Carnival shut down first night due to riot

by Maureen McGowan

A riot broke out Thursday night around 11:30 at the Spring Week Carnival, resulting in the arrests of two local high school students and another juvenile and causing the administration to cancel the Carnival on the first night.

Campus Police

Campus Police said that there were several fights which escalated into a riot situation, and they are still investigating reports of incidents from that night. Members of 11 local police units, including Wayne, Little Falls, Montclair, Verona, Cedar Grove, Clifton and Bergen County, responded to the scene in lot 28 to assist Campus Police in dispersing the crowd and stopping the fighting before any further incidents could occur.

According to eyewitnesses, there was another fight near Alpha Iota Chi’s (AIC) ring-toss booth involving several MSC students.

Dean James Harris of Academic Affairs said he was near that particular incident and tried to break up the fight by persuading students he recognized to disperse from the scene. Harris said one student actually fell onto the apron of the ring-toss booth, and then tried to grab a bottle from the stand and use it as a weapon.

“I did, in fact, grab the bottle and persuaded him not to use it as a weapon or missile,” he said.

Dean of Student Affairs Edward Martin said he was also trying to break up the fights that were occurring. He said he saw MSC students either trying to stop the fighting or leaving the scene. “I know that at the major confrontations where I was involved, I saw none of our students (participating),” he said.

Student and former student arrested and charged with possession of marijuana

by Maureen McGowan

A student and former student of MSC were arrested early last Wednesday morning and charged with possession of marijuana, said Clifton Police.

Egan Lewis, 20, and Ernest Harris, 22, were arrested at 12:55 a.m. and charged with possession of marijuana, using a Controlled Dangerous Substance (CDS) and resisting arrest.

Lt. Carl Zoccklien, commander of the Clifton Narcotics Tactical Unit, said the arresting officers allegedly observed three males standing on the corner of Valley Road and Robin Hood Road in Clifton smoking marijuana. When an officer approached the males and identified himself, the three fled on foot.

Two officers responded and pursued the suspects. Lewis and Harris were apprehended; the third unidentified male escaped.

Both were arraigned later Wednesday morning and pleaded not guilty. Harris was released on $2,500 bail; Lewis was placed in Passaic County Jail until he was able to post bail later the same day. Court date is set for May 1 in Clifton Criminal Court.

Campus Police said that Harris has been banned from the campus by the administration and Lewis has been banned from Blanton Hall. Campus Police added that Harris has been arrested on campus before and charged with trespassing and aggravated assault; he was also in a motor vehicle accident on campus with members of the Campus Police department.

Afghan rebels declared an Islamic government on Monday. The change in power came 14 years and a day since the Marxist coup that ignited the civil war. The war may not be over as several different rebel groups seem determined to vie for power. This was evidenced by several clashes between rebel groups as the communist government was laid to rest in a ceremony in Kabul.

Several Mexican government officials and four PEMEX oil officials were charged with negligent homicide and several other offenses stemming from last week's sewer explosion in Guadalupe, Mexico. Five miles of street were taken out by the blast and 670 people were injured. The officials face charges because they failed to fix a leak in a corroded pipe and to evacuate citizens, after civilians complained about a strong odor of gas emanating from sewer lines.

Serbia and Monte Negro proclaimed the "Federal Republic of Macedonia" on Tuesday. Less than half the size of the old six member federation, it hoped to receive all the benefits the previous Republic had in international relations. 10,000 people have died in the last 10 months since Serbia invaded neighboring republics. The new Yugoslavia Macedonia declared its own independence from Yugoslavia. It was recognized by China but has not been recognized by most nations because Greece fears it's Northern Macedonia may have been destroyed. This is six percent higher than previously thought. The concern is that most of the species found on the island are not found anywhere else in the world.

Five New Jersey representatives said they would resist any attempt by House Democrat leaders to impede a subpoena of the House Banking records. Gallo, Zimmer, Smith, Saxton, and Andrews do not comply with the Justice Department investigation because it will further tarnish the House. They also said that a cover-up could decimate the House’s appearance in the public eye. Representatives of both parties are among this group which favors allowing 39 minutes of records from the former house bank be disclosed.

Nine people were injured, one seriously, when a car careened off the street into the window of Sam Ash Music on 160 W. 48 St. in Manhattan. The accident is the second in Manhattan in less than a week. Last Thursday, a 74-year-old woman, Stella Maychick, killed five people and injured 26 others when she hit a crowd in Washington Square Park. No charges were filed against her.

Representative Marge Roukema of New Jersey urged to review a case where a West Milford company was denied a contract in favor of giving it to an Israeli subsidized one and was able to make an unrealistically low bid. Kemp Industries said that the $205,000 the government would save by taking the Israeli firm’s bid would be lost by the unemployment compensation that would have to be given for the 50 or so jobs that would be lost by the incompetence of the firm’s contract. Kemp Industries said that the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection and Energy plan to see if they can stem the recent epidemic of rabies among racoons in New Jersey. The oral vaccine will be put in storm drains, roadways, and food baits. Tests will show if they can reduce the scourge that occurred in parts of Europe and the U.S. where the vaccine has been used since 1987.

College Senate to revise bill allowing part-time students on Dean's List

by Dawn Romano

A motion to revise the Dean's List policy to include part-time students has been filed with the College Senate and subsequently withdrawn to be rephrased, noted Dr. Richard Lynde, vice-president of Academic Affairs.

The motion was tabled at the last meeting because its provisions were not clear. Senate should part-time students must be declared and have a minimum of 12 credits, the required GPA, and carried at least six credits in each of two continuous semesters.

Traditionally, the Dean's List encourages and recognizes academic honors only to full-time students who have a GPA of 3.50 or better and take a minimum of 12 credits per semester.

Dean of Student Affairs Edward Martin said that to the best of his knowledge, the Dean's List was not an option for part-time students. "The Dean's List grows out of academic traditions that deal with full-time students. Carrying one or two courses may be difficult, but may not be a challenge, as carrying four or five," he said.

Members of the Senate had difficulty reaching a mutual interpretation of the motion as well. They wanted to see the motion written so that the Dean's List is not in any way "watered down," said James Cotter, the only student voting member.

Lynde agreed. "The language needs to be tidied up a bit, and also needs to be cleared with the Registrar," he said.

College Senate member Dr. Sue Weston said that the action was prompted by a request from Dr. Robert Adams, a part-time student and a member of the College Senate. Adams said he would like to see the liaison between the Greek Council and SGA, "in order to establish unity."

Adams proposed to have at least two organizations tell the Greek Council about themselves at each meeting to instill more community service projects. He would like to see worthwhile service projects in the immediate area three times each semester with one person from each organization in attendance.

As a whole, Adams said there is too much segregation and too diverse a mix between organizations. "We need to plant the seed before the tree will grow," he said.

Syracuse, by the SGA, is running for the position of vice president. "There is the current SGA vice president and strongly stated that the Greek Council should be separate from the SGA. "The SGA is an advisory and should only advise Greeks when necessary," she said.

"We would like to see the Greek Council about ourselves at each meeting to instill more community service projects. He would like to see worthwhile service projects in the immediate area three times each semester with one person from each organization in attendance.

As a whole, Adams said there is too much segregation and too diverse a mix between organizations. "We need to plant the seed before the tree will grow," he said.

"If we are at each other's throats. The administration will not take us seriously", he said, adding that he is willing to take the first step.

Without us, this campus would be completely bogged, Fender said. "Greeks are the most active members of the student body." She added that she stresses unity more than anything else, and would like to have immediate communication with the new Student Affairs administrator.

Rich Adams, from Phi Beta Sigma, was unable to attend the Greek Debate because the date was changed from Tuesday to Thursday. Adams said he felt a "sense of foul play" over the situation because Carl Zietz, the organizer of the debate and the liaison between the Greek Council and the SGA, is in Theta Xi fraternity and Currie is in Theta Xi.

"It will be a long hard process before there is any type of Greek unity," he said. Adams said he would like to see more interaction with the social subhouses, IF, ISC and Panhellen in order to establish unity.

Adams said that he would also like to form a grievance committee to settle Greek problems within the Greek community. The grievance committee, if passed, would also issue fines for any violation of protocol, attendance or lack of respect to other organizations. This would "deter problems.

SGA passes bill limiting the amount professors can charge for photocopies

by Michael Cappadora

A bill has been passed by the SGA to give professors alternatives to charging students for photocopied material issued in the classroom, said Mildred Pellot, SGA legislator.

Students have complained about professors charging as much as $30 for photocopy fees and selling books out of the back seats of their cars, said Pellot.

The bill passed unanimously by the SGA, suggested several alternatives to charging students for copies, such as putting material on reserve at the library. It also stated that the Board members must complete the course with at least a 2.0 to receive a reimbursement. The amount will not be given to the Board members if any of the conditions are not met.

The total amount that the Board members will be paid each semester is $494.40, which is $82.40 per credit. The total for both semesters is $988.80 per Board member and a total of $3,955.20 for all four members.

Susco said that according to the bill, the Executive Board's duties make it difficult to maintain a job, which might limit candidate's ability to hold a position. This bill would make it easier for the Executive Board members to meet financial needs and other responsibilities.

Several Class One organization members are not in favor of the bill because they feel that Class One executive boards put in as much time as that of the SGA.

Sam Rock, cinema chairperson of the College Life Union Board (CLUB), feels that while the SGA deserves compensation, the executive board of all Class One's should be entitled to compensation as well.

Walter Kulick, CLUB's president, believes that a question of student money to reimburse the Executive Board's tuition should have been placed on the referendum ballot during the SGA election.

Class One President Joe Seroka likes the idea of presenting the Board with the option of reimbursement, but doesn't think it would be feasible due to the amount of funds involved.

SGA may pass bill to reimburse its Executive Board

by George Olschewski

SGA President Anthony Susco has authored a bill that would reimburse SGA Executive Board to receive a reimbursement for up to 12 credits during their term of office. The money for the credits would come from the SGA's unappropriated surplus fund if the bill is passed next week.

In order to prevent an abuse of this reimbursement, the Executive Board members would only be paid for six credits at a time either in the summer or fall semester, and given six credits in the spring semester. The Boardmembers must complete the course with at least a 2.0 to receive a reimbursement. The amount will not be given to the Board members if any of the conditions are not met.

The total amount that the Board members will be paid each semester is $494.40, which is $82.40 per credit. The total for both semesters is $988.80 per Board member and a total of $3,955.20 for all four members.

The Montclarion wins three ASPA awards

by Nancy Gannon

The Montclarion received three awards in the 1992 American Scholastic Press Association’s (ASPA) Annual Review and Contest for scholastic newspapers last week. The awards include “Outstanding College Newspaper for 1992,” “Outstanding First Page” and overall “First Place with Special Merit Among Universities with Enrollment of 2,500 and Above.” The awards were issued based on judging in six areas: content coverage, page design, general plan, art advertising and illustration, editing and creativity. The Montclarion scored highly in all of these areas, with a grand total of 910 points on a 1,000-point scale.

The Montclarion was one of over 600 institutions involved in the ASPA contest, competing against other colleges and universities such as Colgate and Loyola. Editor-in-Chief John Tibeitss, who has been on the staff since 1986, submitted several issues of the newspaper for review and said he was very pleased with the results.

“We’re not trying to toot our own horn,” he said. “I have witnessed a change in the paper. We are covering more and more stories in-depth, and I’m glad that someone recognized our efforts.”

“The paper is the best it’s ever been in my tenure,” Tibeitss added.

Professor Ron Hollander, the newspaper’s adviser, expressed his appreciation as well. “This paper is produced by a limited staff who works roughly 20 to 30 hours a week on the newspaper, as well as taking classes and part-time jobs,” he said. “Given that, the quality of the newspaper is amazing.”

Managing Editor Valerie Kalfvin said that while the awards themselves may not matter to some, the recognition was long overdue. “We’re short-staffed week after week, and the staff we do have is pretty eclectic. But for us to come together and produce something for this campus that we’ve all cared enough about to stick with certainly counts for something,” she said.

Kalfvin is one of seven editors who are graduating this year. “These awards are very well-deserved,” she added. “At the very least, they’ll look nice on a resume.”

SGA President Tony Susco added, “I’ve always critiqued The Montclarion myself, and it’s good to see they’ve received some recognition for the work they put into it.”

MSC celebrates the career of Dean Cohen

by Jorge L. Cruz-Moctezuma

A dinner will be held at the Wayne Manor to honor Philip S. Cohen, dean of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences, on his retirement on May 1. Cohen has served MSC for 40 years and his deep sense of commitment has served as an inspiration to many. His leadership has enriched the academic level of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences and the entire college in general.

During his tenure here, Cohen has witnessed and been part of some great moments in the history of MSC. His retirement will leave a void, which in some ways can never be filled. "I am going to take with me a lot of memories, experiences, friendships and a feeling of accomplishment," Cohen said.

Cohen is leaving behind a great legacy of projects and programs which will assist future generations of MSC students. He maintains that the future of MSC will have a more diverse student population and a more diverse faculty. "The curriculum is going to reflect this great diversity. I am going to prepare students for the future generations of MSC students. He said that he has two reasons for this special interest. "First, I work with them as colleagues, and second, our minority student body is increasing. If we do not have a program for them and if we do not create a favorable environment for them, we are not encouraging minorities to come to the college. If we do not do this, we are not fulfilling our responsibilities. That is why we have a Weekend College Program," Cohen said.

Through these words, his commitment has become apparent. He added, "If we do not accomplish our objectives, we would be failing in our recruiting program for minority groups."

All those who have had the honor of knowing Cohen will treasure forever memories of a great person who has enthusiastically dedicated his life to the development of the educational system of MSC.

La comunidad de MSC celebra la exitosa carrera del Decano Philip S. Cohen

by Jorge L. Cruz-Moctezuma

El primero de mayo del año en curso, la comunidad de MSC efectuará una cena- baile, la cual se llevará a cabo en el "Wayne Manor,", y tiene como objetivo, el celebrar la exitosa carrera del Dr. Philip S. Cohen, Decano del departamento de Humanidades y Ciencias Sociales, de quien se desprende el cargo, así como el del colegio en general.

El Decano Philip Cohen, ha brindado sus servicios en MSC durante 40 años, en los cuales ha demostrado gran dedicación y nobleza. Su experiencia y conocimientos han sido de gran ayuda para mejorar el nivel académico del departamento que tiene a su cargo, así como el del colegio en general.

No cabe duda que al retirarse deja un gran vacío en la escuela, el cual será difícil de llenar, ya que con él se van grandes experiencias, amistades y un gran sentimiento de satisfacción.

El Decano Cohen, deja tras de sí, una gran gama de proyectos y programas que ayudarán a las generaciones futuras, ya que él piensa que estas serán más interesantes debido a mayor diversidad de estudiantes, y mayor diversidad en el cuerpo facultativo. "Los planes de estudios van a reflejar esta diversidad. Hice un estudio de programas que ayudarán a los miembros facultativos a encontrar un modo correcto de preparar a los estudiantes para los cambios tecnológicos que tendrán lugar en el siglo XXI, casi estamos en él, comentó.

El Decano no tiene planes definidos para el futuro, pero comentó que desea realizar viajes y tal vez escriba un libro relacionado con los programas para los cuales ha trabajado durante 40 años. Por otra parte, es confortable saber que no tendrá todas estas responsabilidades sobre mí," comentó.

La comunidad latinoamericana siempre ha sentido un gran cariño y respeto por el Dr. Philip S. Cohen, Decano de MSC, por su gran simpatía por todos los estudiantes y por su dedicación a nuestra organización. "Como podemos apreciar por sus palabras, el Decano Cohen es una persona que merece el respeto de todo el mundo ya que cuenta con una gran capacidad y sobre todo con mucha experiencia. "Si no cumplíramos con nuestros objetivos, estaríamos fallando en nuestro programa de reclutamiento," finalizó.

Todos aquellos que han conocido al Decano Philip Cohen, conservarán para siempre algo de la grandeza de una persona que ha dedicado su vida con gran entusiasmo, al desarrollo del sistema educativo de MSC.

FOUR WALLS IS A CLASS ONE OF THE SGA
The Montclarion, huh?

English Majors and Journalism Minors:

Okay, we know the plan. Most fall into two categories, right? For the purist English Majors, the plan consists of writing the critically acclaimed, best-selling novel that James Joyce would have written had he lived a few more years. For the hardboiled journalist, the plan is to write a Pulitzer Prize winning essay on a heart gripping story that has global implications. Of course there are others; you may want to follow the New York Mets around the country and play poker in typical Oscar Madison style or review the opening night of a landmark Broadway extravaganza. No matter. The details of your personal agenda are not of primary importance. What is important is the time between your graduation and your life of outrageous fame and opulent luxury.

Yes, my friends, you'll need a job.

Now, as you know (and your parents have no doubt reminded you), an English degree does not necessarily ensure a job. What you really need (dramatic pause) is experience. Something concrete to shore up your resume beside the old standby: "...I'm a people person."

That's where The Montclarion comes in.

Picture, if you will, waiting in the lobby of your prospective employer along with your peers. They are attired in the latest business fashions (long pointy collars, abstract floral ties, pressed silk blouses) carrying around their graduation present leather attache cases purely for aesthetic purposes. You, on the other hand, sit there equally stylish (more so we'd say), but with your attache case brimming with professional-esque clippings graced with your byline from an award-winning college newspaper. Heh, heh.

Hell, you'll make enough loot to pay back your student loans and afford a telephone in your sparsely decorated apartment.

Plenty of positions are open to meet your individual taste and style. Among them are news reporters, feature writers, sports writers, editorial columnists and arts writers.

Photography students:

If you supply the frames, we can probably decorate your family room.

You probably started taking pictures with Dad's Kodak 110, right? Then, maybe in the eighth grade or so, your Aunt Florence bought you one of those Polaroid Instamatic bad boys. Pictures you snapped of Fluffy your cat, your little brother being potty-trained and your left thumb as a fledgling artist are, today, family heirlooms, right? Close even?

Oh well, at least we know you love photography. And where better to get a great deal of experience than right here on MSC's very own beloved student-run newspaper? Even if you don't know everything about taking pictures, we've got a really friendly staff here at The Montclarion that would love to help you sharpen your skills.

By the time you graduate, you'll have a portfolio that would make even the most seasoned photographer green with jealousy. Your photos will be seen by over 10,000 people every week and if you're really good, we can even put your name in huge banner headlines each and every week (just kidding about the headline part).
What's in it for me?

Marketing Majors:

It might not help your Alvin and the Chipmunks impersonation.

You, my friends, are in for quite a shock when you leave the lovely tree-lined campus of MSC, never again to return to your Consumer Behavior class. Despite George Bush’s claims to the contrary, this country is in a nasty recession. What does that mean to you? Well, the possibility does exist that you may end up delivering pizzas for Domino’s after graduation while pretending the spare room over Mom and Dad’s garage is your studio apartment in the city. Scary, eh? The job market is a little tight now, and a little resume booster never hurt anyone. But do you really want to take an internship inflating 1-800-FUTON 4 U balloons just to impress your prospective employer? We didn’t think so. Read on.

_The Montclarion_, the most popular college newspaper on the MSC campus, is looking for an Advertising Manager. This is a position with real responsibility. The Ad Manager discusses ad rates with interested parties, oversees the production and placement of ads in _The Montclarion_, recommends and trains salespeople, supervises and oversees all advertising and graphic employees, and best of all, earns a tidy commission on all off-campus ads.

There is also a need for sales representatives.

And we give you our word, no helium is involved.

Graphic Design Students:

Walk into _The Montclarion’s_ office and feast your eyes. No, to the right, that’s just a beat-up old desk over there. That’s right, the computer room. No dusty old Commodore 64’s here. We have (pretty close to) top-of-the-line Macintosh IIci’s. Four of ’em (lovingly named after the Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse). And they’re chock full of the latest programs. We’ve got Aldus Pagemaker and Freehand, Adobe Illustrator and Photoshop. Deskpaint? But of course. We’ve even got Quark XPress (although noone’s figured out how to run it yet).

So if you want first-rate experience and a nice hefty portfolio, hurry on in.

We’ve got the equipment that you long for.

Anyone and everyone is invited to join _The Montclarion_. Positions are open to all majors.

Call us at 893-5169 or stop by at rm. 1 1 3 of the Student Center Annex. Who do you contact? Just about anyone really. Feel free to leave a message.

To Clove or not to Clove?

That is the question

by Anthony DiPasquale

When Pam and Celeste were freshmen, they would walk down to the Clove Road Apartments on a Saturday night looking for one of the many parties that were always in full effect. The sidewalk in front of the apartments was jammed with merry makers walking from party to party, blowing off steam from a hard week of classes, anxious to meet new people and share in the experience of a college party night.

Now as seniors Pam and Celeste live in Clove, and like the vast majority of MSC residents, they go home on the weekends, turning the once heartland of MSC into a veritable ghost town.

"Clove Road has changed so much since we first came here!" said Celeste Narciso a freshman, undeclared.

"Clove is much more competitive now," said Rakowsky. "There is a new breed of Clove Road experience forever.

"We've developed a more civilized new system of checking all applicants' judicial files before they are allowed to move in. Any student currently on probation will not be allowed in, and the remaining are assigned by a process of points based on class standing."

Many students have been processing Clove Road applications for years remembering the time when the waiting list to get into Clove was very long, and the majority of the people who lived there were seniors. Now it is only about 14% seniors, the rest are underclassmen.

"A while back there used to be a big list when we didn't scrutinize, and Clove went a little wild. As the restrictions began to be put in place [1989-1990] some of the people living there resented the changes and moved off campus. There were a few open spaces that year, but the following year the demand began to increase and this year it is strong again," said Valenti.

Because of the amount of damages the apartments underwent during the party years, and the amount of documentation piled high on his desk after a Thursday party night, the new Clove seeks to strike a balance for students who want an apartment atmosphere, but still want to be a part of the college community, according to Rakowsky.

"Clove Road is still an attractive option to most students, and is a kind of reward. Many students are happy with the new policies at Clove. They can eat, sleep, and study there, and still be social. We haven't banned alcohol, so you can still get a case of beer and have friends over," said Rakowsky.

The new Clove does appeal to several students living there such as Jaime Diccio a senior living in 103a who remembers Clove when there wasn't even a director to oversee the unit managers. "I like it much better now. It's not like it used to be when the unit managers didn't have much control. Now that you can get kicked out, it is so much quieter."

Wade Whitehead a junior living in 106a, feels the fear of getting kicked out is why there is no sense of community at Clove this year. "The problem with Clove is everyone is petrified of getting kicked out. It has turned everyone into a commuter. They go out to the bars on Tuesdays and Thursdays and go home on the weekends. I guess it will take someone to die from drunk driving before they will allow parties back on campus," he said.

While there has been a great exodus of students moving off campus, the majority of students still desire the intermediate step between the real world and college that Clove offers, according to Rakowsky.

"Clove is in Little Falls and students there are not exempt from local law, but in some cases the police will turn the cases over to the college, a luxury a student wouldn't have living off campus," said Rakowsky.

This is indeed a luxury considering the headlines in recent Montclairians describing MSC students living in nearby Clifton being arrested by Clifton's Special Narcotics Unit, or the students living in Montclair being charged with disturbing the peace and serving alcohol to minors—a little more severe than being written up by an A.M. for violating quiet hours.

So the future Clove Residents will have to decide: To Clove or not to Clove, and will have to ask themselves if they fit into the new world order being enforced by Clove officials. But many MSC students like Pam Colon can't help but feel a loss. A loss of the only place they could go and hangout and feel like they belonged to a real college.

"The administration and Residence Life keep saying that they want us to be a community, but they are pulling us apart with all the rules," said Colon.

Carnivals don't appeal to our age group. They should have more concerts.

Juan Angueira
Sophomore, undeclared

No. Carnivals don't appeal to our age group. They should have more concerts.

Susan Tel
Junior, English

No, because the kids here don't know how to behave themselves.

Milen Landa
Freshman, undeclared

Yes, definitely. I think it's important for students to interact with each other in a non-competitive setting. Social events on campus are important to let students relax and enjoy college. It shouldn't be all work.

Dave Anderson
Junior, English

It should be mandatory for students to live on campus or nearby away from their parents. There should be a carnival every week. I'm all for anything that creates a sense of community and decreases apathy.

by Anthony DiPasquale

As the restrictions began to be put in place [1989-1990] some of the people living there resented the changes and moved off campus. There were a few open spaces that year, but the following year the demand began to increase and this year it is strong again," said Valenti.
OSAU raises money for Kitabu Library

by Carl G. Chase

Hoping that improved funding will help serve students better, the Organization of Students for African Unity hosted some 50 students in an Open House, Wednesday, April 29.

Kitabu, the 400-book library survives on 75% of OSAU's budget but should be about five percent, staff members said. Kitabu has a proposed budget of $375 for next year or 9% of the proposed total. Kitabu director and MSC junior Mark A. Williams said the additional money is mostly needed to aid students studying or doing research involving Africa or African-American topics.

Julia Montes De Oca, a sophomore and sociology major, said, "The library needs more, newer books. They need to update the collection." Williams agreed. "The library only had money to buy 30 books this year with the small budget we were able to get," he added.

"Kitabu, like OSAU, needs a computer to replace the ancient Tandy with twin 10-inch floppy disk drives and at least $1000 worth of new books," said Erika Chapman, OSAU secretary. Williams said he could remember the last time that machine was working. However, the total funding they are proposing for next year is $375.

"We are also increasing other budget lines," said Chapman. She also added by saying that money is tight in general. Most of the books we carry are not available at Sprague Library," Williams said. He also said that students should not travel to far-away libraries to succeed in African-American studies. "We'll go to the (next year's) classes and find out what books students need," he said.

Health educator talks to women of Webster Hall

by Karen Lee Stradford

"Women need to be aware of their bodies," said Beth O'Leary, a health educator and employee at Planned Parenthood Essex County. O'Leary was invited to speak by Zeta Phi Beta Sorority as part of its project entitled "For Women About Women."

O'Leary stressed the importance of women having regular check-ups as well as pelvic examinations and welcomed them to come to Planned Parenthood for a visit. She commented on the skillfulness of all the doctors and nurse practitioners. "I would trust them with my body," O'Leary said. "They're good and certified people, who go to conferences all of the time to get the most up-to-date information.

O'Leary told the women that if they decided to make an appointment, everything would be confidential and they wouldn't be pressured. She attempted to make her audience realize the dangers that could occur when a woman doesn't take care of her body and gave good reasons why check-ups are necessary.

"The best time for a woman to start having annual pelvic exams is when she's 18-years-old," she said. "If she's sexually active at a young age, she should have one earlier." She pointed out the symptoms of some problems: severe bad cramps, a change in menstrual cycle, discharge, bleeding between periods. She also mentioned side effects from birth control pills and advised the women to keep track of their periods.

"The better you know your body the better," she said.

Kitabu has a proposed budget of $375 for next year or 9% of the proposed total. Kitabu director and MSC junior Mark A. Williams said the additional money is mostly needed to aid students studying or doing research involving Africa or African-American topics.

Julia Montes De Oca, a sophomore and sociology major, said, "The library needs more, newer books. They need to update the collection." Williams agreed. "The library only had money to buy 30 books this year with the small budget we were able to get," he added.

O'Leary stressed the importance of condom use. Since AIDS is rapidly becoming a major part of our society, O'Leary advised the women to always use condoms. "Nothing comes close to the latex condom when it comes to preventing a disease, although nothing is 100% effective," O'Leary said. She recommended that women who are not in a monogamous relationship be tested every five to six months.

Among speaking about the importance of frequent examinations, O'Leary also stressed the importance of condom use. Since AIDS is rapidly becoming a major part of our society, O'Leary advised the women to always use condoms. "Nothing comes close to the latex condom when it comes to preventing a disease, although nothing is 100% effective," O'Leary said. She recommended that women who are not in a monogamous relationship be tested every five to six months.

"Women need to be aware of their bodies," she said. That intercourse is a high risk activity, whether it's vaginal, anal or oral and mentioned that intercourse is much safer. Intercourse being any sexual activity other than vaginal, anal or oral intercourse.

O'Leary also said that there are other diseases besides AIDS, such as Chlamydia, Trichomonas and Gonorrhea, which are also sexually transmitted. "Chlamydia is the fast growing sexually transmitted disease," she said. "There are approximately four million new cases every year."

The women were told that each of these diseases could affect the heart, vision or reproductive organs if contracted. "Diseases don't discriminate," she said.

Prophecies of the apocalypse: part one

Do you feel it? The sky is falling, the mountains are crumbling, the ocean boils like a pot of tomato soup. One would expect the end of the world to occur in some Biblical location, caused either by the wrath of God (you know plague, famine, volcanoes, etc.) or by the idiocy of man (nuclear war, chemical contamination, Carson leaving NBC), that sort of thing. But low and behold, fellow archons, we are fortunate enough to bear witness to the complete collapse of modern society right here in our own playpen. As our Craftmatic Adjustable Beds of existence teeter precariously over the edge of the abyss, the rumblings of armageddon are shaking our fair institution and historians will be able to trace the beginning of the end straight to Reid's Retreat of the Relatively Rehabilitated MSC.

Now, signs of the apocalypse aren't what you'd expect them to be. Nothing obvious anyway. No, the signals of the end of the world come in more subtle, but no less acute forms of hysteria and in the most unexpected places. So, let us journey through the events of the past weeks so that we can come to grips with our ultimate and inevitable demise. Heavy, huh?

As the weeks went by, the more primal gender types of the crowd started to question their own masculinity. Push came to shove, literally, then to punch, and suddenly it became terribly more interesting to watch somebody get a real live bloody nose. Raptur(e) then? Those dozens of bad guys get mowed down by sub-atomic machine guns on screen. Gather 'round kids, it's another senseless brawl brought to you by HPG (Huffy-Puffy Guys) a class five of the S.G.A.

Violence notwithstanding, the events in lot 28 proved that Greeks, like locusts, congregate in a quasi-anti-harmonic conversion, to be known hereafter as the "Alphabet Plague." The virus strikes young males and females between the ages of 15-23, the main symptom being a complete loss of identity. Victims wander the campus aimlessly, whimpering and drooling, reciting the Greek alphabet while letting a match bum to their fingertips. There is no known cure, but the plague can be treated by tilting the victims head such that he/she can see the Greek letter emblazoned on their sweatshirt. It's an endearing thing to watch as the victims eyes bug out of their skull. "I know who I am! HA, HA, HAI! My name is DOT! I'm DOTT!" The euphoria is short lived, however, the jumping up and down of the victim causes him/her to forget to look at their sweatshirt, thus immediately losing their identity again. It's a vicious cycle.

So the week continues and the signs of the apocalypse become far more frightening. Case in point: one time SGA legislator and part time Nonstradums caliper prophet, Sam Rock, made the startling prediction in last week's Montclarion that the Carnival (of sorts) would be sabotaged by throngs of angry eroding youth. But even the Rock could not have predicted the melee and massacre that ensued. As the thugs of the underworld were trying desperately to gouge each other's bellybuttons apart, the peons of the spectacle were trying as desperately to make sense of it all. Here is actual text of actual conversation, translated from the unintelligable, presented to you, the fair text of actual conversation, translated from the unintelligable, presented to you, the fair and endearing reader, from that fateful night...

"FIGHT!!! Cool!! It's a FIGHT!!" "WHERE???? I can't see who or what OOF!!" "Wow! I think that mob of psychos just killed John. Cool! Look at his guts just pulse like that!" "HEY YOU GUYS! Derek just lit himself on fire while he was being basted for smoking dope in the parking lot! This is GREAT!" "I heard the National Guard is here and they just called in the Army." "Anyone want a hot dog before they knock the books over? I'm hungry." "I JUST SAW CHER! She was helping Dean Martin direct traffic!"

And so on. Confusion and chaos are the cornerstones of armageddon. The next day, Joe was talking about the infamous "Guy with the Gun." The Reader's Digest version of his grove was that if somebody had a gun, why didn't they use it? "Guns aren't for show," he said, "Man if you have a gun, shoot somebody, anybody."

Oh, this is lovely. And to top the whole couple of weeks before the apocalypse off, the honorable and omnipresent President Anthony Vito Susco, the man solely responsible for changing the way the students at Camp Montclair perceive both rollerblading and masturbation, decided to finally graduate after six years and leave the rest of us floundering in puddles of pitifulness.

So before the end of the world, this columnist would like to mate at least one more time. There's this terribly enchanting creature that glides across the Student Center Quad from California every now and again, with sort of purplish curly black hair and a China doll's face. So, I hope she can be persuaded into a bomb shelter and then hell bring the apocalypse! Farewell, but not goodbyee.

MSC students receive special recognition
by Jody Bardin

Twenty-seven MSC students were nominated into the 1992 Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges on Monday, April 27. The awards reception took place in the Student Center formal dining room. The 27 students that received a certificate and will have a short biography placed into this year's edition are as follows: Jody Bardin, Vivian Botero, Carol Boylan, Tobi-Lyn Byers, Christine Catalina, Erika Chapman, Vicki Clark, Michael Corea, Doreen A. Florek, Janice Hennings, Susan M. Herbst, Herbert K. Kemp, Dawn Lang, Theresa A. Lyons, Christine McNamara, Glen Charles Motola, Andrea Nemeth, Linda J. Nevadomski, Kevin Joseph O’Connor, Yvette M. Ochwat, Evelyn Ojeda, Parag B. Pandya, Demetra Peterson, Karl A. Pisarczyk, Mohammad S. Rahman, Elaine T. Russo and Erika Marie Weinman.

Several of the students brought guests, including parents and friends and they were treated to music by flutists Donny Dwoimkoski and Nancy Mentch. Also, some refreshments were served.

James Harris, associate dean of students was the moderator for the award reception. He was joined by Dr. Edward Martin, dean of students who delivered the greeting and Dr. Domenica Desiderioscioli, acting vice-president for student affairs, who delivered the welcome. Dr. Richard Lynde provost and vice president for academic affairs presented the awards.

Harris said, "We (the office of student activities) were delighted to host students, parents and guests who were there and to recognize the outstanding achievement of students in a variety of areas to include scholarship, community service, campus involvement and leadership."

We think that the Who's Who award will indicate to people both at the college and outside the college that this select group of students are future leaders of this society.

The criteria for acceptance into Who's Who includes a 2.7 GPA and 90 completed credits, involvement in extracurricular activities, leadership in these activities, community service, service to the campus and potential for future success.

Students who received this award were either self-nominated or nominated by a faculty member. After the applications were received, the selection committee picked the students who they felt were the most qualified to represent MSC.

Dr. Desiderioscioli congratulated the honorees because it is a special award. She said that it takes a special person to commit time to the community as well as hold down jobs and keep up a high GPA. She felt that it was well attended and well organized.

Compiled by Christine D'Amato
Last Thursday evening, the 1992 Carnival opened. Last Thursday evening, the 1992 Carnival closed. The Carnival is an annual rite of spring at MSC. It is easily the most anticipated campus event of the year. People of all kinds with different backgrounds and interests, who normally walk past each other without so much as a nod, gather into a parking lot crammed with mobile amusement rides, silly games and greasy food. They come to celebrate with friends, to look forward to the summer and look back over the past year.

For many, this celebration is an initiation into college life. They have been at MSC for almost a year. Their friendships are young and fragile. This Carnival is their first.

For many, this celebration is the last of its kind. Graduation looms ahead. But the flashing bulbs and squealing rides, the swirling movement and chatter of the crowd momentarily deaden their concern. They hold fast, hold tight, to their friends and the life they’ve come to know. They cling to a youthful freedom they will never know again.

This is what the Carnival brings to MSC. In the span of a few days, the best of life at MSC comes alive. We forget the long registration lines and lousy food. We remember what is important. We remember the good things. We remember the times we spent with our friends, the time we spent in love, the time we spent together. Like our time here, the Carnival is short. Like our time here, the Carnival will stay with us after our friends have scattered. It will stay with us after it has gone.

The students have lost their Carnival this year. It wasn’t taken away by a nasty college administration or the blind indifference of state budget cuts. It was taken from us, by us.

We will remember our Carnival of 1992. We will recall planning to spend our weekend there. We will remember when we first heard, early Friday afternoon, that it had been cancelled. We will remember the excitement, the confusion, the fear of Thursday night. We will remember the empty metal husks of parking lot #28, covered with tarps as we passed on Saturday morning.

Hopefully, we will remember these things next spring.
Last week's absence notwithstanding, I have not felt nately, I was unable to suppress my own emotions; this is evidenced by the following paragraph.

Yes, it was a tough weekend for me. I considered suggesting to my friend that neither of us try to control the friendship. I realized that it was okay for me to try not to control the friendship, but if I asked her to try not to control the friendship, I would be in essence attempting to control the friendship via her. So, I did nothing except worry and feel uncom­fortable. Although I have not mentioned it lately, I still consider vulnerability to be virtuous. Now I must try to muster up the courage to pull it off; however, I am not certain that I can. Since I am obviously able to publish a paragraph chock full of semantic uncertain­ties, there is hope.

I imagine that you are wondering why in the hell the esteemed Montclarion would review an album re­corded 20-some years ago. I also imagine that at this very moment you are wondering where in the hell I must have been for the last 20-some years of moments. I will answer both questions directly. I will answer the second question first: I have been elsewhere.

The first-posed question, the question that I chose to answer last, has two or three answers, all of which I will answer in no discernible order. At the onset of this elucidating essay, I want to ascertain my unbridled patriotism. Subsequently, I chose an album with an American flag comprising its cover. Notice I used the word comprising; I did not use the word compromis­ing, although the veritable plethora of American flags displayed patriotically throughout New Jersey com­promises the dignity of our flag. An American flag is supposed to receive reverential treatment, i.e. be sheltered from the elements and illuminated if dis­played at night. The other day I saw an American flag draped across the back of a Snap-On delivery truck. Anyone who has ever driven behind a truck knows that the back of a truck is a prime venue for graffiti writers.

Promising news for the homeless

Three cheers for the New York City Commission on the Homeless! The commission in late February released its 118-page report on what the Dinkins Administration can do about the alarmingly-growing problem of homelessness.

Titled The Way Home, the commission offered new and refreshing proposals for the treatment of homeless persons.

The report calls for an absolute rejection of outdated social policies that emphasize the provision of homeless shelters: "The commission found that homeless single adults have two primary needs: humane housing and services. Shelters however, provide neither."

Additionally, the commission recognized the need for varieties of specific programs for individuals, instead of straightjacketing them into the same ineffective shelter programs throughout the city. Thus, the commission divided up its proposed reform strategy into three entirely separate branches of treatment. They are: 1) reception (immediate short-term help), 2) transitional (fostering individuals' specific ills) and 3) permanent housing. Without effective programs in all three of these branches, efforts for improving homeless situations will be futile.

However, the study insisted that the city administration would not have to revolutionize the system, maintaining that the ability and capacity to provide aid for the homeless is already in place. In other words, there is no need to invent the wheel.

What's really great about the commission's findings was that the proposals would not cost New York City one extra cent - which is absolutely necessary because all levels of government have been straightjacketed on the verge of bankruptcy. Yet, if you really want to understand the inability for federal participation in the area of subsidizing homeless programs, consider that in my lifetime alone (I'm 21), the world's largest lenders to one of the world's largest borrowers. Our federal government has a $4 trillion debt. That's $4,000,000,000,000!" "

For Christ's sake, it wasn't

In the future, if The Montclairon wants to report fights, it is not but rekindle the feeling that started the fight in the first place by allowing name calling and rumors to make the paper.

flag lighters (ideal for draft cards) and, yes, the inevitable "ol' glory" flag condom are all available to the patriotic purchaser. However, since displaying American flags is currently in vogue, I wanted to be sure to jump on the band wagon, hence I chose There's A Riot Goin' On as any truly patriotic American would. Those old enough to remember the era when both rioting and Sly & The Family Stone were current are sure to recall the patriotic feelings associated with said currency. Twenty-some odd years ago, Sly & The Family Stone was at the top of the charts. Twenty-some years ago, Abbie Hoffman was arrested at the HUAC (House Un-American Committee) hearing for wearing a flag shirt and Ed Franka, a freshman at Washington Commonwealth Uni­ erity, was sentenced to a year in jail for wearing a flag vest. Today, 20-some years later, Vanilla Ice is at the top of the charts and American flags are being decorated by New Jersey motorists with virtual impunity. Progress?

The second of my reasons for choosing this album consists of the sad fact that I do not have a compact disc player, that only compact discs remain to be reviewed in the Arts Department Drawer. Yeah, I know that I should enter the real world and obtain a compact disc player, but I am so very fond of vinyl.
So, all you record moguls reading this article should do something to eliminate the dilemma we, I, the writer writing about and you; the reader reading about a 20-some year old album; find ourselves in.

Naturally, it would be improper to send a compact disc player to my house. To avoid any appearance of impropriety, send it to my post office box: P.O. Box 7221 Roselle, NJ 07203. Once again, that is P.O. Box 7221 Roselle, NJ 07203. You could always send albums or tapes, and I suppose that if you sent stuff to The Montclarion, I could still get my biscuit hooks on it. The point is, send something, something like a zillion record-collecting readers will read it and most assuredly run right out to the record store.

Now, for the review part of this review; another reason for choosing to review Sly & The Family Stone is because I like There's A Riot Goin' On for both its aesthetic and its inherently patriotic content. It contains such classic tracks as "Luv N' Haight," both its aesthetic and its inherently patriotic content.

Blame the criminal for the crime

When will we ever learn? I mean really learn. The more I hear people talk about rape, the more I realize that our attitudes haven’t changed that much at all. Recently, a member of the N.Y.-based Guardian Angels vigilante group spoke at MSC. He expressed to the audience his desire to prevent crimes by becoming a victim. "Ladies," he said, "should watch what they wear." I am more inclined to believe he should watch what he says.

If we are going to get someone to speak out on crime prevention, then let’s get someone who does not perpetuate stereotypical myths about women who get raped. "The way you dress," he said, "can cause unwanted situations." Correct me if I am wrong, but this is 1992, isn’t it? Why is it that people must always look to the victim to figure out why the crime took place or if at all? Maybe I was naive in my thinking that most people understood that a woman’s clothing does nothing to encourage or discourage a rape. I really did think that most people knew that this Guardian Angel doesn’t. His Do’s and Don’t’s list gave him away: "Don’t wear skirts too short. Don’t show too much leg. If you wear tights, cover your behind. Women can look good in their slinky black dress and pick his victim and turn away when she’s in a bulky parka. Anyone that thinks that is the case does not understand the facts about the crime of rape.

[A rapist] doesn’t see a slinky black dress and pick his victim and turn away when she’s in a bulky parka. Anyone that thinks that is the case does not understand the facts about the crime of rape.

I know, “That’s what she gets for...” Fill it in the blank. Anything will do. Just ask Lisa Olson. If she is going to go into a man’s locker room, then, well... Ask the victim from Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. If she is going to dress that way, well... Ask the Central Park Jogger. If she is going to jog in the park at night, well...

It all brings me to the Guardian Angel’s approach: If you’re not going to dress in moderation, then, well... Shifting the responsibility off the rapist and onto the victim is wrong. It assaults survivors of these crimes all over again. In 1986, an editorial appeared in a Florida paper after a jury found a man not guilty of rape because the victim wore a halter top and a mini-skirt. She wore clothes typical of a 22-year-old woman. This jury saw fit to convict the man on charges of kidnapping at knife point, but the way she dressed, well... They acquitted him of the charge of rape. The editorial, as well as many in this nation, expressed outrage. It stated, “Even a career hooker parading naked down the interstate is not fair game...” Not even a two-bit hooker.

I do not have the answers. I only hope to show, as a massage on the wall at a rape crisis center says, "No more rhetorical questions, just be the change you want to see in the world." I think that the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee has listened and taken action. Due to space considerations, this is an abridged list which really only covers a small percentage of the various positive contributions which the Wood Service has given us. I think that the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee had better stop comparing the food to the Ritz and realize that hundreds of changes have occurred with new ones pending. Also, students must realize that their food dollar is worth more than they know, since the food service can only allot $1.50 per day for students on the meal plan.

LETTER...

He’s obviously never tried the chicken fried steak

I am writing this letter in reference to last week’s article, “New Food Company Bids Taken By Administration." I am very concerned with this issue.

The article claimed that the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee issued an informal survey to over 300 students asking questions about their likes and dislikes of Wood Food Service as well as recommendations for improvements. The Wood Food Service also issues a campus-wide survey which adequately covers all points of dining, service, ambiance, and of course, the food. The service also provides a bi-monthly dining hall committee meeting which my committee and all faculty and students to address concerns and recommendations. In addition, suggestion boxes are available to diners.

An SGA legislator was quoted in the article as saying, “No more changes have been made within the last semester to improve service or quality on the part of Wood.” I think his committee is blind to the changes that have taken place over the past few semesters.

Among them are the initiation of Free Flow Plus which allows students to use a private debit card which deducts purchases at the cash register without having money at hand, the debut of TCBY’s and Dunkin’ Donuts in the Student Center, the remodeling of the Freeman Hall cafeteria, Pete’s Arena’s remodeling and special pizza nights on Tuesdays, numerous holiday and theme specials complete with lavish decor and party favors and juicy neon lighting in Blanton - which improves serving areas. New soda and ice dispensers were added and multiple additions were made to cafeteria menus.

Due to space considerations, this is an abridged list which really only covers a small percentage of the various positive contributions which the Wood Service has given us. I think that the Welfare and Internal Affairs Committee had better stop comparing the food to the Ritz and realize that hundreds of changes have occurred with new ones pending. Also, students must realize that their food dollar is worth more than they know, since the food service can only allot $1.50 per day for students on the meal plan. That’s a lot of food for your money. With all of this in mind, it should be seriously considered that Wood’s contract be renewed for the future.

One...Singular sensation...

by Sandra Cammilleri

Get ready for dazzle, glitz, and the enchantment of a Broadway musical!! Opening tonight in Memorial Auditorium at 8 p.m., the Mainstage Theatre Series of MSC proudly presents A Chorus Line.

Under the direction of Geoffrey Newman, dean of Fine and Performing Arts, A Chorus Line features a talented team of production professionals. They are: visiting guest artist, Roger Riggle who resides as Choreographer and Associate director, Musical Director - Eric Diamond, Costume and Set Designer - Jose Kenderish, and Lighting Designer - John Figola.

Aesthetically, the production elements contain a mix of both realistic and overly theatrical devices. The costumes are very colorful and vibrant. They lend an artistic semblance to the production. The set, however, is subtly suggestive of a theatre. Opening up the wings and stages of the set and revealing lights achieve the effect of a production in progress. The mirrors, though a predominant feature of the production, do not assume a realistic appearance. Somehow, they lack visual acuity. The most striking theatrical devices are the lights, music and costumes. These three elements distinctly provide an atmosphere of a Broadway musical.

This musical production features a cast of 23 individuals who comprise the roles of dancers auditioning for the chorus line of a Broadway musical. Every dancer has a story to tell. Thus, through song and dance, the audience gets an onstage glimpse of the offstage world of theatre.

Collectively, the musical numbers are dynamic and full of energy. As a group, the cast achieves harmony. Yet, several musical roles seem weak. Individually, many of the performers can’t seem to strike the high notes to coincide with the music.

Despite the minor faults some of the musical solos, there are several appealing scenes and performances. Michael Finn is outstanding in his portrayal of Zach, the show’s director. He has a clear resonant voice which augments the authority and dominance of his character. In reference to his character, Finn commented stating, “Zach is a very closed person. He has a communication problem.” Also of notable merit is Matthew Horohoe whose past roles have included such humorous characters as Charlie Baker in The Foreigner. Not only is he funny, but he can dance too! Horohoe’s spirited verve and comic instincts once again shine through in his role of Bobby, an offbeat, young hopeful. Equally as impressive is Gidget Perry who plays Diana. In the number entitled “Nothing”, Gidget performs with vigor. And, Matthew Gitskin as Mike gives an enthusiastic and lively tap number.

Three very impressive scenes of A Chorus Line include the story of Paul’s background, the argument between Cassie and Zach, and the audition interview scene which features Roger Mazzeo as Al and Antoinette Doherty as Kristine, his wife.

In the interview scene, Mazzeo and Doherty exemplify a fun-loving young couple. Their portrayals are endearing and adorable!! Wilson Mendiesta, as Paul, is passionate and full of fervor in his telling of Paul’s past experiences with the theatre business. Finally, the disparity scene between Finn’s character and Madeline Chiusano’s character is clearly defined. Chiusano as Cassie earnestly depicts the longing of a dancer’s passion to dance as she refuses to allow a past relationship with Zach to stop her.

In an interview, Director Newman discusses his experience with the cast stating, “This is the hardest working cast I’ve had.” Choreographer Riggle further added, “The kids are really wonderful to work with. I’m very proud of them.” Indeed, as a whole, the cast is singularly superb! The MSC Chorus Line is budding with sensational fresh talent.

This line-up of individuals sparkles with promise of tomorrow’s brightest Broadway stars!!!

Performances for A Chorus Line are April 30, May 1, 2, 7, 8 and 9 at 8 p.m. and May 1 and 10 at 2 p.m. Tickets can be obtained by calling the box office at 893-5121.

Tucker... 'spontaneous' in Gallery 1/2

Cornelia Tucker, a junior surface design major, is exhibiting her work in the student run Gallery 1/2 this week. The show consists of black and white photographs as well as prints. The prints are both line drawings and collages. The collages are made by collaging cardboard and other found objects. When asked what she was trying to express in her prints, Miss Tucker replied, “My work is spontaneous and the designs come from the doodling I’ve been doing in the margins of notebooks my entire life.” She described the prints as an attempt to deal with the creative and logical sides of the brain.

This is achieved as the prints are split in half with geometric shapes on one side (logical) and biomorphic shapes on the other (creative). Like all things, the brain isn’t quite that simple and the two elements begin to intrude on each other’s space. The prints display an overwhelming party of repetition of form and line as well as intricate relationships in pattern. Cornelia uses only two or three colors in each print which are bright and playful.

The photographs she has produced continue in this idea of playfulness. The images are of a silver pitcher, which had been in Cornelias family for years. Tucker elaborated about the work by telling a story of a childhood game she used to play. She said, “When I was little, my sister and I would make faces in this pitcher that sits at our family’s dinner table. I would stretch my neck out to see my reflection, but my parents never knew I was doing it.”

Each photograph is of the silver with a different image reflected in it. Some have Cornelia photographing herself while others are of her little sister and brother making faces in the family tradition. The reflections are distorted as in a fun house mirror. The exhibit is fun and informal but worth checking out. It is up until May 1st.

ONE POTATO TWO

By George Olchowski

Instrumental albums never really did anything for me to me, they were records to listen to while I was cleaning house or washing my car. Then, people like Joe Satriani and Steve Vai came along and changed my outlook on instrumental albums- or, at least, rock instrumental albums.

Marc Bonilla’s debut album EE Ticket is a good album to start off with. It reeks of Steve Vai influence, and if you’re a fan of Steve Vai, you would swear it was him unless you looked at the album. Not that that’s bad, but hopefully Marc will develop his own signature sound with his second album.

The entrance to EE Ticket is the beginning of a roller coaster ride, complete with the ride announcer telling you to keep your hands in the car at all times. Then, you’re off. The opening song; “White Noise,” is a poppy, jazzy rock tune with a guest shot on piano by Keith Emerson of Emerson, Lake, and Palmer. The next song, “Mannequin” is a peppy, jazzy rock tune with a guest shot on piano by Keith Emerson of Emerson, Lake, and Palmer. The next song, “Mannequin” is a good highway cruising tune. “Afterburner” is a nice song to test a certain record execs and former “album artists” are a little cheesed off because due to the CD longbox and jewelbox formats, album art just won’t be the same, if it returns in the CD realm at all. EE Ticket tackles that head on. On the CD itself, there is a picture of an Oriental serpentine-type animal holding a guitar pick in one hand. I kid you not, it is one of the best pictures I have ever seen on a CD, and I believe opens the door to a new form of art. Back in the heyday of vinyl, picture discs were the big thing. Now, every CD has the potential of being a picture disc.

But I digress. EE Ticket is in no way ground-breaking material, but it has a few good songs and makes for some good listening. If you’re a fan of either Vai or Satriani, give this one a look-see. Marc Bonilla has carved himself a nice niche in the world of instrumental rock, and is steadily climbing up the charts. Although “Rocked” reeks of commercialism, and in my opinion, so does the album art, it gets the feet tapping, the one hand doing the air drum on the knee, and is a nice song all-around.

The whole album is like that, much like its predecessor Hysteria: The Pyromania tape with “Heaven Is” and “Make Love Like A Man,” and then slow down into a quiet tune, “Tonight.” The best way to describe this song is to compare it to “Love Bites.” It’s got much the same tempo and the same music quality. One of the best songs on the album is also its longest— “White Lightning,” which comes in at just over seven minutes. Steve Clark had a big hand in writing this one, and die-hard Def Leppard fans will recognize it without a problem. In fact, Clark co-wrote more than half the tunes on Adrenalize.

At first, when I heard that Clark died, I thought Def Leppard would break up. I’m glad it didn’t. The loss of Clark didn’t affect the music at all- it’s still upbeat, still rockin’. They proved that they could survive. They faced writing roadblocks and the deterioration of their band. “Those months before Steve’s death were anything but fun. The clinics, the interventions, the worrying, the realization that we weren’t as strong or as wise as we thought, or that ‘having it all’ and being on top of your profession didn’t mean anything when facing a basic human problem. All we could do was watch and hope and wait. And then, he was gone.”

After reading that, I listened to the album. It’s amazing how after something as traumatic as a band member dying that they could put together such a good-feeling album, one that when you put it into your cassette player in your car, it just picks you up and has such good music on it. What these guys did is put all their love and friendship of Steve Clark and translated it into music. This one’s a good one, a really good one, and I’m proud to put Adrenalize next to my Pyromania and Hysteria albums.

Mark Bonilla

It’s been a good three and a half years since Def Leppard’s last album, Hysteria, and a lot has happened to the band in that time- some members got married, one had a kid, but most of all, guitarist Steve Clark died. Undaunted, Def Leppard still exists, and to prove it, it has released its latest album, Adrenalize.

Will this be the “mother of all albums?” Will Adrenalize break every rock rule known to man? Probably not. But if it’s nice, good feeling rock and roll you’re looking for, then look no further. Its opening song, “Let’s Get Rocked,” seems tailor-made for the MTV and Top 40 fare, and is steadily climbing up the charts. Although “Rocked” reeks of commercialism, and in my opinion, so does the album, it gets the feet tapping, the one hand doing the air drum on the knee, and is a nice song all-around.

The whole album is like that, much like its predecessor Hysteria: The Pyromania tape with “Heaven Is” and “Make Love Like A Man,” and then slow down into a quiet tune, “Tonight.” The best way to describe this song is to compare it to “Love Bites.” It’s got much the same tempo and the same music quality. Exclusive! A candid interview with Ziggy Marley

By John Tibbetts and Marcus Elias

The following is an interview in two parts conducted in two parts with Ziggy Marley, who is to appear at MSC this coming Sunday. Part I was conducted by John Tibbetts, Part II by Marcus Elias.

Part I

What prompted you to write "Drastic" on your Jahmekya album? I wrote it because of all the shit that's going on in South Africa, where I come from, and everywhere else, you know.

Who do you try to reach most with this song? It's a message to all oppressors and politicians who make people suffer. That's who it is for.

How important do you think it is for Americans to be aware of everything that is going on? No, not at all.

You really can't know everything because it is impossible to be aware of everything that is going on, you know. All of us have our own individual problems, and that is a lot to deal with. The real problem is the government. There is enough in the world to feed everyone, but unfortunately there are lots of selfish people. It's wrong to reach out and make people suffer.

What can we do to fight poverty? You as an individual can't do much to fight poverty, it's the government that could make a change. You and me can't really fight poverty much, it's the governments around the world that could, because they have the money and power. Either way, a lot of collectiveness is needed.

Should we work with or against the government? Work with them for what is right, work against them if they are doing something wrong.

On a different note, how do you go about putting a song together? I go about it different ways at different times for different songs.

What gives you the idea to write a song? My own inside, my own thinking, person. That little voice inside of me.

Which comes first, the melody or the lyrics? Lyrics usually come first.

Who helps you? My brother and my sister mostly.

How has Rap music influenced your music? I like Rap music, as well as many other types of music. But, I can't identify with Rap.

Do you condone the use of marijuana? If it's not harmful onto you, you can use it because it is as natural as any other tree on earth. But if it is harmful onto you, then don't use it! It is not something that is man-made like crack, cocaine, aspirin, Valium, or any of those drugs that people give you in hospitals. It is a natural thing which has grown God-made, so you use it accordingly. There is a purpose for it like any other natural thing on earth. If you can't find a purpose for it, use it, just don't abuse it, and don't let it harm you.

Do you think it enlightens people? Put it this way, my friend: If all the world, including Saddam Hussein and George Bush, would burn mari­juana there wouldn't be any wars, like the recent war in Iraq.

What do you expect of your concert here at MSC? Dancing and enjoyment of the music.

Part II

Why did your music change in recent years? Time, as well as everything else changes consistently. The world is growing up, we haven't reached our fullest. As we grow, things change.

On your Jahmekya album, is the song "My Generation" directed towards the generation growing up now, or towards the offspring of our generation? That one's about the generation growing up now, but about its offspring as well.

Are you going to use much of your father's music as an influence in the future? One of these days we wanna do one of those albums with just our father's music on it. On the Jahmekya album we covered "Rainbow Country" already.

Why did you change the name Melody Makers to Jahmekya? As we grow, things change.

What can we do to fight poverty? Put it this way, my friend: If all the world, including Saddam Hussein and George Bush, would burn mari­juana there wouldn't be any wars, like the recent war in Iraq.

What is the message of your song, "Drastic"? It's a message to all oppressors and politicians who make people suffer. That's who it is for.

What is your favorite song on your album? My favorite song is "Drastic." It's a message to all oppressors and politicians who make people suffer.

Do you think it enlightens people? Put it this way, my friend: If all the world, including Saddam Hussein and George Bush, would burn mari­juana there wouldn't be any wars, like the recent war in Iraq.

Do you think it is important for people to be aware of everything that is going on? No, not at all.

You really can't know everything because it is impossible to be aware of everything that is going on, you know. All of us have our own individual problems, and that is a lot to deal with. The real problem is the government. There is enough in the world to feed everyone, but unfortunately there are lots of selfish people. It's wrong to reach out and make people suffer.

What can we do to fight poverty? You as an individual can't do much to fight poverty, it's the government that could make a change. You and me can't really fight poverty much, it's the governments around the world that could, because they have the money and power. Either way, a lot of collectiveness is needed.

Should we work with or against the government? Work with them for what is right, work against them if they are doing something wrong.

On a different note, how do you go about putting a song together? I go about it different ways at different times for different songs.

What gives you the idea to write a song? My own inside, my own thinking, person. That little voice inside of me.

Which comes first, the melody or the lyrics? Lyrics usually come first.

Who helps you? My brother and my sister mostly.

How has Rap music influenced your music? I like Rap music, as well as many other types of music. But, I can't identify with Rap.

Do you condone the use of marijuana? If it's not harmful onto you, you can use it because it is as natural as any other tree on earth. But if it is harmful onto you, then don't use it! It is not something that is man-made like crack, cocaine, aspirin, Valium, or any of those drugs that people give you in hospitals. It is a natural thing which has grown God-made, so you use it accordingly. There is a purpose for it like any other natural thing on earth. If you can't find a purpose for it, use it, just don't abuse it, and don't let it harm you.

Do you think it enlightens people? Put it this way, my friend: If all the world, including Saddam Hussein and George Bush, would burn mari­juana there wouldn't be any wars, like the recent war in Iraq.

What do you expect of your concert here at MSC? Dancing and enjoyment of the music.

Men's tennis moves to 7-3 behind fine play of Orlofsky

by Maureen K. McLeer

The men's tennis team soared to a 7-3 record with wins over Upsala, Ramapo, Stevens, NJIT and NYU. The win against Upsala, Ramapo, and NJIT with scores of 8-1. Two big "confidence boosters" came with wins over Stevens 7-2, and NYU, 5-4. According to Coach Fitzpatrick, "These were tough matches and big wins."

The team's third loss came when Glassboro defeated MSC 6-3. "A close match and a tough one to swallow," Fitzpatrick said. Along with this came a lost opportunity when MSC was plagued with a rainout against Rutgers Camden. The team's record of 7-3 is up from last year's 3-5 mark. This is largely due to phenomenal playing on the part of David Orlofsky. Orlofsky is a graduating senior who is going out in style. With a record of 8-2, Orlofsky has provided the team with spirit, maturity and many victories.

The team will bid farewell to two other players at the close of the season. Doug Said, Fitzpatrick's "Utility Man," will be graduating in June. Said often fills in whenever needed, and he usually delivers. Joe Gaspar will also be graduating in June. Gaspar plays sixth singles and came up with big wins over Stevens and NJIT.

"I feel we're playing really well right now," Kane said. "The guys are scoring and doing the right job on defense, so I don't see any reason why we shouldn't be able to make a strong run for the championship."

A perfect example of the Red Hawks teamwork occurred in the sixth game of the season. The opponent was Drew University, a potential top 15 school. In what most people considered to be its strongest game of the year so far, MSC confounded Drew at every turn and came away with an impressive 15-9 victory. In that game, Kane showed why Alそrform.com calls him "a sure bet to reach All-American status in the near future" and "the best goalie in the conference," as he turned aside 30 shots to lead the Red Hawks to their fifth win of the season.

It was a hard-fought game, the kind Kane excels in. Ever since his high school coach Bob Turco drilled the work ethic into him, Kane, a psychology major who hopes to work for the FBI one day, has made sure he's prepared for every opponent. "Coach Turco always impressed the need upon us that we've got to want to win the game," Kane said. "To be really successful at anything you've got to want it bad enough. That kind of thinking has made a difference in my life both on and off the field."

As someone close to the team once said (paraphrasing), "As Kane goes, so go the Red Hawks." That appears to be true. If he's half as successful at putting criminals behind bars for the Federal Bureau of Investigation as he is in preventing goals on the lacrosse field, the U.S. had better start building new penal institutions - we're going to need them.

Track and field performs well at Penn Relays

by Mark A. Bolony

The MSC track and field team traveled to the Penn Relays this past week in order to attain the goals they set for themselves at the onset of the season. In reaching these goals at the University of Pennsylvania in front of nearly 30,000 spectators, the team learned that when you reach for the golden ring, you have to grab it and hold on with both hands. To put it simply, the men's and women's teams each traveled to the Penn Relays with one simple thing on their minds: both teams wanted to reach the championship rounds in their respective events. Well, both teams attained this feat, but in turn learned a valuable lesson in doing so: even in defeat, champions can be born.

The men's 1600-meter relay team traveled to the 98th Penn Relays and did something no other men's team has ever done. It brought home a Penn Relay Plaque by running away with the event with a time of 3:15:23. The MSC team ran against teams such as the University of Maryland, Hunter College and the University of North Carolina. It did just well enough to take the top spot in the event with a time of 3:15:23. The MSC team ran against teams such as the University of Maryland, Hunter College and the University of North Carolina. Sports rule the world

What our lives would be like if there were no such thing as sports

Turn on the TV! Turn on the radio! Wherever you are, anytime, anywhere, sports is there. It could be 1:20 p.m. or 1 a.m. It doesn’t matter, because sports is what keeps this country from going under.

Many of you are saying, “What’s the talking point? Are you sure there is a method to my madness.”

The other night, I turned on the TV at 1:30 a.m. and there were two hockey games and a baseball game still being televised. Then at the end of the baseball game, Sportscenter was on. Watching all these games at the wee hours of the morning, I began to wonder—What life would be like without sports?

This is a very scary thought. A lot of women would probably say, “It would be great. I’d get to see my boyfriend or husband more.” But, it goes a lot deeper than that.

When I think of life, especially my life, without sports, I think about bacon without eggs, rum without coke, Fred without Ethel...You get the picture.

My life, and I’m not alone here, revolves around sports. I know I’m not the only person who can recite ESPN’s programming schedule. We all know that Roy Firestone is on at 6 p.m. Sportscenter is on at 7 and 11:30 p.m. and also at 2:30 a.m. We can set our clocks by it.

What would you do if there was no ESPN, Sportschannel, TNT or MSG Network to watch? What if you couldn’t turn on Channel 4 during any Sunday in the winter and watch a football game? What if there were no Monday Night Football? One thing is certain: more babies would be conceived on Monday night.

Have you ever thought about this? We’d be forced to watch those old movies Channel 5 shows every Sunday, or reruns of Father Knows Best. How boring! This is killing me!

But without sports, there would be no such thing as a baseball hat. I would be wearing either a beret or a cowboy hat. My shirt would either be a plain white T-shirt, something tie-dyed or a concert shirt, like Van Halen. My sweats would be plain blue and I’d be wearing something like moccasins on my feet. Can you imagine how ridiculous I’d look?

A lot of you are saying, “I’d still be wearing sneakers.” Is that true? I don’t think so. Running is a sport. Aerobics is a sport. What else besides sports are sneakers used for? They are comfortable, but so are moccasins or docksidekers. I don’t know about you, but I buy sneakers for playing basketball or baseball, not because they are comfortable.

It doesn’t end here. Not only would our wardrobe change, but our language, or lingo, would also be altered. We all use terms like “In your face” and “Striking out” everyday. How would you talk about sex if there was no such thing as baseball? What would the hell good do the birds and bees do? It’s best described by using baseball terminology.

We all say, “I struck out” or “I made it to first base.” Of course, there is the most popular, “I hit a home run,” which is usually followed by a few high-fives, another thing that wouldn’t exist if it hadn’t been for sports.

Healthy bodies would also be non-existent because weight-lifting and aerobics are sports. Without them, our exercise would be limited to walking, swimming and working menial labor jobs. And since we’re lazy, the and women would say, “It’s a better way that I don’t understand what you are talking about.” Maybe not, but when you say, “She’s so hot” or “He’s got a great body,” you are referring to people who have participated in a sport. Most people have to work for these bodies.

Imagine children growing up without being able to go to a ball game with Dad or bike riding with Mom. Sports is one of the most important things to have in your youth.

“Without sports, young people going through puberty would be unable to release their newly found sexual wave of energy,” said Russ Mene, an accounting major. “Sports help to depressurize these young people’s genitals, decrease their high hormone count and reduce agitation that could lead to puberty terrorism.”

This may be somewhat of a distorted view, but there is some truth in his words. What would children be doing if they weren’t participating in sports? It could be dangerous.

Not only children benefit from sports; we all do! Gabriella Caserio, an English major, said, “Sports allow all people a few hours to abandon prejudices and to secure a common goal—success. In our society, every moment counts.”

Our society would not be able to survive without sports. The one thing I’ve yet to mention is money.

Sports revenue is among the greatest in the world. The equation is something like: athletes + television = huge profit. But without athletes, there would be little profit.

There are millions and billions of sports-related jobs, so the unemployment figure would be incredible.

Athletes, trainers, general managers, coaches, managers, owners, sportscasters, sportswriters, among many others, would all be unemployed. Considering the economy right now, with all the people involved in sports who would be looking for work, there would be less specialization and the work force would shrink even more.

You probably never realized that sports is so important to us. Everyone has to admit that athletics, whether participating, promoting or enjoying, is not just a money-making business. It’s an integral part of our life.

What an option we have, sports or living like Canseco and Tom. I know which one I’d choose.

RED HAWK NOTES...All statistics are for this weekend.

Though the team was hindered by bad weather and the inability to carry out the fundamentals that have helped it to achieve the level of excellence it has enjoyed all season, it still managed to reach the goals it had set prior to the Penn Relays.

The team reached the championship round in the events it had wanted to and from this it will be able to gain some much needed experience so that it will be able to compete on a higher level in the upcoming events which will revitalize the magnitude of the Penn Relays.

III team to perform in the event. The 1600-meter relay team finished second behind Northeastern in an event containing competition from The University of Delaware, University of Maryland, Lehigh and Coach Blanton's former school, Lincoln University of Maryland. Lehigh and Coach Blanton’s former school, Lincoln University, 16:52.33; while Northeastern took top honors with a time of 16:54.98. With a team that includes Denise Drakes, Shantay Brames, Sharon Lindo and Sherine Tims, MSC will be a force to be reckoned with at the Nationals, which take place the final week of May.

Only the strong survive. It's all about winning. It's a question of who wants it more. The NJAC Softball Tournament began on Sunday and the Red Hawks showed they wanted it more as they eliminated the Kean Cougars from the playoffs with a 3-2 win. However, the Red Hawks only have three remaining conference games, WPC has six and TSC has five, both due to bad luck with the weather.

Schoenig seemed optimistic about his club's chances to move up in the conference standings. "We're not overly concerned about the weather. We've been going great for Schoenig and his Red Hawks.

MSC has not lost an NJAC game since April 6, which is good for nine straight conference victories. The Red Hawks currently stand at 10-3 in NJAC play and are creeping up on front-runners William Paterson (9-1 NJAC) and Trenton State (9-2 NJAC). While MSC only has three remaining conference games, WPC has six and TSC has five, both due to bad luck with the weather.

Schoenig seemed optimistic about his club's chances to move up in the conference standings. "We're not overly concerned about the weather. We've been going great for Schoenig and his Red Hawks.

In earlier action, the Red Hawks swept their third consecutive double-header, taking two games from Rutgers Camden on Saturday. In Game 1, MSC had an offensive field day, scoring 28 runs and drilling 42 hits against the two-game set.

This was a good thing MSC scored all of those runs according to Schoenig. "We needed those runs against this team, because they can flat out hit," he said.

In the first game, MSC again received a big contribution from Cristelli, who collected two singles, a double, and three RBI, in leading the Red Hawks to an 11-6 win. Pallino and third baseman Rob DiLaurienti knocked in the runners for the winners, who bunted out 20 hits. Senior right-hander Joe DeMiro got the win for MSC, upping his record to 4-0.

Game two saw more of the same and some from the visiting Red Hawks. They ripped 22 hits, gaining a 17-4 victory over Rutgers Camden. Pallino belted a home run.
