10-22-1992

The Montclarion, October 22, 1992

The Montclarion

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.montclair.edu/montclarion

Recommended Citation
https://digitalcommons.montclair.edu/montclarion/655
Outside groups and faculty allowed to drink on campus, students aren't

by Cliff Annicelli

The consumption of alcohol at meetings held in the Student Center by an outside-campus attorney's organization has left many students and administrators confused about just what MSC's alcohol policy is in regards to both outside and on-campus organizations.

The latest questions about MSC's alcohol policy were precipitated by a meeting on the evening of Sept. 14, held by a group called The Brennan Inns of Court. The Inns of Court is an organization of lawyers who periodically meet to discuss legal and educational developments within their profession. The meetings, which are held 20 times per year in the Student Center by the Brennan group, as well as by another Inns of Court group, regularly feature the legally sanctioned sale of alcohol.

The hearing was a "fact finding" session and a chance for different campus groups to have their say about the issue of bringing alcohol back to the Rathskeller.

The College Senate decided to support the resolution to bring back alcohol. However, the real deciding factor is the Administration, namely President Reid and his Vice Presidents Mr. Thomas Auck of administration and finance, Dr. Richard Lynde of academic affairs and Dr. Jesse Rosenblum of institutional advancement and Dr. Jesse Rosenblum of institutional advancement, none of whom were in attendance at the hearing.

The hearing allowed several sides of the issue to be heard. The diversity of the organizations was meant to give an overall idea of how the campus feels about bringing alcohol back to the Ratt.

Gouri Sadhwani, President of the SGA, said of the Administration's absence at the hearing that it was "very important for them to be there" and that "how can they make a decision (about the resolution) without seeing how the campus feels." Dean Martin, speaking for the division of student affairs, said that 88 percent of students felt there were enough activities offered by MSC.

Dean Martin, speaking for the division of student affairs, said that 88 percent of students felt there were enough activities offered by MSC. He said that alcohol is a depressant that impairs judgement and motor functions. Martin also said that there are over 8,000 commuters who could license to campus, drink, and then get on the roads drunk.

Margaree Coleman-Carter, director of residence life, said of the student population that are over 21, 50 percent live on Clove Road where alcohol is permitted. Coleman-Carter said that when alcohol was served on campus, there was often violence and disruptive behavior in the halls that put a strain on the Residence Hall staff.

Gregory Lombart, director of athletics, said that many negative incidents have occurred.

Please turn to ALCOHOL page 5

Alcohol policies across New Jersey

by Pete Quilla

On March 4, 1989, the N.J. State Police raided the Rathskeller based on charges that it was selling alcohol to minors. Subsequently, our liquor license was suspended. Although MSC later regained its license, the administration has continued to block any chances of letting the sale and consumption of alcohol by students back to campus.

This incident, along with other cases occurring at other colleges across the state, has underlined one major fact; alcohol on campuses has always causes an uproar with some body. Because of this, policies that deal with allowing or not allowing alcohol on campus have been instituted at colleges throughout New Jersey.

The following is a summarized list of some of New Jersey's college alcohol policies (I could not find Rutgers), including MSC's current policy.

With this list, you, the humble reader, can see who is drinking well and who is not.

Please turn to POLICY page 6

WMSC's license reinstated until 1998

by Lisa Lustman

WMSC-FM's license has been renewed in spite of an indecency complaint filed with the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) last year, said General Manager Stuart Weissman. "Even the FCC is having trouble defining what is indecency and what isn't," Weissman said. "We're just glad the FCC is doing the job they were created for as opposed to showing censor to what goes on the air."

The complaint, filed on May 15, 1991, by Shelley Showell of Upper Montclair, was in response to the lyrics contained in the song "Stick Yo Cock" by Spit, which was played at 6:50 p.m.

Please turn to WMS page 3
INTERNATIONAL

The EPA reported that drinking water in 130 cities worldwide contains excessive levels of lead, the ones affecting the U.S. being New York, Detroit, and Washington DC.

South Africa’s Parliament voted that it is permissible for blacks to serve on the Cabinet. President de Klerk won’t allow, however, a black on his Cabinet until a new racial treaty pact is written.

A Berlin district court cleared all other court dates so as to allow East German leader Honecker, to be put on trial on Nov. 12. His crime is 12 counts of manslaughter to East Germans as they tried to flee the country after the Berlin Wall was built in 1961. Honecker is 80 years old and has cancer of the liver. He returned to Germany after hiding in Moscow for 18 years.

In other German news, German police said Petra Kelly, the founder of the Greens Party, was slain by her long-time companion, who then killed himself. Their bodies were found in the suburb of Bonn. Petra was 44 while Gert Bernstain was 69.

NATO defense ministers agreed to start plans for peace keeping operations across Europe, hoping to cooperate with the collapsed Warsaw Pact.

NATIONAL

The presidential campaigns are nearing a close. Says one Republican political strategist, “It is late, very late. The Republicans’ only hope is that people are holding back in deciding and will end up being too nervous about Clinton.”

The President is in a position where change has few. Clinton leads in states such as New Jersey, Ohio and Michigan. “The Democrats have taken a local strategy they used in the South and have internationalized, taking an attractive candidate with a message and they do that they almost always win,” says Patrick Cullen, a University of Alabama political scientist. Bush could have a fighting chance if there happens to be any international incident and disclosure about mishaps from Clinton. Bush the support won’t come from his orth politics. Clinton has the edge in several Southern states, which, say several leading politicians, “withholds award of approval”, reassuring voters about a political newcomer.

In the debate, Mr. Bush charged that Clinton couldn’t raise enough money for his ambitious plans without raising average tax payers’ taxes. Clinton clearly responded with, “It is irresponsible for any president to say ‘read my lips.’ No president can see all the emergencies that might develop, any problems that might happen in the country. What I can say is we’re going to pay for the program with the program I’ve outlined: a tax increase on two-parent families with incomes above $200,000 and asking foreign corporations to pay some of their income tax, like American companies do.”

LOCAL

More than three dozen students at a Clifton Parochial School were treated for food poisoning Tuesday. The students reportedly ate soup that had a high concentration of nitrates, which caused them to become ill with a form of anemia. All children were reported to be in stable condition.

According to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), nine public water systems in New Jersey have been found to have higher than acceptable levels of lead in their drinking water. The four largest systems include: Newark, Jersey City, The Passaic Valley Water Company and Trenton. The EPA has stated however, that the water is harmless and said simple steps like using cold water for cooking lowers the levels and will help remedy the problem.

CORRECTIONS

In last week’s article on “Neighbors” the circulation of was misprinted, it should have been 20,000 (not 200,000). Also Phyllis Miller is the Director of Communications and Carpe Diem is a publication of 60,000 and is circulated to more than just parents of students and alumni.

It is the policy of The Montclarion to correct any errors. If you spot an error please notify us at 893-5169
Sorority pledge harasse dby caller

by Nancy Gannon

A sorority pledge was allegedly verbally harassed by a male, who claimed he is a pledged fraternity, said Campus Police.

A Sigma Delta Phi pledge said she received a series of telephone calls at her off-campu sresidence. The caller identified himself to her as a pledge of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity, an organization which does not exist on MSC campus.

According to the pledge, the harassment began last Thursday, Oct. 14, at 2 a.m. She was awakened by the male caller, who asked her if she was a pledge of Sigma Delta Phi Sorority. She said yes and asked him why he was calling. He told her that he was a pledge, and his fraternity had asked him to interview her.

She agreed to the interview because she understood it as a "pledge thing." After several basic questions, she said he became "obnoxious," and began describing her appearance to her. She became concerned.

She said she heard, "Did you ever go to a frat party?" She replied yes. Then he asked her, "Did you hear about the girl who was raped on campus?" Then he asked her not to go to any frat parties because she was "next." She hung up and said she phoned Campus Police, who did not answer the phone. The male caller came from and who they were. She felt very threatened.

"I want to ask them how they would feel if it was their sister," she said. "It's not continuing, and I don't feel out of control, I will take further action."" James Harris, Dean of Student Activities, was disturbed by the situation.

"Harassment is a criminal activity. A person like this doesn't deserve any breaks. I will take this matter very seriously, and find out exactly what is going on, I will take further action." Mark Moran, dean of students, was also disturbed by the situation.

"I am very distressed that one of our residents' safety has been a concern. As president of residents' safety has been a concern. As president of special and Philadelphia, she was activated by the Marine Corps Reserve as a result of Operation Desert Shield/Storm.

"In June 1991, the New Jersey State Legislature passed an act (Senate #3196) which protected under this law and there are several stages involved in the review process. But all parties are kept informed until the Commission gives its final ruling. Then, if neither party is pleased with the decision, they can take it to the courts.

"Clearly, the New Jersey State Legislature has been made an important issue in the presidential campaign by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. I plan to make sure we consult with the Bill of Rights is controversial," Strossen said. "I want to emphasize the 'American' in American Civil Liberties Union.

Strossen, the first female president of the ACLU in its 71 year history, graduated magna cum laude from Harvard Law School in 1975. While there, she served as the editor of the Law Review. She teaches constitutional law at both Columbia and New York University law schools, and has practiced litigation at several New York law firms.

The free lecture is sponsored by the Montclair State College Association, with additional funding provided by the Faculty-Student Co-Op Association. Further information may be obtained by calling (201) 893-4141 or (201) 893-5225.

WMSC, from page 1

The case of an MSC student who was denied a grade upon his request from service in the Persian Gulf War has been dismissed from N.J. Superior Court in Essex County.

The Hon. Dr. Margolis disallowed the case of James D. Lloyd, MSC, Richard A. Lynde, Provost and Vice President of Academic Affairs, and Dr. Barbara Chanin of the Sociology Department on Oct. 2. Margolis informed Lloyd's attorney, William Stellato, that the firm Cozen and O'Connor in Westmont, N.J., that Lloyd should refer his case to the Chancellor of Higher Education, James Harris who was doing a better job at running the radio station.

"It's a load of everyone's shoulders. We are doing a better job at running the radio station. "I am very pleased that we have been able to get back to the music, they will stay within state guidelines."

"Weissman and WMSC members are delighted to hear that the songs. Indecent lyrics are marked so they can't be played. If someone plays them, they're out of the station."

"Vin Toscano, former General Manager and current co-host of 'Vin and Tone's Excellent Radio Show,' agrees that it's time for the station to move on to bigger and better things. "I'm glad to see that the situation is finally resolved," he said. "It's a load of everyone's shoulders and now we can get back to what the station is supposed to be doing."
The College Life Union Board Homecoming Committee would like to thank the following individuals and organizations for their assistance and participation throughout....

HOMECOMING 1992: UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Andrea Nemeth, Sam Rock, Corinne Agins & Jeff, Jeff's truck, Darrin King, Alision Murphy, Terri Caldes, Sonja, DeeDee Penn, Margaret Marszat, Lisa, Father Art, Diana Rutter, Kenny Wolpin, Selina Lawson, Chuck Finer, Kathy Rodriguez, Marsha Campbell-Young, Robin, Evelyn Waters, Coach Schoenig, Coach Giancola, Holly Gera, The MSC Football team, the cheerleaders, Dean Harris, Dr. Desi, Dean Martin, President Reid, Garden State Fireworks Co. (Especially for setting the campus on fire), Montclair Fire Department (for putting the fire out), Garden State Screen Printers, Montclair Police Dept., Sgt. Lloyd, Sgt. Cell, Officer Frank, Officer Kathy, Campus Police, Montclair Volunteer Ambulance Unit, Little Falls Fire Dept., Roberta Paterson, MSC Alumni Assoc., Bob Gezia, Dominick De Simone, Radio Shack, Rick Brown, Rich Kunze, Gouri Sadhwani, Robert Tranter, Paul Giamboi, MSC Maintenance, Student Center Maintenance, Elmo, Mary (Especially for not cleaning up our organized mess until it was all over), Christa McGrath, The Skyliners Drum and Bugle Corps, King George and Queen Kara, Kara's Boyfriend, Queen Greg and Queen Janet, Z100, The Montclarion, Stu and WMSC, Class One Concerts, Disney, Jack Samuels, all organizational alumni, Zeta Beta Tau, Sigma Delta Phi, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Delta Chi, Sigma Delta Tau, Sigma Sigma Sigma, Tau Phi Beta, Delta Kappa Psi, Alpha Iota Chi, Residence Life, Delta Phi Epsilon, Alpha Phi Omega, Sigma Alpha Iota, OSAU, LASO, Alpha Chi Rho, Alpha Omega, Theta Kappa Chi, Theta Xi, Phi Sigma Sigma, Medieval Society, Phi Alpha Psi (Senate), and anyone else whom we may have come in contact with or we may have forgotten, but it was an extremely long and tiring week, it's not that you weren't important but you just don't stick out in our minds at this time. Our brains our mush. But anyhow, we love you all...

THANKS A LOT..... Walter Kulick and Gina Vasel
1992 Homecoming Coordinators

P.S. COMING SOON....(Here we go again) Spring Week '93 (and Carnival ?)

P.S. Again: THANKS FOR NO HOMECOMING RIOT !!!
RATT, from page 1

10/17/92: A Bohn Hall resident parked his car in Lot 21 and upon returning discovered that the car was stolen along with his personal property.

10/17/92: Maurice Perry, Grounds Crew Supervisor, found a student's vehicle broken window as he was cleaning the lot with the grounds crew. The passenger side window was broken and the radio was missing from the dashboard.

Thief

Karen Katz said that there was a 60 percent sales profit at the Ratt as long as the drinking age was over 21. In 1983, when the drinking age was raised from 18 to 21, serving alcohol ceased to be profitable and eventually became illegal.

On March 3, 1989, The Alcohol and Beverage Commission raided the Ratt and 12 students were arrested for under-age drinking (60 percent of whom were found guilty).

From an economic perspective, Blackburn said he can't make money based on the demographics. He said that there are compelling reasons to continue the non-alcohol policy on campus and if it were brought back there should be reasonable procedures set up for serving. He also said there should be a way to subsidize the loss of selling alcohol and at least break even.

Graduate Students Organization's Rita Reid said that the administration students polled, 54 percent said yes, or "yes but..." to the question of bringing back alcohol. Twenty-three percent said no, and 17 percent said they did not care.

Sue Herbst, vice president of the Greek council and SGA member, researched campus pubs at several state schools and put together their best points for Senates to turn not to turn down the proposal she put before them because of student bartender or other questions on policy because the proposal was very open to compromise.

Herbst said she believes this could spark weekend life on campus, as opposed to what was called a "de-serted campus and run-down.

Philip Calitre of Campus Police said there would be a two-fold problem for Campus Police if alcohol was served on campus: operation and post-operation, crowd control and law enforcement. Calitre says that he does not have the resources to take control of the added responsibilities and his staff is stretched thin as it is now.

Calitre said that since alcohol is no longer been served at the Ratt, problems on Thursday have significantly diminished. He said, "We can handle an additional burden."

Calitre said he would need an additional 10 staff members to provide sufficient control of the situation.

Theft of Motor Vehicle

10/16/92: A Bohn Hall resident parked his car in Lot 21 and upon returning discovered that the car was stolen along with his personal property.

10/16/92: A non-student was visiting a friend in Blaton Hall and parked her car behind the building. When she returned, she found that her hubcaps were stolen.

Burglary - Theft from Motor Vehicle

10/16/92: Maurice Perry, Grounds Crew Supervisor, found a student's vehicle broken window as he was cleaning the lot with the grounds crew. The passenger side window was broken and the radio was missing from the dashboard.

Harassment

10/20/92: A Blanton Hall resident received five phone calls from an unknown male regarding obscene things. She recorded three of the five calls. She also received a call from a different male caller stating something about her pledging Alpha Omega Sorority.
and who is not drinking at all.

Kean College: Students 21 and over can only drink at the College Pub and/or the College Cougar’s Den. A picture I.D. is required. There is no drinking allowed on campus, at athletic events, at social events or in the classroom.

Seton Hall: Students of legal drinking age may drink in their residence hall unless it is designated as a “no alcohol allowed” hall. Some students may also drink in any outdoor area or campus building that has a written permission or license to sell or distribute alcoholic beverages.

Jersey City State: Students of legal age may imbibe during licensed and approved social functions inside the Student Union Building. No alcohol is allowed inside the residence halls.

Rampage College: Students 21 and over may drink at an authorized and licensed social function. Two forms of identification, one of them a Rampage College I.D., are required. Non-alcoholic beverages and food must also be served at these events. The only on-campus students who may drink are the residents of the upperclassmen apartments (College Park and the Lodge). Kegs are prohibited. (Policy of apartments similar to Clove Road alcohol policy)

William Paterson College: Students of legal age may consume at the College Pub or inside the apartments of Pioneer and Heritage Halls. Any resident who live in the Clove Road apartments (College Park and the Lodge) or in the residence halls. Students 21 and over who live in the Clove Road apartments may consume alcohol. However, no large parties or kegs are allowed in the apartments.

In a nutshell, it is clear that Montclair State College has the most restrictive policy out of all the colleges presented here. However, thanks to Suzie Martin, a decision on the proposal has been postponed so that the faculty portion of the Senate could gather and review all of the information many hope that continued negotiations and revisions of the proposed policy will result in a campus that treats college students of drinking age as adults.

Proposed Alcohol Policy Part

Montclair State College (soon to be re-named)

1. Students of legal drinking age, with two forms of I.D. (one of them an MSC I.D.) may purchase alcohol from the Rathskeller, Thursday through Saturday, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. (Last call is 1:30 a.m.)

2. All MSC students names, social security number and birth dates will be listed on a monthly computer printout in order to verify that each student entering the Rattskeller, Thursday through Saturday, 9 p.m. to 2 a.m. (Last call is 1:30 a.m.)

3. Non-students need two forms of identification, one of them an MSC I.D., are required. Non-alcoholic beverages and food must be served at all activities where alcoholic beverages are served. (This is the policy that MSC wishes to emulate.)

Montclair State College (present policy) No alcohol is allowed on campus or in the residence halls. Students 21 and over who live in the Clove Road apartments may consume alcohol. However, no large parties (over a dozen people) and no kegs are allowed in the apartments.

In a nutshell, it is clear that Montclair State College has the most restrictive policy out of all the colleges presented here. However, thanks to Suzie Herbst, Chairperson of the SGA-sponsored Ad Hoc Committee on Alcohol Awareness, a new proposal for an alcohol policy at MSC has been drafted. While this proposal is far from being the last word on allowing alcohol on our campus, it is a step towards a solution that will hopefully benefit everyone involved with the campus community.

Policies, from page 1
OSAU has open house for Kitabu Library

OSAU (Organization of Students for African Unity) had its Sprague Library, said Jason Field, president of OSAU. "We have a lot of books that they don't have." Among Kitabu's shelves are religious books such as "You Can Live Forever in Paradise on Earth," and "Black Christian Nationalism," written by Albert B. Cleage, Jr. In the future, OSAU will be expanding its library. Mark Williams, a senior and chairperson of Kitabu said, "We will be adding more bookshelves since our budget has increased from $300 to $375."

The Open House for Kitabu Library made it possible for everyone, as well as faculty and staff, to enjoy African-American literature.

CAMPUS LIFE

"Outing" AIDS: The controversy over ethics

by Nancy Gannon

Faculty members clashed over the Arthur Ashe AIDS "Outing" at the Journalism meeting, "Does the media need a transfusion of Ethics?" held Monday in the Student Center.

"This outing has provoked serious heartfelt emotions among journalists. My colleagues feel that I'm suppressing news, but I feel very strongly about this," said Journalism professor Ruth Bayard Smith, guest speaker at the meeting.

Ron Hollander, coordinator of the Journalism program, held a different viewpoint. "The public has the right to know. Ashe is a public figure with an illness of public interest. AIDS strikes everyone," he said.

The debate between these journalists and others who participated in the meeting reflected an ongoing public debate regarding "The Right to Privacy vs. The Public's Right to Know (The Freedom of the Press); a conflict of the First and Sixth Amendments." USA Today "outed" Arthur Ashe, a former tennis star, after they learned that he had the AIDS virus last Spring. Ashe had previously contracted the virus through a blood transfusion.

According to Smith, USA Today received a great deal of feedback from the public when the story ran. The response was negative. Ninety-five percent of the calls were against the article. "There was also some controversy about how the reporter and the new paper handled the sources. According to Smith, the report asked Ashe if he had AIDS and Ashe admitted to him to confirm the report that he did have the AIDS virus. It was lazy and sloppy reporting," Hollander said.

Today USA Today wanted to be the first to get the story. Smith said, "Hollander disagreed, saying that the motivation for the outing was in the forefront. They USA Today wanted to be the first to get the story. Smith said, "It's not illegal to lie," Hollander said. "It may be unethical," said Rita Jacobs, professor of English and Journalism.

The question of morality lies at the center of the controversy surrounding this issue. Was Ashe's privacy invaded? Did the information that was published serve a greater good to the public? According to Hollander, it is the purpose of a news organization to discriminate information, not to make value judgments.

Smith, a new professor in the journalism program, maintained that the press went too far in "outing" Ashe. She hosted the program.

Aside from teaching two classes this semester, she is also a restaurant critic for The New Jersey Monthly and a freelance writer for publications such as The New York Times Book Review. She was a full-time correspondent and received her Master's Degree in Education from Harvard University.

CAMPUS: The Community Speaks

Did Sinead O' Connor go too far when she ripped up a picture of the Pope on national TV?

Yes, because the Pope means a lot to Catholics. But I can understand why she did it.

Dana Purcel
Senior, Home Economics

Yes, I believe in freedom of expression. However, I draw the line when someone blatantly insults a person's beliefs.

John Inverso
Senior, English

I don't know if she went too far, but it was not a good way to bring attention to her cause.

Daniella Halpern
Junior, Childhood Education

Yes. I think she has problems and needs help.

Fred Hurtudo
Junior, Biology
Don't wait. Start planning for graduate school

Are you thinking about attending graduate school immediately after graduation? It may very well be a good idea if you have a clear sense of what career you want to pursue and if an advanced degree is required for entry into that field. Or, if you have always loved the classroom experience and a particular academic discipline, then graduate school will probably turn out to be a satisfying and valuable experience. However, for most students the decision to continue on to graduate school without a break will not be as clear cut. It is certainly not a decision that should be made hastily, in the final months or weeks before graduation. You will want to carefully assess your reasons for wanting to continue your education. While graduate school can be viewed as a refuge from a weak job market, it is not the ideal place to "find yourself". Graduate school is widely viewed as a place where one specializes in a particular field. Admission committees expect applicants to have clearly defined goals and will seek evidence of this in your application or during the interview if one is required. If you are unsure about your interest in graduate school, seek advice from faculty, friends, family members and the Career Services staff. The general rule of thumb is "When the doubts are great, get work experience, then decide." There are two major reasons why work experience can help increase the likelihood of an effective graduate school experience: 1. Related work experience will help you clarify ambiguous career goals. 2. Work experience can offset mediocre grades or test scores and enhance your application credentials. In order to identify appropriate schools and programs, you may want to consult "Peterson's Guides to Graduate Study". These guides describe each field of study, the specific academic programs, admission requirements, costs, financial aid resources and other relevant information. Use this directory to write for catalogs and financial aid information. Application deadlines can range from one year prior to the date of intended enrollment to as little as one month before classes begin. Many programs require an admissions test such as the GRE, GMAT, LSAT, M.A.T., etc. If required, you should plan to take the exam approximately one year before you hope to begin the program. You can prepare for the exam by purchasing a review book (less than $25) or by taking a preparatory course ($150-$700). Check the yellow pages or one of the many bulletin boards around campus to identify organizations which offer these courses. There is a great debate with regard to whether these courses will actually improve your score. We know that some of these courses will not hurt you. Two or three letters of recommendation from professors and/or employers will also be required for admission. Approval of these individuals at least three months before the deadline to give them time to prepare a thoughtful statement. Be sure to discuss projects/courses in progress and give them a copy of your application essay. The application essay must be prepared with great care. It will be used by an admissions committee to assess your interest in the field, motivation, maturity and ability to succeed academically. Have a faculty member or Career Services critique your essay for content. It will take time to develop and may need to be rewritten several times. Naturally, cost is an important factor when choosing a program. It is usually less costly to attend a state college/university rather than a private institution and you may want to factor this into your plans. Much financial assistance is provided by the institutions themselves in the form of graduate assistantships, scholarships and other forms of tuition waivers. Outside forms of financial aid are also available. You can find some of the publications which provide financial aid information in Career Services and Spangrace Library. Graduate school will require a substantial investment of time and energy. If you plan well, success in graduate school and your career will follow.

The Studio Theatre will present Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" from November 3-7 at 8 p.m. and November 8 at 2 p.m. in the Studio Theatre in the Speech Building at MSC. General admission tickets are $4 standard, $3 for senior citizens and MSC faculty, staff and alumni and $2 for students. For more information call the Box Office at (201) 893-5112.

MSC Homecoming '92: The epitome of school spirit

by Sam Rock

MSC Homecoming is the biggest event of the fall semester. This year, several activities were scheduled throughout the week to commemorate the event. Class One Concernts held an "Open Mic Nite", which featured various types of music and poetry readings on Monday. College Life Union Board (CLUB) sponsored a comedy show on Tuesday. Over 150 people attended this event. On Wednesday, CLUB sponsored theirynchronously lip-sync competition. "Mike and the Teds" came in first place with their rendition of "Baby got Back". The pledges of Alpha Omega sorority came in second place with "I'm too Sexy", and the pledges of Alpha Phi Rho fraternity came in third place with their rendition of "Happy Trails". CLUB sponsored two showings of the Disney film "Beauty and the Beast" on Thursday. Alpha Phi Omega fraternity sponsored the annual bonfire on Friday. Several campus notables spoke at the bonfire, including Ed Martin, Dean of Students, Father Art and Coach Giancola. Later in the evening, several campus organizations participated in building floats and preparing skits for Saturday's parade. Delta Chi fraternity and Sigma Delta Tau sorority beat out twenty other organizations in their depiction of the Wild West to take first place in the annual Homecoming Day Parade. Alpha Phi Omega fraternity and Alpha Omegam sorority came in second place with their tribute to Walt Disney and Delta Phi Epsilon sorority came in third place with their rendition of "Little Shop of Horrors". Spectators at Saturday night's football game were treated to a fireworks display and a musical performance by the New York Skyliners drum and baggie corps. At the end of the game, Dean Martin, Dr. Domenica DeSideriodocci (vice-president of student affairs, and President Irvin Reid addressed the crowd. After they spoke, the winners of CLUB's annual Homecoming King/Queen contest were announced.

The annual Kappa Alpha Psi "Senate" fraternity was crowned Homecoming King 1992. First runner-up was Leon Kowalski of Delta Chi fraternity and second runner-up was Lewis Watson of Phi Beta Sigma fraternity.

Throughout the week thousands of MSC students attended the various events to show support for the school and the community, while having a good time.
GRADUATE & PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL FAIR
Wednesday
October 28, 1992
11:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.
STUDENT CENTER BALLROOMS A, B & C

Join in workshop discussions.
"The Admissions Process" 11:30 a.m. - 12:30 p.m. and 1 p.m. - 2 p.m.
Talk to representatives and pick up applications from the following schools:

Baruch College
Central Connecticut State University
College of Insurance
College of New Rochelle
Columbia University - Programs in Occupational Therapy
Farleigh Dickinson University - Rutherford Campus
Fordham University - Grad. School of Education
Fordham University - Grad. School of Social Science
Hunter College - Dept. of Urban Affairs
Iona College - Rockland Campus
La Salle University
Los Angeles College of Chiropractic
Monmouth College
Montclair State
New Jersey Institute of Technology
New Jersey Medical School
New York Chiropractic College
New York University - Graduate School of Social Work
 Pace University
Pennsylvania College of Optometry
Pennsylvania College of Podiatric Medicine
Rider College
Rowan College of New Jersey (Formerly Glassboro State)
St. John's University
Seton Hall University - Center for Public Service
Seton Hall University - Stillman School of Business
Teachers College - Columbia University
Temple University
UMDNJ - Robert Wood Johnson Medical School
UMDNJ - School of Health Related Professions
UMDNJ - School of Osteopathic Medicine
University of New Haven
U.S. Peace Corps
Villanova University - Graduate School
Liberal Arts and Sciences
William Paterson College
Yeshiva University - Wurzweiler School of Social Work

Sponsored by Career Services
893-5194

SPANKY’S ANNUAL HALLOWEEN PARTY
40 DANCERS
PLENTY OF SURPRISES
12:00 NOON TILL CLOSING
WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 11
JELLO WRESTLING

GUYS DON’T MISS
WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 18
COLLEGE AMATEUR NIGHT & BIKINI

ATTENTION COLLEGE GIRLS

Where does dancing earn you big money?
SPANKY’S AMATEUR NITE & BIKINI CONTEST
WEDNESDAY OCTOBER 21ST 6:00PM TILL CLOSING
Entry earns $200 to $500 in tips plus cash prizes for top dancers
and it’s all in a night’s work! call for details

290 Watchung Ave. • West Orange, NJ • 201-669-0333
Starts Tonight!

and EVERY Thursday...

COME

GET

$5.00 Pitchers

Pool Tables

New Band

Every Thursday

& nonstop DJ

5 minutes from MSC

Cedar Grove Inn

239-8911
New Jersey Institute of Technology is the metropolitan region's largest technological university, offering programs from the pre-college to doctoral level. Research efforts focus especially on strengthening the nation's competitiveness with improved manufacturing, transportation, and technology management methods; protecting the natural environment; and creating new architectural forms for the built environment.

Areas of Study
- Applied Mathematics
- Applied Physics
- Architecture

Resources
- One of the largest environmental engineering and science research facilities in the nation
- The only public school of architecture in New Jersey
- $30 million center for automated manufacturing and information science
- Microelectronics research center with class 10 cleanroom
- Extensive networked computing facilities.

Support
- Contract and collaborative research with industry, government and educational institutions
- Graduate cooperative education
- Financial assistance programs.

Flexibility
- Part-time or full-time, day or evening study
- Interdisciplinary research
- Diverse areas of specialization: Master's and Ph.D. degrees

For graduate admission information, call: (201) 596-3460
Toll-free in NJ: (800) 222-NJIT

New Jersey Institute of Technology
A Public Research University
University Heights, Newark, New Jersey 07102

NJIT does not discriminate on the basis of sex, sexual orientation, race, handicap, veteran's status, national or ethnic origin or age in the administration of student programs.
Oh, all right children, you can have a rootbeer

Pizza and beer, pizza and beer, pizza and beer. Nice thought wasn’t it? Students at MSC can grab a nice greasy slab of pizza just about anytime of the day or night, but before you reach into your bookbag for your trusty, always frosty beer mug, think again. Instead, bring on the crazy straws. After all, they are best for sipping Kool-aid and that's about the only cool, refreshing beverage you’ll be getting here at MSC. Although President Reid and his merry band of vice presidents have the final decision on the campus alcohol policy, they failed to attend the SGA’s “fact-finding” hearing held Friday by the Administrative Affairs Council and the Student Affairs Council of the College Senate. Here, they had a fine opportunity to learn how many different groups on campus feel about bringing alcohol back to the Rathskeller.

Could their apathy regarding student’s needs and desires stem from the fact that the administration and other non-student campus and off-campus groups legally sip martinis through their crazy straws?

The administration must maintain status quo after all, if it doesn’t affect them they like to pretend the problem doesn’t exist. Although he failed to attend the hearing to learn how students actually felt, Dean Martin was presumptuous enough to state that 88 percent of students felt that there are enough activities offered on campus that there is no need to bring alcohol back. He must have held a survey at a nearby grammar school during recess. Dean Martin does consent to one problem, however. Speaking for the division of student affairs he stated that there are over 8,000 commuters who might possibly walk hundreds of miles out of the vast expanse of parking lots surrounding our picturesque campus, scale dangerous construction sites, just to kick back in the Rat (whenever, it reaches completion) to drink a few beers. Then they would make the harrowing journey back to their automobiles, and assuming they haven’t been stolen, hop in for a drunken drive home.

In reality, the current alcohol policy forces more students leave campus for surrounding communities where they drink at local establishments and then drive back to MSC, possibly drunk. Allowing students to drink responsibly on campus might actually improve the safety of students and citizens of surrounding communities.

Moreover, we at The Montclarion, smell hypocrisy in the air. How are students supposed to feel safe and secure on our happy little campus when administrators and outside groups use MSC for their ol’ watering hole and proceed to drive off of campus? Is it possible that senior members of our college society possess an immunity to drunkenness? We don’t think so.

“We don’t usually permit student groups...to have permission to serve alcohol.”
-Nancy Carver, Executive Assistant of Administration and Finance

Quote of the Week
The election...what's in it for you

You're walking through the Student Center Quad, hustling to your biology mid-term, hoping to get a seat that affords a clear view of that annoyingly brainy guy in your class, when some political button clad pest accosts you and demands you vote for their candidate.

"Why should I? What's he gonna do for me?" you ask, "Hell, you helped scuttle my GPA, forever dooming my chances to become a vaunted SGA legislator! I might just vote against your guy! Repeatedly! You sorry, little, pimply putz!"

Maybe it didn't happen exactly that way, but chances are you did ask yourself a similar question.

We at The Montclarion asked ourselves the question. We took into account four major concerns we, as college students, have in regards to the political stewardship of our nation, and looked into what each candidate would do for us. Here goes:

The Economy

Georgey, Georgey, Georgey...what have you done to us? Mothers across the nation are taking Junior's bedsheets out of storage for his financially-forced, post-graduation, unemployment-induced shuffle homeward. Graduating college students are facing the worst job market in over 50 years. The remedy according to Bush: basically more of the same, tax breaks for the upper echelon of the economic ladder and lots of cheerleading. Trickle-down economics was lambasted by Bush in the 1980 election as "voodoo economics." Now, after investing in this theory for 12 years, Bush is locked into it. Sadly, so is America.

Bill Clinton plans to revive the slumbering through massive investments in the nation's infrastructure. This will indeed create jobs for the pummeled construction business, and, eventually, for subsidiary industries. Will this create the strong growth Clinton claims? Probably not. But it is an important first step toward rebuilding America's economy. Most importantly, it will lay the groundwork for slow, yet sustained, economic growth.

H. Ross Perot prefers to keep his economic policies largely hidden. He has focussed on reducing the deficit mightily through a series of "bite the bullet"-type tax increases and governmental cuts. Cutting the deficit is a laudable idea, but at this point in time, with the sorry state of the economy, such strong medicine might all the patient even more.

Student Loans

With MSC's yearly tuition increases, this is another subject that hits close to home. Bush has recently taken to shrilly crying that he will guarantee every college student the right to borrow the necessary funds. This is extremely hard to believe, since his record on the subject has been less than sterling.

Clinton calls for the dismantling of the archaic and confusing array of federal student loan programs. In its place, he supports the formation of a national trust fund from which any student could borrow. Perot? Owing to the lack of information the man divulges, this is merely a rhetorical question.

Freedom of Choice

Roe v. Wade is in a perilous predicament. True, earlier Supreme Court decisions and legislation have taken some of the punch out of this landmark decision, but it is still the dam that keeps back the swelling waters of the religious right. The next president will probably appoint one or more justices to the court. Who would choose the justice that would ensure a woman's right to choose?

Bush? Probably not. Although if reelected, he may not feel he has to cater to the religious right; he's counting on to turn out in droves on election day and covertly return to his former pro-choice position. Clinton? He's a strong supporter of choice.

Perot? Also, a strong supporter of choice.

Environment Long after this particular political trio of candidates are dead and buried, our generation will be roaming the earth. Who will keep it in the best shape?

George Bush, to his credit, did pass a landmark Clean Air Act that promises to virtually eliminate smog in U.S. cities. Unfortunately, his Vice President's Council on Competitiveness worked overtime to gut the act of any real effectiveness. Bush has kept his promise of "no net loss" of the nation's environmentally sensitive wetlands, in a chillingly Orwellian manner, by changing the definition of wetlands. The "Environmental President" fails, in our estimation, to live up to his self-imposed moniker. Clinton first demonstrated a leaning toward the environment by selecting Al Gore as his running-mate. Gore is a world-class environmentalist, not the kind born of politics and public opinion polls. Furthermore, Clinton has made the environment, and technologies that would help repair the damage to the environment, an integral part of his campaign. Clinton recently became the first ever candidate endorsed by the Sierra Club.

Perot? Well, he winks slyly and says he will take care of it. Incidentally, his running-mate, Admiral Stockdale attacked Gore's plans for the environment as too radical.

Conclusion We disregard Bush and Quayle's smoke and mirrors sideshow of "family values." Rather than fall into the quagmire of debating an issue that simply does not fall under the jurisdiction of the federal government, we prefer to concentrate upon real issues. Furthermore, anyone who has trouble trusting Clinton should compare the actions of George Bush over the past four years with the bloated campaign promises he offered up in 1988. Four more years of Bush is unacceptable.

Perot, although making the election interesting, should be sent back into the world of business. We do, however, appreciate his much-needed comic relief in an election so crucial to the American people.

The choice is clear. The Montclarion endorses Bill Clinton in his run for the presidency.
Good dose of medicine for drug dealers

So what's so bad about using drugs? Facts: organized crime profits over $30 billion a year; 33 percent of federal prisoners are incarcerated for drug related crimes; 73 percent of child abuse cases are drug related; 66 percent of crime is drug related; and $12 billion are spent on fighting the drug problem (1988 state). Not to mention that at least 25 percent of AIDS cases are drug related. It's about time we really have a war on drugs!

Education is probably the most important place to strike first. President Reagan started us off with "Just Say No" and other programs. President Bush has kept up Reagan's proud battle against drugs with financial support to programs already in use, and with programs such as D.A.R.E. and others. We must get it through to all Americans, young and old, poor and rich, that drugs are no good and only people who want to die before their time use drugs. More public announcements against drugs on radio, in newspapers, and on TV should be paid for.

Give the big time dealers mandatory death penalty. We don't need those type of people alive in our society. They don't deserve life after all the pain, crime, and death they cause.

Everytime I sit down to write this point is, drugs are in every aspect of society (especially Wall Street) and it's about time we do something about them.

The liberals say, out of ignorance, that we should legalize drugs. Then it would be easier to get the drugs they use (look at their politics and you can tell they're using something). They claim it would be safer and that softer drugs such as marijuana and hashish would cause no problems. Well, that is just not true!

A professional look at drug use will show you the stages a non-drug user follows to becoming the user of illegal drugs. Stage 1, nonuse, then been/wine: stage 2, hard liquor and cigarettes; stage 3, marijuana; and finally, stage 4, other illicit drugs such as cocaine and heroin (ref. Kandel, D., and Faust, R., Sequences and Stages of Adolescent Drug Use, Archives of General Psychiatry 32: 923-932, 1975). In other words, marijuana use leads to harder drug use which leads to a world of problems. Even in Australia, with the legalization of marijuana and hashish, cocaine use is on the rise. Great Britain legalized drugs, but after one year and four times as many drug addicts, they repealed the law.

Canned peaches. Mmm. Everyone I sit down to write this column food built it's way into my train of thought. Interesting. Maybe that's what my next topic will be how food relates to our environment. Is it hereditary? Is it written in my DNA that during late-hour, bitch column writing, I would crave synepexes? Are they (the peaches) a phallic symbol? Do I crave something deeper? Freud, where are you in my time of despair?

Anyway. Now, a subliminal message in the undecided...Clinton and Gore. VOTE: Clinton and Gore.

What I have to say in this sermon, is not political. It is not racial or even a juicy gossip piece. It's just shit in the last two weeks that has really irritated me. Focus. I'm in my poetry class and, propped up next to me is a girl/sheep, a female incumbent follower of society's expectations. She is whining obnoxiously to other fellow members of the herd, who listen sympathetically, as she pouts, "But I deserve a car...my parents are such shallow bastards. I really deserve it. After all, I do have a B average."

You deserve a car? Who the hell are you? How do you deserve a car, an empty-headed whining idiot who probably doesn't hold a job. Why do you deserve a car? Do the people who need, and barely survive on welfare, deserve their life? Does that man lying in his own urine, drunkenly soaked in human excreta in Fort Authority deserve his life to be packed into a corner underneath a stair case? Do crack babies deserve the "shakes" or African desert children deserve starvation? Who the hell are you?!

You are nothing but another folded wrinkie in God's brain. You're in college, not that it's benefitted you, with your self-oriented materialistic demands. You obviously are well fed by the girth accumulating. What do you have to bitch about? Do someone walking, roots. Trust me, it wouldn't hurt.

Spoiled, ignorant, infested reds! What the fuck! Are people in this society ever going to stop focusing on themselves and begin to change what the Donald-wanna-be-Trusts before we created? Or we forever going to live, occupied in our own cesspools of nonnotious materialism, stepping on each other's heads to get to a better level to lick the higher-up's asses? Have pride. Get a job and earn the car. Maybe even share some of the earnings with another. Not a man, etary fine, probation with random testing (two years), community service (100 hours), rehabilitation program (six month mandatory), and on-going psychological services (two years). If convicted again, the user should face a jail sentence of 10 to 20 years to think about his problem!

Dealers are nothing but walk-around defensive, focusing on themselves. Sacrificing friends or patience to get from point A to point B. Take your time. My fortune cookie read today, "He who walks fast, walks without humidity." Take notice of the person you're knocking down as you rush by, of the elderly woman with her smashed walker, lying helpless in the road because she was worth 15 bonus points. Compassion, even for the loud, retarded boy who loves to bug you, into the supermarket down aisle seven. Let him hug you, for Christ's sake. For a challenge, hug him back. Who do you think you are anyway, that you don't deserve his "embarrassing" love?

Step down from your lofty bar stool, minions. You're nothing but slimy snema and one lonely egg gone rampant, just like the rest of us. We're all connected through similar creation. We don't deserve to be given anything. Some of us don't deserve the pain they endure, dead and day out, for a lifetime. Our job is to help, to pick up what has fallen and create equality. Any one who needs more satisfaction in life than to help others, is a shallow bastard and has really never given anything in life. The best feeling in the world is to know you made a difference, that someone is better off to have known you. Everyone deserves to give. Everyone.

The Montclairion

Commentary

Thursday, October 22, 1992

If you can't give anything, give canned peaches

Give it away. Make someone else smile, help take some of their misery away. It's okay to help people. It's alright to be seen as a schmuck in life than to help others, is a shallow bastard and has really never given anything in life. The best feeling in the world is to know you made a difference, that someone is better off to have known you. Everyone deserves to give.

Give the big time dealers mandatory death penalty. We don't need those type of people alive in our society. They don't deserve life after all the pain, crime, and death they cause.

Strike two. Punish all users and dealers with new and more severe laws. First of all, users, such as those professional sports, should not be let off so easily. My six-step plan to strengthen the punishment of drug users would include: mandatory jail time (the worse the crime, the longer the time), mening pieces of shit! I don't care what their excuse is, they deserve no mercy! Small time dealers should be give large fines and long-term jail sentences—even military training to teach discipline and respect. Give the big time dealers mandatory death penalty. We don't need those type of people alive in our society. They don't deserve life after all the pain, crime, and death they cause.

Strike three. Use the greatest military force in history to limit and stop the drug flow into our beautiful country and stop illegal immigration! Any plane, ship, or mule not responding to a direct order to stop by our military forces, which would be set at a very position along the U.S. border, should be blown out of the sky, sea, and/or land. Military force against evil is a proven success, just ask Hussein, Khadafi, and other countries allowing the drug trade to go on should also be taken care of.

Next week, women's rights.
Appetite for destruction

The External Affairs committee of the SGA conducted voter registration drives during September in the Student Center and at the Rock the Vote table at the Spin Doctors' concert. As Director of External Affairs, I ran these programs and of the some 200 people we registered, a number of students have informed me that they have had a problem. It has also come to my attention that a number of people are flipp ing out, because their status as voters may be in jeopardy. I feel responsible, so let me explain what has happened.

From what I gather a number of people who I had working the tables were not registered voters themselves. You need to be one in order to winer the form. It also seems that my own registration status was in the midst of the bureaucracy of Essex County. I had charged my address and it may not have appeared in the offices at the time the forms were checked. It gets stickier. The deadline to register in New Jersey was Oct. 4. Notice the past tense here. I have contacted the Essex County offices in Newark and there are ways of fixing this mess. If you have received notice in the mail informing you that there was a problem with your form, please contact me in the SGA office at x4202 or at home, 746-9673. Also, if anyone wishes to burn my likeness in effigy in the Student Center Quad, I totally understand. I may even provide the matches and gasoline. Again, I'm terribly sorry if anyone is flipp ing out. Please contact me as soon as possible.

Thank you,
James "Appetite" Cotter
Director of External Affairs
Student Government Association

Sinead/Pope debacle was bald attempt for publicity

Sinead recently caused a lot of outrage when she methodically tore up a picture of the Pope on Saturday Night Live. Wouldn't that be a lively issue for the debate? Clinton would accuse Bush and Perot of being supportive of her actions, while Perot would accuse Bush and Clinton would accuse himself, incidentally. But this is not the point. The Pope had outwardly condemned the flag. In both cases, there is another angle to this issue that people don't really think about. Pope John Paul II is more than just another important guy. As far as Catholics are concerned, the Pope is the next best thing to God. Now, I'm sure that John Paul II is a very nice guy. But the institution that he represents has been known to cause a lot of anger and resentment in the past, for reasons too numerous to mention here. My point is that the Pope is not just any guy, he's a very potent symbol. And from my point of view, tearing up a picture of the Pope is not terribly different from burning the flag. In both cases, there will always be outrage when the act is carried out. Both acts can be attempts to make people sit up and take notice of injustice.

But in the case of Sinead O'Connor, there isn't a valid injustice to protest. Some people have speculated that she was protesting the Church's stand on abortion. If that's true, then she probably would have gotten a better response if she tore up a picture of Randall Terry. The most irritating thing about the whole incident is the pointlessness of it. If she really felt the need to make a political statement on Saturday Night Live, she should have done so. Instead, she behaves like a spoiled child doing something nasty to get the attention of her elders. I have always believed that when a child behaves like a spoiled brat, the best thing to do is ignore them.
TICKETS ON SALE!!!NOW!!! IN STUDENT CENTER BOX OFFICE

LIVE!!!

THE SOUP DRAGONS
TOM TOM CLUB
BLACKSHEEP
JAMES

NOV. 2 at 8p.m.
MEMORIAL AUDITORIUM

$15 STUDENTS
$18 NON- STUDENTS

CLASS ONE CONCERTS IS THE ROCKIN' CLASS ONE ORGANIZATION OF THE SGA

SPIRIT of MSC
MSC REDHAWKS

VS
TRENTON STATE LIONS

SAT., OCT. 31
TAILGATE PARTY:
Lot #9 (college hall bus stop)
3:30 - 6:30
MUSIC/FOOD/PRIZES

GAME STARTS at 7 p.m.
WEAR YOUR SCHOOL SPIRIT

SPONSORED BY YOUR SGA
Izzy gets into the ring

by Alex Castino

"Once there was this rock n' roll band rollin’ on the streets. Time went by and it became a joke."

The Latin American Student Organization (LASO), Organization of Students for African Unity (OSAU) and Players co-sponsored an evening of music, dance and comedy called "Triple Threat", in the Student Center Ballrooms A and B on Monday October 19. We "never did anything like this before," said LASO President Sandy Garcia. The event, hosted by Olga Montere, coordinator of LASO, was held to help promote cultural awareness on campus.

The evening began with a street dance entitled "In The Name of Love" performed by LASO members. The dance was performed well and the choreography was full of strong movements but it was slightly disjointed. The music was performed by the well-known club tandem of Clivilles and Cole also known as C & C Music Factory. Towards the end of the number the dancers pulled men out of the audience to join in. The crowd responded with howls and whistles.

The Montclair State Gospel Ensemble performed next with a spectacular entrance. Their first number was the upbeat song called "Trouble Don’t Last Always". The group had perfect harmony along with equally strong men’s and women’s vocals. Their next piece was "Jesus Is The Light" featuring an impressive solo by Jason Field, president of OSAU. Even though the microphone failed midway through the solo the singers kept their act together until the problem was fixed. They finished with the song "I Came That You Might Have Life Most Abundantly". The choir received thunderous applause.

LASO’s dance troupe Latinismo performed a sultry dance called "Bolero De Amor". The dance, called the Bachata, performed by three couples was very erotic and romantic. The men were cheered as they dipped the women and when they gyrated alongside their respective partners.

The Gospel Ensemble promotes audience participation

A last minute stand-in for Players was a comedian named Joseph Wischowski also known as "Some Guy Named Joe". Although he had well, intentions the crowd did not grasp the humor. However, he did receive some giggles and polite applause at the end of his act. Players’ original act did not have enough time to prepare their piece so Joe did the best he could on such short notice.

The Gospel Ensemble returned and performed an extended number, "Unbreakable Joy". This performance was the most popular among audience members. Everyone joined in the clapping and some audience members were so moved that they were dancing. The group was so vociferous that the microphones were rendered useless and the group’s sound could be heard echoing through the student center. They received a standing ovation as they exited the stage.

Latinismo also returned with another dance called "Oye Me Canto". The number was a combination of traditional Latin dance and contemporary jazz. Their movements were smooth and precise. The music for the dance was performed by the Miami-based group Gloria Estefan and Miami Sound Machine. They ended with the "Pienso" dance. It was a strong lively dance which also combined Latin steps along with traditional jazz. The audience was impressed as the dance was admired by even these wizened hollers and whistles.

The evening was a great success and hopefully there will be greater student turnout for similar events in the future.

Karamazov Brothers to land at MSC

The world famous Flying Karamazov Brothers will perform their newest comedic production, "Theatre of the Air", on Friday, Nov. 6, at 8 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium.

"The Theatre of the Air" is a performance which combines juggling, music, theatre, music, electronics and comedy.

This event promotes audience participation. In the juggling act called "The Gamble", the audience is asked to give objects to the juggler. The objects must be heavier than an ounce, lighter than 10 pounds and no bigger than a bread box. If he succeeds he gets a standing ovation and if he fails, he gets a pie in the face.

The Flying Karamazov Brothers formed in 1973 and have performed across the country. They have starred in their own Showcase special featuring highlights from their first Broadway show. Other television credits include NBC’s "Today" show, "Late Night with Joan Rivers", "CBS Morning News" and a Disney Channel special, "The Vanderbilts". The Brothers also co-starred in the hit movie "The Jewel of the Nile" as a band of Sufi Warriors.

Individual ticket prices are $20 general admission, $17 for seniors. Group rates also are available. To order tickets, call the MSC box office at (201)893-5112.
Welcome once again to another fascinating installment of PROPHET BIGG! As always, I encourage you to drop me a line at The Montclairion office, in the Student Center Annex, on any topic in the entertainment industry or on previous Bigg installments. Apparently some of you out there are getting the message. The letter I share with you this week is again about my discussion of the Howard Stern vehicle, The Adventures Of Farman, two weeks ago:

Dear Prophet Bigg:

I disagreed with your "fore­night" when discussing Howard Stern's new show, Farman, in the Oct. 8 edition.

Mr. Stern is probably one of the most funnyest men in this coun­try. You could mention any topic to him, and somehow he'll get you laughing.

So what's with the chip on your shoulder regarding Howard Stern? Please explain yourself in the next possible issue of The Mont­clairion.

Sean Gornoss

Accounting Major

I'd like to open my response by saying that I did receive this letter this week and I'm sure it's possible that Mr. Gornoss had not yet read last week's installment at the time of his writing. So, I want to put this Stern thing to rest once and for all. I am, repeat, am a Howard Stern radio listener. In fact, I actually enjoy some of the material he does on the radio show.

What am I gagging about? I am on every­thing (TV, movies or anything else), Stern for president, Stern in Christ, fanatic. And of that, I am proud. However, to address Mr. Gornoss directly, Howard Stern is not one of the "funniest" men in America, in my opinion. But that's what an opinion is. It is the way I feel about the man based on what I've heard about him, what I've heard him say and my first hand experience working for the man. Therefore I don't have a chip on my shoulder. I have an individual opinion. I am not a Stern junkie like Kenneth Keith Townesbac, Peter J. Cadbury, or like you are becoming. I respect rebellion against authority in mod­eration, but the man has based his life on it. And in clowning, people, if you like the man, but believe there is a world outside of Stern, good for you. If you other people find yourselves seeing visions of Stern in any political office, with a halo on, or as a down-trodden revolu­tionary, it's time for help.

And now some glimpses into the world of tomorrow...

- Comic book fan alert! Everyone's favorite slaying Mar­vel mutant, Wolverine, is report­edly getting his own movie sometime in 1994. So what? then, are the potential problems? Well, it's go­ing to be live action, it follows a string of Marvel superhero film failures (including The Punisher, Captain America and a vandal at­tempt at She-Hulk) and the choice of representing the character as he appears in the comics or toning down the violence for film. The other main issue is who should play him? Drop me a line and let me know what you think.

- With all the hype over Francis Ford Coppola's Brain Stroker's Draucula release, I knew it wouldn't be long before the in­dustry jumped on the bandwagon. But I didn't expect Coppola to be involved with another one. He has signed to produce Mary Shelly's Frankenstein.Tri-Star has not named a director for the project yet, but they have asked Willem Defoe (Platoon) to star as the ec­centric doctor.

- We have had the battle for MTV. A cable station devoted to science fiction TV and movies. And now to prove we are a free country with the right to put anything on cable, we are given the Cartoon.Network. Cartoons 24 hours a day. I ap­prove.

- In case you were unaware, Denholm Elliot died of AIDS on Oct. 6. You may remember him as Marcus Brody, the museum direc­tor in two of the Indiana Jones films as well as the butler in Trad­ing Places starring Eddie Murphy.

And a very special PROPHET BIGG hello to Corinne Agins and her pacaderm entourage.

Remember the good ol' days when you were growing up? Saturday mornings were kid's days— we'd wake up, grab a bowl and our Super Sugar Crisp, take the milk out of the fridge, and camp out in the living room until noon watching cartoons. The coy­ote would fall off cliffs, get squashed by boulders, flattened by 1-2-3 wheelers, and blasted into bits in The Looney Tunes, Bugs Bunny, or G.I. Joe, where everyone isn't a cartoon, but are out gang-raping jog­gers in Central Park, or shooting 18-wheelers, and blasted into bits out. We're going to breed a nation of rapists and axe murderers.

What's next for the ac­tion-figure set? If the vocal anti­television minority has their way, the only thing our kids will be able to watch is Care Bears vs. My Little Pony. Maybe The Muppets Take Up Knitting. If you want excitement, maybe you can tune into The Mr. Rogers/Zumfir Hour. Can you say pan flute, boys and girls? Sure. I knew you could.

Why such mumby-pamby entertainment? Too much violence in cartoons, they say. Gotta cut it out. We're going to breed a nation of rapists and axe murderers.

Sure. And maybe Dan Quayle is a space alien planted to subvert American politics for the Commu­nists.

Give me a break. Our par­ents grew up on Looney Tunes, Tom & Jerry, and all the other slapstick (and violent...ooooooh) shows. The Three Stooges, al­though not a cartoon, used slap­stick violence to make people laugh. Be honest, now. Are your parents serial killers because Moe poked Curly in the eye? Did your dad shoot up a post office because Elmer Fudd blasted a bunny hole and nothing happened to the wackally wabbit? Oh, but that's different, right? We never had Transform­ers, or G.I. Joe, where everyone shoots everyone else but...but... No one dies, right? Well, no... But what about the Rambo cartoons? My kid is growing up to believe that freedom means shooting each other!

Sure, it does. That's why so many kids are stealing cars in Newark. That's why so many kids aren't home watching these car­toons, but are out gang raping jog­gers in Central Park, or shooting 18-wheelers, and blasted into bits out. We're going to breed a nation of rapists and axe murderers.

No many

A world outside of Stern, good for you. If you other people find yourselves seeing visions of Stern in any political office, with a halo on, or as a down-trodden revolu­tionary, it's time for help.

What's next for the ac­tion-figure set? If the vocal anti­television minority has their way, the only thing our kids will be able to watch is Care Bears vs. My Little Pony. Maybe The Muppets Take Up Knitting. If you want excitement, maybe you can tune into The Mr. Rogers/Zumfir Hour. Can you say pan flute, boys and girls? Sure. I knew you could.

Why such mumby-pamby entertainment? Too much violence in cartoons, they say. Gotta cut it out. We're going to breed a nation of rapists and axe murderers.

Sure. And maybe Dan Quayle is a space alien planted to subvert American politics for the Commu­nists.

Give me a break. Our par­ents grew up on Looney Tunes, Tom & Jerry, and all the other slapstick (and violent...ooooooh) shows. The Three Stooges, al­though not a cartoon, used slap­stick violence to make people laugh. Be honest, now. Are your parents serial killers because Moe poked Curly in the eye? Did your dad shoot up a post office because Elmer Fudd blasted a bunny hole and nothing happened to the wackally wabbit? Oh, but that's different, right? We never had Transform­ers, or G.I. Joe, where everyone shoots everyone else but...but... No one dies, right? Well, no... But what about the Rambo cartoons? My kid is growing up to believe that freedom means shooting each other!

Sure, it does. That's why so many kids are stealing cars in Newark. That's why so many kids aren't home watching these car­toons, but are out gang raping jog­gers in Central Park, or shooting 18-wheelers, and blasted into bits out. We're going to breed a nation of rapists and axe murderers.

No many
Congratulations to Delta Chi and Sigma Delta Tau on first place where you did a great job. Love, Delta Phi Epsilon

Alpha Omega- We won second! Way to go, Dude Braghgh!!

Doc (AXPi)- Add another man to the list, you know what I mean? - Chuck D.

105C - Thanks again for the lovely present. Do you really want US to cook for YOU? How about some Rattitouille?

US to cook for YOU? How about some references? Love, your sisters.

Great game and you’re headed to victory over WPC. You played a great game and you’re heading straight for the top! Good luck! The MSC Cheerleaders

The only thing we didn’t do was love...anything year Delta Chi

M. C. W.- Heather Lukacs- You are awesome some! We all love you. Love the sisters of D-Phi-E

Phi Sig- Thanks for a great time at homecoming- Theta Xi

Rich (AXPi)- I think you’re so hot! Love, a Theta

To AKP: I love you guys, even though I get upset with you guys sometimes. You’re the greatest and I wouldn’t trade you in for anything. Love your Perez.

To the slots of 105C: Thanks for the rodent you lift at our door. Revenge is sweet and paybacks are a bitch. Love, “the sweet angels across the hall”

To Alfood (AXPi): Your a great little and good luck during pledging. We’ll have to go out soon. Lav, Heather

Stoecumbles- I can’t live without you. I miss you. My lingering desires are insatiable. Temple is too far away. Love always, Smuggles

PS- I’m longing to be wyour sexy sentious body.

To Scott- Too bad we can’t get to know each other better. Sometimes life isn’t fair.

-To know who.

Tricia- EMT’s do it with lights and sirens! U kno who

Kristy (Phi Sigma Pi) You are the best Big! Thank you for everything I really appreciate it. Love Yas-Diana

To all the Brothers of Phi Sigma Pi- Thanks for your help and support- Epsilon Class

Tina- I’m really sorry about your car and I love you, but your little told me to tell you get a room next time. Love Wendy

To the Hyenna and my little brownknooks in 105B - You guys look lovely! No GORGEOUS! Really!

-Love ya, your Beautiful roommate!

Maggie- How many college stu­dents does it take to make Jello shots? George

Laurie- You will always be our Queen. Love The Thetas

Face it TKE- We finally kicked your homecoming ass!

To the cute blonde in my Vietnam class- keep smiling! It brightens up my day, really! The One Who Smiles Back

To all residence of 105C- Don’t keep any electrical devices on the floor anymore.” Dick you know why

To Scott(110B) - Too bad Sigma Tua Nu had to leave last Saturday night. I want to get to know you better. PS- what did you do with the money?

-From a Secret admirer.

105B would like to know who put the naked man in our mailbox!

Joe R. (SDT) Your the best. Thanx for always being there. Love Your Little

Tricia- can you say the B—F— word? I mean, I’ve done a complete patient assessment on you... well, almost. Your Favorite EMT

To Kelly (D-Phi-E): I’m happy your little happy because you are the BEST! Love, Your Big

To the Theta Xi Bros.- We had a great time! Thanx for everything!

Love, the sisters of Phi Sig

Crow- Great Job on home­coming! Next year we do the Macy’s Parade! Dude Braghgh. Love your President Chuck D.

Politics and homecoming don’t mix. We all know who the real winners are.

Scavalla- You got it going on! ???

To the “lovely” ladies of 105B- Nude men in your mailbox, rats at your door - What will be next? Let’s boot the girls of 105A and have a peaceful semester!

Love ya lots! 105C

-PS-when are you inviting us to dinner?

To the pledges of Alpha Kappa Psi: you guys are awesome! Keep up the good work and stick together!

Love, Chantelle and Mildred

SMA - you are very sexy and smart and awesome and fun-to-be-with and I love you and I hope we’re still together by the time this is printed!

Love, Bubble

To 105C- Thanks for the little, black present! remember-revenge is sweet! Live the Rat people -105B

To Bern - The only girl I know who could spend 1/2 the night with a naked man and be embarrassed to make the “first” move. Or did you?

-M&M

To my roommates, 105B - Don’t forget!— Don’t get overexposed during sex-you could rupture his penis!

To my roommates in 105B - You look lovely!! No seriously I love you guys. “We will survive”

To trainer in 110B - my room­mate lusts for you. We’ll keep in touch, Clove 100’s.

Congratulations AO and AKY on second place- not so bad for the first time around!

D-Phi-E, I’m so proud of all of you...we did a great job. I knew we could do it. Love, Stacey

The MSC Cheerleaders -ucking awesome half-time routine! Look­ ing forward to Salubris!! Party!!

Janet (Sigma)- The demolition crew is coming to widen the door­ways for your head. Just Kiddin’ Congratulations!! - Love, Janice, JoAnn, Kelli and Mazz

AIX- We may not have won but we had the Best Homecoming ever.

Oogist(ZBT) Allow me to touch you in...palesene! AH62

How many CLUB members does it take to work a walk-a-tele­phone??
The Montclarion

Thursday, October 22, 1992

COMICS

CALVIN N’ HOBBES

Calvin and Hobbes
by Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes
by Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes
by Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes
by Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes
by Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes
by Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes
by Bill Watterson

Calvin and Hobbes
by Bill Watterson

OUTLAND

by Buddy Brodel

---

"WHERE'S MY HACKER SON!!?"

"OH! AND WHO SUCCESSFULLY "SUGGESTED" TO HIS PARENTS THAT THEY FORGET TO WEAR CLOTHING TO CHURCH LAST YEAR?"

"I'M INNOCENT ON THIS ONE!"

"QUINK'S BEEN SORT OF GROWING ON ME..."

"YOU DID THIS!!"

"I COULD BE PRESIDENT IN '96..."

"AAAUGH!!"

"BAD, BAD HACKER!!"

"DON'T YOU DARE!!"

"HA HA HA!"

"YOU'RE A DIRTY HOOKER!!"

"I'M NOT."
Despite a solid effort, volleyball falls again
by Nicole Festa

The MSC Volleyball team continued down their disappointing trail by dropping yet another game this past week. The team entered its only meet at home this past weekend, as host of the Red Hawk Invitational. The team came into the meet with the confidence needed to perform up to their own self-imposed level of excellence and surpass their own goals. Junior Wayne Dennis set the pace for the men by running a brilliant race, while Sharon Lindo was breathing down the neck of St. Peter's Janet Pagan, who won on the women's side.

With MSC finishing second overall to St. Peters in both the men's and women's team placement it was the individual performance of both Dennis and Lindo that lifted MSC above the other competing schools. Dennis, running with an injured leg, ran a 29:38 to edge out his closest competitor on a course that was full of miscues. Lindo, who surged at the race's conclusion to take second and nearly gained the lead, ran a 21:28 to lead the women's team.

In addition to Dennis, the men's team received outstanding performances from Hector Rivera, who finished sixth overall with a time of 21:18, and Jenabi Williams with a 33:05 to finish ninth. All three looked forward to bettering their times at the upcoming Drew Invitational this weekend in Madison.

The women's team, following their strong performance of Lindo, received good efforts from freshman Rhonda Westbrook and junior Carla Roberts. Westbrook finished sixth overall with a time of 23:34.

Cross country places second in Red Hawk Invitational
by Mark Alan Belnay

The MSC Cross Country team entered its only meet at home this past weekend, as host of the Red Hawk Invitational. The team came into the meet with the confidence needed to perform up to their own self-imposed level of excellence and surpass their own goals. Junior Wayne Dennis set the pace for the men by running a brilliant race, while Sharon Lindo was breathing down the neck of St. Peter's Janet Pagan, who won on the women's side.

With MSC finishing second overall to St. Peters in both the men's and women's team placement it was the individual performance of both Dennis and Lindo that lifted MSC above the other competing schools. Dennis, running with an injured leg, ran a 29:38 to edge out his closest competitor on a course that was full of miscues. Lindo, who surged at the race's conclusion to take second and nearly gained the lead, ran a 21:28 to lead the women's team.

In addition to Dennis, the men's team received outstanding performances from Hector Rivera, who finished sixth overall with a time of 21:18, and Jenabi Williams with a 33:05 to finish ninth. All three looked forward to bettering their times at the upcoming Drew Invitational this weekend in Madison.

The women's team, following their strong performance of Lindo, received good efforts from freshman Rhonda Westbrook and junior Carla Roberts. Westbrook finished sixth overall with a time of 23:34.

N.F.L. Picks: Week 8

George Calle, Managing Editor:

2. Buffalo -9 1/2 over x-N.Y. Jets. Hate the Jets.
3. Indianapolis +13 1/2 over x-Miami. Idiots on whether Marino wants to go off or not.
5. Dallas -3 over x-L.A. Raiders. The Cowboys win this one easily.

Rob Campos, Editor-In-Chief of The Anarchist Syndicate:

1. x-N.Y. Giants -15 1/2 over Seattle. Why would anyone take the Seahawks?
2. Buffalo -9 1/2 over x-N.Y. Jets. Can you say 1-6?
3. x-Miami -13 1/2 over Indianapolis. Obvious.
4. Denver -1 over x-San Diego. The Broncos have prettier uniforms.
5. x-Kansas City -8 1/2 over Pittsburgh. The Chiefs are going to the Super Bowl.

Keith A. Idec, Sports Editor:

1. Seattle +15 over x-N.Y. Giants. Even though the Seahawks don't have a proven quarterback, the spread will be too much for the Giants to overcome. Who knows, N.Y. might even lose.
2. x-N.Y. Jets +9 1/2 over Buffalo. Sometimes you judge with your heart, not your eyes.
3. Cleveland -6 over x-New England. At least New Englanders have whole seasons of basketball and hockey to look forward to.
4. Washington -3 over x-Minnesota. The Vikings (5-1) are not as good as advertised.
5. Denver -1 over x-San Diego. Maybe the Broncos will show up to play this week.

Kevin Schwobel, Prophet Bigg:

2. Buffalo -9 1/2 over x-N.Y. Jets. Because Keith picked the Jets.
3. Chicago -3 1/2 over x-Green Bay. Ditka! Ditka! Ditka!
4. x-Philadelphia -15 over Phoenix. I like the cheese steaks.

Bob Wintemute, Managing Editor of The Anarchist Syndicate:

1. Seattle +15 1/2 over x-N.Y. Giants. The Giants will win, but not by the spread.
2. Buffalo -9 1/2 over x-N.Y. Jets. I can't believe that this game is on Monday Night Football.
3. Washington -3 over x-Minnesota. I have a feeling on this one.
4. Dallas -3 over x-L.A. Raiders. The Raiders aren't up to beating the Cowboys.
5. x-Kansas City -8 1/2 over Pittsburgh. A tough one. I like both teams.

x-denotes home team
In the wake of the Tim McCarver ice-throwing incident, the question remains: What should the Atlanta Braves do about two-sport star Deion Sanders?

Sanders has gotten himself into a considerable amount of trouble by playing two sports at one time. Many analysts believe that he should pick one sport or the other. What should the Atlanta Braves do about two-sport star Deion Sanders?

Many analysts believe that he should pick one sport or the other. The question remains: What should the Atlanta Braves do about two-sport star Deion Sanders?

John Schuerholz has given him some unforgettable memories already. Sanders has given us some unforgettable memories already.

The problem that Braves GM John Schuerholz has with Sanders, is that he made a commitment to them. Sanders said that he would devote all of his attention to baseball player. They couldn't be more wrong.

Sanders manager Bobby Cox believes that Sanders could hit 20 home runs, bat over .300, and steal 60 to 80 bases a year if he would devote all of his attention to baseball. That's just one person's opinion, but quite a compliment from a town's worth of at-bats.

Most will agree that Sanders is a top-flight NFL cornerback. He's one of the fastest player in the league and he's also dangerous returning punts and kicks. Also, his $2 million per year salary will keep him from straying from football. To make that much money playing baseball, Sanders will have to put up at least one full season with big numbers. If he doesn't give up football, it is unlikely that the Braves will give him an opportunity to get 500-plus at-bats in any one season.

With this in mind, the Braves have to make a decision on Sanders. Should they just waive him and get rid of the headache? Not bloody likely! He is too valuable of a fourth outfielder and pinch-hitter to just let him packing. Plus, he showed improvement at the plate in '92 by batting .304 and hitting 8 home runs in about a half-season's worth of at-bats.

Should they just let him do whatever he wants, no matter what promises he makes to them? Definitely not! While his potential alone makes you want to keep him, he has to understand that the team comes before Deion.

Should they leave Sanders off of their protected player list for Nov. 17's expansion draft? Ah, finally a solution that would totally backfire in the Braves' face. If they let him go this way, they would be indicating that they think other players need to be protected over Sanders, and not that they can't put up with him anymore.

Of course, there's the chance that when the Arizona Cardinals draft Sanders, he would want to deal with him either. If he is left unprotected and goes undrafted, the Braves are then forced to make a decision.

Leaving Sanders unprotected might seem like a cop-out, but it could save them embarrassment if Sanders becomes a baseball star elsewhere. Sanders' Nike contract will play a role in the decision he's supposed to make in 1993. Reportedly, if he plays both sports, he gets $1 million and if he plays one, he gets $100,000 from Nike.

Whatever his decision, Sanders has given us some unforgettable memories already. Sanders has given us some unforgettable memories already.

That was the kind of situation that would make any good baseball player. The winner will receive a shot at beating Cincinnati on Monday night. Do you think Air Jordan flies to Atlanta City and Las Vegas? But seriously, Michael should be a little more careful. He's an idol to many kids and adults. I'd want to be like Mike too, but I wouldn't want to lose $57,000 gambling. He knows he made a mistake and as a human being, so let's judge him on all of the positives and not one negative.

Did anyone see Monday night's sickening display of an offense that the Cincinnati Bengals presented on against Pittsburgh. The Steelers' defense came up big in a few spots, but it looked like as if the Bengals had given up once they fell behind. I know that Boomer Esiason was hurt and it showed, but the effort just wasn't there. The Jeta may have even had a shot at beating Cincinnati on Monday night. Try this for a contest idea. How many MSC students can be crammed into one shuttle bus while it's moving at excessive speeds and going over every bump and pothole on campus? The winner will receive a new textbook from the college store that you get to sell back at the end of the semester. That should give you a nickel for winning the contest.

CANT AFFORD TO VOLUNTEER?

Consider This:

Overseas Travel

Language Training

Living Expenses

Medical and Dental Care

Student Loans

$5400

For this and a better world to show for it.

All this, and a better world to show for it. Maybe you can't afford to volunteer. But you can't afford not to.
MSC capitalizes on Pioneer turnovers to win third consecutive game

Saturday’s battle with conference rival William Paterson College was extremely important to MSC football for two reasons. Both the Red Hawks (3-2, 3-0 NJAC) and the Pioneers (5-1, 3-1 NJAC) were involved in a three-way tie for first place in the NJAC with Rowan College. Also, if MSC lost another game, the NCAA playoffs were out of the question.

The Red Hawks responded impressively by defeating the previously unbeaten Pioneers, 24-19 forcing three WPC turnovers. Deemed WPC’s first ever victory avenged last year’s 27-12 loss by winning two games. They curtailed the Pioneers to 167 rushing yards. The senior from Madison was credited with two sacks, was in on 15 tackles, and forced a fumble that led to an MSC touchdown. “Larry had an outstanding game. Over the last three games he has become a dominant force, and that’s rare from a defensive tackle,” said Red Hawks head coach Rick Giancola.

The defensive backfield played a key role in the victory as well. Junior Keith Davis’ interception and freshman Jamaine Johnson’s fumble recovery both helped to set up MSC touchdown passes by Darren Volker. Johnson also came up with an interception with 1:17 left in the game to secure the Red Hawks victory. “Jamaine has been as important as anyone over the last three games. He’s come up with a few game saving plays for us,” said Giancola. Volker, a freshman who started his first game, hooked up with junior Brian Ruane on a 9-yard toss and with sophomore Tyrole Rovins on a 58-yard bomb that put the Red Hawks ahead 14-0.

The Red Hawks received another solid performance from tallback John Walker, who gained 181 yards on 25 carries. The senior from Montville was the battle of the NJAC’s top two running backs, outgaining WPStar Altair White, who came up with 66 yards.

When WPC had cut MSC’s lead 17-14 in the third quarter, it was Walker’s 54-yard touchdown run that put the Red Hawks ahead for good, at 24-17. “You can expect these kinds of performances from John,” Giancola said. A win proved that MSC could defeat a top NJAC team and kept playoff hopes alive. “William Paterson is an excellent football team. We had our hands full,” added MSC’s 10th year coach.

HAWK NOTES... This victory keeps MSC in a tie for first in the NJAC with Rowan. The Profs remained undefeated (6-0, 3-0 NJAC) by trouncing Ramapo College 33-0. Rowan visits MSC on Nov 14 which could be a battle for the conference title. Walker’s 118 yards on Saturday boosted his season total to 675 yards and his career total to 3,347 yards. He will need to average 81 yards per game in the Red Hawks’ final four contests to be successful in his quest for three straight, 1,000-plus yard rushing seasons. Over the first five games, Walker has averaged 135 yards per game...MSC quarterbacks have thrown only two interceptions this season. Kicker Scott Rubinetti is 5 for 6 on field goal attempts, including a 50-yarder that tied an MSC record.

Scouting report: Salisbury State

This Saturday MSC will travel to Maryland to take on Salisbury State University in its third and final non-conference game of 1992. The Sea Gulls have already improved upon last season’s 1-9 mark by winning two games. They currently stand at 2-3. In their last game on Oct. 10, the Gulls were handed a 43-18 loss by Rowan College, MSC’s conference nemesis.

- SSU will look to junior wide receiver Charlie Whalen to put points on the board. In the Rowan game he caught 11 passes for 124 yards and two touchdowns.
- Also, junior quarterback Len Annette causes concern for the Red Hawks. He’s thrown for 942 yards and 10 touchdowns in the Sea Gulls first five games.
- Annette’s best statistical performance of the year came against Rowan when he threw for 274 yards and completed 30 passes.
- The Gulls, who don’t have a conference affiliation, will look to defensive backs Josh Bacon, a senior, and Henry Pfehman, a junior, senior linebacker Rick Helton, junior defensive end Dan Quinn, and sophomore Tyrone Rolls to stop the MSC offense. Also, SSU will honor its first ever team (1972) during this game.

Women’s tennis finishes a surprising 5-4, only second winning season since ’84

by Karen Plumstead

The final match of the MSC women’s tennis team was a 6-3 loss on the road at NYU on Tuesday Oct. 13. Head coach Brian McLaughlin felt, “As a whole, the team played well. Jason Vern ended her freshman season with a 6-4, 6-6, 6-10 victory. This game provided much of the excitement in the match against NYU. Seniors Jen Dubrowski and Lisa Capelli completed their MSC careers with a 6-4, 6-2 double win over NYU. McLaughlin seemed sorry to see his two seniors leave the program.

“Later had an outstanding game. The senior from Madison was credited with two sacks, was in on 15 tackles, and forced a fumble that led to an MSC touchdown. “Larry had an outstanding...”

Men’s soccer wins eighth straight, seeks NCAA berth

by Craig Berosh

After two impressive victories last week only one question remained to ask MSC’s soccer coach Rob Chesney: How good is the 1992 men’s soccer team? One could detect the excitement building inside the second year coach, but he humbly answered, “We have excellent potential, but we have not peaked yet.”

“Don’t tell that to Trenton and Stockton State Colleges. They both visited Sprague Field last week and went home with losses and no goals, while the Red Hawks (11-3) pushed their winning streak to eight in a row. The Trenton State Lions brought their #10 nationally ranked team to Upper Montclair Friday night for an NJAC showdown. The Red Hawks scored twice in the first half and shut out their conference rival Trenton (10-4-2) for the 2-0 win. Eric Neubart netted his third goal and assisted two in the NJAC game. "Goal per game" Neubart is currently fourth in the NJAC in scoring with 13 goals and seven assists. Williams made five saves in the shutout.

The two wins pushed MSC’s regional ranking to #2. Rowan, the regional team to beat Montclair, is ranked #1. "We are just concerned about making the playoffs right now," said Chesney. With only three more games to play before the Nov. 1 cut-off date, the Red Hawks have a great chance.

After five consecutive home games, the Red Hawks are on the road this week at Rowan. The Red Hawks host Montclair for the first time this season. They take an eight game winning streak to Paulister this Saturday and to Kean on Saturday, Oct. 31, before returning home for the season finale Nov. 3, versus PDU.
Choosing a Major

Now that we're in college, what the Hell do we do?
Choosing a Major

Now that we're in college, what the Hell do we do?

Part 2
The Democrats
and
The Alternate Candidate

page 10

Due to budget constraints, The Anarchist Syndicate was not able to print all the articles advertised in the last issue. We hope to be able to print them in the next issue.

Cover art by Sloan Schwartz

The Anarchist Syndicate is the monthly magazine of Montclair State College. It is published as an insert and with the cooperation of The Montclarion. If you have any comments, you can call The Anarchist Syndicate at (201) 893-5282 or in The Montclarion office:
Montclair State College
Att: The Anarchist Syndicate
Student Center Annex, Room 113
Upper Montclair, N.J. 07042

If you would like to place an advertisement in The Anarchist Syndicate, use the same address and phone number to contact us.

The opinions and views expressed in this publication do not necessarily represent those of The Montclarion.
"Who am I? And why am I here?"
- Admiral James Stockdale, Vice Presidential Candidate

That is the question before us. Whether 'tis nobler to be a starving artist or an underpaid teacher, a business executive or an overpaid lawyer... Who are you, and why are you here? Hmm....

The sentiments voiced by our would-be vice-president are the same you expect to hear on any college campus. Some of you may even have experienced a sense of empathy with retired admiral and philosophy professor James Stockdale and no longer feel that you were alone. Those of you who are philosophy majors may also be breathing a sigh of relief, believing that there are two career options open to you now: teaching and politics.

According to the spring 1992 enrollment report, there are currently 2,527 undeclared students at MSC. This figure does not take into account the transfers and freshman students for this semester. The estimated number of students attending this college is 10,000. These figures would suggest that about one-quarter of the student population is undecided. Twenty five percent of our community is confused and uncertain.

We at the Syndicate believe this is an issue of concern and in response have compiled the following index. Our information was provided by the chairpersons of each department, and thus, we would like to thank them for their time and help.

What we've viewed in our national debates has been humorous at best, and an embarrassment at worst. We'd like to think that our magazine might help prevent any future embarrassments for would-be office holders.

ALLIED HEALTH

Two degrees that are possible within the Health Education major are Teacher Education and Community Health Services. Most students pursue the latter. The major has a large concentration of reading and writing assignments. Public Health Inspector, Health education and jobs in the American Society are all possible for those with a Bachelors degree.

Most people in the Allied Health major come from Nursing School. After graduation you could go on to be a dental hygienist or an x-ray technician. Starting salaries in this department range from $15,000 to $30,000 depending on your concentration.

Teachers in this field are having problems finding jobs and for a job in Health Services additional training is required beyond the education that Montclair State can give you. Although Allied Health has had to deal with funding cuts, they say it really has not effected the department.

Most students in the Allied Health major are night students, so it takes a bit longer for them to graduate. Someone who chooses Health Education in their freshman year can graduate in four years. There are 122 students in this department.
Computer Science

A computer science major requires one to think logically, to be a problem solver and to communicate clearly to a machine or other students. Most time is spent in solving problems, writing in and debugging computer code. There is a need for some quantitative math skills.

The department offers small classes, ten faculty members who specialize in computer science and a brand new $146,000 computer lab in addition to the diverse assortment of computers already in the department. The courses in the department are demanding and math is stressed as a requisite. Computer Science is not a computer programming major, it is a science and can be compared to an engineering degree. Although the course load is demanding, the degree can be obtained in four years for a full-time student.

There is a promising outlook for computer science majors, as well as potential for growth. Computer science majors can start as programmers and after five to seven years can go on to supervisory positions. Both AT&T and Hoffman LaRouche have said that they will hire Montclair State students. Starting salaries cover a wide range, but a person entering the field without experience can expect to start at $23,000 to $25,000 a year.

For any undecided students, Dr. Kenneth Wolf, chairman of the department, said that the major is very challenging. Changes happen in the field of computers constantly and computer science students have the opportunity work with these changes as they happen, he added.

Theatre

Theatre and Dance majors should expect the main focus of these programs to be on the development of their creative talents. Theatre B.F.A.'s should also expect considerable amounts of writing with high expectations for the quality of their work. Non-B.F.A.'s should also expect to do a fair amount of writing, and both groups can expect less reading than most majors (scripts being the majority of readings). The Theatre and Dance majors are designed to be completed in four years, and students are encouraged to do so. This does, however, require entering the program as a Freshman, so transfer students may need longer.

Dr. Gerald Ratliff said that those students who are considering majoring in Theatre and Dance need initiative, desire, and, most importantly, talent. These are a highly competitive and demanding field in which only the best become very successful. If you still think theatre or dance is for you, though, Montclair State is an excellent choice for this major. MSC is one of only about 50 schools in the nation with national accreditation in theatre, which means that the program is of high quality with much opportunity for students, especially undergraduates. Montclair State College's proximity to New York City also gives students the advantage of being very close to the professional world, which keeps them current. The faculty are dedicated and the programs are intimate and caring, although a few additional staff members and resources could help to accommodate the ever-expanding majors. Rehearsal space has also become more scarce with the program's expansion, but maybe when all of this construction is done things will improve.

Once you graduate with your theatre B.A. or B.F.A., here's what you can do with yourself. B.F.A.'s, the more professional-oriented people, can go onto Graduate School to work on their M.F.A.'s. MSC has a good success rate for students making it into Grad School; it seems that if you get good grades within the B.F.A. program (a minimum B average is required to remain in the major), you'll be completely prepared to handle the academics. Grad School also requires talent auditions, though, which can only be judged based upon individual talent. For those who wish to start working right away, the choices are acting or theatrical design. As major acting and dancing roles can be hard to come by, most will find themselves auditioning for many commercials and looking into set design, costume design, or lighting. Beginning actors/actresses, dancers and designers will be lucky to make $15,000-$20,000 per year when they are starting out. Those who land commercial spots can expect to add about $2000-$3000 per job plus royalties. Theatre B.A.'s may land the same sort of jobs or go into public relations, management, or personnel; entry level salaries are about $25,000-$30,000 per year. Keep in mind that theatre and dance are fields where experience is not as important as talent. The truly gifted do have potential to make millions of dollars, and the less talented or unappreciated may always be "starving artists."
English

There are several positive aspects of the English department. Dr. James Nash said that the classes are small and the faculty consists of a number of published writers who are interested in new ideas and classes. The department also offers two popular minors in journalism and film. On the negative side, the department is understaffed and can't offer as wide a selection as they would like. Another problem is that many students do not receive a full time faculty member as a teacher, until after their freshman year. Nash said that the program can be completed within four years, but the student has to be careful when scheduling, because certain courses aren't always offered.

After graduation, several fields are open to English majors. Jobs are available in the areas of politics, corporate public relations, publishing, writing, editing and education. The starting salaries for these jobs are less than those for the business and science departments, but there is a greater potential for advancement.

Graduate school for literature or law is another option. Nash said that he knows of no one who was unable to get into graduate school, but it always depends on what school the student applies to. Only a small number desire to go on, because it is not widely known that there are an increasing number of positions opening in the literary field. Professor Nash's advice to an undecided student thinking about an English major is to talk to the faculty about what the student is interested in and take a couple of classes so the student can see if he/she is really interested.

Communication Studies

The communication studies program at MSC has extensive speaking and writing requirements, as might be expected. The purpose of this is to help students develop excellent communication skills. Undecided students consider communication studies as their major, said department chairman Dr. Tom Veenendell, since it is "a practical major." Its focus is on effectiveness as a person, which allows students a free choice in many different career options. Veenendell described the program as a very marketable major. He stated that the program could be completed in four years, but may take longer if students delay their entrance into the program.

Among the job offerings that communication studies majors could select from are careers in public relations, advertising, program planning, management, employee training, and personnel. The starting salary that could be expected would range from $16,000 to 28,000. Among the benefits of this program is a dedicated and concerned faculty, working close with the students. Classes are taught from an experimental learning perspective, incorporating projects that get students involved in learning by doing. According to Veenendell, the undergraduate program at MSC ranks with some of the top graduate programs, and provides a strong background for anyone wishing to enter graduate school. Disadvantages would have to include the size of the staff in the department. Two faculty members have recently retired, causing the other members of the department to pick up any slack left over by their absence.

Foreign Languages

A student with a major in any of the four languages, Spanish, Italian, French or German, should expect the focus to be centered around reading, translating, writing and speaking the language. These Language majors can be completed within four years.

After graduation, the fields that contain possible jobs are international business, translating, foreign service and education. The starting salaries can range from $20,000 to $30,000 per year after an education at MSC. Another choice is graduate school, which is not difficult to get into according to the chairpersons of the Language departments.

One of the benefits of the Spanish/Italian Department is a large selection of classes. The department is in the process of expanding the variety of Spanish classes offered at night and on the weekends in order to make the classes more convenient for working students. Dr. John Zahner stated that he would advise an undecided student of the good placement available in the areas of translating and education.

Montclair State is the only state school except Rutgers to offer a French major. The department has a good reputation and many of the students are able to study abroad with the aid of scholarships. Dr. Madeline Sergent stated that she would tell an undecided student that the competition is harsh, but if the student likes the language and is willing to work hard, that student should talk to someone in the French Department.

Some positive attributes of the German Department are a strong reputation and a small number of majors which allows for close personal attention to a student's career by faculty and staff. Montclair State is the only New Jersey state school except for Rutgers to offer a German major. Dr. John Moore said that all students should consider a second major, because it doubles a graduate's job opportunities. A student who is interested in translating should consider a major in two foreign languages, and a student interested in international business should have a second major in Business.
Geography

The Geography major’s requirements have a balance of reading, writing and math; the exact mix depends upon the specific courses taken. It takes an average of four years to receive a degree in Geography.

Some of the fields available to the Geography major are the EPA and other environment related jobs, such as city planning firms as well as consulting firms. Salaries for graduates start around $24,000-$25,000.00.

Undecided majors who are thinking about Geography are encouraged to take some classes and experience it first hand. Students are also encouraged to go to the department and discuss possible career opportunities with the faculty.

Compared to other schools, MSC has the best environmental studies and applied studies curriculum in the state, as well as the biggest department.

HISTORY

A large amount of reading and writing is required for history majors at MSC. Among the career paths open to history students are law school or other professional studies, journalism, teaching, and government service. According to department head, Dr. Joel Schwartz, it is almost impossible to give a starting salary for anyone with a history major, as the career paths are so diverse. He also advises that any undeclared major who is thinking about history take a course, do the readings, think about what you read, and think about if you want to learn more about where you’re from and where you’re going.

The history department at MSC offers a wide range of coverage in different countries, regions, and eras, providing an in-depth study in any of these areas. This diversity is seen as a powerful asset to the department at MSC, and helps the major compare favorably with offerings at other schools. It normally takes four years to complete the major, though evening students almost always take longer. Graduate school potential depends upon the school applied to and upon how well the student does at MSC. Schwartz said, “I think graduate schools want to see students who can read and write well. All graduate schools look very closely at these two abilities.”

INDUSTRIAL TECHNOLOGY AND EDUCATION

Industrial technology concentrates more upon business and math oriented courses. A student should have no problem graduating in four years from this program. There are a wide range of technical areas one could go into with this degree, as well as many different mid-level management and engineering opportunities. Salaries start at between $24,000 to 28,000 for students with a degree in industrial technology.

Most students in this major start out undecided. Most students choose this program after discovering that they enjoyed their basic survey courses dealing with this major. Department chair Dr. Martin Greenwald said that another reason to consider this major is the unique program offered here at Montclair State, which combines business and technology. This was one of the only departments that admitted that they could use more funding, saying that they need more faculty and would like to update the equipment available to the program.

Mathematics

If you like to solve problems and have good quantitative skills you might think about a Math major. It requires some reading and writing to become independent learners, but the main emphasis is obviously on mathematical skills.

The number of fields you can go into after graduation is limited. With certification you could be a Secondary School teacher. Statistics is also an option, however most students find it better to have Computer Science as a second major for that field. If you wanted to go into industry, you would be required to obtain a masters degree and a Ph.D. opens up more career options.

Although the number of different fields in math is small, the need for people trained in math is great in all fields. Another reason Dr. Kenneth Wolfe said a student should consider the major is that the field is "very exciting." They also try to rotate the professors so the same one doesn’t always teach the same class.

Some of the advantages to taking the major at this school include the varied program, the different concentrations and the smaller class sizes. The professors are available to help the students prepare for jobs or graduate school. On the flip side, the Junior and Senior level classes are difficult and you have to think abstractly. It is also hard to get into contact with fellow students because of the large number of commuters. But the department is trying to force the students to work together because they feel this is a very effective way to learn. It’s kind of a lonely major. Most students prefer to work alone.
Philosophy

The course requirements for philosophy calls for a balance between reading, writing and thinking. Generally, most students have no problem graduating from the program in four years. The major helps you learn how to think and express yourself clearly, so almost any place would hire you. Most students lean towards law, advanced degrees to teach college, business, and high school teaching. Starting salaries depend on the field, but range anywhere from $20,000 to $35,000.

Department head Dr. Michael Kogan said that the philosophy major "is a wonderful way to get in touch with oneself." He also said that the major can help one to get in touch with questions about life, because all knowledge is self-knowledge.

Kogan stated that the program’s greatest advantage was the commitment of the professors to teach the students. In other colleges, the professors do more research and have less time for their students. He saw no disadvantages to going to MSC.

Religion

Religion requires very good reading and writing skills. Most students pursue careers in the clergy and religious studies after graduation, but some students take the major out of interest in the subject. Starting salaries are too varied to give an estimate.

The main focus of the major is to delve into the core issues of what makes human life human and what life is all about. These are just a few of the things that should interest the undecided student.

The advantages are the great professors and the courses in all types of religions. They also have courses that view religion as culture, philosophy and psychology. No disadvantages were mentioned, four years is considered ample time for graduation.

Physical Education

Physical Education majors should expect a science based curriculum. The program can be completed in four years as long as a student plans their classes carefully.

Some of the benefits of the Physical Education major are a strong alumni and networking possibilities. The major consists of many hands on activities, which blend the classroom experience with practical experience. The department has several special activities which the majors can work on in order to get more field experience with handicapped children.

After graduation several fields are open to the physical education major. Beyond teaching, the student can receive jobs in the adult fitness field. Some of the jobs are in cardiac rehabilitation and corporate fitness. Another area to consider are entrepreneurial ventures, such as personal trainers and fitness merchandising. Graduate school is another possibility which can lead to jobs in physical therapy and exercise physiology. The starting salary range is from $21,000 to $30,000+

Professor Sullivan’s advise to undecided student’s is for the student to talk to other students and the faculty in the major, and take one of the introductory courses.

Recreation and Leisure

Recreational Professions majors should expect a curriculum that combines science, communication, business, and psychology. The program can be completed in four years as long as a student plans his/her classes carefully.

Some of the benefits of the Recreational Professions major are a strong alumni and networking possibilities. The major consists of many hands on activities, which blend the classroom experience with practical experience. The department has several special activities which the majors can work on in order to get more field experience with handicapped children, and offers a special certification for therapeutic recreation.

After graduation the two fields open to a Recreational Professions major are commercial and therapeutic recreation. One job in the commercial recreation field is recreational coordinator for hotels, resorts, special events, and corporations. Some of the jobs in the therapeutic recreation field are physical rehabilitation and special programs working with handicapped people. These jobs offer starting salaries of $20,000 to $30,000+

Professors Sullivan’s advise to undecided student’s is for the student to talk to other students and the faculty in the major, and take one of the introductory courses.
Political Science

Political Science majors should expect a large amount of reading and some writing with a focus on qualitative analysis. The program can be completed in four years. The department has small classes, a good faculty, and other schools have recognized the excellence of the program. The Political Science department is facing the difficulty of being understaffed, and they have had to cut some of the elective courses.

Graduates can find jobs in education, government positions, foreign services, the state department, international politics, executive training, and business. The starting salaries range from $18,000 to $30,000. There should be no difficulty getting into a graduate program as long as the students make the faculty aware of their desire to go to graduate school and fill out the applications for graduate school in the proper manner.

Professor Aggeman said that Political Science is a good major to take because there is so much that one can do with the degree and it gives the student an understanding of people. He also commented that political science is fundamental, because everything in life comes back to the political system.

Next Month......

Business Office Systems Administration
Home Economics  Environmental Studies
Fine Arts  Chemistry
Biology  Business Education
ANTHROPOLOGY  Psychology
Linguistics  MARKETING
Quantitive Methods  MUSIC
Economics  Sociology
MANAGEMENT  Classics
Speech Communications
A Choice Between

The Lesser of Two Evils

Bill Clinton

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Event</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1946</td>
<td>Born</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1950</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1960</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1964</td>
<td>Enrolled in Georgetown University</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Received Rhodes Scholarship to Oxford University
Part 2: The Democrats

1988. This election was heralded as the beginning of the end of the Democratic party by many Republicans. Unable to win control of the White House for the third time in twelve years, it was only a matter of time before the Democrats went the way of the Whig Party, thus opening up the way for a new "Era of Good Feelings." One which would see the end of liberal spending programs and the reshaping of the mood of the country into a "kinder and gentler America." An America in which Republican leadership and prosperity would last well into the Twenty-first Century. The country was in good hands, Republicans told America, and there was nothing to be concerned about.

Until 1992. What no one could anticipate was the recession and the collapse of confidence in the President. "Voodoo economics," by 1989, had come home to roost. The combined bills for the immense Federal Deficit, the Savings and Loan fiasco, and the slumped American economy had brought about the nation's first recession since the late 1970's. The problem with this recession, however, was that the Federal government didn't have the resources to spend it away. Without public work projects and public spending, the recession would linger on for three years, and as of today, maybe more.

With the decline of the economy, President Bush would see his popularity ratings plummet. At the end of the Gulf War, the President enjoyed the highest popularity ratings in history, with a 71% approval rating. By the start of the Republican convention, however, his approval rating was only 36%, with no sign of immediate improvement. It looked like the impossible was due to happen: the Democrats had a chance to win the White House.

The Candidates: Bill Clinton and Al Gore

This year's Democratic primaries attracted what was, at first glance, a motley group of candidates. With the exception of ex-California Governor Jerry Brown, none of the candidates could boast a national reputation. This was because the conventional wisdom of political analysts predicted that President Bush was unbeatable. At the opening of the primaries, the President was still riding high on the crest of the popularity after the war. Accordingly, those who were considered "real" contenders for the White House (New York Governor Mario Cuomo, Missouri Congressman Richard Gephardt, and New Jersey Senator Bill Bradley) stayed out of the running, unwilling perhaps, to risk their political careers in a futile run for higher office.

But as the campaign gathered steam, Democrats across the country realized that they had their first chance to win a Presidential election since 1976. With the economy prostate and President Bush's popularity plummeting, people across the country paid more attention to a Democratic party that was still struggling to define itself. Each of the candidates seemed to have their own special message: Paul Tsongas called for stern sacrifices by Americans and a pro-business stance; Tom HarkinEspoused in the sixties; Jerry Brown preaching a new populism; and President Bush's popularity plummeting, people across the country noticed that they had their first chance to win a Presidential election since 1976. With the economy prostate and President Bush's popularity plummeting, people across the country paid more attention to a Democratic party that was still struggling to define itself. Each of the candidates seemed to have their own special message: Paul Tsongas called for stern sacrifices by Americans and a pro-business stance; Tom Harkin harping for the same old liberal programs that Democrats espoused in the sixties; Jerry Brown preaching a new populism; and Bill Clinton, who took the middle road in an attempt to regain the support of the so-called "Reagan Democrats" with a message that combined a pro-business sentiment with a populist flavor.

By the Democratic Convention in July, Bill Clinton had stayed the course amidst serious allegations over potential character flaws that had ruined other candidates in the past. In the course of winning the nomination, Clinton had changed the face of the Democratic Party from one which catered to ultra-liberal special interests to one that was more concerned with issues that concerned the common American. New emphasis has been placed on National Health Care, middle-class tax reform, and welfare reform, all issues that are important to the average American voter.

Political analysts have now changed their tune on the 1992 election. Where only a year ago they had written off this year's election as a Bush victory, they now not only acknowledge that Bush may lose the election, but that this year may be the most important presidential race in the post-World War II period. They call it a clash of two different approaches to government's role in society and America's role in the post-Cold War world.

Bill Clinton was born in 1946 in Arkansas to a widow, his father killed in an automobile before he was born. He spent the first years of his life living with his grandparents in the small town of Hope, Arkansas, until his mother returned from New Orleans, where she had studied to become a nurse anesthetist. After her return, she moved to Hot Springs, Arkansas and married Roger Clinton, who died in 1967 of cancer.

Clinton's early life is a stark contrast to George Bush's, who was the son of a millionaire and was cared for by a housekeeper and attended private schools. Regardless of whatever obstacles Clinton faced as a child, he was able to excel in school and win a scholarship to Georgetown University, where he also was accepted as a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford University.

Leaving Oxford, Clinton attended Yale Law School. After meeting and marrying his wife Hillary there, he returned to Arkansas and taught law at the University of Arkansas. In 1976, he entered politics with a successful run for state Attorney General. Two years later, he became Governor of Arkansas, where he served a total of five consecutive two year terms before running for President.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Elected Governor of Arkansas</th>
<th>1988 Re-elected for first of five consecutive terms as Governor of Arkansas</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1978</td>
<td>1990</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1980</td>
<td>1992</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Rolled in Yale Law School

1970 Elected Governor of Arkansas

1970 Elected Arkansas Attorney General

1976 Defeated for Re-election as Governor

1980 Begins run for presidency

1992
A question of character

Bill Clinton’s campaign has become bogged down in questions over his personal character. In the face of charges by the Republican party over his apparent character flaws, one question remains: is Bill Clinton suited for the office of President? To answer this question it is necessary to examine the particular charges first.

In regards to the question of infidelity, Clinton himself has repeatedly appeared on network television to acknowledge his affair with ex-state employee Jennifer Flowers. According to Clinton, their affair was a mistake, and the only one that he has had since his marriage to Hillary Clinton. Republican campaign officials have attempted to link Clinton with other women, but to no avail. The last serious attempt to do so was with a woman who has been diagnosed as a manic-depressive and who has stated that she had no recollection of any affair.

The issue of infidelity has destroyed other candidates’ bids for the presidency, most recently that of Gary Hart in 1984, but does not seem to have affected Clinton’s campaign. Perhaps this is due not to the act of infidelity itself, but rather to the way in which the charges were pressed. Ms. Flowers came across as a gold-digger, who was using one of her several liaisons to cash in on some quick money and fame. By using The Star, one of the more flamboyant supermarket tabloids, her charges were deprived of any base of validity. When coupled with a growing feeling on the part of the American public that infidelity no longer should be used to judge the public record of a politician, the attack on Clinton fell short.

However, there remain some nagging doubts about the entire affair. First, the apparent acceptance of Clinton’s affair does point out the nation’s attitude towards adultery and infidelity. In an age when half of all marriages end in divorce, and infidelity seems to have been accepted as the rule rather than the norm, it would seem that perhaps the Republican Party has hit a chord with their talk about “Family Values.” Maybe the malaise that has struck the nation is linked to a declining sense of morals and conduct. The fact that a person could become President after acknowledging that he has had an affair does set an example that makes adultery seem less wrong.

Second, there is the question of giving perks in return for sexual favors. What Clinton had not denied is that he did provide his mistress with a job on the state payroll. During the duration of the affair, Flowers worked in the Arkansas Employment Security Department as an administrative assistant, pulling down over $17,000 a year. While hardly new in politics, it is still hardly condonable.

When Bill Clinton’s draft record is examined, more serious problems emerge. The Clinton campaign explains that the candidate did join the ROTC program at the University of Arkansas to avoid being called up for Army service during the Vietnam War. However, they claim that there were no irregularities in his decision, and that he did not attempt to use family influence to avoid service.

The most serious question about Clinton’s draft record, however, is not over the lack of service but rather over the extent of his maneuvering to avoid the draft and his recent conflicting answers on the issue. There is now no question that Bill Clinton went to great lengths to avoid military service. He entered the ROTC program to avoid immediate service, apparently with the help of a now-deceased uncle who intervened on his behalf. When the lottery system went into effect, Clinton’s number was so high that he was in no danger of being inducted. Safe from the draft, he chose to withdraw from ROTC.

Throughout the history of this controversy the candidate has seen fit only to give out brief snippets here and there in answer to questions about the draft. Rather than come out and settle the issue completely in one statement, Bill Clinton has played tag with the media, in the hope that the question would go away. This has only served to raise other questions about the integrity of a candidate who sees fit to lie about such a matter. If he would lie over his past, then wouldn’t he lie over matters that are important to the country, or over illegal aspects of his administration? This is what got Richard Nixon in trouble.

A third example of Bill Clinton’s ever-changing answers to character questions comes out in regards to questions about his drug use. After being questioned about whether or not he had ever smoked marijuana in college, he first denied that he had, however, as more reports surfaced, he grudgingly acknowledged that he had but “didn’t inhale.” The final answer to the question was given on the Arsenio Hall Show, when he explained that he had been given a single joint at a party in college, and felt obligated out of peer pressure to take a “hit.” He said that he choked on the smoke and didn’t like it, and never used marijuana again.

Once again, Bill Clinton has apparently felt it necessary to give a series of conflicting answers when the truth would have buried the issue once and for all. It is still difficult for young Americans today to go to school without coming into contact with drugs. There is no doubt that a vast number of people in school have at least tried drugs once to discover that they didn’t like it or didn’t want to be involved with it. The news that a presidential candidate who attended college in the late sixties tried drugs once should not come as any great surprise. However, rather than confronting the question head on, Clinton chose to evade the allegation through another series of denials.

The Presidency calls for a high measure of integrity and trustworthiness. Questions about character are pertinent when choosing the right person for the job. Unfortunately, few people in public office today have sterling characters. The fact of the matter is that all people have some incident in their past that they are not proud of and would rather keep hidden. The problem with Bill Clinton is that when confronted with his past, he can’t face up to it.
Al Gore: Politics Runs in The Family

If there is anyone who deserves the label "born politician" in this race, it would be Albert Gore Jr. The young (43-year-old) senator from Tennessee is the latest member of the Gore family to serve in the United States Senate. His father, Albert Gore Sr., served in the senate 32 years, until 1970, when he was defeated mostly due to his opposition to segregation and the Vietnam War. Young Al has worked in government since 1976, when he became a Representative for Tennessee. A man who appears to be driven by an urge for higher office, he ran and won election to the Senate in 1984. Just four years later he ran unsuccessfully for President, losing the Democratic nomination to Michael Dukakis. Now, four years later, he is running for Vice-President, for the Presidency in mind. He graduated from Harvard in 1969 and, unlike Bill Clinton and Dan Quayle, volunteered for the US Army, serving in Vietnam as a journalist.

Upon returning from Vietnam, he pursued journalism as a career. One of his stories on corruption ended with the indictment of two Carthage, Tennessee city councilmen. Shortly after that, he entered both divinity and law school.

What motivates Al Gore? If anything, it is a high moral sense of justice and a hunger for knowledge. As a college graduate, he chose to serve in Vietnam not out of political expediency, but after asking whether it was fair for a man who voting on it. When he supported the MX missile program, he formed his opinion after thirteen months of hard-core study of the arms control issue. The recent battle over cable-TV regulation came about after Senator Gore spent time in researching the current regulations and rates. And then, of course, is his devotion to the environmental cause, which resulted in a best selling book about the subject.

One is driven to ask if there is any negative aspect at all to Al Gore. Not many would be the answer after a close look at the man. While there have been questions about his reliance upon family privilege (in 1978 he brought his father to lobby for him when he sought a seat on the House Appropriations committee), the "new-age" look of his theories and solutions on the environment, and his wife's famous crusade against profanity in music (which, ironically, was a "family values" crusade four years before the issue became popular and one which won the Gore's ridicule from Republicans in Congress at the time). However, these concerns have not proven able to stick to Gore and raise doubt about his character and leadership qualities. In many respects, including his character, Al Gore is the stronger side of the Democratic ticket.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Al Gore</th>
<th>Elected Representative for Tennessee</th>
<th>1976</th>
<th>Unsuccessful Run for Presidency</th>
<th>1988</th>
<th>Chosen by Bill Clinton as Vice-Presidential Candidate</th>
<th>1992</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1950</td>
<td></td>
<td>1960</td>
<td>1980</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
For the Record

What did Clinton do as governor of Arkansas? If you read his campaign literature, quite a bit. According to his campaign, he has taken Arkansas from one of the worse states in the union to a national leader in jobs, education, and welfare reform. During his tenure, Arkansas has led the nation in job growth, with the number of manufacturing jobs increasing by over 10% between 1985 and 1989. At the same time, the national average was less than one percent.

How did he do this? Since 1983, the Clinton administration has created a series of tax breaks for business, which have totalled over $150 million thus far. These incentives, including a break for manufacturers that allows them to claim 7% of all new investment against their liability due in sales taxes, has spurred a total $8.2 billion investment in new and renovated manufacturing plants in Arkansas, and a 19% increase in manufacturing jobs. Of all the states in the Deep South, Arkansas has fared the best in the last ten years, seeing real growth and real jobs.

Another area where Arkansas has fared better is in education. Under both Governor Clinton and his wife Hillary, who chaired the state’s Education Standards Committee, education and learning standards in Arkansas have risen dramatically. Among the reforms that were instituted in Arkansas are the regular use of basic competency tests for teachers after employment and the revoking of drivers licenses for any high school student who drops out before age 17 without a legitimate reason. In conjunction with increased spending (Arkansas went from last in the nation in terms of education spending in 1978 to third in 1992), the state has seen substantial increases in math and reading test scores and the South’s highest high school graduation rate.

In welfare reform, Arkansas has led the way in bringing poor families back to being productive members of society, according to his campaign. In 1989 Governor Clinton instituted Project Success, a program aimed at providing education, job training and work experience for people on welfare. Since its inception, Project Success has helped to remove 6,000 families from welfare rolls.

14

11/92

This is what the Democratic campaign literature tells America about the governorship of Bill Clinton. What they don’t tell, however, is the downside of his reforms and where the governor has not provided any real leadership in terms of the environment and civil rights legislation. In terms of the other side of his reforms, for example, the campaign does not report how SAT scores have not changed since his education programs were instituted, or how 60% of the people in Arkansas who enter college need remedial education just to bring them up to the same level as the rest of the country. Just as his administration offered tax reforms to businesses, Bill Clinton has increased taxes for the rest of Arkansas, including two separate sales tax hikes that allow taxing of food and used cars: taxes that directly affect the middle class and the poor.

And regarding Project Success? True it is a far-sighted program that offers the first real solution to bringing people off of welfare. However, in spite of the job growth that Arkansas has experienced in the Eighties, the state is being hit very hard by the recession. As 6,000 people leave welfare, many more are forced to subscribe to welfare programs. Another problem is that the Project Success program is offered almost exclusively in Arkansas’ cities. People in rural communities are not reaping the benefits that urban dwellers do from the program.

What about the environment and civil rights? In both areas Clinton’s record is little better than that of George Bush. Since 1982, the state government has allowed clear cutting on 82% of the state’s privately owned land. The state’s largest industry, poultry farming, has been allowed to dump tons of excrement and animal waste on farms throughout Arkansas. This dumping poses a serious threat of contaminating the state’s water supply. Governor Clinton has not taken any steps to curb such practices, maybe in part due to his close personal relationship with Don Tyson, the CEO of Tyson Foods and a major campaign supporter.

Arkansas and Alabama are the only two states without laws that ban racial discrimination. To Clinton’s credit, he has introduced bills in the Statehouse that would correct his situation, but these bills have been continually overturned or defeated. The explanation for this is that opponents of the bills fear the cost of implementing civil rights reform for small businesses. This is no excuse, however, and Bill Clinton should have made the addressing of this situation a priority during his time as governor.

Overall, Bill Clinton appears to have been a pro-active governor over the last ten years. He deserves credit for making Arkansas a better place to live in, and in trying to bring Arkansas out of the Nineteenth Century. Deservedly, Bill Clinton was voted by his peers the nation’s most effective governor in 1991. He has shown leadership in promoting economic growth, education reform, and welfare reform. However, he has not done enough. The glaring fact that after ten years as governor, Arkansas still has no protection for the civil rights of all of its citizens calls into question whether or not Bill Clinton can convince Congress to vote for measures that are vital to the nation yet contrary to their own views. If elected president, Bill Clinton must learn how to get Congress to work with him; if not, then nothing will change and the worse fears of the Republicans may come to pass: an out-of-control, tax-and-spend Congress with a rubber-stamp president.
THE DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

Ever since the administration of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the Democratic Party has been perceived as the political party which is devoted to social reform and change. The two greatest legacies that have been left to America by the Democrats in this century are social in nature: the reforms of the New Deal and those of the Great Society. It seems that Republican administrations have devoted much of their energy to reducing the federal government's role in providing for American's social needs. This had come to a head during the Reagan administration, which was marked by a return to a more Federalist philosophy: empowering the individual states to take a greater role in providing for the social needs of the people.

The 1992 Democratic platform has again taken up the banner of social reform. But this time the difference is that the promises of the platform are aimed not to the nation's poor, as was the case in past campaigns, but to the American middle class. Democrats have realized that in promising liberal social goals they have alienated the sector of the society that had allowed them in the past to speak as the conscience of the nation. This year, the platform has taken a more moderate and populist approach to the needs of the country.

To be honest, however, the basic message has not changed: the federal government is obligated to provide for the social welfare of the citizenry. This is apparent in Bill Clinton's label for the campaign: "The New Covenant." By using this name he insinuates that the nation's leaders are obligated by a higher order to lead the country to a better place. Interesting how both parties have laid claim to Calvinist metaphors over the last twelve years, from Ronald Reagan describing America as "the shining city on the hill" to Clinton's call for the New Covenant. Still, the fact remains that the 1992 elections will prove to be watershed elections in American history, which future generations will point to as having changed the mood of the nation.

So what is the Democratic platform? The platform, in its call for more government responsibility for the social welfare also seeks to change past policies of reform. This represents a totally opposite approach not only to government but also personal rights and liberties from the Republican platform. The promises offered in the platform include:

THE ECONOMY

The Democrats promise to make economic recovery their first priority if elected. This would be done by re-investing money used for defense to programs that would promote increased home productivity, creating jobs by investing in programs, such as a summer jobs initiative and job training for inner-city youth, and offering new fiscal assistance to America's cities.

THE BUDGET DEFICIT

In order to fuel America's recovery, the Democrats offer a package to reduce the federal deficit that relies upon both economic growth and spending reductions. The package includes reliance upon taxes raised from new revenue base that they believe their programs will foster, higher taxes for Americans who earn more than $200,000 a year. It also calls for cuts and reforms in existing spending, including entitlements (welfare, Medicaid, etc), defense spending, non-productive programs, and cutting administration costs by three percent annually for four years.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

Another promise made by the Democrats is to combat the rising tide of crime in this country. They will do this by creating a system by which any person who wishes to can receive college aid in return for several years service in law enforcement. The Democrats also support background checks for anyone purchasing a handgun and bans on the possession, sale, importation, and manufacture of assault weapons.
CIVIL RIGHTS

In its approach to civil rights, the Democratic platform has not changed from its traditional position. The platform supports the Equal Rights Amendment, affirmative action, voting rights protection for minorities and opposes "discriminatory English-only pressure groups." It promises to work harder to enforce existing civil rights codes, offering as contrast the "Bush administration's assault on civil-rights enforcement." The Democratic party also has overwhelmingly come out on the pro-choice side in the debate over abortion rights, and supports the passage of a national law to protect that right.

THE ENVIRONMENT

The Democratic party continues its new role as the party dedicated to the preservation of the environment by stressing conservation over what the Bush administration has called national growth. They promise to protect the American environment by restricting logging in old-growth forests, providing a "genuine 'no-net loss'" policy in regards to the nation's wetlands, fighting soil, water, and air pollution, and to oppose any new energy and mineral exploration and exploitation in what they call the country's "many environmentally critical areas."

EDUCATION

The Democrats have come out against the President's proposals to reform education by allowing parents a choice in the schools their children attend. The platform refers to the public school system as "the bedrock of democracy," and opposes attempts to undermine the system. In contrast, they offer increased spending for health and nutrition programs for children and promise to extend the Head Start program. The platform also promises the creation of a "Domestic GI Bill," which would allow all Americans to borrow money for college, in return for a percentage of their income or time given to "national service."

NATIONAL SECURITY AND FOREIGN POLICY

In these areas, the Democrats offer little change in terms of America's continued role as the last Superpower. The Democrats promise to restructure the armed forces in order to save money, but at the same time without "undermining (the nation's) ability to meet future threats to our security." In regards to foreign policy, the Democratic platform takes a much stronger tack on potential trouble spots in the world, saying that the United States should be able to use its military might to protect its vital interests. It also promises to take more decisive action to support democracy in the former Soviet Bloc and in opposing aggression where it may be found, citing the Yugoslavian conflict as an example.
H. Ross Perot: The Alternate Candidate

This past month has seen the election run down to the wire, and on top of everything else, a new spin has been put on everything. H. Ross Perot, Texas billionaire and one time presidential candidate had re-entered the race in a move that confused voters all around the country. Just as the fallout from his withdrawal in July had settled, he jumped back in to confuse matters even more.

Who is H. Ross Perot, and what makes him run, quit, and then run again? H. Ross Perot was born in 1930 in Texarkana in the height of the Depression. An Annapolis graduate, he served four years in the Navy. Perot left the Navy in 1957 dissatisfied, supposedly offended by the lack of morals in the service. However, some critics, including former shipmates, believe that Perot was dazzled by the possibilities available in the private sector. In short, they say, Perot wanted to make money, something he couldn't do in the Navy.

Perot left the Navy to become a successful salesman for IBM, able, for example, to meet his annual quota for 1962 in 19 days. Perot left IBM six months later because, he said, he was told that the company would reduce his commissions so he wouldn't earn more than management. (IBM later denied this allegation, saying that IBM would not hamstring their best salespeople in such a manner.)

After leaving IBM, Perot started his own business: Electronic Data Systems (EDS). Within six years, by making stock available, he became a multimillionaire. By providing computers and services to companies that could not afford their own, Perot created a new and unique business in the early sixties. After making his first fortune, Perot continued to make more money, so that by 1992 his total wealth was estimated at between $2 and 3 billion.

Throughout his career in business Perot has been criticized as being an egomaniac and a control freak. To be fair, it does take an ego to be able to build a huge fortune from next to nothing. However, allegations and reports of Perot's control over his employees make one wonder just how stable the man is. In 1983, for example, the Seattle US district court ordered EDS to re-hire a programmer who was fired because he would not shave his beard. A former employee cites another example in which recruiters were instructed not to hire anyone "with a weak handshake," since that might indicate that the person was a homosexual.

A third example of Perot's fanatical behavior is more chilling, and calls up memories of the Nixon years. In the 1980's, Perot filed a suit against a tenant of one of his properties that allowed guards to search the house three times a day in search of evidence of "certain unsavory actions:" searches which uncovered nothing. It turns out that Perot filed the suit because the tenant missed one rent payment. If Perot would go to such quasi-legal extremes over a trivial matter like this, what lengths would he go to as president against anyone who would disagree with him over policy?

Comparisons to the Nixon administration are not entirely out of line. Perot was a strong supporter of President Nixon, and apparently was willing to use his own money to help him win re-election. In 1970, Perot offered to spend $50 million to purchase a Washington newspaper and ABC news, in order to control the news media on behalf of the President.

Another quality about Perot that has gained attention is his penchant for paramilitary operations. The most famous incident is his financing of a 1979 rescue operation to free two EDS employees from Teheran. However, this was not his only foray into secret operations. In 1981 he agreed to help the US Customs Service finance a drug sting operation in a foreign country. When the State Department balked at the operation, Perot offered to carry it out with his own employees posing as DEA agents.

Perot also was linked, according to none other than Oliver North, to the Iran Contra scandal. In his book, North describes how Perot had contacted his attorney with a promise to help him financially if he would lie to Congress about President Reagan's role in the affair. His book quotes that Perot directed North to say "...that the President didn't know. If he (North) goes to jail, I'll take care of his family. And I'll be happy to give him a job when he gets out." Perot has denied that... any such instructions were given.

Not content with being involved in foreign policy, Perot has advocated the use of strongarm tactics in the United States as well. In 1988 Perot advocated house to house searches in South Dallas to clean the neighborhood of drugs and illegal weapons. Aside from appearing to be distasteful to the extreme, his proposal would violate the Fourth Amendment ban on illegal search and seizure.

After examining Perot’s background, the next question is about his platform. Since he entered the race for President, he has been extremely vague as to what his stands are on the important issues. It would appear that the only stand that he has taken is regarding abortion, where he has come out as Pro-Choice. However, research into the candidate does reveal something more of his platform, a platform which would require a major constitutional change.

The most radical element of his plan would call for the dismantling of Congress. He proposes that all issues be voted on directly by the people through initiative and referendum. He has latched onto television as the medium which would make this possible. In his plan, television would air weekly shows which would discuss national issues. After the program, viewers could vote on these issues through a device that would connect to a television set. His proposal would, in effect, dismantle the representative democracy that has existed for over 200 years and replace it with a total democracy, in which everyone would have one vote.

This radical proposal could open up a Pandora’s box of problems. Of course, there is the question of just how such a system would be regulated. It would be very difficult to prevent vote-stuffing or phony votes from being cast. Another problem is that by exposing national issues to public debate and choice it is not impossible that any organization, company, or foreign government with the resources to could rig or influence the vote even worse than happens in Congress. Finally, such a system could lead very easily to a total police state. Anyone with the know-how could create a mechanism where the identity of each voter could be determined. From here it is a simple step to tracing the financial, medical, and social history of the voter. Such information could be used to harass opponents and keep people in line.

In the final analysis, it is not hard to see why Perot is running. As observed earlier, the man possesses a colossal ego, feeling that if anything is to be done, then by God, he is just the man to do it. His ego makes it impossible for Perot to just walk away from the race after having entered it, for his pride just won’t let him quit with grace. He has to prove, not to the American people, but to himself, that he is right. In that case, America should hope that the analysts are all correct in saying that he is doomed to failure, since the nation can only be hurt by a petulant and petty president.
WE CAN PLACE YOUR AD HERE !!!!!

FOR MORE INFORMATION

CALL

893 - 5282

THE NEXT ISSUE OF THE ANARCHIST SYNDICATE WILL COME OUT AROUND THANKSGIVING SO GET THOSE ADS IN !!!!