The MSC Board of Trustees has voted to approve the 1993 Budget Request which, if approved by Governor James Florio, will provide MSC with almost $65 million for the 1993 academic year, a five million dollar increase over last year.

The administration does not have plans to raise tuition beyond the fixed tuition increase of $1.00 per student credit hour, said Vice President Tom Auch of Administration and Finance. This increase is part of the plan to help finance the $30 million Facilities Master Plan, which encompasses the new traffic routing, and the construction of a new access road, the new classroom building in Lot 13 and expansions to the Library, dance, music and fine arts facilities. However, Auch said that the tuition increase is dependent on the state's response to the budget proposal.

"Now is the time we can afford to be optimistic. Later on, when they talk about revenue not coming in to the State, and they're going to have to raise taxes in order to fund things, they aren't going to want to talk about more dollars," Auch said.

According to President Irwin Reid, in his message to the Board of Trustees, the 1993 budget request "is intended to restore funding to levels prior to the current fiscal crisis. Projects begun in '91 or '92 will be continued or modified as needed to support the comprehensive nature of the institution and more fully implement the programs outlined in the vision statement."

Decrease in full-time freshmen

by Tara Mulligan

The number of full-time first-time freshmen enrolled at MSC has dropped 30 percent since the fall of 1989 because fewer graduating high school seniors are meeting the college's qualifications, administration officials said this week.

However, Director of Admissions Alan Buechler said that this is related more to the climate of high school education than the college's changing standards.

According to the Office of Institutional Research, MSC currently has about 909 freshmen students as opposed to 1,307 in the fall of 1989.

Dean of Students Edward Martin said that MSC has fewer freshmen because "fewer students met the qualifications to be accepted."

The President's Budget Message also included the allocation of $250,000 to the several programs, including Graduate Studies and the Honors program. These funds, if approved by the state, will also go to increasing staff support to enhance minority enrollments in these areas, providing individualized counseling and special multicultural campus wide programs and costs associated with program accreditation. Currently under proposal is the creation of new Master's programs in Music Therapy, Applied Linguistics and Fine Arts.

An additional allocation is being requested for the Library, which will receive $200,000 to acquire new books, periodicals, and materials. There is also a request for $100,000 to allow MSC to begin a solid waste recycling program according to Reid. "As the environment becomes more polluted, it is becoming more critical that this program be addressed," he said.

In response to the large number of faculty vacancies and the large number of classes taught by part-time and full-time adjuncts, Auch said, "About 20% of our courses are taught by adjuncts. This is not a growing number. There is some strength in having adjuncts because they bring a wealth of experience from business and industry, and that is sometimes very valuable. We think that this is a good balance to have." Several departments, however, have a much higher

The New Jersey State division of motor vehicles director Skip Lee said the DMV hopes to "get everyone insured." DMV will have a new computerized system come December that will prowl for uninsured motorists. The system is said to be able to identify people who miss an insurance premium payment. Therefore the police will have the aid of the DMV in finding uninsured motorists. Lee estimated that between 300,000 and 500,000 uninsured motorists will be caught. He also stated that as more people become insured it will "contain or reduce the cost of auto insurance."

Governor Florio continues to receive low marks for his performance as do most N.J. legislators. Only 23% of those polled said Florio's performance was good to excellent. The legislators scored a similar mark of 22%. The legislators did somewhat better than Florio with only 17% of the people saying they did poorly. Florio doubled their mark.

The breakdown of Class One appropriations

by Robert Wintermute

Every undergraduate at MSC pays $3 a credit toward SGA fees. These fees are used to fund the operations of all Class One organizations. By the time a full-time student graduates, he or she can expect to have paid about $360 in fees for these organizations.

Where does this money go? What do the Class Ones do with our money? The official word is that it is used to provide programming and cultural events for the entire student body. A brief look at these different organizations can tell just what is provided: concerts, much more self-sufficient than any other Class One organization."

"During budget appropriations, a lot of people in the SGA compare The Montclarion to other Class One organizations," said George Olschewski, III, business manager. "The feeling seems to be: well, you've done well with the money we've given you so far. Why do you need more?"

Olschewski said that while the newspaper staff wants to put out the best possible paper, it appears that more is expected for the same, or less, amount of money.

A breakdown of The Montclarion's budget follows, item-by-item:

The Montclarion

"Compared to other organizations on campus, we are in the bottom half when it comes to getting money from the SGA," said John Tibbetts, The Montclarion editor-in-chief. "We are not an organization that receives, relatively speaking, a lot of money. Unfortunately, we have gone over our budget a couple of times, but considering the amount of people we reach, and the services and opportunities we provide, we should receive more support from the Legislature, particularly the Executive Board. Most importantly, we spend about two to three times the amount of this budget; this is really just a start-up line. In other words, we're

\[\text{PRODUCTION SUPPLIES} \quad $1,000.00\]

This newspaper is recyclable.

\[\text{OFFICE SUPPLIES} \quad $900.00\]

Olschewski described this fund as being essential to the running of the paper. Post-it, legal pads, reporter notebooks, pens, etc., are supplied out of this fund. These supplies are all purchased from the cheapest possible vendor. Thus far, the office has not run short of supplies.

Film, cameras, photography paper and developing supplies come from this fund. This is probably one of the most important expenditures of the paper, Olschewski said. Again, the supplies are purchased through the cheapest possible vendor.

\[\text{POSTAGE} \quad $400.00\]

Federal Express, UPS and other expenses related to outgoing mail are covered under this expense. Olschewski said that he felt that the money allocated for this was adequate.

\[\text{PRINTING/PUBLISHING} \quad $7,000.00\]

This fund covers the cost of printing The Montclarion for the first few runs. Olschewski said that the weekly run (approximately 6,000 copies) of a thirty-two page paper costs between $1,500 and $2,000. During the course of the semester, revenue generated from advertisements goes into this fund, making it self-sufficient.

\[\text{PRODUCTION SUPPLY} \quad $1,000.00\]

This covers the supplies necessary for the production of the paper: layout galleys, printer cartridges, toner cartridges and other such items. As with other supplies, the cheapest vendor is used. Olschewski also described this fund as adequate.

\[\text{SALARIES & SERVICES} \quad $800.00\]

The non-reporting and editorial staff positions are paid from this fund. The Montclarion hires secretaries, typesetters and Velox operators (responsible for transferring photographs into computer files) to allow the reporters and editors to have more time to report the news.

\[\text{STUDENT ORIENTATION} \quad $100.00\]

Olschewski said that this fund was split to $50.00 a semester, and is used to recruit reporters from the new students. "We would like to turn it into a fund where we could supply items that promote The Montclarion in the eyes of the student body," Tibbetts said. "It is important to let people know that anybody can write for The Montclarion."

\[\text{TRAINING} \quad $1,000.00\]

"Whenever the paper loses a lot of people at a time, for whatever reason, we offer training in how to use our equipment," Olschewski said. This takes the form of outside consultants who are brought in to train everyone in how to operate the Macintosh Computers and software and the Veloxer.

When asked if the allocation is enough, Olschewski said, "To be honest with you, no." He cited last year as an example: The Montclarion ran a total $6,640 deficit. Tibbetts explained, "The advertising department had some problems last year. For example, we had approximately $1,000 of advertising from Class Two, Three and Four organizations that were not paid. This was our fault. We'll do what we can to prevent this in the future. No ads will be placed until payment has been made first."

Olschewski said that although he feels the $18,500 given to The Montclarion is not enough, he isn't able to tell how much more the paper would need. "$18,500 is enough to run the paper, but not to the level of quality that we would like to have," he said. "To help raise this level of quality, he said, the paper could use two extra Macintosh computers just for the writers. "The four we have now are used by all departments. On Wednesday nights, there's a lot of competition for the computers."

Olschewski also said that the paper could use a modern and time on a national news wire service. "These last two items are the subject of some scrutiny by the SGA, he said. "They see us as a local paper, not big enough for a wire service." He listed Rutgers University's The Daily Targum as an example. "The Targum receives awards and praise for its work. We could do that, too, if we had the equipment," he said.

We, the members of the Residence Hall Association executive board, have come up with several ideas for programs that we can do during the next two semesters. Please place a check next to the events that you feel that we should sponsor or be a part of:

- Building a sand volleyball court
- Trip to Washington D.C.
- Overnight getaway to Busch Gardens (Virginia)
- Going on a party cruise
- Casino night
- Residents-only softball league
- Speaker about the Soviet Union
- Tree recovery
- Wreck a car
- Dance-a-thon (for charity)
- "Walk For Life" (also for charity)
- Alcohol awareness week
- Selling ice cream in the elevators
- Providing an escort service
- "Watchdog" (a volunteer police service)
- Capture The Flag (with paint guns)
- "Gotcha" (with dart guns)
- War Of The Halls/Residence Hall Olympics
- Celebration of medieval times

Please return these surveys to the R.H.A. office, located next to the Bohn Hall main desk. If you are interested, come to the next general meeting, Monday, September 30th at 8:00pm in the Bohn Hall Lounge.

However, Buechler attributed the decline in incoming freshmen to the decrease in the number of applicants. "The number of high school graduates has dropped in the state of New Jersey," he said.

Of the 5,400 complete applications the college received this semester, Buechler said, only 2,300 were accepted. "We normally offer twice as many places as we actually have for students. This is standard operating procedure for colleges," he said.

Buechler said that students are accepted on the basis of their courses, grades and recommendations, and noted that the climate of the incoming college community seems to be changing.

"Class rank and SAT scores have increased on the average. Last year, freshmen had about 975 combined score. This year, the average score is around 1000," he said. "We have not reduced applicants to MSC to an equation," he added. "Admissions is more of an art than a science because we are dealing with people's lives."

Assistant Director of Residence Life Kevin Rakowsky also noted a change in the campus community this semester: this fall, there is a 19 percent decrease in the number of freshmen residents.

"About 596 freshman spaces in the dorms were filled last year," he said. "This year, only 426 were filled."

However, he added that other factors could contribute to the decline in the number of residents as a whole. "It's not only freshmen," he said. "Some students couldn't afford it."

Un oportunidad llamada Colegio de Fin de Semanana

por Jorge L. Cruz

For the benefit of our students not yet fluent in English, The Montclarion prints an article in Spanish weekly.

Recibiendo una educación universitaria en este país sin hablar inglés podría ser un sueño inalcanzable. Mas aún si se tiene que trabajar ocho horas diarias o más. Afortunadamente, MSC ofrece un programa diseñado para aquellos que personas que tienen dificultades con el idioma inglés, pero tienen grandes deseos de superación. Dicho programa ofrece a sus clases los viernes por la noche, sabados y domingos por la manana; de esta forma las personas que trabajan durante la semana pueden estudiar, sin descuidar su ocupación actual, además de recibir clases en español mientras aprenden a escribir, leer y hablar inglés.

Básicamente éste es el programa del Colegio de Fin de Semana, el cual, desde su fundación, ha brindado a las oportunidades a miles de estudiantes abriéndoles las puertas del colegio cuando las esperanzas de ingresar a el eran prácticamente nulas. Sin embargo, el porcentaje de alumnos que logran graduarse con la asistencia de este programa es considerablemente limitado. Muchas de estas personas se ven obligadas a abandonar los estudios debido a la gran presión causada por el trabajo diario y los estudios, que por sí solos son todo un reto. Otros, por su parte, emigran a otras universidades al sentirse capacitados para ingresar a ellas en un programa regular, o bien porque las regulaciones de MSC no fueron de su agrado. Otro de los motivos, es que al acumular cierta cantidad de créditos los estudiantes tienen que declarar la especialidad que desean estudiar. Debido a que en los fines de semana no se pueden ofrecer todos los cursos requeridos, el estudiante se ve forzado a abandonar el programa e integrarse a las clases regulares.

Alcanzado este punto, los estudiantes tienen serios problemas ya que algunos cursos se imparten únicamente cada semana, por lo tanto tienen que cambiar de trabajo por otro que se acomode con el horario de sus clases.

La Asociación Estudiantil del Colegio de Fin de Semana (WCSA clase II de la Asociación del Gobierno Estudiantil (SGA)), se ha encargado de proporcionar orientación desde hace 17 años, a todos los estudiantes involucrados en este programa. A su vez, se ha preocupado en conseguir mejores servicios para estas personas que estudian mientras la mayoría de los servicios oficiales de MSC se encuentran cerradas. La asociación se encarga de promover los eventos sociales y culturales organizando conferencias, bailes, conciertos, conferencias y otros. Al igual organiza una venta de café durante los fines de semana, la cual aparte de brindar un servicio a los estudiantes, es la mayor fuente de ingresos económicos para sustentar dichos eventos.

Desafortunadamente, dicha asociación ha venido perdiendo fuerza debido a la falta de cooperación de los estudiantes, los cuales muestran falta de interés a este tipo de eventos. Algunos de los estudiantes que se integran a las clases entre semana se olvidan de que algún día empezaron estudiando en el programa de Fin de Semana, cuando no hablaban inglés y les parece increíble que exista gente que esté tratando de ayudar a hacer de este programa algo más productivo. Se olvidan de lo que el Colegio de Fin de Semana ha hecho por ellos y le dan la espalda.

Pero lo más increíble de todo es que muchos de los estudiantes que aún se encuentran dentro del programa no les interesa lo que la Asociación Estudiantil del Colegio de Fin de Semana está haciendo por ellos. Algunos de los estudiantes que se integran a las clases entre semana se olvidan de que algún día empezaron estudiando en el programa de Fin de Semana, cuando no hablaban inglés y les parece increíble que exista gente que esté tratando de ayudar a hacer de este programa algo más productivo. Se olvidan de lo que el Colegio de Fin de Semana ha hecho por ellos y le dan la espalda.

La próxima vez que pienses en cómo lograr un ingreso a MSC, no preguntas lo que el Colegio de Fin de Semana ha hecho por ti, porque la respuesta es obvia. Pregúntate entonces, que haz hecho por él.

The opportunities of Weekend College to full-time workers

by Jorge L. Cruz

When the Weekend College students have to declare their majors, often they seemed forced to leave the program because it is impossible to offer the needed courses on weekends. For that reason they have to leave their present jobs and seek one that is compatible with their school schedule. The Weekend College Student Association (WCSA class II of the SGA) has been assisting these students for 17 years. This association has tried to get better services for the Weekend College students when most of MSC’s offices are closed.

Organizing conferences, dances, concerts, contests and more, the WCSA has promoted social as well as cultural events, and has encouraged the interacting with other MSC organizations. The WCSA gives an extra service to the Weekend College students by having a bagel sale in Partridge Hall. Such a sale is the main source of fund raising to sponsor these events. Some of the students who have integrated themselves to the regular program do not feel they should cooperate with the Weekend College anymore. They have forgotten that it was the Weekend College that gave them the opportunity of getting into MSC in the first place. Some of them do not like to speak Spanish any more and make fun of those students who are starting exactly as they did once, not so long ago. However, the most incredible of all, is the students who are still in the program, and are not interested in the work that the WCSA is doing for him or her. Some students even criticize the events organized by the association. If these students would have common sense, they would see the importance of having an association as the one they have. They should help instead of criticizing it.

The next time you think how you got into MSC, do not ask what the Weekend College has done for you, because the answer is obvious. Ask yourself, what have you done for it?

ACUS still giving students problems

by Taina Harris

The new ACUS phone system is causing problems with the students of MSC. The most common complaint is that students receive busy signals when trying to place off campus calls.

The busy signals are a result of the amount of phone circuits available to the campus. Ed Buscavage of Information Services said that the problems of the new system are being worked on and should be resolved by September 30.

Heather Castelli, a senior living in the Clover Road apartments, said, "It's almost impossible to make a phone call. I'd rather pay AT&T their prices than deal with our phone system."

According to Buscavage, there are 1600 students using the phone system every night. "We are working on upgrading the system every day," Buscavage said.

The Personal Security Code (PSC) is another concern for students. The seven digit code allows for separate billing between roommates.

Joseph Tona, a freshman living in Blanton Hall, said, "It's a real pain in the ass. First you have to dial nine to get a line out, then one, then the area code, then the phone number, then another seven digits for your code and then after all that most of the time you get a busy signal, something has to be done."

Buscavage said that the PSC was selected for security reasons. The seven digit code allows for separate billing between roommates.

"We know that no one will be able to figure out anybody else's code," Buscavage said. (See letter on page 15.)
SGA news:

SGA discusses solutions to phone system

by Robert Wintermute

In open forum discussion, the SGA Legislature debated the problems with the new ACUS phone system. In response to the complaints raised by the legislators, Dr. Edward Martin, dean of Student Affairs, attempted to assure the body that “once it (ACUS) is fully installed and the bugs have been worked out of the system, the benefits will be worth it.”

Among the complaints raised were questions over whether Campus Police would be able to make off-campus calls, the problem of being unable to complete off-campus calls and not being able to receive calls from off-campus. One legislator summed up the mood of the entire body: “I can’t understand why we’re going to sink money into something that doesn’t work.”

James Cotter, director of External Affairs, offered a suggestion for legislators who were tired of dealing with ACTUS. He explained that while it is true that the administration did spend over $800,000 on the system, the students will have the alternative of dealing with New Jersey Bell, saying the cost for installation is $95.00, “but it’s worth it.”

Eric Erb, director of Internal Affairs, during the presentation of the report, took the opportunity to deliver a scathing attack on MSC’s alcohol policy, “If the administration feels that the students are not going to drink, they should open their Pack*tag eyes. The administration’s energy should be better directed toward drinking and driving problems. They should take a stand and help the students drink more responsibly, rather than trying to stop it altogether.”

Cotter also addressed the alcohol policy in an outline of a safe-ride program. “People are going to get out, get drunk and die,” he said. His committee will be working on this program with the administration of MSC and the SGA. He noted Cook College’s recent action in repealing a five year ban on alcohol on campus as an example of an administration reviewing their alcohol policy.

In comments after the meeting, Martin said “First of all, MSC is not a dry campus, it is a drier campus. We do have alcohol available to students of legal drinking age at the Clove Road apartments. Also, the Class 1 organizations sponsor off-campus events where people of age can drink. Our general belief is that we do not want to exclude anyone in an organization who is underage from taking part in programs they may be helping to fund.” He also said, “for us to discuss drinking with people underage is hypocritical. If you’re drinking and driving under the age of 21, the New Jersey laws are very stringent about this, and we have to reflect this.”

Martin also said how the current trend in drinking among the young is dropping. “Basically I would try to stress participation in clubs, attendance of athletic events, participating in SILC programs and as we saw in the Legislature, active involvement in the government of the campus.”

SGA President Tony Susco told the Legislature about several administrative committees that are still open for membership. These committees include the President’s Committee on Affective Action; the Basic Skills Committee; The Intercollegiate Athletic Committee; the Library Committee; the Women’s Studies Committee; the Faculty Senate’s Student Affairs Committee; and the Campus Life Task Force. He urged the members of the Legislature to consider joining one of these committees.

In voting on bills, the SGA Legislature approved Seth Libowitz as the new Director of Programming for the SGA, Cherie Dubin as Director of Academic Affairs. Also, two new student representatives were sworn in: Kara Hartman and Tobias Ariel Fox.

PSYCHOLOGICAL SERVICES (201) 893-5211

FALL 1991 - PERSONAL GROWTH WORKSHOPS

The Psychological Services Center will offer nine workshops designed to help students manage academic stress and develop their potential. Each one helps participants take a close look at one dimension of their lives and make whatever changes are necessary. They will meet one hour a week for six weeks. These workshops are in addition to the regular program of individual and group counseling and psychotherapy offered by the Psychological Services Center.

Adolescent Children of Alcoholics (ACOA) - Participants will have the opportunity to think about how their development was different from that of others, how they can more effectively deal with alcoholics in their families.

Time: Fridays at 12:00 noon. This group will meet all year; you can join anytime.

Overeaters Anonymous (OA) - This is a support group for people who need help understanding and overcoming their problem of compulsive eating.

Time: Tuesdays at 12:00. This is an open meeting that will meet all year, join anytime.

Overcoming Academic Stress - This workshop is for students who are especially uncomfortable while taking tests, giving presentations, or participating in classroom discussions and activities. Several methods will be discussed to help reduce the stress.

Time: Thursdays at 1:00 PM, beginning October 3, 1991.

Personal Growth - This group is designed to help parents improve their child rearing skills and to be better able to cope with the demands of parenting in contemporary society.

Time: Tuesdays at 2:30 PM, beginning October 1, 1991.

Getting Along With The Opposite Sex - A co-ed group on male-female relationships and dating. This group is interested in exploring the challenges of relationships, handling dating and sexuality issues, getting along, getting over break-ups and, in general, making sense of the opposite sex. For men and women.

Optimistically - This is a workshop for people who want to make better recoveries from their disappointments and failures by examining and changing the way they think about them. It's for those who want to change habitual patterns of negative thinking so as to behave more optimistically and feel better.

Time: Mondays at 12:00 Noon, beginning October 7, 1991.

Personal Growth - Taking Charge of Your Own Life - This workshop is designed to help people move toward greater self-awareness, self-direction, and self-actualizing behavior - toward freedom, productivity and joy.

Time: Wednesdays at 12:00 PM, beginning October 9, 1991.
NOTICE TO ALL CURRENTLY ENROLLED STUDENTS WHO WILL BE RETURNING IN THE WINTER SESSION 1992 AND/OR SPRING SEMESTER 1992

Registration for the Winter Session and Spring Semester 1992 will occur simultaneously between October 15-31, 1991.

All students who are enrolled for the Fall 1991 and who are eligible to return for the Winter or Spring 1992 will have a Registration Appointment Card mailed to their home address during the week of September 30, 1991.

Undergraduate students who are currently enrolled for 12 or more credits will be assigned an in person registration appointment date and time. Undergraduate students who are currently enrolled for fewer than 12 credits and Graduate students will be assigned a range of dates during which they should submit their registration form and Appointment Card to the Office of the Registrar.

Cards will not be generated for students who are on the January 1992 Graduation list. Students who are graduating in January and who wish to register for Winter or Spring 1992 courses should contact the Office of the Registrar at 893-4376, for direction.

Students who do not fulfill their Basic Skills requirements and students who have an outstanding financial obligation to the College will not be sent their cards. These students must report to either the Basic Skills Office or the Business Office to obtain their card.

Realizing the Guido in all of us

O.K. Let's just come to terms with it. Guidos exist and they're here to stay. This is not meant to be a positive or negative statement, but rather a realization and acceptance of the fact that this social group is alive and kicking. The truth is that you have to dig Guidos because without them, Jersey would be an awfully boring place to live. California has hippies and surfers. Alabama has rednecks. New York has weirdos and MSC, well, we have Guidos. Take a pill. Deal with it, and let's take a look, shall we?

Groove on this. One would assume that the stereotypical Guido would be defined somewhere along these lines: Italian-American; male/female named Vinny, Anthony, Gina, Maria; drives either an Iroc, Camaro or bright yellow late model Mustang; owns a pair of Cavaricci pants for every day of the week; applies enough make-up and hairspray to keep Aqua-net and Revlon in business into the next century and wears enough fake/real gold to put Ivana Trump to shame.

If we accept these definitions, or rather stereotypes, then we fall short of realizing the genuine contribution Guidos give to our beloved campus. My god! Guidos are part of our food chain.

"They are the foundation, the epitome of MSC," stated English major Jim Lloyd. So, what would happen then if, on some gray afternoon, the powers that be decided in one fell swoop that all Guidos would be eliminated from campus? What would be the ramifications?

"Life would be boring," said Teresa Hughes. "You have to have different people to learn from and interact with."

"They're colorful. They have a fashion sense and they dance well," agrees Kelly Dourmen.

"You would be eliminating pop culture as we know it," stated Derek Pinkham. "What would become of the status-quo, the mainstream?"

There is a little Guido in all of us, regardless of our social circles. How many times have you found yourself driving through campus with Hot 97 pounding from your stereo when no one is looking? How many of us use just a little too much hairspray now and then grab our crotch as a gesture of joy and goodwill?

"Sure, I suppose there's a little Guido in all of us," reflected one student. "Guidos aren't all Italian-American with dark hair and dark eyes. There are WASP Guidos. I've seen them..."

If that gray afternoon should ever come, it will be a sorry day for MSC. No longer will we see the sun shining off pinky rings and hair as high as the sky. The parking lots will be barren save for the occasional Dodge Dart or V.W. Bug sitting alone wondering where all the fancy cars went. We would see only short, stumpy fingernails, painted clear on the hands of droopy-eyed, pale-skinned girls who have never seen the ultraviolet rays of Ft. Lauderdale. In the words of one MSC student, "Someone has to keep the cement steps warm."

Viva la Guido! May he and she forever reign over our lovely North Jersey campus.

All Around the Campus: The Community Speaks

President Reid says tuition will go up one dollar per credit. However, if the State Board of Higher Education gives the college permission to raise it higher, what do you think will happen?

"I think it will go up much higher because it's been increasing every year and student apathy will allow it to happen."

Get the facts on F.A.T.S. training

by William C. Hendrixson

Mortar fire explodes billowing smoke into the air. A figure moves in the distance. Is it friendly? Is it armed? Advancing enemy units set off claymore mines as they move into the firing team’s ambush.

The enemy is an image, an actor in a hit-tech video game used by the United States Marine Corps to train marines in weapons firing, as well as when not to fire.

Actually, a video game is a grave understatement of the capabilities of the system. Firing Arms Training Simulation, or its military acronym F.A.T.S., is a $70,000 computer-controlled, laser disc stored simulation of various combat scenarios including a river-crossing ambush, desert warfare, day and night encounters, hostage rescue and many other battle scenes.

On Sept. 14, Saturday, 15 marine candidates—mostly students from area colleges as well as MSC, who are enrolled in the Platoon Leader Class and Officer Candidate Class—used the F.A.T.S. system. For most involved, this was their first experience at “firing” a weapon.

Three or four candidates lay in the prone position (belly down, legs outstretched, weapon resting on hand pivoting on elbow) three to four meters from the video monitor, which is about six meters long and two to three meters high, and form a fire team, uniformly eliminating targets and sometimes not, selective foes.

Each scenario shows a marine’s (presumably your own), view of a small battlefield encounter. Other soldiers, both friendly and enemy, are played by actors—soldiers in varying uniforms usually armed and returning fire, taking cover, advancing and even dying. The system registers a hit on a target by superimposing a red crosshair over the spot hit by the laser beam emitted from the weapon and received by the computer system.

For selected scenarios, the enemy would not fire unless fired upon, simulating a marine ambush. Only then would the enemy “return” fire. Although the candidates were completely safe from the images of automatic weapons fire, a certain degree of anxiety developed as the M16A2 rifle gave a CO2-charged kick every time it was fired in either single or three round bursts. Occasionally it would jam, and even required a reloading procedure after 28 rounds were fired.

After all the candidates had several turns apiece in various scenarios, the high scorers (based on the number of hits and rounds fired) competed in more difficult scenarios to determine the champion of the day. Mike Gerald, a sophomore political science major at William Paterson College, qualified for the shoot-off with 17 kills out of 22 shots fired, and topped all other candidates in the final round of play.

Students enrolled in the Platoon Leader Class as well as Officer Candidate Class members take part in training such as the F.A.T.S. system, camping and outdoor map reading, ski trips and occasional group physical training on various weekends throughout the school year. Selected candidates undergo a six-week training course at Quantico Basic School in Virginia over summer break, with no obligation to join the Marine Corps, or even make a decision until completion of a second six-week course.

Completion of the two six-week courses through earning a college degree entitles PLC candidates to a commissioned rank of second lieutenant upon entering the Marine Corp.

Freshman, sophomore and junior college students interested in the Platoon Leader Class should contact Lt. Baumach, toll free, at 1-800-OCS-USMC.

The Conservation Club’s weekly column
Green consumerism: consuming us?

Welcome to the first edition of the Conservation Club’s weekly column. Every week the club will be reporting on some environmental happenings or pieces of news. This week’s topic will be about America’s news marketing craze: green consumerism. As people become more and more concerned about the environment, Madison Avenue has found a marketing strategy. Just as the health concerns of the 80’s brought ambiguous claims such as “light” and “lowfat,” so too have today’s ecological concerns brought equally vague terms such as “biodegradable” and “environmentally friendly.” This article takes a closer look at the misinformation behind this latest advertising ploy, and shows how green consumers can benefit the environment instead of corporate America.

One doesn’t have to sit in front of the tube for very long before seeing commercials advertising products that are going to help the Earth. The message is hitting the living room. A recent market research poll found that 89 percent of Americans are concerned about the impact the products they purchase are having on the environment. More than half say they decline to buy certain products out of concern for the environment, and 78 percent would pay more for a product with recyclable materials. With numbers like these, marketing companies should be expected to try and ride the wave.

While this has brought a whole lot of hype, it has also brought with it some definite improvement. A good example of this is McDonald’s, which recently dropped its polystyrene wrapped clam shells to paper wrappers and its chlorine-bleached bags for unbleached bags. Other examples are the growth of stores like the Body Shop and products like dolphin-safe tuna. Mescal paper is now making its paper towels from 100 percent recycled, unbleached paper. Of course a sponge will still beat out any paper towel, and they’re also cheaper.

Along with these honest to goodness improvements are a host of misleading counterparts. Much of this is because they are terms that are meaningless and have no legal definition. Included in this would be such terms as “environmentally friendly,” “recyclable,” “biodegradable” and “CFC-free.” The term “green consumer” is itself a bit of an enigma because anything produced takes some environmental toll. Nothing on our store shelves could be 100 percent environmentally friendly. And it is important to note that some of the most misleading green advertising is not being done by small individual businesses but by large companies who want to boost their image.

Theoretically, anything is recyclable but the fact is that the only consumer items actually being recycled are paper, glass and metal. Nothing has been found to economically recycle plastic, so it is usually made into a second-use material like plastic wood or packaging filler.

Many garbage bag companies claim their products are biodegradable, but that is not at all the case. All they are doing is putting a type of corn starch that can be eaten by microorganisms into the plastic. This means the plastic will just fall apart in little pieces but will not break down into elements that can be reabsorbed into the environment.

Most aerosol cans now either have “ozone-friendly” or “CFC-free” written on them. All this means is that instead of containing CFC (chlorofluorocarbons that eat away the ozone layer), they have CFC-22. Chemically it is very similar and does almost as much damage to the ozone, but technically it is not CFC.

Oil companies advertise working on a cleaner burning fuel that will give off less pollution than normal gasoline. These same companies are also lobbying hard in Washington to keep the money spent for public transportation as low as possible to insure people will still have to drive cars. Dow Chemical has a commercial showing new employees about to embark on an Earth-saving career. But, just like many other chemical companies, Dow has been found guilty of repeated violations of environmental protection and public health laws.

Coors gave away several thousand dollars to clean water groups in Colorado, but spent hundreds of dollars trying to weaken the state’s Clean Water Act when it came up for reauthorization. Even more alarming, Coors had to pay fines for polluting assorted waterways.

Star Kist recently advertised how the dolphin is such an incredible animal and how its tuna was “dolphin-safe.” What they don’t mention is that until a boycott of tuna caused their profits to drop, they were buying tuna that had been caught at the expense of dolphins.

Unfortunately, these are not exceptions. A recent Harvard business school study found that two-thirds of the Fortune 500 companies have been charged with crimes ranging from price fixing to illegal dumping. They cannot be trusted to tell us what is good for the environment. Citizens and consumers must be able to do that themselves, and the only way is by becoming involved. Tell store managers the dangers of carrying certain products. Get in touch with elected officials and tell them laws are needed to limit packaging and to ban the production of things like polystyrene and freon. Many products have an 800 number for comments. That is a sure-fire way to air complaints, hopefully in a big way.

So remember, the next time the television airs an environmentally slanted advertisement, look at it with a doubtful eye. The next time nose five at the store advertises something needless, say, “No thanks, it’s just a waste of money and the environment.” There are a lot of things individuals cannot do a whole hell of a lot about, but preserving the environment is not one of them. Anyone needing help in contacting their local officials, stop in the Conservation Club’s office in room 120 of the Student Center. Bring any questions or comments.

Take Rt. 46W to Union Blvd (Totowa). Make a right onto Union to end. Make a right onto W. Broadway to 1st light. Make a left onto Belmont Ave 4 blocks down on the right. Free parking available in gas station across the street.
MSC’s $65 million budget proposal has been approved by the Board of Trustees, but don't think we're actually going to receive the requested figure. Remember, this is only a proposal. Once we make every year. This year we are asking the state for a whopping $43 million (MSC makes up the difference). And every year the state trimm down to more realistic figure.

It’s like a used car salesman trying to sell you a banged up Yugo for $1,000 more than you know it's worth. So you say to him, "Wasn’t this car rated fairly high by Money magazine as a good buy last year? But when they conducted an actual test instead of a survey, its rating dropped some 400 spots?" (If you read last week’s MSC rated by Money and New Jersey Monthly you’d know the Yugo is a metaphor for MSC.)

The beginning of the semester is a time to be optimistic about figures. Vice president of Finances Tom Auch said as much. (See pg. 1)

Now think about President Reid’s promise of not raising tuition more than one dollar per credit. Think the figure is a little optimistic?

Again, level-headed Auch emphasized that the tuition increase is up to the state’s response to the proposal. It’s typical politics. The boss promises you things that sound too good to be true, and his underling has to tell you the bad news: they probably are.

Student tuition (not including student fees) covers approximately 30 percent of the budget, and tuition has gone up annually for the past eleven years. The peculiar thing about the FY ’93 proposal is that it assumes the state will give us the full $43 million so our tuition won’t increase that year. We are asking for $9 million more than FY ’91 from a state hit with a recession. Do you really think we will get the $43 million? If we don’t get the full amount, then who will make up the difference? The students will. And the tuition increase will probably be much more than the dollar Reid promised.

What is particularly frustrating is that our tuition may be raised not for our education, but for the administration’s lofty aspirations with their Master Plan construction.

Why do they insist on improving the school’s cosmetics when there is a hiring freeze on campus? We have a lack of teachers, packed classrooms and limited course selections. The already hurting Campus Police has had their staff reduced by six. They even have a new procedure to deal with the personnel shortage: for a crime such as a theft, you now fill out the forms and return them.

We’ve said it before — let’s build from the inside first and then worry about looks. It seems the administration has been watching too many Saturday Night Live repeats and is taking Fernando Lamas’ sayings too seriously. After all, is it really better to look good than to feel good?

If you have strong views and wish to express them weekly, contact the Editorial Page Editor for a possible weekly or bi-weekly opinion column. 893-5169.

Lowly Thefts

This week I had planned to write about the Orwellian antics of the Residence Life Association (bag checks, anyone?). Those plans, however, went up in smoke last Saturday night when, upon returning from dinner with my girlfriend, my message board was missing from my door. At first I assumed it had fallen off and been retrieved by my roommate. It turns out that was not the case. It had been stolen. I know what you’re thinking: who cares? I’ll be the first to admit the theft of a message board is not exactly a case for T.J. Hooker. But it certainly is a nuisance—a completely unnecessary nuisance.

I, like most MSC students (at least those living in Bohn Hall), have heard of the rash of burglaries which occurred over last year’s Thanksgiving break. The thieves involved, we at Bohn Hall have been assured, were caught and no longer remain at MSC. There seems to be no reason to be overly concerned about burglary. Perhaps not, but my experience Saturday proved to me that a certain breed of thief still lurks the halls of our college. This breed just happens to come from a much lower rung of the evolutionary ladder.

With a little imagination, it is quite easy to reconstruct the crime. Free from its primordial radix, the worm decides to pass its lonely Saturday evening roaming the undisturbed corridors of Bohn Hall. Adrift on the twelfth floor, something catches its eye—my message board. Its simple nervous system must have been mesmerized by the dazzling, fluorescent color. In that instant, the grub knew he must possess it! Approaching slowly, surely cowering from the light, he reached the door and sweatily plucked off the board before bellying to safety.

Imagine the glee! What a heist! This lowly creature was now in possession of a message board with a retail value of $1.59. Of course, this simple invertebrate would be far too fearful to hang the board on his own door. That would risk exposure. Instead, he will have to content himself with countless retellings of the heroic deed to his spellbound friends.

It is anyone’s guess what the worm’s next caper will be. He may be eying that poster you hung on your door. Or perhaps he’s moved on to the communal bathroom, where he’s clogging the toilets with toilet paper or peeing on the floor. Unable to inflict serious damage or pain, his is the realm of annoyance, annoyance that both you and I must endure.

Sad for you and me. Sadder still for the worm.

Bly’s Cries

Greeks and Special Programming

Many people came up to me after reading my article last week and said, “Doug, I think that your editorial was really good and it’s about time someone said something. But do you honestly think that you are going to get any results? I mean, this is the administration we’re talking about.”

I replied, “No.”

Although a meeting between the administration and Clove residents could be extremely beneficial in addressing issues at hand, a clear importance is getting the points out in the open for all to read and respond to.

The point is that we are all relying on others to create benefits for ourselves. It is only when we take matters into our own hands that anything gets done. In other words, when the administration would like to see some “special programming” occur on campus, more often than not they come to Greeks to get the job done. (I am using Greeks here as a vehicle to reach other points). Yet, it is when the “special programming” is complete, and successful, I might add, that the Greeks’ requests proposals fall on deaf ears. When we want or need something it seems to be too much for the administration to handle at that time; which is usually the case. Some have made efforts, but not enough.

This brings me to my next point. Semester in and semester out we all fail to reach our highest potential. This is besides the triumphs within the organizations that we conquer. For example (and if I am wrong at least there will be food for thought), when was the last mixer (social function) between a predominantly black and predominantly white organization? If there has been, then where is the consistency behind that concept? Sorry folks, one time does not do it all, but it is a significant start.

Tim’s Thoughts

...On Abortion:

Abortion is one of the most controversial and dividing issues of our time. If I were dictator of the United States I would make it illegal. But thank God I’m not dictator and do not have that burden on my shoulders.

The point of my editorial is not to discuss whether or not abortion should be legal or not. I think that most of the real issues pertaining to abortion are ignored: the responsibility to the unborn baby. If that dependence made it human, then we should be able to take children until a time when they are able to take care of themselves. Babies are dependent upon their mother or other people for survival. So at the very least barring, extra-ordinary circumstances, to kill an unborn child that could survive outside the womb is murder. In some states this is legal. That’s what the big hoopla in Wichita, Kansas is about.

If it is wrong to abort a fetus at any time during pregnancy, this means it becomes human in the womb. But when? I wish I had a factual answer. This I do not have.

Groups that support keeping abortion legal are widely known as pro-choice. I do not think the real choice is whether to have an abortion or not. The real choice should be to have sex or not. As long as two people understand the possible consequences of sex, it is their obligation to bear the responsibility of their actions. Any time people have sex they are risking the chance of conceiving a child. This is because no form of contraceptive is 100 percent effective. I think it is sad to say very few women who become pregnant can say they don’t know how this happened. If you cannot deal with the consequences, don’t have sex. We are not animals who have no self control.

Other reasons for abortion are even more unreasonable. It has been said that most of these babies would be born to poor teen mothers who do not want them so their lives would be hell anyway. That’s great. So we kill them. There’s a real solution. Does that mean the middle and upper classes should go into the barrio and ghettoes like the grim reaper and put the poor out of their misery?

From what I see most poor people are happier than the wealthy. Shouldn’t these children be given the right to live? Doesn’t the poor teen mothers who do not want them so their lives would be hell anyway. That’s great. So we kill them. There’s a real solution. Does that mean the middle and upper classes should go into the barrio and ghettoes like the grim reaper and put the poor out of their misery?

From what I see most poor people are happier than the wealthy. Shouldn’t these children be given the right to live? Give them a chance to make a life out of whatever situation they’re thrown into.

The problem is not people getting abortions. The problem in most cases is the carelessness that got them into the position to get one. Many girls do have to make this decision on their own. I think this is unfair since they did not get pregnant alone. I know this won’t go over well with most people, but maybe, just maybe, we could exercise some control and be more choosy about when and who we have sex with. Because if a fetus is human, then many people are committing murder.

If abortion is to stay legal, it must be by popular consent. If it does remain legal, the least we can do is do all we can to cut down the number of abortions.

OP-ED/LETTERS

Let It Bleed and Packed/ Rotating Classrooms

By Bly's Cries from pg. 17

I mean, let's put the meat on the table: Greeks are a driving force on this campus as cannot go to a higher level without mastering our weaknesses that we often forget what we used to do. Greeks are a driving force on this campus as cannot go to a higher level without mastering our weaknesses that we often forget what we used to do. It is just that this transition is the hardest, but it is not. Yet, if we can all start right here and now with all of the things that we have talked about doing, then perhaps we can make a difference in a world of lacking standards and insecurity, one probably causes the other. It is this transition that is the hardest, but it is also easily manipulated for what we want it to be. Then we can master that next level. We have too many sides required to support the students. The amount of lines in our contract class is inadequate for the amount of time allocated to students and their demographics to determine calling patterns and usage. This program does not provide factual information, and offer a light at the end of the tunnel.

First, we have been doing everything possible to try and offer relief from all those "busies." We have re-routed some traffic to allow for access to more lines. However, the system was installed with a pre-determined amount of lines. The amount of lines installed was based upon a study which we performed. We have a very sophisticated program which takes into account the amount of students and their demographics to determine calling patterns and usage. This program does not provide the amount of outside lines required to support the students. Obviously, MSC did not fit the "norms" of this program. ACUS has provided this service across the nation for over 200,000 students and they have never experienced this type of problem. We are not making excuses. We are only saying that we took the proper steps to avoid this type of problem, but they failed much to our surprise.

We have initiated a study which is being compiled this week. It will indicate to us how many calls were attempted and failed. This will give us a clear picture as to how many lines MSC actually needs to meet the demand.

An important note: in last week's editorial, the writer portrayed an emergency situation and the likelihood of not receiving assistance because they received a busy signal. This would not happen. You will NOT get a busy signal when dialing on campus (unless the person is on the phone). If there were an emergency, I would hope that campus police would be called by dialing ONLY four digits.

Second, this system was not installed as an afterthought as indicated in last week's editorial. This fact, providing service to the students was the primary reason for MSC choosing the system. The college did not want to disturb service mid-year when the administration/faculty service was put in place, and thought it better to install the system at the beginning of the semester.

Third, we currently have more phone lines on order. It is not as easy as the article seems to imply. We have to order the lines from NJ Bell. We asked for an expenditure due to the situation, but NJ Bell currently does not have facilities in place to accommodate the request. The planned date for these additional lines is September 30 with more to follow in October.

We share in your frustration and realize how difficult it has been to make calls. Ed Buscaglia has informed us that MSC will be taking the necessary steps to charge this month due to the circumstances.

We feel confident that as we add more lines, the situation will greatly improve. Students will benefit from the NO start-up costs, reduced rates, 24 hours access to billing info, international dialing (if requested), personal billing, call waiting and in the future, possible voice mail for each student.

Lastly, the article implied that you could only spend $100 a month for phone usage. That is the default amount set by MSC. If you require a higher threshold, simply contact ACUS.

You have been very patient while we have been working to resolve the situation—THANK YOU!

Shortly, everything should resume to normal and you'll be glad you stayed with the system.

Neal Dougherty's

Dear Editor,

Maybe I have arrived and am still (viciously through this column) on the editorial page. I have not seen last week's issue and do not know if my column was published or not. However, I was under the impression that it would cease because we are the ones who take grow, then rumors of banning Greeks should cease because it is not. Yet, if we can all start right here and now with all of the things that we have talked about doing, then perhaps we can make a difference in a world of lacking standards and insecurity, one probably causes the other. It is this transition that is the hardest, but it is also easily manipulated for what we want it to be. Then we can master that next level. We have too many sides required to support the students. The amount of lines in our contract class is inadequate for the amount of time allocated to students and their demographics to determine calling patterns and usage. This program does not provide factual information, and offer a light at the end of the tunnel.

First, we have been doing everything possible to try and offer relief from all those "busies." We have re-routed some traffic to allow for access to more lines. However, the system was installed with a pre-determined amount of lines. The amount of lines installed was based upon a study which we performed. We have a very sophisticated program which takes into account the amount of students and their demographics to determine calling patterns and usage. This program does not provide the amount of outside lines required to support the students. Obviously, MSC did not fit the "norms" of this program. ACUS has provided this service across the nation for over 200,000 students and they have never experienced this type of problem. We are not making excuses. We are only saying that we took the proper steps to avoid this type of problem, but they failed much to our surprise.

We have initiated a study which is being compiled this week. It will indicate to us how many calls were attempted and failed. This will give us a clear picture as to how many lines MSC actually needs to meet the demand.

An important note: in last week's editorial, the writer portrayed an emergency situation and the likelihood of not receiving assistance because they received a busy signal. This would not happen. You will NOT get a busy signal when dialing on campus (unless the person is on the phone). If there were an emergency, I would hope that campus police would be called by dialing ONLY four digits.

Second, this system was not installed as an afterthought as indicated in last week's editorial. This fact, providing service to the students was the primary reason for MSC choosing the system. The college did not want to disturb service mid-year when the administration/faculty service was put in place, and thought it better to install the system at the beginning of the semester.

You Can Graduate In Four

It has been ten years since I graduated and a similar number of years since I read The Montclarion. One of my relatives works on campus and I asked that he bring me a copy of The Montclarion. I am pleased to say that it is as good or even better than it was when I knew the people who were writing the articles and editorials.

It seems that the president of the college answers questions about as well as the man who was president when I was at MSC. As for Dr. Jean Armstrong being on the faculty, it seems like the campus is heading in a very bad move. Parking is still a nightmare, and it will get worse with the library construction. An excellent article on water fountain. What an outrageous story about the Campus Police confiscating film. You better do something about that. We would have! College policy on alcohol at Clove Road - still a mess. One and a half pages of cartoon - interesting. What, no letters to the "editor!"

One big thing that was a source of great embarrassment when I was at MSC seems to happen more frequently now. I refer to the situation or condition which was covered on page nine of the September 19, 1991 issue, that of extra semester seniors. (My sister goes to another public college in New Jersey and she refers to these people as "super-seniors.") My brother and a close friend of mine took an extra semester to graduate. Both sets of parents were upset. It still is a topic which is not discussed.

I hate to preach, but I think that it is reasonable to expect a student to finish in four years. It took me four years to earn 138 credits, several more than were required to complete my major and fulfill all the other requirements. While at MSC, I was quite active in several Class One organizations,
No Resident Lot

This letter is in response to the "Share the Wealth" editorial in the September 12, 1991 edition of The Montclarion. The author claims that residents' cars remain sedentary for four or five days at a time. Residents do not sit in their rooms and soak up the atmosphere provided by the lovely Residence Life curtains and the concert walls. Many, if not most, residents have off-campus jobs. Residents also have social lives which require the use of a car.

The author's suggestion of parking further away from the residence halls does not take into consideration the personal safety of residents who may need to return to the residence hall late at night. Many of the lower parking lots and paths to and from them are not well lit. The lamps that do exist are not sufficiently maintained. Often vandals break them or tear them down. How safe can a female resident feel returning to her room after a long night at work? Shuttle buses do not run past 10:30 p.m. and it is difficult to call for a police escort without a cellular phone.

This campus is our home. I'm sure that the commuters don't park a mile away from their houses when they go home. We don't mind the long walks (the exercise is great) so that I could walk to class from a spot two hour commute) so that I could walk to class from a spot.

I was a commuter for one semester. I accepted the fact that I would be parking far away from my classes and allowed an extra fifteen to twenty minutes (in addition to a two hour commute) so that I could walk to class from a spot near the field house. We all must accept the fact that a "good" parking space is probably not available during the day and head straight for lot 28 (Clove Road). It only takes fifteen minutes to walk to campus from this lot, or we could wait for the red and white sardine cans to roll around.

Jews Stand With Blacks

I am a proud American who is also a proud Puerto Rican Jew who lives in the great town of Teaneck, N.J. I lived my whole life in Teaneck and I've seen and experienced how well blacks and Jews really get along. Excuse the cliché but some of my best friends are black, as well as white, Oriental, Muslim, Jewish, and so on. Most black Americans that I know have known are intelligent, nice and overall good people. But my letter is not referring to the majority of black Americans. It is referring to the small percentage of blacks that hinder race relations and cause much of the social unrest in the area.

It has been said, "The Jews are the best friends the blacks have." I believe it. The reason is twofold:

1. When it comes to suffering, discrimination and being treated in a derogatory second class way, nobody knows more about this than the Jewish people. The original slaves in Egypt were Jews (by the way, since Egyptians were "black", that makes the original slaves the black!!). Six million Jews murdered in the Holocaust. There was the Spanish Inquisition. Arabs/Muslims have been killing Jews throughout history. Iraq fired SCUD missiles at heavy civilian populated areas of Israel. And the modern day attacks in Crown Heights, Eastern Europe and all over the world are further examples. We understand discrimination and its deadly effects, and we fight it because we know what happens when it spreads like a cancer.

2. Jews also supported blacks because it is the understanding that if you can get away with discrimination, hatred and second-class status with one group of people, you can also do it to another group of people. To help blacks fight discrimination is to help all mankind, all Americans, and all Jews.

That is why Jews support the civil rights movement and fight against all forms of discrimination. That is why the Jewish community spent millions of dollars, gave legal support (lawyers, etc.), marched along hand in hand with blacks and were murdered by the racists who tried to prevent the civil rights movement. The Jewish community sacrificed some of their money, time, effort and even our lives to support the civil rights movement. We have always treated blacks as our friends and equals.

But what do we get in return from the followers of such anti-Semitic black leaders as "Rev." Sharpton, "Rev." Farrakhan, "Rev." Daughtery, "Prof." Jeffries and Sonny Caron? We get bullets shot through out temples, a murder of an innocent Jewish bystander, rock and bottle throwing at Jewish people, looting of Jewish businesses, threats of violence, harassments during prayers and peaceful marches, and quotes such as "Hymie Town.," "Six Million More." and "Gutter Religion." Unfortunately, some black Americans have exploited the Jewish communities friendship and stabbed us in the back by using the Jews as a scapegoat for their frustration.

Well I say if you need a scapegoat, look in the mirror and blame yourselves. Blame yourselves for the one parent families whose irresponsible fathers left them for one reason or the other, the high-drop out rate among blacks in schools, the high amount of black males that go to jail and not to school or work. Fifty percent of all murders are committed by blacks and most crimes are committed by blacks on blacks!

Don't blame the Jews for your problems. Blame yourself! I will even go as far as to say that blacks can also blame the white liberal who has treated the black population like children, guiding, controlling, feeding, clothing and patronizing them in a manner that on the thin outside proclama we want to help, but underneath really says you are not capable and only we know what is best for you.

In conclusion, Jews are sick of being history's scapegoat and we will not be silent anymore. As the march in Teaneck recently proved, we will stand up against Jewish bashing. As history shows, the Jews want nothing but peace and respect for each other. "Don't believe the hype" about the "Evil Jewish Race" preached by the aforementioned black leaders. We support the rights of blacks and all Americans to be treated equally. But we will not allow anyone to take away our rights or use us as scapegoats. I have to say this, but it seems to me that the brown shirts are still around and I say to them, never again!!!

Leave Flyers Alone

We would like to express our opinion on a matter concerning all Greek organizations. We are not trying to point the finger, or denounce anyone in particular.

Recently, some incidents have shown that it is important to stress that Greek advertisement should not be tampered with by any other organization or person. Respecting each other is what every Greek organization should stand by. Without this we become isolated and we will never achieve common goals. If there is any discrepancy regarding the posting of flyers it would be greatly appreciated if the matter is taken up with the particular organization. By jumping to any unadvised conclusion, the perpetrator of this act becomes an ambassador for their whole organization.

To avoid any further misconceptions we must take it upon ourselves to go through the proper channels. By doing this one can never be wrong. Instead, always know that they were right no matter what the outcome.

Fraternally yours,

BEFORE TRUSTING YOUR FUTURE TO ANY COMPANY, ASK FOR SOME LETTERS OF REFERENCE.

You put more than just your savings into a retirement company. You put in your trust and hopes for the future, too. So before you choose one, ask more questions. How stable is the company? How solid are its investments? How sound is its overall financial health?

A good place to start looking for answers is in the ratings of independent analysts. Three companies, all widely recognized resources for finding out how strong a financial services company really is, gave TIAA their top grade.

IN THE FINAL ANALYSIS, TIAA IS LETTER-PERFECT. TIAA received A+ from A.M. Best Co., AAA from Standard & Poor's and Aaa from Moody's Investors Service. These ratings reflect TIAA's reliable claims-paying ability, exceptional financial strength, superior investment performance, and low expenses. With its guaranteed rate of return and opportunity for dividends, TIAA is one of less than ten companies, out of 2,200 nationwide, that received these highest marks.

CREF, FOUR MORE LETTERS EVERYONE SHOULD KNOW.

For further growth potential and diversification, there's the CREF variable annuity with four different investment accounts to give you the flexibility you want as you save for the future. Together, TIAA and CREF form the nation's largest private retirement system, with over $90 billion in assets and more than 70 years of experience serving the education community. Voice of the Beehive — Honey
Lingers — London

It seems the girls have found some love in this cruel world after all, but it is not all smooth sailing on this new LP, either. Those of you who have heard the Beehive sisters before know that they sing of love gone wrong at the hands of terrible demons (otherwise known as men — fancy that!). But they've mellowed a bit here — they're in love and have exposed their insides for all to see. And after you start moving to the beat and jumping up and down while singing, it seems like all is right in the world.

With clear guitars and lush, layered vocals, Voice of the Beehive is the new B-52's with great songs: "Just Like You," a clever and humorous love song, contains a groovin' horn section and "Perfect Place" is strung with crystal piano. I suppose the use of seven very different producers has helped their sound stay diverse, but their talent lies in the hook — after hearing them once, you walk around for a week humming every note! It's such a dreamy kind of record that it would be easy to miss the underlying confusion and bitterness. While being distracted by the cover version of ABBA's "I Think I Love You," it's fair to say that heartache is still an issue (and isn't it for all of us, anyway?). They tackle the dilemmas of the Modern Woman in the first single, "Monsters and Angels": "I'm nobody's wife and I'm nobody's baby / I like it that way, well, then again, maybe." "Look At Me" centers around our society's appalling narcissism and even the greed of televangelists! "Perfect Place" laments over abused children and the world of life, while "I'm Shooting Cupid" could console the most ruptured of hearts. Slicker than previous material, the sound, and performed with Paul Westerberg of The Replacements, is the reason for the fervor and with good reason. This song alone is worth the price of a CD. Featuring Westerberg's cutting guitar and with Jett's vocals taking on new dimensions of desperation, I'm left feeling moved while tapping my foot and shaking my hips. I wish I could say that the rest of the album can compare, but it can't. Maybe Jett should spend more time with Westerberg and less collaborating with hit-maker Demond Child (as she did on five other songs). The only growth she seems to have made is finally releasing an album with no, I repeat, no cover songs. True, Notorious does contain a new version of her old Runaways song "Wait Me," but it's also the only song she wrote alone (and I guess it deserves mentioning that I prefer her Runaways version).

The Only Good Thing (You Ever Said Was Goodbye) is grungy rock 'n' roll with a heavy hand-clap sound, and it proves that she hasn't quite lost her bite yet. I think after years of battling the "girls-can't-rock 'n' roll" sexist music business crap, she finally feels victorious enough to let her hair down. "Lie To Me" is a breathy and sad love song woven with jaded moments: "In the morning, we can do an inventory of our history / And for now, lie to me." "Don't Surrender," inspired by Jill Ireland's cancer fight is full of hard, pumping guitars and banner-waving words. "Machismo" is a truly funny rockabilly song that puts all demons to bed and even with new members, drummer Matt Sorum and keyboardist Dizzy Reed added on, Slash is a solid guitarist but both his and the band's ambition go far beyond their limited repertoire of riffs and shrieks. Overall, it's a winner, but it's not Appetite for Destruction.

The first track, "Right Next Door to Hell" is acceptable and contains the band's trademark of psychotic, isolationist lyrics. Following is "Dust N' Bones," perhaps the best song on both albums. Listen to it and you're instantly taken back to the great songs of the first album. Axel Rose shows off some Blues touched vocals on the Paul and Linda McCartney classic cover of "Live and Let Die."

This for you because I wish it had been done for me. GUNS N' ROSES - USE YOUR ILLUSION 1 It seems ironic but all the delays and all the built-up hype really destroyed any chances of anything but under-whelming the legions of GN'R fans. For one thing, this band will never come any closer than mirroring their Led Zep/Stones forefathers, and that alone is quite a tribute. Unfortunately, in trying to elevate their music to a higher level, they only show how limited their musical skills are. It's safe to say that there are no virtuosos in this lineup, even with new members, drummer Matt Sorum and keyboardist Dizzy Reed added on. Slash is a solid guitarist but both his and the band's ambition go far beyond their limited repertoire of riffs and shrieks. Overall, it's a winner, but it's not Appetite for Destruction.

Disillusioned with G N' R

By Paul Donefski

Use your Illusion, the much-anticipated Guns & Roses double album is finally here. If I don't sound excited, you're right, but I'll get into that later. I still feel that if anyone is going to slap down eight to 15 dollars for a tape or CD, they should get a thoroughly researched and objective opinion. If there's any chance that someone will weigh my words towards a decision on an album, they can feel comfortably that they are getting a semi-unprejudiced, honest opinion.

A little explanation of the ratings: First the traditional one to five star rating ( Poor, Fair, Good, Excellent, and Classic, respectively). Then two numbers, the number of good tracks to the number of tracks on the album (say, seven of ten). The third rating has been debated by me for quite a while. After the * rating, and the track rating, there will be one more number. That is of number of times the album has been listened to at the time of this publication. This is important because we've all had an album we couldn't even finish at first listen but ended up as a treasured favorite. The end result will look like this: 6/09/7LNSN.

I've been quite angry when I've bought an album because a reviewer from one of the great metropolitan dailies or music mags had missed the underlying confusion and bitterness. While being distracted by the cover version of ABBA's "I Think I Love You," it's fair to say that heartache is still an issue (and isn't it for all of us, anyway?). Montclair Art Museum exhibits NJ's 'lost' beauty

By Maria Russo

Many of us who live in New Jersey take many of the things that surround us in our environment for granted. Most of the time we are just so used to seeing the same pattern, that we don't realize the beauty that lies within. Paul Weingarten is an artist, and a resident of Montclair, that has discovered the lost beauty of our surrounding New Jersey. His exhibit is being shown at the Montclair Museum.

Weingarten has found inspiration from observing such things as shorelines, the Hudson and Passaic Rivers, subways, oil tanks, and the city of Newark. Through his eyes and his diverse pallet of colors he has transformed an ordinary subject into a poetic, fluid masterpiece. Just about all of his paintings are landscapes, but what makes them unique is their consumption of nature, with all its transcendental values, emphasizing on the land and the light of day.

The majority of his paintings are oil on canvas. They contain a bold radiance that resembles the long tradition of expressionism and romanticism. This is obvious in the intense colors and the exaggerated forms in his painting. The difference between Weingarten's technique of expressionism and the historical expressionists, like Van Gogh, is that Weingarten's are more joyous and create a positive force of energy, while expressionists of the 19th century create feelings of negativity.

To capture the true beauty of Weingarten's work you have to study it from a distance. To view it up close, one might see a conglomerate of thick, swooping strokes trying to enhance the scene of the city, but from a distance the sight becomes a breathtaking view. Such paintings as "Manhattan From Weehawken" is a sight of vivid reds and yellows of the sun setting behind the city. The glow of the descending sun reflects off the waters beneath the bridge, and gives the whole setting a placid mood. "Clouds over Park in Newark," is a painting which depicts Weingarten's views of the transcendental values of nature. The sky is of a royal blue, containing fluffy clouds with hints of purple and fuscia swirled within them. The trees stand tall and full displaying all their impressive limbs of greenery, while a path is made weaving in and out of them for nature lovers to walk through. Weingarten even can find a picturesque image by looking at storage tanks. In the painting entitled "Storage Tanks, Newark" he brings across to the viewer these massive tanks, but creates the context in a world of strong and delicate teals and aqua marine blues. That highlights the background with a dot of yellow which combined makes the whole area a magnificent sight.

Weingarten's work will be on exhibit now through October 8. His paintings are something worth to see. Not only are they uplifting, but they will make you look at New Jersey in a whole new perspective.

A Paradise of a Different Color

By Mark Loughlin

The first film in a "Sneak Preview Symposium" was called Paradise starring Don Johnson and Melanie Griffith. Upon hearing the title, I expected to see Don and Melanie get stranded on a deserted island. No such luck. Instead we saw a quaint, little drama about a couple, living in the country, who take care of a friend's ten year old son during the summer. Later on, we find out the couple's two year old son recently died.

At first, the boy receives nothing but hostility from Mr. Johnson, who feels threatened by him. They slowly get to know each other, and after he brings the boy to work on his shrimp boat, (no I'm not kidding) they become good buddies.

The audience reaction was very high with their heart strings getting tugged around with ease. A hearty round of applause was given as the closing credits rolled.

Soon after, our guest speaker was introduced, the producer of Paradise, Patrick Palmer. A very droll and reserved man, Palmer entertained the audience with his frank, amusing anecdotes about the film. One got the impression the producer didn't exactly get along with Johnson. In fact, the most flustering thing he could force out was, "Don's very popular."

Paradise is quite a departure for Griffith and Johnson who both give very competent performances. If you can suspend your disbelief that Don Johnson is a shrimp fisherman with the world's most even tan, you should have a good time.

Blood and concrete mix

By John Baes

Murder. Sex. Music. And humor as lethal as hydrochloric acid. Throw them into a blender and set it on high and you have the recipe that Jeffrey Reiner used to concoct his new film, Blood and Concrete. In one word this movie is bizarre. It defies categorization. It is at once a thriller containing fluffy clouds with hints of purple and fuscia swirled within them. The trees stand tall and full displaying all their impressive limbs of greenery, while a path is made weaving in and out of them for nature lovers to walk through. Weingarten even can find a picturesque image by looking at storage tanks. Later on, we find out the couple's two year old son recently died.

At first, the boy receives nothing but hostility from Mr. Johnson, who feels threatened by him. They slowly get to know each other, and after he brings the boy to work on his shrimp boat, (no I'm not kidding) they become good buddies.

The audience reaction was very high with their heart strings getting tugged around with ease. A hearty round of applause was given as the closing credits rolled.

Soon after, our guest speaker was introduced, the producer of Paradise, Patrick Palmer. A very droll and reserved man, Palmer entertained the audience with his frank, amusing anecdotes about the film. One got the impression the producer didn't exactly get along with Johnson. In fact, the most flustering thing he could force out was, "Don's very popular."

Paradise is quite a departure for Griffith and Johnson who both give very competent performances. If you can suspend your disbelief that Don Johnson is a shrimp fisherman with the world's most even tan, you should have a good time.

Blood and concrete mix

By John Baes

Murder. Sex. Music. And humor as lethal as hydrochloric acid. Throw them into a blender and set it on high and you have the recipe that Jeffrey Reiner used to concoct his new film, Blood and Concrete. In one word this movie is bizarre. It defies categorization. It is at once a thriller containing fluffy clouds with hints of purple and fuscia swirled within them. The trees stand tall and full displaying all their impressive limbs of greenery, while a path is made weaving in and out of them for nature lovers to walk through. Weingarten even can find a picturesque image by looking at storage tanks. In the painting entitled "Storage Tanks, Newark" he brings across to the viewer these massive tanks, but creates the context in a world of strong and delicate teals and aqua marine blues. That highlights the background with a dot of yellow which combined makes the whole area a magnificent sight.

Weingarten's work will be on exhibit now through October 8. His paintings are something worth to see. Not only are they uplifting, but they will make you look at New Jersey in a whole new perspective.

A Paradise of a Different Color

By Mark Loughlin

The first film in a "Sneak Preview Symposium" was called Paradise starring Don Johnson and Melanie Griffith. Upon hearing the title, I expected to see Don and Melanie get stranded on a deserted island. No such luck. Instead we saw a quaint, little drama about a couple, living in the country, who take care of a friend's ten year old son during the summer. Later on, we find out the couple's two year old son recently died.

McBain is McLame

By Tom Bond

McBain is a film of extreme campiness, in the same vein as that of the television series Batman, the movie Animal House, those Police Academy farces, and Naked Guns I & II.

This 102 minute action film travesty stars Christopher Walken and Maria Conchita Alonso (real action movie types, right?). Walken is McBain, a ‘Nam veteran trying to eke out a living as a New York City taxi driver. This changes faster than a speeding yellow medallion cab when Christina Santos (Alonso) finds McBain.

Santos’s brother just died in a vain attempt to overthrow Colombia’s cut-throat cocaine conspiring regime. Her brother saved McBain from a Vietcong prisoner of war camp in 1973. McBain promised to return the favor someday and Presto! A not-so-comical McBain from a Vietcong prisoner of war camp.

Unfortunately, Alonso isn’t any better. This 102 minute action film travesty stars Alonso (real action movie types, right?). (Alonso) finds McBain.

There are several major problems with this film. For one thing, Walken certainly does not fit the role of action hero. Walken is too meek and it painfully shows. He tries to act macho but merely winds up making a fool of himself. He lacks the conviction and serious viciousness that made people like Schwarzenegger, Stallone, and Norris rich.

Un fortunately, Alonso isn’t any better. She does not have the fiery belligerence to do any good in starring action roles. Here she is trying to pass herself off as a rebel leader with the nerve to down El Presidente’s narcogovernment. No way, Josel Alonso comes across like an international Avon lady. Perhaps she can take a few hints from Sigourney Weaver’s earthshaking performance in Aliens I and II.

Thirdly, what really makes McBain the king of camp and circumstance is the goofy way Walken, with the help of a number of Vietnam veteran friends, rush down to Colombia and joins Alonso’s gang of rebels to set things straight almost overnight. These guys haven’t touched a gun since the days of ‘Nam, yet they’re ready for action like GI Joe.

Additionally, these stooges always seem to know how to handle any situation despite their blearing lack of professionalism. Whether it’s defeating hundreds of Colombian troops guarding an airstrip, shooting an F-5 out of the sky with an automatic, safely sneaking around Columbia despite their American tourist appearance, or storming the presidential palace, don’t worry. This silly weapons and tactics team always has the answer.

Director James Gluckenhaus intended McBain to be a “say no to drugs” genre film. However, thanks to the artificial acting, the cartoon antics and the mindless approach to practical purposes, managed to bring the A-Team to the screen. Do yourself a favor and wait around Columbia despite their American tour.

Perhaps she can take a few hints from Slash’s guitar style for the band to grow. Bassist Duff is the best of both albums, 13 song powerhouse, with three others serving as B sides to singles. The band said they wouldn’t know how long they could go on before overdosing on drugs someday so they decided to release 30 songs. But the bad songs are so indistinguishable that it’s hard to appreciate the gems that both albums offer.

In the other half, “Civil War” begins it but you skip it because you heard it. Dizzy Reed’s keyboards are a refreshing change to Slash’s anguished riffs but they can’t save two terrible songs in “14 years” and “Yesterday.” “Knocking on Heaven’s Door” is already released and it’s followed by two lifeless tracks. “Breakdown” is noteworthy and great stuff. “Locomotive.” “You Could Be Mine” reminds you why you bought the album. “Don’t Cry” is a good song but it’s essentially the same as the one in the first album. A borrowing of Faith No More ends it with a genuinely catchy minute and a half of tap by Axl Rose.  /6 of 14/2 LSN.

Quarterback Controversy:
Bañas and Nittolo fight for starting spot
by Al Iannazzone

For the second week in a row MSC head football coach Rick Giancola had to make a second half quarterback change. Against Mansfield, early in the third quarter he decided to replace starter Steve Banas with Rob Nittolo, a game which MSC lost 18-7. Last week, against Buffalo, Giancola yanked Banas at the half and MSC prevailed 7-3 with Nittolo at the helm. (See football backpage).

Banas, a sophomore, was thrown to the wolves last year as he became the Red Hawks number one QB. As a freshman, Banas led MSC to a 7-3 record. He completed 50 percent of his passes and threw for over 1000 yards with nine touchdowns. However, he did tie an MSC record for most interceptions in a single season with 16. Due to Banas’ strong pre-season and knowledge of the system, it was not difficult to see why Giancola chose to go with him this year.

Nittolo, a 6-2, 210 lb. transfer from Pittsburgh, was a back up to superstar Alex Van Pelt last year. He has come in and played well when Giancola has called upon him but the question still stands: Who is MSC’s quarterback?

“They are both good players,” Giancola said. “They’re both equally capable of running the offense and both have strong throwing arms. Each player has his own plus. Steve is familiar with the offense and Rob is a better passer on the move.”

In the game against Buffalo, Banas played uncharacteristically poor. On the first play from scrimmage, Banas passed, but his pass was incomplete to Rob Funicello who was wide open. Banas’ pass was very short. It all went downhill from there, as he finished the first half three for 13 for 37 yards and two interceptions.

“After watching the films, I realized he didn’t play as poorly as we thought,” Giancola said. “It wasn’t his fault. There were a lot of other things involved.”

Regardless, Giancola went with Nittolo in the second half and the move seemed to pay off right away. Nittolo engineered a nine-play, 59-yard TD drive which gave MSC the victory. He finished the game four of nine for 49 yards and a TD.

With the game against Wagner coming up, the question still remains “Who will be MSC’s QB?” At this point, Giancola said it’s up in the air. “I feel equally confident with both,” he said. “It’s just like (John) Walker and Derrick (McCoy) in the backfield. I could go with both guys. (As for Banas and Nittolo) the decision will be made in practice. It’s who has better knowledge and understanding of what we’re going to do. The bottom line though is production.”

The “Dream Team” has been assembled. Next summer, Barcelona will be greeted by the U.S. basketball team, as the first ten members were selected this past Saturday.

For the first time, players of the National Basketball Association (NBA) are eligible for Olympic competition. The players on the “Dream Team” include: Michael Jordan and Scottie Pippen, Chicago; Karl Malone and John Stockton, Utah; Larry Bird, Boston; Charles Barkley, Philadelphia; David Robinson, San Antonio; Chris Mullin, Golden State; Patrick Ewing, New York; and Magic Johnson, Los Angeles.

Chuck Daly of the Detroit Pistons will coach the team and two other players— at least one college player— will be added by the spring.

One might think because of the extreme amount of talent these players possess, that Coach Daly simply has to put his players on the court and they will lead the U.S. to Olympic glory.

However, trying to blend together the egos of these stars, who individually are used to getting the ball and the attention all the time, will be a test in itself.

Daly will also have to contend with the challenge of making his superstars realize that they must not take the opposition lightly. Although no team will match the U.S. talent-wise, Team U.S.A. must watch out for the wide open three-point game the Europeans play. If an opposing player knocks down eight three-pointers in a contest, it could be a very disappointing and long Olympic summer for Daly and his players.

America’s proudest moment in recent Olympic basketball memory was in 1984 when the U.S. won the gold at Los Angeles. Jordan, Ewing and Mullin were members of that team.

The Olympic games have always been a special attraction. Every four years the best athletes in the world, from many countries, gather to compete in their respective sport. The athletes, either individually or collectively, represent their country in what is the ultimate test of who’s the best.

The U.S. basketball team must enter the Olympic games as a mentally prepared, cohesive unit. A unit who not only will have to face the competition, but a unit that will also have to deal with the pressure of winning the gold. The coach and team both know that anything less will be inexcusable.

For the first time in its three year history, the MSC women’s soccer team has a .500 record. After starting out 1-4, the Lady Hawks won three in a row to improve their record to 4-4. Their latest triumph was over Jersey City State, 15-8, 15-11 and 15-2, in MSC’s first game in its “new” home gym.

The Lady Hawks, for their first two years, played their games in the gym and no one knew where it was. But this year, with a newly painted floor, they are playing in the main gym and Tuesday night they played their first home game.

“We played in a real gym,” Coach Anita Kubicka said. “The set up was great. They could have been nervous playing their first home match in the new gym. At least people can find us now.”

Against JCS, Liliana Aguilar dominated as she recorded 13 assists and served up five aces. In the final game, MSC won 15-2 and Aguilar served all 15 of the points. Denise Dourmanis also excelled, amassing 18 assists and Shannon Arthur chipped in with six kills and an ace.

“We played flat in the first two games and got away with it,” Kubicka said. “In the third game Thursday night, I felt apart fundamentally, I remember reading a headline about the Giants that said they slept-walked to victory. That’s what we did. We should have dominated, but I am glad we won and are at .500.”

Earlier in the week MSC competed in a tri-match against FDU-Madison and Stevens. MSC defeated both teams 2-1 and 2-0 respectively. Tori Muller and Denise Dourmanis each had five aces against FDU, while Denise Chouinard served five aces against Stevens.

With four victories under its belt, Kubicka’s team has already equaled its total number of wins for all of last year. A season ago MSC finished 4-25, and 7-18 in its rookie campaign. She believes this is just the beginning for her team. “What makes me feel good is they haven’t reached their potential yet,” she said. “This makes me very optimistic. Once our attack starts to be more effective we should do real well.”

Field Hockey still winless

by Elan Bin-Hayon

The MSC field hockey team had high hopes of matching the success of last season (9-6 record and 2nd place in ECAC), but only two weeks into the season, those goals appear to be unrealistic.

The Red Hawks (0-5-1) have yet to win a game and, following a tie in their first game of the season, have lost five games in a row. Three of those losses came at the Kutztown Tournament at the hands of very solid teams. Following the journey, the Red Hawks traveled to Madison to face Farleigh Dickinson University. FDU came away with the 2-1 decision, with Katrin Anderson scoring MSC’s only goal, her first of the season.

MSC returned to Sprague Field to battle with the #1 Division III team in the nation, Trenton State College. The Red Hawks were man-handled by TSC. The final score was 8-0 in ’91.

“We played flat in the first two games and got away with it,” Kubicka said. “In the third game Thursday night, I felt apart fundamentally, I remember reading a headline about the Giants that said they slept-walked to victory. That’s what we did. We should have dominated, but I am glad we won and are at .500.”

Earlier in the week MSC competed in a tri-match against FDU-Madison and Stevens. MSC defeated both teams 2-1 and 2-0 respectively. Tori Muller and Denise Dourmanis each had five aces against FDU, while Denise Chouinard served five aces against Stevens.

Remember the good defense and the good pitching formula I gave as the key to winning this one pitcher tournament? Well, my friends, Scooter Trash has managed to take my theory and deposit it in the woods on the other side of Clove Road. This also happens in the location of many of the balls they’ve belted out of the park during their 5-0 rampage, placing them at the top of their division and also establishing them as the team to beat in this tournament. Thanks a lot, felias.

Scooter Trash has managed to squeeze by its opponents by an average of 10 runs per game. Thus far, the only team that has remained undefeated besides Scooter Trash is Polk High. The Busters have fashioned a 4-0 record behind the pitching of Scott Applegate, solid defense and timely hitting from the likes of Jeff Conover, Conan and Anthony Zanelli.

Whether Polk High has enough firepower to defeat Scooter Trash is questionable. Chris Albertson continues to pitch well while Tim North has solidified the infield defense with his play at third base.

Rich Dygos, Vin Gulbin, and Pat Brunner are just a part of an awesome lineup that has produced nearly 25 runs per game.

Delta Chi the Crows the Snappeheads and ZBT seem to be the next four teams that will qualify for the play-offs. The Snappeheads and Delta Chi share 3-1 records while the Crows and ZBT own 2-2 marks. The Snappeheads could surprise if they continue to gel as a team while the Crows, ZBT and Delta Chi have to pick it up a notch overall if they wish to legitimately contend in the playoffs.

This is a rundown of some of the games from Sunday through Tuesday:

Polk High 14
Busters 9
Home runs by Jeff Conover and Conan helped lead Polk High past the Busters. The Busters were unable to build on a seven run third inning, allowing Polk High to win it with six runs in the final two frames.

Snapperheads 22
The Beast 7
Jason Cupo’s grand slam provided the spark the Snappeheads needed as they pulled away from The Beast 22-7.

Despite consecutive homers by Rick Shannan and Bob Orth, The Beast was unable to catch the Snappeheads.

Scooter Trash 24
Delta Chi 14
Tori Conroy belted three home runs and drove in nine runs to lead Scooter Trash past Delta Chi 24-14.

Christian Guiro scored four runs in a losing effort for Delta Chi.

It’s the Water 14
Team Bud 12
A seven run first inning, helped by five walks, helped It’s the Water to a 7-0 lead. It proved to be enough as they held on for a 14-12 victory.

Justin Vagel and Bob Honald homered for the winners while Keith Van Ness hit one out for the losers.

The Midnight Tokers 8
Crows 6
Despite four hits, including two home runs from Ken Turash, the Midnight Tokers were able to come away with an 8-6 victory.

Billy Templeton and Karl Monaco helped lead the way for the Tokers by getting two hits and scoring two runs apiece.

ZBT 15
The Beast 14
Frank Di Rocco doubled home the tying and winning runs as ZBT sneaked past The Beast 15-14.

Wade Whitehead belted two homers and drove in five runs for the losers.
MSC earns milestone in 7-3 victory over Buffalo

by Al Lannazzone

After a dismal first half at Buffalo, MSC coach Rick Giancola made one major change, got his players fired-up and made a gutsy call late in the game. Fortunately, all worked out to MSC’s advantage as the Red Hawks defeated the Buffalo Bulls 7-3. The victory, which was the 300th in school history, evened MSC’s record at 1-1.

“We really needed this game,” Giancola said. “Coming back and playing as well as we did in the second half has to be a real boost for us. I’d rather not remember the first half.”

The first half was indeed one to be forgotten, as the Red Hawks played as poor a half as they’ve played in a long time. It seemed as if they played two games. In the first half (game) MSC’s defense allowed 191 total yards and its offense could not even earn a first down. MSC lost that half 3-0. However, in the second half (game) the Red Hawks turned it all around. The defense stiffened and became solid as it held the Bulls to 81 yards and no points. The offense, led by Rob Nittolo, who replaced starting quarterback Steve Banas, roared down the field and scored the game’s only touchdown in the second half. Derrick McCoy returned the kick off 28 yards to the MSC 40. With Nittolo now holding the reigns, the Red Hawks were not to be denied. On third-and-six from the MSC 45 Nittolo rolled left and rushed for eight yards to keep the drive alive. Tailback John Walker, who finished with 128 yards on 26 carries, amassed 29 running yards and 10 receiving yards in the nine-play, 59-yard TD march. With third and six again, but this time at the Buffalo 12, Nittolo hit freshman Dan Johnson with 12 yard scoring pass with 11:16 left in the third. Ron Orosz kicked the PAT and MSC took a 7-3 lead.

This is where the defense took over. In Buffalo’s next series MSC stopped the Bulls cold. One Bull in particular, quarterback Cliff Scott, felt the wrath of the Red Hawks in the worst way. MSC end John Stobie sacked Scott who had to leave the game with a shoulder injury. Five plays later Calvin Bradley intercepted a pass at the MSC 44.

One very important play was a fourth and one that Giancola decided to go for late in the game. Nittolo dove underneath on a keeper, and MSC was able to get two more first downs, churning up four more minutes.

“It was a gut reaction,” Giancola said. “A coach has to make a decision like this and fortunately it worked for us.”

For the rest of the first half, the defense stifled the Bulls not allowing a first down on their final two possessions. MSC did have two more scoring opportunities, but Orosz missed field goal attempts of 44 and 42 yards. Yet the Red Hawks held on and beat Buffalo 7-3.

Giancola was pleased with the overall performance but said there was still some work to do. “I was very happy with the defense,” he said. “It has been fairly consistent overall. I was also happy with the week’s work. The kids practiced hard; they had an intensity and purpose about them. We still need to improve on our execution and our inability to score.”

In MSC’s first victory of the season, there were many stars. Nittolo hit four of nine passes for 49 yards and one touchdown. McCoy added to the MSC rushing onslaught, picking up 74 yards on nine carries. The two starting backs, Walker and McCoy combined for 203 yards. Defensive end Larry Thompson made 11 tackles and linebacker Keith Short came up with 10 tackles and an interception. Stobie collected eight tackles and two sacks, including the one which sidelined Scott for the rest of the game.

Men's soccer loses game and star player

by Keith A. Idec

On Friday, Sept. 20, the MSC men’s soccer team faced its toughest challenge on the young season. The Red Hawks, who came into the game ranked 16 nationally in Division III, took on NJAC rival and defending Division III national champions Glassboro State. To make things even tougher, the Red Hawks had to play the current number-one ranked team in Division III on the road.

The Red Hawks dropped a 2-0 decision to Glassboro. However, MSC lost more than just the game. It also lost senior All-American forward Tom Estes to injury. Only five minutes into the game, Estes collided head-on with a Glassboro defender. The MSC star lay on the ground for two minutes unconscious, before having to be carried from the field on a stretcher. Estes spent the night at John F. Kennedy Hospital and after tests, he was diagnosed with a concussion.

When asked about Estes’ condition, Red Hawks first year head coach Rob Chesney said, “Tom is definitely out of Wednesday’s contest with Eastern Connecticut. He’s going to see his doctor on Thursday, and depending on what the doctor says, we will determine his status for Saturday’s matchup with Rutgers-Camden.”

Before Estes left the game, Glassboro jumped out to a quick 1-0 lead, scoring a goal just a couple of minutes into the game. This would be all the scoring that Glassboro would need. The Red Hawks added a second goal before the half to take a 2-0 lead.

Coach Chesney said, “We worked hard and we outplayed them in the second half. We even outshot them 15-6. However, the bot-tom line is that they won the game.”

Earlier in the week, on Wednesday, Sept. 18, the Red Hawks defeated Jersey City State, 7-1. This victory upped MSC’s record to a perfect 5-0, before it lost to Glassboro.

Lewis Ken-Kwofie, a senior from Bayonne, netted two goals in the victory played at Sprague Field. Estes, John Rubinetti (senior from Lyndhurst), Dom Bucci (senior from Edison), Eric Neubart (freshman from Livingston), and Paul Pallusio (freshman from Kenilworth) each added a goal for MSC.

This week, the Red Hawks will be in action twice. On Wednesday, Sept. 25, MSC will play host to Eastern Connecticut at 8:00 pm. Chesney realizes the importance of this game, saying, “We want to win coming off the tough loss to Glassboro. We’re going to be ready for Eastern Connecticut. They are a talented squad with a good coach and they play in an excellent conference. They are a physical and athletic team, but we’ll be ready.”

On Saturday, Sept. 28, the Red Hawks travel down to South Jersey to meet Rutgers-Camden in an NJAC game. Rutgers-Camden is “a young team that is in the rebuilding process. However, conference matchups are always tough,” according to Chesney.
