Sadhwani new SGA president with 400 votes; Kunze takes vice president in landslide win

999 students turn out to vote in SGA elections this year

by Maureen McGowan

Gauri Sadhwani and Richard Kunze won the SGA elections last night for president and vice president, respectively. Sadhwani won by a count of 400 votes and Kunze by a count of 537. Overall 999 MSC students came out and voted this week.

Sadhwani, who is currently President Pro Temspore for the SGA, said she was “really surprised I won, but I’m ecstatic,” with the outcome. One of her plans for next semester is to “followup on the goals of this year’s executive board. They worked hard and their goals should be carried out.” She added, “This position means a lot to me, it’s not just something to put on my resume.” She added, “I’m very happy people came out to vote.” Sadhwani said she wants to find out where the students stand on the possibility of University status.

Kunze, who is now the Attorney General, said, “I feel great, I’m going to Disneyland.” He added he was pleased with the student turnout, but, “I still feel we should have had more than a 10 percent turnout.” He also said he feels the election committee did a great job, especially Jill Armstrong, who was Chair of the Election Committee. “Jill did an excellent job, she pulled it off without a hitch,” said Kunze.

One of Kunze’s first plans is to “sit down with the (new) executive board and work on goals that we’ll be trying to accomplish over the next year.”

Other winners include: Janet Jaramillo for secretary, with a vote count of 660, Rob Tranter for treasurer, with 688 votes, and Sal Anderson for Board of Trustees alternate, with 686 votes.

Jaramillo said, “The whole election committee did a fantastic job in trying to get people to vote, but it was sad to see that only 999 students voted.” She added that her first priority is to “get together with Dano (Dan Oliveri, current SGA secretary) to completely show me what I have to do and what I can get done.” She added, “Depending on what he shows me and what doors he opens, determines how far and to what extent I can take my position.”

Tranter, who will take the office of treasurer, said, “I was happy for the most part by the way the elections were conducted, but I was disappointed in how some members of The Montclarion trivialized the election and the election process.”

One of the things Tranter said he is currently working on is getting housing at Clove Road for executive and planning board members of Class I organizations over the summer in order to start programming earlier. He added that he is still negotiating with the administration on this.

“I commend all candidates for making the effort,” he said. “I wish more people would try, because you never know until you try.”

Anderson, a legislator, said he is very excited, and looking forward to next semester. “The Board of Trustees is something that the students should be more aware of, if students want to protest, the Board of Trustees is a great place to get a point across.” He said from now until his first meeting in June, he will be working with Seth Lebowitz and Paul Prior, the current Board of Trustees Alternate and Voting member.

Other candidates said even though they lost the election they were optimistic about the future of the SGA. Joan Petrocelli, who ran for president and received 291 votes, said, “It was a tough race, very competitive.” She added, “Even though I lost I feel really good about it, I met a lot of people along the way who supported me, and I’m not going to let them down.”

She said she plans to continue working for the students. “My campaign promises were not just so people would vote for me,” Petrocelli said. She said she was not sure in what capacity she wanted to serve the students next semester. Currently she is director of Public Relations for the Student Government Association.

SGA proposes new guidelines for alcohol in the Rathskeller

by Thomas Walsh

In a referendum question at the polls yesterday, 748 students voted to permit the return of alcohol to the Rathskeller. Anthony Susco, SGA president, said that President Irvin Reid suggested that the proposal for alcohol on campus be brought to the College Senate for approval and then through discussion with the administration it may be implemented.

“The reality of getting the policy implemented depends on whether or not the administration wants to create a better sense of campus community,” Susco said.

Susco also said that if the proposal is reviewed over the summer, the implementation of alcohol in the Rathskeller could take place as early as this fall.

Janet Jaramillo, newly elected secretary of the SGA, said that alcohol on campus could promote a new and different campus social life. “Alcohol in the Rath could help change MSC’s image as a suitcase college,” she said.

Campus Clean-Up day postponed due to inclement weather forecast

by Annamarie Palmer

Campus Clean-Up Day has been postponed until May 13 because of an inclement weather forecast. Victor Korebka, director of welfare and internal affairs, said the event was originally scheduled to take place today and is sponsored by the SGA, the Conservation Club, the administration, the maintenance department and faculty of MSC.

Korebka said that the main emphasis of the clean-up is behind Bohn Hall and the amphitheater. If all goes well, he sees this happening annually with hope that the degree of difficulty will not be at the point it is now.

"We are doing this in order to give the students an idea of what responsibilities we must take as citizens of this campus community in promoting pride and a sense of collegiate spirit," Korebka said.

Students, faculty, staff and administrators will participate in a campus-wide clean-up which will split the campus into 11 sections. Members of the campus community who wish to participate will meet in the Student Center Quad and will be put into different groups and given a section to work in.

The maintenance department will provide dumpsters, rakes, bags and gloves. In addition, they will provide the manpower needed to assist in the clean-up.

Korebka also said, "We want to be able to have an interaction between administration, faculty and students outside of the academic setting." Robert Tranter, treasurer of the SGA, said that he had the idea last semester.

Dr. Edward Martin, dean of Student Affairs, said he opposed the SGA's plan because the department is seeking certification from the mind so that it if you fall into any type of situation, you can remain calm and think. They can be used to poke out eyes, punch a hole in the cheek of the attacker. Use anything you have such as eyeliner, lipstick, hairspray and even books. Women can cause unwanted situations. Don't wear skirts too short.

4. Never let the attacker come get you. Go after him! - It's all about a look. Look intimidating! You don't want to kill the attacker, but you do want to hurt him enough so that you can get a few minutes to run.

5. Never let the attacker come get you. Go after him! - It's all about a look. Look intimidating! You don't want to kill the attacker, but you do want to hurt him enough so that you can get a few minutes to run.

6. Walk with an attitude or like you know where you are going. - It's all about a look. Look intimidating!

He also stated that a person should tell security if they see something.

Sharonda Wooten, a sophomore, volunteered in helping Johnson show the audience members how to protect themselves if an attacker grabbed them by the neck. Your first instance would be to get even leverage by grabbing the attacker's shoulder and kicking the attacker in the groin area. When the attacker's head falls, bring your knee to the attacker's head.

You can also thrust the heel of your hand to attacker's nose bridge and forehead, but be careful. This can bust a blood vessel. Another way to stop the attacker is by a karate chop to the Adam's Apple. Keys are legalized weapons. They can be used to poke out eyes, punch a hole in the esophagus, and to rip a hole in the cheek of the attacker. Use anything you have such as eyeliner, lipstick, hair spray and even books. Ladies should watch what they wear. The way you dress can cause unwanted situations. Don't wear skirts too short. Don't show too much leg. If you wear tights, cover your behind. Women can look good in moderation.

"The Legal System stinks when it comes to rape but you have to stand the shit and scum on the street!," stated Johnson. "Some men will try anything to get sex," said Johnson. You can't trust everyone. They might have negative ideas about things to do at your own expense. Think before you put yourself in any situation.

Johnson, also known as Mountain, has been with the Guardian Angels for six years and has the title of Public Relations Advisor Super Senior. Johnson is a full-time Guardian Angel. He works seven days a week on 24 hour call.

Along with a fellow GA from London, Johnson gave six tips on how to protect yourself on campus.

1. You should always know your surroundings-Be aware!
2. You should make it your business to know who to be involved with and who to not be involved with.
3. Always walk with other people at night. They might see what you can't.
4. Never back yourself into a corner. The attacker would have the upper hand if you can't get out.
5. Never let the attacker come get you. Go after him! - You don't want to kill the attacker, but you do want to hurt him enough so that you can get a few minutes to run.
6. Walk with an attitude or like you know where you are going. - It's all about a look. Look intimidating!

The police have learned to accept the GA in NYC after 13 years of proving themselves. Until this day, there are some police officers who won’t cooperate. The GA put themselves in more danger than policemen because they don’t carry any weapons or wear bullet-proof vests. They use walkie-talkies for communication while on the street.

In order to become a GA you must be 16 years of age and in school or if not in college, work full-time. You are put through a vigorous three month training program which includes Self-Defense, Martial Arts, Subway and Street patrolling, and Situation Training, helps teach to help the mind so that if you fall into any type of situation, you will be prepared.

Women are involved in this organization. The only woman GA in NYC is Lisa Silwa, wife of the founder. There is a female chapter in London, England called the Amazon. Board of Trustees meeting: Board approves additions to receiving area with opposition

by Paul Buscavage

Plans for a new receiving addition in the Maintenance Building were approved by the Board of Trustees on April 9, as part of the Facilities Master Plan, despite the opposition of faculty and staff committees.

In November of 1990, a Planning document was drawn up for the projects in the amount of $29,230,000. However, excluded from the plan was the receiving addition, due to construction estimates, said Dr. Robert Altmann, chairman of the board, in a statement before the addition that would provide storage for materials and records now located “unsafe and inefficiently throughout the campus.”

The administration is preparing a new planning document, under the procedures required by the Department of Higher Education. This document will include the receiving addition, instead of the plans proposed by the committees.

Dr. Joan Ficke, faculty union representative, said, “the administration decided to ignore the recommendations” of the committees and that the priorities were rearranged without the committees’ approval.

Ficke also said that there were two phases to the planning, and the receiving addition ranked lowest on the first phase list. So, the committee decided to proceed with the top priorities of the second phase, which included the renovation of Partridge Hall. She said the committee felt the renovation of student facilities were more important, yet Altmann went ahead with the plans for the receiving addition.

Dr. Thomas Auch, director of finance, said “the timing was not right for the factor in the Board’s decision to rank the priorities, and that nothing can be done “at Partridge Hall until we vacate it” and move everything into the new academic building.

In response, board member Paul Prior said there is “a limited amount of money” and the Chapin, Calcia, Partridge, and Morehead Halls, all need renovations, yet none of this was discussed.

Dr. Philip H. Thomas, Secretary of the Board, questioned whether the Board should send the planning document to the Department of Higher Education, if the money could be used for other projects.

In response, board member Murman said, “it keeps options open” and provided for “flexibility” in the direction that the Board can go. The administration needs approval from the Board of Higher Education, before it can proceed with its plans. If the Board chooses to wait, the projects will be further behind.

Also discussed at the meeting was the awarding of a contract, without public advertising, to the architectural engineering firm of Tighe, Doty and Cariso because the Board said their proposal was the lowest, and the cost of the projects would not exceed $35,000.

The project includes new safety sidewalks along Carlisle Road, new pedestrian crossing, new road signs, and repairs to asphalt roadways.

A Bachelor of Science with a concentration in Analysis and Theory was established in the Computer Science program by the Board. The move was designed because the department is seeking certification from the Accrediting Organization for Computer Science. As a result, there will be changes in the program and more required courses. The Board hopes that students will be better prepared when the graduate.

The Board of Trustees also approved the name changes of two departments. The Economic Department will become the Economics and Finance Department, and the Biology and Biochemistry Department will become the Department of Biology and Biochemistry.

On March 26, the administration informed the faculty of the name change, and the Science program by the Board. The move was designed to better prepare the students for the 13 years of proving themselves. Until this day, there are some police officers who won’t cooperate. The GA put themselves in more danger than policemen because they don’t carry any weapons or wear bullet-proof vests. They use walkie-talkies for communication while on the street.

For more than 60 years, the Spanish Club, a class II organization of the SGA, has been concerned about keeping the Spanish language alive and promoting the Spanish language to all those interested in the Spanish language.

This is because the United States has become the fourth largest Spanish-speaking nation in the world, as a result of the large Latin American immigration which is why the Spanish language has gained popularity in this country.

This increase in Hispanic speakers has been noticed at MSC. In the last several years the college has accepted several hundred Latin-American students. For more than 60 years, the Spanish Club, a class II organization of the SGA, has been interested in keeping the Hispanic language alive and promoting the Spanish language. At club meetings members watch and discuss films concerning pertinent problems of Latin-American countries.

This year, the executive board consists of a group of Latin-American students advised by Dr. Carmen Alverio, a professor of the Spanish/Italian department. President Noé Pérez has done an outstanding job due to his enthusiasm and commitment to his responsibilities. He has many interesting projects in mind for this semester.

The other members of the executive board include Vice-President P. Elizabeth Sclafani, Treasurer Glendy Estrada, and Secretary Damaries Meléndez.

The Spanish Club will take part in the International Week, organized by The International Student Organization (ISO). The club exhibited Latin-American art and literature on April 9, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom B.

The club will also participate in Spring Day, April 27, which is organized by CLUB. Members of the Spanish Club will sell Latin American food in lot 17.

The Spanish Club also played an important part in the thirteenth annual meeting of the Conference on Latin-American Literature, which was held this Friday, April 10, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in Student Center Ballroom A.

Events sponsored by the Spanish Club are the dinner dance, April 24, where outstanding Spanish majors will receive awards. This event was founded by Dr. John Hwang, a professor in the Spanish/Italian department who organizes events such as book sales to raise funds for scholarships.

On May 3, a trip to Manhattan is scheduled to attend the 4th Annual Gala to honor Gabriel García Márquez’s “La Cándida Eréndira,” performed by the Repertorio Español. The event begins at 6:00 p.m. in the Student Center.

Program to improve campus conditions issued

by Pam Colon

A new program for the improvement of campus conditions was issued to the campus community on April 3 in a memo by Thomas Auch, vice president of Administration and Finance.

The plan consists of a complete re-examination of custodial and maintenance services, locating funds to restore the 13 custodial and maintenance positions lost due to the college's hiring freeze and extra crews to perform special jobs such as painting classrooms, washing windows and scrubbing carpets, according to Auch.

Auch will also bring in an outside consulting firm, The Association of Physical Plant Administration (APP), to use their Facilities Management Evaluation Program to improve our housekeeping and maintenance practices, according to Auch.

Joe McGinty, director of Campus Maintenance, initially felt that the memo was "an unfair attack on the maintenance department." The main cause for the bad conditions of the buildings was the lack of custodians on campus due to the 15 frozen job positions, McGinty said.

McGinty addressed his negative feelings toward the memo in a meeting with Auch. The misunderstanding was worked out and it was decided that "working together is the only way to improve the conditions of the campus," Auch said.

The plan will begin this weekend with Partridge Hall. A cleaning crew will clean the building from top to bottom and mechanics are already replacing ceiling tiles and lights, McGinty said.

The plan does not stop at the maintenance department, it is for the whole campus community to get involved in. The SGA has set up a campus clean-up to get students and faculty to participate in renovating the campus. The SGA is setting standards for the people on this campus so they have a better appreciation of MSC, Anthony Susco, president of the SGA, said. Everyone plays a part in the maintaining the campus, not only the maintenance department, Susco said.

SGA, but she wants to serve the students in a greater capacity. She said, "It is better to be a has been than a never was."

George Calle, who also ran for president, received 214 votes, said, "I'd just like to thank all the people who supported me, and to congratulate all the winners. I will still continue to be available to any student who would like to voice an opinion or simply discuss my issue." He added, "I'm glad to see the election was such a great success, also so much for diverting $600,000 for my Ferranti."

Andalo Cruz, who ran for vice president, said, "I got 311 votes, I'm really happy. I got a rush out of someone writing me in," Cruz added that he will continue on the SGA, and he's considering looking into a cabinet position because he feels the SGA has a lot of potential.

'I've been looking into plastic explosives but I decided against it," he added, "Rich is really cool." Andrea Nemeth was a write-in candidate for secretary and received 59 votes. "My disadvantage was that I wasn't on the ballot," she said, "I got a rush out of someone writing me in." Nemeth said her decision to run was "last minute" and added, "I was a little optimistic, but realistic."

Beside Nemeth, several other people received write-in votes. Robert Campos, Montclair news editor, got 39 votes for president, six votes for vice president, six votes for treasurer, four votes for secretary and three votes for Board of Trustees alternate.

The presidential position also received other write-ins, including six for SGA legislator Michael Costa, and five for Paul Prior, Board of Trustees student voting member. Vice-presidential write-ins included, three votes for WMSC disc jockey Derek Pinkham, Delta Chi pledge Karl Lombek received one vote, and Jane Smith received one vote.

Write-ins for treasurer were Seth Leibowitz, Andrea Nemeth, Tonia Tedesco, Chris Marmo and "any one else" with one vote apiece. Mildred Pecklot and Daniel Zavestker received one write-in vote splice for secretary.

Tony Susco, SGA president, said he was pleased with the turnout and "that we had contested positions." He added that he is happy with the results and thanked all the students who participated.

RAT
The SGA's outlined proposal for the alcohol policy in the Rat includes having MSC security official work and oversee the proofing station at the door. Non-MSC students would be required to provide two forms of identification and would not be admitted into the Rat without an MSC host.

The proposed hour of operation for the Rat would be Thursday through Saturday from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. Penalties for fighting or violating any of the policies would include being banned from the Rat for up to one full academic year.

One benefit of implementing the Rat's liquor license is that it would give those students of legal age a place to drink, Susco said.

Craig Alston, manager of Pete's Arena which is adjacent to the Rat, does not have pleasant memories about the time when it served alcohol. "Clean up was a mess," he said and indicated that his crew was responsible for clean-up in the Rat.

Science! E = what?
Science literacy crisis

by Audrey Regan

In Tuesday's Bergen Record, in the Nation/World section there is an article about Chernobyl. The nuclear power plant's 1986 accident is "far worse than reported," said the headline. More people, one million said the article, are believed to be in danger from low-level prolonged exposure to radiation. Tragic, interesting, but what's radiation? Where does it come from? The nucleus of an atom? The collision of two atoms? The splitting of an atom? The splitting of the nucleus of an atom...

Well, just because it's in the paper doesn't mean I understand it! But if Robert M. Hazen has his way, college and university graduates will be able to pick up the paper and read these articles "with the same degree of sophistication as they do politics, economics and sports.

Hazen, who is a research scientist at the Carnegie Institute of Washington's Geophysical Laboratory and Robinson Professor at George Mason University and co-author of a book Science Matters: Achieving Scientific Literacy with Professor James Trefil, spoke to over 35 faculty members Monday afternoon in Richardson Hall about what he calls a "scientific literacy crisis.

Hazen blames the "misdirected priorities of the scientific community itself" for failing to provide college and university graduates with the basics for an all-around scientific foundation and for a failure to enforce students to become scientifically curious.

"Taken together, at every level of science education in the United States, we are somehow failing to portray science as a human process," he said, emphasizing science not as the technological know-how needed to program a VCR or fix a car, but a "core understanding" of how basic laws in physics, chemistry, geology and biology operate and interact in current issues like the disposable nuclear waste debate.

Hazen attributes this failure, which causes students to regard science as "boring, alienating and irrelevant" and which portrays the scientific community as an "elitist priesthood of knothole," to a number of factors. One is that most general introductory science courses are geared for science majors.

"It's like taking one or two semesters of a foreign language," he said. He did say that this was not the case at MSC.

He also said most universities and colleges teach courses which "almost never integrate with sweep and grandeur science as a body of knowledge which complements art, philosophy and religion in the totality."

What would a course like this entail? At George Mason University a vote is being taken to institute a three-hour non-lab course called Development of Scientific Thought, which, loosely based on Hazen's book, would function as a preliminary introduction to science as a human process. "It isn't just about facts. It includes history, philosophy and an understanding of scientific institutions and society and culture."

The course would provide non-science majors with a Renaissance look at what science is, how it interacts with the community and how it functions in major societal issues like nuclear waste, deforestation and ozone depletion. The course would be, he said, "A provide a basis with which to analyze a newspaper story."

Students at GMU would have to take this course as well as their already-instituted requirement of eight hours of lab science to satisfy the general education requirement.

Dr. Vaughn Vandergrift, MSC's dean of the school of mathematical and natural sciences, said that instituting a requirement such as that at GMU would be appealing, but would be "difficult to convince the rest of the campus community."

MSC requires all students take at least three semester hours of a non-laboratory science as well as a four semester laboratory course.

One of the problems which faced Hazen in instituting this course at GMU was finding faculty well versed enough in each of the scientific fields. However, most said they would be eager and willing to broaden their area of expertise and could even focus more attention on their specialty in getting to the core knowledge, which form a stronghold between the fields.

This may be surprising to some who see education going in the other direction. The almost all-faculty audience raised concerns as to whether scientific literacy would be as controversial as cultural literacy. Revising the course canon in the name of multiculturalism has been a hot debate as of late. But Hazen said that the number of terms needed to know for cultural literacy crosses and divides religions and cultures and can give rise to conflicts. Scientific literacy, he said, because of its universality, requires less terminological knowledge, therefore sparking less controversy.

Faculty members also wanted to know where Hazen thinks the blame lies for the lack of scientific literacy. Besides citing the degree of specialization in the sciences, the "it isn't my field" phenomenon, Hazen said, "Much of the problem lies in grades kindergarten through 12, where those who teach the teachers tell them to teach earlier experimentation and heavier math first, instead of providing the interest. I think that is a mistake. Most students know gravity as Michael Jordan making a slam dunk - not as an equation."

Hazen also blamed state testing programs, which call for a certain amount of detailed knowledge. This leads to a mentality of, "To graduate college, I'll need to memorize 10,000 words and if I go on for a PhD, I'll need to know 100,000 words."

Hazen said student response to his course from non-science majors was very favorable. "It is, they said, the first time they have taken a course which showed the relevance of science."

In order to change registration, it would take a huge amount of effort and time on part of the campus community.

As it is now, it will probably stay the same. Maybe they should let classes be larger.

WELCOME TO THE SISTERHOOD!!
Jesus Christ for SGA president

It’s been a fun couple of weeks. Kristaelanoroned across campus, placing her nimble feet one in front of the other in a fratic motion. “Late for dance class. Late for dance class. Late for dance class.” She mumbled in a trance-like state. A journey across campus these days is a拧nerving experience. It blurs broggers, actually. Making a beeline towards Life Hall, “Late for dance class. . . .” Krista encounters a phenom...

Alcohol in the Rat! The students have spoken!
For too long, the needs and concerns of the students have been swept under the figurative rug by the equally figurative broom of an administration we have here at MSC. While the campus crumbling and class-sizes swell, while residents take cold showers and commuters stumble across county lines from distant parking lots, while the administration pursues its goals, oblivious to the plight of MSC’s student body, the collective voice of the students has remained muffled and unheard. No longer!

They may make us breathe asbestos, they may make us eat rubberized food in our pseudo-cafeterias, they may take away our library, our beautiful campus and our dignity, but we, the students, will not be denied the God-given (government-restricted) right to consume pitcher after pitcher of golden brown, bubbly, sudsy-headed, lip-smacking beverages.

For the administration not to approve the recommendation of the students would be a slap in the collective, figurative face of the student body. We at The Montclarion are looking forward to next year, when we should be able to imbibe in the safe, rubble-strewn confines of our construction-scarred campus.

Congratulations yourselves, students. You’ve chosen wisely.

Now the administration should follow suit. If they do so, The Montclarion, cordially and personally in a figuratively personified manner, invites our President, Irvin Reid, for a round of drafts. Hell, bring Dean Martin if he’s free.

Brown: Big on change, small on details

With voter frustration growing from the longest post WWII recession and a growing belief that elected officials are Washington have lost touch with their constituents, one vote is quite vulnerable for anything new. Jerry Brown's "Take Back America" campaign appeals to such Americans, especially young voters.

Brown's style of ignoring details, however, angers this voter. His vague 1960's-like rhetoric and his cries of "empowering the people," whatever that means, are nothing less than pure lip-service.

It's not for President Bush, Brown would win the Hypocrite of the Year award, hands-down. Brown was one of the biggest political fund-raisers while governor of California from 1976 to 1983. When it served his interests, Brown tapped well into the monetary funds of special interests. Now he has the audacity to expect the public to believe that he's some kind of born-again politician, saved from the big money, lobbyists and PAC's that he was once part of.

Trashging and labeling his enemies as the establishment, Brown proclaims himself as the outsider - insisting that he's believe that he's some kind of born-again politician, saved from the big money, lobbyists and PAC's that he was once part of.

Most weekend students avail themselves of coffee and clays, today. Sure, women remain the welcome escape provided by the sleep I would not be getting if Estate Law class deprives me of the available enjoyable escape option. As most weekend students know, Friday nights and Saturday mornings are periods when school support services are generally nonexistent. Friday night students arrive to find the cafeteria, Rat and both the campus convenience and book stores closed. Hence, one must take off from whatever they are doing that precludes taking anything but the sleep I would not be getting if Estate Law class deprives me of.

message. In important primaries like New York, where media attention is most intense, his campaign cannot survive close scrutiny.

Brown fails to give substantial details regarding his proposed 13% flat tax - a measure many have argued would destroy the social security system, while also acting as a more progressive policy towards the lower class.

Richard Cohen, a liberal columnist for the Washington Post, put it eloquently: "Like Ronald Reagan, Brown thinks he's sufficiently to simply identify the problem - poverty, for instance - and then his intertions - eliminate it - and not say how you could call this "Son of Young Executives"...," he said.

Of course, whether one decides to support Brown or not anymore is fruitless. The nomination is practically in the hands of Bill Clinton. A pro-lifed primary battle will only hurt the Democrats' chances of winning the Presidency in November. Like other Democratic drop-outs (Harkin, Kerrey and Tsongas), Brown should end his campaign gracefully so that Clinton can focus on the big picture: capturing the White House.

I'm sure defeating Bush in the general election is one thing that all Democrats can agree upon.

Thanks for the letter - your Garufi t-shirt is in the mail

Steve Garufi's well-written and fact-supported article "Republicans don't give a damn" accurately reflects the public's general perception of George Bush and the Republican party.

In November, let's send a message to President Bush, and more importantly, to the Republican party, that it's time for a change!

A little carcinogen never hurt anyone

Saturday morning's Real Estate Law class was not nearly as eventful as the incident that I witnessed in the lobby of Partridge Hall. It is a sad comment on the state of MSC curriculum offerings when a sleep enthusiast like myself willingly enrolls in a Saturday morning class. I mean, sleep is one of the last truly viable liberating escapes that I will allow myself these days.

Saturday morning Real Estate Law class deprives me of the welcome escape provided by the sleep I would not be getting if Estate Law class deprives me of. The workmen, while assiduously protecting themselves from inhaling the anticipated asbestos-laced fall-down fallout from the aforementioned rotted ceiling panels, continued to remove said panels in apparent disregard to student health concerns. Although the workmen were careful enough to place drop cloths on the floor, they did not afford any protection to, nor did attempt to protect any of, the students present. This is yet further proof of the administration's blatant disregard of student concerns. Night and weekend students, in particular, seem to be the brunt of the administration's callous indifference.

As most weekend students know, Friday nights and Saturday mornings are periods when school support services are generally nonexistent. Friday night students arrive to find the cafeteria, Rat and both the campus convenience and book stores closed. Hence, one must take off from whatever they are doing that precludes taking anything but the sleep I would not be getting if Estate Law class deprives me of.

I am forever obliged to the MSC administration for providing Friday and Saturday classes because I work during the day. However, after a hard day's work, I find out that food is not officially available on the MSC campus.

Most weekend students avail themselves of coffee and donuts offered up by the capitalist-inspired Weekend Student Organization. Said suctenacular offerings are available in the lobby of Partridge Hall. Saturday's protectively-garbed workmen, while moving the weekend student table across the lobby, offered absolutely no protection whatsoever to the students or their wares.

Callousness, carelessness or complacency aside, the aforementioned blatant disregard for student health concerns only adds to Partridge Hall's entirely deserved reputation as being the unhealthiest place on campus.

Incidentally, I have not forgotten the alluded to incident of sentence one of this elucidating essay. As a State-owned campus, MSC must provide a healthy smoke-free environment for its student population. Partridge Hall's lobby serves as both a temporary resting place for the harried student and the secondhand smoke-induced final resting place for eternity.

In factuality, the week before last, five student smoke-eaters were rushed to the hospital after collapsing from smoke inhalation. Two harder subjects froze to death while waiting for an unexplainably late shuttle bus. While one superhuman specimen, who survived the smoke and the cold only to be faced with all three of the shuntles arriving synchronously, had the terrible misfortune to choose the bus with the chain-smoking driver. Upon the student's unimmitly (as it only served to delay the already late shuttle) demise, the driver than had to dispose of the body east of lot 208.

In all seriousness, MSC (Montclair State Campus) is not in compliance with State law regarding non-smokers valid cancer concerns. Rumors of a class-action suit are ripe throughout the pre-law community.

Exactly how much rubbing would be involved?

According to Pati Jordan’s letter, she maintains that the definition of sexual harassment is “when such conduct has the purpose or effect of interfering unreasonably with an individual’s performance or creating an intimidating, hostile or offensive environment” as stated in the MSC Policy Statement. Fine. No argument here. However, her attempt to discredit Phi Alpha Psi Fraternity is completely ludicrous.

I am a female also, and I have signed one of the centerfolds which so offends Ms. Jordan. I performed the rest of my daily functions just fine, and afterwards did not perceive the centerfold as being a “hostile, intimidating or offensive environment.” Perhaps the next time you refer to a definition to support a cause, Ms. Jordan, you should make sure it is relevant. As any minimally intelligent individual, male or female, can see, the above definition does not apply to Senate pledges requesting female signatures.

In reading her letter, I got the distinct impression that I pity her tremendously if all she can do is quote Gloria Steinem and Andre Lourde.

Pati Jordan is probably one of those people who protests the Miss America pageant and rants and raves if a guy accidentally brushes up against her in a crowded area. Get a life, please! There is some very real sexual harassment taking place in our society today, but asking a woman to sign a centerfold does not constitute as such. I’m sure Ms. Jordan could find something more worthwhile to concentrate her energies on if she tried. I pity her tremendously if all she can do is quote Gloria Steinem and Andre Lourde.

I do not consider myself to be compliant, nor do I condone sexual harassment. I simply disagree with people who make a big deal out of something so negligible. I know a few of the members of Phi Alpha Psi and do not feel that they intend to degrade women by asking for their signatures on a centerfold. If Ms. Jordan doesn’t like it, she doesn’t have to sign it. Where’s the trauma?

I noticed that in your letter, Ms. Jordan, you felt that Stephen Kazzellan’s comments and writing style were indicative of his equating “pornography and the degradation of women with baseball and grandma’s apple pie.” Well, I’m a female English major with a minor in journalism and a creative writing concentration, so I doubt you can criticize me. Your opinions are not representative of anything even close to the majority of the females on campus, I can assure you. My advice to you would be to grow up and develop security in yourself so that trivial incidents will not drive you into future frenzies.

Make us proud Jeffrey!

Two weeks ago, Jeffrey Ceterko, in his letter, protested the idea of attendance policies at MSC in general and the attendance policies of certain instructors here in particular. Apparently the letter was the more immediate issue, since Jeffrey was a student in one of my classes, yet my attendance policy was not included among those to which he objected.

Jeff’s letter troubled me and many of my colleagues for several reasons, but two were particularly disturbing. First, I noticed that in your letter, Ms. Jordan, you felt that the origins and the history of higher education in the Western world suggest that, traditionally, the faculty set the rules under which students were admitted to study. Indeed, in some European languages, such as Romanian, the word “facultas” (factly) means university. A requirement that students show up for class (even Woody Allen has said that showing up is 80% of life!) does not seem unreasonable on the face of it.

Second, and more serious in its implications, Jeffrey asserts that individual students ought to be required only to fulfill the “academic requirements” of a course, presumably including such matters as exams, papers and the like. He apparently believes that attendance would be left to the discretion of the individual student, who is, after all, an “adult.” In this, I believe that Jeffrey is mistaken and on a dangerously wrong track.

If education, however defined, were merely a matter of reading assigned texts or printed lectures, passing exams based on these and submitting the written reports of individual research for a grade, then attending MSC, or indeed any college, would be a monumental waste of time and money. The same results—grades, job preparation and a degree—could be obtained more cheaply and efficiently by enrolling in correspondence courses. Yet Jeffrey and hundreds of thousands like him have chosen to enroll in the 3,500 or so 2- and 4-year colleges operating in North America alone.

The conclusions seem inescapable: either these people are utter fools, or they know that “education” is more than simply reading books, writing papers and passing exams (the system, by the way, in many French universities, at least until recently).

It also entails being exposed to a variety of educated, cultivated minds and personalities; engaging in the give-and-take of argumentation and debate with like protagonists; and being challenged to shape, defend, and debate with live protagonists, and being challenged to shape, defend, and refine a world view or stance toward life. This kind of education can take place only if individual students “show up,” and attendance policies are one way to insure that they do so with reasonable regularity.

As any of you who have attended them can tell you, a major problem with so-called “adult education” courses is that people pay their money and then show up or not, as their work or social schedules allow. The experience, to any nothing of the results, is disappointing and generally unsatisfying. To suggest, as Jeffrey in effect does, that the “adult school” is the appropriate model for the bona fide college or university is to have more confidence in the self-educational skills of most ordinary people than I have. Or else, since he is in fact paying close to $9,000 for a degree from MSC, it shows a tolerance for being outrageously overcharged (since “adult school” rarely charge more than $30 or $40 for a 10-week course) that few of us would put up with in any other area of life.

Come on, Jeffrey, give an education!

Sort of like Dick Clark goes Caribbean

Hats off to the International Student Organization and especially the Haitian Student Organization for the wonderful cultural show on Haiti that they had put up for Internation Week at the Student Center Ballroom. I felt homesick downhill during that time. With the large crowd of Haitian students present, along with the invitees from different campuses, I feel that if they were to become involved with politics in this country, the present situation in Haiti would be a lot better.

What do I mean? I am only asking those who are eligible to vote to exercise their civic duties. That is by registering and electing officials who would represent their best interests. Therefore, our status as voters will give us a strong voice when we ask the administration and local corporations for contributions. Although life is based on trials and tribulations, we are still going to work together and present ourselves as a positive image to the world community just like 1804 (Independence Day).

We have to develop our mentality. We don’t want to get bogged down with the same meaningless things. We are not poor. We have the greatest resource and that is ourselves.

Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Incorporated, would like to thank the women of Webster Hall, the men of Stone Hall and the residents, for their participation in the Clothing Drive so far. Over 758 articles of clothing, six toys, nine pairs of shoes and other accessories, were collected from March 23 - April 10. The donations will be taken to the Lighthouse in Newark, The Christian Fellowship in Bloomfield and the YMCA in Newark.

Again, we thank the campus community for dedicating their time and donations to the needy.

Should drugs be legalized?

From the left is Kevin S. Colligan. He is a junior majoring in English. He is the Editorial Page Editor of The Montclarion. He is a strict independent, preferring a common sense approach to each situation in favor of the ideological knee-jerk reactions so common in today's political spectrum. The following is his personal opinion and not necessarily that of The Montclarion.

Wasting dollars and lives on the unwinnable war on drugs is irresponsible

Drugs should be legalized. Before you shake your head and turn the page, please hear me out. All will agree that drug addiction is a disease, not a crime. Many proponents feel that drug use should be regulated like alcohol consumption. It is not a wise nor a healthy choice. I do not dispute that. Nor do I condone drug use. But the reality of the situation is this: it doesn’t matter whether I, or anybody else, condone drug use. A certain amount of people have, for all of recorded history, and will, for the foreseeable future, consume drugs. All of the dogmarching in the world will not change this simple fact of life.

Another indisputable fact is this: the current illicit drug problem is unacceptable. Roving gangs of U.S.-raising teenage drug dealers terrorize the citizens of our crumbling cities. Children are exposed to the horrors of drugs at frighteningly young ages. Funding for social problems has been cut back as more and more dollars are sunk into an unwinnable “war on drugs.” Prison populations have swelled to incredible numbers, resulting in a revolving door system of justice. All the while, civil liberties, yours and mine, are chipped away in America’s floundering “war on drugs.”

What can be done? It is time to realize that the illegal drug trade is more deadly than the drugs themselves. This is the lesson that America should have learned from Prohibition. The illegal alcohol trade gave rise to modern day organized crime much as the illegal drug trade today fuels the growth of trigger-happy drug cartels. Take away the market and you will take away the violent criminal element that is spreading across this nation.

An independent corporation of the federal government (much like the postal service) should be established which would sell narcotics to legal adults who so choose to consume them. This agency would sell all drugs. To not sell heroin or cocaine because of their danger would undermine the concept. The illegal drug trade would continue. There would be very strict controls over the dispensation of narcotics.

Firstly, no person under the age of 21 would be allowed to obtain drugs. Secondly, persons would only obtain a sufficient amount of drugs for their personal use. These drugs would be dispensed under the supervision of a physician who would administer periodic blood and urine tests to assure that those purchasing drugs were doing so for their own use. It would be a felony to re-sell narcotics. To sell to minors would carry a substantial prison term - 20 years minimum. (Since prisons would have much more vacancies due to the elimination of the criminality directly linked to the widespread illicit drug trade, 20 years would mean 20 years.) This would effectively keep drugs out of the hands of naive youngsters; youngsters who have an incredibly easy access to drugs today.

Thirdly, by participating in the federal drug dispersion system, persons would give up their right to hold certain jobs - bus drivers, airline pilots, daycare workers, etc. This would quell the fear of those who would have us believe that the legalization of drugs would result in the entire adult population of North America walking around with straws up their noses.

Too costly? Hardly, thin system would be self-sufficient via profits from sales. Wouldn’t addicts be driven to commit more crime to support their newly acquired habits? I think not. The price of drugs would plummet, lessening the expense of drug users. Wouldn’t children think it’s “okay” to take drugs if the government told them? Most children are tured into using drugs because of the glamour involved in their usage. It’s “cool” to take drugs: it’s taking a risk, being exciting. Narcotics sold through this system would lose that aura. There would be no marketing or advertising involved.

In addition, children would be presented with honest, factual information about drug use. There would be no expensive, ridiculous public service commercials featuring cobra/monsters/drug dealers airing at 4:00 a.m. Instead children would learn that cocaine can eat away at the flesh inside of your nose that separates your nostrils. Kids would learn that heroin can turn your hands swell up like balloons.

Finally, the money saved combating the illicit drug trade could be funneled into rehabilitation and social programs that have long been neglected. Police could catch rapists and murderers rather than concentrate on crack dens or pot smokers.

This is not a perfect world, therefore there is no perfect solution, but a commonsense approach could minimize the suffering involved with drug use, in effect, making all of our lives a little beater.

Legalizing drugs is a dangerous abandonment of responsibility

Nowadays, it seems to be popular to surrender. I am referring to the controversy over the legalization of drugs. Whether we are winning the war, losing the war in a standstill, legalizing drugs is not a viable solution. It is throwing in the towel.

Legalizing drugs would undermine the concept. The illegal drug trade, which is more costly? Hardly, this system would be self-sufficient via profits from sales. Wouldn’t addicts be driven to commit more crime to support their newly acquired habits? I think not. The price of drugs would plummet, lessening the expense of drug users.

Proponents claim that by legalizing drugs, profits from drug sales will disappear. Drugs will supposedly be sold at in “legal market,” and create substantial proceeds. These proceeds, part of which would come from taxes, will be used to fund anti-drug campaigns. Get people addicted and use the profits to try to get them off drugs. Isn’t that backwards?

Proponents also claim that the black market will be eliminated. Because some drugs, such as crack, are too harmful to be legal, what is not legalized will be provided by the black market. Criminals will make even more profit. Who will decide which drugs to or not to legalize? The Food and Drug Administration? The FDA has a long and tedious process by which it decides which substances are safe to sell for public consumption. If all substances were legalized, the FDA would become obsolete. As with alcohol and tobacco products, legalized drugs will be prohibited for use by minors. This will be a lucrative spot for the black market.

Type of message will be sent to minors when the entire family is gathered around the dining room table after dinner, smoking pot, and they cannot participate? How will anti-drug education help?

There are those who claim that the only victim of drug use is the user. This is not true. Go to any hospital and check out the neo-natal unit. Look closely at the crack babies; the tubes, the machines. The use of drugs alters our state of mind. We no longer perceive the world in a rational manner. Do you want someone like this driving a school bus, performing heart surgery or working on an assembly line at General Motors. You think we have problems with quality workmanship in this country now; it will decline even further if drugs are legalized. We are the victims of drug use.

Robert W. Sater, a federal judge from New York believes that we should legalize drugs and spend more money on “the source of this problem, which is poverty.”

Poverty is definitely a problem, and yes, drugs are part of it. But how will legalizing drugs solve that problem? More people will become addicted because of the relaxed regulation and crime and poverty will skyrocket.

Drug use is not a right, a “personal freedom” nor a “pursuit of happiness.” It is a burden to the American people. Our country cannot function with a large part of the population stoned. Get people addicted and use the proceeds, part of which would come from a tax on the drugs, will be used to fund anti-dmg campaigns. Get people addicted and use the profits to try to get them off drugs. Isn’t that backwards?

Proponents also claim that the black market will be eliminated. Because some drugs, such as crack, are too harmful to be legal, what is not legalized will be provided by the black market. Drug use is not a right, a “personal freedom” nor a “pursuit of happiness.” It is a burden to the American people. Our country cannot function with a large part of the population stoned. If you are under the influence, you will act irrationally whether or not the drugs are

More proponents feel that drug use should be regulated like alcohol consumption. Since there are alcohol-related crimes, like drunk driving, it is extremely likely that there will be drug-related crimes. We courts will fill up with cases of people driving while using drugs, drug related murders and under-age drug use. The effects of drug use are not the price of drugs cause crime. People do not act rationally when they are under the influence of drugs. They will, therefore, commit irrational acts. Is there a safe level? Who is to determine what is safe?

There is no simple, easy solution to the problem. Legalization seems like the best, but it isn’t. We need to stop young Americans from taking drugs in the first place, not making it easier to obtain them. Our government has the responsibility to protect us. By allowing the legalization of drugs it is acting in an irresponsible manner.
KRS-1 Interviewed

by Lucky

KRS-1 of BDP (Boogie Down Productions), came live and direct to make the sold out show at MSC. The teacher went back to the ruff old school jams that put the pupils in his lyrics. You could say this type of performance is what put him at the pinnacle of the Hip Hop scene for six years. He is a self proclaimed metaphysicist, this becomes obvious when you take his ideals and apply them to reality. His lyrics will stimulate your mind, as your wheels turn from contemplation. As you think about yourself, or the injustices in America. Sometimes he puts forth a bugged out beat just to let us know of our existence as human beings. We got together for a brief moment before the show. Although we had little time to converse, I gained a lot of insight on a unique brother. When he first appeared back stage, he drew everybody’s attention. The funny thing is, half of the time, people do not know what he looks like. They were just caught up by his presence. He is a man of great size who seemed to be intimidating at first until he was introduced. Maybe it was because of his subtitle voice, or coolheaded demeanor.

The conversation opened up with the 1992 presidential elections. I asked how his candidate would be. He said “I will not vote in this election because there is nobody to vote for in favor for us.” Then he gave me a strong reason why he felt the way he does. “If there are four people to vote for, and the first one killed your father, then the next one raped your mother, followed by one of them who beat your grandfather to death, and finally one who hanged your grandmother, who would you vote for?” This is not to say he doesn’t vote, he just doesn’t have anybody to vote for. He did leave this topic with a positive point, “If someone votes with no education, it is only a slain vote.”

Next, we began to speak about the unity of races. His view was blunt, and a powerful one. As a unified world, we, from all walks of life, can go snide for stride in an impossible situation. The reason is the lack of education, but he did say we can be a nation of four hundred million strong (united we stand). Thunderheart Thunderheart tells the story of FBI special agent Val Kilmer who is sent to a run down Indian reservation to investigate the murder of an Oglala named Leo, who was deepitely involved in Indian politics. Along with him is Sam Shepard, who is a veteran with the FBI and Indian relations. Their investigation eventually teams them up with Graham Greene (the actor, not the writer), who steals many scenes as an officer with the tribal police. Since Kilmer's character is one quarter Indian, it makes him ideal to infiltrate the reservation, or "Re's" as it's referred to.

A local resistance known as ARM, the Aboriginal Resistance Movement has prompted local vigilantes to take matters into their own hands led by Fred Ward. Now, everyone is after a suspect known as Jimmy, who is said to be a "shape shifter" or someone who can change into animals. Of course, this makes him a little hard to get a hold of.

Thunderheart is the flipside of Dances with Wolves, showing the modern day horrible conditions that these people must deal with. The reservations look more like the world's largest junkyard than a "reservation." It is appropriate that Greene is there to be the anchor between the white men and the Indians. It's a winning performance, proving that his Supporting Actor nomination was no fluke. There is some action to keep things going along smoothly, but this is more of a mystical journey, one that our hero makes within himself. You see, after a couple of visions, Kilmer found out that he was reincarnated from someone who was killed at Wounded Knee.

There are many memorable moments in Thunderheart, one of the issues it addresses re important ones. We are given a realistic, no nonsense view of a modern day Indian reservation, and it is quite jarring. All of the performances are fine, especially Greene's, and James Horner's music is spooky and modern. Michael Apted, the director of such films as Coal Miner's Daughter and 35 Up, makes the film visually interesting, which helps to produce an enchanted, Indian atmosphere.

I doubt that this film is going to be very popular, which is unfortunate. If you're at your wits end and experience some intelligent entertainment...

The second area that has been plagued by glut is the "reality show." You know the ones... Cops, Rescue 911, that sort of thing. These two are the pioneers, the leaders whom everyone else follows- Emergency Call, Missing- Reward, Witness Video. When will it stop?! Next on line we might just see Roaming Voyers, and the Clue Road peeper might just end up being the host. Can you imagine the topics? Parties On Campus- An Inside Look. Maybe a list of movies related to the subject- I Like To Watch would likely be a featured topic. I wonder what the title track would be- "Somebody's Watching Me?"

Could be next. Fantasia live. Maybe some butthead with a camcorder will record car accidents, executions, and other really appetizing stuff. Maybe we could call it Faces Of Death- The Series. Hosted by Jeffrey Dahmer? Anthony Hopkins as Hannibal? "The Cannibal?" Lester? Famously gurnoHouston could come up as a topic. They could run the Zapruder film of Kennedy's assassination or run speculations of Lincoln's. Of course it's gross and stupid. But just remember-they'll put it on the air, and somewhere out there, some sick person is going to watch it, and that's why it's still on the air.

That's the problem right there. People watch it, and the producers say, "Hey, some people's watching it. Let's make a few more." Who can say what'll happen? Maybe these two kinds of shows will start pre-empting the daytime soaps, and then we'll see havoc wrought on television.

Hmmm... pre-empting the soaps? Maybe they're not so bad after all.

The American Heritage Second College Edition Dictionary defines 'glut,' v., as 1. to fill beyond capacity, or 2. to flood a market with an excess of goods so that supply exceeds demand. Television has seen glut in two different areas, and I, personally, am becoming sick of them.

The first area I will address is the "Talk Show Glut." It seems that just about any schmecklehead with a face and a microphone can get his or her own talk show. Dennis Miller, that Jane-whateverface, Jenny Jones, Jesse Jackson, Barney Rubble, and Huey, Dukey, and Louie, need I go on? Dennis Miller at last is trying to get a hold in the Johnny Carson/Arsenio show realm, and that's not too bad. I think that Johnny and Arsenio, with a smattering of Jay Leno here and there, will bump off Mr. Miller by the fall. He was good on Saturday Night Live, but as a talk show host, uh uh. No way. What really annoys the heck out of me is all the social topic shows. I'm sorry, but Donahue, Oprah, Sally, and Joan are enough. Geraldo is nice for a change. Any more is overkill, and I am being killed over and over again every two months or so when a new show pops up. How many times can you watch nudist midget psychics on the next Geraldo or women who slept with women who love men who hate their dog on the next Oprah Winfrey?

I've said it before, and I'll say it again, the ultimate talk show host is, was, and always will be, Morton Downey, Jr. So what if he's loud? So what if he was obnoxious? That was the fun part about it. He brought up some good points, had the most colorful debates out of all the talk show hosts, and you had fun watching it. Put up against Oprah, it would be an interesting fight. Against Phil Donahue, the Phantom of the Oprah, hell no. He'd lose that white hair before you could say, "And we'll be back right after this." Sally and Joan would crumble against Mort. Geraldo? Give me a break. Hey, WWOR, I want my Morton back!

The second area of which has been plagued by glut is the "reality show." You know the ones-Cops, Rescue 911, that sort of thing. Gore could be next. Fantasia live. Maybe some butthead with a camcorder will record car accidents, executions, and other really appetizing stuff. Maybe we could call it Faces Of Death- The Series. Hosted by Jeffrey Dahmer? Anthony Hopkins as Hannibal? "The Cannibal?" Lester? Famously gurnoHouston could come up as a topic. They could run the Zapruder film of Kennedy's assassination or run speculations of Lincoln's. Of course it's gross and stupid. But just remember-they'll put it on the air, and somewhere out there, some sick person is going to watch it, and that's why it's still on the air.

That's the problem right there. People watch it, and the producers say, "Hey, some people's watching it. Let's make a few more." Who can say what'll happen? Maybe these two kinds of shows will start pre-empting the daytime soaps, and then we'll see havoc wrought on television.

Hmmm... pre-empting the soaps? Maybe they're not so bad after all.

I've pleased a billion, um... in the thousands.

You bet; it makes sense that every fact of our lives depends upon the position of the sun, and that billions, or billions of millions, of people...

Look here, then... well, many key policies will be implemented.

I thought I told you to take your book home, son.

Sorry, mom; you can see in this...

In fact, all human affairs are determined by stars and planets. And when they say my key policies will be implemented, no bath and no bedtime...

I don't understand this. What a single point in you horoscope could be made.

My policies weren't implemented, and circumstances didn't turn in my favor; just the opposite, in fact.

My horoscope says: "Bath, stand up late, don't go to school..." These are the ones that will be implemented."

Well, my horoscope said: "Many key policies will be implemented," not all of them.

No kidding, then. My horoscope says, "Bill, stand up late, don't go to school." There was the one that will be implemented.

Red Hawks outscore South Hampton and Drew University by a 42-11 margin

by Jim Kloszek

Having played only two of its first six games at home this season, MSC started its longest home stretch of the campaign last Monday night by destroying South Hampton University 29-4 behind freshman midfielder Frank MacIsaac's five goals and three assists off the sticks of Butch Meyers, Mike Bruton, Keith Van Ness and John Belotta.

As the score indicates, this one was over almost before the final minutes of play. The Red Hawks (6-1) jumped out to an early advantage and took a commanding 16-2 lead by half-time. Since the game was well in hand at this point, Head Coach Doug Alsofrom took the opportunity to give his reserves some playing time and they came through with a 13-goal second half and helped MSC to accumulate an astounding 42-shot margin for the game.

This was one of the games Alsofrom had been calling "one of the toughest on the schedule," and he had to be impressed with the effort his team put forth.

Following a close first half in which the Red Hawks leading 5-4, MSC was able to pull away with eight second-half goals on just 17 shots. Leading the way for the Red Hawks were Van Ness, Meyers and Bruton who all scored a hat trick in the second half, with 24 and Van Ness with 21, respectively.

Alsofrom's coaching record after five seasons is 56-26, which leads the team. Junior goalie Ken Kane had one of his best games of the year by turning away 37 of the 44 shots he faced on the night. Rounding out the scoring for MSC were Van Ness, Meyers and Bruton who all scored a hat trick, and Neil Blaney who netted two goals to increase his season total to 17 shots. Leading the way for the Red Hawks were Van Ness, Meyers and Bruton who all scored a hat trick in the second half, with 24 and Van Ness with 21, respectively.

REDHAWK NOTES... Chasing Blaney for the team's goal scoring lead are Meyers with 24 and Van Ness with 21. Alsofrom's coaching record after five seasons is 56-13. MSC's win over Drew avenged a 12-11 loss to them last season...The drubbing of South Hampton was the biggest margin of victory for the season for the Red Hawks, as they previously defeated Stockton State 26-7 back on March 21...Rounding out the current home stand are games with Scranton (April 15) and Fairfield on Saturday (April 18).

It's tee time for Red Hawk golfers

by Gary Pych

Back in full swing, the MSC golf team is optimistic about the 1992 season. The mood is upbeat after returning from a 1991 campaign which saw MSC finish second in conference play. Returning players include Brian Gaffney, Chris Hellow, Gary Horner and John "Bear" Moroese.

Brian Gaffney is MSC's top returning player. Gaffney, from Westfield, also plays at the Plainfield Country Club when not competing. According to Assistant Coach Bob Downey, the 5' 8" 150-pounder "gives 100 percent." Gaffney is known for his distance and accuracy with long irons. He shot a 71 at the MSC Classic on Monday to help secure a third place finish among the eight participating teams. Over the weekend, however, the team was at Dickinson Invitational Tournament in Carlisle, Pa., Chris Hellow rounds of 79 and 80 to help place the team among the top 10 teams invited. Horner is another key player who shot an 83 at the MSC Classic. John Moroese is a high 80's player who shot an 86 and an 89 at Dickinson.

The team's home course and practice facility is the Crestmont Country Club in West Orange where players practice individually and qualify to play for each tournament based on one round of golf.

MSC has only played one tournament at home and will go as far as Pennsylvania to compete against conference teams in East Stroudsburg. The team is currently second in the New Jersey Athletic Conference which includes Ramapo College, Trenton State and Rutgers Camden. Players to look for in future tournaments include Mike Hayes, a freshman with great athletic talent, and John Krick, who shoots in the mid-80's and keeps the team loose with his sense of humor.

Peter Fiamiano is the head coach and is also a club pro at Crestmont. Downey calls him a "great player, teacher and motivator." Fiamiano also participates in many state tournaments and has been coach at MSC for nearly 12 years.

RED HAWK NOTES... Assistant Coach Bob Downey encourages those who have interest in golf to contact him at Crestmont or through Assistant Coach Bob Downey. The Nets will be making their first playoff appearance since 1986.

Several Hall is not New Jersey’s basketball team. Neither is St. Anthony’s. The team that belongs to the fans of the Garden State is a professional team that plays in the National Basketball Association: the New Jersey Nets. How soon we forget.

The Nets have won only 151 games since 1987, will be doing something they haven’t done since ’86 — playing in the playoffs. And I have news for all Knicks fans: Winch out for the Nets if they play the Knicks in the first round. They have a good chance of pulling off the upset.

The last time the Nets won a playoff series, an NBA playoff game for that matter, was 1984. They had the unenviable task of facing the defending champion Philadelphia 76ers in the opening round. The Nets backed everyone by beating the Sixers three games to two. Even more impressive was an all-three wins came at the Philadelphia Spectrum. The Nets, however, lost in the Eastern Conference Semi-finals to the Milwaukee Bucks, 3-2.

In the early ’80s, the Nets were one of the two consistent teams in the league. They raced in 1982-83 when they won 49 games, and lost to the Knicks in the opening round of the playoffs. Do you remember the Nets of the era? I thought the Nets were a dangerous team then. They had Sugar Ray Richardson and Otis Birdsong in the backcourt, “Choochi” Washington and Nowitzki. They had Fred Carter and Dave Bing. They had Norm Van Lier and Joe Barry. They had Hubie Brown and Doc Rivers. They had Doc Rivers and Rick Barry. The Nets made it to the ABA Championship. They lost to the Indiana Pacers, 4-2, in the ABA Championship.

The team that era? The Nets sold Erving to the Philadelphia 76ers and finished their first NBA season 22-60. The next year they became the New Jersey Nets and their home court was in Piscataway, at the Rutgers Athletic Center.

The Nets played at the RAC for four years and made their first NBA playoff appearance in 1979, but were swept by Erving and Philadelphia. Earlier in the season, when I watched the Nets on Sportscar, I noticed that the first five or six rows had fans in them. That was it! But now, the Nets are 39-41 and playing very smart and entertaining basketball. Consequently, the Nets are getting more fan support.

Why are the Nets winning when they average 20 points and 10 rebounds a game?

Bowie, Blaylock and Morris are all responding as the team’s elder statesmen.

The number one reason the Nets are a playoff team this year is the play of George, Mills and backup center Chris Dudley. I think Dudley is one of the most productive big men in the league. The Yale graduate

The Nets are a team on the rise. With the Celtics aging and the Knicks playing as erratic as ever, New Jersey is a team that could contend for the Atlantic Division title in the next couple of years. Especially when Anderson starts getting some playing time.

No matter what the Nets do in the playoffs, this season will be successful. I know two weeks ago I said, “Winning is everything,” but for the Nets just making the playoffs is a start. You can’t become champions overnight. You must work on it, build on it and get unity. It takes some time. Rookie wasn’t built in a day, you know.

Fritz Massman to be honored by the Nets

It’s only fitting that the Nets make the playoff this year: Fritz Massman’s last year as the NBA’s Senior V.P in charge of Basketball Operations, and Head Coach Bill Fitch will also be on hand for the presentation. ‘Willis Reed, the Nets Senior V.P in charge of Basketball Operations, and Head Coach Bill Fitch will also be on hand.

The Nets played at the RAC for four years and made their first NBA playoff appearance in 1979, but were swept by Erving and Philadelphia. Earlier in the season, when I watched the Nets on Sportscar, I noticed that the first five or six rows had fans in them. That was it! But now, the Nets are 39-41 and playing very smart and entertaining basketball. Consequently, the Nets are getting more fan support.

The number one reason the Nets are a playoff team this year is the play of George, Mills and backup center Chris Dudley. I think Dudley is one of the most productive big men in the league. The Yale graduate

Baseball bounces back by bagging seven straight

Yocum sets record; Pallino and Micucci star

After losing three straight games last week, the MSC baseball team responded by winning seven games in a row this past week. The Red Hawks lifted their overall record to 16-5 and won three conference games to up their NJAC mark to a respectable 4-3.

Throughout the week, MSC received quality innings from its starting pitchers, something it had not been getting earlier in the season. We were fortunate enough not to have to go to our bullpen too early, enabling us to play eight games in seven days," said Head Coach Norm Schoenig. "Throughout the season, you're going to win some games with your bullpen, but if you use them too much early in the season, they'll tire out," he added.

Towards the end of the week, fatigue began to set in with the Red Hawks. "Some of these kids right out of high school aren't used to playing this much baseball," we came out of this stretch really exhausted," said MSC Skipper. "The Red Hawks were given a day off on Monday, giving players time to rest and to concentrate on academics.

The week was full of highlights for MSC. Left-handed reliever Drew Yocum continued his brilliance on the mound. The sophomore from Fort Lee, N.J., has won four straight games as he has pitched 22 scoreless innings during that span. He is 4-0 for the season, with a 2.08 ERA. Yocum has allowed just 12 hits and 11 walks in 23.2 innings pitched.

The Red Hawks also had a few offensive stars this week. First baseman John Pallino rapped out four hits and pitched two scoreless innings in each game. The sophomore from Caldwell, N.J., is hitting .350 and leads the team in hitting (.420), and leads the team in RBIs with 16. Pallino is tied for the team lead in batting average (.420), and is second in OBP (.420).

Head Coach Anita Kubicka of her team's pitching staff, "I feel helpless.

Freshman catcher Mike Micucci also excelled at the plate, hitting .333, while knocking in nine runs for the week. For the second week in a row, Micucci was named NJAC Rookie of the Week.

The following is a recap of the past week for MSC baseball:

Drew Yocum pitched seven innings of shutout baseball, allowing only three hits. He also struck out seven and walked two. Pallino again collected four RBI and two singles for the Red Hawks. This game was called after seven innings due to the 10-run rule that applies to doubleheaders.

MSC 8 Kean College 2 (2nd game)
Yocum started the second game of the doubleheader and pitched two scoreless innings before giving up his first earned run of the season in the third inning. Pallino blasted a two-run home run in the first and Ralph Yezza added a solo shot in the fourth for the Red Hawks.

MSC is in Stockton for a doubleheader on April 7. The 18th, the Red Hawks are home for another twinbill, against conference rival Kean University.

The Red Hawks bats were stilled Tuesday at William Paterson as WPC swept a double-header from MSC, 1-0 and 12-1. The losses dropped the Red Hawks to 13-9, and 1-4 in the NJAC.

"I don't think 10 hits are that bad," said Head Coach Anita Kubicka of her team's total output in the twinbill. "It's just we're not producing at the right time. We scattered those hits throughout the game."

In the DH, MSC had one multiple hit inning against the Pioneers, the third ranked team in Division III, and it led to the only run the Red Hawks scored on the day.

The first game was a pitching duel as MSC's Lois Pyfe squared off against Andrea Tuttle. The only run came in the bottom of the third. Pyfe allowed a lead-off double to Diana Desimini, the ninth-place hitter. Desimini came around to score when Sue Tiedemann, who made a fine running catch of a foul ball off her head, reached third on a sacrifice bunt.

The game ended with MSC's Krisi Kostler drilling a line drive that nearly ripped Tuttle's head off, but she came up with a great play and the final out. Pyfe, the hard luck loser, allowed six hits and the one unearned run as her record fell to 0-7. Fyfe has yet to earn an earned run in her last 20 2/3 innings. It also marked the sixth straight game that the Red Hawks haven't allowed an earned run. However, MSC's record is 3-3 during that span.

The Red Hawks earned run streak was broken as WPC erupted for 11 runs in the third inning against Michele Serio. Everything went wrong in the inning, leading Kubicka to say, "I felt helpless."

WPC sent 15 batters to the plate and ripped 10 hits. Desimini and Emily Kopecky each had two hits in the disastrous inning which combined for five RBI.

MSC committed three errors in the third, two by third baseman Sue Stoft. One of her errors was on a play that seemed to turn the inning around. With the Red Hawk batters trailing 4-0 and runners at first and second, Stoft bobbled a ground ball, recovered and tossed it to Kim Drager who was covering third. The Pioneer runner ran into Stoft and the umpire called her safe due to interference. Kubicka was livid. She argued with the umpire, but to no avail.

The play stood and the flood gates opened up for WPC.

"That was the most horrendous call," Kubicka said after the game. "I've never seen anything like it."

The inning was also prolonged when Stoft collided with catcher Kristi Kutchinski on a foul pop-up. Stoft appeared to be hurt, but MSC's trainers, Denise Lunnia and Stacy McWilliams, tended to her quickly.

Serio allowed five earned runs in 2 2/3 innings and her record fell to 5-2. Fyfe pitched the last 2 1/3 and did not allow an earned run, extending her streak to 32 consecutive innings.

MSC's only run came in the fourth when Fyfe doubled and scored on a single by Kelly Hanaway.

The Red Hawks bats are struggling, especially for Drager, a Junior College AllAmerica transfer from Mercer County Community. After starting the season red hot, Drager is now mired in a tremendous slump. MSC is in Stockton for a doubleheader on April 7.
