Eight rooms burglarized in Bohn Hall
Second year residence hall has been targeted for theft over Thanksgiving break

by Miriam Fuentes

Bohn Hall was broken into and eight rooms were reported burglarized over Thanksgiving Break for the second time in two consecutive years, according to Campus Police. Last year over Thanksgiving break, 21 rooms were broken into.

There was no sign of forced entry and there were reports of stolen VCR's, televisions, jewelry, stereo equipment, CD's and Nintendo cartridges from four floors, Campus Police said.

Doug Cooper, director of Facilities, said that someone had broken into the locksmith shop and took a crowbar to a safety box that contained a master key. The burglars used the key to get into the dorm rooms and then returned the key to the safety box.

Campus Police said they have fingerprinted the key but as of now they have no suspects.

Cooper, Bohn Hall Director Sherill Cantrell and the locksmith are the only people with access to this key that allows entry into the dorm and all of its rooms.

Cantrell said that the break-in could have occurred at any time between 9 p.m. the Wednesday night the dorms were officially closed for Thanksgiving break to the time they were reopened for the residents.

Cantrell also said that although she sympathized with the victims of the burglary, the residents had been advised to take all of their valuable belongings home with them before they left for break. She continued to say that there is a disclaimer in the residents' contract that says the school is not responsible for such incidents as theft and robbery.

Dr. Edward Martin, dean of Student Affairs, said that he was not sure if MSC was responsible for the stolen items and Cooper said that last year MSC was not responsible.

Bohn Hall is the most vulnerable to break-ins, Cooper said, because there are more entrances to Bohn than any other dorm. Cooper said that over Thanksgiving break, he added, a security guard specifically patrolled the Webster.

The entrance to Bohn Hall was chained this year over Thanksgiving break to prevent break-ins.

Thieves, however, found another way in.

Stone, Blanton and Bohn Hall end of campus.

One Bohn resident that was robbed, Jennifer Yarrits, said that she was robbed of approximately $1200 in jewelry. When she returned from Thanksgiving break, she said she found the door to her room open and the drawers and closets were left open.

She also said that on Monday she found one of the most expensive items stolen, a bracelet, outside the maintenance door on the fourth floor of Bohn.

Bret Sicola, another resident that was robbed, said that his VCR and his roommate's stereo were stolen. "I'm surprised that the answering machine wasn't taken," he said.

Sicola also said that one of his neighbors had 500 in CD's stolen.

Cooper said that they are considering installing motion detectors in Bohn Hall to prevent further break-ins.

"This is not an oversight on our part," he said. "We chained the doors this year.

"I think it's a shame. One thing is for sure: we will not tread lightly on this situation," Cooper said.

From the residents' contract:

Item #13 - Personal Property Loss

The College is not responsible for theft or other loss of money, valuables or personal property of residents. Therefore, each individual is advised to carry Personal Property Insurance through parents' homeowner's policy or another personal policy. The College will be responsible for damage to or loss of personal possessions at asset value caused by building malfunction or that which can be definitely attributed to college personnel, excluding outside vendor equipment such as washing, candy and soda machines. The College will not be responsible for loss of personal property when negligence of the student is a contributing factor.

In the contract that residents sign before they move into the dorms, it says that the college is not responsible for stolen merchandise unless it is due to the negligence of the school.
Asbestos removal

Asbestos was removed from the mechanical room of Sprague Library over Thanksgiving weekend. The removal took approximately two days and cost $12,500.

An outside company, Nesco, located in Paterson, was hired to remove the asbestos. "There was about 30 to 40 pipe elbow insulations removed," said Jerry Quinn, Director of Facility Planning.

Testwell Craig compiled a report of asbestos levels and received a Certificate of Occupancy from the Department of Commerce Affairs in Trenton stating that Sprague Library is suitable for use.

A future project for the removal of asbestos in the mechanical room of Life Hall is scheduled to take place the weekend of January 3. B & M Construction Company is in charge of the removal.

Access road opening

The $913,000 access road connecting Valley Road to Lot 22 is on schedule to be completed by Jan. 1 according to Jerry Quinn, Director of Facilities. "Students who live northeast of the campus, and travel southbound on Valley Road, are encouraged to use this new road so they can obtain easier access to their final parking destinations," Quinn said.

Shooting contest

The College Store is co-sponsoring a halftime shooting contest during men's and women's home basketball games this season with the Red Hawk Athletic department. During halftime, five spectators will be picked out of the crowd and asked to make one of two free throws. If successful the spectator will receive a Montclair State T-shirt.

Winners can then risk the T-shirt for a shot in a sweatshirt if they hit a three-pointer. Sweatshirt winners can risk once more for a $100 gift certificate from the school store if they can sink one of two half-court.

Campus upgrades gasoline storage system

by Kelly-Ann Woods

MSC is updating its 20-year-old gasoline storage system to conform to new state laws and regulations, said George Millen, project manager. Jerry Quinn, director of facilities, said the project will cost about $300,000.

Quinn said there are a total of eight gas and oil tanks on campus; six have already been removed. Two oil tanks have been removed near the college power plant and a third is to be removed before winter break. Three gas tanks, one of which already had a leak, were removed from behind the Student Center over Thanksgiving break. One diesel tank by the maintenance building is also to be removed, Quinn said.

The Environmental Protection Agency, which is monitoring the removal, said that the law requires double-walled tanks with double-walled piping and a monitoring system which will detect leakage. Pan Coast has been contracted to do work with Shimmel and Sor as environmental consultants and A.D. Jiligian as an engineering consultant.

Bob Gieza, director of the Student Center, said that the leak behind the Student Center was found in the soil when the tanks were removed; however, the contamination is not a health hazard.

Joe McGinty, director of maintenance, said that all the contaminated soil was removed Monday and sent to a treatment plant where it will be refined and reused.

Gieza said that three tanks will be replacing the other eight and will be located by the boiler house near the football field. The main tank will be a gas tank and there will also be an oil tank installed. There is already a diesel tank at the location.

Quinn said that they will be installing fewer tanks than they are removing due to a change from an oil system to a gas system. The new system will release less emissions into the atmosphere and will be cheaper for the college. He also said that the total construction will be finished within two to three weeks.

Trees and shrubs by Sprague Library dug up and replanted in town of Montclair

by Robert Wlntermute

Approximately 90 trees and shrubs were transplanted from the area surrounding Sprague Library to the town of Montclair between Nov. 23 to Nov. 25, 1991. The replanting project was a response to discussions held between the students and administration, according to Student Master Planning Committee member Carol Wilson.

Wilson, a Conservation Club member, replaced SGA Treasurer Rob Tranter as a student member of the committee.

According to Facilities and Planning Director Jerry Quinn, the town’s Department of Parks and Recreation took most of the shrubs that were growing around the library. “They didn’t take as many of the trees because they were not equipped to handle them,” Quinn said.

Wilson explained that the town took a large number of viburnum (an evergreen shrub) and other trees. She explained that the town planted 50 viburnums and one white pine at Mountainside Park. She also said that the town plans to plant an additional 30 to 40 viburnums and two dogwoods in Grove Field. One additional white pine and five or six junipers are being kept in a nursery while new sites are being chosen.

Quinn explained that the town had contributed their own equipment and manpower to the project. “Some of them had been destroyed,” Quinn said. “But the town and students combination worked together to save most of them.”

No town officials could be reached for comment.

Wilson said that apparently at this time of the year the town is devoted to leaf collection and clean-up. “They made sure that they had the people and the time available to get this done,” she said.

In other news related to construction, Quinn explained that 85% of the new and transplanted growth has been installed on the access road project. “We had the contractor take some of the trees from the construction site by Sprague Library and replant them there,” he said.

SGA News:
Armstrong addresses thefts in Bohn and Campus Police's request for handguns

by Robert Wintemute
MSC Campus Police will not be carrying guns, Vice President of Student Affairs Jean Armstrong told the SGA. Speaking for the administration and President Irvin Reid, "He wants to assure students that there are no plans at this moment to arm Campus Police."

The administration "wants to share with the student body our real chagrin and shock over the incident," Armstrong said, referring to last week's burglaries at Bohn Hall. Armstrong said that as a result of last year's burglaries, the locks in the entire building were changed. Armstrong said she could not comment on the investigation or on future plans related to security at Bohn Hall.

In response to complaints of theft by students, the Administration has changed its policy regarding books and bags at the Blanton Hall cafeteria. Armstrong announced that prior to this, all students had to leave their books and bags outside the cafeteria, where they were subject to theft. She said in the future students will be permitted to bring their belongings into the cafeteria. She also said the administration is reviewing plans to implement a new policy at the Bookstore, as well.

Charters and Appropriations

One appropriation was approved by the SGA: Bill F91048, for the purchase of wire distribution racks for The Montclarion in which $301.60 was approved. SGA Treasurer Rob Tranter suggested an amendment be made to the bill calling for the appropriation to be conditional that they be "permanently affixed by maintenance."

Four new bills were presented to the legislature: Bill F91052, STAND Dechartment; Bill F91053, International Students Organization Class II Charter; Bill F91054, Sigma Phi Rho Class IV Charter; and Bill F91055, Alpha Omega Class III Charter.

Five pieces of emergency legislation were also presented to the legislature. Bill F91055, Zeta Phi Beta Class IV Charter; Bill F91057, Circle K International Class IV Charter, Bill F91058 Amnesty International Chapter of MSC Class II Charter; Bill F91060, CLUB Constitution Review, and Bill F91061, HRK office relocation.

Class One budget appropriations

Every undergraduate at MSC pays $3 a credit toward SGA fees. These fees are used to fund the operations of all Class One organizations. By the time a full-time student graduates, he or she can expect to have paid about $360 in fees for these organizations.

Where does the money go? What do the Class Ones do with our money? The official word is that it is used to provide programming and cultural events for the entire student body. A brief look at those different organizations can tell just what is provided: concerts, weekly news, special functions, musical programming, and other things that make MSC a microcosm of the outside world.

For the school year 1991-1992, Class One organizations have received $579,412 in appropriations. This article is the ninth in a series that examines each organization’s budget, appropriation by appropriation.

Four Walls/Quarterly............$13,350

The Quarterly, also known as Four Walls, is the literary and art magazine of MSC. Each semester the publication seeks original material for publication. The purpose of Quarterly is to offer students a chance to express and share their individuality with the MSC community. Quarterly has 18 active members.

CONFERENCE.........................................................$500

“We took a big hit this year,” said Eliot Graff, Quarterly Editor-in-Chief. According to Graff, when the SGA asked each organization to cut back in their appropriations last year, the Quarterly chose to lose funding in this line. “This line is down from between $1,200 and $2,000 last year,” Graff explained.

Quarterly was able to cut money in this line by only attending one conference this year: the ACPMA (Associated Collegiate Press/Collegiate Media Association) regional conference, Graff said. He explained that this four day conference is held in New York City in March, and offers seminars, workshops, forums, critiques, national competitions and ratings versus other colleges and universities.

OFFICE SUPPLIES..................................................$200

As with the other Class One organizations, this allocation is used to provide adequate supplies for continued operation. Pens, paper ledgers, and other miscellaneous items are paid for from this fund.

TELEPHONE.................................................................$400

All Class One organizations maintain a telephone appropriation line to be used for paying for all calls related to official business.

PUBLICITY....................................................................$1,000

“We use this line to pay for ads in The Montclarion more than anything else,” Graff said. He also explained that money from the publicity line is used to pay for making signs and fliers advertising Quarterly sponsored events.

PUBLISHING............................................................ $10,750

This line is used for publishing the Quarterly’s two yearly magazines, Graff said. “We have roughly $5,000 a semester to publish a quality magazine of arts and literature for 14,000 students,” Graff said. Due to the lack of money, he said, the Quarterly is only able to publish 1500 copies while still maintaining the quality of the magazine.

“We do a lot of our own work for this here, and send the finished copy out to a printer,” Graff said. “Without a doubt, publishing is the main purpose of the magazine. This is reflected by its relative size in our budget,” he added.

BANQUET......................................................................$300

Graff said that when this line is broken down for each member, it comes to nearly $20 per person: “We may be able to get a pretty good meal out of that,” he remarked. The Quarterly banquet is open to all contributing artists and authors over the past year, and usually takes the form of being a cook-out or a “pot luck” dinner, he said.

COMPETITIONS............................................................. $200

In order to enter the national competition and rating service held at the ACPMA conference, the Quarterly must pay an entrance fee, Graff said. Whatever is left over from this expense, is used to enter any other competitions that are affordable, he said.

IS IT ENOUGH?

“It’s a joke,” Graff said. “To try to publish the incredible diversity of the writing and art that goes on with the undergraduate students and to publish enough to reach the student body with this is virtually impossible,” he said.

Graff continued to explain the different functions of the Quarterly: mainly art exhibits and faculty readings. “We deal with all the arts and written works on campus,” he said, “but we don’t have enough money to do it as well as we would like to.”

Quarterly’s budget is being reprinted this week due to an error. Valuable information was missing.
The college yearbook La Campana is a yearly reflection of campus activities and concerns through the media of artwork, prose, poetry and photography, open to all students interested in photography and the graphic arts. The yearbook currently has 13 members.

MAILING...............................................................$5,100

La Campana mails copies of the yearbook to all graduating seniors, O'Dowd said. This line is used to cover the cost of mailing the books to them.

OFFICE SUPPLIES.............................................$3,600

As with the other Class One organizations, this allocation is used to provide adequate supplies for continued operation. Pens, paper ledgers, and other miscellaneous items are paid for from this fund.

CONFERENCE LINE.............................................$2,200

La Campana executive board members attend the ACP (Associated Collegiate Press) Conference, according to O'Dowd. The last conference, held in Denver, Colorado, she explained. A second conference attended by yearbook members is a workshop sponsored by Jostens, the publishing company contracted by La Campana, she said. O'Dowd said that this conference, held in the spring, is usually located in Boston, Massachusetts.

"At the ACP conference, you get a little bit more from outside groups," Onorevole said. "There you get a chance to talk to different studios and publishers." He said that the line is used to pay for the yearbook representatives' attendance at the ACP conference only. "When we go to the Jostens conference, the costs are usually picked up by them. We have to tell them how many people we send, and they pay for it," he said.

BANQUET..............................................................$300

"We usually don't get to have a banquet because this line is taken from us in fines," explained Managing Editor Alison Onorevole. She gave as an example of these fines imposed by the SGA for not sending two people to a leadership conference.

Editor-in-Chief Kevin Onorevole agreed: "We were only able to send one person, but still got fined because we didn't send two. We did our best to send another, but it wasn't possible."

TELEPHONE.........................................................$650

This line is used to cover the costs incurred in making all calls for the yearbook, O'Dowd said.

According to O'Dowd, this line is used to repair the yearbook's cameras as they are needed. "With the use they get, they need repair quite often," she said.

PROOF CORRECTION.............................................$1,100

Traditionally when pre-publication copies return from Jostens, they are reviewed for errors and typos. "Any mistake we make, we get charged for," O'Dowd said, referring to how the publishers charge for any changes that have to be made that were not their fault.

Onorevole said that this will be changing in the future, with the arrival of a Macintosh computer from Jostens. "With using the computer, we will be able to get a printout immediately and make any needed changes without having to send it to the publisher first," he explained.

PUBLISHING......................................................$40,000

The publishing line is used to pay Jostens, the company contracted to publish the yearbook, Onorevole said. He explained that approximately 1,600 copies are purchased with this.

Onorevole explained the breakdown of expenses in this line. "The cost for all the copies we've ordered is $30,844. We are charged an extra 77 cents for each copy for using recycled paper only. The total cost for the yearbook comes to $32,769," he said. He explained that the money left over is used to purchase "extras" for the book. "We can get more color sections and have money left over to purchase a good basic cover for the yearbook," he said.

POSTAGE............................................................$400

O'Dowd explained that the postage expense is used, as is common with all other Class One organizations, to cover the expense involved in any official correspondence off campus.

PUBLICITY..........................................................$750

The publicity line is used to pay for the costs involved in advertising for La Campana in The Montclarion, Onorevole said.

PRINTING...........................................................$32,769

This line is used to purchase a good basic cover for the yearbook, Onorevole said. The college yearbook traditionally has 13 members.

All photo supplies: chemical, paper, negative sleeves, and film; are covered under this line, O'Dowd said.

OFFICE SUPPLIES.................................................$3,600

As with the other Class One organizations, this allocation is used to provide adequate supplies for continued operation. Pens, paper ledgers, and other miscellaneous items are paid for from this fund.

IS IT ENOUGH?

"I can't say that we are not given enough," Onorevole said. "We were given $31,949. I can see possibly increasing it to $33,000, but for now we could stay around the figure we have now. The increases should be kept to a minimum. If you can't put a good quality book out for $40,000, you should pack it in."

The Conservation Club Is MSC's newest Class One organization. Their purpose is to serve as an educational tool for students who wish to learn more about conservation and environmental issues. They currently boast 50 members.

BANQUET.................................................................$200

The Conservation Club holds its annual banquet at an outdoor location, preferring to have a barbecue, according to Treasurer Stephen Carey. "We try to have it outdoors rather than at a restaurant, since this is what our members enjoy," Carey said. Carey gave as examples last year's "Earth Night" appearance by Cristine Kelly, a folk singer who sings on environmental issues. "We also pay any costs that is involved with having the Student Center people set things up. It all adds up," he said.

Carey did say that if any line needed extra money, it was this one. "This is the line we most need to stretch out," he said, since, "we reach people who wouldn't normally go out of their way for the message."

ENVIRONMENTAL LIBRARY.................................$400

This line is used for the renewal of magazine subscriptions and purchase of new books for the Conservation Club's reference library, Carey said. He explained that during the fall semester the club renewed its subscriptions to the wide range of magazines and newsletters the club receives, including Conservationlist Magazine, Garbage Magazine, ("This magazine tells people about different issues with waste disposal and recycling," Carey said), Greenpeace Magazine, and National Wildlife. In the spring, the club uses what is left to purchase new books on nature and the environment, he said.

Carey explained that the library is open to anyone who wishes to use it to find out more about the environment. "It's a pretty good resource for any projects that have to do with environmental issues," he said. He also explained the club's policy with old issues. Due to limited space, Carey said, the Conservation Club is only able to keep the current year's issues on hand. Old issues are made available to anyone who wishes to have them.

ENVIRONMENTAL TRIPS..................................$3,600

One of the Conservation Club's functions is to help make the students aware of the environment. Carey said that one of the best ways of doing this is to sponsor trips for students to experience nature first hand. "We try to plan major trips that would be open to the entire campus community, to go places where you can appreciate the environment," he said. Carey explained that in the past, trips have been sponsored to aquariums, zoos, and parks; this past semester, the Conservation Club sponsored a trip to Niagara Falls and Canada. While the Club sponsors large scale trips like this, he added, they also sponsor hiking or white-water rafting trips in the New Jersey area.

Most of the line is used to pay for transportation and lodging, Carey explained, so that students are freed from as much of the financial burden as possible. "For example, we subsidized the Niagara Falls trip so that each person only had to pay $30 to go," he said.

OFFICE EXPENSE..................................................$200

As with the other Class One organizations, this allocation is used to provide adequate supplies for continued operation. Pens, paper ledgers, and other miscellaneous items are paid for from this fund.

POSTAGE.............................................................$75

Carey explained that the postage expense is used, as is common with all other Class One organizations, to cover the expense involved in any official correspondence off campus.

PUBLICITY.............................................................$1,350

The publicity line is used to pay for the costs involved in advertising Conservation Club events (such as Montclarion ads, flyers, and signs) and to pay for ordering promotional items, Carey said. "We're one of the few Class One organizations that currently does not have a new student orientation line," Carey said. Therefore, the line is used to pay for t-shirts and other promotional items, he said.

As an example, Carey described the cost involved in ordering t-shirts. "This can be a major expense for us," he said, quoting an average price of $500 for 100 shirts. "When we sell them, we put the money made back into this line to cover any advertising expenses," he explained.

LECTURES.............................................................$800

"We try to produce at least one lecture a semester, in addition to the Earth Week," Carey explained. These lectures deal exclusively with environmental issues, and are open to the entire campus community. He said that due to the small amount of money available in this line, the organization is only able to draw what he termed as "grass roots speakers," that are willing to speak in return for an honorarium. "We would like to see this line expanded," he said. "You're talking about a much greater expense to get bigger name speakers."

EARTH CARE..........................................................$200

In the fall semester, usually in November, the Conservation Club sponsors the Earth Care day, Carey said. This is a series of 12 to 15 workshops that are held on campus for local high schools. "About 20 schools send groups to MSC, where they attend at least three workshops," Carey said. "This is basically an outreach to get high school students interested in environmental issues."

TELEPHONE............................................................$350

This line is used to cover the costs incurred in making all calls related to official Conservation Club business, Carey said.

WEEKEND WORKSHOP.........................................$800

"This line is similar to conference line," Carey said. The Weekend Workshop is held twice a year by the New Jersey School of Conservation (which is in turn operated by MSC) at Stokes State Forest, he explained.

EQUIPMENT............................................................$450

Carey explained how this line is used to purchase camping equipment for public use. "We use this fund to purchase stuff like backpacks, tents, sleeping bags, and Coleman stoves," Carey said. He explained that this supply of equipment is loaned out to people who go on Conservation Club trips and don’t have any gear of their own. "It allows the general student body that wishes to participate, but don’t have their own equipment," he said.

CONFERENCE LINE.................................................$400

The Conservation Club attends several conferences throughout the year, Carey said. "Many local and national groups hold conferences in the area," he said. Carey explained that the club sends members to as many conferences as is possible. "We send people to keep up to date and to be aware of what is going on," he said. "It’s a tool that educates us. In turn we are able to pass on what we learn to the campus."

IS IT ENOUGH?

"Obviously no one is ever satisfied with what they’ve got," Carey said. "When you try to program for the campus community you want to bring what you can to them, but when you’re in a position to do programming you become aware of the enormous costs involved," he said.

Carey explained that the Conservation Club was no different from any other Class One organization in trying to do the best they can with what they’ve been given. Carey did say that at the same time, "We would like to see more money allocated to us." He stressed the strength of the club and its contributions to the campus. "As we grow stronger we hope that the SGA will recognize that growth and grant appropriations accordingly. We feel that we have a lot to offer the campus and would like to have more money to do so," he said.
Are you a big sports fan?
I do like a lot of sports. In fact I'm a very serious spectator of athletic events. I love to go to the hotel and at night we'd loosen up and have a nice party.

Did you play any sports in school?
I never played any sports although I am an enthusiastic tennis player - much more enthusiastic than I am competent. I jog. I'm thus more enthusiastic than I am competent.

Do you think athletes have a responsibility to be heroes?
But they certainly have the opportunity given the fact that we are a media society. I don't think many of us really could do that. We have to tell the other people what we believe, regardless of what those beliefs are. I don't think many of us really could do it.

What about the rest of the country?
I have a great fear that we will not take advantage of this moment of great peace in the world, to do good things. I wonder for certain they would have happened in terms of things we could have done for inner city education. If we're going to close down all of those military bases, how are we going to train the people to become a more positive force to solve the problems of the homeless in the society? I fear that we will pass up golden opportunities that exist right now because of the unique relationship between the superpowers of the world and it will be gone. I fear that places like South Africa will not become an egalitarian society as rapidly as it should or that Yugoslavia will push Europe into total war. Those are just a few of my worries.

What are your biggest fears?
I'm getting very depressed about David Duke. I'm getting very concerned with the growth of neo-fascism in Germany, and I look at the state in the Soviet Union. To me he is a great hero because he risked everything. I identified some heroes I really respected. One was the wife of a Soviet physicist who was banned by Gorky. Another is Andre Sokolov. He was a man who was a most brilliant scientist - he worked on the Soviet nuclear program. The most interesting thing about him is that he realized what a threat to world peace nuclear power is and he said that he was going to stand for peace for the rest of his life. And he campaigned for everything from the liberation of Jews who were jailed in the Soviet Union to intellectuals who were jailed because they dared to think, to poets who dared to recite their poems publicly which protested the state in the Soviet Union. To me he is a great hero because he risked everything.

The next couple I named were Nelson and Winnie Mandela. Think about a man who on principle would go to jail for nearly 26 years instead of saying what the state wanted to hear. How many of us would do that because of our beliefs, regardless of what those beliefs are?

What are your biggest fears?
That New Jersey will forget its commitment to higher education. That's my greatest fear.

Who are your heroes?
Everytime I get into naming heroes I get into serious trouble because certain ones get left out. I had to give a commencement address in 1986 at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga where I was in the faculty and I identified some heroes I really respected. One was the wife of a Soviet physicist who was banned by Gorky. Another is Andre Sokolov. He was a man who was a most brilliant scientist - he worked on the Soviet nuclear program. The most interesting thing about him is that he realized what a threat to world peace nuclear power is and he said that he was going to stand for peace for the rest of his life. And he campaigned for everything from the liberation of Jews who were jailed in the Soviet Union to intellectuals who were jailed because they dared to think, to poets who dared to recite their poems publicly which protested the state in the Soviet Union. To me he is a great hero because he risked everything.

The next couple I named were Nelson and Winnie Mandela. Think about a man who on principle would go to jail for nearly 26 years instead of saying what the state wanted to hear. How many of us would do that because of our beliefs, regardless of what those beliefs are?

What are your biggest fears?
That New Jersey will forget its commitment to higher education. That's my greatest fear.
first year. I lost sleep over that one, and over the student demonstrations because as a student myself I demonstrated and participated in all kinds of marches on campus. So I understood them. I did not find the demonstrations disappointing. I found the situation that led to the demonstrations disappointing; that there had been such a decrease in support of higher education in New Jersey and that students and parents were taking on more jobs, taking fewer courses... Let me tell you something, though. I’d rather have an active campus any day over an apathetic one. There was one demonstration on campus where the students were marching and chanting, “Where is Reid? Where is Reid?” and Reid was walking in line right behind them.

What was your proudest moment? Being inaugurated at Montclair State; although I wish more students had been there. That was my proudest moment in my life so far - well, I have two children. I guess those are great moments. At the birth of my second child I watched the Jet’s football game. My wife will never let me forget that one. But for the first child I was right there with the camera and I held her the very moment she was born – all bloody. The doctor plopped her into my lap and I was saying “Somebody take her! Take her!”

What do you want to be remembered for? I’ve always wanted to come to a particular campus and have a decisive role in the direction of that institution, and I think I have that opportunity here. I think that whatever I am remembered for will have something to do with Montclair State.

Are you thinking of politics later on? No, I’m not. I see my work here requiring seven to ten years to accomplish what I want. What are other things in life I’d like to do? I’d love to be an ambassador; no particular country. That’s one thing in life I think I’d enjoy.

What advice do you have for new students? Take a lot of liberal arts courses and don’t worry about a major. I think a major is a trap – even if it takes an extra semester to decide. I changed my major three times: chemistry, economics then psychology. I would love the idea of a “university college” in which there are no majors - only learning the basics of a broad liberal education.

The big question: Do you like the Giants? Oh, very much so, although I’m just as dismayed as anybody else this year. I absolutely love the Giants. They’re my team. My wife is a slight Redskins fan because she lived in Washington.

Superbowl Prediction? Buffalo or the Redskins (with a slight edge to the Redskins).

What do you want for Christmas? My latest fad is that I want a jeep; a classic jeep, not a station wagon on high wheels. I want to be able to drive right on the beach and stand out there and fish. This is my dream now.

President Reid, a “serious spectator of athletic events” with a not-so-serious spectator at this year’s Homecoming game.

Editor’s note: Regretfully, this is the last edition of Campus Quirks, as Doug and Carl are graduating. Congratulations and many thanks.

AIDS 101: Condomology

by Nicole D. Chambers

Middle class suburbia seems to think AIDS is just some gay man’s disease, or that only urban dwelling, needle sharing, drug-addicted homosexuals get it. While college kids who go to football games, have keg parties and use fake ID’s don’t have to worry about AIDS. They’re too young and too beautiful to ever be touched by such a disgusting disease.

Condoms. They used to be for preventing pregnancy, now they’re used to prevent death. Once in a while a used latex rubber can be found laying on the ground of a college campus parking lot. It may be a repulsive sight but it gives one hope, hope that even in the heat of the moment, two “untouchables” in the back seat of some little beat up Honda had enough common sense to use one. Unfortunately, this scenario seems to be the exception rather than the rule at most colleges, says Melissa Terry, an AIDS counselor at the Planned Parenthood clinic in Newark.

“So many of the college students that we talk to think that it just can’t happen to them,” Terry said. “They say they know that their partner is monogamous and think that they don’t need condoms because they’re not at risk of getting AIDS.”

Monogamy. Now there’s a concept: having sex with only one person. The glitch here, though, is that while one partner is being monogamous, the other is sleeping with the entire campus.

Terry stressed that despite their educational background, college students are some of the most naive clients at the clinic. Some are embarrassed to discuss sex, embarrassed to admit they’re even having it.

“They think they’re too young to use condoms,” Terry said. “But let me tell you, if they’re old enough to be screwin’ around, then they’re old enough to be using condoms. Do you know I actually had a girl say to me that she wasn’t sure if her boyfriend used condoms or not.”

How could an educated woman be so dense? Terry says she has nothing to answer about. But according to Terry, ignorance is not bliss, and girls like this need to understand that every 60 seconds someone dies of AIDS.

Condoms. They used to be for preventing pregnancy, now they’re used to prevent death. Once in a while a used latex rubber can be found laying on the ground of a college campus parking lot. It may be a repulsive sight but it gives one hope, hope that even in the heat of the moment, two “untouchables” in the back seat of some little beat up Honda had enough common sense to use one.

AIDS is not prejudice. It doesn’t care about wealth or education. The only thing AIDS cares about is a person was too stupid to give a damn.

Being in college means being responsible for one’s actions. There is no more answering to Mommy and Daddy. There is only one’s self to answer to. Having sex without a condom “may feel better,” may be “more romantic,” but is it the smart or the educated thing to do? College students are the future leaders of the world.

What kind of future can they look forward to if they didn’t even use a condom?
Plaque dedicated in memory of Dr. Edward Johnson

by Jennifer Tracey

A memorial plaque in honor of the late Dr. Edward W. Johnson of the political science department was unveiled on Monday, Dec. 2.

The memorial plaque is an etching of Dr. Johnson, placed on a black African granite background. The plaque was unveiled at the Political Science Department’s annual Christmas party in the Campus Center Quad on Dec. 11 at 4:30 p.m.

Dr. Johnson received his doctorate from New York University, his masters from New School for Social Research and his bachelors from Rutgers, The State University. Johnson was a specialist in Indian and South Asian politics.

Ever Get A Pal Smashed?

A true gentleman of character who will always be remembered as a loving husband, devoted father and an honorable friend.

The political science department invites members of the MSC community to pay their respects to a departed, beloved colleague. The memorial plaque can be seen on the first floor of Russ Hall near Kops lounge.

Robbery - A new Thanksgiving tradition

Several rooms in Bohn Hall were robbed again over Thanksgiving break. This seems to be an annual tradition at MSC.

The victims got nothing but sympathy. Apparently, it was up to the students to insure their belongings with their parents' homeowners insurance. So what do students with parents who rent do for insurance?

And because students were warned to bring home all of their earthly possessions for the four days residence halls were closed, residence life feels it is absolved of any responsibility. How logical is it to lug home heavy TV's and stereos for four days. Is it understandable on winter break for residents to bring their possessions home because they are gone for over a month. The thieves, being savvy, realize this and strike on Thanksgiving weekend.

Residence Life learned its lesson last year so they hired a security guard to watch over the dormitories. So where was the guard when the robbery took place? The thieves broke into the locksmith shop and pried open a safety box that held the master key anytime between 9 p.m. Wednesday night the dorms closed to Sunday when they opened again. So why didn't the guard notice the break-in during his patrols of the halls?

Isn't it suspicious the thieves knew precisely where to look for the key? Does this job smell like an inside job to you? Last semester, it was obviously an inside job. Twenty-one rooms were robbed with no signs of forced entry. It could have been done by anybody because too many people had the master key, including the assistant managers and maintenance personnel. And this year a stolen bracelet was found by a resident next to a maintenance closet door. Hmmm.

But there is no need to worry. Our Campus Police is on the job and the case is under investigation.

These thieves apparently have a sense of humor. Last year they left a note on a victim's bed that read, "Hey Pal, Squeeze Club. Good luck with Desire. Hope you peace. I want your ears. I don't. Anyway, I took all your money and jewelry. See you in a couple of years." They actually meant next year.

This year they returned the master key to the safety box they toasted after they finished robbing the rooms. Why would they be so stupid to risk such a thing? Maybe they are mocking the victims.

Yes, the students are being mocked by the thieves and all they get is sympathy from residence life. Residence life was quick to point out that it isn't their responsibility. And why should it be? After all, they only run the building.

A good idea to bring some change would be to force all administrators to live in the residence halls for a month. Let them eat the lousy food, share communal bathroom with slobs, deal with the lack of parking and then get their rooms robbed. Then we would see something more than sympathy.

Haiti needs international support to overcome coup

Haiti for the first time in its history, had a democratically elected government. Unfortunately, this government was short-lived due to a military coup. Unlike most nations, including many islands in the Caribbean, Haiti has a history of military coups that is almost unsurpassed. Haitians are dying by the hundreds to keep democracy in their country alive, yet no other nations seem to be interested in preserving Haitian democracy.

I am very worried about this situation. The whole western hemisphere has been moving toward democracy, then the Haitian military overthrows an elected government. Clashes between mutinous troops and President Aristide's supporters leave as many as 100 dead each day. The streets turn quiet after certain hours. Soldiers patrol in unmarked cars, their rifles protruding from the windows, killing people by the dozen. Is this the kind of behavior that we want in a neighboring country? What about human rights?

In closing, I hope this situation will open some eyes and help elevate awareness about the tragedy in Haiti. Haiti needs your support and international support in dealing with the crisis. You can’t stand by and let this happen. I urge that my fellow Americans, Haitian-Americans, West Indians, Europeans, Asians and all others living in the United Nations for international support for Father Aristide. The Haitians are awaiting his return.

If we muzzle Jeffries, who's next?

I must take issue with thoughts presented within the last issue of The Montclarion. Specifically, the convolution of thoughts concerning the campus appearance of Dr. Leonard Jeffries.

If college campuses are the fermenting grounds of our future, then, in essence, my future is being shaped by events that transpire on this college campus. I do not speak singularly nor do I necessarily refer to my separate intellectual development which is paramount to my future. I speak collectively without any communal undertones. I mean to say that our future is being shaped by events that transpire on this public college campus. Perhaps the key word contained within the last sentence is "public." This is a public college campus, not a secular institution that intentionally and explicitly stifles free speech. Subsequently, the free flow of ideas, opinions and principles should be allowed to continue to exist and influence me. You need not shelter me from the storm of nonconventional ideas. I will sort them out.

I take issue with the three assumably in-house professors whose names appear below a letter to the editor in last week's issue. Although I am familiar with only one of the signers, I worry about their participation. When such barions of political instruction, theory and understanding as the political science department's personnel openly espouse, political intolerance bordering on censorship, I must cry foul. How can we maintain an educational atmosphere conducive to free thinking when those responsible for implanting said free thinking indoctrinate us with a platform of political intolerance? If the contingent who wished to censor Jeffries was successful, who would be silenced next? During my first semester, I was exposed to political science through an introduction course given by Dr. William Batkay, one of the aforementioned endorsers. I enjoyed his class. I had a challenging time debating different political platforms. I learned that censorship does not stop discussion. Democracy inherently diminishes the effect of demonstrations simply by allowing the demonstration to exist.

Also contained within last week's issue was a pictorial chronicling helicopter rides sponsored by the Marine Corps. How did its presence effect the Vietnamese contingent on campus? What about the Nicaraguan, Cambodian and Grenadian contingents? Where is the outcry concerning the United States Marine Corps presence on campus? Talk about an organization that espouses hate and violence. What about those insipid La Roucheans who periodically appear as an intellectual affront in front of the student center? Where are the watchdogs of intellectual integrity? Do they approve of the La Roucheans and the USMC?

No, there is no music this week. Consider it an object lesson in history and political intolerance. While he was vice president, Spiro Agnew played hatchet man for my favorite ex-president Richard Milhouse Nixon. Before resigning in the midst of scandal, Agnew attempted to censor songs that are currently background Muzak in areas markets such as a Little Help From My Friends, Lucy In The Sky With Diamonds and Puff The Magic Dragon for being blatantly drug oriented. If he had been successful I would be writing about Vivaldi's Concerto no. 4 in D minor for the umpteenth time. If musical censorship were successful there would be no new music to listen to. If political censorship is successful there will be no new ideas to illuminate our future. Do you really want to be stuck in the status quo that is the current political machine? I don't!
President Reid's Policy Statement

Issued in response to the controversy surrounding Dr. Leonard Jeffries campus visit

TO: Campus Community
FROM: Irwin D. Reid
Date: November 20, 1991

In fall 1990, I sent a memorandum to the campus community on intolerance. In that statement, I urged members of this community to oppose all forms of racism, anti-Semitism, sexism, homophobia and hate of any kind which would serve to insult persons or groups of individuals or which would serve to diminish us as a community.

The Council on Human Relations (COHR) also developed a statement which appealed for respect for differences of opinion and freedom of speech. This statement cautioned that we must be diligent to assure that differences do not degenerate into name-calling or insults to individuals or groups. COHR stated that such behavior can be destructive of courtesy and civility and endangers the environment needed for engaging in productive dialogue.

The President, as any speaker, has every right to express his views when invited to do so by a recognized campus group. This letter is in response to the many articles that were printed in "The Montclarion" last week regarding Dr. Leonard Jeffries' speech at the Harvest Ball. Firstly, I would like to say those so-called concerned individuals who signed their names protesting Dr. Jeffries' presence are ignorant. The majority of you whites have not done the research that this man has done. It seems to me that your minds are corrupted from birth because you are relying on distorted information rather than researching the information yourselves.

The second point I would like to address is the fact that The Montclarion mentioned only Dr. Jeffries' controversial comments in the articles. It is not surprising in the least to not see any of the positive comments which he had addressed. What happened to the positive side of Dr. Jeffries' speech? Oh! Let me guess. You could not find any positive comments about his speech, but you were quick to write down all of the controversial comments and print them. In my judgment, if I was your professor, every single one of you would have failed for having such a negative and narrow outlook on the "Mother of History" (African-American History), and particularly because of the way you presented the information.

A week before Dr. Leonard Jeffries' arrival, I noticed flyers protesting his coming to the campus. The day of the event I saw 20 individuals standing outside, quiet and looking stupid. They were bickering. "Jeffries is a racist and there is nothing we can do about it." If they were so upset about him speaking at the Harvest Ball, then bitching about it will get them nowhere. I did not see any of them inside to listen to what Dr. Jeffries had to say. I am not saying believe every story you hear, but I am saying you should not come to your own conclusion without accepting the challenge to find out if what he says is the truth.

Now that the event is over, most of you white people are still bitching. Yes, I am highly angry about the situation because whites in general are always questioning African-Americans when they become intellectual on any topic. Most whites begin to lose their minds whenever blacks master a topic such as history. What is your problem? If I were you, I would look at what I am saying as food for thought, not as a gazette.

As it is written in the U.S. Constitution, people have the right of freedom of speech. But I do not agree with this because the founders who wrote the constitution were racist themselves. In fact, they are all remembered as slave masters and nothing more. Therefore, the First Amendment should be, "do unto others as they have done unto you," then accept questions. Furthermore, since I have expressed my true thoughts, would you label me as a black supremacist or just a plain racist? You make the call.

Dr. Jeffries is profiting from propaganda and racism

President Reid is correct in his position that Dr. Leonard Jeffries "has every right to express his views when invited to do so by a recognized campus group." What I find difficult to understand, however, is why any MSC organization would want to invite Dr. Jeffries to address them and pay him an honorarium of $1500. Dr. Jeffries is a racist propagandist who preaches a chauvinistic doctrine of Black superiority and white criminality. As it is written in the U.S. Constitution, people have the right of freedom of speech. But I do not agree with this because the founders who wrote the constitution were racist themselves. In fact, they are all remembered as slave masters and nothing more. Therefore, the First Amendment should be, "do unto others as they have done unto you," then accept questions. Ask Mr. BUYBACK

Q. How does the College Store decide if they want my text?
A. The first question the bookstore asks is whether the book has been ordered for the next semester. If yes, then we examine how many copies are needed versus how many we have on hand. If additional copies are needed we place the title on our buyback list.

Q. Do I get more money selling my books at the College Store or Blanton Hall?
A. The money you receive will be exactly the same. We offer two locations to make it easier and less time consuming for you to sell your books.

Q. Will the College Store buy back workbooks, study guides and paperbacks?
A. Yes. Our list is inclusive of all types of books used on campus. There are some texts, however, that are designed for one-time use and cannot be resold.

Q. How much can I sell my textbooks for?
A. The College Store will pay 50% of the new book price on the current edition textbooks if a) we have received a book order from the faculty for your book for the upcoming semester, and b) if we need your books to meet course enrollment figures. (most current edition textbooks NOT being used for the upcoming semester will be purchased by a wholesale company at between 14-40%. These are not resold on campus)

Q. Can the books that I have highlighted be resold?
A. Generally, texts which have been highlighted can be sold back to the store for 50% or at wholesale, assuming they have market value. Workbooks and study guides meet different guidelines. If the store requires the book, we will be more tolerant of the amount of writing, etc. Wholesalers want these books to be almost mark-free.

Q. How often do new editions of textbooks come out?
A. On the average, new editions are released every 3 to 5 years in order to keep current with current events and information. When a new edition is released the old edition has no market value to either the bookstore or the wholesaler.

Q. Why is wholesale value so low on paperbacks?
A. First of all, the value of a book is determined based on supply and demand. Secondly, the way paperbacks are constructed places the wholesaler at greater risk that the book may be destroyed in shipping or in handling at the warehouse. Most paperbacks were made to be used by one person.

Q. How come my friend got half price on his books and I only got wholesale?
A. Unfortunately, the College Store can only pay 50% up to the quantity of books needed for the upcoming semester. Once the store has reached the quantity needed, we then pay wholesale price, if any, for additional texts. Texts purchased wholesale are sent off campus at the end of each buyback.

9 Days of BUYBACK:
Every time you bring in your textbooks for sale, you are eligible to win one of the 45 prizes that we are giving away.

In order to win, simply fill out the entry blank you will receive at the buyback counter and deposit it at the College Store.

Drawings will be held daily starting with one prize the first day, with one additional each day up to 9 prizes on the last day of buyback.

Winners will be notified by phone or mail, and will have until January 31st, 1992, to claim their prize.

Coming next fall, television watchers, especially those that watch NBC Saturday morning cartoons (and I know there are quite a few MSC students who do—those that don't work in the mornings, that is) are in for a bit of a shock. As of the Fall 1992 season, NBC will no longer be showing cartoons.

God only knows what else. Kellogg's knows this. So do the toy manufacturers, game companies and everyone else. These little kids have enormous influences on their parents on what to buy. You might have seen a box of cold cereal that had a Captain Video Super-Secret Agent Decoder Ring on it. Television, and when you go food shopping, you yawn to Mommy to get you that cereal. Or now that the holiday season is in full swing, maybe all the Nintendo ads are prompting you to tell Mommy, Santa or whatever that you want every cartoon in the first world. That is a lot of needs that NBC won't be getting. Instead, they'll be running news programs, telling how much the world sucks, how many people died and where and when, where George's head map of Albania moved to and telling Mr. and Mrs. America that George Bush had an operation on his middle finger at the same time Ronald Reagan had an operation on his anus (coincidence?). What are they going to run? Infiniti and Honda ads? Is Sara Lee big in this timeslot?

They want to run news programs on Saturday mornings.

News programs!

This proposition just makes me want to yak up my lunch. Since time immemorial, I can remember sitting in my living room with my Super Sugar Crip (before General Foods whipped out and called it Super Golden Crisp—notice he's still Sugar Bear, not Golden Bear) and watched all the cartoons I could until they quit at 12:00 or 12:30. Then, I'd go outside and BS with my friends on how the new cartoons looked. Now the new stories sounded. Saturday morning cartoons are the soap operas of the younger set. Not only that, but how many times have you caught your parents watching these so-called "kid shows?" They enjoy them as much as we did, and our younger siblings do.

Okay, I've yelled and screamed about the "kiddie shows?" They enjoy them as much as we did, and our younger siblings do. These little kids have enormous influences on their parents on what to buy. You might have seen a box of cold cereal that had a Captain Video Super-Secret Agent Decoder Ring on television, and when you go food shopping, you yawn to Mommy to get you that cereal. What are they going to run? Infiniti and Honda ads? Is Sara Lee big in this timeslot?

Saturday morning is a time for escape. We, kids of all ages, would watch these cartoons and forget for a short time about all the crap we have to put up with in the world. Cartoons are good. They make us laugh and feel young. Think about the thousands of times you saw Wile E. Coyote run off the cliff, from the time you were old enough to remember until now, and tell me that doesn't make you smile. Kids don't see injustice in the world then. Their idea of injustice is if their brother takes the last ice pop or shoves something else. Their idea of injustice is if their brother takes the last ice pop or shoves something else.

They entertained American troops for quarter of a century. For the 25 years that followed they held each other in their hearts although words were unspoken. They survived three wars, nine presidents' administrations, the baby boom and the Beatles. And they became legends.

In times of war and in times of peace and on the silver screen, they held an audience like no one else; they held me like no other. The world was their stage. Their act was sensational. Their relationship, extraordinary. The movie For The Boys legendary.

Offstage, Dixie and Eddie (Beatie Midler and James Caan) fought their own personal war. But once the applause started and the curtain rose, they took the stage, smiled and did it all for the boys. Some might even consider they were performing right into the hearts of movie-goers everywhere.

Quarterly's Faculty Reading featuring Dr. Petty and Prof. Hollander

by Eric W. Erb

Quarterly, publisher of the Four Walls literary and art magazine, and the oldest student-run organization on campus (founded in 1928) sponsored their third Faculty Poetry Reading of the semester Wednesday at 1pm, featuring Dr. George Petty, Jr. and Prof. Ron Hollander, both of the English Department.

Hollander brought to the students at Montclair from his vast array of experience in journalism a rare glimpse into his fiction. Set in 1947 Brooklyn, it details the adventures of Yeikel, a Jewish immigrant. Hollander's style is rather journalistic in approach, and sometimes the immense attention to detail is overdone, but mostly it was fascinating. His character analysis of the picture of the Treasury building on the back of a bill almost provoked me to open my wallet to examine my money.

Petty opened with a few amusing anecdotes and read some of his poetry about his daughters, about old friends, and about some certain poets he met briefly. His poems were amusing at some points, and sublime sentimentally at others. He said that the essence of Modernism was, "If you write a sentimental poem, nobody will buy it."

The reading was co-sponsored by the Montclair and emceed by Eliot Graff, editor-in-chief of Four Walls and president of Quarterly, and the audience was given an opportunity to speak with the authors after the readings had taken place.

Other successful Faculty Readings sponsored by Quarterly this semester have included Drs. Bronson, Benediktsson, Onweune, and Spencer. Look for more in the spring.

Vidiot Report:

featuring Mega-Man, Wolverine, In Your Face!, Super Bases Loaded

by George Olschewski

Part of the reason the Mario series of games for the NES is so successful is that the original concept of the game has changed very little, and the controls never stray very far from the original. Capcom's Mega-Man series is probably the best action/adventure game to follow in the NES's favorite plumber's footsteps.

Mega-Man II, III and IV all have the same general concept: defeat Dr. Wily and his small army of robots with different powers. Once you defeat each robot, you get its special ability. For instance, if you defeat Air-Man in Mega-Man II, you get his air shooter, which can fire miniature tornadoes. Defeat Crab-Man and you get his Crash Bomber. This goes on until you also get the Metal Blade, Atomic Fire, Bubble Lead, Leaf Shield, Time Stopper and Quick Boomerang for the final confrontation with Dr. Wily. Believe me, the extra hardware comes in handy!

The weapons and enemy robots change in MM III but the idea is still the same. This time, you can get the Top Spin, Search Snake, Shadow Blade, Spark Shock, Hard Knuckle, Needle Cannon, Magnet Missile and Gemini Laser. MM IV is also the same idea. Why is this like the Mario series? Take a look at both. They have the same characters in the series—Mario and Luigi, and Mega-Man and his dog, Rush. The enemies vary from game to game in both series. The characters' weapons are the same, with slight changes—Mario has magic mushrooms, fire flowers, and even a raccoon tail that lets him fly in Super Mario Bros. 3. Mega-Man has his gun, he can jump and can acquire the powers of the enemies he has defeated. I suppose you could call Mega-Man a technological Mario. Now imagine if you would throw Mega-Man in the Mushroom Kingdom and had him go head-to-head with King Koopa? Hmmm. All in all, I enjoyed the Mega-Man series, but it seemed to lack some of the mystery and magic of the Mario series. Rating (Scale 1-5): 3 1/2 across the board.

What do you get when you give a Canadian intelligence agent adamantium claws and skeleton, the ability to heal wounds quicker than normal people, and a hair-trigger temper? You get the uncanny X-Man Wolverine, in his first self-titled solo adventure for the NES. In Wolverine, you are out to defeat the X-Men's arch enemy Magneto, with the help of a few of your teammates, such as Havok. The game is true to the X-Man character of Marvel Comics fame, down to the "znikt" sound of Wolverine's claws being unsharpened. If one were to compare this game to others already released, the first Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles game for the NES comes to mind. The controls and feel are very similar, and both are fun to play.

The introduction of the supporting cast of the X-men comic book is a nice touch, seeing as most games licensed by Marvel and Nintendo seem to have solo billings—Spider-Man and The Punisher (although Spidey has a guest spot in this one) all go it alone. Maybe we do need friends. Then again, with a dude like Magneto ready to slap you sideways, having your X-buddies helps. Wolverine is a nice translation from the pages of Marvel Comics to the video screen, and I hope to see some more Marvel games, like the ones currently in the arcade. Rating: 4.

Sports games for any game system have to be good. I don't mean some rehashed Pong clone in place of tennis, or the blocky sports games of Intellivision. Nintendo sports releases are, for the most part, good. Game Boy games I'm skeptical about. How can you get a good sports game onto a teeny screen and have it appeal to someone? T'ain't easy, Dooley. LJN has a great basketball game out for Game Boy in NBA All-Star Challenge. Now Jaleco has one that is just as good, in In Your Face!

To compare the two isn't really fair. The two are basketball games, true, but they are so different. NBA has five games rolled into one. In Your Face has one-on-one. That's it. And that's great, really. It's very straightforward, and you can start immediately, as opposed to NBA, where you have to sift through the players of all the NBA teams and find one you'd like to be. In In Your Face! has four. You can alter the play time, and it's just you and your opponent. In In Your Face! is a great one-on-one game, and I enjoy it very much. It's great. If one-on-one is your thing, and you're not really into the other basketball games like H.O.R.S.E., free-throw competition, et cetera, then In Your Face is for you. It's a well-developed game, and the "instant replay" feature when you make a good shot is a nice feature. The playability and fun of this game gives this one an easy 4 1/2. Nice job.

On a Super-Nintendo note, I locked into a nice, comfortable pattern in Jaleco's Super Bases Loaded. Granted, I played with a slightly altered team (so what if all my players were batting .350 with 40 HR's?), but this works with the pre-programmed teams as well. When you're batting, don't move the batter in the batter's box. Keep him where he begins. When the pitch is delivered, don't move the crosspated to swing high or low. Just press the B button to swing normally. The system automatically swings high or low and the bat connects with the ball 75-80% of the time, sending it into it fair territory. Whether it's caught by a fielder or not is debatable, but I've done well with this, and even won a few games. Give it a try.

If you have any "secret" tips and tricks for any Nintendo games that you'd like to share (I'll even get your name in the Montclarion), send them to me! All we vidiots are in this boat together. And if the game you'd like me to review or cover, let me know! Get a secret code that'll win a game? Do you like a game? Tell us! Until next week!
SCORE WITH THE COLLEGE STORE!

The College Store is sponsoring a season full of challenges and excitement for the 1991/1992 Men's and Women's Basketball Seasons. At half-time of each home contest, (excluding the Dial Classic) five lucky contestants will be chosen from the crowd to participate in a shooting contest. They will each be given two attempts to do the following:

Make a shot from the foul line - Win a Montclair State T-Shirt!
If you make the foul shot, you can risk the t-shirt and try a shot from the three point line.

Make a shot from the three point line - Win a Montclair State Sweatshirt!
If you make the three point shot, you can risk the sweatshirt and try a shot from half-court.

Make a shot from half-court - Win a $100.00 gift certificate

Money is the root of all evil
New York spends too much on athletes
Ewing signs for $18.8 million

When we get home from work we tell our wife, husband, mother, father, girlfriend, oh you know what I mean... we tell them that we've just gotten a $40 a week raise. Naturally, we are all excited about a $2,000 increase in annual income.

Imagine coming home and telling a loved one, "Honey, I just got a $55,000 a year raise!" I can't say that and I know I'd never hear a loved one say it to me. I haven't seen that many zeroes since Rob Campos sat next to me in advanced math, in the 12th grade. However Patrick Ewing of the New York Knicks is the proud recipient of the increase, having just signed a two-year contract extension worth $18.8 million. Is Ewing, or anyone else for that matter, worth that much money? No way!!!

Ewing's deal, which extends through the 1997 season when he'll make $9.4 million, makes him the highest paid player in team sports. The man will be making $1.9 million in each of his last two years of the contract. That's crazy! Pat, you're not worth it.

I know that championships are built around big men. However, this belief has been disproven numerous times in the last decade. Just look at the last three NBA Champs. The Pistons, with Bill Laimbeer in the middle, won two straight titles and the Bulls won it last year with Bill Cartwright at center. Laimbeer and Cartwright are respected big men, but they aren't one of the "three dominant" centers. By the way, three these big men--Ewing, Hakeem Olajuwon and David Robinson--have combined for one championship appearance. Olajuwon is the sole finalist.

Let's take a closer look at Patrick. The six-year veteran stands 7'-1" and doesn't average 10 rebounds for his career. I know people will say, "Who needs rebounds with Oakley around?" I say that's a bunch of bull. Pat, use your damn height and grab rebounds. You know you can score, but be a man! It makes me sick to see a man who's 7'-1" turn-around and fade-away jumpers. If they go in, great, but if he's off, he's off. Ewing, take it to the hole strong and get fouled!

In all fairness to Pat, he's a great scorer and defender, but his game is lacking something---win! In Ewing's six years with New York, the Knicks have won the Atlantic Division once, and haven't gotten farther than the Eastern Conference Semifinals in the playoffs. This year looks to be different, mainly because of Pat Riley, but who knows what will happen by May.

The equations should be: Wins + Player's Performance = $$$.

1. If that was the case, Michael Jordan, Isiah Thomas and even Magic would be the highest paid players in the NBA. In fact, Jordan, Bird and Magic have all deferred part of their salaries to do that these teams could fit another player, one that would strengthen the team, under the salary cap.

2. That's a real winner. Anyone who sacrifices money, or anything else, for the good of the team is a winner. I believe the word is unfeltish.

Pat may not be a winner, but he is a great player. He's selfish? I don't know, but I do know he will be laughing all the way to the bank.

Calling the Shots

The Nets want to rebuild and they signed Eddie Murray, a 35-year-old, to a contract worth over $6 million for two years. They need a $6 million man to rebuild the team. That's a switch. I thought they had to rebuild the $6 million man.

The Nets just signed Bobby Bonilla to a five-year, $29 million contract. Who's next and for how much?

The Yankees are offering Steve Buechele over $2 million and the man hit .241 last year. I'd say he deserves it.

Oh, guess how the Yankees will be able to pay that much for a player of Buechele's caliber? They're raising ticket prices. That's great! Now, people are going to pay more money to get shot at, to have been epitomized on me and to see the Yankees lose. But I love to see the Yankees lose.

The Knicks Patrick Ewing will be making $9.4 million in 1995-96 and 96-97. I hope by then you win a championship, Pat. If you ever get better, we'll be all impressed.

Seriously though, isn't it sad that New York has all this money to spend on its sports' teams and players, while more people are homeless, jobless and penniless in NYC than anywhere else?

A talk with track coach John Blanton

John Blanton, who begins his fourth season at the helm of Red Hawk indoor track and field, answers questions concerning this year's team.

Q: How do you think your team will do this year? And what are your goals and expectations for the team?

A: MEN: We will definitely compete against the record book this year. The team will attempt to rewrite a wide variety of track and field history at MSC. The ultimate goal however, is to produce a variety of NCAA All-Americans.

WOMEN: We have a young and inexperienced team that has a lot to learn. However, we are hoping that we can return to the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships to defend our 1991 1600-meter relay title. Our main objective, though, will be to get a very young, but fine group of athletes to gel.

Q: Who are your top three runners?

A: It is certainly too early to make any predictions. I will say that we have a wide variety of talented athletes that are anxiously awaiting the season to begin.
What recession? Salaries in professional sports are out of control

By Michael Frasco

In the first place. Professional sports has traditionally paid its athletes a good deal more than the average working-class citizen and this has been accepted for the most part because that is the nature of the business. However, the money today's pro athletes are receiving is simply unheard of. Salaries in professional sports are out of control. $14.5 million for Anderson, $13 million for Messier. Bonilla, the $29 million man, makes more than the both of them combined. Now that's not fair; he doesn't deserve to make more than those two put together. Damn right he doesn't, and the other millionaire twins do not deserve it either.

Yet what one deserves and what one can command is a different issue altogether. That is the situation that has taken professional sports by storm, particularly in the free agent market of major league baseball.

What is the cause of the situation, you ask? The cause of today's professional athletes partaking in the mega-bucks bonanza centers on the owners of the teams.

You see, team sports is a private industry. This means that the owners reap tremendous profits because of the entertainment value sports hold. Pro sports is immediately in the public eye through television, print and radio media, not to mention the fans attending the ballgames themselves.

Therefore, the profits generated create the flexibility the team needs to pursue the athlete which it desires. The pursuit itself is never a question of money, relatively speaking; rather it is how much money will ultimately take to land the athlete that becomes the bottom line.

In the case of Bonilla, the Mets' original asking price was $24.7 million. But the Angels upped the stakes to $27.5 million, which put the ball in the Mets' court. When it came down to flash it or fold it, the Mets flashed it and coughed up the record $29 million to get their man.

In the end, Bonilla and all his fellow millionaires are cashing in on a market which is indifferent to what one deserves. There is no basis for making this kind of money other than that it is what a given athlete can command at the present time.

You can call today's professional athletes undeserving and unworthy of their riches, but if they can get the most money possible, then fine. If you and I were in their position, we would do the same. Until that time comes, keep playing the lottery.

Sports Info. Director to hold second annual seminar

by Al Lannazzone

MSC's Director of Sports Information, Al Langer, is trying to convey the importance of P.R. to high school athletic directors. As a result, Langer will be conducting his second annual sports seminar on promotion and statistics, Dec. 13, from 9 a.m. - 1 p.m. in the Student Center.

According to Langer, the seminar's aim is to teach high school level athletic directors, coaches and team managers how to publicize their teams and how to properly communicate with the media.

"If you have a great football team or basketball team, you should know how to publicize it, for the school and for the kids," Langer said.

According to the College Sports Information Directors of America, the seminar is the only one of its kind for high school level personnel in the country.

Langer said that there are many reasons to have this seminar.

"On the high school level, a lot of schools don't know about P.R.," he said. "They never even heard of press releases. I'll tell them things and their eyes will start to open and they'll realize what can be done."

Langer, 26, of Montclair, graduated from Rutgers University in May, 1987. He majored in both journalism and physical education. He said his original intention was to be a sportswriter, but after working for The Home News while still in college, he realized he wanted more.

"I liked it, but I didn't love it," he said. "I worked for the Rutgers SID for a year and a half and I realized I wanted to be in public relations."

He came to MSC in January 1988 and wasted no time in becoming one of the most respected SID's.

Langer has won many awards from CoSIDA. His most recent was the CoSIDA "Best in the Nation, Clause for Excellence" certificate for his 1989 MSC football season review. He also won "Best in the Nation" for the 1989 MSC softball brochure.

Now Langer is trying to teach high school personnel to learn to deal with the media. He is hoping for a better turn out than last year.

"The first seminar had 15 people originally sign up," he said. "It turned out to be a beautiful day (in June), so people probably went down to the shore. Only seven showed up."

This year, Langer believes he will get more people mainly because of better publicity.

"I've gotten quite a few phone calls," he said. "We have to get better publicity but the key is The Star Ledger. The Ledger ran our ad one day and I got over 10 calls."

Langer believes the two sponsors of the seminar will help in promoting it as well. These two sponsors are Play-by-Play Software and Scheduling Card Co. They'll have exhibits and will handout information on their services. There also will be a special guest.

Langer said he cannot stress enough the importance of P.R. "They'll (schools) be the beneficiary," he said.

MSC students can attend the seminar for $5 with an MSC ID. Refreshments will be served throughout the session.

Red Hawks play tough but drop a pair

by Keith A. Idee

The MSC men's basketball team was looking for its first victory of the season on November 26. On that night they traveled to Pomona, N.J. to take on the Stockton State Ospreys. The game marked the beginning of conference play for the Red Hawks. After two tough losses in the Susquehanna Tip-Off Tournament, MSC was hungry for a victory.

MSC led by as many as nine points in the first half. The Red Hawks led by the score of 20-11, with 11:46 left to play in the first half. Lee Mullins scored 10 first-half points to give MSC a 20-10 lead at the intermission.

The second half got very interesting. It saw nine different lead changes between the NJAC rivals. The turning point in the game came with 6:39 left in the game, with Stockton leading 49-48. Dean Spinozzi came up with a steal and pushed the ball up-court to Mullins, who scored the bucket, and put Stockton in the lead 51-49 at the 6:15 to play mark. Ristevski hit a three-point shot with 4:24 left in the game. Then, with 2:04 left in the game and MSC down 57-54, Garland Gillette hit the front end of a one and one to cut Stockton's lead to two. That was as close as MSC could come, as the final score was 57-55.

Mullins led the way for MSC, scoring 17 points. Ristevski added 13 points, seven rebounds and three assists. Joe Huber chipped in with nine points and 10 rebounds. The loss dropped MSC to 0-3 (0-1 NJAC).

On Monday, Dec. 2, the Red Hawks were still in search of their first victory of the young season. This time they travelled to Ialip, N.Y. to take on Dowling College. Dowling came into the contest ranked 14th in the nation in Division II. MSC trailed seven at halftime, 33-26. Dowling opened the second half with a 20-9 run, and at one point led by 28. The Red Hawks hung tough in a comeback that was cut short by the final score of 57-51.

MSC regained the lead when Peter Ristevski hit a three-point shot with 6:24 left in the game. Then, with 2:04 left in the game and MSC down 57-54, Garland Gillette hit the front end of a one and one to cut Stockton's lead to two. That was as close as MSC could come, as the final score was 57-55.

Mullins led the way for MSC, scoring 17 points. Ristevski added 13 points, seven rebounds and three assists. Joe Huber chipped in with nine points and 10 rebounds. The loss dropped MSC to 0-4.

RED HAWK NOTES:

The Red Hawks have two games on this week's schedule. On Friday, Dec. 6, they play away at Rutgers-Camden (7:30). Then on Wednesday, Dec. 11, they travel to Ewing Township to take on NJAC rival Trenton State (8:00). Mullins leads the team in scoring with 16 ppg and Gillette is averaging 15 ppg. Ristevski leads the team in rebounding (7.7 rpg and 5.1 apg). MSC starters played 177 minutes out of a possible 200 in the Stockton game.

Women's hoops shoot for seventh straight Dial Classic

by Al Iannazzone

The year was 1979. College basketball's popularity was at its peak due to a star-studded NCAA Championship. Michigan State, led by Magic Johnson, defeated Indiana State, led by Larry Bird, in the highest-rated collegiate basketball championship game of all time. On the other hand, women's basketball was still lacking some notoriety, but 1979 was the year it was put on the map. In 1979, Dial Soap started supporting women's collegiate basketball by establishing a tournament series. It was the first company to recognize women's basketball for its excellence in 1971.

MSC regained the lead when Peter Ristevski hit a three-point shot with 4:24 left in the game. Then, with 2:04 left in the game and MSC down 57-54, Garland Gillette hit the front end of a one and one to cut Stockton's lead to two. That was as close as MSC could come, as the final score was 57-55.

In 1979, Jeffrey was a player for 's Classic Championship team and six years later she won her first as head coach. Jeffrey has since left MSC and former teammate on the '79 squad, Alice DeFazio (formerly Alice Schmidt), Now, as a head coach, DeFazio will be trying to win her first Classic. MSC has won nine of the 12 Dial Classics it has played in, including six-in-a-row. Now it's year 13 and MSC is hoping its winning can continue as regularly as the Dial tradition does.
