Angry students petition for housing refund

by Katlsha Lewis

Students are in an uproar about an oversight in their Clove Road Apartment lease contract.

After about 10 weeks five students in Clove Road noticed that they were not getting a refund check. The students complained to Margaree Coleman-Carter, director of Residence Life, about not receiving their $150 refund.

The Montclair State Apartment lease contract for Aug. 30, 1991-May 20, 1992, states, "Rebates of $150 per Resident will be made to each Resident of an apartment to which five Residents are assigned by the Office of Residence Life and who retain those assignments for 10 or more weeks."

Coleman-Carter stated that the entire clause was overlooked and forgotten.

The residents that started this petition, Janice Wilson, Connie Mancini, Susan Hamilton and Jenn Dassori, said that neither they nor any other Clove resident were ever informed that they were not going to receive a rebate this year. The students went to every B and C quintuplet apartment and got about 150 signatures that they needed for their petition.

One of the students' mothers called Residence Life and was told that she would get a response on Thursday, said Hamilton.

Coleman-Carter, said that she has scheduled a meeting with the students and Vice President for Students Development and Student Life, to hear the appeal.

"If the students don't get their money back they want some improvements done," said Hamilton.

Mancini said, "Residence Life should have better accommodations such as bigger refrigerators, stoves, and water heaters. If they're going to keep the $150, I want to see some improvements."

"You have to go after Residence Life, you need to address them," the students said.

The rebate is needed, said Mancini. "I pay for my education, I want my money back."

Landino awarded "Faculty Advisor of the Year"

by Renee McDonnell

Dr. Lawrence Landino, the Broadcasting Division coordinator and advisor for MSCa's Alpha Epsilon chapter, the national broadcasting and electronic media society, received the "Faculty Advisor of the Year" award at the AERho Freedom States Regional Convention in Plattsburgh, N.Y. on Oct. 31.

Landino was nominated for the award by the executive board of AERho at Montclair State and competed against advisors from 15 other schools, said Daniella Ferrandino, AERho vice president and a junior.

Landino, a first-time advisor, was recognized for his work with the chapter, "in which he has been very active." He was nominated in the "Faculty Advisor of the Year" category.

State Treasurer addresses SGA

by Kelly J. Schab

Sam Crane, New Jersey state treasurer, gave a speech in front of the SGA last night about his thoughts on college spirit, the state's economy, and the national recession.

As a college student he was very active in his student governments at the University of Cincinnati and here at Montclair State.

Crane led a successful rally at Trenton to protest the state college tuition raises. Though the state only cut the raise in half, Crane considers it an important victory for students.

Later, he worked on the Tuition Aid Grant program. "We felt that people who didn't have the wherewithal should have a chance to go to college," Crane said.

"We worked for six to eight months of hard lobbying" and won. "We the students were a part of that process."

Crane advised the legislators to get involved in state and local politics as he explained that it's the "governors and states that really lead the country."

He also said that the way to get other students involved is to "make the issues important to them."

"If you look at the voters, of the national election they were focused on something personal to them" such as the Middle East Watch, a human rights group, put out a report based on information gathered from consultant Rae McGrath that Israeli military forces have planted millions of mines in three Kurdish dominated provinces. The mines have rendered vast areas of the territory unfarmable and uninhabitable. Israeli soldiers apparently kept no maps of where they placed these mines and the act was called a gross violation of international law for posing an unacceptable threat to civilians.

Landino, a first-time advisor, described winning the award as a complete surprise. “The award is more of a reflection on the students’ work and what has happened in the Broadcasting Department in the last year than on me,” he said.

Landino, who came to MSC last September from NYU, was honored for his work in the development of the Broadcasting Handbook, which serves as a production guide for majors. He was also praised for introducing the production archive and the production guide for majors.

He was also praised for introducing “Jeopardy-like” quizshow producing “a “Jeopardy-like” quiz show for the spring.

SAWCRANE, from page 1 economy, their jobs and the future, said Crane.

Crane, who has been the state treasurer for one year, also spoke on the economy, both state and local.

“After a recession that has lasted 43 months, I feel safe to say that we are in a recovery. That helps everyone,” he said.

“Some changes that are to be made.”

“We will begin to take some actions to balance the 1993 budget. It will be a tough year for all of us.”

He couldn’t say if college budgets will be cut as it is too early to tell. “Our intention is not to slash and burn,” said Crane. He also said, “Governor James Florio would like nothing more than to add money to the budgets.”

One thing that could have helped the budget is the $75 sale tax which was repealed because of public pressure.

There are proposals that will be made to help balance the budget as well. He said that Crane, N.J. treasurer people can expect the “first down payment on Monday” that won’t include cuts.

Though many legislators asked about the economy, the purpose of Crane’s visit was to get students involved in politics. “You have to be focused and targeted (about what you fight for),” said Crane. He also said, “Politics is one of the highest and best callings.”

“Students have stayed out of it and it doesn’t work,” said Crane.

“Nobody’s bringing any idealism to the process. This is about real politics, the real future.”

“I urge you all to learn what the government’s about.”

The Public Relations committee will make a bulletin board for the holidays.

The Welfare and Internal committee will secure new shuttle bus signs and will work to change student ID numbers which are currently students’ social security numbers.

During open forum, it was brought to the attention of the legislators that people are selling signs to trees. Not only does this hurt the trees, but it is also illegal and they will be torn down.

The College Curriculum Review committee announced three new music minors and major changes to the Biology major curriculum. All incoming freshmen will have new courses to take. There is also a new music theater minor and a recommendation that the R.O.T.C. program be removed.

The Welfare and Internal committee will research the firing of a Webster R.A. for displaying public drunkenness. If the firing seems to be of a suspicious nature, then they will write a letter to Dean Martin questioning the process.

It was suggested that the SGA purchase new phone jacks to stop people from using their own receivers to steal calls from the SGA phones. All legal users will have a set time limit. J. users will have a set time limit. A.S.G. statute change to recruit more members by working with the attorney general was passed. Said one legislator, “There is a major lack of participation of students. We need to attract different corners of this school.” The SGA currently has 36 members and is allowed to have 65.

Welcome to the real world

MSC is quickly becoming known as NJ's leading "school of hard knocks". The plethora of complaints that has been growing throughout the semester regarding the inconveniences and discomforts of college life recently got even larger. Commuters complain about the parking situation, intellectuals criticize the lack of library hours and now a large number of angry Clove Road residents have announced that Residence Life is denying those students residing in five-person apartments a refund of $150 per resident which has been the policy of Residence Life in past semesters. As usual, the accusing finger must be pointed at someone.

The Montclair State Apartment Lease Contract for the 1991-92 school year contained a clause which stated, "a rebate of $150 per Resident will be made to each Resident of an apartment to which five Residents are assigned by the office of Residence Life." This clause was overlooked and forgotten in the 1992-93 contract, stated Margaree Coleman-Carter, Director of Residence Life. The college maintains that the deletion of the clause was an inadvertent error on their part, but since students signed the contract as it appeared the college is not compelled to provide the $150 per student refund. Clearly this is an error in favor of the constantly shrinking MSC budget.

Before students denounce Residence Life as slum-lords, we must consider the fact that college students are recognized as adults and must suffer the consequences of assuming that MSC will hold our hands and look out for our better interests. We are no longer children. Welcome to the real world!

MSC provides housing for students on campus alleviating for many the frustration search for over-priced, under-sized, off-campus apartments in surrounding communities. In turn, students sign a contract with Residence Life that serves the same purpose as a lease signed between a landlord and a tenant. Stereotypically, landlords are self-serving business persons who will find every loophole to provide little for a tenant while charging enormous sums in rent. No tenant would blindly enter into a lease without carefully reading the agreement that the future landlord requires. Assuming that because a clause was present in past MSC housing contracts means that it will automatically exist in present agreements is irresponsible on the part of MSC residents.

The Montclarion does not condone any act of the administration to take advantage of students. At the same time, students must protect their own rights and in this case the dissatisfied students in the Clove Road apartments also erred by not carefully reading the agreement which they signed with Residence Life. College life entails many learning experiences including a good amount of education about real life. Although many residents may consider the decision of Residence Life to deny their customary refunds misleading and unfair, they may also consider it part of reality in the adult world and another lesson in the "school of hard knocks".

Tischio's tips on holiday shopping

As the holiday season intrudes upon us, I want to remind the materialistic side in all of us to settle back down for a long winter's nap and let the warm, snugly person inside us emerge with nika to join. As a college student, I realize how tight money can be. Unless, per chance, you are one of the many sport athletic scholars that tend to permeate the halls of dearly beloved MSC. To those masses, my advice to you is to hang yourself, along with your highly decorated, freshly-killed trees, out the window until suffocation fully occurs. People like you will never have the holiday spirit and only help extend the lengthy, over-abundant shopping lines.

Now, for the few true college students who work part time or even full time jobs while holding full course loads, these words are for you.

As the time draws near to wrap that oh-so-thoughtful gift for Mom, Dad or certain lover, keep in mind the best presents are the ones that come from the heart—a place rather far from the pocket. Take for example, my precious boyfriend. Last year for Christmas I received a personally-sung rendition of, "It's a Holly Jolly Christmas" while trying to tap dance in time. This present was certainly hard to forget. Another example, my present to my father last year: a picture of myself. Yes, it sounds trite and conceited, but it works. I thought I was special, I looked innocent as petals, and that fun, warm feeling was in the air mixing in with our egg nog.

"Love" the sales receipt and find a nice, juicy, rabies infected wild mouse with a cage about to crumble. This way, you look caring, plus if you are right, you get to have your basement back for you and your dog to romp in. Any siblings? If their young, make 'em something cause I have to. The Bible says I can do whatever I choose, but if I only believe in Christ, I will try to be more like him. Love of God and love of life is what I try to make my life. I am not love of Oral Roberts or some dogma a particular church preaches to me. One church doctrine that caters to all aspects of life, is not possible. In the Bible it says that different things are good for some people and other things are good for someone else. A great example is meat. If someone feels eating meat is wrong then for them it is, but for those of us who do eat meat, we should not force our views on those who don’t, and vice versa.

That same premise applies to everything. How can I force what I feel is right on another? I am a human so, no matter what, I will never have the answers, so I am better off trying to do myself what I think is right and not worry about what other people are doing. I have to be cool with God myself and let other people worry about being alright with God for themselves, if they care at all. However, I do get offended when people can’t see that many people who claim to be Christian don’t act it at all and some even go so far as to demand another for their sins should they care at all. However, I do get upset when some one tells me that my religion is for security and that I believe in something I do not question anything. Quite to the contrary, I ask questions about what I believe all the time and it becomes more apparent to me that God not only does exist, but that he must exist. If you wipe away all that we know and take the simple fact that because we are here we know that something exists, all had to come from something. Something has always had to exist for all of this to come from something, and if it did not come from nothing, then something was always here. You can not take emptiness and make a universitie itself must be made from something, I happen to believe that this is the idea that God has no beginning and no end in ontological thought. I also believe that it is not illogical to believe that God would want us to be loving and peaceful. If I made a poem, I would not want all the letters to be where I wanted them to be? If the letters started to fight amongst one another, would that not cause some letters to move and make the poem lose its meaning? If this poem was all content, love, and peace, would I not want it? It was supposed to so all could enjoy its content? But what if I said I wanted even spaces in the poem because it wanted to and it felt the meaning was good, not because it put there? Would I not have to let the letters do what they wanted to do and scramble around and fight without my interfering?

Improved advising system needed for better MSC

Everyone knows that MSC is the biggest state college in N.J. with a population around 15,000 students. Many people from off-campus wonder that the services at MSC must be good or there would be no way it could keep up with all these students. But that is not the case. Every fall there are about 2,000 new students, either freshman or transfer. When it comes to registration these students suffer more than everyone else in this college.

The reason behind this is counseling. If all these students were asked who helped them in selecting their classes and what they selected their answers would be surprising. Some of them will say it was fellow upperclassmen. Others would say that they selected the classes themselves. Only a few of them will say that they received some help from a counselor.

Most of the new students don't know that counseling exists. The people who do know, either don't know where it is (because of the construction that is taking place on campus making it impossible to find the Student Advising Center) or don't want to go because they are afraid the counselor will "make them pay for it." One can hear many horror stories around campus or on the radio. "It is obvious that the counseling system at MSC is not very enthusiastic when it comes to helping students with critical academic decisions."

Is it because the counseling staff doesn't have the right people in the right place? Is it because someone in a high position told them to act that way purposefully? There are serious suspicions on campus that the MSC administration makes extra money through counseling.

In any case, the students are paying for this service, but they are not getting it. That's a waste of money. Why is it that the number of buildings being built? So MSC doesn't know that counseling exists. These students feel that they received some help from a counselor.

When it comes to registration, when the number of classes increase, the size of the counseling staff will have a few more buildings. Just because the college is not very enthusiastic about helping students with critical academic decisions.

MSC students come before university status

Most colleges and universities boast about their beautiful landscaping and tranquil surroundings. Not here at MSC. Here we have huge piles of dirt, badly ripped-up walkways and ugly, orange fences. There is constantly some kind of construction going on. The sound of hammers and saws at work consistently pollutes the air along with thick clouds of dust.

Why are there four-story buildings being built? So MSC can become a university? What does the number of buildings on campus have to do with being designated as a university? Nothing, especially at MSC. Just because the college will have a few more buildings does not mean the curriculum will be enhanced nor will the number of classes increase.

In fact, the number of classes decreases and we continue to do so as long as money is spent frivolously on construction that is not needed. For example: 10 sections of World Literature will be offered in the spring session as opposed to 16 sessions that were offered this fall—a decrease of 38 percent; 10 sections of Principles of Macro Economics will be offered in the spring of 1993 as opposed to 18 this fall—a decrease of 44 percent; 25 sessions of Freshman Composition will be offered in the spring semester as opposed to 55 sessions that were offered this fall—a decrease of 55 percent. What is the sense in having new buildings if there are no classes to fill the extra space they will provide? It is ridiculous.

It seems to be the general belief that becoming a university will make MSC more prestigious. What it will do is raise tuition and that is about all. If university status does attract more people they will quickly realize that MSC is still a college in disguise. The only thing that will change is the word "college" on MSC sweatshirts.

The criteria needed to become a university had to be altered to fit what MSC has to offer. This, in turn, lessens the value of being a university. Would the requirement to obtain a degree be changed if a student could not reach them? Why is it different for the college? Perhaps the administration should worry more about the education the school offers rather than the name it holds. If becoming a university is necessary then more classes should be offered, a better registration process should be administrated and better parking and living conditions should be provided. There is no way MSC can be considered a university in its present state. Building a few new buildings will not take the place of a lack of classes and professors or fix the other problems that exist.

The administration needs to focus on what is most important before it merely considers a way for the college to become more popular and more expensive.

Improved advising system needed for better MSC

It is obvious that the counseling system at MSC is not very enthusiastic when it comes to helping students with critical academic decisions. But why does this irresponsible attitude on the part of the counseling system exist? Is it because the counseling staff doesn't have the right people in the right place? Is it because someone in a high position told them to act that way purposefully? There are serious suspicions on campus that the MSC administration makes extra money through counseling.

In any case, the students are paying for this service, but they are not getting it. That's a waste of money. Why is it that the number of buildings being built? So MSC doesn't know that counseling exists. These students feel that they received some help from a counselor.

When it comes to registration, when the number of classes increase, the size of the counseling staff will have a few more buildings. Just because the college is not very enthusiastic about helping students with critical academic decisions.

Environmentalist supports NORML

To say you don't support the legalization of hemp based on your values is one thing, but to jokingly compare the legalization of crack cocaine to marijuana is ludicrous. The ignorance of such a response to a solution for the forests destruction is disheartening. As a concerned individual searching for solutions to preserve the 5 percent of original old growth left in this country, I welcome NORML's suggestions.

I don't necessarily do advocate smoking pot, nor do I advocate drinking, and I sure as bell see everyone around here standing up tall on that issue. Why? Because it's legal? Because the government says we can have it. It's okay even though it kills the most innocent and is proven, among other things, to lower grades when consumed frequently.

Alcohol being readily available on campus is a message to come and partake. I really don't understand this talk about being denied our rights as given to us by the federal government. We are not being denied. If you're 21 and you want to have a drink, go to a bar. Yes, so the SGA polled 1,000 students and 90 percent of them wanted alcohol here on campus, but what percentage of them were over 21? 90 percent of 1 year-old-plus students advocated alcohol. I agree we should have it. But I'm not sure that's the case from what I've read in The Montclarion (it's my only source on this topic.)

I'd like to see this community revolves around a positive effort geared toward bettering our future.

so that eventually the letter would understand that they could not put the poem together themselves. This is because there would always be some letters that wanted to take charge and make their own poem and would not care if some letters were left out and had no meaning; or if these dictator letters would erase any letter that did not fit or want to be in their poem or did not like its meaning. Then some letters would realize that they could not see the whole scope of things that the poet, or even the editor, was trying to express. The editor would use these letters to help the poet form a better poem.

Please test your beliefs, especially those that pertain to our government and economics system. Many Christians get mixed up somewhere and do another, but please do not lump us together. Most Christians I know do try to achieve love and peace and that is what it is about.

There was great celebration among non-Christian Americans after a meeting of Republican governors. Kick up your heels and have some champagne! What's all the excitement? Now each bite is a scene out of Hitchcock as our hand moves closer to our mouth. Is this the one with the poison? How many mouthfuls till we succumb?

One of our healthiest foods. You could catch them for free, feed your family, save money.

The governor of Mississippi is willing to tolerate our presence in this "Christian nation!" Wow! How generous!

In the 1990s, we'll all need more tolerance. I'm hoping to develop a tolerance for the carcinogens in fish.

The audience was glued to the dinner table. Every meal a death-defying thriller! Could this new element of suspense be the key to reuniting the family at dinner time?

MSC matmen upset Division I Princeton, 19-14

Red Hawks move to 3-1 as they beat the Tigers for the first time in school history

by Nicole Festa

The MSC wrestling team went on a rampage last weekend defeat Division I Princeton University in a close road match on Sat., Nov. 28, at Jadwin Gym in Princeton.

The Red Hawks pulled out a 19-14 victory thanks to their hard effort, and superior teamwork. Head coach Steve Strelner, who felt his team had a good shot to beat Princeton going in, said, "It felt like it here, but the language barrier has been hard to adjust to. Between translating text books and communicating with the coaches, it's like doing double the amount of work," saidorts partially through a translator.

Orts, who is in his first year of college, spent eight years at a Professional Formation School in Spain, graduating last year. These schools are the equivalents to American high schools, but better prepare you for a career due to the length of time spent in them.

Women's basketball drops pair, falls to 1-3

by Lisa McCormack

The MSC women's basketball team had a rough week, dropping two games to conference opponent.

The latest loss was to Rowan College on Sat., Nov. 28, at Panzer Gym. The Profs downed the Red Hawks 59-56, in what was a tight one all the way to the end.

The Red Hawks trailed 57-56 with 42 seconds left in the game, when Rowan's Marly Dammadadair sank a six-foot baseline jumper to up the Profs' lead to three points, 59-56. MSC then called a timeout with the hopes of some last second heroics. Red Hawks' senior guard

N.F.L. Picks: Week 14

George Calle, Managing Editor:

2. Washington -4 over x-N.Y. Giants. The Giants are right behind the Jets.
3. x-New England -1 over Indianapolis. This should pack the fans in.
4. x-Pittsburgh +14 over x-Dallas. The Seahawks are going to put together a winning streak.

Keith A. Idee, Sports Editor:

1. x-New Orleans -10 over Atlanta. I love those helmets.
2. x-Buffalo -15 over x-N.Y. Jets. The Jets have too many injuries to hang with the Bills.
3. x-New York Giants -7 over Washington. It's the season of giving.
4. Seattle +14 over x-Pittsburgh. They beat the Broncos. Anything can happen.
5. x-Philadelphia +8 over x-San Francisco. The Dolphins will wake up this week. Take the points.

Kevin Schwobell, Prophet Bigg:

1. x-New Orleans -10 over Atlanta. I love those helmets.
2. x-Buffalo -15 over x-N.Y. Jets. The Jets have too many injuries to hang with the Bills.
4. Seattle +14 over x-Pittsburgh. They beat the Broncos. Anything can happen.
5. x-Philadelphia +8 over x-San Francisco. The Dolphins will wake up this week. Take the points.

Bob Winternute, Managing Editor of The Anarchist Syndicate:

1. x-Buffalo -15 over x-N.Y. Jets. Despite the sympathy for Byrd, the Jets will get blown out.
2. Washington -4 over x-N.Y. Giants. All the Giants can hope for is the end of the season.
3. x-New England -1 over Indianapolis. Call this one the "Toilet Bowl."
4. Dallas -4 over x-Denver. Eli's career could come to an ugly end here.
5. x-Philadelphia +8 over x-San Francisco. The Chargers will get that wild card berth.

Basketball's Orts adjusting to life in the United States

by Keith A. Idee

Red Hawk men's basketball player loses on his native Spain for the United States in search of two things: quality academics and better basketball. The 23-year-old freshman guard says he has found both at MSC.

After completing his studies, Orts qualified to be a teacher in his native land. He then wanted to build upon the knowledge that he acquired. He's currently a physical education major at MSC and plans to use the degree he earns to better educate his people in Spain.

However, he isn't ruling out staying in the United States after he graduates. "Right now I think I'll go back, but anything can happen," he said.

The Valencia, Spain native has been impressed with this country's academics thus far. "The two educational systems are totally different. The colleges and universities are more organized here. All of the libraries, residence halls and classrooms are at the same place," Orts said.

MSC's starting point guard has been impressed with American basketball as well. "The players here are more athletic and in top condition. The game is very physical here and the defense is much better and emphasized a lot more. I'm learning every day," he said.

MSC head coach Nick Del Tulo is one man who's extremely happy with Orts' decision to play at MSC. "Jose has done a good job for us. He's shown some good leadership qualities, and he's got a lot of experience. He's also an excellent shooter," said the second-year head coach.

Over his first five games, Orts has averaged 2.2 ppg and nearly 50 minutes per game for the 2-3 Red Hawks.

MSC trailed the Roadrunners 24-15 at halftime and could never catch up. Again the Red Hawks were led by Barnes who dropped in 11 points.

MSC has started the season off on the wrong foot, but will look to bounce back this weekend in the 1992 Dial Classic at Panzer Gymnasium.

They'll take on Lincoln University in the second half of a doubleheader on Fri., Dec. 4, at 7:30 p.m.

The four-team tournament is sponsored by the Dial Soap company and has been in existence for nearly 14 years. The first-ever Dial Classic was held at MSC in 1979. This year there will be Dial Classics at eleven colleges and universities (at levels from Division I-III) across the country throughout the month of December.

The Apple Computer Loan.

"Why should I wait in line at the computer lab when I can own a Macintosh for $15 a month?"

Kevin Campbell
Aerospace Engineering Major

What allowed Kevin to own an Apple PowerBook 145 computer for such a low monthly payment? The Apple Computer Loan! Kevin knew that owning the power and portability of a Macintosh PowerBook for his full course load and his work in the Civil Air Patrol was a smart thing to do. And the Apple Computer Loan was the smart way to do it; easy application, fast turnaround and low, flexible payment terms. So Kevin went to the only place that offers the Apple Computer Loan, his Apple Campus Reseller.

This season will be an exciting one for college basketball. Many questions loom in the air.

Can Duke win its third straight national championship? Can the Fab Five make it back to the Final Four? Is this the year for Seton Hall to win the national championship? These questions will be answered from now until the end of March.

1. Duke. The Blue Devils will three-peat this year. Grant Hill is one of the top five players in the country, and contrary to many beliefs, Bobby Hurley will be a lottery pick in the NBA Draft next June. Shooting guard Thomas Hill is 6'1" center Cherokee Parks. Hill is one of the top five players in the country with Adonis Jordan and Eric Montross.

2. Kansas. The Jayhawks have one of the top backcourts in the nation with Adonis Jordan and Roy Williams is a great coach. Bobby Knight will be especially tough to handle. The Fab Five is a year older and is deeper, which should give the Fab Five a year more experienced and mature, but they will not make the championship game again.

3. Indiana. This team is very disciplined and patient, and with good reason. Their coach is Bobby Knight. Calbert Cheaney can do it all. They have a good supporting cast in Alan Henderson, Chris Reynolds and Greg Graham. The Hoosiers are as good as anybody.

4. Michigan. You couldn't get more talent on one team. Individually, the Wolverines have a handful of pro prospects. Chris Webber, Jalen Rose, and Jimmy King will be especially tough to handle. The Fab Five is a year more experienced and mature, but they will not make the championship game again.

5. Seton Hall. This will have to be the Pirates year for now. After this season, they'll lose All-American Terry Dehere and Jerry Walker. They play great defense and are deep, which should give them a legitimate shot at glory. P.J. Carlesimo's teams usually peak in March.

6. Kentucky. Jamal Mashburn is as good as come. Freshman Rodrick Rhodes, out of St. Anthony in Jersey City, will be a major contributor. The Wildcats lost three good seniors from last year's team, but Rick Pitino always works wonders. Just look what he's done with a program that was placed on probation four years ago.

Football's a dangerous sport. We all know that. Yet when something tragic happens to a good man, things happen. This week-end that happened to a New York Jet. It makes you realize how important sports can be in the big picture. Dennis Rodman, your prayers are with you.....i take it that you've all seen the Reebok basketball commercials that ask "Have you got the love?" After his recent antics, I'm beginning to think that Dennis Rodman doesn't belong in those commercials anymore....The answer to the Yankees questions at third is named Wade Boggs. Wouldn't it be great to see one of the best hitters of all-time close out his career in pinstripes? The Yankees could probably get Boggs relatively cheap, too, because of the subpar year he had in 1992. Also, he's got plenty of baseball in him.

A lifetime .340 hitter doesn't turn into a .270 hitter (92) overnight.....13...until the Thanks-giving Day game against Dallas, I was wondering if the Giants were saving first-round supplemental pick Dave Brown for a special occasion.....Marge Schott should not be able to control in the Cincinnati Reds. The owners can't force her to sell the team, but they can take her away from the everyday operations of it. She's done nothing for baseball but cause headaches. Here's the list of reasons to get rid of her. She's a racist. She says she had a bandana with a swastika on it because of momento-rabilia. Next she'll be telling us that the closet full of hooded white sheets in her closet are for houseguests who like to play "ghost." She's goes as far to as to let her precious dog Schottie take dumps all over the field at Riverfront Stadium before games. In fact, she seems to care more about that goddamn dog than she does about her players and employees. She should get her act together and get rid of her. She's a racist. She needs to get out of the dog house.

That's a not a good sign, B.B. If he's torn ligaments, we could be watching the end of a brilliant career.
MSC swimmers fall to NYU, despite solid individual efforts

by Karen Plumstead

The MSC women's swimming team dropped its record to 3-2 with a 125-100 loss to NYU on Tues., Nov. 24, in Manhattan.

On the plus side for the Red Hawks was a 200-yard medley relay victory. The competition was once again dominated by MSC's star trio of Mariann Krivak, Michelle Opalka and Yandere Yuki, plus sophomore Rebecca Golden. Krivak also placed first in the 200-yard breast stroke. Recently the Red Hawks have welcomed new diver Keri O'Mera.

Head coach Brian McLaughlin (with assistant coach Brian Del Tufo and Mary Bleizinger) could add the necessary points to achieve a victory for the women.

The women swimmers believe that the NYU match was a learning experience in competing as a united team. They hope to turn this knowledge into victory in their next match.

NYU also defeated the MSC men's team, 116-94, also on November 24 as part of the dual meet.

Team captain Andrew Mitzak tried to rally the team with his outstanding time of 2:03.02 in the 200-yard butterfly. He completed his triple win with victories in the 400-yard medley and 1000-yard freestyle events.

Freshman star Mark Arnold swam to victory in the 200-yard freestyle and assisted Mitzak in the 400-yard medley win.

While the men's team may not come up with many overall victories this season, McLaughlin feels Mr. Bleizinger could add the necessary points to achieve a victory for the men.

Upsala's comeback edges MSC men's basketball

Mullins and Hines star, but Red Hawks drop to 2-3 after second straight loss

by Michael Frasco

The MSC men's basketball dropped a tough 75-72 decision to Upsala College on Monday night at Panzer Gym in Upper Montclair.

The Red Hawks led 72-71 until the 1:33 mark of the second half. That's when Upsala senior guard Dave Seeger took over.

Seeger first hit a short running jumper, and then added two free throws to put Upsala (3-0) ahead 75-72. Neither team scored again.

MSC nearly tied the game with the attitude that his squad entered this non-conference game with the attitude that his squad entered this non-conference game. "We can't just come into a game thinking that we're going to win no matter what. We have to play hard over the whole course of a game to win. I wasn't happy with the overall effort," Del Tufo added.

Del Tufo was also disappointed with the attitude that his squad entered this non-conference game. "We can't just come into a game thinking that we're going to win no matter what. We have to play hard over the whole course of a game to win. I wasn't happy with the overall effort," Del Tufo added.

Despite the overall effort, the Red Hawks received a quality performance from star forward Lee Mullins. The 6'3" senior dropped in a season high 26 points, grabbed nine rebounds and dished out six assists.

Junior center Keith Hines was also sold in the defeat, netting 10 points and pulling down 10 rebounds. The 6'5" Montclair native also set an MSC single game record by blocking seven shots. The previous mark of four was set by Emile Harris against Ramapo in 1990.

The hot shooting combined with the solid defending made for an impressive victory.

Defensively, Mullins led Ramapo to just 29 percent shooting from the floor. When they weren't making Ramapo miss, the Red Hawks were busy taking the ball away, collecting 13 steals in the contest.

Offensively, Lee Mullins led the attack with 23 points, but was given adequate support by Keith Hines (10 points), Garland Gillette (nine points) and Pete Ristevski (eight points).

MSC shot the ball very well, nearly 60 percent for the game. The hot shooting combined with the solid defending made for an impressive victory.

Seeger first hit a short running jumper, and then added two free throws to put Upsala (3-0) ahead 75-72. Neither team scored again.

MSC nearly tied the game with the attitude that his squad entered this non-conference game. "We can't just come into a game thinking that we're going to win no matter what. We have to play hard over the whole course of a game to win. I wasn't happy with the overall effort," Del Tufo added.

Del Tufo was also disappointed with the attitude that his squad entered this non-conference game. "We can't just come into a game thinking that we're going to win no matter what. We have to play hard over the whole course of a game to win. I wasn't happy with the overall effort," Del Tufo added.

Despite the overall effort, the Red Hawks received a quality performance from star forward Lee Mullins. The 6'3" senior dropped in a season high 26 points, grabbed nine rebounds and dished out six assists.

Junior center Keith Hines was also sold in the defeat, netting 10 points and pulling down 10 rebounds. The 6'5" Montclair native also set an MSC single game record by blocking seven shots. The previous mark of four was set by Emile Harris against Ramapo in 1990.

The hot shooting combined with the solid defending made for an impressive victory.

Defensively, Mullins led Ramapo to just 29 percent shooting from the floor. When they weren't making Ramapo miss, the Red Hawks were busy taking the ball away, collecting 13 steals in the contest.

Offensively, Lee Mullins led the attack with 23 points, but was given adequate support by Keith Hines (10 points), Garland Gillette (nine points) and Pete Ristevski (eight points).

MSC shot the ball very well, nearly 60 percent for the game. The hot shooting combined with the solid defending made for an impressive victory.

Red Hawk Notes...Ramapo's victory over MSC marked the seventh straight triumph the Profs have defeated the Red Hawks...After five games, Mullins leads the team in scoring at 19.6 ppg...Hines leads the squad in rebounding (8.8 rpg) and blocks (2.4 bpg.)
Christopher Kilbourne spoke to students about events concerning the Glen Ridge trial.

Role of media in Glen Ridge rape trial

by Elsa Amaral

A reporter who has been covering the Glen Ridge rape trial of a mentally defective girl came in to speak to MSC students on Monday, Nov. 30, about the much publicized case.

Christopher Kilbourne, reporter for The (Bergen) Record, spoke to about 30 mostly journalism students about events that have unfolded during the duration of what has become the biggest trial in the Northeast, and how the media has covered this case.

The reasons why this particular case has had such an impact on the media, according to Kilbourne, are the numbers of boys involved in it, it involves a mentally retarded victim, it took place in the wealthy suburb of Glen Ridge and a bat and broomstick were used during the sexual act.

Kilbourne says the mentally defective woman, who is now 21, is expected to take the witness stand soon, for the first time.

The attorneys in the case are anxiously awaiting her testimony because they have no idea of what she will say or how she will react when she sees the four defendants in front of her. According to Kilbourne, the woman has said she doesn’t want to see the boys go to jail and witnesses have said that she still considers them to be her friends.

Throughout the trial, the state heard testimonies from at least 15 witnesses, who include a psychologist, teachers, family members and friends of this woman, and through these witnesses many facts about her life have come out in the open, including intimate and embarrassing details in her life.

Prosecutors were able to win the right to use rape trauma syndrome for the first time in a New Jersey criminal trial. This syndrome seeks to explain why some rape victims may exhibit improper or sudden behavior. Superior
How do you feel about the College Senate's decision to recommend that alcohol should be reinstated on campus?

I think it's a bad idea. They had a lot of problems in the past with minors being served.

Tadd Naffucci

I think it is a good idea. College students should not have to think about how to smuggle illegal alcohol into their rooms because they have no other means of obtaining the same on campus.

I'm all for it. Alcohol is a good thing. You should be able to grab some pizza and have a beer with your friends.

Greek Council hosts sexual harassment workshop

by Pete Quill and Sean Carroll

Captain Andrew Mock and Captain Sharon Malone of the USMC gave a presentation on the definition and the dangers of sexual harassment to the Greek Council on Tues., Dec. 1. The presentation was excerpted from an eight hour program given to all of the U.S. Armed Forces in the wake of the Tailhook Incident.

As a result of this incident, many charges were brought up on most senior officials in the Navy. One of the highest ranking officials was the Secretary of the Navy, who later resigned.

The presentation, while intended for the military, also had several appropriate points for civilian life.

The lecture began by defining exactly what sexual harassment is and to what extent of human behavior it covers.

According to Captains Mock and Malone, sexual harassment, according to federal law, refers to any unwelcome sexual advances, any requests for sexual favors and any other verbal or physical conduct of a sexual nature.

Mock and Malone further defined this type of behavior by splitting harassment into three zones: Green, Yellow and Red. Green zone behavior includes friendly conversation, appearance correction and generally inoffensive behavior. Yellow zone behavior is categorized by personal space violation, unwanted date requests, lewd comments, suggestive posters and sexual gestures. Finally, Red zone behavior, obviously the worst, includes sexual assault, rape, fondling, blatant pornography, sexist or racist remarks and promising rewards or job advancements in return for sexual favors.

These zones, according to Mock and Malone, may seem restrictive but they are necessary to keep the work environment efficient and professional.

All three behavior zones were illustrated by a recent video tape made by the U.S. Coast Guard that was shown at the Greek Council meeting. The examples in the video were clear cut and easily understandable to all. After the video was shown, Mock and Malone asked the audience if there were any questions. Only one member of the audience asked a question, which was why should anyone possibly be punished over what was perceived by him as "normal" behavior.

Malone responded to the question by stating that in a professional setting, such as a military base or in any corporate environment, any slight uncertain gesture of affection from one person to another, especially when it is given by a senior official to a junior official, can be construed by gossip as harassment.

Mock and Malone concluded the lecture by giving other important facts about sexual harassment.

The most important facts are that most harassment cases stem from a senior officer offending a junior one. Overall, 90 percent of all harassment cases deal with the scenario of males directing themselves toward females. Four and a half percent is males directed towards males. Another four and a half percent is females directed toward females and only one percent of all sexual harassment is females directed towards males. Also, 75 percent of all women feel that they have been harassed some time in the past.

In short, it can be easily summed up by stating that harassers have to understand that their intended victim is not interested and that anyone who is touched without desiring to be touched is sexual harassment. Period.

Reid: newest member of AKΨ

by Brian J. Platkowski

The Iota chapter of Alpha Kappa Psi, a national professional co-ed fraternity, formally inducted Montclair State President Irvin D. Reid as an honorary member on Mon. Nov. 16. The ceremony was open to public attendance and was performed by chapter President Heather M. Abrams and Master of Rituals Kevin Dunn, and was assisted by Vice President Jill Killeen and Secretary Fred Pena.

A total of 45 people were present, including collegiate and alumni members of Alpha Kappa Psi, Chapter Advisor Dr. Allan J. Simonson, and other friends of the fraternity. The evening included the formal induction, a speech by President Reid, and a reception. President Reid's induction took place on Mon. Nov. 16.

As a result of this induction, many charges were brought up on most senior officials in the Navy. One of the highest ranking officials was the Secretary of the Navy, who later resigned. The presentation, while intended for the military, also had several appropriate points for civilian life.

Giving a second job interview

So you've spent big bucks on your interview outfit, had your hair conservatively styled, and practiced your handshake - yet your interviews are falling flat and yielding no positive responses. What are you doing wrong and what should you be doing to get follow-up interviews instead of rejection notices? In a word, "PREPARE!" No matter how terrific you look, if you are facing nothing but rejection, chances are that you have not prepared for the interview itself.

Important to your preparation is understanding that you are not the only person being interviewed. Recruiters who interview on college campuses, including Montclair State, generally see 10 to 12 students for initial interviews, selecting three or four of those students for a second interview. And keep in mind that Montclair State is not the only school where they recruit. Thorough preparation will help you convince the recruiter that you are one of the few who deserves a second interview.

What can you do to improve your chances of moving beyond the initial stage? Knowing yourself, the occupational area which you have chosen and the specific employer with which you are interviewing are essential for landing a second interview. Knowing yourself means that you have assessed your skills, interests and goals to determine whether a particular position and company would be appropriate for you. For example, if you possess excellent research, writing, and computer skills which you want to use on the job, make sure that the interviewer is aware of your skills and that you find out how the employer will utilize them. You should also bring samples of your writing to show the recruiter the range of your work.

Employers want to hire people with significant self-knowledge since they invest considerable time and money training new employees. Understandably, they expect their employees to stay with the company long enough to justify that initial expense. Thorough self-assessment prior to interviewing will save valuable time for you and the employer. Attending a Career Services skills assessment seminar is one helpful way to identify your strengths.

Familiarity with the career field and occupations within that field are also essential. If you're interested in advertising, for example, make sure you know what a copywriter, an account executive trainee, or a media buyer does since their jobs vary greatly. Or if you're seeking an entry level management position, research the industries in which you're interested, such as insurance, retail, or banking, to learn about typical career paths in each one. You might start your research at Career Services or Sprague Library.

Finally, detailed knowledge of the specific lawyer is imperative. The moment you are asked a question about a particular lawyer, such as Susan Esquilin, a psychologist, you must give compelling reasons based on your knowledge of the lawyer's background and experience. For example, if you are asked why you want to work for Susan Esquilin, you might say, "I am familiar with Susan Esquilin's work on post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD) and I am impressed with her research on the relationship between PTSD and depression." Alternatively, you could say, "I am familiar with Susan Esquilin's research on the relationship between PTSD and depression and I am convinced that she is the best person to handle the case."
Welcome back to the entertainment column that everyone is talking about, PROPHET BIGG! As you all know there has been no column for a couple of weeks, and for that I am sorry. However, as you all are loyal readers I will attempt to explain. There was some editorial disputes over the installment which appeared in the November 12th issue. At that time I felt that I should take a break and reflect on those decisions which were made regarding the installment. The following week I was attempting to get ahead on work for my impending nose surgery, thus, no attempt to explain. There was some question of McEnroe’s 150 million dollar estimated worth. I gotta tell ya, folks, this is a damn shame and I hope they come to their senses.

• Due to the overwhelming success of A Christmas Carol, a one man show starring Patrick Stewart (Star Trek: The Next Generation), he will be doing it again for three weeks. The dates are December 15th to January 3rd and will appear at the Broadhurst Theatre in Manhattan. Stewart does all 35 roles in a stunning performance. Watch for my review in January.

• And speaking of A Christmas Carol, the Muppets will present their interpretation of the Charles Dickens classic in a new film to be released forthcoming. This film marks the first for the muppets with out creator Jim Henson, who died tragically a couple of years ago. The big test for the muppets is whether they can retain the charm of the old Henson voiced characters and the other Henson voiced characters who, I can tell you, sounds...entertaining.

• A couple of quick reviews. Bram Stoker’s Dracula directed by Francis Ford Coppola. Sucked. Although some things were good, Home Alone II directed by John Hughes. Pretty violent. A lot of repeat jokes. Entertaining.

• Attention! Attention! This Monday Night, December 7th don’t miss your chance to see live theatre HERE! That’s right, PLAYERS will present An Evening of One-Acts featuring Present Tense by John McNamara and The A-tors Nightmare by Christopher Durang. The show is called Back! For I have to tell ya. I got an advanced peek at these shows and they are hysterically funny. Don’t miss this show. It will be in Student Center room 126 and the doors open at 7:15. Get there early to get a seat! Cut your night short, bring a date, do whatever you have to do to not miss this live performance!

A couple of final notes. Don’t miss the Prophet on WMSC’s Tonight We Murder with host Sean Carroll each and every Wednesday night from 11 p.m. till 1 p.m. And always remember to write the Prophet, care of The Montclarion in the Student Center Annex, with any and all questions that you may have on any aspect of entertainment or previous PROPHET BIGG installments. Finally, a couple of special PROPHET BIGG hellos to The Squid (That’s what you get for dissin’ me in the cafeteria!), Corrine (I know you big winged intended. I guess all those nights of passion and bliss meant nothing to you!), Heather C. (I’ll say hello to Patrick for you.), the cast of An Evening of One-Acts (Break a leg and don’t jump the light cast!) and good night Mrs. Calabash, where ever you are!

We interrupt the LIFE section to bring you the following boring announcement...

In this age of AIDS, television is reflecting more and more on real life. People are realizing that monogamy is the way to go. After all, if you’re going to have multiple sex partners, you’d better make damn sure they’re clean, otherwise, you’re playing with Russian Roulette with your life. Besides, it’s a good idea to teach monogamy. Kids watch a lot of television. When just about everyone these days is looking for their own soapbox to preach on, it’s political-activist correct to teach one-on-one to our little bimbos that “might have their mushy little minds warped by The Transformers.” But I digress.

Monogamy is popular, too. Look at CBS’ Hearts After, Markie Post and John Ritter are a married couple, and they don’t have to put up with “Who will I sleep with this week?” Helen Hunt and Paul Reiner are doing the married thing too on NBC’s Mad About You. It’s just about the new “it” thing, next to all the teen angst shows. Like Jacoby and Meyers commercials say, it’s about time. The network writers are going for the substance and sizzle thing by saying “Married couples can be sexy, too.” Gone into prime time limbo are the sexual undertones shows like Moonlighting and Remington St. So are you the one who says “Are they gonna do it?” You know, the nasty. The dirty deed. The horizontal ladder. Gettin’ somethin’ dat. Sex. Of course, the new shows still have sex, but what’s new is that the characters that are sleeping together are husband and wife, not man and concubine, or woman and love toy.

Man, what a novel idea. Probably the only news show that hasn’t had its two most fascinating characters spring into the sack is Joel and Maggie on Northern Exposure. This is similar to the Moonlighting David and Maddie “When will they get on with it already?” plot, but the higher ups on the show said that it could get old quick. It’s much better if they keep the tension going. But, at least in the meantime, Joel and Maggie aren’t doing anything. Dave and Maddie were still sleeping around when the undergrads wereواب. Married is sexy. Married is in. Married is fashionable. UST, or Unresolved Sexual Tension, is out. That is, of course, on Married... With Children. Peggy will still sleep around a little, while her humble husband sells shoes and fantasizes about his female customers whilst he fondles their feet.
Girls are icky. Boys have cooties. We're all screwed.

I had just gotten a cup of coffee, light and sweet. She walked in as if gliding on air. It was fascinating, really. It was as if she found a five dollar bill, or finally figured out all the lyrics to a Nirvana song. She wasn't toned or anything, just sort of blissfully unaware...

"Hey, sweet," I said, "what's your gig?"

"Oh Jesus App," she gushed, "I just met the most beautiful creature on the face of the planet! Tall blond, built... and , and those TEETH!"

"App, you are so clueless. I'm talking about the fact that this God-like creature I've been drooling over has a girlfriend!!"

"Oh."

To the cute guy who sat behind me in Anthro all semester - I wish I could've gotten to know you better! Had I known Monday was our last class, I may have tried a little harder. I'm gonna miss walking through the maze from Freeman to Blanton, with you.

Rich - Congrats on your vomit-fest in D.C. I should've stayed in the hotel.

K.K. - There's this bar in Yokahama, perhaps 3 or 4 blocks from the stadium where the native elicts and various riff-raff, we're getting Americans drunk on Japanese beer.

Ami - stop flipping.

Katy - Thank you, thanks.

To the cute guy who sat behind me in Anthro all semester - I wish I could've gotten to know you better! Had I known Monday was our last class, I may have tried a little harder. I'm gonna miss walking through the maze from Freeman to Blanton, with you.

Rich - Congrats on your vomit-fest in D.C. I should've stayed in the hotel.

K.K. - There's this bar in Yokahama, perhaps 3 or 4 blocks from the stadium where the native elicts and various riff-raff, we're getting Americans drunk on Japanese beer.

Ami - stop flipping.

Katy - Thank you, thanks.
