.” If you’re wondering if these two men took their clothes off for the cause, they did. Mauro took most of the photographs, so he saw what people did, and when it came time for his turn to pose, he said, “I was the last one to pose for the project, and I think I felt the most uncomfortable, because I saw what everyone else did, and I just couldn’t think of anything else to do.” The installation of what the pictures will look like as a whole will be shown in the Calcia Art building on the second floor in the student lounge from Wednesday December 12, to December 19th, Wednesday. The installation will have a feeling of how the environment was when they were taking the pictures. They said they wanted the observer to feel what it was like for the people who posed. The objects will be sitting there and it will be like the observer could pick up the objects and pose himself at that very moment if he fancied such. When asked if they had any future projects such as this one, in the works, they exclaimed NO, “we both want to enjoy and have a relaxing holiday over the break.”

What, then, would be the ideal news team? First, get back Morton Downey, Jr. as lead anchor. Admit it, he did a decent job in his show, and would probably kick some ass in the news world. Weather? Maybe Diane. Those familiar with his comedy routine will know how he forecasts weather (this is a pretty free-floating column, but there are some things that even WE shouldn’t print). Sports, maybe John Madden with Richard Pryor. As for those on the beat, the average-joey-on-the-street type stories, have real people do it. After all, who lives the news but real people?

But I think I’m asking for the moon and the stars. This is one of my stranger fantasies. I’d mention the ones involving chocolate, whipped cream, cherries and a sorority or two, but until it hits the television market (or adult video) I’m really not at liberty to say. Well, have a nice break, see you all in the spring, and keep nice and snuggly warm in the cold months with a loved one.

Come and Meet Some Dancing Feet

By Eric Erb
King & Arts Editor

Granted I only saw the first half, and granted I am an ignoramus when it comes to the art of dance, but none who knows dance bothered to write this, in fact the Dance Dept. didn’t even tell me, the Arts Editor, about this. Luckily, a friend of mine was performing, and she told me. Otherwise, there would have been nothing about it in this here paper. As it is, with me writing, perhaps it would have been better for the Dance Dept. if nothing was written, but its too late for that now.

There were five pieces before the intermission, at which point I had to leave to go audition for Players production of Pippin. If I get the part, you’ll all have to come see the show, and if not, well perhaps you may not hear about it until too late, but about this dance thing.

Can someone tell me what the difference between one news anchor and another is?

I’ve been flipping the channels trying to find the news crew that really clicks. One that makes you feel like a follower of the Son of Sam cult; that if they say the sky is falling, you’d believe it, hook, line, and sinker. CBS is supposed to have a rocking news crew. I watched. And watched. And watched. The only time anything interesting happened is when Warner Wolf came out with a “Let’s go to the videoTAPE!”

NBC next. Same thing, except no Warner Wolf. Ever on the prowl, I checked into the Today show. You might whip me, beat me, or curse me, but I see NO difference between Jane Pauley and Deborah Norville. They do the same job the same way, and they even look alike. I still don’t get what the hubbub was. People trusted Jane Pauley, and now she abandons us—Jane Paul and her faithful viewers! You abandon your children. You abandon your spouse. You abandon your car, ship, etc. How can one abandon a television show? The woman wanted to leave, so she did. How is that abandonment? Did she have to file a two-week notice with the Nielsen crews and the viewers before she left? Puh-lease.

ABC. This was a decent crew, probably the only one I MIGHT have trusted. You know, when it was Bill Butel and Roger Grimsby. Nowadays, it’s just a bunch of people with cameras with first names for last names (John Johnson?), 20/20? Can’t trust Barbara Walters and Hugh Downs. Barbara looks like Maggie Thatcher—always like someone is holding a small tuld under her nose. Hugh Downs has that Joker-perpetual grin. I never trust a person who grins all the time.

The only two that are somewhat cool (if there is such a thing as a cool news crew) are the ones from Fox and WWOR. WWOR is just plain WIERD. I think I’m pretty wierd, so it fit. In fox is the startup renegade, and I have to hand it to upstart renegades. They do a decent job. But I still don’t trust them.

Maggie's Dream

MAGGIE'S DREAM

 Winning Pick-6 just in time for the Holidays.

 Finding a hot exotic dancer under your tree.

 "So close, yet so far away..."

 Your interest in this will last as long, as a Tyson match.

 Forget it, baby, it ain't worth it.

 At first we felt stuck with this tape. It was either this one or one of those "kill your mother" tapes that we're really not into.

 The album cover depicts a woman in a funky oriental mask with a psychadelic background. We immediately stereotyped this album as just another commercial act from the 60's trying to make it in the 90's.

 As ALWAYS, the two of us argued over what type of music this is, but we finally agreed that it has a classic Rock sound. They use real guitars, and you can actually hear the bass! They don't use all syntheizers. The songs are not dubbed. This is a good band. Maggie's Dream sounds very much like the Black Crowes but their music is very society-conscious.

 The lyrics are strong and vibrant, much like Living Colour. They talk about everything that affects people's lives from fear to racism to making choices to making love. The bottom line is that this music has meaning.

 We learned something from this tape, starting with its cover. The cover doesn't seem to fit the music, just like the cover of any and every human being never describes what's inside. They lyrics say that many people "all choose not to look at the pages in the book." The basic message of Maggie's Dream is "...if we use love as a perfect guide, one day we will join hands in the face of God and feel to be free." PEACE AND LOVE.

 Happy Holidays. Have a great break. See you next semester.

There's some Works afoot at Montclair

in neon sperm costumes came out doing all sorts of crazy things. (Have to teach my girlfriend how to do some of that) Fluttering thighs and stamping, waving feet and thrusting shoulders and bobbing heads. Rather peculiar. As it was coming to an end, I finally saw that the motions were some sort of communication, or mating ritual, and that there was actually a story of sorts being told here. Loving a good tale, I began to take it seriously, but too late. It was over.

The next two things, Stimuli and Lady be Good, I really didn't pay much attention to. I was busy contemplating the art and value of this, which so recently I mocked.

The last piece was Unity Within Zone. It was rather modern, or post-modern, and vaguely reminiscent of MTV, only this was far superior. The forms and bodies flowed and changed in patterns and styles which were pleasing to the artist in me.

It took me a while, but the art of dance held me, and I was tempted to blow off auditions and stay. But I didn't so I can't talk about the second half. You should have gone. If you knew about it, perhaps you would have. Its too bad, because it was very worthwhile, and I wish I could have expressed this to you in a better way than I have.

Exodus, one of the original thrash bands around since 1981, have put out their fourth album, "Impact is Imminent," which is their first under a major label, Capitol Records. The album may not be much different as far as style goes from their last effort, "Fabulous Disaster," but they again have succeeded in creating a good thrash album without making every song sound the same, or at least to the fans.

The vocals of Steve Souza may take a little getting used to if you haven't heard him before, but it is suitable to the music. Besides, if he didn't have such a loud, gravelly voice, he would be hard to hear anyway. Barry Manilow just wouldn't cut it singing this.

Exodus created "Impact is Imminent" with their usual blend of thrash and sick and twisted humor. Oh, so that's why I like them.

"The Lunatic Parade" is my favorite track off the album because it shows some of their humor in their songwriting, and it comes together well musically. The song is about Exodus when they perform, and is not to be taken that seriously.

"Changing of the Guard," "Within the Walls of Chaos" and "A.W.O.L." are some other good songs off the album because they aren't all straight thrash (OK, I lied, but you can even understand some of the words). The rest are your basic heavy metal songs, and most of them are pretty good. There are no songs as good as "Toxic Waltz," the big hit from the last album, but they do a decent enough job at it.

Unfortunately, they are following the trend of metal bands over the last few years of writing songs that are politically conscious, which is kind of silly because you can't understand most of the words unless you read the lyrics. Fortunately, there were lyrics included with the tape, so now I know what they hell he is saying.

There is nothing wrong with thrash metal bands actually writing songs that are about something other than death, violence, etc., but it doesn't always work. Anthrax started writing a lot of songs about "issues," and they have only gone downhill because, even though the songs say something, they aren't really that good musically.

Testament also started to get more "conscious" about the world with "Practice What You Preach," but that turned out to be a good album. What some bands fail to realize is that too much emphasis can be put on the message of the song, and not on how good the song is musically.

The strength of metal is in the music itself, not the words. After all, that is what the bands were saying to the censors, that they were only writing the words to the songs not because they are extremely violent people and were advocating death and destruction, but it was not to be taken too seriously because that is part of the genre and nature of thrash metal itself.

Exodus has songs on the album about drunk driving, life on the streets, and a Romanian dictator, to name a few, but they are good because the emphasis is still on the quality of the music and not on saying something important that a million other bands have already said.

Some people believed that Exodus might tone down their music a bit because they were moving from an independent label, Combat Records, to a major label distributor. All too often, bands that have done this have compromised their music by altering it to meet the record companies' every whim so that it no longer sounds like theirs any more.

Fortunately, Exodus did not do this, and Capitol allowed them to keep their musical integrity, which led to an album as good as "Impact is Imminent." It may not be as good as "Fabulous Disaster," but is still definitely worth picking up if you like thrash. If not, then why did you get this far into the article anyway?

The Zoo spikes PRP; repeats as champs
by Glen Haele

The Zoo tied the series up in the fourth game to make the match score 2-2. The game was close the whole way, but The Zoo players were able to make big plays at crucial times.

In the fifth game it looked as though PRP was on its way to the championship game as it was unable to get out to an early 10-4 lead. The Zoo was able to claw its way back into the game with scrappy back row play and the frontline combo of Doug Bollinger and Julio Ramos, each of whom played big games. The Zoo ended up winning the match by the score of 15-13.

This brought a rematch of last year's championship game between The Zoo and The Posse. Like last year, both teams came into the championship game with undefeated records of 8-0.

The Posse came out with early lead in the first game. However, PRP came back with a vengeance and won the first game, 15-9.

The ill-advised lineup change by The Posse in the third game cost them dearly. The Posse was able to take advantage of some mismatches and won the game 15-9.

The Zoo went back to its original lineup in the fourth game. This proved to be a good move as The Zoo's blocking height of Doug Bollinger, Julio Ramos and Dan Roberts were able to stop the high scoring Posse line of hitters; Jeff Kowalchuk, Brian Pray and setter, Gav Siciliano. The Zoo won the game 15-6.

Like last year, the championship came down to a fifth and final game. The Zoo was able to win the match by the score of 15-11. The Posse's scrappy play came up big several times in the fifth game. Unfortunately for the Posse, The Zoo came up with the big plays at the right times.

Wilson led the way, tying her season high with 27 points, while grabbing ten rebounds, four steals and three blocks. Madalone tallied 11 points and dished out five assists, while Shaffer pulled down a career high 16 rebounds.

Needless to say, coach Jill Jeffrey was happy with the team's performance. "William Paterson was 6-1, we were 7-0 and we were both 2-0 in the NJAC, so it was nice to get the first away conference game under our belt. It puts conference game under our belt. It puts the number one team in N.J. You can laugh and have fun. Winning is contagious, so let's show Jeffrey and her team our support as it strives to attain the NJAC title, which has eluded Jeffrey thus far.

Jeffrey attributes Wilson's improvement to her new attitude. "She has a new attitude about her foul shots," Jeffrey said. "Kim says, "Good, foul me. It's just two more points for my team.'"

Amod “Fields” dreams

By Matt Wintner
Asst. Sports Editor

Last week former MSC speed merchant Amod Field became the third member of an exclusive club consisting of former MSC football players who have made the jump to the NFL. Field was formerly a member of the Phoenix Cardinals four man practice squad for the past ten weeks before being activated last Tuesday to the team’s 47 man roster.

Field joins distinguished MSC alumni Sam Mills (New Orleans Saints) and Levyander Knight (Houston Oilers) who have managed to defy the odds and the Division III stereotype making it to football’s premiere stage.

During his senior year Field caught 44 passes for 769 yards and a team-high 11 touchdowns. The 11 touchdowns scored by Field during the ’89 season often displayed wild end zone celebrations, most often each of his 11 scores that much more exciting.

Like Mills and Knight, Field’s bumpy road to the NFL came via the free agency route. Field surprised many people at training camp, including Cardinals’ head coach Joe Bugel. The Passiac native and longtime friend of New Orleans Saints running back Craig “Ironhead” Heyward, made it all the way to the team’s final cut just prior to the start of the regular season.

After weighing out other options such as the Canadian Football League (his rights belong to the Edmonton Eskimos) and the new World League of American Football, Field was called back by the Cardinals in late September after the league approved the addition of a four man practice squad.

Women’s track excels at CTC Relays; men stumble

By Richard T. Green
Correspondent

Coach John Blanton’s plan, going into Sunday’s CTC Relays at Seton Hall University, was to compile his most talented athletes into relay teams and hope that they could at least be competitive.

Not only did his team complete competitively, but it fared very well against some of the top runners Division I track has to offer.

The women’s team continued to look impressive, placing second in the 4 x 200, first in the Distance Medley Relay and first in the Shot Put.

The 4 x 200 team consisting of Yvonne Bradford, Denise Drakes, Shantay Braine, and Sharon Lindo ran a combined time of 1:47.5 setting a new school record with a combined time of 1:47.5 setting a new school record.

Ezenwa Inya-Agha, Craig Jackson, and Clint Greenblatt ran a combined team of 24.6 in the shuttle hurdle, to give MSC a second place finish.

The Sprint Medley team, consisting of Keyronne Zahir, Abdul Williams, Ezenwa Inya-Agha and Brian Major won their respective heat but weren’t entered in the seated heat.

John Enwright, David Fox, John Cutty and Wesley Peters won their respective Distance Medley Relay heat, but just as the S.P.R. team, weren’t entered in the seated heat.

Derrick Williams and John Wilkerson placed first in the Shot Put, tossing a combined 94’7 1/2”.

Coach Blanton was very pleased with the overall play of his team.

“Our women’s 4 x 200 relay team ran leg for leg with Seton Hall. Had it not been for a couple of problems in our mechanics and inexperience, we could just as easily have won. I’m not usually as impressed with a team at this time of the season, as I am with this team.

Blanton added, “This has been the best two weeks of competition that I’ve witnessed since I started coaching at M.S.C.”

Red Hawk wrestlers prove too strong for competition

By Keith A. Idic
Staff Writer

The Montclair State Wrestling team upped it’s record to 3-0, gaining a 21-17 victory over Trenton State, followed by a 35-7 mauling of Hunter College.

The Red Hawks, ranked third in the Division III National rankings, upended a Trenton State squad that was ranked fourth nationally before this highly publicized intra-conference (NIAA) battle.

MSC grapplers Chris Gross (145 lbs.), Scott Castiglia (154 lbs.) and Bill Templeton (177 lbs.) all won their respective heat but weren’t contests by decision. MSC wrestlers Jim Sloan (177 lbs.) and Central Connecticut transfer, John Stolie (Heavyweight) were forfeited.

MSC’s Division III All-American Scott Vega locked horns with Trenton’s with Glen Sandull at 190 pounds. The battle ended the first period, with Glen Sandull winning the 21-17 point margin.

The Red Hawks grapplers will take almost two weeks off before their next competition. The schedule makers allotted time for the team to study for exams, but then considered the normal practice schedule. They will next hit the mats on December 22nd, in the Montclair State Wrestling Classic, at Panzer Gymnasium.

The MSC women’s basketball team hustled its way to two conference victories this week. MSC, the top ranked Division III team in N.J., improved its record to a perfect 8-0 and 3-0 in the New Jersey Athletic Conference, with a 51-45 victory over Trenton State and a 56-52 triumph over William Paterson.

The Red Hawks needed a late second period surge though, to get past TSC last Wednesday at Panzer Gym. MSC took a 23-18 halftime lead as Kim Wilson and Shannon Shaffer scored eight and seven points respectively. The Red Hawks opened their biggest lead, 29-20, after a Wilson jumper with 16:27 remaining in the second half.

However, the Lions would not go down quietly as they answered back with a 10-0 spurt over a five minute span to take a 30-29 lead. The lead would then change hands six more times, with TSC taking its final lead, 38-37, with 6:28 remaining.

MSC then went on a 10-3 run and never looked back, defeating Trenton, 51-45 in an important early season conference game.

The Red Hawks were led by Wilson’s 14 points, 11 rebounds and three blocks. Shaffer scored 10 points and pulled down ten boards and Tracy Cavalli also chipped in with ten points of her own.

Against William Paterson, MSC needed more late game drama to squeak past the Lady Pioneers 56-52 Saturday at WPC. MSC raced to a 29-21 lead at the half, with Wilson pumping in 12 of her game-high 27 points, while Cathy Madalone poured in 11 points. WPC opened up the second half with a 23-10 run, taking its biggest lead, 44-39 with just under six-minutes remaining.

With slightly over one minute remaining, MSC could only trim two points off the Lady Pioneers’ lead. With the Hawks trailing 52-49, MSC looked to its top gun Kim Wilson and she responded. Following a missed three point attempt, Wilson grabbed the offensive board, scored and was fouled. She hit the free throw to knot the contest at 52.

Cindy Poling promptly came up with a big steal and a layup with 29 seconds left, to give MSC a late two point lead. After Poling’s layup, WPC was expected to call timeout to discuss last second strategy, but inexplicably did not. The overtime cost WPC dearly as Judy Stair came away with a steal and found Wilson downcourt. Wilson was fouled with two faithful ticks remaining and with ice water in her veins, stuck two from the charity stripe, giving MSC a 56-52 dramatic come-from-behind victory.

Cioffi hopes to shine at East-West Shrine Classic

By Michael Walmsley
Editor-In-Chief

MSC All-American linebacker Paul Cioffi will be representing Division III football and Montclair State College this January at the nationally televised East-West Shrine Game in Palo Alto, California. This is MSC’s first ever representative to play in the All-Star Classic which showcases the top seniors in Division I football.

“I don’t happen very often that a Division III player is invited to our game. I’m sure he will handle himself admirably,” said Shrine Game Chairman Gary Cavalli.

“I’ve been waiting for the opportunity for some time now to play with quote all of the best players in the country,” said the outspoken Cioffi.

“Now it’s time for all the best players in the country to play with me,” said Cioffi.

The game will be televised live Super Bowl Weekend, January 26th, from Stanford Stadium on ESPN at 4 p.m. EST. Last year over 79,000 fans saw the game live and the same draw is expected for the 1991 edition.

Some of Cioffi’s teammates include Virginia QB Shawn Moore, wideout Wesley Carroll (Miami, Fla.) and line-backer Carlos Jenkins from Michigan State.

When Cioffi steps onto the field, he will get an up close and personal look at San Diego State QB Dan McGwire and Colorado running back Eric “Public” Bienemy. McGwire is the younger brother of Oakland A’s first baseman Mark McGwire and is expected to be a first round draft choice in May’s upcoming NFL draft.

Bienemy was the Buffaloes’ leading ground gainer this season and finished third in the 1990 Heisman balloting. Mark McGwire and is expected to be a first round draft choice in May’s upcoming NFL draft.

The Shrine Game’s list of NFL alumni reads like a Pro-Bowl roll call. Players such as Lawrence Taylor, John Elway, Sterling Sharpe, Randall Cunningham, Art Monk, Andre Rison, Lorenzo White and Walter Payton have all taken part in this college football classic. The Shrine Game is the second longest running college bowl game. Only the grandaddy of them all the Rose Bowl has been in existence longer.

Proceeds go the the Shrine Hospital organization which consists of 22 children’s hospitals located throughout the United States, Canada and Mexico.

The Shrine is world renowned for its work with crippled children. These hospitals offer top rate modern facilities at no charge.

“I’m not going down there to party and have a good time. I’ll do my partying on the field. That’s how I get high, playing football,” said Cioffi.

MSC’s Kim Wilson has been dominating, so far, scoring 21.8 ppg. The senior from North Arlington was named the N.J. Coach’s Association Player of the Week two weeks ago.
