CLUe's drive-in cut short due to fights

by Maureen McGowan

CLUe's annual Drive-In was held Tuesday night and was allegedly the scene of four related fights, which caused the event to shut down in the first 10 minutes of the second movie, said Campus Police.

Members of Tau Phi Beta and Zeta Beta Tau (ZBT) Fraternities were allegedly involved in the incidents. Frank DiRocco, president of ZBT, said the argument started earlier at an off-campus party, and it did not involve the fraternities as a whole, just individual members. "It was a personal thing," he said, "right now everything is fine."

Campus Police said no charges were pressed or injuries sustained. But the situation is under investigation, and both fraternities were in jeopardy of losing their booths at the Carnival if they could not come to an agreement.

Both sides met with Campus Police, members of CLUe, Dean of Student Activities James Harris and SGA President Tony Susco.

Rutgers students protest tuition hikes

by JoAnn Pringle

A group of Rutgers New Brunswick students took over the switch board on the Livingston campus and chained themselves to the radiators until they were granted a meeting with the University president to discuss the tuition freeze they were demanding.

Six of the 1,000 members of the Campaign for Affordable Rutgers Education (CARE) took over the campus switch board at 7:30 yesterday morning, said Amy Melvin, manager of the editorial services for Rutgers University. CARE is the largest organization on the New Brunswick campus, but is not recognized by any other campus body, including the student governments.

The students have three demands. First, a tuition freeze, which Dr. Francis Lawrence, president of the University, said was "not possible." Second, to install three student voting members on the Board of Governors, which is an 11 member council responsible for creating school policy. Melvin said Lawrence refused to approve the three members because it would mean restructuring the Board of Governors. The last demand, amnesty, was the only one that was really not necessary because Melvin said the Administration would not press charges or take disciplinary action as long as "everyone is left unharmed and nothing is disrupted."

Ryan Ullman, a CARE member who partook in the demonstration said they did not interfere with student services. CARE members took all calls that came into the switch board and any calls they could not handle properly were then routed to the proper places. Ullman said they did this until 10:30 a.m. when the administration disconnected the phone lines.

Melvin said that by 4:30 p.m. the school had a court order and injunction to remove the protestors, but did not do so. Ullman said they were later granted a meeting with Lawrence who gave them his word that they were given amnesty, but said he could not do anything about their other demands.

Ullman said, "It's really obvious that he (Lawrence) doesn't want to work with the students or care about us."

New computers will allow students to access their own records

by Nancy Villano

A new software package will be added to the Student Information System on the college's main computers that will allow students to check on their status with the touch of a few buttons.

On Course is a software package that, once installed, will allow students to see their transcripts on the screen or print a copy, said Dr. Robert Lynde, Provost and Vice President of Academic Affairs.

On Course will allow students to see how many credits they have towards the major and how many credits they still need to complete the major, Lynde said.

Lynde said it may take two to three years for the bugs to be worked out of the system. Each student will have to have their own account number to access the system and a strong security system will have to be implemented to keep students from accessing other students' records, he said.

Several majors have already been programmed into the system, Lynde said; however, it will take another year for all majors to be programmed in. This package will have to be updated on a regular basis in order to keep up with the ever-changing requirements for the majors, he said.

Lynde also said this system will eventually eliminate the final evaluation process students have problems with. Lynde said this software package is only one of the things that will be implemented to help the students. Lynde said he is "working to communicate information to the students."

Lynde said that the main cables are already in place for the exiting student computer labs that will allow the student labs to be connected to the administration system. This will allow access to On Course and allow students to send and receive E-Mail messages to and from the faculty.

Lynde is currently working to get computers into the residence halls, in the next two years, for the students to have access to the system around the clock.

Afghanistan leaders from the now deposed government agreed Tuesday to turn over the government to a council of guerillas. Kabul is still in the hands of communist forces but Ahmed Shah Masood’s rebel group runs the city. More than two million people have been killed and five million driven from their homes in the 14 year civil war which may turn into battles with several guerilla factions.

Sarajevo, Bosnia-Herzegovina, and part of former Yugoslav Republic has been the scene of a massive Serbian offensive in an aging civil war. As bodies litter the city streets, the Serbs continue with a campaign of guns, mortar fire, and arson. Only 28% of Bosnia’s 404 million residents are Serbian, the rest are Croats and Muslims.

A 56-year-old Yugoslavian woman was arrested for sticking a fetus in the face of pro-abortion activists. He was arrested for “creating a physically offensive condition” when several people got sick. The police gave the fetus to a medical examiner to see if it needed to be disposed of as hazardous material or if it warranted a proper burial. Pro-abortion groups said they would use force if necessary to keep abortion clinics in Buffalo open.

A New Jersey man confined to his house under a home jail program escaped and shot a 19-year-old man. The prisoner was to be kept within 150 feet of his home by an electronic anklet that was supposed to alert the Trenton Corrections Department control room. Approximately 700 prisoners are currently held at home in the 3.7 million electronic monitoring programs.

The Food and Drug Administration recommended approval of an anti-viral drug, DDC, to be used with AZT to treat AIDS symptoms. The drug is manufactured by Hoffman-LaRoche Inc. of New Jersey. The FDA panel voted 8-3 to allow the drug to be used in conjunction with AZT shortly after it denied recommendation for the use of DDC by itself.

The drug was approved after Bristol-Myers Squibb Co. showed the panel the drug was effective in clinical tests.

About 75 high school and college students rallied against the construction of incinerators in New Jersey. The students said reducing waste and recycling should replace incineration.

Three Class One organizations get their budgets for next year from SGA

by Tara Mulligan

Three Class I organizations have had their '92-'93 budgets approved by the SGA. The Latin American Student Organization (LASO) and Class I Concerts (C1C) received increases, while the College Life Union Board, CLUB, received a decrease.

Sandra Garcia, vice president of LASO, said it received an additional $4,405. She said the organization is planning on expanding the Hispanic Education and Latinísimo programs. Last year, the Hispanic Education program consisted of pamphlets on different Hispanic countries. New plans include cultural seminars scheduled to focus on a different country each month including dance demonstrations and food samples.

C1C received an overall five percent increase. Treasurer Karen Levy said C1C's major expense is the cost of the bands, which totals $33,500. $15,400 is allotted to cover the cost of rented equipment for concerts such as sound and lights. Its hospitality budget was also increased to $3,300, this supplies the bands with food. Finally, a new addition to C1C was a historian to record its events, at a total of $75. Club's budget was decreased by $7,000, bringing the total budget to $80,000. The cancellation of next year's Spring Ball is the main reason for the decrease, said Vice President Michele Morgan. Total cost for the Ball is $6,200.

Five contractors under consideration

by Monica Stipanov

Job security for food service workers will be an important factor in evaluating five food companies that submitted bids on Monday hoping to win a new contract from the college, said Dr. Barry G. Cohen, Assistant Vice President for Finance and chairperson of the group evaluating the bids.

The three-year contract with MSC's current supplier, Wood Food Service, Inc., will expire on June 15. Gourmet Dining, Marriott Corporation, Monica's Custom Management, The ServiceMaster Co., and Wood Food Service have all submitted bids.

The group "plans to complete the evaluation process in two weeks or so," Cohen said. He was not sure of the exact date of when the new contractor will be announced.

In addition, according to Affirmative Action Meetings of 2/19 to examine service and money, the evaluating group must "take into account the affirmative action policies of all bidders, the personnel policies relative to benefits, and adherence to the principles of fair and equitable treatment of employees."

This resolution was passed by the President's Commission on Affirmative Action as a result of an internal March 19 memo to Wood employees. The memo stated that should another contractor win, your pay could be cut and all your vacation, benefits, seniority, etc...could be eliminated/start all over again. This possibility exists for employees at the Student Center as well as for the Blanton and Freeman facilities. A further sad possibility is that another contractor could eliminate positions or fill them with other people and/or let you go after 60 days.

President Reid responded to the resolution on March 13 with the following statement: "I am pleased to let you know that in following State affirmative action regulations for procurement, the bidders will be asked to provide their corporate affirmative action and personnel policies, and these documents will be reviewed as part of the evaluation process. In addition, there is a clause in the bid specifications requiring that the successful contractor shall hire for a probationary period of 60 days all current non-managerial employees of Wood who wish to remain at MSC."

The SGA unanimously passed a resolution on March 25 recommending that "Wood Food Service not be recontracted even if they provide the lowest bid."

An internal survey of approximately 300-400 students was completed last semester by the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee asking students their likes and dislikes as well as recommendations for improvement of the Rap, coffee shop and cafeterias.

Wood Food Service was given the results, but this semester "students came back to me saying that there were no changes," John Inverso, chairperson of the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee said.

The bill was passed because "no evident changes have been made within the last semester to improve service or food quality on the part of Wood," Inverso said.

SGA to evaluate teachers at MSC for future students

Questionnaire to be given out to students during classes

by Filomena Martellini

The Student Government Association (SGA) attempts to evaluate teachers and courses differently for future semesters.

The SGA has a questionnaire containing 20 questions. Students will be allowed to base their opinions on teachers and courses without having to discuss their views with others. The ideas for this process came from other schools, such as Northeastern University and the University of Massachusetts.

Sal Anderson, chairperson of the Academic Affairs Committee, says, "It can be a very useful service that SGA can provide. Life here at MSC is completely in their charge of this evaluation."

Faculty does not have to participate in this. It will be their own decision to make. Students will be given the questionnaire before or after the class is held. It will not be used to make up an entire class meeting.

Joan Ficke, vice president of the union, said, "It's an enterprise-thinking activity, but I hope students are well prepared in the conduct of the activity."

The SGA has just started doing this. It's a slow and long process. It will be done class by class when it is given. There are no guarantees as to when it will be completed.

Anderson says the goal is to get the greatest number in courses and teachers evaluated as we can.

It says it's not the first time that it has been done. Several years back, students have conducted this process of evaluating teachers and courses. Although it's not the first time this has happened, it will be the first time for some.

This evaluation questionnaire will be given to students only. No faculty member is required to participate. It will not provide any guarantee for the students or for the faculty.

Stress reduction workshop given at Drop-In Center

by Nancy Gannon

The Drop-In Center and Human Relations Organization sponsored a "Stress Reduction Workshop" last Tuesday in Kops Lounge.

More than 40 students and faculty members attended the workshop which featured guest speaker Lorna Weinstock, a psychologist and expert in the field of stress reduction. Weinstock's presentation was very informal, which allowed members of the audience to participate by sharing their feelings throughout the workshop.

Lists of "Stress Exhaustion Symptoms" were passed out so participants could associate their feelings of stress with those commonly reported.

"We all experience stress in a unique way," Weinstock said. "Stress has a very definite translation into the way you act and feel."

Weinstock said some of the many symptoms of stress exhaustion include: appetite change, tension, anxiety, loss of direction, forgetfulness, confusion, and isolation.

"Being aware of these symptoms can alert you that what you are experiencing is stress," Weinstock said.

She discussed a common exercise known as abdominal breathing, a type of breathing that incorporates the use of the abdomen rather than the chest. Proper abdominal breathing involves inhalation and exhalation solely through the use of the nostrils.

"This technique allows for deeper and slower breathing, which is in turn allows the body to relax," she said.

With Weinstock's instruction, the audience practiced the breathing exercise. She suggested 20 minutes of abdominal breathing per day, to reduce daily stress.

She said, "It takes a while to get used to abdominal breathing. It should become comfortable after three weeks of practice."

Rachel Belfort, a sophomore Fine Arts major, said, "The workshop was really good. It would be good if groups got together to practice with other people and/or let you go after 60 days."

President Reid responded to the resolution on March 13 with the following statement: "I am pleased to let you know that in following State affirmative action regulations for procurement, the bidders will be asked to provide their corporate affirmative action and personnel policies, and these documents will be reviewed as part of the evaluation process. Bill passed to limit amount of money faculty can charge students for photocopies
by John Inverso

The SGA met last night and unanimously passed a bill that would limit the amount of money a faculty member could charge students for photo-copying to five dollars. Mildred Pelot, SGA legislator and author of the bill, said that this bill is to advise the faculty and students about the rules concerning money collected for photo-copies. Alternatives, such as placing copies of required reading on reserve are also mentioned. She said this is a suggestion and that the only way it can be carried out is to make students aware of it, and have them enforced.

Director of Academic Affairs Cherie Dubin said, "The bill has the support of the administration and it is in the best interest of the students. If a faculty member violates this bill, then the students have the right to go to the department head or even Dr. Lynde, Provost for Academic Affairs."

Two budgets were discussed in detail by the legislature, the Drop-In Center and the SGA. The latter was discussed and approved by a vote of 22 in favor for a total of $177,634. The budget will increase in areas such as office expenses and the prescription plan. SGA Treasurer Rob Traster said most of the $10,000 for office expenses goes to the five cent photo-copying service offered by the SGA.

The Drop-In Center budget was passed unanimously after the Director Dave Schroebaum explained the details. There was a $112,200 reduction for telephone use due to the new phone system, ACUS. Other areas of funding increased, such as security, special programs, lectures, and conference and staff training.

Schroebaum said there will be more programs offered next semester dealing with AIDS awareness and substance abuse. The total budget for '92-'93 is approximately $103,380.

During the meeting, several other issues were addressed. Sam Rock, SGA legislator and member of CLUB, reported on the events of the Drive-In sponsored by CLUB. "People didn't give a shit. It took CLUB five months to set up this event and it was canceled because of stupidity. (See Drive-In page 1.)" Rock said. "If you have brains don't take them to student events, settle them where innocent bystanders won't be endangered."

Also, Director of Greek Life Carl Ziets announced the Greek Council debate for executive board members to be held today in the Student Center Cafeteria. He said all students are welcomed to attend and listen to what the candidates have to say.

WCSA to start its own newspaper
by Loren A. Medina

This May, the Weekend College Student Association (WCSA), a class II organization of the SGA, and the School of Humanities and Social Sciences will sponsor a campus newspaper, The Weekend Times.

The paper is a project started by Jorge L. Cruz-Moctezuma, president of WCSA, staff writer for The Montclarion and a Broadcasting major. Cruz-Moctezuma hopes The Weekend Times will create a stronger interaction between Weekend College Students, the administration and weekday students.

"One of the main objectives of the newspaper is to let the student community to know about the program (Weekend College)," said Cruz-Moctezuma, "and at the same time to express the ideas and concerns of the Weekend College students."

The paper will be published in both Spanish and English in order to it reach a wider readership. Professors from the Linguistics and Spanish/Italian Departments will assist Cruz-Moctezuma in editing the paper.

Cruz-Moctezuma said, "It is very important that the articles are written in both languages if we want the newspaper to reach as many students as possible. For this reason I have asked for help from those departments."

Anyone interested in writing for The Weekend Times may do so, and submit their articles in either English or Spanish. Those to be printed will then be translated into the other language for publication.

The Weekend College program, founded in 1959, gives foreign students an opportunity to learn English while taking courses taught in Spanish. The majority of these courses fulfill General Education Requirements (GER) and earn credits for graduation.

La Asociación de Estudiantil del Colegio de Fin de Semana editará su propio periódico
por Loren A. Medina

El próximo mes de mayo, la Asociación Estudiantil del Colegio de Fin de Semana (WCSA), una organización clase II del Instituto de Estudiantes (SGA), publicará su propio periódico, el cual intentará reforzar los lazos de mayor popularidad posible. Por esta razón, he pedido la ayuda de los profesores de dichos departamentos," comentó.

Entre el grupo de profesores se encuentran Nora Adams, consejera académica y profesora de inglés como segundo idioma; Iris Barriera, consejera académica; Gladis Tate, asistente del director del centro de tutoría. Por parte del departamento de Lingüística, se contará con la colaboración de la Dra. Susana Sotillo, profesora de inglés como segundo idioma; y la Dra. Joane Engelbert, profesora de traducción.

La ayuda del departamento de Español e Italiano, por otro lado, será patrocinado por WCSA y el departamento de Humanidades y Ciencias Sociales. Se ha abierto una convocatoria a todos los estudiantes de MSC que deseen participar en la creación del programa, "El ha ejercido la presión de SAC hasta que me esforzé para alcanzar un nivel aceptable del idioma inglés. Ahora, escribo los artículos en inglés y los traduzco al español; y algunas veces lo hago en la forma contraria," comentó.

El nombre del periódico será: "The Weekend Times" y será patrocinado por WCSA y el departamento de Humanidades y Ciencias Sociales. Se ha abierto una invitación a todos los estudiantes de MSC que deseen escribir artículos relacionados con el programa. Los artículos pueden ser escritos en cualquiera de los dos idiomas, los mejores serán traducidos y publicados en el periódico.

"Quisiera agradecer la valiosa colaboración que me brindó el Decano del departamento de Humanidades y Ciencias Sociales, Dr. Phillip Cohen, quien contribuyó económicamente y moralmente para la realización del periódico. De la misma forma, quiero expresar mi más sincero agradecimiento a todas las personas que colaborarán en la creación del periódico," finalizó Jorge.

It's time to become environmentally aware

by Laurie-Elaine Matrician

Students sitting in the Student Center Mall on Tuesday afternoon enjoying their ritualistic relaxation time with friends probably didn't expect to hear about their inevitable demise. The Conservation Club's lecture series, however, prompted one speaker to say, "You're all going to die unless you get off your asses."

Environmental activist Tim Lawton urged students to become environmentally active; he takes trees that have been uprooted and replants them elsewhere.

"I have about 300 trees in my backyard, and my parents are becoming rather annoyed. I have to find somewhere to plant them," Lawton said; he has difficulty in finding places that will take the trees, and often replants them alongside highways.

"I have called numerous government agencies, and they don't even want to hear about it," he added.

He accused people of wearing "Save the Earth!" T-shirts and claiming to be environmentally aware, but then doing nothing.

"It's great for everyone to sit around and think of what they could be doing. I used to do that, but realized I actually had to get out there and do something to make a difference," he said.

"Realistically, I don't think we can beat this, but ends with every student and faculty member on this campus." Recycling can make a difference if everyone does their part.

"One and a half acres of tropical rainforests are destroyed every second," he said.

American companies mine in the rainforests for tin, copper, aluminum and wood; during these mining processes, thousands of species of trees, plants, insects and animals are destroyed, he said.

He suggested that Americans utilize their resources more effectively as a step toward preventing further rainforest destruction. "We need to stop looking at products as things that make our lives a little easier. These items might be short-term gains, but in the long-run, we will pay for the loss of the rainforests over and over again," he said.

Keating added that consumers should use their dollars to sway the policies of companies that are harming the environment. "How you spend your dollar in the long-run will determine if you and I get to breathe the air we do now," he said.

"Start using mass transit at least once a week and walk more often, instead of using cars."

"Glass and aluminum bins are not for trash, but ends with every student and faculty member on this campus." Recycling can make a difference if everyone does their part.

"The process begins with the administration, but ends with every student and faculty member on this campus."

Finally, Tim Keating of Rainforest Relief talked about the destruction of the world's tropical rainforests. "One and a half acres of rainforest are destroyed every second," he said.

American companies mine in the rainforests for tin, copper, aluminum and wood; during these mining processes, thousands of species of trees, plants, insects and animals are destroyed, he said.

"Don't leave here thinking of an aluminum can as an aluminum can. Think of it as a little piece of the rainforest saved," Keating said.

CAMPUS: The Community Speaks

What can we do to save the Earth?

Stop cutting down all the trees on campus. Students should start using the recycling bins provided.

Start using mass transit at least once a week and walk more often, instead of using cars.

We definitely have to stop littering and start using garbage cans.

He hit me first!

Tuesday night, CLUB held its annual Drive-In in the Clove Road parking lot. Between 600 and 700 students showed up to see the two films being shown, "Point Break" and "Hot Shots." Although the filmgoers paid for, and in most cases planned to see both films, they saw only one due to a series of brawls that erupted in the audience. Ten minutes into the second film, the lights came on and the lot was cleared.

A common complaint of students here at MSC is the comatose state of campus life our college offers. It's a shame that when an event is offered, it has to be called off halfway through because a handful of students find it impossible to behave themselves.

Presumably, most in attendance came to CLUB's drive-in to see both films. Certainly, most in attendance did not come to get involved in a drunken donnybrook with aspirations to be ejected from the lot by Campus Police. Unfortunately, the plans of these students became inconsequential when a few allegedly liquored-up tough guys allegedly began swinging fists.

If these individuals had problems to solve that's their business. They have the option of going about it in any manner they see fit. But there is no excuse for bringing that problem to an event such as the drive-in. A large number of people worked hard to bring the drive-in to MSC and an even larger number of people came out to have a good time (quite a rarity at our campus).

Unfortunately, this kind of nonsense has effects that linger beyond the event in which they take place. This week's Carnival has had its hours curtailed because of the brawls which took place last year. Will there even be a drive-in next year? If there is, it's a safe bet that it will be strictly policed. Too bad.

CARE-ful applause

The Montclarion applauds Wednesday's protest by the Campaign for Affordable Rutgers Education (CARE). Faced with spiraling tuition costs, much like MSC students, lack of representation in their institution's decision-making process, much like MSC students, and tired of being ignored by their institution's administration, much like MSC students, the group decided upon a bold course of action, taking matters into their own hands.

Six members of CARE took over the telephone switchboard of Rutgers' Livingston campus, refusing to leave until they were granted a meeting with the University's president.

Unfortunately, two of CARE's three key demands, a tuition freeze and greater representation on the university's Board of Governors, were denied (the demand for amnesty for the protesters was granted).

One of the protesters, Ryan Ullman, sounded much like an MSC student. "It's really obvious that [the institution's president] doesn't want to work with the students or care about us."

commenting on the fracas at Tuesday night's drive-in, p.5
Earth Day, Schmeartday Day

I have chosen to write this week's column on the abomination called Earth Week.

First of all, I would like to express my great dislike for all special days, weeks and months for the furbies that are not one-fifth of the race that you ever see African American events in predominately white communities is during Black History Month, evisceratingly effective cultural education on Africa to one month. This practice leaves this area to be foreign and forlorn for 11 months of the year. Earth Days and Weeks do much the same. Everyone gets together for a few days and talks about environmental issues, and then most people go back to their own lives for the rest of the year.

We have to do more than just put on buttons, shirts and bumper stickers with messages about saving the environment. We have to address problems, find solutions and present them to our legislators. We must force them to hear us and act. If it takes letters, votes, boycotts or demonstrations, we must do what is needed to force action. We cannot continue to sit back and hope for action.

When we start showing businesses and politicians that our voice is the real power, they will be forced to act. As it stands now, they hear little or nothing and do much the same. When we speak out, we force them to take notice of the issues and show their true colors.

President Bush, the big business politician president, is showing how grey he is on green issues. He opposes limiting car emissions and investing in alternative fuel technology. He is willing to send young men to war and the rest of the planet to death to preserve the status quo. He doesn't need to read our various "Save the Earth" stickers, iron-on and pins. People like George use economic reasons to defend their inaction. It must be made clear that there is no need for economics if there is no land, water or air to live in.

If politicians and CEO's want to act like nothing is happening, we have to show them they will lose money and/or votes if they don't change. We can only be ignored so long.

If you choose to remain silent, I hope I'll at least get to laugh at you and say, "I told you so as you die from pollution or a hole in the sky." I sincerely mean that. It is time today, because there will not be a tomorrow unless we start to reduce pollution, recycle and clean up the messes we have already made.

Lyndon LaRouche and his supporters like to call people like me "Eco-fascists" because environmental legislation and restrictions on business have hurt American economics. It has, but for only one reason: other nations do not have to meet the same restrictions we do. Therefore, they are able to produce equal or better products for less money, thus, taking business away from America, and ultimately, jobs from us. The easiest and most effective way to remedying the situation is to ban the import of products created in factories or farms that do not meet the same environmental standards as equivalent American companies.

Stop celebrating and start doing something. It took me five years of thinking about problems before I finally took decisive action and started planting trees. Make your voice be heard, your ideas acknowledged and received or make the politicians and businesses pay if they ignore you.

Tomorrow is too late and today may not be soon enough. These problems are real. I am not a zealot. Unless we can find a way to live on another planet, we must change or die. Remember, other nations need American markets more than we need them. If we force them to meet the same standards as we should, they will comply.

It's time we start living today in a manner that will let us live tomorrow.

Will the poor ever get their fair share?

Whenever the economy takes a sudden downturn, it's always the poor who bear the brunt of the suffering. There are many Americans that are slipping into the economic underclass. They attend inferior schools, live without health insurance or even lack shelter. Sadly, the plain truth is that our federal government has neglected to enact effective strategies to remedy such social ills.

A very informative article in The Economist details the damaging effects to inner cities by the supply-side policies of the Reagan and Bush Administrations. It seems as though while cutting the Housing & Urban Development budget by almost 70 percent in real dollars from 1983 to 1989, the rich in this same period received four times more in federal housing subsidies than the poor.

Yes, it's true. The top-one-fifth retained $49.9 billion in real estate tax breaks, while the lowest one-fifth of Americans received a comparatively paltry $14.9 billion in public housing assistance.

Such examples are just clearer indications that our past two conservative presidents have put the financial interests of the rich above anything else.

Opponents of domestic social spending cry out the ol' adage "You can't throw money at a problem and expect it to go away." Yet it was believed by most that if we threw enough money into the defense of Western Europe, we could wipe out the threat of Nazism and Communism. We're also the same nation that agrees that donating barrels full of money to medical charities is the best thing to do to help find cures for fatal diseases. Also, I'm sure there wouldn't be one living soul on this campus that would argue that an increase in state funds to MSC would be useless, because money doesn't make problems go away.

This illogical belief, to put it mildly, is racist. Our nation (you know who you are) callously legitimizes the snubbing of the "poor, they better utilize and appreciate such educational resources.

This is not to say that all poor Americans are minorities. In fact, a recent survey by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services indicated that there are almost as many white families with dependent children receiving aid as there are black families. The actual breakdown is 40.4% Black, 38.4% White, 15.9% Hispanic and 5.6% other.

This same study also negated a couple of long-en­trenched stereotypes of welfare families. The welfare attackers would like to have us all believe that all welfare mothers are black women, having loads of children, while intentionally getting pregnant to get as much money as they can from the welfare system.

Not true. The average welfare mother for 1989 had a total of just under two children (1.9).

Others claim that once one becomes a welfare recipient, one becomes an incapable lazy and stays on the program for life.

However, this same survey found that 50% of the welfare recipients in 1989 were on welfare for 24 months or less. We need federal leadership that is serious about soothing racial tensions, denouncing stereotypes of groups and stopping the internal rot in America. To put it boldly, this amateur political scientist finds attitudes towards the poor and minorities to be a national disgrace.

Next time, try argyles

A few days ago, I have put an artwork of mine onto the wall in the hallway of the Callicia/Fine Arts Building. It was removed, destroyed and discarded in about an hour. More regrettable, though, is that this narrow minded, stupid and barbarous act was fully supported by one of our faculty, to whom I have talked shortly afterward.

My work was made and shown in direct reply to a painting that has been hanging in the hallway for a while. This otherwise unremarkable abstract painting which had been worked and reworked,acked and summed into an almost uniform gray patch of matter would not have caught my attention, had it not been for an inscription contained in it. It read: "The Grand Style - Self referential."

I took this as a joke, a humorous remark aimed at abstract art. I also thought it was done in the conceptual style. Conceptual art is a trend, prevalent for over a decade. Its practitioners think that meaning and concept is more impor­tant in their art than in form or visual appearance. In its best, some artists managed to convey a poetic, or humorous personal content, or a comment on some social, cultural or political phenomenon. In its worst it is a pretentious pseudo-intellectual gesture made to mark its creator as a smart and up to date fellow.

My work was a joke too, in direct response to this other

Just think of the trouble there'd be if the carnival had bumper cars

On April 21, College Life Union Board (CLUB) held their annual drive-in movie. It has consistently been one of the most popular and entertaining events on campus. Unfortunately, the program had to be terminated early this year because of a fight that broke out between two social Greek organizations. As a result of this fight, pandemonium broke out in the lots and everyone gathered to see the "action," rather than watch the movies. This resulted in the Campus Police shutting down the program.

The members of CLUB are extremely pestered by the actions of these groups. We put five months worth of work and almost $4,000 into this program, not to mention the several hours it took to help the crew set up and break down the components.

Now a whole bunch of you claim that you couldn't possibly give a shit about CLUB and their money, but we would like to remind all of you that every student spends $3 a credit: up to a $36 maximum for student activities.

Now $36 may not seem like a lot of money, but when you multiply that figure by several thousand undergraduate students, you wind up with a lot of money, and a lot of this money was wasted on Tuesday night when these two groups decided to act like nursery school children instead of college students.

...a lot of people who actually came to have a good time and watch the movies instead of get drunk and fight with other people were terribly disappointed.

Also a lot of people who actually came to have a good time and watch the movies instead of get drunk and fight with other people were terribly disappointed.

We are much more upset about the fact that these two groups ruined the event for a lot of people who came to have a good time without causing any problems than we are about the actual fight itself. If you have to act like assholes and have a fight, please do it in a place where innocent people will not have to suffer for your actions.

On a final note, we would like to thank the organizations who started the fight for single-handedly destroying the efforts of five months worth of hard work. Furthermore, we would like to thank them for ruining what could have been a great time for several hundred people.

Carnival's starting tonight, folks. Why don't you see a movie, have a good time, and take back the night! Together, we can create a society, wherever we want, when we want, dressed in whatever attire we choose!

As women growing up in this society, we practice a variety of behaviors in order to protect ourselves... This does not mean that we have to give up our rights to go wherever we want, when we want, dressed in whatever attire we choose!

As women growing up in this society, we practice a variety of behaviors in order to protect ourselves. We all know the sound of footsteps behind us. We are all aware of the danger we face merely as a fact of being female. This does not mean that we have to give up our rights to go wherever we want, when we want, dressed in whatever attire we choose! To the women of MSC, I ask you to unite and take back the night! Together, we can create a society, or at least a campus, which respects women and all people's rights.

Another satisfied customer

I must keep reminding myself that The Montclarion is student-run, and although the funding is extracted from my student SGA fees, I don't actually reach my grubby little paw into my shallow pocket and lay down cold cash for it. This is some solace. I am sure, however, that some of the capable staff do have aspirations of someday voicing their humble opinions in print for a paycheck. Of this, of course, can only be assumed, but the assumption is frightening. I have chosen to believe that the students that do put their monikers in bold type surrounded by really neat computer graphics and entitled with catchy phrases do not have these aspirations. I have chosen to believe this with the intention of smiling at the editorials pages rather than laughing out loud.

The main focus of my literary admiration is Mr. Steve Garufi. Garufi is a typical hide-behind-his-pen-and-attack-easy-targets kind of editorial weasel. He chose to attack Jerry Brown this week after his painfully obvious band-wagon Republican bashing last week. I may be blind to what A.E. Delia called "well-written and fact-supported..." (Vol. 71 no. 11) but when the easy way out is taken, it glaringly in front of my face.

"The Republican Party is hardly representative of minorities or the poor." (Vol. 71 no. 10) These words ring so eloquently in my mind these ears, but who cares? Tell us something we don't know. He seems to be answering some Republican claim that the party favors represent the lower class. Even Republicans don't claim this, or at least I haven't heard any recent point. The point is that Garufi's well-informed statements are neither insightful nor original.

Saying that Pat Buchanan is a conservative would be just as insightful. Garufi seems to be the type that could tell us that David Duke is a really awful guy - no kidding. Thanks for the revelations, American Graffiti.

The real problem is not in Garufi's juvenile "insights," but in his sweeping generalizations. Any Republican, Democrat, Independent or Whig will agree that one major problem with the government is exactly what Garufi is perpetuating - separation and segregation by party. The parties need to find common ground. How can they with so many political-quarrels and attacks in their back yard.

Like most of the critics of Jerry Brown, Garufi takes the common road of calling Brown a hypocrize. Yes, Jerry Brown was the champion of special interests at one point, and he did fight for no limits on campaign contributions, but that isn't the point. Who better to beat the system of our dysfunctional government than someone from the inside? Who has dubbed Brown unectable and phony? The politicians and media that he is attacking? The government will not fix itself. However, a complete outsider cannot get in and fix what he knows nothing about.

It will take someone who has experienced the evils himself. Any candidate that wants to radically change things is bel- led by the politicians in power because they know he/she is usually right. People on the inside are scared of Brown and they should be.

"Why doesn't he accept the challenge?"

"The real problem is not in Garufi's juvenile "insights," but in his sweeping generalizations. Any Republican, Democrat, Independent or Whig will agree that one major problem with the government is exactly what Garufi is perpetuating - separation and segregation by party. The parties need to find common ground. How can they with so many political-quarrels and attacks in their back yard.

Double Dubin!

1) And some people take 'em on a bet

Too many courses are listed as taught by "staff" in the registration booklet. Often, this is because the department is not sure who will teach it. Also, many times a listing of "staff" next to a course is met with doubts whether the students know it could be taught by the same faculty. MSC hire adjuncts because it lacks the funds for full professors, or doesn't consider it a priority. Administrators say the lack of funds for full professors is due to state cuts to be used for higher education.

Professor Auliano's analogy of the pay of an adjunct to that of a full professor as compared to a car mechanic getting $4 an hour versus $28 an hour indicates adjuncts will put less effort into teaching, hurting the quality of education provided.

This, however, will not deter students from enrolling in "staff"-taught courses for many reasons. Some of which include: getting a course not usually offered, needing a specific course to graduate, feeling it could be easier and they can prop up a sagging GPA, or not liking the named professor teaching another section or simply for variety.

Telling students they'll be getting an underpaid adjunct won't get me a higher salary or make students stop registering for adjunct-taught courses. Putting more funds toward the hiring of full-time faculty will.

2) Define "snaz," would you?

Headlines have been getting sloppily lately. I mean, like last week's issue's letter to the editor by SGA President Anthony Susco about the Judicial Committee's verdict on student SGA President David Blachier's comments need not be heard.

"Little Caesar's Cheese Lover". Sounds like an article on pizza. Many readers skipped it because the headline was misleading.

Stop trying to hype letters with empty headlines. Headlines should not only catch the attention of readers, but also give an accurate representation of the article.

Godspell is Spellbinding!

by Sandra Camilleri

The Washington Street Players, a newly formed theatre group of Clifton, is proud to present its debut production of Godspell, Directed by Rob Moore and Melissa Bentley of MSC. Godspell features a cast often dazzling individuals! They are Rob DelGuidice, Michele Ferentinos, Daniel Salas, Suzanne Ochs, Dorothy Dobkowski, Mike Fresh (A.K.A. Ferentinos), Joe Wilson, Cheryl Gordon, Rachael Beasley, and David Nikiither.

Rob Moore, a Humanities major of MSC and Youth Minister of St. Paul’s Parish in Clifton, together with Fr. Victor Mazza, Pastor of St. Paul’s, conceived the idea of a theatre group. One evening, when sponsoring a gym night at the parish school, Fr. Mazza asked Moore if he would like to stage a show. Moore accepted the suggestion.

Moore is no newcomer to the theatre. His stage credits include the roles of Drew Lawrence in Paper Rain in the Shower and King Charlemagne in Players production of Pippin.

Now, in its first ever season premiere, the group is enthusiastic and ready to welcome the audience with a spectacular musical!

Soon after, funds were raised through benefit shows and the organization was established as “The Washington Street Players.” Moore, acting as producer and co-director, decided to do Godspell. When asked why he chose this as the first production, he stated: “We’re based in a church school. I believe in the alumni work, this effort is evident in students an opportunity to taste a bit of that honor and prestige. MSC has given its gallery show in Manhattan is an event of such a small space. It has to be musical, at least. Also, the first show I ever did was Spellbinding!”

Moore accepted the suggestion.

Godspell takes the gospel of Matthew and sets it to music. The cast perform cohesive groups numbers where song and dance are infused to tell a story. They also establish good rapport with the audience by interacting with audience members as they sing and dance. Full of mirth, each of them renders a highly spirited performance. The musical selections are uplifting to the soul!!!

The most notable scene occurs during the crucifixion of Jesus. Rob DelGuidice gives a very profound and touching performance. The staging of the crucifixion is powerfully done.

The music, based on the original score of Stephen Schwartz, is performed by Joe Battista and Jim Archer. Set design is a group effort of the directors and cast.

Performances for Godspell run on April 23, 24, 25, May 1, 2, at 8 p.m. with a matinee at 2 p.m. on May 3 in Washington Hall, Clifton, N.J. For ticket information, call 471-3326.

The best of MSC Fine Arts Department in Manhattan gallery

By David Anderson

For most artists, being included in a gallery show in Manhattan is an event of honor and prestige. MSC has given its students an opportunity to taste a bit of that fame by mounting a show of student work at the Westbeth Gallery. From hundreds of works submitted, a faculty jury selected approximately 110 pieces, representing 60 artists. These artists are undergraduate and graduate students, and alumni of MSC. Nearly every studio in the Fine Arts Department is represented with entries.

The strength of the show lies not only its diversity, but also in the quality of the pieces on exhibit. In fact, if there is one negative comment to be made about the show, it is that there is too much to see in such a small space.

These artists have worked long and hard in their training. Especially underscored by the alumni work, this effort is evident in the fields of commercial as well as fine arts.

The Westbeth Gallery, open noon to 6 p.m. every day (except Friday—open noon to 8 p.m.), is located at 55 Bethune Street, between Hudson Street and the West Side Highway in West Greenwich Village. The artists’ reception will be this Saturday, April 25 from 3 until 6 p.m. There will be food and live music as the college art community congregates for an afternoon of celebration. The invitation is extended to all.

McCafferty Exhibits in Gallery 1/2

by Jonathan LeVine

Leslie McCafferty, a graduating fine arts student, is exhibiting her drawings and illustrations through this week in Gallery 1/2 (Caldic student lounge). The drawings and illustrations represent a variety of subject matter ranging in animals, portraits, still lifes and nudes. The work represents a progression of work produced in her classes where she experimented with a variety of medium and technique. The drawings are rendered in charcoal, pencil, pen and ink.

She has created one image through a reduction technique of etching in black scratchboard. The exquisitely etched image is of a hen rising in the early morning as she stands over her nest where a single egg lays. The sunlight shines through a window the hen stands in front of and forms a shadow off her body. The etching is similar to an illustration with its many hatched lines, which makes it a finely crafted piece of work.

Another drawing which stands out is the image of an x-acto knife. The instrument is precisely drawn with smooth, clean lines and gleaming metal. What makes the knife so threatening is the way it runs hexagonally from the right corner of the paper out into the viewer’s space. The expressionistic lines that are used for shading around the knife convey a dangerous energy as well as creating a tension through the contrast of controlled and frenzied lines.

When asked what her plans were after graduation, McCafferty replied, “Although I have no jobs lined up, I plan to get into childrens book illustration or illustration for advertising and design.” The show runs through May 24th.

The City of Joy
by Mark Loughlin

Dr. Max Lowe (Patrick Swayze) enters Calcutta, sarcastically named The City of Joy with a big old American cigar in his mouth and a motive of finding some sort of spiritual guidance there. Lowe has just come out of an unsuccessful operation on a young child that has professionally scared him. So, naturally to get away from children, he goes to Calcutta. Maybe he actually thought there were no children there.

When Hasari (Om Puri) comes to his aid during a street fight with the local Calcutta mob, they are coincidentally thrown together for the next two hours in a string of episodes that usually end up with one of them getting hurt. You see, Hasari is new in town, too. He came when he was no longer able to pay off the moneylenders in his village. The beginning of the film has one of Hasari’s children saying that they are going to Calcutta to “become rich.”

Roland Joffe, the director whose previous work includes The Mission and The Killing Fields fails to bring the same enthusiasm to City of Joy. The biggest asset this film has, believe it or not, is its locations. Although I cannot speak to the rest of the film, I don’t think it’s going to be a big hit.

City of Joy could have been a great film about human emotion and courage, instead of a mob movie set in Calcutta, which unfortunately, is all it is.

Lacrosse keeps improving by using fundamentals

Record now 8-1 as season nears end

by Jim Klossek

It's starting to become evident to lacrosse enthusiasts that this year's version of Red Hawk is something special. Beginning in goal and going right through midfield and attack, one will find a talented individual at virtually every position.

About the only thing the 8-1 record Red Hawk can't boast is the most goals per game. So far this season has been the weather. They've had to play the majority of their games under extremely unfavorable conditions, and last weekend was no exception. Playing on the slippery turf of Sprague Field last Saturday, the Red Hawks nevertheless managed to score more than 20 goals for the third straight week.

The biggest test this week is at being Fairfield University of Connecticut.

Spurred by Neil Blaney's five goals and four assists, the Red Hawks crushed the visiting 2-7-1 Blue Devils 15-4 at halftime.

Delaware, scored three of his goals in the first quarter when the Red Hawks jumped in front 7-1. Keith Van Ness (four goals), Bill Brownstone, Frank Masella, John Beloza and Mike Bruton also contributed to the home team's balanced attack by netting two goals apiece while junior midfielder Ken Kane had another strong effort in goal.

Fairfield (6-3), a physical team, couldn't seem to get its offense in gear and joined the visitors in being outscored in the second half.

“I'm very pleased with our effort,” said the fifth-year coach out of Rutgers. “We're playing good fundamental lacrosse on both sides of the field right now, and I see us only getting better.”

Earlier in the week, MSC played host to Scranton College of Pennsylvania. Although the opponent was different, the results were the same as the Red Hawks rolled 26-7, Van Ness (seven goals), Bruton (six) and Blaney (five goals, six assists) led MSC who had a commanding 15-4 lead at halftime.

The home team outplayed the visitors in every respect as the score indicates and ended up with an astounding 36 shots on goal for the night.

MSC now takes the road where they perform a perfect 4-0 record this season. The first stop on the three-game trip will be at Keen College. It was the Cougars who spoiled the Red Hawks' fine 90-91 campaign by beating them in the ECAA Championship game 15-9. A year has passed and Keen has watched some of its key personnel graduate while the Red Hawks have gotten stronger, which should make things interesting in this game.

RED HAWK NOTES: Blaney leads the team in scoring with 36 goals and 35 assists for 71 points ... Ken Kane has a .712 save percentage and is well on his way to another outstanding year in goal ... After the Keen game, the Red Hawks visit Manhattanville College on the 25th and Penn State University on the 29th before returning home for the regular season finale on May 5 against the U.S. Merchant Marines.

Track and field focused after fine Monmouth meet

Penn Relays will be tough test

by Mark A. Belnavy

MSC's track and field team has been preparing for the Penn Relays since the onset of the season. In the three weeks prior they are less than a week from participating in the biggest track and field competition in the country, for pros and amateurs alike. Both the men's and women's teams have performed well all season, but this week's competition will be made up of the country's best, calling for solid efforts from both teams.

This weekend, MSC was at Monmouth College taking part in its final tune-up for the Penn Relays and faced some stiff competition that may have been beneficial with the trip to the University of Pennsylvania just a few days away.

Dewayne Stevens, who has been remarkable all season, led the way for the men's team by finishing second in the 800-meter run. He's less than a week from participating in the biggest track and field event in the country, for pros and amateurs alike. Both the men's and women's teams have performed well all season, but this week's competition will be made up of the country's best, calling for solid efforts from both teams.

Rounding out the strong performances by the men's team were Neal Ruiz and Jay Cardiello. Ruiz finished second in the 100-meter with an impressive time of 11.28. Cardiello was in fine shape with a second place finish in the long-jump with a mark of 21' 8". With performances like these, the men's team can look forward to a fine showing at the Penn Relays this week.

On the women's side, strong performances were turned in by the 400-meter and 1,500-meter relay teams.

Well, if Blanton won't dare to make any predictions, your humble narrator will make any predictions because every year he makes predictions and nothing happens, so this year he has chosen to remain quiet.

When the Duke Blue Devils won their second straight NCAA Basketball Championship a few weeks ago, the victorious coach, Bobby Hurley and Christian Laettner became topic of household conversation for what Andy Warhol called "15 minutes in the spotlight." But during the season, Laettner's drive and leadership, Warhol called "15 minutes in the spotlight." On the week was no exception. Playing on the slippery turf of Sprague Field last Saturday, the Red Hawks haven't been able to control so far this week.

“We're playing good fundamental lacrosse on both sides of the field right now, and I see us only getting better.”

Permanent Part-time Package Handlers

Our tuition reimbursement package is one of the most important packages UPS delivers.

United Parcel Service knows how difficult it is these days to get through school, academically and financially. While we can’t help you get better grades, we can help you by offering one of the most generous tuition reimbursement packages around.

By working 3-5 hours a day, 5 days a week on selected shifts, you can be eligible for educational loans of up to $25,000 a year and tuition reimbursement of up to $2,000 a semester. You’ll also start at $8 an hour, be able to pick a schedule that works around your classes, get paid holidays and vacations, receive company benefits and be eligible for promotions.

UPS also knows that free time is important. As a part-time package handler, you’ll get weekends off! That’s plenty of time to study or recharge.

No wonder we say UPS delivers more than a great job...UPS Delivers Education.

To learn more about this great opportunity, please visit the Student Center on Wednesday, April 29th, from 4pm to 8pm. Or, apply in person during our regular interview hours at one of the locations listed below.

The Celtics are on top again and at age 38, Robert Parish is leading the way

There are four basic rules we all must live by: you don’t tug on Superman’s cape, you don’t spit into the wind, you don’t pull the mask off The One! Lone Ranger and you don’t tell Robert Parish he’s too old to play basketball.

Parish, the 38-year-old legendary center for the Boston Celtics, is like “Old Man River,” he just keeps on rolling.

Last Sunday, the Celtics needed a victory to clinch the Atlantic Division title and the second seed in the Eastern Conference playoffs. Boston reached the Heat by 16 as Parish logged 38 minutes, scored 22 points and hauled down 19 rebounds; not bad for the oldest man in the NBA.

This is what Parish, better known as “Chief,” has done for the last 16 seasons. He’s been one of the most consistent big men in the league. Only Kareem Abdul-Jabbar’s numbers could match Parish’s 1992 stats.

Chief averaged 14.1 points and 8.9 rebounds in 79 games this year. When Jabbar was 38, during the 1985-86 season, he averaged 23.4 points and six rebounds in 79 games. That year, Parish and the Celtics outdistanced Jabbar’s Lakers in the NBA Finals.

Parish is also one of only four centers to win at least three championships. The other three are George Mikan, Bill Russell and Jabbar. In other words, Chief is in elite company and is sure to be a Hall of Famer soon after he retires, whenever that will be.

He’s 38 and plays like he’s 28. The only difference between Parish now and 10 years ago is the size of his afro. He still plays the game like an All-Star, but he doesn’t look like one.

When you look at Parish’s 7’0” frame with his huge arms and legs, you say, “This man is so intimidating!” That’s because he is so big and strong, and he never smiles. In fact, he never speaks. Parish always has that blank stare. This is how he earned the nickname “Chief.” Cedric Maxwell, a former teammate of Parish’s in Boston, said Parish reminded him of Chief Bromden, the huge, silent playground ringer from One Flew over the Cuckoo’s Nest.

However, double-zero has shown emotions, smiling, at least four times in his career, in 1980, 1981, 1984 and 1986. The last three years were because the Celtics won the championship. In 1980, he was happy to be leaving Golden State for the friendly confines of the Boston Garden.

Many people forget that Parish started his career with the Warriors. In four unhappy years with Golden State, he averaged 13.9 points and 9.5 rebounds, but was accused by the fans and press of the Bay Area of not caring whether the Warriors won or lost. They mistook Parish’s stoic look, his poker face, for indolence. He plays to win and the Celtics surprised everyone.

To measure what Parish means to Boston would be impossible, but the best way to do it is by seeing how productive he’s been in the absence of others.

Over the last few years, age and injury have hit the Celtics hard. Bird has missed 142 games since 1988, McHale has missed 60 games over the past two seasons and Dee Brown played in only 31 games this year.

There’s been one durable mainstay leading the Celtics, practically carrying the team on his back.

Parish has had to pick up the slack in the absence of these players: not an easy thing to ask of the oldest man in the league. However, true to form, Chief has responded, missing only four games in the last two years.

For this reason, I’d vote for the Chief! I think the Celtics surprised everyone. In fact, in my column, “The Mighty Have Fallen” in the March 5 issue of The Montclarion, I talked about the then-32 Celtics losing their mystique. Since then, Boston won 19 of its next 24 games, to finish 51-31 and capture the crown. The Celtics surprised everyone, just like Robert Parish.

Quietly, Parish has become one of the most dominant centers of all time. This doesn’t get noticed because he never speaks. With Bird and McHale doing most of the scoring and talking, Chief has focused on letting his performance do the talking.

Now Parish, supposedly in the twilight of his career, still does not say much, but his performance speaks loud and clear. It says, “Save some room in Springfield for double-zero, for whatever I decide to retire.”

* The Chief is headed to The Hall

Top Rookie: Larry Johnson’s strong second half puts him ahead of Dikembe Mutombo.

Surprise Team(s): The Los Angeles Clippers and New Jersey Nets both beat the odds and made the playoffs.

Coach of the Year: This is a toss up. Pat Riley almost had the award in his trophy case, but the Knicks faltered at the end of the season. It’s between Chris Ford of Boston, Mike Dunleavy of the Lakers and George Karl of Seattle. I think Karl should get the vote.

Most Improved Player: This is another tough call. It could be New Jersey’s Drazen Petrovic, New York’s John Starks, Denver’s Reggie Williams or Washington’s Pervis Ellison. Ellison has had a great year, averaging around 20 points and 10 rebounds per game, so I’ll give it to him.

Best Sixth Man: You try to choose between Detlef Shrempf and Dan Majerle. It’s not an easy choice, but I think Shrempf will win his second consecutive Sixth Man Award.

Defensive Player of the Year: David Robinson gets the edge over Dennis Rodman. His defensive presence in the middle was sorely missed by San Antonio when he went down with the thumb injury.

Most Valuable Player: Michael Jordan will probably win this, but he’s not the MVP of his team. The Bulls can still win without him. For this reason, I’d vote for David Robinson.
Tuesday, the MSC baseball team went right. Hawks went on to win three straight games over conference opponents before dropping a tough-luck 7-6 decision to Dominican College of New York on Tuesday.

MSC had the upper hand over its NAIA counterpart, leading 5-2 going into the bottom of the fifth. That’s when things went wrong for the Hawks. Dominican scored five runs in the bottom of the fifth, four of them unearned, to put them ahead 7-2. MSC managed one more run, but that was as close as they would come. Freshman Jason Scavalla took the loss for the Hawks, putting his record at 2-2. Left-fielder Mike Dixon had three hits and an RBI for MSC.

The Red Hawks’ current record stands at 19-7 (6-3 NJAC), and they have won five straight conference games. The two latest NJAC victories came on Saturday, when MSC swept the Glassboro State Profs in a doubleheader in Glassboro.

In the first game, rightfielder Joe Critelli led MSC’s 13-hit attack. The senior from Hazlet has been limping his way all three players adapted. "Micucci has missed four straight games at third base. Starting third baseman Rob DiLaurenzio, who leads the team in doubles at 19-7, may be back in time for the conference battle.

Critelli also came through in the second game of the twin-bill. His two-run homer put the Red Hawks ahead 2-0 after the top of the third. MSC picked up an unearned run in the top of the fifth to go up 3-1, but the Profs narrowed the margin to 3-2 on an RBI single by Scott Dzierzgowski in the bottom of the sixth. The Red Hawks picked up an insurance run in the top of the seventh when freshman Tony Martinez’s single drove home Steve Antontucci. Martinez went four for four for the second time in three games for MSC.

Senior right-hander Joe DeMiro improved his record to 3-0, striking out four over 7 2/3 innings. Reliever Jim Byerly got the save in the bottom of the ninth.

The Red Hawks showed some depth and versatility this week. They had to alter their lineup due to a finger injury sustained by starting third baseman Rob DiLaurenzo. The sophomore from Hazlet has been limited to pinch-running and DH duties and has missed four straight games at third base.

MSC Head Coach Norm Schoennig feels that his team is in good shape in the NJAC standings. "After starting 1-3 in the conference we wanted to finish fourth. Now, we’re right in the thick of things and third place is what we’re working for," he said. The Red Hawks have seven NAAC games remaining, and the feeling is that if they win at least five of them, they will finish third. Trenton State and William Paterson are the conference front-runners.

MSC was equally impressive in its 11-1 trouncing of PFD-Madison last Wednesday in Madison. The Red Hawks rapped out 16 hits, while sophomore right-hander Chris Rampone picked up the win, moving his record to 3-2. The bulk of the offense was provided by the trio of Critelli, Martinez and freshman Mike Micucci. Critelli drilled a two-run homer, an RBI double and scored three times. Martinez struck four singles in as many trips and scored twice, while Micucci knocked in three runs with a double and a single.

The defeat dropped MSC to 13-11 (1-5 NJAC). "The Deep Hole Syndrome." That’s when a team falls behind early and spends the rest of the game trying to catch up, only to come up short at the end.

RED HAWK NOTES...MSC has oustscored opponents 205-140...The squad is 7-3 at home and 12-4 on the road...When leading after six innings, MSC is a perfect 7-0...Rainouts against William & Mary and the University of Redlands will not be made up...The first game has been reset for Monday, May 4.

Lions roar past struggling Red Hawks

Softball team falls to number one ranked Trenton

An upset was on the minds of the Red Hawks softball team Tuesday as it travelled to Trenton to face the number one ranked team in Division III, the 30-2 Trenton State Lions. However, MSC wound up upset with the outcome as it dropped the doubleheader, 19-7 and 11-6.

It’s a very intimidating sight when you pull up to Lion Field on the campus of TSC. "The Deep Hole Syndrome." That’s when a team falls behind early and spends the rest of the game trying to catch up, only to come up short at the end.

The Red Hawks went into the twinbill having lost three of their last four games. They needed a win to get back on their feet and improve on their 1-3 New Jersey Athletic Conference mark, but TSC’s pitching nearly stifled the Red Hawks in the opener.

MSC scored one run in the first inning as Jennifer Flinn led off with a double. She was sacrificed to third by Kim Drager and scored on a misplayed fly ball off the bat of Kristi Kuchinski.

The lead was erased in the bottom inning one as MSC’s Lois Fyfe walked three consecutive Lions, including one with the bases full. TSC’s Maria Curran then cleared the bases with a double in the gap in left-center.

In the third, MSC cut the lead in half on Kuchinski’s RBI single, driving in Flinn. The Red Hawks could get no closer as TSC added three more runs in the fifth and won by that 7-2 count.

Fyfe, the losing pitcher, saw her record fall to 8-8. TSC’s winning pitcher, Becky Koenig, scattered only three MSC hits as her record improved to 16-1.

In the nightcap, the Red Hawks hit better, but fell victim to what Rick Barry calls "the Deep Hole Syndrome." That’s when a team falls behind early and spends the rest of the game trying to catch up, only to come up short at the end.

With MSC trailing 3-0, Sue Stoft ripped an RBI single to drive in Fyfe. However, TSC scored five runs, despite sparking defense by Drager, and took an 8-1 lead.

MSC added a run in the first inning when Laura Judge scored on a sacrifice fly that took McCarthy to third and was driven in by Karen Bouloucon, and Stoft scored Fyfe on a single to left. It wasn’t enough as TSC added another run in the seventh and MSC lost 11-6.

The defeat dropped MSC to 13-11 (1-5 NJAC). "Fyfe suffered the loss and her record fell to 8-9. However, the Red Hawks pounded out eight hits, their most since April 3. Flinn, Fyfe and Stoft each contributed two hits in the game.

RED HAWK NOTES...MSC lost six games this week due to rain, including a doubleheader to Ramapo scheduled for yesterday at Quincy Field.

The Red Hawks head to Rutgers Newark for a non-conference game. Senior Lois Fyfe and junior Jennifer Flinn have been battling all year for the team-leading batting average. Fyfe is currently on top, batting .379, while Flinn is hitting .390. Fyfe is also MSC’s leader in RBI with 24.
