Five white legislators quit South Africa’s Liberal Party to join the African National Congress. They said the second liberation struggle will begin to rid South Africa of the legacies of Apartheid.

Afghanistan leaders from the now deposed government agreed Tuesday to turn over the government to a council of guerillas. Kabul is still in the hands of communist forces but Ahmed Shah Masood’s rebel group runs the city. More than two million people have been killed and five million driven from their homes in the 14 year civil war which may turn into battles with several guerilla factions.

Sarajevo, Bosnia Herzegovina, and part of former Yugoslavia Republic has been the scene of a massive Serbian offensive in an aging civil war. As bodies litter the city streets, the Serbs continue with a campaign of guns, mortar fire, and arson. Only 28% of Bosnia’s 404 million residents are Serbian, the rest are Croats and Muslims.

A 56-year-old Russian man who confessed to the murders of at least 53 people blamed his spree on his miserable life under Communism. He killed 21 boys, 14 girls and 18 women since 1978. He said he was “a freak of nature, a mad beast.”

NATIONAL

A recent Texas poll found H. Ross Perot the still unannounced presidential candidate leading the race for the November vote. Bush placed five percent behind Perot, with 30% saying they would vote for him. Clinton received support from 20% of the people surveyed.

Robert Alton Harris was executed by gas in California’s San Quentin prison on Tuesday. Harris, 39, was the first person executed in California in 25 years. He was found guilty of murder for killing two 16-year-olds in 1978. Harris, in a final statement, said, “You can be a king or a street sweeper, but everybody dances with the Grim Reaper.”

A clergyman in Buffalo was arrested for sticking a fetus in the faces of pro-abortion activists. He was arrested for “creating a physically offensive condition” when several people got sick. The police gave the fetus to a medical examiner to see if it needed to be disposed of as hazardous material or if it warranted a proper burial. Pro-abortion groups said they would use force if necessary to keep abortion clinics in Buffalo open.

A surprise late winter storm brought dangerous wind chills and about 11 inches of snow as far south as Missouri. Record colds followed in the wake of the storm dropping temperatures below freezing throughout the central plains.

A blind beggar in New York City was mangled by a runaway taxi. Bystanders lifted the taxi off the man and his Labrador Retriever. The man received cards, gifts and several thousands of dollars from concerned citizens.

A New Jersey man confined to his house under a home jail program escaped and shot a 19-year-old man. The prisoner was to be kept within 150 feet of his home by an electronic ankle that was supposed to alert the Trenton Corrections Department control room. Approximately 700 prisoners are currently held at home in the 3.7 million electronic monitoring programs.

The Food and Drug Administration recommended approval of an anti-viral drug, DDC, to be used with AZT to treat AIDS symptoms. The drug was manufactured by Hoffman-LaRoche Inc. of New Jersey. The FDA panel voted 8-3 to allow the drug to be used in conjunction with AZT shortly after it denied recommendation for the use of DDC by itself. The drug was approved after Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. showed the panel the drug was effective in clinical tests.

About 75 high school and college students rallied against the construction of incinerators in New Jersey. The students said reducing waste and recycling should replace incineration.

Three Class One organizations get their budgets for next year from SGA
by Tara Mulligan

Three Class 1 organizations have had their '92-'93 budgets approved by the SGA.
The Latin American Student Organization (LASO) and Class 1 Concerts (C1C) received increases, while the College Life Union Board, CLUB, received a decrease.

Sandra Garcia, vice president of LASO, said it received an additional $4,405. She said the organization is planning on expanding the Hispanic Education and Latinismo programs. Last year, the Hispanic Education program consisted of pamphlets on different Hispanic countries. New plans include cultural seminars scheduled to focus on a different country each month including dance demonstrations and food samples.

Latinismo is a dance troupe that is being re-established. LASO member Mike Zain said, "The dances are traditional, and we need to research and understand them." Some of the dances that will be performed are La Bomba, the Meringue, and the Salsa.

C1C received an overall five percent increase. Treasurer Karen Levy said C1C's major expense is the cost of the bands, which has been increased to $33,500. $15,400 is allotted to cover the cost of rental equipment for concerts such as sound and lights. Its hospitality budget was also increased to $3,300, this supplies the bands with food. Finally, a new addition to C1C was a historian to record its events, at a total of $75.

CLUB's budget was decreased by $7,000, bringing the total budget to $80,000. The cancellation of next year's Spring Ball is the main reason for the decrease, said Vice President Michele Morgan. Total cost for the Ball is $6,200.

The two major costs of CLUB are Homecoming and Spring Week. They received a $6,000 increase for professional services, which includes behind the scenes work at the movies, comedy shows, and lectures.

New food company bids taken by administration
by Monica Stipanov

Job security for food service workers will be an important factor in evaluating five food companies that submitted bids on Monday hoping to win a new contract from the college, said Dr. Barry G. Cohen, Assistant Vice President for Finance and chairperson of the group evaluating the bids.

The three-year contract with MSC's current supplier, Wood Food Service, Inc., will expire on June 15. Gourmet Dining, Marriott Corporation, Morrison's Custom Management, The ServiceMaster Co., and Wood Food Service have all submitted bids.

The group "plans to complete the evaluation process in two weeks or so," Cohen said. He was not sure of the exact date of when the new contractor will be announced.

In addition, according to Affirmative Action Meetings of 2/19 to examine service and money, the evaluating group must "take into account the affirmative action policies of all bidders, the personnel policies relative to benefits, and adherence to the principles of fair and equitable treatment of employees."

This resolution was passed by the President's Commission on Affirmative Action as a result of an internal March 15 memo to Wood employees. The memo stated: "...that should another contractor win,...your pay could be cut and all your vacation benefits, seniority, etc...could be eliminated/start all over again. This possibility exists for employees at the Student Center as well as for the Blanton and Freeman facilities. A further sad possibility is that another contractor could eliminate positions or fill them with people other and/or let you go after 60 days."

President Reid responded to the resolution on March 13 with the following statement: "I am pleased to let you know that in following State affirmative action regulations for procurement, the bidders will be asked to provide their corporate affirmative action and personnel policies, and these documents will be reviewed as part of the evaluation process. In addition, there is a clause in the bid specifications requiring that the successful contractor shall hire for a probationary period of 60 days all current non-managerial employees of Wood who wish to remain at MSC."

The SGA unanimously passed a resolution on March 25 recommending "that Wood Food Service not be re-contracted even if they provide the lowest bid."

An informal survey of approximately 300-400 students and faculty members completed last semester by the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee asking students their likes and dislikes as well as recommendations for improvement of the Rat, coffee shop and cafeterias. Wood Food Service was given the results, but this semester "students came back to me saying that there were no changes," John Inverso, chairperson of the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee, said.

"The bill was passed because "no evident changes have been made within the last semester to improve service or food quality on the part of Wood," Inverso said.

SGA to evaluate teachers at MSC for future students
by Filomena Martellini

The Student Government Association (SGA) attempts to evaluate teachers and courses differently for future semesters.

The SGA has a questionnaire containing 15 questions. Students will be allowed to base their opinions on teachers and courses without having to discuss their views with others. The ideas for this process came from other schools, such as Northeastern University and the University of Massachusetts.

Sal Anderton, chairperson of the Academic Affairs Committee, says, "It can be a very useful service that SGA can provide. Life is complete in charge of this evaluation.

Faculty does not have to participate in this. It will be their own decision to make. Students will be given the questionnaire before or after the class is held. It will not be used to make up an entire class meeting."

Joan Ficke, vice president of the union, said, "It's an enterpriseing activity, but I hope students are well prepared in the conduct of the activity."

The SGA has just started doing this. It's a slow and long process. It will be done class by class when it is given. There are no guarantees as to when it will be completed.

Anderton says the goal is to get the greatest number in courses and teachers evaluated as we can. Anderton says it's not the first time that it has happened. Several years back, students have conducted this process of evaluating teachers and courses. Although it's not the first time this has happened, it will be the first time for some.

This evaluation questionnaire will be given to students only. No faculty member is required to participate. It will not not provide any guarantees for the students or for the faculty.

Stress reduction workshop given at Drop-In Center
by Nancy Gannon

The Drop-In Center and Human Relations Organization sponsored a "Stress Reduction Workshop" last Tuesday in Kepa Lounge.

More than 40 students and faculty members attended the workshop which featured guest speaker Lorna Weinstock, a psychotherapist and expert in the field of stress reduction. Weinstock's presentation was very informal, which allowed members of the audience to participate by sharing their feelings throughout the workshop.

Lists of "Stress Exhaustion Symptoms" were passed out so participants could associate their feelings of stress with those commonly reported.

"We all experience stress in a unique way," Weinstock said. "Stress has a very definite translation into the way you act and feel."

Weinstock said some of the many symptoms of stress exhaustion include: appetite change, tension, anxiety, loss of direction, forgetfulness, confusion, and isolation.

"Being aware of these symptoms can alert you that what you are experiencing is stress," Weinstock said.

She discussed a common exercise known as abdominal breathing, a type of breathing that incorporates the use of the abdomen rather than the chest. Proper abdominal breathing involves inhalation and exhalation solely through the use of the nostrils.

"This technique allows for deeper and slower breathing, which in turn allows the body to relax," she said.

With Weinstock's instruction, the audience practiced the breathing exercise. She suggested 20 minutes of abdominal breathing per day, to reduce daily stress.

She said, "It takes a while to get used to abdominal breathing. It should become comfortable after three weeks of practice."

Rachel Bellaff, a sophomore Fine Arts major, said, "The workshop was really good. It would be good if groups got together to practice it."

David Schoenbaum, the director of the Drop-In Center, said he was pleased with the large turnout at the workshop.

"People really got involved. Lorna Weinstock was a great speaker," he said.

Bill passed to limit amount of money faculty can charge students for photocopies

by John Inverso

The SGA met last night and unanimously passed a bill that would limit the amount of money a faculty member could charge students for photo-copying to five dollars. Mildred Pelot, SGA legislator and author of the bill, said that this bill is to advise the faculty and students about the rules concerning money collected for photo-copies. Alternatives, such as placing copies of required reading on reserve are also mentioned.

She said this is a suggestion and that the only way it can be carried out is to make students aware of it, and have them enforced.

Director of Academic Affairs Cherie Dubin said, "The bill has the support of the administration and is in the best interest of the students. If a faculty member violates this bill, then the students have the right to report it to the department head or even Dr. Lynde, Provost for Academic Affairs." Two budgets were discussed in detail by the legislature, the Drop-In Center and the SGA. The latter was discussed and approved by a vote of 22 in favor for a total of $177,634. The budget will increase in areas such as office expenses and the prescription plan. SGA Treasurer Rob Tranter stated most of the $10,000 for office expenses goes to the five cent photo-copying service offered by the SGA.

The Drop-In Center budget was passed unanimously after the Director Dave Schoerbaum explained the details. There was a $11,200 reduction for telephone use due to the new phone system, ACUS. Other areas of funding increased, such as faculty, special programs, lectures, and conference and staff training.

Schoerbaum said there will be more programs offered next semester dealing with AIDS awareness and substance abuse. The total budget for '92-'93 is approximately $103,380.

During the meeting, several other issues were addressed. Sam Rock, SGA legislator and member of CLUB, reported on the events of the Drive-In sponsored by CLUB. "People didn't give a shit. It took CLUB five months to set up this event and it was canceled because of stupidity. (See Drive-In page 1)," Rock said. "If you have events, don't take them to student events, settle them where innocent bystanders won't be endangered."

Also, Director of Greek Life Carl Zieta announced the Greek Council debate for executive board members to be held today in the Student Center Cafeteria. He said all students are welcomed to attend and listen to what the candidates have to say.

WCSA to start its own newspaper

by Loren A. Medina

This May, the Weekend College Student Association (WCSA), a class II organization of the SGA, and the School of Humanities and Social Sciences will sponsor a campus newspaper, The Weekend Times.

The paper is a project started by Jorge L. Cruz-Moctezuma, president of WCSA, staff writer for The Montclarion and a Broadcasting major. Cruz-Moctezuma hopes The Weekend Times will create a stronger interaction between Weekend College Students, the administration and weekday students.

"One of the main objectives of the newspaper is to let the student community to know about the program (Weekend College)," said Cruz-Moctezuma, "and at the same time to express the ideas and concerns of the Weekend College students."

The paper will be published in both Spanish and English in order for it to reach a wider readership. Professors from the Linguistics and Spanish/Italian departments will assist Cruz-Moctezuma in editing the paper.

Cruz-Moctezuma said, "It is very important that the articles are written in both languages if we want the newspaper to reach as many students as possible. For this reason I have asked for help from those departments."

Anyone interested in writing for The Weekend Times may do so, and submit their articles in either English or Spanish. Those to be printed will then be translated into either language for publication.

The Weekend College program, founded in 1969, gives foreign students an opportunity to learn English while taking courses taught in Spanish. The majority of these courses fulfill General Education Requirements (GER) and earn credits for graduation.

por Loren A. Medina

El próximo mes de mayo, la Asociación Estudiantil del Colegio de Fin de Semana (WCSA), una organización clase II de la Asociación del Gobierno Estudiantil (SGA), publicará su propio periódico, el cual intentará reforzar los lazos de interés de los estudiantes. Si una profesora viola este reglamento, la estudiante tiene el derecho de presentar un caso ante el departamento de Humanidades y Social Sciences.

El Colegio de Fin de Semana, ha brindado la oportunidad de obtener una educación universitaria a miles de estudiantes extranjeros desde su formación en 1969. A pesar de tener 23 años de fundado, muchos de los estudiantes de MSC no saben que existe un programa que ofrece la oportunidad de aprender inglés, mientras se reciben cursos en español, la mayoría de los cuales llenan los requisitos de educación general (GER), y a la misma vez se acumulan créditos para la graduación.

"Uno de los objetivos principales del periódico es dar a conocer la existencia de este programa a toda la comunidad estudiantil de MSC, y que a la vez sirva de portavoz para expresar las ideas e inquietudes de los estudiantes del Colegio de Fin de Semana," comentó Jorge L. Cruz-Moctezuma, quien es estudiante de Ciencias de la Comunicación y creador de la idea de publicar el periódico. Cruz-Moctezuma, es el responsable directo de la edición, pero cuenta con un fabuloso equipo de profesores de los departamentos de Lingüística y Español e Italiano, ya que el periódico será publicado en dos idiomas: inglés y español.

"En gran importancia que los artículos sean escritos en ambos idiomas, si desean que el periódico alcance la mayor popularidad posible. Por esta razón, he pedido la ayuda de los profesores de dichos departamentos," comentó.

Entre el grupo de profesores se encuentran Nora Adams, coniatrana académica e profesora de inglés como segundo idioma; Iris Barriera, consejera académica; Gladis Tate, asistente del director del centro de tutoría. Por parte del departamento de Lingüística, se contará con la colaboración de la Dra. Susana Sotillo, profesora de inglés como segundo idioma; y la Dra. Joane Engelbert, profesora de traducción. La ayuda del departamento de Español e Italiano, correrá a cargo de las doctoras Carmen Alverio y Diana Guemárez-Cruz.

Jorge L. Cruz-Moctezuma, quien también fue el creador de la idea de publicar los artículos en español en "The Montclarion," es "promotor de la lengua española en este país, además de demostrar una gran preocupación por los problemas de los estudiantes de MSC. El ha ejercido la presidencia de WCSA durante dos años, en los cuales ha mostrado gran dedicación y amor por el programa del Colegio de Fin de Semana."

"La idea de crear un periódico para el Colegio del Fin de Semana, surgía cuando ingresa a la escuela y me di cuenta de la necesidad de que nuestros estudiantes de ser informados acerca de los principales acontecimientos del campus," comentó.

Jorge comprendió que la tarea no era fácil, así que decidió hablar con los editores del periódico escolar "The Montclarion," para que le permitiesen traducir el artículo principal al idioma español. La idea fue aceptada y durante el semestre de primavera de 1991, comenzaron a aparecer semanalmente y por primera vez en la historia de MSC, artículos en español. A mediados del mismo semestre, Jorge comprendió que era importante escribir sus propios artículos.

"Había ocasiones en las que no encontraba un artículo lo suficientemente interesante para los estudiantes del Fin de Semana, así que decidí escribir mis propios artículos," comentó.

Su plan fue aprobado, pero sus deseos iban más allá de eso. En el otoño del '91, Jorge comenzó a traducir sus propios artículos al español e italiano, con el deseo de que las autoridades y estudiantes de MSC se enteraran de los acontecimientos más sobresalientes del Colegio de Fin de Semana. "Sabiendo que para editar un periódico que fuera leído por la mayoría de los estudiantes, este tenia que ser publicado en inglés principalmente, así que me esforzé para alcanzar un nivel aceptable del idioma inglés. Ahora, escribo los artículos dependiendo de mi estado de ánimo, en algunas ocasiones los escribo en inglés y los traduzco al español; y algunas veces lo hago en la forma contraria," comentó.

El nombre del periódico será: "The Weekend Times" y será patrocinado por WCSA y el departamento de Humanidades y Ciencias Sociales. Se ha abierto una invitación a todos los estudiantes de MSC que deseen escribir artículos relacionados con el programa. Los artículos pueden ser escritos en cualquier de los dos idiomas, los mejores serán traducidos y publicados en el periódico.

"Quiero agradecer a la valiosa colaboración que me brindó el Decano del departamento de Humanidades y Ciencias Sociales, Dr. Phillip Cohen, quien contribuyó económicamente y moralmente para la realización del periódico. De la misma forma, quiero expresar mi más sincero agradecimiento a todas las personas que colaborarán en la creación del periódico," finalizó Jorge.

Get financial aid when you need it most. After you graduate.

Life doesn’t suddenly become easy when you get out of college. There are the challenges of starting a career, getting settled in a new apartment and doing it all within your budget.

So to help you out, we put together the AT&T Moving Ahead Program.

When you sign up, we’ll send you a $5 AT&T Long Distance Certificate worth 35 minutes of AT&T long distance calling. And every time you move and choose AT&T or switch from another long distance company, you’ll get even more savings benefits.

Since you’ll probably be traveling more, you’ll also get an AT&T Calling Card sent to you, free. It helps make calling from payphones easier and you don’t have to replace it when you move.

You’ll also have the opportunity to save on AT&T long distance calls with the AT&T Reach Out America Calling Plan. Even our Moving Ahead newsletter can help. Besides being full of tips on things like managing your money and job hunting, it includes chances to save on the latest clothes, your favorite CDs and more.

Just call 1-800-662-2610, Ext. 3835 to join the AT&T Moving Ahead Program. And get a little extra help after school.

There are no enrollment fees. Based on an AT&T direct dial, coast to coast call made during the night/weekend time period within the continental U.S. You may get more or less for your certificate depending on when and where you call.

Students sitting in the Student Center Mall on Tuesday afternoon enjoying their ritualistic relaxation time with friends probably didn’t expect to hear about the inevitable demise of the Conservation Club’s lecture series, however, prompted one speaker to say, “You’re all going to die unless you get off your asses.”

Environmental activist Tim Lawton urged students to become environmentally active: he takes trees that have been uprooted and replants them in otherwise barren areas.

“I have about 300 trees in my backyard, and my parents are becoming rather annoyed. I have to find somewhere to plant them,” Lawton said; he has difficulty in finding places that will take the trees, and often replants them alongside highways.

“I have called numerous government agencies, and they don’t even want to hear about it,” he added.

He accused people of wearing “save the Earth” T-shirts and claiming to be environmentally aware, but then doing nothing.

“It’s great for everyone to sit around and think of what they could be doing. I used to do that, but realized I actually had to get out there and do something to make a difference,” he said.

The future, in his opinion, looks bleak; too much irreversible damage has occurred.

“Realistically, I don’t think we can beat this, but then doing nothing. ‘It’s great for everyone to sit around and think of what they could be doing. I used to do that, but realized I actually had to get out there and do something to make a difference,’” he added.

New Jersey Environmental Federation (NJEF) representative Tom Moritz said that manufacturers are blantly lying to consumers about products that seem environmentally safe, but aren’t.

He cited the example of a trash bag that was advertised as biodegradable. “You would have to fill the entire bag with nothing but cornstarch and put it out in the direct sunlight. Even then it would only break down into smaller pieces.”

NJEF wants every consumer to know how to read labels in order to make the best choices, he added. “Consumers should know safe, non-toxic household products are available. We have to spread the word.”

Conservation Club member Carol Wilson added a slightly different twist by speaking about two issues that students might relate to more easily.

One of the prettiest parts of the campus was destroyed. Fortunately, through protests, the administration to work with us and we were able to save some of the trees,” she said. “Trees removed from the library area were taken to several different local areas for replanting, she added; trees removed from the McEachern area were sent to Bay Street Station.

Finally, Tim Keating of Rainforest Relief talked about the destruction of the world’s tropical rainforests. “One and a half acres of rainforest are destroyed every second,” he said.

American companies mine in the rainforests for tin, copper, aluminum and wood; during these mining processes, thousands of species of trees, plants, insects and animals are destroyed, he said.

He suggested that Americans use their resources more effectively as a step toward preventing further rainforest destruction.

“We need to stop looking at products as things that make our lives a little easier. These items might be short-term gains, but in the long-run, we will pay for the loss of the rainforests over and over again,” he said.

Keating added that consumers should use their dollars to sway the policies of companies that are harming the environment, “How you spend your dollar in the long run is the most powerful vote you have in this country. Don’t leave here thinking of an aluminum can as an aluminum can. Think of it as a little piece of the rainforest saved,” Keating said.

The Montclarion is published weekly, except during examination, summer and winter sessions. It is funded, in part, by funds received from the Student Government Association, Inc. of Montclair State. Advertising rates are available upon request. In Room 113 of the Student Center Annex, or by calling the business department at (201) 893-5237. The views expressed in the editorial pages, with the exception of the main editorial, do not necessarily reflect the opinion of The Montclarion.

He hit me first!

Tuesday night, CLUB held its annual Drive-In in the Clove Road parking lot. Between 600 and 700 students showed up to see the two films being shown, Point Break and Hot Shots. Although the filmgoers paid for, and in most cases planned to see both films, they saw only one due to a series of brawls that erupted in the audience. Ten minutes into the second film, the lights came on and the lot was cleared.

A common complaint of students here at MSC is the comatose state of campus life our college offers. It’s a shame that when an event is offered, it has to be called off halfway through because a handful of students find it impossible to behave themselves.

Presumably, most in attendance came to CLUB’s drive-in to see both films. Certainly, most in attendance did not come to get involved in a drunken donnybrook with aspirations to be ejected from the lot by Campus Police. Unfortunately, the plans of these students became inconsequential when a few allegedly liquored-up tough guys allegedly began swinging fists.

If these individuals had problems to solve that’s their business. They have the option of going about it in any manner they see fit. But there is no excuse for bringing that problem to an event such as the drive-in. A large number of people worked hard to bring the drive-in to MSC and an even larger number of people came out to it to have a good time (quite a rarity at our campus).

Unfortunately, this kind of nonsense has effects that linger beyond the event in which they take place. This week’s Carnival has had its hours curtailed because of the brawls which took place last year. Will there even be a drive-in next year? If there is, it’s a safe bet that it will be strictly policed. Too bad.

CARE-ful applause

The Montclarion applauds Wednesday’s protest by the Campaign for Affordable Rutgers Education (CARE). Faced with spiraling tuition costs, much like MSC students, lack of representation in their institution’s decision-making process, much like MSC students, and tired of being ignored by their institution’s administration, much like MSC students, the group decided upon a bold course of action, taking matters into their own hands.

Six members of CARE took over the telephone switchboard of Rutgers’ Livingston campus, refusing to leave until they were granted a meeting with the University’s president.

Unfortunately, two of CARE’s three key demands, a tuition freeze and greater representation on the university’s Board of Governors, were denied (the demand for amnesty for the protesters was granted).

One of the protesters, Ryan Ullman, sounded much like an MSC student. "It’s really obvious that [the institution’s president] doesn’t want to work with the students or care about us.”

The Montclarion strives for fairness and accuracy in its news coverage. We offer you an open forum to air your views. Your opinions are important to us.

People didn’t give a shit.

Quote of the Week
I have chosen to write this week’s column on the aberration called Earth Week. First of all, I would like to express my great dislike for all special days, weeks and months for the facades that they are. The only way you ever see African cultural events in predominantly white communities is during Black History Month, effectively limiting cultural education on Africa to one month. This practice leaves this area to be foreign and forgotten for 11 months of the year. Earth Days and Weeks do much the same. Everyone gets together for a few days and talks about environmental issues, and then most people go back to their own lives for the rest of the year. We have to do more than put on buttons, shirts and bumper stickers with messages about saving the environment. We have to address problems, find solutions and present them to our legislators. We must force them to hear us and act. If it takes letters, votes, boycotts or demonstrations, we must do what is needed to force action. We cannot continue to sit back and hope for action.

When we start showing businesses and politicians that our voice is loud enough, they will be forced to act. As it stands now, they hear little or nothing and do much the same. When we speak out, we force them to take notice of the issues and show their true colors.

President Bush, the big business pollution president, is showing how grey he is on green issues. He opposed limiting cur emissions and investing in alternative fuel technology. He is willing to send young men to war and the rest of the planet to death to preserve the status quo. He doesn’t get to read our various “Save the Earth” stickers, iron-on and pins. People like George use economic reasons to defend their inaction. It must be made clear that there is no need for economics if there is no land, water or air to live in.

If politicians and CEO’s want to act like nothing is happening, we have to show them they will lose money and/or votes if they don’t change. We can only be known so long.

If you choose to remain silent, I hope I’ll at least get to laugh at you and say, “I told you so as you die from pollution or a hole in the sky.” I sincerely mean that. It is time today, because there will not be a tomorrow unless we start to reduce pollution, recycle and clean up the messes we have already made.

Lyndon LaRouche and his supporters like to call people like me “Roo-fascists” because environmental legislation and restrictions on business have hurt American economies. It has, but for only one reason: other nations do not have to meet the same restrictions we do. Therefore, they are able to produce equal or better products for less money, thus, taking business away from America, and ultimately, jobs from us. The easiest and most effective way to remedy the situation is to ban the import of products created in factories or farms that do not meet the same environmental standards as equivalent American companies.

Stop celebrating and start doing something. It took me five years of thinking about problems before I finally took decisive action and started planting trees. Make your voice be heard, your ideas acknowledged and received or make the politicians and businesses pay if you ignore you.

Tomorrow is too late and today may not be soon enough. These problems are real. I am not a zealot. Unless we can find a way to live on another planet, we must change or die. Remember, other nations need American markets more than we need them. If we force them to meet the same standards as we should, they will comply.

It’s time we start living today in a manner that will let us live tomorrow.

Such examples are just clearer indications that our past two conservative presidents have put the financial interests of the rich above anything else.

Opponents of domestic social spending cry out the ol’ adage “You can’t throw money at a problem and expect it to go away.”

Yet it was believed by most that if we threw enough money into the defense of Western Europe, we could wipe out the threat of Nazism and Communism. We’re also the same modern nation that donated billions of dollars to medical charities is the best thing to do to help find cures for fatal diseases. Also, I’m sure there wouldn’t be one living soul on this campus that would argue that an increase in state funds to MSC would be useless, because money doesn’t make problems go away.

This illogical belief, to put it mildly, is racist. Our nation (you know who you are) laudably legitimizes the snubbing of the underclass by foolishly blaming them for their own situation. In fact, arecent survey by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services indicated that there are almost as many white families with dependent children receiving aid as there are black families. The actual breakdown is 40.1% Black, 38.4% White, 15.9% Hispanic and 5.6% other.

This same study also negated a couple of long-en­treched stereotypes of welfare families. The welfare attackers would like to have us all believe that all welfare mothers are black women, having loads of children, while intentionally getting pregnant to get as much money as they can from the welfare system

Not true. The average welfare mother for 1989 had a total of just under two children (1.9).

Others claim that once one becomes a welfare recipient, one becomes incarcerated by lazy and stays on the program for life.

However, this same survey found that 50% of the welfare recipients in 1989 were on welfare for 24 months or less.

We need federal leadership that is serious about soothing racial tensions, denouncing stere­otypes of groups and stop­ping the internal rot in America. To put it boldly, this amateur political scientist finds attitudes towards the poor and minorities to be a national disgrace.
Just think of the trouble there'd be if the carnival had bumper cars

On April 21, College Life Union Board (CLUB) held their annual drive-in movie. It has consistently been one of the most popular and entertaining events on campus. Unfortunately, the program had to be terminated early this year, as the event was cut short because of a conflict between two social Greek organizations. As a result of this fight, pandemonium broke out in the lots and everyone gathered to see the "action," rather than watch the movies. This resulted in the Campus Police shutting down the program.

The members of CLUB are extremely perturbed by the actions of these groups. We put five months worth of work and almost $4,000 into this program, not to mention the several hours it took to help the crew set up and break down the components.

Now a whole bunch of you claim that you couldn't possibly get a g新农村 about CLUB and their money, but we would like to remind all of you that every student spends $3 a credit: up to a $36 maximum for student activities.

Now $36 may not seem like a lot of money, but when you multiply that figure by several thousand undergraduate students, you wind up with a lot of money, and a lot of this money was wasted on Tuesday night when these two groups decided to act like nursery school children instead of college students.

...a lot of people who actually came to have a good time and watch the movies instead of get drunk and fight with other people were terribly disappointed.

Also a lot of people who actually came to have a good time and watch the movies instead of get drunk and fight with other people were terribly disappointed.

We are much more upset about the fact that these two groups ruined the event for a lot of people who came to have a good time without causing any problems than we are about the actual fight itself. If you have to act like assholes and have a fight, please do it in a place where innocent people will not have to suffer for your actions.

On a final note, we would like to thank the organizations who started the fight for single-handedly destroying the efforts of five months worth of hard work. Furthermore, we would like to thank them for ruining what could have been a great time for several hundred people.

Carnival's starting tonight, folks. Why don't you see how fast you can sabotage that event?

Sam Rock
Cinema Chairperson of CLUB

joke—a act of communication. It consisted of an old tube sock stuffed with newspaper and tied with strings at a few places. It also consisted of an inscription which read: "Conceptual art—very intellectual." This was a reference to itself, a parody of conceptual art, a humorous statement answering another humorous statement. I placed this work on the wall, next to the painting. I did not touch the painting, nor did I violate it in any way.

A family member replied to this in an apologetic tone, with total honesty towards me and my work. He talked incoherently and with passion. It is with great difficulty that out of his rambling I have salvaged some point he made. I present these here and refute them promptly.

Allegedly, I know nothing about painting. Also, the painting on the wall was the best on campus. I am ignorant of the background, or the references that painting referred to. I am arrogant and had no right to present my work the way I did.

Well, I do know something about painting. The professor doesn't know me, and he has biased his rash judgment on this incident alone. I am an older student, and I have been an artist— a painter— for a long time. I have studied art and art-history to quite some extent, and I am familiar with much of the development of the fine arts, especially that of painting.

The painting on the wall, whatever qualities it has or has not, is not the issue here. It's "greatness" could be the subject of a further discussion. I may have misinterpreted it, if such a thing can happen at all. I may have missed out on its references. But it did have a meaning for me, and it tied in well with my concerns. I formed an opinion, and my opinion is as good as anybody else's.

As regards my arrogance, I wonder, what is more arrogant? To place an artwork next to another without a permit without violating the other work in any way, or to remove, destroy and discard an artwork? I leave it to the reader.

Mine was an act of communication, part of a free exchange of ideas—something that should be at the core of higher education. And this is what the little Nazis who censored my work failed to consider. Their urgent need to remove, destroy and discard my work is reminiscent of practices in Nazi Germany and in Communist Russia. They, too, stomped out utterances of opinions at variance with theirs.

The said faculty member, whose act I have just described, could use a little humor, a little tolerance and a great deal of simple decency.

I would welcome a more meaningful and constructive discussion of such matters with anyone. Unfortunately, the atmosphere at our school is not favorable to any such endeavor. It's a pity.

As far as I'm concerned, my First Amendment rights were violated. But that won't deter me in the future. I reserve the right to think and say whatever I damn well please. No cultural terrorism or authoritarian rhetoric will keep me from doing so.

As women growing up in this society, we practice a variety of behaviors in order to protect ourselves... This does not mean that we have to give up our rights! However, we want, whenever we want, dressed in whatever attire we choose!

usually done by someone the victim already knows. Rape is a violent terrorist act directed towards women and is perpetuated by a patriarchal and misogynist society. As for the issue of how women should dress, I am amazed. When will we cease to blame the victim? Rape is not a man getting turned on by provocative clothing and "naturally" being unable to control himself. Johnson seems to have communicated to the women attending his lecture and demonstration that they themselves are the cause— that if they take enough precautions and dress in longer skirts, they could prevent an attack! This is not the case. Logic will tell us that longer skirts and more clothing bind us and make it more difficult to move; therefore, escape is less likely.

As women growing up in this society, we practice a variety of behaviors in order to protect ourselves. We all know the sound of footsteps behind us. We are all aware of the danger we face merely as a fact of being female. This does not mean that we have to give up our rights to go wherever we want, whenever we want, dressed in whatever attire we choose! To the women of MSC, I ask you to unite and take back the night! Together, we can create a society, or at least a campus, which respects women and all people's rights.

Another satisfied customer

I must keep reminding myself that The Montclarion is student-run, and although the funding is extracted from my student SGA fees, I don’t actually reach my grubby little paw into my shallow pocket and lay down cold cash for it. This is some solace. I am sure, however, that some of the capable staff do have aspirations of someday voicing their humble opinions in print for a paycheck. This, of course, can only be assumed, but the assumption is frightening. I have chosen to believe that the students that do put their monikers in bold type surrounded by really neat computer graphics and entitled with catchy phrases do not have these aspirations. I have chosen to believe this with the intention of maintaining that the editorial pages rather than laughing out loud.

The main focus of my literary admiration is Mr. Steve Garufi. Garufi is a typical hide-behind-his-pen-and-attack-easy-targets kind of editorial weasel. He chose to attack Jerry Brown this week after his painfully obvious bandwagon Republican bashing last week. I may be blind to what A.E. Delia called “well-written and fact-supported…” (Vol. 71 no. 11) but when the easy way out is taken, it glares in front of my face. The Republican Party is hardly representative of minorities or the poor.” (Vol. 71 no. 10) These words ring so true to Mr. Garufi’s unoriginal popular rhetoric by taking swipes at Jerry Brown the champion of special interests at one point, and he did fight for no limits on campaign contributions, but that is in the past. Who better to beat the system of our dysfunctional government than someone from the inside? Who has dubbed Brown unelectable and phony? The politicians and media that he is attacking? The government will not fix itself. However, a complete outsider cannot get in and fix what he knows nothing about. It will take someone who has experienced the evils himself. Any candidate that wants to radically change things is labelled by the politicians in power because they know how he/she is usually right. People on the inside are scared of Brown and they should be.

Why does Garufi insist on details and plans when it is obvious to any student of politics that Brown knows how to govern? Crying for detail in order to avoid the grand scale is a Clinton-like trick that brings the debate into small areas that voters are conned into focussing on. The detailed discussion about specific programs avoids the issue - apathy and ignorance. Someone like Brown has obviously moved people to fight complicity. The fact he is is still in the race getting votes with the $100 contributions and lack of organization is proof of his surging cause. Garufi’s suggestion that Brown get out of the race is ludicrous. Brown is involved in a crusade, not a campaign. He is spreading a word, not an image. Garufi, in his infinite wisdom, disregards this. He wants the inept Bill Clinton to cruise to the nomination unscathed, much like Garufi tried to cruise through his anti-Brown article without a battle from yours truly. Good luck.

Garufi has become the object of a passionate American’s words of wisdom in an ignorant society. His apathy and ignorance concerning Jerry Brown and his message offended me and should offend any other true American. I fully expect Garufi to take the route of Bill Clinton. When asked to join the battle against corruption and limit his campaign contributions to $100, Clinton just smiled and said “Well, uh…” Needless to say he didn’t accept the challenge. Let’s hope Mr. American Graffiti does.

Godspell is Spellbinding!

by Sandra Camilleri

The Washington Street Players, a newly formed theatre group at Clifton, is proud to present its debut production of Godspell. Directed by Rob Moore and Melissa Bentley of MSC, Godspell features a cast often dazzling individuals! They are Rob DeGuidice, Michele Ferentinos, Daniel Salas, Suzanne Ochs, Dorothy Dobkowski, Mike Fresh (A.K.A. Ferentinos), Joe Wilson, Cheryl Gordon, Rachael Beasley, and David Nikithiner.

Rob Moore, a Humanities major of MSC and Youth Minister of St. Paul’s Parish in Clifton, together with Fr. Victor Mazza, Pastor of St. Paul’s, conceived the idea of a theatre group. One evening, when sponsoring a gym night at the parish school, Fr. Mazza asked Moore if he would like to stage a show. Moore accepted the suggestion.

Rob’s friend Nicki Nati, along with the entire cast, then spent weeks rehearsing. Godspell takes the gospel of Matthew and sets it to music. The cast perform cohesive group numbers where song and dance are infused to tell a story. They also establish good rapport with the audience by interacting with audience members as they sing and dance. Full of mirth, each of them renders a highly spirited performance. The musical selections are uplifting to the soul!!

Moore is no newcomer to the theatre. His stage credits include the roles of Drew Lawrence in Paper Rain in the Shower and King Charles in Players production of Pippin.

Now, in its first ever season premiere, the group is enthusiastic and ready to welcome the audience with a spectacular musical!

Soon after, funds were raised through benefit shows and the organization was established as “The Washington Street Players.” Moore, acting as producer and co-director, decided to do Godspell. When asked why he chose this as the first production, he stated: “We’re based in a church school. I wanted to have a religious show to attract the crowd. It has to be musical, at least. Also, the first show I ever did was Godspell.

The best of MSC Fine Arts Department in Manhattan gallery

By David Anderson

For most artists, being included in a gallery show in Manhattan is an event of honor and prestige. MSC has given its students an opportunity to taste a bit of that fame by mounting a show of student work at the Westbeth Gallery. From hundreds of works submitted, a faculty jury selected approximately 110 pieces, representing 60 artists. These artists are undergraduate and graduate students, and alumni of MSC. Nearly every studio in the Fine Arts Department is represented with entries.

The strength of the show lies not only its diversity, but also in the quality of the pieces on exhibit. In fact, if there is one negative comment to be made about the show, it is that there is too much to see in such a small space.

These artists have worked long and hard in their training. Especially underscored by the alumni work, this effort is evident in the fields of commercial as well as fine arts.

The Westbeth Gallery, open noon to 6 p.m. every day (except Friday—open 8 a.m.-noon), is located at 55 Bethune Street, between Hudson Street and the West Side Highway in West Greenwich Village. The artists’ reception will be this Saturday, April 23 from 5 until 6 p.m. There will be food and live music as the college art community congregates for an afternoon of celebration. The invitation is extended to all.

McCafferty Exhibits in Gallery 1/2

by Jonathan LeVine

Leslie McCafferty, a graduating fine arts student, is exhibiting her drawings and illustrations through this week in Gallery 1/2 (Calica student lounge). The drawings and illustrations represent a variety of subject matter ranging in animals, portraits, still lifes and nudes. The work represents a progression of work produced in her classes where she experimented with a variety of medium and technique. The drawings are rendered in charcoal, pastel, pencil, pen and ink.

She has created one image through a reductive technique of etching in black scratchboard. The exquisitely etched image is of a hen rising in the early morning as she stands over her nest where a single egg lays. The sunlight shines through a window and the hen stands in front of and forms a shadow off her body. The etching is similar to an illustration with its many hatched lines, which makes it a finely crafted piece of work.

Another drawing which stands out is the image of an x-acto knife. The instrument is precisely drawn with smooth, clean lines and gleaming metal. What makes the knife so threatening is the way it runs diagonally from the right corner of the paper out into the viewer’s space. The expressionistic lines that are used for shading around the knife convey a dangerous energy as well as creating a tension through the contrast of controlled and frenzied lines.

When asked what her plans were after graduation, McCafferty replied, “Although I have no jobs lined up, I plan to get into children's book illustration or illustration for advertising and design.” The show runs through May 24th.
This Tuesday, Fox aired “A Concert For Life- A Tribute To Freddie Mercury,” and it was one of the best concert shows I have ever seen. It was refreshing to see that a benefit concert could be televised and not seem like the Energizer bunny and keep going, and going, and going. Case in point- compare this one to the past “Aid” concerts- Band Aid, Live Aid, Farm Aid, First Aid, Kool Aid, Lemon Aid, they all went on for what seemed to be forever. Marathon concerts that go on for days at a time just get annoying, and you end up switching it off in the middle to watch 90210 anyway. Live Aid was horrible. The cause was great, but who could stand to watch all those bands do their thing? The only ones that got any entertainment were the ones in the stadium, and even then, I wonder how many people thought of it as a relative that had overstayed his welcome.

Thankfully, the concert was only televised for two hours. That gave fans a chance to see their favorite bands and head off to bed. Those who really need to see the whole thing can watch MTV this Saturday for the four-hour jobbie. I was able to see Elton John, whose new hairpiece looks like someone took a bowl and trimmed around it, Metallica, Guns ‘N Roses, and a bunch of others, and it left me feeling good. Not only was it a tribute to Queen’s great frontman, but a fundraiser to help kill AIDS. Keep it up, guys.

Celebrities always die in threes, it seems. Comedians lately are following suit. First, John, whose new hairpiece looks like someone took a bowl and trimmed around it, Benny Hill died alone, with no survivors. He lived in a small apartment, although he was loaded with money. Every time he would ask a woman to marry him, they turned him down. His show was dropped by Thames Productions in 1986, but he still had quite a following, both in England and here in America. Although I cannot speak for him because I never knew him, what, conceivably, did he have to live for, outside of his fans? For an off-beat funnyman to die so alone really makes one think. It has all been said that from the depths of despair comes the best of comedy. In this case, the worst thing about the beast is the fact that it had overstayed his welcome.

The scariest part of it all is who will be the next one to die to complete the three? Oh, and one more thing. I’ve been hearing Sam Kinison jokes for the past week now, jokes like, “What’s the difference between Andrew Dice Clay and Sam Kinison? About six feet.” Jokes like that have all the appeal that the space shuttle Challenger jokes had. You know, ones like, “What’s the last words spoken by the shuttle commander? No, Bud Light!” They are just morbid, disgusting, and a sad attempt at humor. I’ve heard AIDS jokes, Helen Keller jokes, and racial jokes that are a thousand times better than the crap that’s being heaped on Sam Kinison, and the way it’s being done is a bit much.

The failure. It’s really sad when you think of the circumstances surrounding them both. John, whose new hairpiece looks like someone took a bowl and trimmed around it, was it a tribute to Queen’s great frontman, but a fundraiser to help kill AIDS. Keep it up, guys.

The worst thing about the beast is the fact that it had overstayed his welcome. The fire and pause buttons are located on the top, and I had no problem in using them. There is also a switch to turn on the turbo-shot, kind of like a rapid fire toggle. All the switches are easy to get to, and are easy to negotiate. The worst thing about the beast is the targeting scope. The eye-piece is a little too far from the eye, and I had to squint just to get an accurate lock on a target. It would have been nice if the stem extended enough so that you have the Super Scope resting on your shoulder, you don’t have to lean your head forward just to look through the thing. Also, it wouldn’t have hurt to make the eye-piece a little bigger. I had a hard time from-fitting to the eye. The eye-piece on the Super Scope is shaped like a mini Dixie cup, not at all like a gun’s eye-piece. A nice feature of the scope is the sight after the eye-piece- the part that you look through when the commercial says it’s accurate to a single television pixel. Believe me, it is helpful.

Nintendo has finally begun releasing accessories to its Super NES, the first of which is the Super Scope 6. Basically, the Super Scope 6 is a high-tech looking Zapper with the controls on the top. It rests on your shoulder like a rocket launcher, and is designed to be ambidextrous. To change it from a right-handed gun to a left, you just detach the targeting scope from one side and put it on the other. That’s it.

It’s a sleek-looking thing, I’ll give it that. The fire and pause buttons are located on the top, and I had no problem in using them. There is also a switch to turn on the turbo-shot, kind of like a rapid fire toggle. All the switches are easy to get to, and are easy to negotiate. The worst thing about the beast is the targeting scope. The eye-piece is a little too far from the eye, and I had to squint just to get an accurate lock on a target. Now, the games are the same high-tech looking versions of Duck Hunt- type games. You shoot at missiles in one, aliens in another, and enemy planes in another. That’s three of the Super Six. The other three are versions of a game called Blastris, where you shoot the blocks rather than rotate them, and a Moon Mole shoot ‘em up. Blastris is a boring game, mostly because of its slow speeds, and lack of any real challenge, such as in Dr. Mario or Tetris. After a few boards, you want to die just to change to a different game. Moon Mole isn’t bad, but how excited can a person get by blasting blue moles? Remember when the NES came out? How long could you stand playing Duck Hunt before you plugged Mario in? I really can’t say.

All in all, Super Scope 6 isn’t a bad piece of hardware, but unless someone designs some really interesting games for it, it will just fall by the wayside as a $59.99 version of the NES. Blastris, which is only one of the three or four games out of a 200-plus game library. Nintendo says it has more games on the way for it, and I see some promise for it, but not as a hype up tool for Hargen’s Alley.

The heart and soul of the Duke basketball team, his one-in-a-million shot against Kentucky. I'm talking about Coach Krzyzewski. With leader, Coach Mike K. would have never even had a chance to make this man's drive and leadership, Laettner. I'm not talking about Laettner or Hurley. Duke's repeat as NCAA Champions. No, nobody talking about the man responsible for there asking yourself, "Why is he talking about the "Scud" and the "Dud." People across the country were still talking with little success. Aside from Sean Conroy's goals, Bill Brownstreet, Frank Masella, John Beolola and Mike Bruton also contributed to the home front 8-1. Keith Van Ness (four goals), Bill Brownstreet, Frank Masella, John Beolola and Mike Bruton also contributed to the home team's balanced attack by notching two goals apiece while junior midfielder Ken Kane had another strong effort in goal. Fairfield (6-3), a physical team, couldn't spoiled the Red Hawks fine '90-'91 campaign by beating them in the ECAA Championship game 15-9. A year has passed and Kean had watched some of its key personnel graduate while the Red Hawks have gotten strong, which pleased Red Hawk Head Coach Doug Alford. "I'm very pleased with our effort," said the fifth-year coach out of Rutgers. "We're playing good fundamental lacrosse on both sides of the field right now, and I see us only getting better." Earlier in the week, MSC played host to Scranton College of Pennsylvania. Although the opponent was different, the results were the same as the Red Hawks rolled 26-7. Van Ness (seven goals), Bruton (sixx) and Blaney (five goals, six assists) led MSC who had a commanding 15-4 lead at halftime. The home team outplayed the visitors in every respect as the score indicates and ended up with an astounding 36 shots on goal for the night. MSC now takes the road where they sport a perfect 4-0 record this season. The first stop on the three-game trip will be at Keen University. Permanent Part-time Package Handlers

Our tuition reimbursement package is one of the most important packages UPS delivers.

United Parcel Service knows how difficult it is these days to get through school, academically and financially. While we can't help you get better grades, we can help you by offering one of the most generous tuition reimbursement packages around.

By working 3-5 hours a day, 5 days a week on selected shifts, you can be eligible for educational loans of up to $25,000 a year and tuition reimbursement of up to $2,000 a semester. You'll also start at $8 an hour, be able to pick a schedule that works around your classes, get paid holidays and vacations, receive company benefits and be eligible for promotions.

UPS also knows that free time is important. As a part-time package handler, you'll get weekends off! That's plenty of time to study or recharge.

No wonder we say UPS delivers more than a great job...UPS Delivers Education.

To learn more about this great opportunity, please visit the Student Center on Wednesday, April 29th, from 4pm to 8pm.

There are four basic rules we all must live by: you don't tug on Superman's cape, you don't spit into the wind, you don't pull the mask off The ol' Lone Ranger and you don't tell Robert Parish he's too old to play basketball.

Parish, the 38-year-old legendary center for the Boston Celtics, is like "Old Man River"—he just keeps on rolling.

Last Sunday, the Celtics needed a victory to clinch the Atlantic Division title and the second seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs. Boston secured the Heat by 16 as Parish logged 38 minutes, scored 22 points and hauled down 19 rebounds; not bad for the oldest man in the NBA.

This is what Parish, better known as "Chief," has done for the last 16 seasons. He's been one of the most consistent big men in the league. Only Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's numbers could match Parish's 1992 stats.

Chief averaged 14.1 points and 8.9 rebounds in 79 games this year. When Jabbar was 38, during the 1985-86 season, he averaged 23.4 points and six rebounds in 79 games. That year, Parish and the Celtics outdueled Jabbar's Lakers in the NBA Finals (winning three), has played in nine All-Star games and remarkably, in his 16th year, Chief hasn't let up at all.

To measure what Parish means to Boston would be impossible, but the best way to do it is by seeing how productive he's been in the absence of others.

Over the last few years, age and injury have hit the Celtics hard. Bird has missed 142 games since 1988. McHale has missed 60 games over the past two seasons and Dee Brown played in only 31 games this year.

There's been one durable mainstay leading the Celtics, practically carrying the team on his back.

Parish has had to pick up the slack in the absence of these players: not an easy thing to ask of the oldest man in the league. However, true to form, Chief has responded, missing only four games in the last two years and leading Boston to two consecutive Atlantic Division crowns.

This season, it looked bleak, however, as the New York "Choking" Knicks held a five-game lead with only eight games remaining. The Celtics, playing without Bird, won all eight and clinched their 14th division crown in the last 23 years. Who do you think it was leading the troops? The Chief!

I think the Celtics surprised everyone. In fact, in my column, "The Mighty Have Fallen!" in the March 5 issue of The Montclairian, I talked about the then 32-26 Celtics losing their mystique. Since then, Boston won 19 of its next 24 games, to finish 51-31 and capture the crown. The Celtics knocked everyone, just like Robert Parish.

Quietly, Parish has become one of the most dominant centers of all time. This doesn't get noticed because he never speaks. With Bird and McHale doing most of the scoring and talking, Chief has focused on letting his performance do the talking.

Now Parish, supposedly in the twilight of his career, still does not say much, but his performance speaks loud and clear. It says, "Save some room in Springfield for double-zero, for whenever I decide to retire.

There are four basic rules we all must live by: you don't tug on Superman's cape, you don't spit into the wind, you don't pull the mask off The ol' Lone Ranger and you don't tell Chief. has done for the last 16 seasons.

Second seed in the Eastern Conference play­

Three are George Mikan, Bill Russell and Parish always fact, his face never changes. Parish always years was because the Celtics won the championship. In 1980, he was happy to laid down 19 rebounds; not bad for the oldest man in the NBA.

"Old Man River"—he just keeps on rolling.

The 1976-77 team was 38-42. Parish was 38, during the 1985-86 season, he averaged 23.4 points and six rebounds in 79 games. That year, Parish and the Celtics outdueled Jabbar's Lakers in the NBA Finals (winning three), has played in nine All-Star games and remarkably, in his 16th year, Chief hasn't let up at all.

The 1979-80 team won the 1980-81 NBA Championship. Chief averaged 19 points and 9.5 rebounds that year.

Eleven years have gone by, "The Big Three" are still together and Parish is still in the center of it all. In his 12 years in Beantown, he led the Celtics to five NBA Finals (winning three), has played in nine All-Star games and remarkably, in his 16th year, Chief hasn't let up at all.

The 1989-90 team won the 1989-90 Atlantic Division title and the second seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs. Boston secured the Heat by 16 as Parish logged 38 minutes, scored 22 points and hauled down 19 rebounds; not bad for the oldest man in the NBA.

This is what Parish, better known as "Chief," has done for the last 16 seasons. He's been one of the most consistent big men in the league. Only Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's numbers could match Parish's 1992 stats.

Chief averaged 14.1 points and 8.9 rebounds in 79 games this year. When Jabbar was 38, during the 1985-86 season, he averaged 23.4 points and six rebounds in 79 games. That year, Parish and the Celtics outdueled Jabbar's Lakers in the NBA Finals (winning three), has played in nine All-Star games and remarkably, in his 16th year, Chief hasn't let up at all.

To measure what Parish means to Boston would be impossible, but the best way to do it is by seeing how productive he's been in the absence of others.

Over the last few years, age and injury have hit the Celtics hard. Bird has missed 142 games since 1988. McHale has missed 60 games over the past two seasons and Dee Brown played in only 31 games this year.

There's been one durable mainstay leading the Celtics, practically carrying the team on his back.

Parish has had to pick up the slack in the absence of these players: not an easy thing to ask of the oldest man in the league. However, true to form, Chief has responded, missing only four games in the last two years and leading Boston to two consecutive Atlantic Division crowns.

This season, it looked bleak, however, as the New York "Choking" Knicks held a five-game lead with only eight games remaining. The Celtics, playing without Bird, won all eight and clinched their 14th division crown in the last 23 years. Who do you think it was leading the troops? The Chief!

I think the Celtics surprised everyone. In fact, in my column, "The Mighty Have Fallen!" in the March 5 issue of The Montclairian, I talked about the then 32-26 Celtics losing their mystique. Since then, Boston won 19 of its next 24 games, to finish 51-31 and capture the crown. The Celtics knocked everyone, just like Robert Parish.

Quietly, Parish has become one of the most dominant centers of all time. This doesn't get noticed because he never speaks. With Bird and McHale doing most of the scoring and talking, Chief has focused on letting his performance do the talking.

Now Parish, supposedly in the twilight of his career, still does not say much, but his performance speaks loud and clear. It says, "Save some room in Springfield for double-zero, for whenever I decide to retire."

The 1992 NBA regular season is over, and here's a look at King's final awards:

Top Rookie: Larry Johnson's strong second half puts him ahead of Dikembe Mutombo.

Surprise Team: The Los Angeles Clippers and New Jersey Nets both beat the odds and made the playoffs.

Coach of the Year: This is a toss up. Pat Riley almost had the award in his trophy case, but the Knicks faltered at the end of the season. It's between Chris Ford of Boston, Mike Dunleavy of the Lakers and George Karl of Seattle. I think Karl should get the vote.

Most Improved Player: This is another tough call. It could be New Jersey's Drazen Petrovic, New York's John Starks, Denver's Reggie Williams or Washington's Pervis Ellison. Ellison had a great year, averaging around 20 points and 10 rebounds per game, so I'll give it to him.

Best Sixth Man: You try to choose between Detlef Shrempf and Dan Majerle. It's not an easy choice, but I think Shrempf will win his second consecutive Sixth Man Award.

Defensive Player of the Year: David Robinson gets the edge over Dennis Rodman. His defensive presence in the middle was sorely missed by San Antonio when he went down with the thumb injury.

Most Valuable Player: Michael Jordan will probably win this, but he's not the MVP of his team. The Bulls can still win without him. For this reason, I'd vote for David Robinson.

Baseball wins three out of four behind Critelli's bat

by Keith A. Idec

After having its seven-game winning streak snapped by Rutgers University last Tuesday, the MSC baseball team went right back to its winning ways last week. The Red Hawks went on to win three straight games over conference opponents before dropping a tough-luck 7-6 decision to Dominican College of New York on Tuesday.

MSC had the upper hand over its NAIA counterpart, leading 5-2 going into the bottom of the fifth. That’s when things went wrong for the Red Hawks. Dominican scored five runs in the bottom of the fifth, four of them unearned, to put them ahead 7-5. MSC manager one run more, but that was as close as they would come. Freshman Jason Scavalla took the loss for the Red Hawks, putting his record at 2-2. Left-fielder Mike Micucci. Critelli drilled a two-run homer, an RBI double and scored three runs. Micucci knocked in three runs with a double and a single.

The Red Hawks showed some depth and versatility this week. They had to alter their lineup due to a finger injury sustained by starting third baseman Rob DiLaurenzio. “The sophomore from Hazlet has been limited to pinch-running and DH duties and has missed four straight games at third base. The bulk of the offense was provided by Jennifer Flinn. The Red Hawks countered with one of their biggest innings in a long time. Flinn is hitting .390. Fyfe is also MSC’s leader in RBI with 24. The defeat dropped MSC to 13-11 (1-5 NAAC).”

Lions roar past struggling Red Hawks

by Al Iannazzone

An upset was on the minds of the Red Hawks softball team Tuesday as it travelled to Trenton to face the number one ranked team in Division III, the 30-2 Trenton State Lions. However, MSC wound up upset with the Lions. However, MSC wound up upset with the outcome as it dropped the doubleheader, 7-2 and 11-6.

It’s a very intimidating sight when you pull up to Lion Field on the campus of TSC and see “NCAA Division III Champions 1983, 1987 and 1989.” Another larger than life figure is the woman who has been stroming the Lions’ third baseline for the last 19 years. Dr. Jane Walker, the Lions’ head coach, has won 578 games in her career, good enough for first on the Softball all-time list.

MSC Head Coach Anita Kubicka enjoyed great success as a player on Walker’s ’83 World Series team, but had to put that behind her as she prepared the Red Hawks for this important conference battle.

The Red Hawks went into the twiinnal having lost three of their last four games. They needed a win to get back on their feet and improve on their 1-3 New Jersey Athletic Conference mark, but TSC’s pitching nearly stifled the Red Hawks in the opener.

MSC scored one run in the first inning as Jennifer Flinn led off the game with a double. She was sacrificed to third by Kim Drager and scored on a misplayed fly ball off the bat of Kristi Kutchinski.

The lead was erased in the bottom of inning one as MSC’s Lois Fyfe walked three consecutive Lions, including one with the bases full. TSC’s Maria Carran then cleared the bases with a double in the gap in left-center.

In the third, MSC cut the lead in half on Kutchinski’s RBI single, driving in Flinn. The Red Hawks could get no closer at TSC added three more runs in the fifth and won by that 7-2 count.

Fyfe, the losing pitcher, saw her record fall to 8-8. TSC’s winning pitcher, Becky Koenig, scattered only three MSC hits as her record improved to 16-1.

In the nightcap, the Red Hawks hit better, but fell victim to what Rick Barry calls “the Deep Hole Syndrome.” “That’s when a team falls behind early and spends the rest of the game trying to catch up, only to come up short at the end.”

With MSC trailing 3-0, Sue Stoft ripped an RBI single to drive in Fyfe. However, TSC scored five runs, despite sparkling defense by Drager, and took an 8-1 lead.

MSC added a run in the home half when Laura Judge scored on two consecutive wild pitches, but the Lions took two unearned runs in the sixth and held a 10-2 advantage.

The Red Hawks countered with one of their biggest innings in a long time. Fyfe led off with a single. Drager reached base on an error, and Kutchinski singled to load the bases. Fyfe drew a walk and brought in Flinn. Two more runs came in on ground outs by Judge and Karen Bouloucon, and Stoft scored Fyfe on a single to left. It wasn’t enough as TSC added another run in the seventh and MSC lost 11-6.

The defeat dropped MSC to 13-11 (1-3 NAAC). Fyfe suffered the loss and her record fell to 8-9. However, the Red Hawks pounded out eight hits, their most since April 3. Flinn, Fyfe and Stoft each contributed two hits in the game.

RED HAWK NOTES...MSC has outscored opponents 205-140...The squad is 7-3 at home and 12-4 on the road...When leading after six innings, MSC is a perfect 16-0...Rainouts against William & Mary and the University of Redlands will not be made up...MSC's pitching staff is expected back at third base for today's game with Adelphi at NY Tech on Long Island.
