Academic departments labor under budget crunch

by Mike Cappadona

The departments of this college have been forced to deal with budget cuts that were made by the Administration at the beginning of the year. While some department budgets were hit harder than others, everyone has been feeling the pressure of supply, equipment and travel cuts. The following is a breakdown of how some departments have been affected by these cuts.

Department of Broadcasting, Speech, Communication, Dance and Theatre: "For the most part, we were given sufficient warning by the Administration last year about the budget cuts," said Dr. Gerald Ratliff, chairperson of the department. "Our budget cut was the least in the school at five to six percent across the boards." Ratliff went on to say that the area hit hardest was the equipment budget, although he was not sure of the exact amount of those cuts. "We are now able to do more creative productions instead of elaborate ones," Ratliff said. "But more students have been doing original work, and we still have the same number of shows. We've been very frugal with all the warning that we've had."

Chemistry Department: "The chemistry department has a lot of fixed costs," said Dr. Brian Humphrey, chairperson of the department. "Our budget cut was the least in the school at five to six percent across the boards." Humphrey went on to say that the area hit hardest was the equipment budget, although he was not sure of the exact amount of those cuts.

Department of Geosciences: Supply money for this department was cut by about seven percent, said Mr. Richard H. Hodson, chairperson of the department. One area that has been cut back on is Xerox copies, which are usually handed out in large numbers. "But the department will try to move larger numbers of photo copies into the Book Store to be sold. The travel budget, which was minimal to begin with, was also cut."

Business Education and Office Systems Administration (BEOSA): "Funds for travel have been cut, which hinders us from further developing ourselves," said chairperson Dr. Stephen Cyma. "Cuts in general supplies prevent us from advancing as well." The department also faces a lack of funds to upgrade the computer system with state-of-the-art equipment, Cyma said.

Department of Accounting: "I'm student teaching now and I just don't have the time to give to the committee. They need someone available in the days and I can't be around." Herbst is also spending a lot of time preparing for her graduation in December. She is currently working on her resume and setting up job interviews. Laratta, a junior, said, "Susie deserves a lot of credit. I hope I can do half the job that she did." He pointed out that Herbst played a key role in the committee's rapid progress.

Resident Assistant appealing termination

by Nancy Gannon

A resident assistant (R.A.) is appealing the recommendation that she be terminated due to an incident in which she was intoxicated on November 13. Ilona Tykotski, 22, a Webster Hall R.A., was notified of this recommendation in writing by the Director of Webster Hall, Lynette Harris. As stated in Harris's letter, the recommendation was made because Tykotski's behavior was not exemplary of what a student leader should be. As reported by Campus Police in last week's issue, Tykotski was brought to Blanton Hall in an intoxicated state and semi-conscious condition by her sorority sisters, who live there. Campus Police called an ambulance, and she was taken to Mountainside Hospital, where she remained overnight for observation. She had become intoxicated at a sorority/fraternity mixer off campus in Belleville.

Campus Police reported that Tykotski had consumed six 16 ounce glasses of punch on Nov. 13. Tykotski says this incident in which she was intoxicated on November 13. A recent firebombing in Germany killed three Turkish immigrants. The attack has spurred a backlash of anti-racist discrimination. The attacks have been called neo-Nazi, but some Rightist leaders said that Germany can not keep admitting half a million immigrants into their country when the rest of Europe does not even admit a considerable fraction of that number into their respective nations.

Bangladesh was ravaged again by another cyclone. Many farms were not ready to be used since the last time a cyclone hit. The nation already has a poor economy, and this could be fatal.

Former Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevemadze was baptized into the Georgian Orthodox Church. The item is newsworthy because for years, as a Soviet leader he professed Atheism and has had a change of heart with the new openness and access to information.

A man sought in the stabbing death of his wife 14 years ago was found by her grave with a self-inflicted gunshot wound to his stomach. He was subsequently charged with the murder of his wife. The man had eluded police and the FBI for a decade and a half.

A storm that brought flooding rains of up to 2 1/2 inches in our area ravaged parts of the south with tornadoes. Amazingly enough, in Cobb County, Georgia, the twisters did not hit the trailer parks but decimated a large portion of an upper class area of mansions and large homes. Several people were killed and injured throughout the south.

A disgusting runoff race for a Georgia Senate seat is being run between incumbent Wyche Fowler and long time career politician Paul Coverdell. The issues are being ignored, much like in the D'Amato-Abrams race in New York. Attack ads and mudslinging pervade Georgia media and characterizations of the race.

Ross Perot ended up placing second in two states, according to final vote totals. He placed second in Utah with 26% to Clinton's 24% and in Maine the tally was 38.7% for Clinton, 30.4% for Perot and 30.3% for Bush. Nationally, Clinton got 43% to Bush's 38% to Perot's 19%.

The Education Law Center, a leading advocate for poor students, said it would seek a court injunction to stop the state GOP school funding plan from going into effect. The coalition said the plan would violate a Supreme Court decision that said our state funding of schools was inadequately distributing money to poorer towns and cities. The coalition feels the Republican plan differs very little from the former school funding plan provided by New Jersey.

supplies and travel. But students who work for this department have also been directly affected. "Accounting lab students get paid $5 an hour for the tutoring," said chairperson Diane C. Schulz. "But because of the cuts, restrictions have been placed on their hours. The situation is very upsetting."

The department also had its secretary taken away due to the cuts. However, the Dean's Office has supplied a secretary for the time being. Promotions are going to be very few in number. The department is trying to keep down the number of adjuncts and tighten up the number of classes offered, Schulz said.

Sociology Department:
The cut in the adjunct budget has hurt this department. "Five general education courses had to be cancelled," said chairperson Dr. Laura Kramer. This had to be cancelled," said chairperson Dr. Laura Kramer. Five general education courses had to be cancelled," said chairperson Dr. Laura Kramer. "Five general education courses had to be cancelled," said chairperson Dr. Laura Kramer. This had to be cancelled," said chairperson Dr. Laura Kramer.

The issue of main concern, however, is the travel budget. When attending a conference, a department representative gets to serve on a panel or attend other panels, Kramer said. These conferences provide important ways for the department to revitalize itself. Kramer added that the conferences provide the opportunity for faculty members to encounter people who are doing current research. This keeps the faculty up to speed and professionally active in the department.

Technology Department:
Supplies and equipment budgets for this department were cut by roughly 30 percent, said chairperson Dr. Martin L. Greenwald. Although the travel budget was very little to begin with, it was cut in half. "We have lost two faculty members in the past three years," Greenwald said. Because of this, the department has scaled back its number of course offerings. But the courses, although fewer in number, are more effective. "We are feeling a pinch," Greenwald said. "But it's been manageable."

English Department:
The promotion freeze has been hurting the department," said chairperson Dr. James Nash. "One secretary who is valuable to the department will not be up for promotion."

Music Department:
Nash said that the department has been authorized to hire two full-time faculty members to replace two who were lost over the summer. He added that supply and travel budgets, like other departments, have been severely curtailed.

Music Department:
"The travel budget cuts have hurt the Music Department drastically," said Mary Lynn Clemence, bookkeeper for the department. "There is usually a large account for instruments, and this year there is practically nothing." Clemence also stated that the necessary part-time help is not there because of the cuts.

Department of Environmental, Urban and Geographic Studies:
"It has come to the point that we have been told to charge students for the blue test books," said chairperson Dr. Harbans Singh. "There is no money for the department to buy these books."

When asked about the travel budget, Singh said that it was "very little to begin with. But if you want to have a strong department, you must be able to attend conferences."

formation is incorrect. "Remember drinking 2-3 glasses. I know there was alcohol in the punch, but I didn't know there was both grain alcohol and vodka in it. I could barely taste it," she said.

Tykotski said she felt fine, not even "buzzed" for the two hours she was at the party. She went from being completely sober to completely drunk. "After 11:40, I have total loss of memory," she said.

Tykotski was told that she fell downstairs twice in between the party and Blanton Hall, hitting her head both times. Her friends agreed with Campus Police that she should go to the hospital.

Since she received the recommendation letter last Thursday, she has appealed her case both to Residence Life and Administrators.

"I'm being held accountable for my actions while I was unconscious. I did not choose to go to Blanton. Not only was I intoxicated, but bodily injured," she said.

According to Tykotski, she may be terminated not because she was drunk, but because she was in that condition on campus.

"I did not consciously violate any campus policies. I am of age to drink. I was not drinking on campus, I was injured and I was not acting as an R.A.," she said.

According to Constance Ford, the Associate Director of Residence Life, the situation is being reviewed.

Ed Martin, Dean of Student Affairs, expressed his concern about the situation.

"It is so important to make absolutely certain of what you're drinking in any social setting," Martin said.

Regarding Tykotski's appeal, Martin said, "This is a difficult matter to resolve, but I hope that everyone involved can come to a fair and equitable solution."

Campus Police Report
Edited by Kelly J. Schab

Controlled Substances (CDS) - Crack
11/18/92 An employee of Alden Food Service found a small glass vial with a white crystal-like substance in the men's bathroom in the Blanton Cafeteria. Field tests on the substance were inconclusive.

Parapneumalia
11/24/92 A patrolling officer found a pipe commonly used to smoke CDS left in the lobby of Richardson Hall at 2 a.m. The pipe was photographed and taken for evidence. No suspects are reported at this time.

Theft From MV
11/17/92 A female student reported that her car was stolen from Lot 25 between 2 p.m. and 10 p.m.

Theft
11/23/92 An employee reported that cash was stolen from her purse in a locked office. The theft occurred between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. on 11/19/92.

Burglary - Theft
11/19/92 A female resident of Blanton Hall reported that a Greek banner and notebook were stolen from her room while she and her roommate were out. It was not a forced entry.

Criminal Mischief to MV
11/20/92 A resident of Clove Road reported that the hood and door of a car was damaged while parked between 11/13/92 and 11/16/92.

Criminal Mischief
11/22/92 A Bohn Hall resident reported that someone defecated and urinated outside of his dorm room. He believes that it was done because of his "Pro Death-Anti Church" beliefs which are posted on his door. Vandalism had been going on for the past week. He suspects residents across the hall may be involved because of their pro-life stand.

Criminal Mischief to MV
11/20/92 A resident of Clove Road reported the theft of his license plate was stolen from his car parked in Lot 5 on 11/21/92 between 8 and 9 p.m.

Theft
11/23/92 A visitor reported that his license plate was stolen from his car parked in Lot 23. He notified a window and fleeing the area. The suspect was in a black Nissan. No other information is available at this time.

Fight/Terroristic Threats
11/17/92 A Blanton resident reported that a student was standing outside of her dorm room window staring in her window for over 20 minutes after she refused to sign him into the building or talk to him. Responding officers spoke to him and he agreed his behavior was improper but he was only looking for his money. He was advised he might want to look into civil litigation for assistance in getting his money, but his current actions could only get him in trouble. He left the area.

Terroristic Threats
11/19/92 Police Headquarters received a call from a male who said that a bomb was in the Student Center. The building was evacuated, searched and reopened 40 minutes later.

Suspicious Person
11/20/92 A female resident of Clove Road reported that while returning to her apartment at 6:30 p.m., she saw a male talking on the phone by the office. She went to her apartment and adjusted her bedroom curtain and saw the same male standing behind her apartment looking at her. She noticed that he had a bottle of alcohol in his hands. She turned the lights off in her room and notified a friend. They saw the male leave the area. Responding officers did not find the male in the area. A description was taken of a white male, with brown hair, of a medium height and weight, who was wearing steel rim glasses and a yellow jacket.

False Public Alarm
11/17/92 Blanton Hall's fire alarm was activated by a pull station on the third floor. An RA claims that a resident who had pulled it and named an illegal visitor who was a non-student. The resident was not able to be interviewed. Shelley Jackson, Director of Blanton Hall, reported that the criminal has been banned from Blanton since 11/10/92. The resident denied that the criminal had been in the building. On 11/19/92, an investigating officer interviewed the resident and she said that she did not see the criminal pull the station box. He was on the floor in a different wing from which the box had been pulled.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Putting the "Fu" back into"Fun"
Rappin' with Fuschnickens

by Chris Miguel

Chip Fu, Moc Fu, Poc Fu. No, they're not the daily specials on a Chinese take-out menu. They're three of the freshest new artists on the rap circuit, and they've banded together under the name Fuschnickens. Their debut album on Jive Records, F.U. (Don't Take It Personal), and their first hit single, "I'm a True Fuschnick," the video single from Brooklyn is cuttin' up the wax and throwin' down the hottest rap this side of the Atlantic Coast. Fuschnickens appeared at the Memorial Auditorium last Monday night opening for the Soup Dragons, Tom Tom Club and James as a last minute replacement for Black Sheep who left the tour because they felt "they weren't making any money," according to Class One Concert Producer Jim Lloyd. Of course, they almost didn't appear because they called up two hours prior to the concert saying they were on Exit 1 on the NJ Turnpike. Luckily, they arrived just in time to commence the evening's festivities.

After their performance, I had a chance to talk to them in their dressing room. The three young men in T-shirts and baggy jeans were sprawled out on their chairs from the exhaustion of their set, but they still had the energy to enlighten the public about who they are and what they are all about.

Chip: Fuschnickens means "for unity of many styles, lyrical techniques and verbal tactics which we have mastered." We just derived the name to let the people know about the many styles which we could kick... Just a lot of styles fused forwards and backwards, "sing-a-long-sixpence," and a style he calls "problem," which he says is just complex rhyming. As for the other two...

Moc: I use the dog pound sound, "obnoxious," and I just kick various styles, different clips and cuts, different phrases like "gagoo gagoo nanu nanu." The three have known each other since their childhood, Chip and Poc growing up together, and then meeting Moc in high school. They then began their careers in earnest about six years ago. According to Chip, it was a hard road to go from doing shows to getting signed to Jive Records, which is home to artists such as Tribe Called Quest, RKS-One, Too Short, Boogie Down Productions and Jazzy Jeff and the Fresh Prince. "We went to different clubs and performed for free. We had a lot of competitions that we entered. We did our best and came out on top."

Performing for free may sound drastic, almost desperate, but Chip explains the group's sound philosophy: "When you do shows for free, it's beneficial to you. No matter how you look at it, there could be a hundred people in the crowd that never heard of Fuschnickens. And that night they'll hear about it, and they'll go out and buy the album. It's... promotional."

It seems their promotional ventures have been successful, as they've toured all over America, Canada, and even Europe with artists like the Beastie Boys, Kris Kross, and BDP. Commenting on audience response overseas:

Poc: To me, they appreciate music more than the lyrics.

Chip: I think it's the language barrier but also... you have this Hispanic guy and two black guys in the group. Obviously, you get them up on stage and you get a mixed crowd; everybody's gonna listen 'cuz they wanna know "How did this group come together? What type of message do those three individuals have?" Basically, we don't have a message... we just come together and have fun.

Over a period of six months of touring, Fuschnickens still had the time and energy to write and record their album. About the process:

Poc: It's not hard, but it's not easy, because our music is complex. We try to fuse it together...

Moc: Lyrical styles, verbal styles, rhyming styles. That's what we display; that's the whole point of our music-flow in different notes, different types of rhymes, add-ins, over-dubs.

Their hard work seems to have paid off, and success is now an after thought to the group. I asked if they were surprised about their level of success and how they think the public has responded to their music.

Chip: When we came out, we left people wondering. It's like... with a video, we display a different style, or skill, so people often wonder, "What is this group basically about?" We had a promo video out, lettin' people get little glimpses and snips of our music. And it just kept them wondering, and when we came out, (people said) "Oh, these guys are totally different," because everybody was expecting to hear a reggae oriented album. We just fused that style with the rest of the styles we have.

As with most hip hop artists, sampling is a given when recording a song. It's the very backbone of the industry. What with the controversy over copyright infringements and artists suing other artists, there is a great need to set the record straight, to define the nature and legal/ethical boundaries of sampling. Poc and Moc have their own views on the subject:

Poc: I don't see why a lot of these artists are... suing people over the use of a rap or a beat because they're keepin' their music alive as well as creating something different. If that was me, I'd feel flattered to know somebody was samplin' my music.

Moc: I basically feel the same way. If you got music and you want people to always remember your music, when new groups come out (and) sample your music, your music will always be goin' on forever and ever.

And with the success and growing popularity of Fuschnickens, people will remember them as part of the new vanguard of the hip hop wave for years to come.

Welcome to Hollywood

It’s not who you know, it’s who you blow.

Welcome to Hollywood.

Interesting beginning, I know, but you will soon see my point. Tom Arnold, Roseanne’s husband, is getting his own show. May joy and rapture envelop the airwaves. Whoop-de-doo. Is this guy deserving of a television show? Is he willing to put up with the long hours and actually attempt to do a decent job with it? Can the schmucklehead even act?

Nonetheless, Tom is getting his own show. It doesn’t take a degree in astrophysics to realize that he does not have this job because the higher mucky-mucks at ABC love this guy’s work sooooooooo much that they just had to give him a half an hour on prime time. Nope, he got the job because he’s hitched to, pound for pound, the most popular woman on television.

There are other cases (too numerous to mention) where negotiations play a part in Hollywood. Tori Spelling, daughter of television mogul Arron Spelling, is a star on her daddy’s own hit show, Beverly Hills, 90210. Carrie Fisher, who strapped two danishes to her head and played Princess Leia, is the daughter of two Hollywood major names. Tell me that they didn’t throw their weight around (no pun intended, Roseanne). However, these two at least can act. Tori may not win an Academy Award, but she’s decent. Carrie has five movies I can name right off the top of my head to her credit, and all of them box office successes. Tom Arnold is getting a show because Roseanne is toss­ ing her collateral and her market worth around to get her hubby a job.

While this might seem admirable (hey, if I knew someone in show business, I’d like them to give me a zillion dollar job, too), I can’t abide by the gross use of her value to ABC via the A.C. Neilsen ratings. “I’m making this network money, you gotta give me what I want!” is her recent philosophy. I wonder what her philosophy was when she was playing time a Rodney Dangerfield special on HBO? How can you tell that her ego is beginning to exceed her girth? If anyone decides to give her lip, they get the pink slip. As Dennis Miller once said, “You’re outta here!” MAN, the Ego-Meter is running on overload!

Then again, there was never any justice in Hollywood. I mean, a Long Island girl decides to pull the plug on a woman, and all of a sudden, the Big Three networks engage in an all-out bidding war for the story. Please, Amy, let us tell your story, and we’ll buy you the Ferrari and all the conjugal visits you want.

I notice nobody’s offering anything to Mary Jo Buttafusco. It’s not who you know, it’s who you blow.

Welcome to Hollywood.

Ozzy Osbourne played the last date of his “No More Tours” outing last week in Orange County, California. According to the metal madman this was to be his last appearance on stage. The show was opened by Black Sabbath with ex-Judas Priest vocalist Rob Halford. In the show’s finale Osbourne joined the original members of Sabbath for a 30 minute reunion. Osbourne stated that he may return to the music business again not as Ozzy, but as John Michael Osbourne.

The December 3 Minis­try, Sepultura, Helmet show has been moved from Madis­on Square Garden to the smaller Paramount Theater on the same date.

This week rapper Ice Cube released his latest LP, The Predator. The first single will be for the song “Wicked” which also has a video that includes Red Hot Chili Peppers Anthony Kiedis and Flea.

The Black Crowes filmed a video for “Sometimes Salvation” in New York’s Times Square with French di­rector Stefan Sednoui. Sednoui is known for his work with the Red Hot Chili Peppers on the “Give it Away” video.

In correction of last week’s article, Nirvana’s Incesticide will not be a new LP from the band, only a collection of B-sides and unreleased live tracks. It will be in stores on December 15.

Another vampire movie you ask? Be warned, Francis Ford Coppola's version of the Bram Stoker classic is unlike any other film depiction of the vampire legend you have seen. Coppola, who has directed such films as Apocalypse Now and The Godfather, is at his best here. He takes the audience on a ride into the dark recesses of the mind and never lets go with stunning visuals and nightmarish images that seem to escape any rational definition. Unlike the 1922 version of the novel by F.W. Murnau entitled Nosferatu, the visit to Castle Dracula by as is most of the novel aside from mostly in London in the year 1897, tended in his novel. The film is set in Transylvania shortly after the fall of Constantinople to the Turks in 1462. It is here that Coppola presents his interpretation of the origin of the vampire legend. With stunning visuals and graphic depictions of warfare, we learn of Count Dracula's descent into the world of vampires. After returning home from battle and finding his beloved wife Elisabeta has committed suicide because of a trick by the Turks, Dracula renounces God and swears to live on in death to take revenge in the blood of the living.

Gary Oldman (JFK, Sid and Nancy) gives a stunning performance as the Count which at times has the audience pitying Dracula. His screenplay remaining faithful to Stoker's vision.

The one variation on the original work that Coppola added in his version is the extraordinary pre-credit sequence that takes place in Transylvania shortly after the fall of Constantinople to the Turks in 1462. It is here that Coppola presents his interpretation of the origin of the vampire legend. With stunning visuals and graphic depictions of warfare, we learn of Count Dracula's descent into the world of vampires. After returning home from battle and finding his beloved wife Elisabeta has committed suicide because of a trick by the Turks, Dracula renounces God and swears to live on in death to take revenge in the blood of the living.

Gary Oldman stars as Dracula

The rest of the cast includes Annette Bening, Steve Martin, Johnathan's fiancee and Dracula's prey tale of throats being punctured and hearts exploding under pressure of a wooden stake. This is not to say that the film is not rooted in the vampire lure of old, but merely a warning that this movie is one of visual intensity instead of violence. The dizzying vision that is Coppola's Dracula should be viewed knowing that there may be boundaries to the reality of the world, but that in terms of literature and film reality may be distorted or eradicated in order to present our minds with other possibilities or visions of our own world. Bram Stoker presented his distortion of the world's reality with the macabre images presented in his classic novel and Coppola has built upon them with a stunning motion picture that leaves you feeling drained and refreshed at the same time.

MSC students are hungry for an education and the administration has very little to feed them. Once again, many departments in our fine institution of higher learning have suffered budget cuts that were made by the administration in the beginning of the year due to the lack of funding by state government. It’s true that funding cannot be created when there is no capital to back it, but after several consecutive years of budget cuts it is becoming increasingly difficult for this college to provide a quality education for its students.

However, the lack of educational funding that plagues this country at every level is a problem with a troubled past and a bleak future. Our federal government has pledged itself in recent years to fighting drug wars and protecting economic interests through military intervention in other countries, yet it has placed little value or economic support in the education of young Americans. If the United States wants to remain the economic superpower of the world it must have an educated work force in order to do so.

Education is an investment in the future. Quality education demands that students be provided with state-of-the-art equipment and teachers who are equipped not only to provide information about the past, but suggestions and hypotheses for the future. In order to do this, American leaders must recognize the grave importance in providing money not only to purchase computers for student use, but to also provide the instruction and training to make every student in this country computer literate. Only by recognizing and fulfilling this need can American students begin to play ‘catch-up’ with other student populations throughout the world who far surpass us in technological knowledge.

In addition, it is critical that American teachers do not become stagnant in their own knowledge. It is of utmost importance the faculty be provided with opportunities to learn and share new information in their fields. Professors who do not update the information they learned while getting their masters degree in 1964 are of little assistance to college students who are preparing to enter the workforce in 1992. This is not to say that professors do not possess valuable knowledge that is important for students to learn; however, just as students must constantly learn, so must teachers.

Most faculty members who commented on the budget cuts at MSC maintained that their departments are "making do" with the shrinking resources with which they are provided. Is this what American education has come to? Making do?

College costs continue to rise and the quality of college education continues to decline in this country. Granted, finding a cure for our ailng education system in the U.S. is a monumental task, but one that American leaders must cease to shrug off. At the same time, those of us who continue to bear the burden of this neglect must refuse to comply with our government's "make do" policy for education. Stagnation serves no one.

“We are feeling a pinch, but it's been manageable.”

Swartz neglects facts in Rosenbaum case

Although Matt Swartz may claim to be right, it appears that his self-serving definition of right is neither semantically correct nor seemingly advantageous. Matt Swartz’s recent indecorous column comparing the Rosenbaum and King cases is so blatantly devoid of factual support that it cannot be correct. Clearly, correct and right are not synonymous in Matt Swartz’s column.

Swartz’s basic conclusion is that the verdict in the Nelson case is far more outrageous than the verdict in the Koon et al. case. (Note: This is how cases should be characterized—by the names of the defendants, not by the names of the victims.) This is absurd.

First, in the Koon et al. case, the prosecution possessed a videotape of the incident in question. No such videotape exists in the Nelson case. Second, in the Nelson case, the police fully cooperated with the district attorney and provided the bulk of the evidence against the defendant. In the other case, a wall of blue silence thwarted the prosecution at every stage of the prosecution.

Third, in the Koon et al. case, the defense, with the abled-bodied assistance of a pro-defense judge, were able to obtain a change of venue to an almost all-white suburb of Los Angeles. In the Nelson case, the defendant was saddled with one of the most well-known prosecution judges in New York City. No change of venue was obtainable in that case. Moreover, Justice Rappaport, at every stage of the trial, made diligent efforts to thwart the defense case. Indeed, Rappaport refused to allow any mention of one of Nelson’s strongest defenses to the murder charge—i.e., that Rosenbaum’s death was due to gross negligence of the hospital which treated his wounds and not the wounds themselves.

Fourth, in the Koon et al. case, both by requesting a venue change and their actions during jury selection, the defense attempted to exclude African-Americans from the jury. In the Nelson case no one has suggested that the defense attempted to exclude Jews from the jury.

Fifth, the defendants in the Koon et al. case had the financial resources to hire a team of high-priced, experienced attorneys as well as an expert investigative team. Clearly, it is to Mr. Lewis’s credit that he was able to overcome these obstacles and secure a verdict in his client’s favor. Contrary, the members of the defense bar fully expected that the attorneys in the Koon et al. case would obtain acquittals for their police officer clients.

Finally, it is outrageous for a journalist who does not know all the facts to convict someone in the press.

As someone who happens to be both, I am proud to say I am a source of confusion for many individuals.

How can someone be both? It’s very simple. Human beings have both positive and negative traits, or a good side and a bad side, if you will. Most people try to eliminate the bad side and be all good. This is a mistake. People need to be balanced. If a person’s negative side does not have an outlet it will eventually overtake them completely. I remember an interview with Trent Reznor of Nine Inch Nails in which he discussed fans from the Midwest, namely Oklahoma and Utah. Many of them came from families that were either fundamentalist or Mormon. And these same fans were now Satanists. Why? Because they were told that it was wrong to be anything but good, and now that bad side had taken over in an equal extreme.

This is not to say that fundamentalism or Mormonism produces Satanists. It is merely an example of what can happen if we spend our lives hiding from our bad side.

People can do a lot of damage in the name of good. Take the issue of censorship. It is a mistake for groups like the Parents’ Music Resource Center (PMRC) to try to censor rock music. Certain types of rock music can be healthy outlets for negativity. When I get violently angry at someone, I think it is far more acceptable to go home and listen to a group with a contemptible name and even more contemptible lyrics than to blow up the house of the person I am angry with. God knows I’ve felt like it sometimes.

The bottom line is: don’t judge a book by its cover...Honey!

This weekend I recalled one of my classes from last semester in which we discussed race and gender issues. When I told my professor I had grown up in a mostly white suburb she asked me how I reacted when I saw blacks for the first time. This question surprised me because I never dwazed on me that it should somehow be weird that someone had a different skin color. When I told her that race and ethnicity did not affect me or make an impact on me she laughed. I didn’t really see what was funny about it. I’ve always had this idea that how a person treats you is far more important than how they look.

This brings me to the subject of appearances. By appearances (and superficial society is; ready to judge people strictly on the basis of their physical appearance. Aside from obvious racism in society, what about discrimination against people of any race who dress or wear their hair in an unconventional manner? Ask any man with long hair how many times he’s been pulled over by a cop for a minor transgression or a non-existent one. In general, I find that I am regarded with suspicion and treated like a potential criminal when I wear a motorcycle jacket and ripped jeans. I never have this problem when my dress style is more conventional.

And what about hair color? When I had bleach-blonde hair I also had a lot of men looking for dates. These same men were surprised and disappointed when they also discovered I had a brain in my head. When I had black hair, I was regarded as some kind of freakish deviant by most establishments I came in contact with. Again, these problems disappeared when I changed my hair color to brown. I am the same person, but have been judged three different ways based on my appearance.

Why do people place so much emphasis on how a person looks? Are people really so shallow and materialistic as to believe that how you look outside reflects what you are inside? Maybe it’s a Cartesian dualism thing. People have been taught that you can be either good or bad. This is a mistake. People need to be balanced. If a person’s negative side does not have an outlet it will eventually overtake them completely. Security is problem in America

I found Trish Barker's column entitled, "Security Leads to Blindness" very interesting. Actually, I agree. Security leads to a lot more than blindness; it also leads to ineffectiveness, boredom, and stagnation. Let me make my point using my own religion, Judaism, as an example.

First, let me say that I care very much about my religion. I often feel that security leads to my fellow Christian co-workers. Since I started fighting with them I've gotten even more interested in learning about Judaism, but I've also noticed that most of my fellow Jews don't share my interest. I'm talking mostly about Conservative and Reform Jews; the country has seen how passionate the more religious Jews are about the Yarkei Rosenbaum case is an example.

What I'm talking about is what Rabbi Meir Kahane, the founder of the Jewish Defense League, called the Jewish Establishment. The leaders and members of the various organizations that deal with the problems of anti-Semitism and the lack of Jewish identity in our community. The problem with the Jewish Establishment is security.

The Jews as a nation have been attacked by to many different people, from the Biblical days to the present, that I always had a hard time keeping track of them all in Hebrew school. In the United States we all have the constitutional right to practice our religion, whatever it may be. However, like most Americans, we get lazy unless we are actually being threatened. We feel so secure in our constitutional right to freedom of religion that we don't put that freedom to use.

As a result, the majority of Jewish organizations send letters, information, etc. to a Jewish population that just doesn't care. They hold dances which very few people attend and hold meetings helplessly trying to understand why no one shows up at any events. Yes people, there is a Jewish Student Union on campus. If my older brother hadn't gone to Montclair State before me I doubt I would have known that. Security is the problem. It's something in the American make-up. We need someone to kick us in the butt and make sure we are free.

I'm Right!

AIDS is a terrible and deadly disease caused by the HIV virus and unfortunately there is not cure for this disease or any disease caused by a virus including the common cold. An estimated 12 million people worldwide may have the virus and the AIDS virus doesn't discriminate either. Just ask Magic Johnson, Arthur Ashe, Rock Hudson, Princess Diana, Liberace and others who are white, black, Jewish, Catholic, Hispanic, Japanese, Moslem, European, African, etc. This disease was not created by a white, Jewish doctor to exterminate all the gays and blacks in the world. Unfortunately, some people want to use this disease to cause anger and hatred claim they have some invisible proof that explains "it is a contagious disease." Other people, just as ignorant, claim that this disease is from God to punish all the gay and drug users.

First of all, AIDS is a deadly disease, but compared to other sexual diseases, heart disease and cancer the numbers in these diseases far outnumber those with AIDS. In the United States alone, about 75 million Americans are affected by heart disease and heart disease kills too! The ten top causes of death in this country are, in order of highest to lowest mortality rate: heart disease, cancer, stroke, motor vehicle accidents, other accidents, influenza/pneumonia, diabetes, cirrhosis, suicide, and homicide. My reference for this information is the U.S. Center for Disease Control. AIDS doesn't even come close to making this list, but our government has not spent as much money on AIDS research than any other diseases which are far more widespread and just as deadly! Too much is made of the AIDS problem and unfortunately at least 100 million people with other deadly diseases are affected by the AIDS scare!

Now that there are tests to screen out infected blood, the majority of AIDS cases are behaviorally related. These behaviors which make up an estimated 95 percent of all cases are homosexuality and intravenous drug users. AIDS is transmitted through the blood of an infected individual to another person's bloodstream. It is difficult to catch through casual contact or heterosexual sex. If this isn't anti-anything, it is just the facts. Yes there are cases which claim they got it through their dentist or heterosexually, but those are extremely rare and most likely the person such as a Magic Johnson was a bisexual or oral rough sex with bleeding being involved. I know, people got AIDS through blood transfusions, surgery, giving birth, etc., but the facts are drug users (intra-venous) and homosexuals are the main victims and transmitters of AIDS.

Since there is no cure we must use our brains and prevent this horrible disease from spreading. The following advice, if you follow it, will save your lives. First, you should get a blood test at least twice a year and make sure you are clean. Get to know your partner including name, number and AIDS test result. Practice monogamy. What's wrong with one person, one love? Correctly use a condom, spermicide and non-oxynol 9. Don't use drugs! Don't practice anal sex or any sex where bleeding may occur. Finally, realize, you are mortal not invincible, be careful!

In other words, love, safe sex, safe behaviors and respecting yourself and others will save your life and will also help you lead a better life too. I forgot to mention the most important factor in avoiding AIDS, abstain from sex, it won't kill you!

Weekend College Student Association Food Festival

By Ana M. Morata

On Fri., Nov.20, a Food Festival was held in the formal Dining Room of the Student Center. It was organized by the Weekend College Student Association, a Class II of the SGA

The goal of this event was to share a cultural experience and provide the opportunity for everyone to taste different dishes from other countries. As an incentive to encourage the multi-cultural students of Weekend College to make specialties from their countries, prizes were offered for the three dishes judged to be the most flavorful. Margarita Alvarez, who hosts the cooking segment on the program "Bueno Al Día Nueva York" on Channel 41, was invited to be the judge.

Some of the countries and dishes represented were: "Pollo a la Pepitoria" (Chicken in a wine sauce) from Spain, "Salteña" (a type of soup with vegetables and meat) from the Dominican Republic, "Papa a la huancaina" (cold boiled potatoes served with a cream sauce) from Peru, "Burritos" and "Corn Bread" from Mexico, "Arroz con coco" (Coconut rice) from Venezuela, "Moros y Cristianos" (rice with beans) from Cuba, "Thanksgiving Turkey" from the U.S., etc. All together there were 15 dishes representing 15 countries.

Oh Jesus Ma, don't make me sit at the kiddie table.

Thank you, thanks. Poultry day is almost upon us and a couple of days from now, we'll all be sitting around Aunt Bertha's dining room table. (You know, the one with the big plastic orange table cloth surrounded by pseudomarble figurines of naked cherubs with fig leaves over their ding dongs) slurping down Grandma's famous yam leaves over their ding dongs) slurping down Grandma's famous yam leaves over their ding dongs) slurping down Grandma's famous yam leaves over their ding dongs) slurping down Grandma's famous yam leaves over their ding dongs)

Grandma, I haven't grown overwhelm with car thefts they don't have the gumption to eyeing your penis. If you must know, I recently got a tattoo of Charlie Manson on my chest, I'm dying my hair purple and I wear to Christ if you EVER buy me underwear again I will pluck the batteries out of your pacemaker and WASH THEM DOWN YOUR TEROAT WITH BEN GAY!!

There are, however, things to be thankful for this Thanksgiving. Here, compiled for your convenience, are the points that will provide the most pleasant visions of comfort and bliss during your time at the kiddie table this Thursday...Be thankful that:

1. Barbara Bush isn't house hunting in your neighborhood.
2. You're not a Jets fan.
3. Campus Police are so overwhelmed with car thefts they don't have the gumption to arrest you for putting limey in your roommate's Diet Coke last week.
4. You're getting an automatic 4.0 because she croaked.
5. That kid down the hall is a chemistry major and has all the ingredients to produce Mack truck acid.
6. You didn't finish the General Mao's Chicken in the cafeteria on Tuesday.
7. There's a bathroom within running distance of the cafeteria.
8. You're a girl because there's nothing worse than standing at a urinal, face forward, wondering if you should make conversation with the guy peeing next to you or ask him gently to stop eyeing your penis.
9. You're a boy because its hard to imagine that those construction guys out on the roof of the library really need those binoculars to "survey" College Ave. for potholes on those Indian Summer short skirt afternoons.
10. You didn't register to vote. You can't be blamed.
11. You have a significant other. There is a distinct lack of intelligent, pale, black-haired Mediterranean women roaming around.
12. Your mother thinks you're thin. It's hard, and that's at least one person.
14. The College Senate voted yes on alcohol in the Rat. There will be less frat boys fighting in the Loop now.
15. This column is just about over.

Come Friday you can go back to your thankless, self-indulgent nature. But for one day it may be necessary to ooh and ahhh over Cousin Bob's lint sculptures and turn a sympathetic ear towards Uncle George's hemorrhoid condition. Gobble, gobble.

It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe. You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter’s dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

If Galileo had used Vivarin, maybe he could have mastered the solar system faster, too.

Revive with VIVARIN.

The Hawk wrestling team is no stranger to anyone who follows the sport here at MSC. Steve Strellner is in his 14th season as head coach of the wrestling team. Strellner, who has been one of the main reasons for the Red Hawks success, has been one of the main reasons for the Red Hawks success. His "hard nosed" wrestling tactics relies heavily on a wrestler going out there and "taking" the match to anyone who follows the sport here at MSC. Steve Strellner is in his 14th season as head coach of the wrestling team.
Women's swimming off to best start since 1987 behind star trio
by Karen Plumstead

The MSC women's swimming team is off to its best start since 1987. The Red Hawks currently sport a 3-1 record.

MSC's latest victory came over Kean College, 117-86 on Friday, Nov. 20. Only the women's team competed in this away meet. The Red Hawks were once again led by star swimmers Michelle Opalka, Marianna Krivak and Yardena Yadin. The trio were each triple winners against Kean. They also teamed up with sophomore Rebecca Golden to win the 200 meter relay.

Opalka dominated the 100 yard freestyle and the 100 yard butterfly. Krivak stomped the competition in the 100 and 200 yard breaststroke. Yadin took victories in the 100 and 200 yard freestyle events.

Sophomore Christina Krivak was a winner for MSC in the 50 yard freestyle event.

Golden added to her winning list by taking the 100 yard backstroke.

Head coach Brian McLaughlin is also excited about the addition of diver Mary Bleignier. "She's going to really benefit our team."

McLaughlin also sees a change in his team. "With the victories, our confidence is on the rise," he

Women's hoops edged by Eastern Connecticut in tournament final, 55-53

The MSC women's basketball team dropped to 1-1 this weekend after losing to Eastern Connecticut, 55-53, in the final game of the Subway Tip-Off Tournament Sunday night at Geisser Gym in Williamantic, Conn.

The Red Hawks were down 21-13 after one half in the game that was close all the way through.

MSC took the lead 49-47 on guard Kim Barnes' jumper with 3:08 left in the game. Eastern Connecticut battled back to take the lead with 13:46 left to play.

The Red Hawks continued to hang tough until St. Joseph's pulled away in the last two minutes of non-conference battle. Junior guard Judy Stair also added 10 points, three assists, and two steals to the MSC cause.

Carlisle was led by Monica Snoop, who scored 15 points and grabbed 11 rebounds. The Red Hawks head back into action after Thanksgiving when they take on NJAC rival Rowan College on Monday, Nov. 30 at Panzer Gymnasium at 5 p.m. The game is the front end of a MSC-Rowan basketball doubleheader.

The men's game will follow this contest.

They'll then take part in another hoops doubleheader on Wednesday, Dec. 2 against William Paterson. Again, the men's game will follow.

The Red Hawks were once again in the freestyle and butterfly events," raved MSC's fourth-year head coach. "He is especially pleased with freshman Tara Morlando. "She continues to be one of our most versatile swimmers and she scored 16 points and grabbed 13 rebounds. The 6'0" senior also came up with five steals.

Barnes also came up big with 15 points. Senior guard Jeanine Mullally also excelled in the defeat, chipping in with 10 points. Senior point guard Cindy Poling was steady with six points, seven assists, and six rebounds.

Mischa Kowolenko led Eastern Connecticut to victory, collecting 17 points and grabbing six boards. Sherry Kenzie added 12 points and six rebounds for the winners.

The Red Hawks got into Sunday's final by defeating Caldwell College, 58-47.

The Red Hawks were pretty much in control of this one all of the way through.

Mullally was back in action after Thanksgiving when they take on NJAC rival Rowan College on Monday, Nov. 30 at Panzer Gymnasium at 5 p.m. The game is the front end of a MSC-Rowan basketball doubleheader.

The men's game will follow this contest.

Mr. Basketball begins 92-93 with split of tourney games
by Keith A. Idee

The MSC men's basketball team went into last weekend looking to get the 1992-93 started off on the right foot with two victories in the Fifth Annual Bloodhound Invitational in Manhattan, N.Y.

The weekend started off as planned, as the Red Hawks defeated tournament host John Jay College, 75-72 on Saturday, Nov. 21 at the Bloodhound Arena. However, St. Joseph's College threw a monkey wrench in MSC's plans on Sunday. They defeated the Red Hawks 68-59 in the tournament final.

The Red Hawks trailed by only four points at halftime. The first half swung back and forth, featuring five lead changes and six ties.

In the second half, St. Joseph's managed to keep the lead for the entire 20 minutes. MSC did cut St. Joseph's lead to 57-55 on freshman guard Jose Ortiz driving layup with 7:06 left to play. The Red Hawks continued to hang tough until St. Joseph's pulled away in the last two minutes of non-conference battle.

Junior guard Judy Stair also added 10 points, three assists, and two steals to the MSC cause.
