Academic departments labor under budget crunch

by Mike Cappadona

The departments of this college have been forced to deal with budget cuts that were made by the Administration at the beginning of the year. While some department budgets were hit harder than others, everyone has been feeling the pressure of supply, equipment and travel cuts. The following is a breakdown of how some departments have been affected by these cuts.

Department of Broadcasting, Speech, Communications, Dance and Theatre:
"For the most part, we were given sufficient warning by the Administration last year about the budget cuts," said Dr. Gerald Ratliff, chairperson of the department. The department has been forced to reduce the number of non-major courses that are being offered. The number of supplies and equipment used has been cut back on in large numbers.

"We are now able to do more creative productions instead of elaborate ones," Ratliff said. "But more students have been doing original work, and we still have the same number of shows. We've been very frugal with all the warning that we've had."

Chemistry Department:
"The chemistry department has a lot of fixed costs," said Dr. Brian Humphrey, chairperson of the department. "Our budget cut was the least in the school at five to six percent across the boards." Humphrey went on to say that the area hit hardest was the equipment budget, although he was not sure of the exact amount of those cuts.

Department of Physics/Geoscience:
Supply money for this department was cut by about seven percent, said Mr. Richard H. Hodson, chairperson of the department. One area that has been cut back on is Xerox copies, which are usually handed out in large numbers.

But the department will try to move larger numbers of photo copies into the Book Store to be sold. The travel budget, which was minimal to begin with, was also cut.

Business Education and Office Systems Administration (BEOSA):
"Funds for travel have been cut, which hinders us from further developing ourselves," said chairperson Dr. Stephen Cyrus. "Cuts in general supplies prevent us from advancing as well." The department also faces a lack of funds to upgrade the computer system with state-of-the-art equipment, Cyrus said.

Department of Accounting, Law and Taxation:
"The chemistry department was cut by about eight days before the department. One area that has been cut back on in Xerox copies, which are usually handed out in large numbers."

Like most departments, the Department of Accounting, Law and Taxation has faced budget reductions in terms of

Resident Assistant appealing termination

by Nancy Gannon

A resident assistant (R.A.) is appealing the recommendation that she be terminated due to an incident in which she was intoxicated on November 13.
Ilona Tykotski, 22, a Webster Hall R.A., was notified of this recommendation in writing by the Director of Webster Hall, Lynette Harris. As stated in Harris’s letter, the recommendation was made because Tykotski’s behavior is not exemplary of what a student leader should be.

As reported by Campus Police in last week’s issue, Tykotski was brought to Blanton Hall in an intoxicated state and semi-conscious condition by her sorority sisters, who live there. Campus Police called an ambulance, and she was taken to Mountainside Hospital, where she remained overnight for observation. She had become intoxicated at a sorority/fraternity mixer off campus in Belleville.

Campus Police reported that Tykotski had consumed six 16 ounce glasses of punch on Nov. 13. Tykotski says this in-

A recent firebombing in Germany killed three Turkish immigrants. The attack has spurred a backlash of anti-Nazi discrimination. The attacks have been called neo-Nazi, but some Rightist leaders said that Germany can not keep admitting half a million immigrants into their country when the rest of Europe does not even admit a considerable fraction of that number into their respective nations.

Bangladesh was ravaged again by another cyclone. Many farms were not ready to be used since the last time a cyclone hit. The nation already has a poor economy, and this could be fatal.

A storm that brought flooding rains of up to 2 1/2 inches in our area ravaged parts of the south with tornadoes. Amazingly enough, in Cobb County, Georgia, the twisters did not hit the trailer parks but decimated a large portion of an upper class area of mansions and large homes. Several people were killed and injured throughout the south.

A disgusting runoff race for a Georgia Senate seat is being run between incumbent Wyche Fowler and long time career politician Paul Coverdell. The issues are being ignored, much like in the D'Amato-Abrams race in New York. Attack ads and mudslinging pervade Georgia media and characterizations of the race.

Ross Perot ended up placing Second in two states, according to final vote totals. He placed second in Utah with 26% to Clinton's 24% and in Maine the tally was 38.7% for Clinton, 30.4% for Perot and 30.3% for Bush. Nationwide, Clinton got 43% to Bush's 38% to Perot's 19%.

The coalition feels the Republican plan differs very little from the former school funding plan provided by New Jersey.

supplies and travel. But students who work for this department have also been directly affected.

"Accounting lab students get paid $5 an hour for the tutoring," said chairperson Diane C. Schulz. "But because of the cuts, restrictions have been placed on their hours. The situation is very spartan."

The department also had its secretary taken away due to the cuts. However, the Dean's Office has supplied a secretary for the time being. Promotions are going to be very few in number. The department is trying to keep down the number of adjuncts and tighten up the number of classes offered, Schulz said.

Sociology Department:
The cut in the adjunct budget has hurt this department. "Five general education courses had to be cancelled," said chairperson Dr. Laura Kramer. This cut will lead to 175 students being a department representative gets to serve on a panel or attend other panels, Kramer said. These conferences provide important ways for the department to revitalize itself. Kramer added that the conferences provide the opportunity for faculty members to encounter people who are doing current research. This keeps the faculty up to speed and professionally active in the department.

Technology Department:
"One secretary who is valuable to the department will not be up to the department. She serves on a panel or conference," said chairperson Dr. Harbans Singh. "There is no money for travel budget, Singb said that it was "very little to begin with."

English Department:
The promotion freeze has been hurting the department," said chairperson Dr. Martin L. Greenwald. Although the travel budget was very little to begin with, it was cut in half.

"We have lost two faculty members in the past three years," Greenwald said. Because of this, the department has scaled back its number of course offerings. But the courses, although fewer in number, are more effective. "We are feeling a pinch," Greenwald said, "but it's been manageable."

"The promotion freeze has been hurting the department," said chairperson Dr. James Nash. "One secretary who is valuable to the department will not be up for promotion."

Nash said that the department has been authorized to hire two full-time faculty members to replace two who were lost over the summer. He added that the courses, although fewer in number, are more effective. "It was not acting as an R.A.," she said. "Tykotski was told that she fell downstairs twice in between the party and Blanton Hall, hitting her head both times. Her friends agreed with Campus Police that she should go to the hospital."

Since she received the recommendation letter last Thursday, she has appealed her case both to Residence Life and Administrators. "I'm being held accountable for my actions while I was unconscious," she said. "I did not choose to go to Blanton. Not only was I intoxicated, but bodily injured," she said.

According to Tykotski, she may be terminated not because she was drinking, but because she was in that condition on campus.

"I did not consciously violate any campus policies. I am of age to drink. I was not drinking on campus. I was injured and I was not acting as an R.A."

Ed Martin, Dean of Student Affairs, expressed his concern about the situation. "It is so important to make absolutely certain of what you're drinking in any social setting," Martin said.

Regarding Tykotski's appeal, Martin said, "This is a difficult matter to resolve, but I hope that everyone involved can come to a fair and equitable solution."

Controlled Substances (CDS) - Crack
11/18/92 An employee of Alden Food Service found a small glass vial with a white crystal-like substance in the men’s bathroom in the Blanton Cafeteria. Field tests on the substance were inconclusive.

Paraphernalia
11/24/92 A patrolling officer found a pipe commonly used to smoke CDS left in the lobby of Richardson Hall at 2 a.m. The pipe was photographed and taken for evidence. No suspects are reported at this time.

Theft From MV
11/19/92 Police Headquarters received a call from a male who said that a bomb was in the Student Center. The building was evacuated, searched and reopened 40 minutes later.

Criminal Mischief
11/16/92 A Bohn Hall resident reported that someone defaced and urinated outside of his dorm room. He believes that it was done because of his “Pro Death-Anti Church” belief, which is posted on his door. Vandalism had been going on for the past week. The suspect was in a black male standing outside of his dorm room. He suspects residents across the hall may be involved because of their Pro-Life stand.

Criminal Mischief to MV
11/20/92 A resident of Clove Road reported that a fight in the gym during open recreation basketball. During the fight when the counselor told the combatant that he was going to call the police, one of the combatants said, “I’ll take you out and any officer that responds.” Responding officers were confronted with a very angry combatant, who repeatedly said, “I’m going to get my piece (slang for gun).” The other combatant left the area before being identified. Neither combatant appeared to be interested in filing criminal charges.

False Public Alarm
11/17/92 Blanton Hall’s fire alarm was activated by a pull station on the third floor. An RA claims that a resident saw who had pulled it and named an illegal visitor who was a non-student. The resident was not able to be interviewed. Shelley Jackson, Director of Blanton Hall, reported that the criminal has been banned from Blanton since 11/10/92. The resident denied that the criminal had been in the building. On 11/19/92, an investigating officer interviewed the resident but she said that she did not see the criminal pull the station box. He was on the floor in a different wing from which the box had been pulled.

Chip Fu, Moc Fu, Poc Fu. No, they’re not the daily specials on a Chinese take-out menu. They’re three of the freshest new artists on the rap circuit, and they’ve banded together under the name Fuschnickens. With their debut album, Live Records, F.U. (Don’t Take It Personal), and their first hit single, “I’m a True Fu Artist,” they’re bringing hip hop from Brooklyn’s cuttin’ up the wax and throwin’ down the hottest rap this side of the Atlantic Coast.

Fuschnickens appeared at the Memorial Auditorium last Monday night opening for the Soup Dragons, Tom Tom Club, and James as a last minute replacement for Black Sheep (who left the tour because they felt “they weren’t making any money”), according to Class One Concerts Producer Jim Lloyd. Of course, they almost didn’t appear because they called up two hours prior to the concert saying they were on Exit 1 on the NJ Turnpike. Luckily, they arrived just in time to commence the evening’s festivities.

After their performance, I had a chance to talk to them in their dressing room. The three young men in T-shirts and baggy jeans were sprawled out on their chairs from the exhaustion of their set, but they still had the energy to enlighten the public about who they are and what they are all about.

Chip: Fuschnickens means “For unity of many styles, lyrical techniques and verbal tactics which we have mastered.” We just derived the name to let the people know about the many styles which we could kick... just a lot of styles fused together to come up with our own unique style.

Each rapper has a personal arsenal of rap styles which they blend together into a sound all their own. For example, Chip uses substitution, speed rap/speed chanting, rhyming backwards and forwards, “sing-a-long-o’sixpence,” and a style he calls “problem,” which he says is just complex rhyming. As for the other two...

Moc: I use the dog pound sound, “obnoxious...” and I just kick various styles, different cuts and cuts, different phrases like “gaggo gaggo nanu nanu.”

The three have known each other since their childhood, Chip and Poc growing up together, and then meeting Moc in high school. They then began their careers in earnest about six years ago. According to Chip, it was a hard road to go from doing shows to getting signed to Live Records, which is home to artists such as Tribe Called Quest, KRS-One, Too Short, Boogie Down Productions and Jazzy Jeff and the Fresh Prince. “We went to different clubs and performed for free. We had a lot of competitions that we entered. We did our best and came out on top.

Performing for free may sound drastic, almost desperate, but Chip explains the group’s sound philosophy: “When you do shows for free, it’s beneficial to you. No matter how you look at it, there could be a hundred people in the crowd that never heard of Fuschnickens. And that night they’ll hear about it, and they’ll go out and buy the album. It’s... promotional.”

This seems their promotional ventures have been successful, as they’ve toured all over America, Canada, and even Europe with artists like the Beastie Boys, Kris Kross, and BDP. Commenting on audience response overseas:

Poc: To me, they appreciate music more than the lyrics.

Chip: I think it’s the language barrier but also... you have this Hispanic guy and two black guys in the group. Obviously, you get them up on stage and you get a mixed crowd, everybody’s gonna listen ‘cuz they wanna know “How did this group come together?” What type of message do those three individuals have?...’ Basically, we don’t have a message... we just come together and have fun.

Over a period of six months of touring, Fuschnickens still had the time and energy to write and record their album. About the process:

Poc: It’s not hard, but it’s not easy, because our music is complex. We try to fuse it together...

Moc: Lyrical styles, verbal styles, rhyming styles. That’s what we display; that’s the whole point of our music—flow in different notes, different types of rhymes, add-ins, over-dubs.

Their hard work seems to have paid off, and success is now an afterthought to the group. I asked if they were surprised about their level of success and how they think the public has responded to their music.

Chip: When we came out, we left people wondering. ‘It’s like... with read video, we display a different style or skill, so people often wonder, “What is this group basically about?”. We’ve had a promo video out, lettin’ people get little glimpses and snips of us. And it just kept them wondering, and when we came out, (people said) “Oh, these guys are totally different,” because everybody was expecting to hear a reggae oriented album. We just fused that style with the rest of the styles we have.

As with most hip hop artists, sampling is a given when recording a song. It’s the very backbone of the industry. What with the controversy over copyright infringements and artists suing other artists, there is a great need to set the record straight, to define the nature and legal/ethical boundaries of sampling. Poc and Moc have their own views on the subject:

Poc: I don’t see why a lot of these artists are... suing people over the use of a rap or a beat b e cause they’re keepin’ their music alive as well as creating something different. If that was me, I’d feel flattered to know somebody was samplin’ my music.

Moc: I basically feel the same way. If you got music and you want people to always remember your music, when new groups come out and (sample) your music, your music will always go on forever and ever.

And with the success and growing popularity of Fuschnickens, people will remember them as part of the new vanguards of the hip hop wave for years to come.

"We just derived the name to let the people know about the many styles which we could kick..."

Welcome to Hollywood

It’s not who you know, it’s who you blow.

Welcome to Hollywood.

Interesting beginning, I know, but you will soon see my point. Tom Arnold, Roseanne’s husband, is getting his own show. May joy and rapture envelop the airwaves. Whoop-de-doo. Is this guy deserving of a television show? Is he willing to put up with the long hours and actually attempt to do a decent job with it?

Can the schmucklettehead even act?

Nonetheless, Tom is getting his own show. It doesn’t take a degree in astrophysics to realize that he does not have this job because he’s hitched to, pound for pound, the most popular woman on television.

There are other cases (too numerous to mention) where negotiation plays a part in Hollywood. Tori Spelling, daughter of television mogul Aaron Spelling, is a star on her daddy’s own hit show, Beverly Hills, 90210. Carrie Fisher, who strapped two dianishes to her head and played Princess Leia, is the daughter of two Hollywood major names. Tell me that they didn’t throw their weight around (no pun intended, Roseanne). However, these two at least can act. Tori may not win an Academy Award, but she’s decent. Carrie has five movies I can name right off the top of my head to her credit, and all of them box office successes. Tom Arnold is getting a show because he’s getting his own show.

Roseanne is toasting her collapse—and her market worth—around to get her hubby a job. While this might seem admirable (hey, if I knew someone in show business, I’d like them to give me a million dollar job, too), I can’t abide by the gross misuse of her value to ABC via the A.C. Neilson ratings. “I’m making this network money, you gotta give me what I want!” is her recent philosophy. I wonder what her philosophy was when she was still busting her butt trying to get a small part in a Rodney Dangerfield special on HBO? How can you tell that her ego is beginning to exceed her girth? If anyone decides to give her lip, they get the pink slip. As Dennis Miller once said, “You’re outta here!” Man, the Ego-Meter is running on overload!

Then again, there was never any justice in Hollywood. I mean, a Long Island girl decides to pull the plug on a woman, and all of a sudden, the Big Three networks engage in an all-out bidding war for the story. Please see, Amy, let us tell your story, and we’ll buy you the Ferrari and all the conjugal visits you want.

I notice nobody’s offering anything to Mary Jo Buttafuoco. It’s not who you know, it’s who you blow.

Welcome to Hollywood.

Ozzy Osbourne played the last date of his “No More Tours” outing last week in Orange County, California. According to the metal madman this was to be his last appearance on stage. The show was opened by Black Sabbath with ex-Judas Priest vocalist Rob Halford. In the show’s finale Osbourne joined the original members of Sabbath for a 30 minute reunion. Osbourne stated that he may return to the music business again not as Ozzy, but as John Michael Osbourne.

The December 3 Ministry, Sepultura, Helmet show has been moved from Madison Square Garden to the smaller Paramount Theater on the same date.

This week rapper Ice Cube releases his latest LP, The Predator. The first single will be for the song “Wicked” which also has a video that includes Red Hot Chili Peppers Anthony Kiedis and Flea.

The Black Crowes filmed a video for “Sometimes Salvation” in New York’s Times Square with French director Stefan Sednoui. Sednoui is known for his work with the Red Hot Chili Peppers on the “Give It Away” video.

In correction of last week’s article, Nirvana’s Incesticide will not be a new LP from the band, only a collection of B-sides and unreleased live tracks. It will be in stores on December 15.

Another vampire movie you ask? Be warned, Francis Ford Coppola's version of the Bram Stoker classic is unlike any other film depiction of the vampire legend you have seen. Coppola, who has directed such film classics as Apocalypse Now and The Godfather, is at his best here. He takes the audience on a ride into the dark recesses of the mind and never lets go with stunning visuals and nightmarish images that seem to escape any rational definition. Unlike the 1922 version of the novel by F.W. Murnau entitled Nosferatu, the visit to Castle Dracula by Johnathan Harker, with James V. Hart's screenplay remaining faithful to Stoker's vision. The one variation on the original work that Coppola added in his version is the extraordinary pre-credit sequence that takes place in Transylvania shortly after the fall of Constantinople to the Turks in 1462. It is here that Coppola presents his interpretation of the origin of the vampire legend. With stunning visuals and graphic depictions of warfare, we learn of Dracula's descent into the world of vampires. After returning home from battle and finding his beloved wife Elisabeta has committed suicide because of a trick by the Turks, Dracula renounces God and swears to live on in death to take revenge in the blood of the living.

Gary Oldman (Jonathan, Sid and Nancy) gives a stunning performance as the Count which at times has the audience pitting Dracula. The rest of the cast includes Anthony Hopkins, last year's Oscar winner in Silence of the Lambs, as Professor Van Helsing who literally steals every scene he is in. Keanu Reeves portrays the young law clerk Johnathan Harker who falls into the nightmarish reality of Dracula's world while visiting Castle Dracula on business. Mina, Johnathan's fiancée and Dracula's desire, is played by Wynona Rider, who dropped out of Coppola's Godfather III due to illness two years ago.

While the performances of all the actors are excellent and Oldman deserves an Oscar nomination for his portrayal of Dracula, the film stands solely on the stunning visual effects and the atmosphere developed by Coppola throughout the movie's two hours. Images flash upon the screen that leave the viewer bewildered and startled at the same instant. The film seems to unhinge the minds of those who watch it with sequences of violence and symbolism that Coppola thrusts forth with all of his brilliance. Perhaps the best way to view the film is to become part of the surrealistic world Coppola presents us with. It reminded me of Oliver Stone's film The Doors to the extent that reality seems to have been put on hold for the duration of the movie and the only true reality that exists is that which is on the screen before us.

I often found myself wondering what exactly was happening in terms of the images before me on the screen and for the audience who would rather put his/her mind on hold for a few hours, this film may not be the best choice because the symbolism and the incredible brilliance of the film's visual format will seem too intense for those seeking the average vampire tale of throat being punctured and hearts exploding under pressure of a wooden stake. This is not to say that the film is not rooted in the vampire lure of old, but merely a warning that this movie is one of visual intensity instead of violence. The dizzying vision that is Coppola's Dracula should be viewed knowing that there may be boundaries to the reality of the world, but that in terms of literature and film reality may be distorted or eradicated in order to present our minds with other possibilities or visions of our own world. Bram Stoker presented his distortion of the world's reality with the macabre images presented in his classic novel and Coppola has built upon them with a stunning motion picture that leaves you feeling drained and refreshed at the same time.

MSC students are hungry for an education and the administration has very little to feed them. Once again, many departments in our fine institution of higher learning have suffered budget cuts that were made by the administration in the beginning of the year due to the lack of funding by state government. It's true that funding cannot be created when there is no capital to back it, but after several consecutive years of budget cuts it is becoming increasingly difficult for this college to provide a quality education for its students.

However, the lack of educational funding that plagues this country at every level is a problem with a troubled past and a bleak future. Our federal government has pledged itself in recent years to fighting drug wars and protecting economic interests through military intervention in other countries, yet it has placed little value or economic support in the education of young Americans. If the United States wants to remain the economic superpower of the world it must have an educated workforce in order to do so.

Education is an investment in the future. Quality education demands that students be provided with state-of-the-art equipment and teachers who are equipped not only to provide information about the past, but suggestions and hypotheses for the future. In order to do this, American leaders must recognize the grave importance in providing money not only to purchase computers for student use, but also to provide the instruction and training to make every student in this country computer literate. Only by recognizing and fulfilling this need can American students begin to play 'catch up' with other student populations throughout the world who far surpass us in technological knowledge.

In addition, it is critical that American teachers do not become stagnant in their own knowledge. It is of utmost importance the faculty be provided with opportunities to learn and share new information in their fields. Professors who do not update the information they learned while getting their masters degree in 1964 are of little assistance to college students who are preparing to enter the workforce in 1992. This is not to say that professors do not possess valuable knowledge that is important for students to learn; however, just as students must constantly learn, so must teachers.

Most faculty members who commented on the budget cuts at MSC maintained that their departments are "making do" with the shrinking resources with which they are provided. Is this what American education has come to? Making do?

College costs continue to rise and the quality of college education continues to decline in this country. Granted, finding a cure for our ailing education system in the U.S. is a monumental task, but one that American leaders must cease to shrug off. At the same time, those of us who continue to bear the burden of this neglect must refuse to comply with our government's "make do" policy for education. Stagnation serves no one.
Swartz neglects facts in Rosenbaum case

Although Matt Swartz may claim to be right, it appears that his self-defining right of definition is neither semantically correct nor seemingly advantageous. Matt Swartz’s recent indelicate column comparing the Rosenbaum and King cases is so blantly devoid of factual support that it cannot be correct. Clearly, correct and right are not synonymous in Matt Swartz’s column.

Swartz’s basic conclusion is that the verdict in the Nelson case is far more outrageous than the verdict in the Koon et al. case. (Note: This is how cases should be characterized—by the names of the defendants, not by the names of the victims.) This is absurd.

First, in the Koon et al. case, the prosecution possessed a videotape of the incident in question. No such videotape exists in the Nelson case. Second, in the Nelson case, the police fully cooperated with the district attorney and provided the bulk of the evidence against the defendant. In the other case, a wall of blue silence thwarted the prosecution at every stage of the prosecution.

Third, in the Koon et al. case, the defense, with the able-bodied assistance of a pro-defense judge, were able to obtain a change of venue to an almost all-white suburb of Los Angeles. In the Nelson case, the defense was saddled with one of the most well-known prosecution judges in New York City. The change of venue was obtainable in that case. Moreover, Justice Rappaport, at every stage of the trial, made diligent efforts to thwart the defense case. Indeed, Rappaport refused to allow mention of one of Nelson’s strongest defenses to the murder charge—i.e. that Rosenbaum’s death was due to gross negligence of the hospital, which treated his wounds and not the wounds themselves.

Fourth, in the Koon et al. case, both by requesting a venue change and their actions during jury selection, the defense attempted to exclude all African-Americans from the jury. In the Nelson case no one has suggested that the defense attempted to exclude Jews from the jury.

Fifth, the defendants in the Koon et al. case had the financial resources to hire a team of high-priced, experienced attorneys as well as full investigative sources to prepare their defense. Nelson, lacking any funds, had a relatively inexperienced court-appointed solo practitioner with an investigatory team. Clearly, it is not to Mr. Lewis’s credit that he was able to overcome these obstacles.

As someone who happens to be a black woman, I was regarded as some kind of freakish deviant by most establishments I came in contact with. Again, these problems disappeared when I changed my hair color to brown. I am the same person, but have been judged differently based on the color of my hair.

Why do people place so much emphasis on how a person looks? Are people really so shallow and materialistic as to believe that how you look outside reflects what you are inside? Maybe it’s a Cartesian dualism thing. People have been taught that you can be either/or, both/and. It’s very simple. Human beings have both positive and negative traits, or a good side and a bad side, if you will. Most people try to eliminate the bad side and be all good. This is a mistake. People need to balance both sides. If a person’s negative side does not have an outlet it will eventually take them completely. I remember reading an article about an American criminal in which he discussed how he went from one excruciating experience to another and how he never could let go, but always hoped for redemption.

This brings me to the subject of appearances. This is undeniable that superficial society is; ready to judge a person strictly on the basis of their physical appearance. Aside from obvious racism in society, what about discrimination against people of any race who dress or wear their hair in an unconventional manner? Ask any man with long hair how he never had his hair cut in my hair.

As someone who happens to be both, I proudly say I am a source of confusion for many individuals. How can someone be both? It’s very simple. Human beings have both positive and negative traits, or a good side and a bad side, if you will. Most people try to eliminate the bad side and be all good. This is a mistake. People need to balance both sides. If a person’s negative side does not have an outlet it will eventually take them completely. I remember reading an article about an American criminal in which he discussed how he went from one excruciating experience to another and how he never could let go, but always hoped for redemption.

This brings me to the subject of appearances. This is undeniable that superficial society is; ready to judge a person strictly on the basis of their physical appearance. Aside from obvious racism in society, what about discrimination against people of any race who dress or wear their hair in an unconventional manner? Ask any man with long hair how many times he’s been pulled over by a cop for a minor transgression or a non-existent one. In general, I find that I am regarded with suspicion and treated like a potential criminal whenever I wear a motorcycle jacket and ripped jeans. I never have this problem when my dress style is more conventional.

And what about hair color? When I had a bleach-blond hair I also had a lot of men looking for dates. These same men were surprised and disappointed when they also noticed that I had a brain in my head. When I had black hair, I was regarded as some kind of freakish deviant by most establishments I came in contact with. Again, these problems disappeared when I changed my hair color to brown. I am the same person, but have been judged differently based on the color of my hair.

Why do people place so much emphasis on how a person looks? Are people really so shallow and materialistic as to believe that how you look outside reflects what you are inside? Maybe it’s a Cartesian dualism thing. People have been taught that you can be either/or, both/and. It’s very simple. Human beings have both positive and negative traits, or a good side and a bad side, if you will. Most people try to eliminate the bad side and be all good. This is a mistake. People need to balance both sides. If a person’s negative side does not have an outlet it will eventually take them completely. I remember reading an interview with Trent Reznor of Nine Inch Nails in which he discussed fans from the Midwest, namely Oklahoma and Utah. Many of them came from families that were either fundamentalist or Mormon. And these same fans are now Satanists. Why? Because they were taught that it was wrong to be anything but good, and now that had bad side had taken over in an equal extreme. This is not to say that fundamentalism or Mormonism promotes Satanism. It is merely an example of what can happen if we spend our lives hiding from our bad side.

People can do a lot of damage in the name of good. Take the issue of censorship. It is a mistake for groups like the Parents’ Music Resource Center (PMRC) to try to censor rock music. Certain types of rock music can be healthy outlets for negativity. When I get violently angry at someone, I think it is far more acceptable to go home and listen to a group with a contemptible name and even more contemptible lyrics than to blow up the house of the person I am angry with. God knows I’ve felt like it sometimes.

The bottom line is: don’t judge a book by its cover—Honey!
LETTER...

Security is problem in America

I found Trish Barker's column entitled, "Security Leads to Blindness" very interesting. Actually, I agree. Security leads to a lot more than blindness; it also leads to ineffectiveness, boredom, and stagnation. Let me make my point using my own religion, Judaism, as an example.

First, let me say that I care very much about my religion. I often feel that my Jewish co-workers, since I started fighting with them, I've gotten even more interested in learning about Judaism, but I've also noticed that most of my fellow Jews don't share my interest. I'm talking mostly about Conservative and Reform Jews; the country has seen how passionate the more religious Jews are about their concern for the Yankei Rosenbaum case is an example.

What I'm talking about is what Rabbi Meir Kahane, the founder of the Jewish Defense League, called the Jewish Establishment. The leaders and members of the various organizations with whom I deal with the problems of antisemitism and the lack of Jewish identity in our community. The problem with the Jewish Establishment is security.

The Jews as a nation have been attacked by too many different people, from the Biblical days to the present, that I always had a hard time keeping track of them all in Hebrew school. In the United States, we all have the constitutional right to practice our religion, whatever it may be. However, like most Americans, I get lazy unless we are actually being threatened. We feel so secure in our constitutional right to freedom of religion that we don't put that freedom to use.

As a result, the majority of Jewish organizations send letters, information, etc., to a Jewish population that just doesn't care. They hold dances which very few people attend and hold meetings helplessly trying to understand why no one shows up at any events. Yes, people are there, there is a Jewish Student Union on campus. If my older brother hadn't gone to Montclair State before me I doubt I would have something to say.

Security is the problem. It's something in the American make-up. We need someone to kick us when we're resting. Let me make my point: they had a suspect. So, the question becomes how reliable was Rosenbaum's subsequent in extremis identification of Nelson? In addition, Swartz makes much out of the fact that Nelson allegedly confessed. However, he failed to note that the phantom confession only exists in the words of the police. There is neither a written confession nor a videotaped one. Such is not the norm in New York City. Internal confessions are routinely redacted to writing and then given to the purging perpetrator to sign. The failure of the police to provide any verification of the alleged oral confession seriously casts doubts on its authenticity.

Therefore, contrary to Swartz's contention, the Nelson case was in no way an open and shut case. There were real questions whether Nelson committed the acts in question. Furthermore, the fact that Nelson had no prior criminal record and no history of violent behavior also strongly suggested that he was innocent. Indeed, it was well known in the Crown Heights community that Nelson was a convenient scapegoat who had been framed by the authorities.

Therefore, in sum, the verdict in the Nelson case was not outrageous when one looks at all the facts. In the light of the obstacles placed before the defense, the verdict was surprising; however, it was not outrageous. What is outrageous is the pro forma police investigation which has allowed Rosenbaum's actual assailants to go scot free and the failure of the community to assist the police investigation.

Finally, it is outrageous for a journalist who does not know all the facts to convict someone in the press. Visceral reactions about individual support are very dangerous. They have the capacity to fuel the very lynch mob mentality which the journalist purports to condemn. A journalist has the obligation to do the research and know the facts before offering an opinion. The above cited facts have been culled from a prominent New York defense attorney familiar with the case.

Simple sexual behavior rules can help prevent AIDS

by Matt Swartz

AIDS is a terrible and deadly disease caused by the H.I.V. virus and unfortunately there is not a cure for this disease or any disease caused by a virus including the common cold. An estimated 12 million people worldwide may have the virus and the AIDS virus doesn't discriminate either. Just ask Magic Johnson, Arthur Ashe, Rock Hudson, Prince, Mercury, Liberace and others who are white, black, Jewish, Catholic, Hispanic, Japanese, Moslem, European, African, etc. This disease was not created by a white, Jewish doctor to exterminate all the gays and blacks in the world. Unfortunately, some of these people only want to create anger and hatred claim they have some invincible proof that explains "it is a contagious disease." Other people just, as ignorant, claim that this disease is from God to punish all the gays and drug users.

First off, AIDS is a deadly disease, but compared to other sexual diseases, heart disease and cancer the numbers in these diseases far outnumber those with AIDS. In the United States alone, about 75 million Americans are affected by heart disease and heart disease kills too! The top ten causes of death in this country are, in order of highest to lowest mortality rate: heart disease, cancer, stroke, motor vehicle accidents, other accidents, influenza/pneumonia, diabetes, cirrhosis, suicide, and pneumonia, diabetes, cirrhosis, and homicide. My reference for this information is the U.S. Center for Disease Control. AIDS doesn't even come close to making this list, but our government has spent more money on AIDS research than any other diseases which are far more widespread than AIDS just as deadly! Too much is made of the AIDS problem and unfortunately at least 100 million people with other deadly diseases are affected by the AIDS scare!

Now that there are tests to screen out infected blood, the majority of AIDS cases are behaviorally related. These behavior which make up an estimated 95 percent of all cases are homosexuality and intravenous drug users. AIDS is transmitted through the blood of an infected individual to another person's bloodstream. It is difficult to catch through casual contact or heterosexually. This isn't anti-any-thing, it is just the facts. Yes there are cases which claim they got it through their dentist or heterosexually, but those are extremely rare and most likely the person such as a Magic Johnson was a bisexual or had rough sex with bleeding being involved. I know, people got AIDS through blood transfusions, surgery, giving birth, etc., but the facts are drug users (intra-venous) and homosexuals are the main victims and transmitters of AIDS.

Since there is no cure we must use our brains and prevent this horrible disease from spreading. The following advice, if you follow it, will save your lives. First, you should get a blood test at least twice a year and make sure you are clean. Get to know your partner and don't be afraid to express it. Anything else is a waste of time. Lisa Cohn

Weekend College Student Association Food Festival

By Ana M. Morata

On Fri., Nov.20, a Food Festival was held in the formal Dining Room of the Student Center. It was organized by the Weekend College Student Association, a Class II of the SGA. The goal of this event was to share a cultural experience and provide the opportunity for everyone to taste different dishes from other countries. As an incentive to encourage the multi-cultural students of Weekend College to make specialties from their countries, prizes were offered for the three dishes judged to be the most flavorful. Margarita Alvarez, who hosts the cooking segment on the program “Buen Dia Nueva York” on Channel 41, was invited to be the judge.

Some of the countries and dishes represented were: “Pollo a la Pepitoria” (Chicken in a wine sauce) from Spain, “Salchina” (a type of soup with vegetables and meat) from the Dominican Republic, “Papi a la flanca” (cold boiled potatoes served with a cream sauce) from Peru, “Burritos” and “Corn Bread” from Mexico, “Arroz con coco” (Coconut rice) from Venezuela, “Moros y Cristianos” (rice with beans) from Cuba, “Thanksgiving Turkey” from the U.S., etc. All together there were 15 dishes representing 13 countries.

PECULIAR PEOPLE AND WIGGING WONDERS

Coming to you bi-weekly by Appetite Cotter

Oh Jesus Ma, don't make me sit at the kiddie table.

Thank you, thanks. Poultry day is almost upon us and a couple of days from now, we'll all be sitting around Aunt Bertha's dining room table (You know, the one with the big plastic orange table cloth surrounded by a pseudomarble figurines of naked cherubs with fig leaves over their ding dongs) slurping down Grandma's famous yam and liver soup discussing old Uncle Joey's latest hip operation. I know, I know, you can hardly control your flaming desire to pack your pants up Wednesday night and fly off to New York with your friends for the weekend College Student Association Food Festival held in the formal Dining Room of the Student Center. Tell your folks a new Macintosh will help you succeed today as well as tomorrow. It shows you're thinking ahead.

An Apple® Macintosh® computer is the one holiday gift that will help you work better and faster from one new year to the next. Because Macintosh is so easy to use. And thousands of software applications are available to help you with any course you'll ever take. There's even software that allows you to exchange information with computers running MS-DOS or Windows. In fact, Macintosh is the most compatible computer you can buy. And the advantages of Macintosh don’t end when school does — the majority of Fortune 1000 companies now use Macintosh computers. So ask your Apple Campus Reseller to help you choose which Macintosh to put at the top of your holiday gift list.

It took Galileo 16 years to master the universe.
You have one night.

It seems unfair. The genius had all that time. While you have a few short hours to learn your sun spots from your satellites before the dreaded astronomy exam.

On the other hand, Vivarin gives you the definite advantage. It helps keep you awake and mentally alert for hours. Safely and conveniently. So even when the subject matter's dull, your mind will stay razor sharp.

If Galileo had used Vivarin, maybe he could have mastered the solar system faster, too.

MSC-FDU basketball game will turn back the clock to 1952

The event is being labeled "Turn Back The Clock Night" and will be played as if it is 1952-53. The players and referees will wear replica jerseys of that era. The game will be played under 1952-53 rules. There will be no shot clock and no three-point shots.

The contest will also feature manual scoreboards and no electronic devices will be used. The public address announcer will use a megaphone. To get the full effect, all coaches, athletic department administrators, trainers and cheerleaders will sport 1950's garb.

What's more enticing is that ticket and refreshment prices will be as they were in the 50's, Admission will be 50 cents for adults, and 25 cents for children. Hot dogs and soda will be 25 cents apiece.

During halftime, the 1952-53 FDU team that went 20-1 will be honored. That team's head coach, Dick Holub, who was also a longtime FDU faculty member will be the featured speaker in what should be a fun-filled evening for everyone involved.

Now that football season is over here at MSC, wrestling is just beginning. The wrestling team is coming off a 9-14 campaign in 1991-92. The team is led by returning seniors Armando Nardone from Belleville, who finished seventh in his weight class (126 lbs.) in the All-American Competition, and James Sloan from Fair Lawn who finished second in his weight class (177 lbs.) in the 1991 All-American Competition. Other returning seniors include Scott Castiglia (134 lbs.) from Elmwood Park, Jeff Eberhardt (167 lbs.) from Brick, Dave Kozelar (157 lbs.) from Bound Brook, and Sean McLearie (HWT) from New Egypt.

The head coach of the Red Hawk wrestling team is no stranger to anyone who follows the sport here at MSC. Steve Strellner is in his 14th season as head coach of the wrestling team. Strellner, who was an outstanding wrestler himself, has been one of the main reasons for the Red Hawks success. His "hard nosed" wrestling tactics relies heavily on a wrestler going out there and "taking" the match from his opponent. He has done an excellent job in his years here. In fact he has already led the Red Hawk wrestling program to two New Jersey Athletic Conference (NJAC) championships, in 1989 and 1991.

The wrestling team has already started trying to improve their fourth place finish in the conference last year by winning two of their first three matches in this young season.

In the season opener on Wednesday, Nov. 18, MSC was edged by Springfield, 19-18 at Kean College.

However, things got better on Saturday, Nov. 21, as MSC ripped NYU, 38-10. The Red Hawks received quality performances from Nardone, who won by pin in 3:04, Mike Flammer (142 lb.) who won by pin in 4:43, Kurt Montayne (167 lb.) who won by pin in 5:07, and Jim Sloan, who won by pin in 3:13.

The Red Hawks won their second straight match on Sunday, Nov. 22 by shutting out King's Point, 53-0.

N.F.I. Picks: Week 12

George Calle, Managing Editor:

1. x-Dallas -14 1/2 over N.Y. Giants. The Giants are in bad shape. Cowboys will win big.
2. Kansas City -5 1/2 over x-N.Y. Jets. The Jets are terrible.
3. Miami +3 1/2 over x-New Orleans. The Dolphins will surprise the Saints in the Superdome.
4. x-Atlanta -3 over New England. The Falcons will soar.
5. Minnesota -2 1/2 over x-L.A. Rams. The Vikings are too tough for the Rams.

Rob Campos, Editor-In-Chief of The Anarchist Syndicate:

1. x-Dallas -14 1/2 over N.Y. Giants. The Giants don't look too good.
2. x-Detroit +2 1/2 over Houston. The Lions never lose on Thanksgiving.
4. Miami +3 1/2 over x-New Orleans. A tough call, go with the AFC.
5. x-San Diego -3 1/2 over L.A. Raiders. Bob likes the Raiders, so don't take them.

Keith A. Idec, Sports Editor:

1. N.Y. Giants +14 1/2 over x-Dallas. The Cowboys will win on Thanksgiving as usual, but a two touchdown plus spread will be too much.
3. x-San Francisco -7 over Philadelphia. After the Eagles pathetic defensive showing against the Giants, Steve Young, Jerry Rice and Ricky Watters must be licking their chops.
4. Buffalo -16 over x-Indianapolis. This one will be over by halftime.
5. Minnesota -2 1/2 over x-L.A. Rams. The Vikings (4-1 on the road) will pull out a tough one.

Kevin Schwoebel, Prophet Bigg:

1. N.Y. Giants +14 1/2 over x-Dallas. Too many points.
2. Kansas City -5 1/2 over x-N.Y. Jets. Did you see the Patriots pound the Jets last week?
3. Chicago +4 over x-Cleveland. I don't care how many games they lose, still too much Diska.
4. x-Atlanta -5 over New England. The Pats winning streak will end at two.
5. L.A. Raiders +3 1/2 over x-San Diego. The Chargers will find out how good the Raiders are.

Bob Winternute, Managing Editor of The Anarchist Syndicate:

1. x-Dallas -14 1/2 over N.Y. Giants. The Giants score a field goal, tops.
2. Kansas City -5 1/2 over x-N.Y. Jets. Did you see the record, the Jets are the league's worst team.
4. L.A. Raiders +3 1/2 over x-San Diego. Because Campos is a Mo-Mo Head.
5. Denver -6 1/2 over x-Seattle. On second thought, the Seahawks are the league's worst team.

Women's swimming off to best start since 1987 behind star trio
by Karen Plumstead

The MSC women's swimming team is off to its best start since 1987. The Red Hawks currently sport a 3-1 record.

MSC's latest victory came over Kean College, 117-86 on Friday, Nov. 20. Only the women's team competed in this away meet. The Red Hawks were once again led by star swimmers Michelle Opalka, Marianna Krivak and Yardena Yadin.

The trio were each triple winners against Kean. They also teamed up with sophomore Rebecca Golden to win the 200 medley relay.

Opalka dominated the 100-yard freestyle and the 100-yard butterfly. Krivak stomped the competition in the 100 and 200 yard breaststroke. Yardin took victories in the 100 and 200 yard freestyle events.

Sophomore Christina Krivak was a winner for MSC in the 50-yard freestyle event.

Golden added to her winning list by taking the 100-yard butterfly.

Head coach Brian McLaughlin is extremely pleased with the performance of his women's team.

He is especially pleased with freshman Tara Morlando. "She continues to be one of our most versatile swimmers and she scored benefit our team," McLaughlin also sees a change in his team. "With the victories, our confidence is on the rise," he added.

MSC will resume action after the holiday on Tuesday, Dec. 1, in an away contest with NJAC rival Rutgers Camden in Camden at 6 p.m.

Women's hoops edged by Eastern Connecticut in tournament final, 55-53
by Lisa McCormack

The MSC women's basketball team dropped to 1-1 this weekend after losing to Eastern Connecticut, 55-53, in the final game of the Subway Tip-Off Tournament Sunday night at Geisler Gym in Williamantic, Conn.

The Red Hawks were down 21-13 at halftime of a game that was close the entire way through.

MSC took the lead 49-47 on guard Kim Barnes' jumper with 3:08 left to play. Ona McGarity added to her winning once again in the freestyle and butterfly events," raved MSC's fourth-year head coach.

McLaughlin is also excited about the addition of diver Mary Beimler. "She's going to really once again in the freestyle and butterfly events," raved MSC's fourth-year head coach.

McLaughlin also sees a change in his team. "With the victories, our confidence is on the rise," he added. MSC will resume action after the holiday on Tuesday, Dec. 1, in an away contest with NJAC rival Rutgers Camden in Camden at 6 p.m.

Men's basketball begins 92-93 with split of tourney games
by Keith A. Idee

The MSC men's basketball team went into last weekend looking to get the 1992-93 started off on the right foot with two victories in the Fifth Annual Bloodhound Invitational in Manhattan, N.Y.

The weekend started off as planned, as the Red Hawks defeated tournament host John Jay College, 75-72 on Saturday, Nov. 21 at the Bloodhound Arena. However, St. Joseph's College threw a monkey wrench in MSC's plans on Sunday. They defeated the Red Hawks 68-59 in the tournament final.

The Red Hawks trailed by only four points at halftime. The first half sawwnt back and forth, featuring five lead changes and six ties.

In the second half, St. Joseph's managed to keep the lead for the entire 20 minutes. MSC slid out St. Joseph's lead to 57-55 on freshman guard Jose Ortiz's driving layup with 7:06 left to play.

Junior forward Lee Mullins stepped up with 19 points, 14 rebounds, and four steals. Senior forward Pete Ristevski added eight points and six rebounds. Hayes then threw up a 45-foot prayer that bounced off the rim twice before falling to the ground.

Ortiz again turned in a solid performance for MSC, collecting 16 points and five assists. He also drained three three-point field goals. Mullins contributed 16 points and seven rebounds. Senior forward Joe Huber added six points and six rebounds.

Hayes is extremely pleased with the performance of his women's team.

He is especially pleased with freshman Tara Morlando. "She continues to be one of our most versatile swimmers and she scored benefit our team," McLaughlin also sees a change in his team. "With the victories, our confidence is on the rise," he added. MSC will resume action after the holiday on Tuesday, Dec. 1, in an away contest with NJAC rival Rutgers Camden in Camden at 6 p.m.
