CLUB’s drive-in cut short due to fights

by Maureen McGowan

CLUB’s annual Drive-In was held Tuesday night and was allegedly the scene of four related fights, which caused the event to shut down in the first 10 minutes of the second movie, said Campus Police.

Members of Tau Phi Beta and Zeta Beta Tau (ZBT) Fraternities were allegedly involved in the incidents. Frank DiRocco, president of ZBT, said the argument started earlier at an off-campus party, and it did not involve the fraternities as a whole, just individual members. “It was a personal thing,” he said, “right now everything is fine.”

Campus Police said no charges were pressed or injuries sustained. But the situation is under investigation, and both fraternities were in jeopardy of losing their booths at the Carnival if they could not come to an agreement.

Both sides met with Campus Police, members of CLUB, Dean of Student Activities James Harris and SGA President Tony Susco.

New computers will allow students to access their own records

by Nancy Villano

A new software package will be added to the Student Information System on the college’s main computers that will allow students to check on their status with the touch of a few buttons.

On Course is a software package that, once installed, will allow students to see their transcripts on the screen or print a copy, said Dr. Robert Lynde, Provost and Vice President of Academic Affairs.

On Course will allow students to see how many credits they have towards the major and how many credits they still need to complete the major, Lynde said.

Lynde said it may take two to three years for the bugs to be worked out of the system. Each student will have to have their own account number to access the system and a strong security system will have to be implemented to keep students from accessing other students’ records, he said.

Lynde estimated the cost of On Course to be from $10,000 to $20,000 plus added costs for the account numbers and maintaining the system.

Lynde said that right now the main concern is to enter all the majors into the computer, and to get the faculty involved and using the computers more. He said the first faculty with access to the system will be department heads and advisors. The students will be able to go to the advisor or department head to see their transcript and check on their progress, Lynde said.

Several majors have already been programmed into the system, Lynde said; however, it will take another year for all majors to be programmed in. This package will have to be updated on a regular basis to keep up with the ever-changing requirements for the majors, he said.

Lynde also said this system will eventually eliminate the final evaluation process students have with professors.

This software package is only one of the things that will be implemented to help the students. Lynde said he is “working to communicate information to the students.”

Lynde said that the main cables are already in place for the existing student computer labs that will allow the student labs to be connected to the administration system. This will allow access to On Course and allow students to send and receive E-Mail messages to and from the faculty.

Lynde is currently working to get computers into the residence halls, in the next two years, for the students to have access to around the clock.
SPEAK OUT

Human Relations Public Forum: An open microphone format will be set up to discuss the current campus climate. Participants will have an opportunity to identify concerns and issues at MSC and to voice suggestions to the Council on Human Relations (COHR). There will be two sessions today at 11 a.m. -12:30 p.m. and 3:30-5 p.m. Both sessions will be held in Kops Lounge. Refreshments served.

JOB EXPLORATION

On Monday, April 27, speakers will describe their work and discuss entry into their field. The subjects of writing and communication or law and law enforcement will be discussed from 1:30-2:45 p.m., helping professions or sports from 3-4:15 p.m. This will take place in the Student Center Ballrooms.

REGISTRATION

Academic Advising is offering pre-registration advisement services to undeclared students through April 23, in the Academic Advising Center. Hours are 9 to 11 a.m. and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday and 7 p.m. Thursdays.

SUMMER SESSIONS

The 1992 Summer Sessions catalog is now available. Copies can be found in College Hall outside the Registrar’s Office, Graduate Studies Office, Summer Sessions Office and at the Student Center information desk.

A recent Texas poll found H. Ross Perot the still unannounced presidential candidate leading the race for the November vote. Bush placed five percent behind Perot, with 30% saying they would vote for him. Clinton received support from 20% of the people surveyed.

Robert Alton Harris was executed by gas in California’s San Quentin prison on Tuesday. Harris, 39, was the first person executed in California in 25 years. He was found guilty of murder for killing two 16-year-olds in 1978. Harris, in a final statement, said, “You can be a king or a street sweeper, but everybody dances with the Grim Reaper.”

A clergyman in Buffalo was arrested for sticking a fetus in the faces of pro-abortion activists. He was arrested for “creating a physically offensive condition” when several people got sick. The police gave the fetus to a medical examiner to see if it needed to be disposed of as hazardous material or if it warranted a proper burial. Pro-abortion groups said they would use force if necessary to keep abortion clinics in Buffalo open.

Three Class One organizations get their budgets for next year from SGA

Three Class I organizations have had their '92-'93 budgets approved by the SGA.

The Latin American Student Organization (LASO) and Class I Concerts (CIC) received increases, while the College Life Union Board, CLUB, received a decrease.

Sandra Garcia, vice president of LASO, said it received an additional $4,405. She said the organization is planning on expanding the Hispanic Education and Latinismo programs. Last year, the Hispanic Education program consisted of pamphlets on different Hispanic countries. New plans include cultural seminars scheduled to focus on a different country each month including dance demonstrations and food samples.

Latinismo is a dance troupe that is being re-established. LASO member Mike Zain said, "The dances are traditional, and we need to research and understand them." Some of the dances that will be performed are La Bomba, the Merengue, and the Salsa.

CIC received an overall five percent increase. Treasurer Karen Levy said CIC's major expense is the cost of the bands, which is $33,500. A substantial increase to cover the cost of rented equipment for concerts such as sound and lights. Its hospitality budget was also increased to $3,300, this supplies the bands with food. Finally, a new addition to CIC was a historian to record its events, at a total of $75.

CLUB's budget was decreased by $7,000, bringing the total budget to $80,000. The cancellation of next year's Class I Concerts (CIC) was a historian to record its events, at a total of $75. $15,400 is allotted to cover the lights. Its hospitality budget was also increased to $3,300, bringing the total budget to $80,000. The cancellation of next year's Spring Ball is the main reason for the decrease, said Vice President Michele Morgan. Total cost for the Ball is $6,200.

The SGA has a questionnaire containing 10 questions. Students will be allowed to base their opinions on teachers and courses without having to discuss their views with others. The ideas for this process came from other schools, such as Northeastern University and the University of Massachusetts.

Sal Anderson, chairperson of the Academic Affairs Committee, says, "It can be a very useful service that SGA can provide for the faculty." Students are being given the questionnaire before or after the class is held. It will not be used to make up an entire class meeting.

Joan Ficke, vice president of the union, said, "It's an entertaining activity, but I hope students are well prepared in the conduct of the activity."

The SGA has just started doing this. It's a slow and long process. It will be done class by class when it is given. There are no guarantees as to when it will be completed.

Anderson says the goal is to get the greatest number in courses and teachers evaluated as we can. He says it's not the first time that it has been done. Several years back, students had conducted this process of evaluating teachers and courses. Although it's not the first time this has happened, it will be the first time for some.

This evaluation questionnaire will be given to students only. No faculty member is required to participate. It will not provide any guarantees for the students or for the faculty.

SGA to evaluate teachers at MSC for future students

Questionnaire to be given out to students during classes

by Filomena Martellini

The Student Government Association (SGA) attempts to evaluate teachers and courses differently for future semesters.

The SGA has a questionnaire containing 10 questions. Students will be allowed to base their opinions on teachers and courses without having to discuss their views with others. The ideas for this process came from other schools, such as Northeastern University and the University of Massachusetts.

Sal Anderson, chairperson of the Academic Affairs Committee, says, "It can be a very useful service that SGA can provide for the faculty." Students are being given the questionnaire before or after the class is held. It will not be used to make up an entire class meeting.

New food company bids taken by administration

Five contractors under consideration

by Monica Stipanov

Job security for food service workers will be an important factor in evaluating five food companies that submitted bids on Monday hoping to win a new contract from the college, said Dr. Barry G. Cohen, Assistant Vice President for Finance and chairperson of the group evaluating the bids.

The three-year contract with MSC's current supplier, Wood Food Service, Inc., will expire on June 15. Gourmet Dining, Marriott Corporation, Metropolitan's Custom Management, The ServiceMaster Co., and Wood Food Service have all submitted bids.

The group "plans to complete the evaluation process in two weeks or so," Cohen said. He was not sure of the exact date of when the new contractor will be announced.

In addition, according to Affirmative Action Meetings of 2/19 to examine service and money, the evaluating group must "take into account the affirmative action policies of all bidders, the personnel policies relative to benefits, and adhere to the principles of fair and equitable treatment of employees."

This resolution was passed by the President's Commission on Affirmative Action as a result of an internal March 19 memo to Wood employees. The memo stated "...that should another contractor win...your pay could be cut and all your vacation, benefits, seniority, etc...could be eliminated/start all over again. This possibility exists for employees at the Student Center as well as for the Blanton and Freeman facilities. A further sad possibility is that another contractor could eliminate positions or fill them with other people and/or let you go after 60 days."

President Reid responded to the resolution on March 13 with the following statement: "I am pleased to let you know that in following State affirmative action regulations for procurement, the bidders will be asked to provide their corporate affirmative action and personnel policies, and these documents will be reviewed as part of the evaluation process. In addition, there is a clause in the bid specifications requiring that the successful contractor shall hire for a probationary period of 60 days all current non-managerial employees of Wood who wish to remain at MSC."

The SGA unanimously passed a resolution on March 25 recommending "that Wood Food Service not be recontracted even if they provide the lowest bid."

An informal survey of approximately 300-400 students was completed last semester by the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee asking students their likes and dislikes as well as recommendations for improvements of the Ran, coffee shop and cafeteria.

Wood Food Service was given the results, but this semester "students came back to me saying that there were no changes," John Inverso, chairperson of the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee, said.

"The bill was pasted because "no evident changes have been made within the last semester to improve service or food quality on the part of Wood," Inverso said.

Stress reduction workshop given at Drop-In Center

by Nancy Gannon

The Drop-In Center and Human Relations Organization sponsored a "Stress Reduction Workshop" last Tuesday in Keps Lounge.

More than 40 students and faculty members attended the workshop which featured guest speaker Lorna Weinstock, a psychotherapist and expert in the field of stress reduction. Weinstock's presentation was very informal, which allowed members of the audience to participate in sharing their feelings throughout the workshop.

Lists of "Stress Exhauistion Symptoms" were passed out so participants could associate their feelings of stress with those commonly reported.

"We all experience stress in a unique way," Weinstock said. "Stress has a very definite translation into the way you act and feel."

Weinstock said some of the many symptoms of stress exhaustion include: appetite change, tension, anxiety, loss of motivation, forgetfulness, confusion, and isolation.

"Being aware of these symptoms can alert you that what you are experiencing is stress," Weinstock said.

She discussed a common exercise known as abdominal breathing, a type of breathing that incorporates the use of the abdomen rather than the chest. Proper abdominal breathing involves inhalation and exhalation solely through the use of the nostrils.

"This technique allows for deeper and slower breathing, which in turn allows the body to relax," she said.

With Weinstock's instruction, the audience practiced the breathing exercise. She suggested 20 minutes of abdominal breathing per day, to reduce daily stress.

She said, "It takes a while to get used to abdominal breathing. It should become comfortable after three weeks of practice."

Rachel Bellaff, a sophomore Fine Arts major, said, "The workshop was really good. It would be good if groups got together to practice it together."

David Schoenbaum, the director of the Drop-In Center, said he was pleased with the large turnout at the workshop.

"People really got involved. Lorna Weinstock was a great speaker," he said.

OSAU is a Class One of the SGA
La Asociación de Estudiantil del Colegio de Fin de Semana editará su propio periódico

por Loren A. Medina

El próximo mes de mayo, la Asociación Estudiantil del Colegio de Fin de Semana (WCSA), una organización clase II de la Asociación del Gobierno Estudiantil (SGA), publicará su propio periódico, el cual intentará refuerzar los lazos de interacción entre los estudiantes del Colegio de Fin de Semana, las autoridades de la escuela y los estudiantes del programa regular.

El Colegio de Fin de Semana, ha brindado la oportunidad de obtener una educación universitaria a miles de estudiantes extranjeros desde su formación en 1969. A pesar de tener 23 años de fundado, muchos de los estudiantes de MSC no saben que existe un programa que ofrece la oportunidad de aprender inglés, mientras se reciben cursos en español, la mayoría de los cuales llenan los requisitos de educación general (GER), y a la vez se acumulan créditos para la graduación.

"Uno de los objetivos principales del periódico es dar a conocer la existencia de este programa a toda la comunidad estudiantil de MSC, y que a la vez sirva de portavoz para expresar las ideas e inquietudes de los estudiantes del Colegio de Fin de Semana," comentó Jorge L. Cruz-Moctezuma, quien es estudiante de Ciencias de la Comunicación y creador de la idea de publicar el periódico. Cruz-Moctezuma, es el responsable directo de la edición, pero cuenta con un fabuloso equipo de profesores de los departamentos de Lingüística y Español e Italiano, ya que el periódico será publicado en dos idiomas: inglés y español.

"Es de gran importancia que los artículos sean escritos en ambos idiomas, si deseamos que el periódico alcancen la mayor popularidad posible. Por esta razón, he pedido la ayuda de los profesores de dichos departamentos," comentó. Entre el grupo de profesores se encuentran Nora Adams, consejera académica; profesora de inglés como segundo idioma; Iris Barriera, consejera académica; Gladis Tate, asistente del director del centro de tutoría. Por parte del departamento de Lingüística, se contarían con la colaboración de la Dra. Susana Sotiol, profesora de inglés como segundo idioma; y la Dra. Joane Engelbert, profesora de traducción. La ayuda del departamento de Español e Italiano, correrá a cargo de las doctoras Carmen Alverio y Diana Guzmán-Cruz.

Su plan fue aprobado, pero sus deseos iban más allá de eso. En el otoño del 91, Jorge comenzó a traducir sus propios artículos del español al inglés o viceversa, con el deseo de que las autoridades y estudiantes de MSC se enteraran de los acontecimientos más sobresalientes del Colegio de Fin de Semana. "Sabía que para editar un periódico que fuera leído por la mayoría de los estudiantes, este tenía que ser publicado en inglés principalmente, así que me esforzé para encontrar un nivel aceptable del idioma inglés. Ahora, escribo los artículos según el estándar de mi estado de ánimo, en algunas ocasiones los escribo en inglés y los traduco al español; y algunas veces lo hago en la forma contraria," comentó.

El nombre del periódico será: "The Weekend Times" y será patrocinado por WCSA y el departamento de Humanidades e Ciencias Sociales. Se ha abierto una invitación a todos los estudiantes de MSC que deseen escribir artículos relacionados con el programa. Los artículos pueden ser escritos en cualquiera de los dos idiomas, los mejores serán traducidos y publicados en el periódico.

"Quisiera agradecer la valiosa colaboración que me brindó el Decano del departamento de Humanidades e Ciencias Sociales, Dr. Phillip Cohen, quien contribuyó económicamente y moralmente para la realización del periódico. De la misma forma, quiero expresar mi más sincero agradecimiento a todas las personas que colaboraron en la creación del periódico," finalizó Jorge.

SGA News:
Bill passed to limit amount of money faculty can charge students for photocopies
by John Inverso

The SGA met last night and unanimously passed a bill that would limit the amount of money a faculty member could charge students for photo-copying to five dollars. Mildred Peltou, SGA legislator and author of the bill, said that this bill is to advise the faculty and students about the rules concerning money collected for photocopies. Alternatives, such as placing copies of required reading on reserve are also mentioned.

The latter was discussed and approved by a vote of 22 in favor for a total of $177,634. The budget will increase in areas such as office expenses and the prescription plan. SGA Treasurer Rob Traster said most of the $10,000 for office expenses goes to the five cent photo-copying service offered by the SGA.

The Drop-In Center budget was passed unanimously after the Director Dave Schoerbaum explained the details. There was a $112 reduction for telephone use due to the new phone system, ACUS. Other areas of funding increased, such as faculty, special programs, lectures, and conference and staff training.

Schoerbaum said there will be more programs offered next semester dealing with AIDS awareness and substance abuse. The total budget for '92-'93 is approximately $10,380.

During the meeting, several other issues were addressed. Once Rock, SGA legislator and member of CLUB, remarked on the events of the drive-in sponsored by CLUB. "People didn't give a shit. It took CLUB five months to set up this event and it was canceled because of stupidity. (See Drive-In page 1,)" Rock said. "If you have problems don't take them to student events, settle them where innocent bystanders won't be endangered."

Also, Director of Greek Life Carl Zietz announced the Greek Council debate for executive board members to be held today in the Student Center Cafeteria. He said all students are welcomed to attend and listen to what the candidates have to say.

WCSA to start its own newspaper
by Loren A. Medina

This May, the Weekend College Student Association (WCSA), a class II organization of the SGA, and the School of Humanities and Social Sciences will sponsor a campus newspaper, The Weekend Times.

The paper is a project started by Jorge L. Cruz-Moctezuma, president of WCSA, staff writer for The Montclarion and a Broadcasting major. Cruz-Moctezuma hopes The Weekend Times will create a stronger connection between Weekend College Students, the administration and weekday students.

"One of the main objectives of the newspaper is to let the student community to know about the program (Weekend College)," said Cruz-Moctezuma, "and at the same time to express the ideas and concerns of the Weekend College students."

The paper will be published in both Spanish and English in order for it to reach a wider readership. Professors from the Linguistics and Spanish/Italian Departments will assist Cruz-Moctezuma in editing the paper.

Cruz-Moctezuma said, "It is very important that the articles are written in both languages if we want the newspaper to reach as many students as possible. For this reason I have asked for help from those departments."

Anyone interested in writing for The Weekend Times may do so, and submit their articles in either English or Spanish. Those to be printed will then be translated into either language for publication.

The Weekend College program, founded in 1969, gives foreign students an opportunity to learn English while taking courses taught in Spanish. The majority of these courses fulfill General Education Requirements (GER) and earn credits for graduation.

Students sitting in the Student Center Mall on Tuesday afternoon enjoying their ritualistic relaxation time with friends probably didn’t expect to hear about an inevitable demise. The Conservation Club’s lecture series, however, prompted one speaker to say, “You’re all going to die unless you get off your asses.”

Environmental activist Tim Lawton urged students to become environmentally active; he takes trees that have been uprooted and replants them in otherwise barren areas.

“I have about 300 trees in my backyard, and my parents are becoming rather annoyed. I have to find somewhere to plant them,” Lawton said; he has difficulty in finding places that will take the trees, and often replants them alongside highways.

“I have called numerous government agencies, and they don’t even want to hear about it,” he added.

He accused people of wearing “save the Earth!” T-shirts and claiming to be environmentally aware, but then doing nothing. “It’s great for everyone to sit around and think of what they could be doing. I used to do that, but realized I actually had to get out there and do something to make a difference,” he said.

The future, in his opinion, looks bleak; too much irreversible damage has occurred. “Realistically, I don’t think we can beat this, but that doesn’t mean I’m going to stop trying,” Lawton added.

New Jersey Environmental Federation (NJEF) representative Tom Moritz had a more optimistic viewpoint. He believes if enough people are taught to make environmentally-conscious decisions, they can prevent future environmental problems.

Moritz spoke of two programs NJEF founded to teach consumers how to make environmentally correct choices. “Home Safe Home and Environmental Shoppers were designed to let consumers know that some of the products on the market today are hazardous. Alternatives are available.”

“People are conditioned to associate a nicely-colored, pleasant-smelling liquid with a clean, germ-free environment. A natural cleaner can accomplish the same thing,” Moritz said. That manufacturers are blatantly lying to consumers about products that seem environmentally safe, but aren’t. He cited the example of a trash bag that was advertised as biodegradable. “You would have to fill the entire bag with nothing but cornstarch and put it out in the direct sunlight. Even then it would only break down into smaller pieces.”

NJEF wants every consumer to know how to read labels in order to make the best choices, he added. “Consumers should know that non-toxic household products are available. We have to spread the word.”

Conservation Club member Carol Wilson added a slightly-different twist by speaking about two issues that students might relate to more easily. She discussed what happened to the trees removed as a result of the construction.

“One of the prettiest parts of the campus was destroyed. Fortunately, through protest, we got the administration to work with us and we were able to save some of the trees,” she said. Trees removed from the library area were taken to several different local areas for replanting, she added; trees removed from the McEachern area were sent to Bay Street Station.

She also discussed the campus recycling project. Students can place aluminum cans, glass bottles and white paper in the bins available in College Hall and the Student Center, she said. The Conservation Club and the administration are working to get recycling bins placed in other areas around campus. Bins for newspapers might also be available in the future.

There is a problem when students put the wrong items in the wrong bins, she said. “Glass and aluminum bins are not for trash, and trash bins are not for aluminum cans; glass bottles and white paper in the bins available in College Hall and the Student Center,” she said. The Conservation Club and the administration are working to get recycling bins placed in other areas around campus. Bins for newspapers might also be available in the future.

Stop cutting down all the trees on campus. Students should start using the recycling bins provided.

He hit me first!

Tuesday night, CLUB held its annual Drive-In in the Clove Road parking lot. Between 600 and 700 students showed up to see the two films being shown, Point Break and Hot Shots. Although the filmgoers paid for, in most cases planned to see both films, they saw only one due to a series of brawls that erupted in the audience. Ten minutes into the second film, the lights came on and the lot was cleared.

A common complaint of students here at MSC is the comatose state of campus life our college offers. It’s a shame that when an event is offered, it has to be called off halfway through because a handful of students find it impossible to behave themselves.

Presumably, most in attendance came to CLUB’s drive-in to see both films. Certainly, most in attendance did not come to get involved in a drunken donnybrook with aspirations to be ejected from the lot by Campus Police. Unfortunately, the plans of these students became inconsequential when a few allegedly liquored-up tough guys allegedly began swinging fists.

If these individuals had problems to solve that’s their business. They have the option of going about it in any manner they see fit. But there is no excuse for bringing that problem to an event such as the drive-in. A large number of people worked hard to bring the drive-in to MSC and an even larger number of people came out to it to have a good time (quite a rarity at our campus).

Unfortunately, this kind of nonsense has effects that linger beyond the event in which they take place. This week’s Carnival has had its hours curtailed because of the brawls which took place last year. Will there even be a drive-in next year? If there is, it’s a safe bet that it will be strictly policed. Too bad.

CARE-ful applause

The Montclarion applauds Wednesday’s protest by the Campaign for Affordable Rutgers Education (CARE). Faced with spiraling tuition costs, much like MSC students, lack of representation in their institution’s decision-making process, much like MSC students, and tired of being ignored by their institution’s administration, much like MSC students, the group decided upon a bold course of action, taking matters into their own hands.

Six members of CARE took over the telephone switchboard of Rutgers’ Livingston campus, refusing to leave until they were granted a meeting with the University’s president.

Unfortunately, two of CARE’s three key demands, a tuition freeze and greater representation on the university’s Board of Governors, were denied (the demand for amnesty for the protesters was granted).

One of the protesters, Ryan Ullman, sounded much like an MSC student. “It’s really obvious that [the institution’s president] doesn’t want to work with the students or care about us.”

Next time, try argyles

A few days ago, I have put an artwork of mine onto the wall in the hallway of the Calcia/Pine Arts Building. It was removed, destroyed and discarded in about an hour. More regrettable, though, is that this narrow minded, stupid and barbarous act was fully supported by one of our faculty, to whom I have talked shortly afterward.

My work was made and shown in direct reply to a painting that has been hanging in the hallway for a while. This otherwise unremarkable abstract painting which had been worked and reworked, acrashed and smudged into an almost uniform gray patch of matter would not have caught my attention, had it not been for an inscription contained in it. It read: "The Grand Style - Self referential."

I took this as a joke, a humorous remark aimed at abstract art. I also thought it was done in the conceptual style. Conceptual art is a trend, prevalent over for a decade. Its practitioners think that meaning and concept is more important in their art than its form or visual appearance. Its best, some artists managed to convey a poetic, or humorous personal content, or a comment on some social, cultural or political phenomenon. In its worst it is a pretentious pseudo-intellectual gesture made to mark its creator as a smart and up to date fellow.

My work was a joke too, in direct response to this other artwork. It was a joke through and through, and there is no supporting documentation for the complaints that were subsequently made.

"The Grand Style - Self referential." is a jolly and 'short-term thinking' subset of inferior human beings that are beyond any type of civilized improvement.

Take, for instance, any proposal to financially equalize public institutions such as schools. Opponents' rationale is absolutely racist - money gained won't help minorities in urban areas because they're not interested in learning, and money lost would hurt the higher classes, because unlike the poor, they better utilize and appreciate such educational resources.

This is not to say that all poor Americans are minorities. In fact, a recent survey by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services indicated that there are almost as many white families with dependent children receiving aid as there are black families. The actual breakdown is 40.4% Black, 38.4% White, 15.9% Hispanic and 5.6% other.

This same study also negated a couple of long-en­trusted stereotypes of welfare families. The welfare attack would have us all believe that all welfare mothers are black women, having loads of children, while intentionally getting pregnant to get as much money as they can from the welfare system.

Not true. The average welfare mother for 1989 had a total of just under two children (1.9).

Others claim that once one becomes a welfare recipient, one becomes incapable of self­ and stays on the program for life.

However, this same survey found that 50% of the welfare recipients in 1989 were on welfare for 24 months or less.

We need federal leadership that is serious about soothing racial tensions, denouncing stereotypical beliefs and stopping the internal rot in America.

To put it boldly, this amateur political scientist finds attitudes towards the poor and minorities to be a national disgrace.

joke - an act of communication. It consisted of an old tube sock stuffed with newspaper and tied with string as a few places. It also consisted of an inscription which read: "Conceptual art - very intellectual." This was a reference to itself, a parody of conceptual art, a humorous statement commending another humorous statement. I placed this work on the wall, next to the painting. I did not paint the painting, nor did I violate it in any way.

A family member replied to this in an agitated tone, with total hostility towards me and my work. He talked incoherently and with passion. It is with great difficulty that out of his rambling I have salvaged some points he made. I present these here and refuse them promptly.

Allegedly, I know nothing about painting. Also, the painting on the wall was the best on campus. I am ignorant of the background, or the references that painting referred to. I am arrogant and had no right to present my work the way I did.

Well, I do know something about painting. The professor doesn’t know me, and he has biased his judgment on this incident alone. I am an older student, and I have been an artist - a painter - for a long time. I have studied art and art-history to quite some extent, and I am familiar with much of the development of the fine arts, especially that of painting.

The painting on the wall, whatever qualities it has or has not, is not the issue here. It's "greatness" could be the subject of a further discussion. I may have misunderstood it, if such a thing can happen at all. I may have missed out on its references. But it did have a meaning for me, and it tied in well with my concerns. I formed an opinion, and my opinion is as good and as valid as anybody else's.

As regards my arrogance, I wonder, what is more arrogant? To place an artwork next to another without a permit without violating the other work in any way, or to remove, destroy and discard an artwork? I leave it to the reader.

Mine was an act of communication, part of a free exchange of ideas - something that should be at the core of higher education. And this is what the little Nazis who censored my work failed to consider. Their urgent need to remove, destroy and discard my work is reminiscent of practices in Nazi Germany and in Communist Russia. They, too, stamped out utterances of opinions at variance with theirs.

The said faculty member, whose act I have just described, could...somehow of humor, a little tolerance and a great deal of simple decency.

I would welcome a more meaningful and constructive discussion of such matters with anyone. Unfortunately, the atmosphere at our school is not favorable to any such endeavor. It's a pity.

As far as I'm concerned, my First Amendment rights are screwed up. This does not mean that we have to give up our rights to go wherever we want, when we want, dressed in whatever attire we choose!
Another satisfied customer

I must keep reminding myself that The Montclarion is student-run, and although the funding is extracted from my student SGA fees, I don’t actually reach my grubby little paw into my shallow pocket and lay down cold cash for it. This is some solace. I am sure, however, that some of the capable staff do have aspirations of someday voicing their humble opinions in print for a paycheck. This, of course, can only be assumed, but the assumption is frightening. I have chosen to believe that the students that do put their monikers in bold type surrounded by really neat computer graphics and entitled with catchy phrases do not have these aspirations. I have chosen to believe this with the intention of smiling at the editorial pages rather than laughing out loud.

The main focus of my literary admiration is Mr. Steve Garufi. Garufi is a typical hide-behind-his-pen-and-attack-easy-targets kind of editorial weasel. He chose to attack Jerry Brown this week after his painfully obvious ban/wagon Republican bashing last week. I may be blind to what A.E. Delia called “well-written and fact-supported…” (Vol. 71 no. 11) but when the easy way out is taken, it glaringly interacts with my face.

“The Republican Party is hardly representative of minorities or the poor,” (Vol. 71 no.10) These words ring so eloquently in many disgruntled voters’ ears, but who cares? Tell us something we don’t know. He seems to be answering someone. A Republican claim that the party does represent the lower class. Even Republicans don’t claim this, or at least I haven’t heard any recent. The point is that Garufi’s well-informed statements are neither insightful nor original. Surprisingly, Pat Buchanan is a conservative who would be just about as insightful as Garufi. Garufi seems to be the type that could tell us that David Duke is a really awful guy - no kidding. Thanks for the revelations, American Graffiti.

Garufi has become the object of a passionate American’s “insults,” but in his sweeping generalizations. Any Republican, Democrat, Independent or Whig will agree that one major problem with the government is exactly what Garufi is perpetuating – separation and segregation by party. The parties need to find common ground. How can they with so many political - separation and segregation by party. The parties need to tell us that David Duke is a really awful guy - no kidding. Thanks for the revelations, American Graffiti.

The real problem is not in Garufi’s juvenile “insults,” but in his sweeping generalizations. Any Republican, Democrat, Independent or Whig will agree that one major problem with the government is exactly what Garufi is perpetuating – separation and segregation by party. The parties need to find common ground. How can they with so many political analysts constantly separating their ideals and categorizing? I agree that some ideals are inherently different, but the common ideal of a better America must be stressed. Continually grouping all Republicans as rich bigots and Democrats as liberal activists is dangerous. Garufi continues his unoriginal popular rhetoric by taking swipes at Jerry Brown and his message offended.

Someone like Brown has obviously moved people to fight complicity. The fact the he is in the race getting votes with the $100 contributions and lack of organization is proof of his surging cause. Garufi’s suggestion that Brown get out of the race is ludicrous. Brown is involved in a crusade, not a campaign. He is spreading a word, not an image. Garufi, in his infinite wisdom, disregards this. He wants the inept Bill Clinton to cruise to the nomination unscathed, much like Garufi tried to crusade through his anti-Brown article without a battle from yours truly. Good luck.

Garufi has become the object of a passionate American’s words of wisdom in an ignorant society. His apathy and ignorance concerning Jerry Brown and his message offended me and should offend any other true American. I fully expect Garufi to take the route of Bill Clinton. When asked to join the battle against corruption and limit his campaign contributions to $100, Clinton just smiled and said “Well, uh….” Needless to say he didn’t accept the challenge. Let’s hope Mr. American Graffiti does.

Soon after, funds were raised through benefit shows and the organization was established as "The Washington Street Players." Moore, acting as producer and co-director, decided to do Godspell. When asked why he chose this as the first production, he stated: "We're based in a church school. I wanted to have a religious show to attract the crowd. It has to be musical, at least. Also, the first show I ever did was Godspell.

Now, in its first ever season premiere, the group is enthusiastic and ready to welcome the audience with a spectacular musical!

Godspell is Spellbinding!

by Sandra Camilleri

The Washington Street Players, a newly formed theater group of Clifton, is proud to present its debut production of Godspell, Directed by Rob Moore and Melissa Bentley of MSC. Godspell features a cast often dazzling individuals! They are Rob DeGuidice, Michele Ferentinos, Daniel Salas, Suzanne Ochs, Dorothy Dobkowski, Mike Freh (A.K.A. Ferentinos), Joe Wilson, Cheryl Gordon, Rachel Beasley, and David Nikithner.

Rob Moore, a Humanities major of MSC and Youth Minister of St. Paul's Parish in Clifton, together with Fr. Victor Mazza, Pastor of St. Paul's, conceived the idea of a theater group. One evening, when sponsoring a gym night at the parish school, Fr. Mazza asked Moore if he would like to stage a show. Moore accepted the suggestion.

Moore is no newcomer to the theater. His stage credits include the roles of Drew Lawrence in Paper Rain in the Shower and King Charlemagne in Players production of Pippin.

Now, in its first ever season premiere, the group is enthusiastic and ready to welcome the audience with a spectacular musical!

Several cast members have commented about their experiences. Rob DeGuidice, who plays Jesus, said, "Playing Jesus was incredibly hard. You have to be so many things to so many people. I had to balance being strong with being vulnerable." David Nikithner talked about the theater group stating: "I'm really glad to be a part of a creative theatre. I feel I have a second family" Daniel Salas further added: "It is enjoyable working with the cast!" And, Dorothy Dobkowski summed up her experience by stating: "I've never seen so many people pull together and be so open to each other."

Godspell takes the gospel of Matthew and sets it to music. The cast perform cohesive group numbers where song and dance are infused to tell a story. They also establish good rapport with the audience by interacting with audience members as they sing and dance. Full of mirth, each of them renders a highly spirited performance. The musical selections are uplifting to the soul!!!

The most notable scene occurs during the crucifixion of Jesus. Rob DeGuidice gives a very profound and touching performance. The staging of the crucifixion is powerfully done.

The music, based on the original score of Stephen Schwartz, is performed by Joe Battins and Jim Archer. Set design is a group effort of the directors and cast. Performances for Godspell run on April 23, 24, 25, May 1, 2, at 8p.m. with a matinee at 2p.m. on May 3 in Washington Hall, Clifton, N.J. For ticket information, call 471-3326.

The best of MSC Fine Arts Department in Manhattan gallery

By David Anderson

For most artists, being included in a gallery show in Manhattan is an event of honor and prestige. MSC has given its students an opportunity to taste a bit of that fame by mounting a show of student work in the Westbeth Gallery. From hundreds of works submitted, a faculty jury selected approximately 110 pieces, representing 60 artists. These artists are undergraduate and graduate students, and alumni of MSC. Nearly every studio in the Fine Arts Department is represented with entries.

The strength of the show lies not only its diversity, but also in the quality of the pieces on exhibit. In fact, if there is one negative comment to be made about the show, it is that there is too much to see in such a small space.

These artists have worked long and hard in their training. Especially underscored by the alumni work, this effort is evident in the fields of commercial as well as fine arts.

The Westbeth Gallery, open noon to 6p.m. every day (except Friday—open noon to 8p.m.), is located at 55 Bethune Street, between Hudson Street and the West Side Highway in West Greenwich Village. The artists’ reception will be this Saturday, April 25 from 3 until 6p.m. There will be food and live music as the college art community congregates for an afternoon of celebration. The invitation is extended to all.

McCafferty Exhibits in Gallery 1/2

by Jonathan LeVine

Leslie McCafferty, a graduating fine arts student, is exhibiting her drawings and illustrations through this week in Gallery 1/2 (Calcia student lounge). The drawings and illustrations represent a variety of subject matter ranging in animals, portraits, still lifes and nudes. The work represents a progression of work produced in her classes where she experimented with a variety of medium and technique. The drawings are rendered in charcoal, pastel, pencil, pen and ink. She has created one image through a reductive technique of etching in black scratchboard. The exquisitely etched image is of a hen rising in the early morning as she stands over her nest where a single egg lays. The sunlight shines through a window the hen stands in front of and forms a shadow off her body. The etching is similar to an illustration with its many hatched lines, which makes it a finely crafted piece of work.

Another drawing which stands out is the image of an x-acto knife. The instrument is precisely drawn with smooth, clean lines and gleaming metal. What makes the knife so threatening is the way it runs hexagonally from the right corner of the paper out into the viewer’s space. The expressionistic lines that are used for shading around the knife convey a dangerous energy as well as creating a tension through the contrast of controlled and frenzied lines.

When asked what her plans were after graduation, McCafferty replied, “Although I have no jobs lined up, I plan to get into children’s book illustration or illustration for advertising and design.” The show runs through May 24th.
This Tuesday, Fox aired “A Concert For Life- A Tribute To Freddie Mercury," and it was one of the best concert shows I have ever seen. It was refreshing to see that a benefit concert could be televised and not seem like the Energizer bunny and keep going, and going, and going. Case in point- compare this one to the past "Aid" concerts- Band Aid, Live Aid, Farm Aid, First Aid, Kool Aid, Lemon Aid, they all went on for what seemed to be forever. Marathon concerts that go on for days at a time just get annoying, and you end up switching it off in the middle to watch 90210 anyway. Live Aid was horrible. The cause was great, but who could stand to watch all those bands do their thing? The only ones that got any entertainment were the ones in the stadium, and even then, I wonder how many people thought of it as a relative that had overstayed his welcome.

Thankfully, the concert was only televised for two hours. That gave fans a chance to see their favorite bands and head off to bed. Those who really need to see the whole thing can watch MTV this Saturday for the four-hour jobbie. I was able to see Elton John, whose new hairpiece looks like someone took a bowl and trimmed around it, Metallica, Guns 'N Roses, and a bunch of others, and it left me feeling good. Not only was it a tribute to Queen’s great frontman, but a fundraiser to help kill AIDS. Keep it up, guys.

Celebrities always die in threes, it seems. Comedians lately are following suit. First, Sam Kinison died in a car wreck, and this past Monday, Benny Hill died of heart failure. It’s really sad when you think of the circumstances surrounding them both. Sam had just remarried, and was driving to Las Vegas for a gig. Benny Hill is a little different. Benny Hill died alone, with no survivors. He lived in a small apartment, although he was loaded with money. Every time he would ask a woman to marry him, they turned him down. His show was dropped by Thames Productions in 1986, but he still had quite a following, both in England and here in America. Although I cannot speak for him because I never knew him, what, conceivably, did he have to live for, outside of his fans? For an off-beat funnyman to die so alone really makes one think. It has been said that from the depths of despair comes the best of comedy. In this case, the sadness still goes on, and we lose yet another comedian that has made so many people laugh.

The scary part of it all is who will be the next one to die to complete the three. Oh, and one more thing. I’ve been hearing Sam Kinison jokes for the past week now, jokes like, “What’s the difference between Andrew Dice Clay and Sam Kinison? About six feet.” Jokes like that have all the appeal that the space shuttle Challenger jokes had. You know, ones like, “What’s the last words spoken by the shuttle commander? No, Red Light!” They are just morbid, disgusting, and a sad attempt at humor. I’ve heard AIDS jokes, Helen Keller jokes, and racial jokes that are a thousand times better than the crap that’s being heaped on Sam Kinison, and is it a tribute to Queen’s great frontman, but a fundraiser to help kill AIDS. Keep it up, guys.

29 No. Fullerton Ave. Montclair 746-7116
Convenient locations also in E. Orange and Newark

by Mark Loughlin

Dr. Max Lowe (Patrick Swayze) enters Calcutta, sarcastically named The City of Joy with a big old American cigar in his mouth and a motive of finding some sort of spiritual guidance there. Lowe has just come out of an unsuccessful operation on a young child that has professionally scared him. So, naturally to get away fromchildren, he goes to Calcutta. Maybe he actually thought there were no children there.

When Hasari (Om Puri) comes to his aid during a street fight with the local Calcutta mob, they are coincidentally thrown together for the next two hours in a string of episodes that usually end up with one of them getting hurt. You see, Hasari is new in town, too. He came when he was no longer able to pay off the moneylenders in his village. The beginning of the film has one of Hasari’s children saying that they are going to Calcutta to “become rich.”

Roland Joffe, the director whose previous work includes The Mission and The Killing Fields fails to bring the same enthusiasm to City of Joy. The biggest asset this film has, believe it or not, is the locations. While they may not be much to look at in terms of beauty, the point is driven home that these are not Hollywood sound stages. The setting alone forces the viewer into another world which they have probably never seen before. We are almost forced to be involved. Unfortunately, Mr. Swayze starts to speak some of the script, and when he asks a waiter if they have hamburgers, we kind of get the feeling that this guy is an idiot, much less a practicing doctor.

Pauline Collins adds a little credibility as the resident nurse at the local school/health clinic. She’s believable, he’s not. Om Puri is really the only one who gives a consistently good performance. His character, Hasari breaks many stereotypes that are all too present in the Western world. Ironically, it is the American doctor that needs work in the character development department. One minute he seems to be coping with the city, the next he isn’t and then he’s back to liking it again. His mood swings are in no logical order and have no real motivation, not that being in Calcutta wouldn’t be enough. When he tells Hasari that “this mercerious thing is nothing to fool around with,” we don’t feel too safe with this guy.

On the technical side, the cinematography is wonderful, and Joffe does the most with the Mark Medoff script based on Dominique LaPierre’s novel. But the script is nothing to forgive very easily. It meanders, but when it turns out to be The Godfather Goes to Calcutta, it seems that all their hard work has been wasted. City of Joy could have been a great film about human emotion and courage, instead of a mob movie set in Calcutta, which unfortunately, is all it is.

Nintendo has finally begun releasing accessories to its Super NES, the first of which is the Super Scope 6. Basically, the Super Scope 6 is a high-tech looking Zapper with the controls on the top. It rests on your shoulder like a rocket launcher, and is designed to be ambidextrous. To change it from a right-handed gun to a left, you just detach the targeting scope from one side and put it on the other. That’s it.

It’s a sleek-looking thing, I’ll give it that. The fire and pause buttons are located on top, and I had no problem in using them. There is also a switch to turn on the turbo-shot, kind of like a rapid fire toggle. All the switches are easy to get to, and are easy to negotiate. The worst thing about the beast is the targeting scope. The eyepiece is a little too far out from the eye, and I had to squint to get an accurate lock on a target. It would have been nice if the stem extended enough so if you have the Super Scope resting on your shoulder, you don’t have to lean your head forward just to look through the thing. Also, it wouldn’t hurt to make the eyepiece a little more accurate to a single television pixel. Believe me, it is helpful.

Now, the games are the same story. The games are simply higher-tech looking versions of Duck Hunt- type games. You shoot at missiles in one, aliens in another, and enemy planes in another. That’s three of the Super Six. The other three are versions of a game called Blastris, where you shoot the blocks rather than rotate them, and a Moon Mole shoot ‘em up. Blastris is a boring game, mostly because of its slow speeds, and lack of any real challenge, such as in Dr. Mario or Tetris. After a few boards, you want to die just to change to a different game. Moon Mole isn’t bad, but how excited can a person get by blasting blue moles? Remember when the NES came out? How long could you stand playing Duck Hunt before you plugged Mario in? I test my case.

All in all, Super Scope 6 isn’t a bad piece of hardware, but unless someone designs some really interesting games for it, it will just fail by the wayside as a $59.99 version of the NES’s Zapper, which is only good for three or four games out of a 200-plus game library. Nintendo says it has more games on the way for it, and I see some promise for it, but not as a hype up tool for Hagen’s Alley.

Lacrosse keeps improving by using fundamentals

Record now 8-1 as season nears end

by Jim Klossek

It’s starting to become evident to lacrosse enthusiasts that this season’s version of Red Hawks is something special. Beginning in goal and going right through midfield and attack, one will find a talented individual at virtually every position.

About the only thing the 8-1 record Red Hawks have been short of this year is some offensive punch. So far this season has been the weather. They’ve had to play the majority of their games under extremely unfavorable conditions, and last week was no exception. Playing on the slippery turf of Sprague Field last Saturday, the Red Hawks nevertheless managed to score more than 20 goals for the third straight game.

The team is now preparing for New England Institute at the end of the week. The Monclerons are expecting a close game after both teams were defeated in their last contests.

I’m very pleased with our effort,” said the fifth-year coach out of Rutgers. “We’re playing good fundamental lacrosse on both sides of the field right now, and I see us only getting better.”

Earlier in the week, MSC played host to Scranton College of Pennsylvania. Although the opportunity was different, the results were the same as the Red Hawks rolled 26-7, Van Ness (seven goals), Bruton (six) and Blaney (five goals, six assists) led MSC who had a commanding 15-4 lead at halftime.

The home team outplayed the visitors in every respect as the score indicates and ended up with an astounding 56 shots on goal for the night.

MSC now takes the road where they sport a perfect 4-0 record this season. The first stop on the three-game trip will be at Keen College. It was the Cougars who spoiled the Red Hawks fine ’90-’91 campaign by beating them in the ECAA Championship game 15-9. A year has passed and Keen had watched some of its key personnel graduate while the Red Hawks have gotten stronger, which should make things interesting at home.

RED HAWK NOTES... Blaney leads the team in scoring with 36 goals and 35 assists for 71 points...Ken Kane has a .712 save percentage and is well on his way to another outstanding year in goal...After the Keen game, the Red Hawks visit Manhattanville College on the 25th and Penn State University on the 26th before returning home for the regular season finale on May 5 against the U.S. Merchant Marines.

Track and field focused after fine Monmouth meet

by Mark A. Belnay

MSC’s track and field team has been preparing for the Penn Relays since the onset of the season, and they are less than a week from participating in the biggest track and field competition in the country, for pros and amateurs alike. Both the men’s and women’s teams have performed well all season, but this week’s competition will be made up of the country’s best, calling for solid efforts from both teams. This past weekend, MSC was at Monmouth College taking part in its final tune-up for the Penn Relays and faced some stiff competition that may have been beneficial with the trip to the University of Pennsylvania just a few days away.

Dewayne Stevens, who has been remarkable all season, led the way for the men’s team by taking second in the 100-meter dash. With performances like these, the men’s team can look forward to a fine showing at the Penn Relays this week.

On the women’s side, strong performances were turned in by the 400-meter and 800-meter relay teams and the 400-meter relay team finished third in the 400-meter relay this past weekend. Donald, Drake, Shanley Bramer and Sheringen Titus, the same team that both set a school record and qualified for the NCAA’s last week at Howard University with a time of 49.90, finished third in the 400-meter relay this past weekend. Donald, Drakes and Titus, along with Kristen Pelcjer, also finished third in the 1600-meter relay.

With both the men’s and women’s teams peaking at the right time, it will be interesting to see what happens this week at the University of Pennsylvania.

This is the culmination of the track season, and with upwards of 150,000 people attending the three-day event, MSC will have to remain focused in order to display the talent that has been shining through all season.

Blanton guides athletes to success on and off field

by Mark A. Belnay

When the Duke Blue Devils won their second straight NCAA Basketball Championship a few weeks ago, the victory could be considered another small victory for Bob Hurley and Christian Laettner became top basketball in what is supposed to be an era of leadership, Coach Mike K.

I’m not talking about Laettner or Hurley. I’m talking about the man responsible for the glow of the spotlight could you find anywhere about the shot Laettner beat Kentucky with on the final second of the 1992 NCAA title game on the defensive, which pleased Red Hawk head coach Coach John Blanton. Blanton, who was a high school track star at Lincoln University, Cyrus Jones, where he taught African-American Studies and was assistant track and field coach at Monmouth College.

With both the men’s and women’s teams peaking at the right time, it will be interesting to see what happens this week at the University of Pennsylvania.

There are four basic rules we all must live by: you don’t tug on Superman’s cape, you don’t spit into the wind, you don’t pull the mask off The O’Lone Ranger and you don’t tell Robert Parish he’s too old to play baseball.

Parish, the 38-year-old legendary center for the Boston Celtics, is like “Old Man River”—he just keeps on rolling.

Last Sunday, the Celtics needed a victory to clinch the Atlantic Division title and the second seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs. Boston traveled the Heat by 16 as Parish logged 38 minutes, scored 22 points and hauled down 19 rebounds—not bad for the oldest man in the NBA.

This is what Parish, better known as “Chief,” has done for the last 16 seasons. He’s been one of the most consistent big men in the league. Only Kareem Abdul-Jabbar’s numbers could match Parish’s 1992 stats.

Chief averaged 14.1 points and 8.9 rebounds in 79 games this year. When Jabbar was 36, during the 1985-86 season, he averaged 23.4 points and six rebounds in 79 games. That year, Parish and the Celtics outdueled Jabbar’s Lakers in the NBA Finals.

Parish is also one of only four centers to win at least three championships. The other three are George Mikan, Bill Russell and Bill Walton. In other words, Chief is in elite company and is sure to be a Hall of Famer soon after he retires, whenever that will be.

He’s 38 and plays like he’s 28. The only difference between Parish now and 10 years ago is in the size of his afro. He still plays the game like an All-Star, but he doesn’t look like one.

When you look at Parish’s 7’0” frame with his huge arms and legs, you say, “This man is so intimidating!” That’s because he is so big and strong, and he never smiles. In fact, by never changing. Parish always looks same. This is how he earned the nickname “Chief.”

Cedric Maxwell, a former teammate of Parish’s in Boston, said Parish reminded him of Chief Bromden, the huge, silent playground ringer from “One Flew over the Cuckoo’s Nest.”

However, double-zero has shown emotions, smiling, at least four times in his career, in 1980, 1981, 1984 and 1986. The last three years was because the Celtics won the championship. In 1980, he was happy to be leaving Golden State for the friendly confines of the Boston Garden.

Many people forget that Parish started his career with the Warriors. In four unhappy years with Golden State, he averaged 13.9 points and 9.5 rebounds, but was accused by the fans and press of the Bay Area of not caring whether the Warriors won or lost.

They mistook Parish’s stoic look, his poker face, for indifference. He plays to win and the Warriors and their fans know that now. It’s a trade they definitely regret and for more than one reason.

In what was considered one of the most lopsided deals in NBA history, the Warriors sent Parish and a draft pick that became Kevin McHale to the Celtics for two draft choices that became Joe Barry Carroll and Rickie Brown. You tell me, who got the better of the deal?

To measure what Parish means to Boston would be impossible, but the best way to do it is by seeing how productive he’s been in the absence of others.

Over the last few years, age and injury have hit the Celtics hard. Bird has missed 142 games since 1988, McHale has missed 60 games over the past two seasons and Dee Brown played in only 31 games this year.

There’s been one durable mainstay leading the Celtics, practically carrying the team on his back. Parish has had to pick up the slack in the absence of these players: not an easy thing to ask of the oldest man in the league. However, true to form, Chief has responded, missing only four games in the last two years and leading Boston to two consecutive Atlantic Division crowns.

This season, it looked bleak, however, as the New York “Choking” Knicks held a five-game lead with only eight games remaining. The Celtics, playing without Bird, won all eight and clinched their 14th division crown in the last 20 years. Who do you think it was leading the troops? The Chief?

I think the Celtics surprised everyone. In fact, in my column, “The Mighty Have Fallen” in the March 5 issue of The Montclarion, I talked about the then-32-26 Celtics losing their mystique. Since then, Boston won 19 of its next 24 games, to finish 51-31 and capture the crown. The Celtics snuck up on everyone, just like Robert Parish.

Quietly, Parish has become one of the most dominant centers of all time. This doesn’t get noticed because he never speaks. With Bird and McHale doing most of the scoring and talking, Chief has focused on letting his performance do the talking.

Now Parish, supposedly in the twilight of his career, still does not say much, but his performance speaks loud and clear. It says, “Save some room in Springfield for double-zero, for whenever I decide to retire.”

The Chief is headed to The Hall

The 1992 NBA regular season is over, and here’s a look at King’s final’s awards:

Top Rookie: Larry Johnson’s strong second half pulls him ahead of Dikembe Mutombo.

Surprise Team: The Los Angeles Clippers and New Jersey Nets both beat the odds and made the playoffs.

Coach of the Year: This is a toss up. Pat Riley almost had the award in his trophy case, but the Knicks faltered at the end of the season. It’s between Chris Ford of Boston, Mike Dunleavy of the Lakers and George Karl of Seattle. I think Karl should get the vote.

Most Improved Player: This is another tough call. It could be New Jersey’s Drazen Petrovic, New York’s John Starks, Denver’s Reggie Williams or Washington’s Pervis Ellison. Ellison had a great year, averaging around 20 points and 10 rebounds per game, so I’ll give it to him.

Best Sixth Man: You try to choose between Detlef Shrempf and Dan Majerle. It’s not an easy choice, but I think Shrempf will win his second consecutive Sixth Man Award.

Defensive Player of the Year: David Robinson gets the edge over Dennis Rodman. His defensive presence in the middle was sorely missed by San Antonio when he went down with the thumb injury.

Most Valuable Player: Michael Jordan will probably win this, but he’s not the MVP of his team. The Bulls can still win without him. For this reason, I’d vote for David Robinson.

The Celtic are on top again and at age 38, Robert Parish is leading the way.

All Hail The Chief

Parish and McHale teamed up with Larry Bird in 1980 and formed one of the most formidable front lines of all time. Of course, the deal paid instant dividends as the Celtics won the 1980-81 NBA Championship. Chief averaged 19 points and 9.5 rebounds that year.

Eleven years have gone by, “The Big Three” are still together and Parish is still in the center of it all. In his 12 years in Beantown, he’s led the Celtics to five NBA Finals (winning three), has played in nine All-Star games and remarkably, in his 16th year, Chief hasn’t let up at all.

After having its seven-game winning streak snapped by Rutgers University last Tuesday, the MSC baseball team went right back to its winning ways last week. The Red Hawks went on to win three straight games over conference opponents before dropping a tough-luck 7-6 decision to Dominican College of New York on Tuesday.

MSC had the upper hand over its NAIA counterpart, leading 5-2 going into the bottom of the fifth. That's when things went wrong for the Red Hawks. Dominican scored five runs in the bottom of the fifth, four of them unearned, to put them ahead 7-5. MSC managed one more run, but that was as close as they would come. Freshman Jason Scavalla took the loss for the Red Hawks, as they would come...

Wednesday, the MSC baseball team went right back to its winning ways last week. The Red Hawks swept the Glassboro State Profs in a doubleheader in Glassboro. Dixon had three hits and an RBI for MSC. Putting his record at 2-2. Left-fielder Mike Scavalla took the loss for the Red Hawks, as they would come.

The Red Hawks showed some depth and versatility this week. They had to alter their lineup due to a finger injury sustained by starting third baseman Rob DiLaurenzio. Schoenig did some shuffling around the bases...

The Red Hawks head to Rutgers Newark for a non-conference doubleheader to Ramapo scheduled for yes...

MSC added a run in the ninth inning when Laura Judge scored on two consecutive wild pitches, but the Red Hawks took their two unearned runs in the sixth and held a 10-2 advantage.

The Red Hawks countered with one of their biggest innings in a long time. Flinn was 7-3 at home and 12-4 on the road...

With MSC trailing 3-0, Sue Stoft ripped an RBI single to drive in Ferguson. However, the Red Hawks punted these opportunities by Judge and Karen Bouloucon, and Stoft scored from Ferguson on a single to the left. It wasn't enough as TSC added another run in the seventh and MSC lost 11-6.

The defeat dropped MSC to 13-11 (1-3 NJAC). Ferguson suffered the loss and her record fell to 9-9. However, the Red Hawks pounded out eight hits, their most since April 3. Flinn, Ferguson and Stoft each contributed two hits in the game.

Lions roar past struggling Red Hawks Softball team falls to number one ranked Trenton

by Al Iannazzano

An upset was on the minds of the Red Hawks softball team Tuesday as it travelled to Trenton to face the number one ranked team in Division III, the 30-2 Trenton State Lions. However, MSC wound up upset with the outcome as it dropped the doubleheader, 7-2 and 11-6.

"It's a very intimidating sight when you pull up to Lion Field on the campus of TSC and see "NCAA Division III Champions 1983, 1987 and 1989." Another larger than life figure is the woman who has been storming the Lions' third baseline for the last 19 years. Dr. June Walker, the Lions' head coach, has won 578 games in her career, good enough for first on the Softball all-time list.

MSC Head Coach Anita Kubicka enjoyed great success as a player on Walker's '83 World Series team, but had to put that behind her as she prepared the Red Hawks for this important conference battle.

The Red Hawks went into the twoball having lost three of their last four games. They needed a win to get back on their feet and improve on their 1-3 New Jersey Athletic Conference mark, but TSC's pitching nearly stifled the Red Hawks in the opener.

MSC scored one run in the first inning as Jennifer Flinn led off the game with a double. She was sacrificed to third by Kim Drager and scored on a misplayed fly ball off the bat of Kristi Kutchinski.

The lead was erased in the bottom of inning one as MSC's Lois Fyfe walked three consecutive Lions, including one with the bases full. TSC's Maria Curran then cleared the bases with a double in the gap in left-center.

In the third, MSC cut the lead in half on Kutchinski's RBI single, driving in Flinn. The Red Hawks could get no closer at TSC added three more runs in the fifth and won by that 7-2 count.

Fyfe, the losing pitcher, saw her record fall to 8-8. TSC's winning pitcher, Becky Koenig, scattered only three MSC hits as her record improved to 16-1.

In the nightcap, the Red Hawks hit better, but fell victim to what Rick Barry calls "the Deep Hole Syndrome." That's when a team falls behind early and spends the rest of the game trying to catch up, only to come up short at the end.

Red Hot frosh! MSC's Jennifer Flinn went four for seven and scored three runs in Tuesday's doubleheader against Trenton. Flinn is the Red Hawks second leading hitter at .390.

With MSC trailing 3-0, Sue Stoft ripped an RBI single to drive in Ferguson. However, TSC scored five runs, despite sparkling defense by Drager, and took an 8-1 lead.

MSC added a run in the eighth inning when Laura Judge scored on two consecutive wild pitches, but the Lions tacked on two unearned runs in the sixth and held a 10-2 advantage.

The Red Hawks countered with one of their biggest innings in a long time. Flinn was 7-3 at home and 12-4 on the road...
