Acting Student Center Director appointed in lieu of suspended Gieza

by Constance Ford, Associate Director of Residence Life, was appointed Acting Director of the Student Center on March 8 following the recent suspension of Student Center Director Robert Gieza.

As acting director of the Student Center, Ford’s direct responsibility will be to supervise the staff including all building management and the maintenance department.

Ford said her assignment to the Student Center is only temporary and she plans to return to Residence Life. There she oversees all of the hiring for positions from building manager to desk assistant and manages Student Development in all of the residence halls and Clove Road apartments.

Ford holds a Bachelor’s and a Masters degree in business from Trenton State College. According to Dr. Domenica DeSimone, Acting Vice President for Student Development and Campus Life, Ford also brings with her eight years of experience in the area of facility management. This experience includes positions at Trenton State and Rider College in New Jersey.

Ford was Assistant Residence Life Program Coordinator at Trenton State and organized programs for the residence halls including concerts and special activities.

I consider my job at Residence Life a move up in my career,” Ford said. She says that she hopes someday she will direct a Residence Life program. That, she says, is where her heart is.

MSC grad escapes Terror at the Towers unscathed

by Alex Castlino

A MSC graduate survived the World Trade Center bomb explosion without injury on Friday, Feb. 26.

Verona resident Tim Degnan, 40, who is a Maintenance Unit supervisor for the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey at the World Trade Center was on the same level of the bomb.

“It was a sound that I’ll never forget for the rest of my life,” said Degnan. The former MSC student was an employee locker room at the north side of the B2 level of the World Trade Center at the time of the blast.

“Ground Zero” of the explosion was 180 ft. away at the south side of that level explained Degnan.

After being knocked to the floor from the vibrations of the explosion, Degnan’s first thought were of “anticipation.” I thought the ceiling was going to come down on me... I was waiting for something else to happen,” said Degnan.

While hearing “moans” of some co-workers closer to the explosion area who were “black from smoke, bleeding and in a state of shock,” Degnan’s main interest was helping these people get to the safety of the main concourse level two flights up. “I didn’t think of the danger of the smoke or the corridors,” said Degnan.

“I was more concerned with the people I knew were in the area,” he added.

For the next 12 hours Degnan played a role in the disaster response team when he learned he had lost four close Port Authority co-workers who were killed from the explosion. “This experience hasn’t sunk in yet” said Degnan.

“Getting the building back in shape.” Degnan’s 12 hour shifts includes supervising repair of some of the 90 windows broken on the upper levels, repairs of doors, painting of the interior and constructing makeshift offices for the Disaster Command Center.

Degnan graduated from MSC in 1989 with a degree in Industrial Studies. He has been employed by the Port Authority for over 20 years.

SGA Executive Board acts to usurp Montclair office

by Glenn Steinberg

SGA President, Gouri Sadhwani, informed The Montclarion Tuesday that one of their offices, 112E, must be vacated to make room for the Student Government legislators, according to Editor-in-chief Kevin Colligan.

Despite laws against forced labor, millions are being enslaved worldwide according to an International Labor Organization report. As many as 200 million people may be in bondage.

Serbia's military leader has agreed to let women, children and the elderly flee to eastern enclaves that his forces have sealed off from international aid. Bosnian forces are preparing for an offensive to free the area.

Romania and Bulgaria were rocked by the biggest blizzard to hit the region in decades. Two feet of snow fell even in the lower coastal areas. The Balkan region has been keeping with a pattern of brutal winters following wars dating back to at least the American Revolution.

Israeli citizens blamed Palestinian laborers for slashing their boss' throat as he brought them to work.

Democrats of the House Budget Committee said late Monday that they have found 63 billion dollars more that they feel can be cut from the budget. The cuts will take place over a four year period. These further cuts are close to Clinton's original deficit reduction.

David Koresh and his Branch Davidian Followers are held up in a compound by the F.B.I. agents. 21 of the 38 children assessed to be inside the settlement 10 miles east of Waco, Texas have been freed. The F.B.I. fears that Koresh is hoping for a fire fight. Reportedly, all those still in the compound are there of their own volition.

A federal administrative law judge started hearing an animal welfare violations case against a major supplier of biological studies products. Carolina biological supply is accused by an animal rights group of embalming live cats. A videotape has recorded several cats twitching during the process and is the main evidence.

A major winter storm plowed across the region late last week. Winds up to 75 mph were recorded across the region. 200,000 people lost power throughout the area. Coastal erosion and flooding washed away about a dozen homes but the storm did far less damage than the December Nor'Easter.

Several arrests were made relating to the World Trade Center bombing. Authorities have not decisively determined how or if the suspects actually took part in the attack. The van used for the bomb was rented and returned to the rental agency by a man demanding his 400 dollar deposit back. He claims the van was stolen. People hurt in the blast have already begun to file lawsuits.

On Monday a bill that would require public school health and family life teachers to stress abstinence as the only reliable way to avoid sexually transmitted diseases and pregnancy was approved by a 54-7 vote in the New Jersey State Assembly.
President Clinton unveils National Service Plan

by Laura-Elaina Matrclan

President Clinton challenged young people to join him in "a great national adventure that will change America forever, and for the better," in an address to students at Rutgers University on March 1, 1993. The Great American Adventure, otherwise known as the national service plan, will enable young people to borrow the money for college from the government, then pay back the loan through one or two years of community service work before, during or after college.

Through national service, thousands will have the opportunity to pay for college by rebuilding their communities—serving as teachers, police officers, health-care workers and in other capacities.

In order to initiate this plan, Clinton has called for a Summer of Service. This summer, more than 1,000 young people will serve in selected areas around the country, learning to lead and getting children who are at risk ready for school. Through this plan, Clinton hopes to make a college education available to every American.

How will this plan affect Montclair State College? "I only know what I've seen in the newspapers, that they are outlining the national service plan. We, the New Jersey Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, have not yet received any draft of this proposal. I do, however, see it as an incentive to work in areas that need help in exchange for an opportunity to meet college expenses," said Dr. Richards, Director of Financial Aid.

SGA protests windows

by Jennifer Madera

Connie Ford has been given the position of acting director of the Student Center Administration. The Student Center Administration, one for the SGA legislators. The Latin American Student Organization (LASO) was granted a Class One charter for the academic year 1993-94. LASO was founded in 1970 and takes pride in being the first Latino-run student organization in New Jersey. They have 80 members and was granted a Gass One charter for the academic year 1993-94. Lasso was founded in 1969 and is considered to be the ecological conscience of the building. Of the $2.3 million it is costing $80,000 to install new windows in the faculty offices. The SGA finds these expenses very excessive.

In the open forum, representatives from The Montclarion complained about the SGA Executive Board's decision to convert an active Montclarion office into something special

Campus Police Report

Solicitors on the rise

Reports of soliciting of perfume and other items, seemingly targeted to fraternities and sororities, have been reported on Mar. 5 and Mar. 8. The solicitors, according to Sgt. Debra Newcombe of the MSC campus Police, all hail from the same area of New York, Huntington and Plushing and are all college age or a little older.

"There is an unwritten policy that you can't arrest anyone for soliciting," Newcombe said. However, she said, campus police can arrest solicitors for trespassing. In towns, people need permits to solicit, according to Newcombe.

She advised students to report any solicitors right away and let the campus police deal with them. Newcombe also said that there should be "no soliciting" signs posted in all buildings.

Vandlization

Motor Vehicle
3/6 A female Blanton resident reported a window was broken while her car was parked overnight in lot 21.

Soda Machine
3/7 An employee of the student center reported at 12:20 pm that one Coca-Cola machine was damaged.

Requested Assistance

Little Falls Police Department requested assistance to apprehend people who skipped out without paying their check at the Ambrosia Diner. With a description of the car, campus police were able to locate the offenders in Blanton Hall. They were taken into custody where they paid restitution. No criminal charges were pressed against them.

Discharged Fire Extinguisher
3/6 Someone had discharged a fire extinguisher on the main stage in Memorial Auditorium.

Theft from Motor Vehicle
3/6 A female Blanton resident reported her car was broken into while it was parked overnight in lot 23. Credit cards and cash were taken from her purse.

Recovered Stolen Vehicle
3/7 An officer recovered a car that was stolen from Bloomfield and was dropped off at MSC.

Suspicous Activities

3/6 A female Blanton resident reported someone had tried to set her door on fire.

Medical
3/6 A female Blanton resident reported severe abdominal pain. She was taken to the hospital by the Montclair ambulance squad.

Theft
3/8 A bag was taken from Finley Hall.
3/8 A female Bohn resident reported the theft of her wallet from her pocket book from the T.V. studio.

Update
3/8 The trial of Steven Sanders, the former student indicted with charges of burglary and theft from the Alden food service cafe in Blanton Hall, was put to trial by grand jury. He was also indicted with charges of theft by deception and theft from the bookstore.

SGA finds these expenses very excessive.

In celebration of National Women's History Month, Studio Theatre Series of MS proudly presents Uncommon Women and Others by Wendy Wasserstein. Directed by senior BFA acting major, Cara Andrichak, this production takes a revealing look at women's changing roles during the early seventies. It speaks a universal message to all people as it probes deep into the hearts and psyche of individuals confronted with a myriad of choices. The play begins as a group of women friends reunite and reminisce about college life. A series of flashbacks take us back to the time when the girls were still in college.

The “uncommon women” include Elyse Wolf as Kate, Stephanie Koempel as Samantha, Rebecca Rhodes as Holly, Stacey Roth as Muffet, Sakeenah as Rita, Jennifer Ritchkoff as Susie, Laura Ketcham as Carter, Kristianne Meyer as Leilah, and Stacy Rice as the ditzy house mother Mrs. Plum.

As a whole, the cast does a fine job of blending wit, humor and seriousness to show the uniqueness of their characters. There are also some notable performances by the individual actresses. Elyse Wolf who plays Katie Quin, an ambitious and driven girl, gives a compelling and realistic portrayal of a young woman determined to be successful. Sakeenah as the “ever creative” Rita Altabel is not only comical in her portrayal, but very energetic and lively. She imbues her character with an uncanniness that is surpassed only by her frivolity. And, Laura Ketcham, though a minor character in the play, well enacts her role of Carter “the quiet intellectual” who takes it all in from an objective distance. Her expressions provide a wealth of insight about her character.

Set design by Amy Horvath is realistic depicting college dorms and a sitting room. Light design by Sharon Mayerchak is effective, and costumes, designed by Tanya Guercy enhance the authenticity of the play’s time period.

In an interview, director Andrichak summed up the production’s significance by stating: “It’s trying to give the audience a way to relate to life's experiences. This is close to what we all go through.”

Performances of Uncommon Women and Others run on March 9 through March 13 at 8 pm and March 14 at 2 pm. For ticket information, call 893-5112.

What do you think the punishment should be for the World Trade Center bombing?

I think we should bungee cord him from the top of the World Trade Center and then cut the rope.

Bob Wall
Senior, Marketing

I feel that this person should be executed because he/she is responsible for the deaths of five people and injuries to many others. Face public humility. The victims and families should be able to address the bombers. They should be definitely punished and judged harshly.

Jennifer Crossley
Freshman, Education

I think the punishment should be death.

Women's Month: A "Riveting" experience

by Laurie Elaine Matrician

Rosie the Riveter did it during World War II. You’re probably thinking what did she do? Better yet, you’re wondering, who in the world is Rosie Riveter?

First, Rosie is not a real person. She’s a symbol. She appeared on a World War II propaganda poster designed to encourage women to take jobs in defense plants. Over 20 million answered the call, working in shipyards, aircraft manufacturing, oil refineries, and other heavy industry. Rosie the Riveter became the symbol of women’s willingness and ability to do whatever needed to be done. She represented the millions of women who helped dispel the notion that a woman’s role was in the home.

MSC’s Women’s Center and the Women’s Studies Program worked together to provide a host of activities to celebrate Women’s History Month, this month. “Although we are two separate groups with different objectives, we have similar interests. We worked with one another to generate programs and activities on campus that support women’s issues and honor the history of the month,” said Dr. Joan Pifke, Director of the Women’s Center.

Rosie the Riveter is the symbol of this month’s celebration. “We chose Rosie as our symbol and the slogan ‘We can do it’ to illustrate the fact that women can do whatever they want to.”

What is needed? A bucket or water cooler in their cubbyholes that MSC calls rooms. “We tried to make something available for everyone,” said Pifke.

Some of the highlights include: afternoon workshops covering a variety of topics on Thursday, March 11; and a presentation by Chris McSweeney and Carol Vassile from Essex County’s National Organization of Women and where we need to go. More people need to become sensitized to women’s issues. We are attempting to achieve this through the month’s events,” said Pifke.

According to the Women’s Center, not enough undergraduate women are interested in participating in women’s issues. “I think there’s a reluctance to be involved because of labelling, but hopefully they’ll see the calendar of events and find something that grabs them,” said Pifke.

Bored with Bud? Brew your own!

by George Olchowski

All right, we have the Rathskellar back. So where’s the beer?

You want beer? Go out to Clove Road, check up on your buddy who’s been inebriated for the better part of the semester. “We chose Rosie as our symbol and the slogan ‘We can do it’ to illustrate the fact that women can do whatever they want to.”

Every day, I begin and where I am going. But how do I do it?

Rosie the Riveter looks at the blue books during research, or I doom myself to drinking the same old beer. After the first three chapters, I looked for a beer and winemaking catalog, so being the adventurous sort, I sent for it. In the catalog, I found a beginner’s beermaking kit, with all the essentials: hops, malt, yeast, the fermenter (that’s what the jug/bucket’s for), a bottle and caps with a bottle capper. All I needed was bottles. No problem, I just waited for my town’s recycle collection sight, picked up two cases of bottles, cleaned them, and boom! I was ready. I followed the instructions in the kit, and in about two weeks, I had two cases of beer that tasted like a cross between Budweiser and Sam Adams. Not bad at all.

My next two batches were also kits, then I realized—there’s no variety in this. I want to make a batch from scratch. Everything—grain, hops, malt, everything—wanted to be in control.

But how do I do it?

Fortunately for me, a beer and winemaking supply store opened in Clifton. I went in, completely clueless as to what to do or in what proportions I needed to do everything in. The guy behind the desk saw my predicament and recommended a book—

The New Complete Joy of Home Brewing by Charlie Papazian. He said it was the best book he’s ever read on the subject, and it takes you from clueless beginner to seasoned homebrewer. I was skeptical, but I really had no choice. Either I did some research, or I doom myself to drinking the same old beer. After the first three chapters, I decided to brew my first batch of honest-to-God homemade beer, from scratch. I bottled it, waited three weeks for it to carbonate itself, then I had a bottle.

Every commercial beer since that one tastes like piss water to me. It was fantastic!

As I mentioned before, hangovers may not be a thing of the past with homemade beer, but the hangover-inducing effects of too much alcohol are definitely lessened.

The all-natural beers yeast used to make beer in rich in vitamin B complex, which alcohol processing sucks out of you when you imbibe. The feeling dehydrated is also a side-effect of vitamin B deficiency. (This is proven!)

First of all, our bodies don’t like alcohol, and the cure for a hangover is not more alcohol. The body has a great system of getting rid of alcohol, but that takes the body, as well as the mind. To lessen the effects of a wild night out, either drink more homemade beer to get the vitamin B, or follow this simple procedure:

1. Before drinking or sleeping, take some form of vitamin B to replenish what was lost.
2. Drink at least a pint of water before going to sleep after drinking. This will kill off some of the dehydration.

I went into the nitty-gritty specifics of homebrewing and I will take the next three issues of The Montclarion, but if you’re really sincere about giving it a shot, take a ride to Corrado’s Beer and Winemaking Warehouse on Main Avenue in Clifton. The New Complete Joy of Homebrewing is sold there ($9.95) as well as almost anything you will need to brew your first batch of beer, including beginner’s kits. My only complaint about Corrado’s is that their stock sells out quickly and they’re sporadic about restocking some supplies. Beer And Wine Hobby, a mail-order firm in Massachusetts, has just about everything else that you can think of. They can be reached at 1-617-993-8818. Or, if you have any other beermaking questions, feel free to drop me a line here at The Montclarion. Happy brewing!

Media Center offers valuable experience

by David Di Gregorio

For college work-study students, the MSC Media Center under the leadership of Bob Ruezinsky, Dave Fogg, John O’Brien and John Walz can offer a wide variety of enriching experiences. Here a student can quickly get to know the college and also become familiar with various audio visual equipment and their applications.

The Media Center offers a student a variety of different jobs because the needs of the faculty vary. If the job is as simple as rolling a VCR and monitor into a classroom a new contact has been made with a professor. If the professor requires an operator for a particular piece of equipment, the student gets a chance to audit the class, learning about things perhaps outside his or her area of specialty.

Last semester, I was assigned to work for Professor Lay in the "Art Forum" classes and had a chance to learn about many contemporary artists. I also worked with Professor Walsh as a projectionist in her "Cinema as an Art Form" and learned of many very unique short films she presents.

Working for Professor Cutler and Professor Arthur gave me a chance to learn more about films like Good Fellas, 2001: A Space Odyssey, Notorious, Citizen Kane, Sunset Boulevard, and many others.

Other experiences a student may encounter working in the Media Center may be to video tape an event such as Inns of Court or a poetry reading in the Student Center, or narrate a slide presentation. Naturally, we are constantly trained in the proper use and care of a wide variety of equipment.

Through what I learned in the Media Center, I was able to produce a successful slide/sound presentation as a final project for the class in the History of Journalism.

The experience which I have had has turned my MSC experience from a good one into a great one. I think that this work study opportunity is the best on campus and am glad to have the experience. I highly recommend it.

EVERY SPRING, WE GET A NEW CROP OF VOLUNTEERS

Believe it or not, daffodils are very effective weapons in the battle against cancer.

As the first flower of spring, daffodils represent hope. That’s why we sell them every year to help support our programs in research, education and patient services.

So please call the Essex County Unit of the American Cancer Society at (201) 736-7770 to find out where the fresh-cut flowers will be available or to make advance purchases.

And help our new volunteers do their jobs.

DAFFODIL DAYS
MARCH 22-26

First flower of spring, the flower of hope.
May the road rise up to meet you
May the wind always be at your back
May the sun shine warmly upon your face
May the rains fall softly upon your fields and until we meet again... May God hold you in the palm of his hand

Have a safe and happy St. Patrick's Day
The fight for Room 112E

This past Tuesday, the SGA President, Gouri Sadhwani, came to The Montclarion and informed the staff that they were being dismissed from one of their offices - an office that is currently shared by three editors - because she wanted the office for her own organization, the SGA.

SGA legislators, it appears, need a place to fulfill their mandated office hours. So Sadhwani and her fellow Executive Board members decided that the five foot by five foot enclave within the main office of The Montclarion would be the perfect place. Alternate rooms around the Student Center, such as the many glassed-in rooms on the fourth floor that can be reserved ahead of time, were never considered. Nor was the large conference room already used by the SGA. Why not place a few desks in it? The room sits vacant most of the time. There is also the old Cabinet office that is now used as a "storage area" for SGA records. It seems the SGA Executive board finds their three year old spreadsheets more important than the functioning of a campus-wide student organization.

The arrogant "you're only a Class One" attitude that went into the decision to strip The Montclarion of office space was made even worse by the manner in which it was arrived. There was no consultation with The Montclarion whatsoever. Wouldn't it have been more diplomatic, instead of informing the newspaper of their loss of space, to have discussed the problem and sought some input concerning a solution? The lack of concern as to The Montclarion's need for the space is obvious.

Managing Editor, George Calle said, "Most legislators were very receptive and concerned with our needs. However, Gouri seemed adamantly resolve to rule by decree and stand by her original position, which leaves The Montclarion no role in the final decision making." This tyranny is the true thorn in The Montclarion's side.

It is not the opinion of The Montclarion that legislators do not need office space. Most legislators work very hard for the student body, and if it has been determined that space is needed for them to do that work, that is fine. It is not fine, however, for the Executive Board of the SGA to arbitrarily decide to strip another student organization of much-needed facilities.

The office space used at The Montclarion is needed. Office space is needed for the legislators. Surely space can be found for both needs. Perhaps a less arrogant method of decision-making can be used by the SGA in the future. Arguments, such as this, usually arise when both parties do not listen and try to understand the other's position.

Quote of the Week by Tim Degnan, pg.3

I thought the ceiling was going to come down on me. I was waiting for something else to happen.
Heresy
by Trish Barker

Well, I'm back. I'll bet that you conservative types out there thought that this nuisance was gone for good. Not a chance. But hey, that's life.

I was going to write about something that will annoy me until the nauseam. My God, he's only been in office for a month and a half and I'm already tired of hearing about him! So, I will write about something that will annoy me until the day I die - agism.

Come on, admit it - you've ALL had to deal with this irritation. All of you have had some older person tell you how you are "too young and inexperienced" to know about some subject. You could live through a world War II and they'd tell you that you know nothing about it. Why do this happen? I've never done it so I really can't say, but I suspect it has something to do with self-esteem. I can't imagine why else someon would brush you off so carelessly without trying to understand what you have to say. Of course, it could also be a fear of the truth. Nobody wants to hear the like it is, so they say, "What do you know? You're young."

I've had this problem with my mother. When I converted from her religion to another, she didn't want to deal with it. Her reason for why she shouldn't have done it was "too "young" to make such a decision. I didn't have enough "life experience." Mind you, I had clung to her religion for two years after deciding I wanted to convert, and I realized it was never going to work out. But this didn't matter to her, because she didn't want to cope with the reality.

Now, all this is not to say that older people don't have valuable experience. They most certainly do have experiences that younger people can learn from. But this shouldn't invalidate the experiences of younger people. I have known old people who have been sheltered their whole lives, and young people who have (figuratively speaking) been to hell and back more times than I can count. So far as I'm concerned, age does not necessarily imply wisdom.

It seems that there will always be someone out there who will see you as having all the wit and wisdom of a five year old.

Rich rule for over 300 years

Minority. He says divisions in society come from the "various and unequal distribution of property." James furthers his claim by saying the minority can be controlled by the majority but the opposite is not possible. To remedy the possibility of class war Madison felt an "Executive Republic" was necessary. This is our representation by region system rather than proportional representation. Madison said "It will be more difficult for all who feel it to discover their own strength to get in unison with each other. The influence of factious leaders may kindle a flame within their particular states, but will not be able to spread a general conflagration throughout the other states." In the early and latter 1800's, (1840-50, to 1877-1890's) as well as the early 1900's, (1930) the major popular revolutions nearly toppled our government each time using police, sheriffs, and or the army; put them down in each region with brutal force.

These rich, white, slaveowning, landowning men feared a coalescing of the masses. The nobility of Europe was about 1% to 2% of the population. Do you think that is a coincidence that 1% to 2% of the population has controlled 50% of the wealth since it began? As early as 1738, Governor Lyttletown of South Carolina said "It has always been a policy of this government to create an aversion to them (Indians) to Negroes." They, (rich) have purposely perpetuated hate between poorer whites and blacks for 300 years. It is obvious that if the other 98% of the population comes together and demands the wealth concentrated at the top be more fairly distributed, the rich would have no choice but to do so.

This nation was designed to maintain the ill-gotten fortunes built on slavery, bootlegging, and exploitation. Virtually all the signers of the Declaration of Independence were rich. Every president we have had has been rich, and so has just about every Senator and Congressman. Who controls the State Legislatures and Senate, the Governor's Mansion and town? Who else? The Rich! They have used their positions to forge policies that cement enmity amongst the various factions of the poor and middle class. To maintain their wealth, they must perpetuate a permanent work force and keep us from joining forces to better manage and control our society. Divide and conquer, live well and prosper.

C.L.U.B. IS A CLASS 1 OF THE SGA
Welcome, loyal readers, to yet another thrilling installment of PROPHET BIG! And now, off into tomorrow...

- You have to wonder what people are thinking sometimes for instance, does a movie about a man who dresses up as a maid, get hired by his ex-wife to help take care of their kids as revenge for their nasty break-up and custody battle, sound like a ridiculous concept to you? Well it does to me! But, it doesn’t to Robin Williams who has signed to play that very part in the new film, Mrs. Doubtfire.

- It is me or does the new crop of T.V. shows from Universal suck, big time? The shows, Kung Fu: The Legend Continues, Time Trax, Babylon 5 and The Untouchables, looked very exciting to me at one time, but they’re all awful! Well, I guess that’s the magic of previews. Anyway, Kung Fu was really the same character from the old show in modern times. Why? A quarter of the population knows some martial arts or self-defense or can fake it really well! That’s why the damn show worked set in the old west. No one knew that stuff then. Time Trax is absolutely forgettable, period. Babylon 5 pales in comparison to its contemporary, Star Trek: Deep Space Nine. The Untouchables is just a cheap attempt to capture the success of both the classic T.V. show and the successful Brian De Palma film of a few years ago. Originality is a rare thing folks.

- And speaking of silly T.V. ideas, CBS has announced that they have begun production of A League of Their Own, the series for T.V. Penny Marshall will produce. It seems to me that Penny was snapped back into her ditzy character from The Odd Couple, Mema, deciding to back this venture.

- I, personally, have never seen Cindy Crawford hosting MTV’s House of Style. But maybe she could really be good enough to have a second show. Doubtful. But the people at Fox think she can, they are developing a show for her in a one-on-one format to begin airing this summer. Oh, and don’t worry. Mrs. 90’s will still host House of Style.

- It’s here! It’s here! It’s here! Last of the Mohicans has finally arrived on video tape. If you haven’t seen it yet, now is your Big chance. Some of you might remember the first. I think this is a great way to sneak in education. The fact that Wes Studi did not receive a Best Supporting Actor for his role in this film by the Oscar people is truly sickening. Check it out!

- And finally some Prophet notes. To my absent friend, what’s wrong with you? To all my other friends, peace.

I’m taking free reign this week. I’m sorry, but this is so weird that it deserves some kind of comment.

Most people are somewhat familiar with the various incarnations of Star Trek, and the different aliens that pop in here and there. One of the mainstays of the bug-eyed monster brigade are the Klingons. They’ve got big, ugly foreheads, big eyes and mean about their honor, and generally have a bad attitude towards everyone in the known galaxy. Even their language is odd—it sounds like a combination of German and Hebrew.

Want to learn how to speak like a Klingon? There’s the Klingon Dictionary, which has a Biggles/Klingon translation section as well as chapters devoted to syntax and proper verb use. There’s also the Conversational Klingon cassette, narrated by Michael (Lt. Worf) Dom that will teach you the basics of Klingon, from a tourist’s point of view. But now, there are actually courses—that’s right, actual language courses—that will teach you the Klingon language.

Northeastern Illinois University in Chicago offers a lecture series (non-credit, sorry folks) in Klingon, presented by their Science Fiction Club. If you don’t want to hike out to Illinois, the Klingon Language Institute (I kid you not, that’s their name) offers a free 11-lesson correspondence course in Klingon.

“Klingons are very popular with Star Trek fans, so I’m not surprised that people might want to learn their weird language,” says Marc Obrad, creator of the Klingon language and author of the dictionary and cassette. “What’s surprising to me is that people are actually studying it.”

But how would you study a made-up language? Quite a few people, obviously. The KLI is celebrating its first anniversary this month, and it has over 200 members. How is it possible that someone has created a language- Spanish, Italian, Russian, etcetera. And even more mind boggling, some of them are interested in the subject. The KLI began looking for people who wanted to speak Klingon, and was able to find them by advertising in the J.R.R. Tolkien Lord of the Rings books.

Fur Elise computer bulletin boards, Schoen began looking for people who wanted to speak Klingon, and was blown away by the response. Eventually, this led to the founding of the Klingon Language Institute, and they even have an academic journal, KQod. From the Klingon words Hol, which means “language,” and Qed. “science.” It features jokes, puns, scholarly articles, and an occasional contest. A recent contest had subscribers try to find a Klingon palindrome, a word or phrase spelled the same way forwards and backwards.

“I’m trying to bring in more academic, but we want to appeal to a wide audience,” Schoen says. “As an educator, I think this is a great way to sneak in education. We have a number of teenage members, for example—maybe we can turn some of them into linguists.”

Interested? I am, for one reason. Everyone and their brother knows some sort of language—Spanish, Italian, Russian, etcetera. But if you don’t have a hobby to understand something, they’ll start talking in that language. Just think—get a few of your buddies together, learn Klingon, and no one will know what the hell you’re saying! If you’re interested, send a SASE to: KLI, P.O. Box 634, Flourtown, PA 19013-0634. For information about the Klingon language lecture series at Northeastern Illinois University (in case there are any professors interested in extraterrestrial linguistics), call Jeremy Cowan at 1-312-583-4050, ext. 3865.
Beware of three-fingered zombies, dinosaurs and work.

Gazing longingly at the lurid landscape of the Student Center Quad, the moans of your brain begin to contract into a state of quasi consciousness, forcing your eyelids downwards like two anvils plummeting from a 50-story building...

"...the paper must be typed, double spaced, using only the Vaniflex font for those of you using a computer. The main text must not be shorter than 17 pages, nor longer than 22. We will be cross referencing your sources, you must not be shorter than 17 pages, must be primary: blah blah blah..."

"I tell you I have little to nothing documented, and believe me when I say this paper is due?"

"Ah, um, bah, when did you say this paper is due?"

"I repeat, the paper is due Thursday. Do not hand it in before Thursday. Do not hand it in after Thursday. Do not pass Go. Do not collect $200. Do you comprehend the instructions I have just given you?"

"Dig." "That's fine. Class is over. I'll see you all bright and early Thursday morning." It begins to sink into your dilated head that Thursday is two days away.

Two days.

48 hours. 2880 minutes.

172,800 seconds. Holy sheep shi!

If all goes well, that's 8 words a minute. A research document and type between now and 172,800 seconds from now. Your classmates, like 30 zombies of the stratosphere exit the room, murmuring aimlessly about the quality of typewriter ribbon they're using and the general lack of good computer paper that can be found in the post-Apple IIe wasteland.

"Typewriters?? TYPEWRITERS??" you explode "I don't even have a F-ING typewriter!"

One of the zombies approaches, cautiously feeling his way towards your quivering lump of flesh, which is now flapping like a gaunt, severed finch. The sounds of thousands of crashing Steinways rolling in the tide create a symphony of confusion...

"NO late papers will be accepted under any circumstances. If you happen to sustain massive external injuries before the due date, and we're defining massive injuries as ones that either paralyze or prevent you from reproducing, then I suggest you consider applying for an incomplete for the semester...

The dinosaurs trample into the ocean, tripping over the pianos and tossing headfirst, howling and kicking into a saaty grave. They thrash and scream, snapping bones and spewing bile onto the beach..."

"Where the hell are you going with this?"

"Thursday, you idiot, THURSDAY! Our paper is due in 2880 minutes! You rush past the living dead, foaming at the mouth and waving your arms furiously through the halls of Mallory. Students cover under water fountains and rush into classrooms as you streak past.

"THURSGNA! THURSGNA!" you bellow, ripping off your clothes and throwing yourself into walls. Some zombies try to restrain you and soon a huge crowd has gathered. You're standing in the middle of a circle of the living dead, naked, possessed, and sweating like a moose. The same zombie from before bravely enters the middle of the circle, holds out his hand and gestures for you to join them. You hesitate, breathe deeply and unite onto the shiny green floor. The zombie comes closer and before he can utter a word, you take his hand and shove it into your mouth, biting down hard...

You wake up paralyzed and impotent in a sedate hospital room in Paterson. Beaten to a pulp by a three-fingered and terribly unhappy fellow student, you contemplate the remainder of your years in mental agony, always coming back to the same back and obvious point-I should've taken the incomplete.

Note to myself: Go to the damn library.

When you ride drunk, one more for the road can have an entirely different meaning.

First flower of spring, the flower of hope.
MSC seeks return to Division III World Series

Improved offense, depth keeps Kubicka optimistic regarding "life without Fyfe"

by Keith A. Idee

The old adage states that success in softball depends on pitching and defense. This holds true as the 1993 MSC softball team should have quite a season.

Coming off a 1992 season that featured an NCAA Division III Regional Tournament Championship and an appearance in the College World Series, expectations are high for this year's team.

Softball Preview

"We have a lot of players returning from last year's team. They tasted success and now they're hungry for more. They've got the incentive and now it's time to go for it," said head coach Anita Kubicka.

While the Red Hawks are stacked with talent all around the diamond, they'll have a tough time replacing the graduated Lois Fyfe. The 1992 Division III Player of the Year, who was also named to every other recognition team imaginable, carried the Red Hawks to the third spot in the final national rankings.

However, Kubicka is confident that this year's two-pitcher rotation (junior Michelle Serio and sophomore Jennifer Flinn) will lead the offensive charge for the Red Hawks. Flinn, a second baseman from Blackwood, was named the NJAC's Rookie of the Year in 1992 when she was second on the club with a .377 average and made only six errors. However, she had shoulder surgery last summer and is currently making her way back. If Flinn comes back at full strength, she'll be MSC's catalyst from the leadoff position.

Kuchinski, the team's catcher out of Matamoras, is looking to lead and motivation as well production from both at and behind the plate. She batted .296 last season and drove in 20 runs.

Drager, a shortstop known for her tremendous arm and good range, will provide consistency offensively and defensively. She's coming off a .293, 26 RBI season. The outfield will consist of junior Karen Bouloucon in left, senior Krissi Kressler in center and junior Suzanne Tiezmann in right.

Kressler, a returning starter from Colonia, batted .275 and committed only three errors last year. Tiezmann, also a returning starter and Boulocon, a split-diner, were both solid, said Kubicka.

Although Flinn has two quality arms to count on, Kubicka doesn't think that pitchers will be as dominant this season as they've been in years past. That's due to the fact that all three softball divisions of the NJAC will be using new optic yellow polyurethane balls. These balls take off approximately 25-30 feet more upon impact than the old balls.

The change in balls is good news for the MSC hitters. Sophomore Cindy Polhaman could see significant action in centerfield. With MSC's first game just a little more than a week away, there are still two infield positions up for grabs according to Kubicka.

As the intramural basketball season enters March, last second game winning shots, must win matchups and teams just playing out the year are all part of the madness.

UNTOUCHABLES: The X-Men and BDP are emerging as the favorites to take the intramural title. The X-Men (8-0) need just one more win to clinch the Monday/Wednesday division. BDP (7-0) is on track to take the top seed on Tuesday/Thursday. The two pennant winners are the only teams left without a loss.

BANKED: Troy Bailey's 20-foot jumper with just :10 remaining kissed the glass and dropped to give Ruff House a come-from-behind victory over Sudden Impact. You've got to call that shot Troy. Rough House (5-2) also downed Death Rho (6-2) last week and seem to be peaking at just the right time of the season.

ON THE RISE: Delta Chi (7-2) has won seven straight after dropping their first two decisions to open the season. Jeff Kowalczyk's play during the streak has drawn comparison to John Starks of the New York Knicks! Runnin' Nutlipp (6-2) has crept back into the playoffs hunt due to a six game winning string.

The Sleeper's (3-4) may live up to their nickname in the M/W post season. They added Amed Field to a lineup that has been underachieving all year.

PLAYOFF PICTURE: The playoffs are approaching but the format is still a little foggy. SILC is leaning towards allowing the top five teams from each division to advance. Post season play on T/T will be a dog fight, while the playoff bracket on M/W is shaping up to be a dog show.

It will take a 7-3 or maybe a 6-4 record to make the top five on the march to the entire league together. Take the top ten squads on the basis of record regardless of which night they're played. That would insure the best ten and reward teams who have played a difficult schedule.

THAT'S THE SPIRIT: Something had to give when 0-5 Delta Chi B blasted with the wireless Da' Bricks Sunday night. The two cellar dwellers batted back-and-forth until DDP's Willie "Screesh" Bureicz assumed the role of hero. Bureicz hit the game-winning shot with :20 left to give DDP their first "W" of the season, 31-30.

HOWARD VS. SILC: The verdict is in on Jonathan Howard of Ruff House. He received a two-game suspension for being ejected from a game against the X-Men last week. Howard was back in action Sunday and scored as many points in a victory over Death Rho as he had technically last week.

CB'S SOLUTION SCOOCH by Craig Berosh

T/T and some worthy teams are going to get snubbed. If the playoffs started this week, Sudden Imp- pact, one of the best teams in the entire league, at 5-3 would not be invited to the big dance. On the other hand, a team with just three or four wins is likely to qualify on M/W! CB's solution. SILC should

Recent moves could finally have Jets flying in the right direction

Has Leon Hess finally had enough? Enough of his New York Jets being one of the least respected in the league; enough of them playing second fiddle to the New York Giants in the metropolitan area; enough of his team just not getting anywhere year after year?

Judging from the moves that the Jets made this week, the answer to the questions above is an emphatic "YES!"

These two players have six Super Bowl rings between them. They both bring leadership and work ethics that are unquestionable. More importantly, they bring reputations with them that give the Jets an instant dose of credibility.

The Jets have suddenly taken over the headlines in what is ordinaril March Madness time and with good reason. Hess and general manager Dick Steinberg sent a message to the Patrons, headed by Bill Parcells, have the first pick), there are other defensive studs for Steinberg and company to choose from. Regardless of who New England and Seattle pick, the Jets are guaranteed to come away with at least one of the top three defensive players out of the college pool.

Now the Jets are going after the free agent of all free agents, former Philadelphia Eagles' defensive end Reggie White. There's only one problem: half of the teams in the league want the top defensive lineman in football, too. Why should he come to the Jets?

Well, it all comes full-circle. The Jets have now improved their reputation. Just because Lott and Marshall are now Jets doesn't mean White will want to become one. The Jets also made it known that they are willing to pay more than market value for players as they take advantage of the new free agent system.

Last season the Jets took major steps backwards after making the playoffs in 1991. The Jets are guaranteed to come away with at least one of the top three defensive players out of the college pool.

But it can’t hurt either.

Rumor has it that a 4-year, $14 million contract is what White years. For the sake of Jet fans everywhere, Mr. Hess should be willing to open his huge wallet a bit more.

Could you imagine a defensive front of White, Marshall and Jeff Lageman? Add to that Lott with budding star Brian Washington at safety and James Hasty and Mike Britin at the respective corners and you’ve created the core for an NFC-type defense.

And let’s not forget that the Jets have the third pick in this April’s NFL Draft. They’re currently drooling over Florida State offensive tackle Marvin Jones. If Jones is taken with one of the first two picks (it’s especially possible because the Patrons, headed by Bill Parcells, have the first pick), there are other defensive studs for Steinberg and company to choose from. Regardless of who New England and Seattle pick, the Jets are guaranteed to come away with at least one of the top three defensive players out of the college pool.

Last season the Jets took major steps backwards after making the playoffs in 1991. The Jets went undefeated in pre-season in 1992, providing false hope that team was steadily progressing. Things fell apart. Week in and week out the Jets found different and more amazing ways to lose football games. Then came the Dennis Byrd tragedy to further compound a disastrous season.

So, after the misery of last season, this attempt at an image change comes as a breath of fresh air for Jet fans.

Building with defense is the way to go and the Jets finally seem to realize that. But they’ll need the cooperation of recent flops Blair Thomas and Browning Nagle on the offensive side of the ball to become legitimate contenders.

Calling the shots....

The Pernell Whitaker-Buddy McGirt fight on Saturday night may not have lived up to billing, but it was the fight of the year so far. Well, there hasn’t been much to choose from and anything’s better than Riddick Bowe-Michael Dokes. Speaking of Bowe: if the fights Jesse Ferguson in May as proposed, fans should boycott. Enough of this crap is enough already. Ferguson was 19-9 before he upset Ray Mercer, who was overrated anyway. He doesn’t deserve a shot at the heavyweight title just for one win over a never-was. Politics are ruining the sport, as but as long as people pay at the gate and for pay-per-view, promoters will continue to provide fans with mismatches after mismatches.

Let’s get Bowe in the ring with Lennox Lewis and put a stop to this nonsense. Have a nice break.
Expectations are high for MSC baseball

 Pallino, Micucci and Yocum will lead deep, talented squad

by Brian Falzarano

Another year, another set of expectations. Every year coaches tell anyone who will listen that their team will do well and compete for a championship of some kind. A coach's ears ring with this refrain that his team has seven returning starters from a 10-14-1 team that finished third in the NJAC and finished second in the Mid-Atlantic Regional to the eventual national champion, William Paterson. For head coach Norm Schoenig, those descriptions are unequivocally true. "We have a lot of depth this year," notes the sixth-year coach. "I expect to go to the regionals (the Mid-Atlantic Regional tournament) and the College World Series," he said of his team, which is ranked seventh in Baseball America's Division III poll.

However, Schoenig does not go to battle without a capable army. This year will provide an influx of veteran upperclassmen. This year will provide an influx of incoming freshmen to go to battle without a capable army. The "infield of dreams" (all five of his wrestlers had a shot at a national championship at 177 lbs. last year) plus the team's enthusiasm and plenty of offensive spark. First baseman John Pallino, a junior co-captain (384, five home runs, 53 RBI in '92), was looked to as a vital source of support. "John is one of the purest and most disciplined hitters in Division III, who will help lead us to a regional championship," said Schoenig.

Along with Pallino, the double play combination of sophomores Mike Murphy and Tony Martinez, the NJAC Rookie of the Year in '92, helped MSC enter the Division III lead in twin Killings with 47. Third baseman Rob DiLauro, a junior who can play three positions, will handle the hot corner and leadoff. Senior Brian Sasso and sophomore Jason Scavalla will be key backups.

Catching is another area of depth. Sophomore Mike Micucci (50 RBIs, leading all Division III catchers in '92), an outstanding defensive catcher, will anchor the backstop. Sophomore Jason Tenerbrom, a transfer from Division I Rutgers University, will provide more than adequate support when Micucci is called upon to play third base on occasion.

The outfield is yet another area of great depth. Senior co-captain Joe Critelli (311, team lead­ ing six home runs in '92) will again man right field, while freshmen Tom Veliss and Chris Roof will be in center field and left field, respectively. Sophomore Ralph Yezza will be the designated hitter. Key returnees include Dan Massaro in the outfield and junior Harold Van Dunk at designated hitter.

In all, this is what you, the fans, should look for from the Red Hawks this season. You can expect stellar defense, timely hitting, and excellent pitching. While it will be rough sailing in the NJAC, with powerhouse schools as defending national champion William Paterson, Rutgers Newark, Rowan, and Trenton State. It is so tough that, as Schoenig pointed out, "A team can lose four or five losses in the conference and still win the league, as well as the regionals."

The only thing that will hinder this team will be the lack of execution. Without execution, "Expectations won't mean realizations (of our goals)," noted Schoenig. However, if MSC is going along with adept, intelligent play, and the team jells before or during the NJAC play-offs, their season may very well end in Battle Creek, Michigan, sight of the Division III College World Series.

Red Hawk Road Trips

- The MSC softball and baseball teams will hit the road over Spring Break to play in Florida and California respectively. According to the schedules, 17 games will be played in all.
