Wide area network of computers and resource sharing are in the future of higher education

by Linda Naata

In an exclusive interview for The Montclarion last week, N.J. Chancellor of Higher Education Edward Goldberg said that by the 21st century, at least some portion of Montclair State College students could be studying at home via computer from faculty members around the globe. The chancellor explained why colleges need to consider the controversial “resource sharing” strategy, and said that hope for quality higher education system in the future depends on intense planning and an increase in public advocacy for funding.

“I see quite a different higher education system in the year 2000,” said Goldberg, who feels that technology is forcing a change in the way that as many as 20 percent of students can learn by computer from home, they could access the resources of institutions worldwide: University of California at Berkeley, Oxford or even Cairo University, said the chancellor.

“Some place there is that professor who in past years may have come to Montclair State College as a visiting professor, but they had to come physically to MSC. Now they can come, even today, electronically,” said Goldberg, pointing out that the college would only need to purchase one-third of the faculty member’s time.

“If that was done on a somewhat widespread basis at MSC, we would have a radical change at MSC. In fact, it may be one of the things that Montclair State University will be doing in the year 2000,” said the chancellor.

To Goldberg, part of the key to enhancing the future lies in intense planning today—“with nothing ruled out to start.” His ideas, along with strategies being developed in planning at both state and institutional levels, will shape the vision of higher education. Goldberg said that financial pressure in the 90’s and beyond the year 2000 will force schools to continue to re-arrange their priorities, and called N.J. higher education an “under-funded, under-built system” made of institutions which “may no longer aspire to be all things to all people.”

“We need to seriously explore alternatives to what we currently do. The reason we need to explore radical change is to make sure that, with whatever resources we get, we deliver the best and widest set of services to students,” Goldberg said.

The chancellor believes that a quality system of higher education in the year 2000 is not possible without some facet of “resource sharing.” Resource sharing is a controversial idea that calls for institutions to share administrative and student services, equipment and even faculty. People on campus have been concerned over how it would work, since jobs, student services, and campus life as a whole...

ABC News political correspondent speaks at MSC
by Dan Hansen

Jeff Greenfield, political correspondent for ABC News, shared his views on the relationship between the media and politics, as the second Nicholas Martini Center for Public Policy lecturer last Thursday night.

The speech was presented in the Student Center Ballrooms attended by approximately 500 people, including faculty members, students, and others.

Greenfield was introduced by Dr. William Berlin, Director of the Nicholas Martini Center. He then went on to say that there is a general belief that the way you appear on the media and when it was on. If you were not home you missed it. When satellites were placed in orbit, they broke the monopoly that the networks had on the media. Today, with cable, VCRs, satellite dishes, and other conveniences of televisions, people are discussing things on the air that they would not have dreamed of years earlier.

These things have created a "new" media which does not confine a candidate to just the three networks. In the 1988 campaign the average sound bite for a major party candidate was nine and a half seconds. Candidates in the 1992 campaign became this new media after learning people were home, but had different viewing habits from the previous elections.

Clinton was able to benefit from this media because he is comfortable with this change in the media. His being on television is similar to Franklin Roosevelt's fireside chats.

Greenfield feels that Clinton is no different in formal news settings and feels that he gave bad acceptance speech at the Democratic Convention, a poor inaugural speech and broke every rule in the book by ad-libbing one.

"On one hand we are arguing for more media. In the old days, politicians went to the taverns, the church socials, picnics, etc. If the voters were home in front of their radios and TV's, that was where the candidates were."

The networks controlled what was on and when it was on. If you were not home you missed it. When satellites were placed in orbit, they broke the monopoly that the networks had on the media. Today, with cable, VCRs, satellite dishes, and other conveniences of televisions, people are discussing things on the air that they would not have dreamed of years earlier.

Greenfield said, "We know that just the president and the chancellor cannot effectively help in gaining the resources they need," said Goldberg.

"We need help from one of those million people." In an open letter dated March 1993, to the students, parents and alumni of New Jersey colleges and universities, the chancellor asked for assistance in getting legislation approved in coming months that says, "will offer protected funds to students, institutions and New Jersey's economy, both now and into the next century."

If the legislation is not enacted, Goldberg says, we will have no one to blame but ourselves.

Welcome, loyal readers, to another captivating installment of PROPHET BIGG! Well, I have quite a treat for you this week. While the majority of you were enjoying a nice spring break, the Prophet was hard at work. During the break, I went to Manhattan to attend the screening of Benny & Joon, MGM’s latest film which stars Johnny Depp, Mary Stuart Masterson and Aidan Quinn. The film was directed by Jeremiah Chechik who’s other major film success was National Lampoon’s Christmas Vacation.

After watching the film, which, by the way, was both funny and entertaining, low and behold who should walk in but Johnny Depp, Mary Stuart Masterson, Aidan Quinn and Jeremiah Chechik! They took seats at a table in front of the screens room and took some questions...

Q. What’s it like to break out of the “Teen Idol” status?

Johnny Depp - Well, it’s important for me to break any labels, any names they give you to sell a product.

Q. How did you prepare for the character of Joon?

Mary Stuart Masterson - I had to base what I did on a fact finding mission about mental illness. I did the research one has to do, but it was interesting trying to fit that into the context of the story without getting into the downside. And also getting into this world of the way she sees things was really interesting to me. I discovered I’d rather see the world more like her.

Q. You did a lot of painting in the role of Joon. Have you continued to paint, even as only a hobby?

Mary Stuart Masterson - It’s definitely not something that would, uh, sell. (Laughter) I would not say any galleries are barking up my tree. I painted a little for the film, but I didn’t learn how and study.

Q. What do you look for in scripts?

Johnny Depp - Well, you read a lot of stuff. Formula scripts, ya know, the same old stuff over and over. Usually, it’s something I respond to. Like Sam. (Depp’s Character in Benny & Joon) It was a great opportunity to be totally irresponsible.

Jeremiah Chechik - Type casting. (Laughter)

Johnny Depp - Just sort of a chance to bounce off the wall for a little while. Have fun.

Q. Did you watch any Buster Keaton films to prepare for the role of Sam?

Johnny Depp - Yeah. I watched a whole lot of Buster Keaton’s movies to study him. (Pause) I don’t know what else to say. (Laughter)

Q. What life experiences in your own life have brought you to play such strong, rebellious, not in the norm roles?

Mary Stuart Masterson - Private school. (Laughter) Johnny?

Johnny Depp - I’m damaged. (Laughter) I’m ill. I don’t know.

Mary Stuart Masterson - I think when something is predictable, I don’t get it. So when something comes along that’s interesting and specific, got a lot of colors to it, that gets me all excited and I want to be involved. And in this case, just look at these people. (Motions to her fellow panel members). This is a good reason to spend a few months acting.
Save America's Forests

by Carol Palledino

"Save the Rainforests" is a phrase which we have all become familiar with over the past several years. Concern over the depletion of the rainforests has received much publicity. An all out campaign to save the forests against clearcutting has been launched because it is not only the trees that are disappearing, but an entire ecological system.

This campaign is promising, but what about the forests in our own country? Surprisingly enough, our forests face a similar fate, and are actually being destroyed as rapidly as the rainforests in Brazil.

America was once a land of immense forests. In fact, less than 5% of the nation's original old growth forests still exist today. Of the few that have survived, only 1% are protected from the logging industry and the rest are scheduled for elimination.

Who would allow such practice? Private timber companies are given permission to cut in our National forests by the U.S. Forest Service. Taxpayer money subsidizes their clearcutting, the main technique used for logging on our public lands. This technique is harmful to the natural biodiversity of the region on which the forests depend for survival. In many logging operations which employ clearcutting, as much as 66% of the wood is left as debris or residue, a phenomenal waste of our precious resources. Another problem clearcutting creates is soil erosion. In a healthy forest, 3% of rain is lost to surface runoff whereas 60% is washed away in a clearcut area. Most of the nutrients and topsoil are washed away, making it impossible for remaining vegetation to grow back. Meanwhile, this runoff deposits itself in streams, a direct cause to the declining number of salmon.

One "solution" to these problems has been to replant tree farms. These even-age farms consist of the monoculture which we have all become familiar with. The annual growth of monoculture will not be able to provide the habitat the environmentalists and the timber industry argue that protecting the forests will cause unemployment and accuse the environmentalists of living nature more than people. What they don't tell you is that mechanization and exportation of whole unprocessed logs is by far the larger cause of unemployment within the industry.

Or that private lands are not being managed for timber because it's cheaper to log on public lands.

A resolution to these conflicts has been proposed by Congressman John Bryant (D-TX) in the form of The Forest Biodiversity and Clearcutting Prohibition Act. This bill would end clearcutting and be replaced by a process called selection management where the removal of trees would be periodic and occur only in small groups. No large openings in the forest would cut and no more than 30% of the forest community would be destroyed over 30 years.

This proposal is ideal. Not only is selection management more job intensive, native biodiversity can be maintained, soil erosion will cease and the overall integrity of National forests will be upheld.

The time to act is now, before the few remnant of our forests are gone forever. If you care about the environment, endangered species, the American work industry, then you should write to your Representatives and ask them to support the Forest Biodiversity and Clearcutting Prohibition Act.

Green Appreciation

by Tim Lawton

I remember more by feeling than by actually back to when I was three and four. Those warmer times of year when I went for walks with my great-grandfather and played in my backyard. He and my mom tended to the garden and here and there I would pull a few weeds thinking I was helping. I covered the garden and every side of the house. Our yard was wild with flamboyant reds, pinks, gold violet, and just about every other color in the spectrum that crossed our suburban plot. Rose bushes were a specialty of my great-grandfather, he would prune and care for them so they burst with blooms every year.

I liked to take me to his friends house up the street on our way to the cemetery for walks. Our street was a tunnel under the canopy of maps he planted some fifty years before. They stood tall, gently swaying in the warm breeze rustling their leaves.

I remember the wooden gate we went through to get to the cemetery. We walked around talking and enjoying the scenery. Then we rested under a tree. He used to tell me that the trees are alive, that they know. Do not pick their bark or leaves and do not snap their branches. He would explain that they could feel pain and these parts of them were just like my arms and skin were part of me. Then some days in the cool shade we'd fall asleep.

At 92 I figure he must have known a lot about what really matters in life. But now the street is barren except for the occasional tree. The bumps in the sidewalk where the kids jumped their bikes have been smoothed. They cut the parts of the trunk that oozed over the sidewalk away. The trees can look whitened during the summer and their roots are all covered by tar and concrete. They fight to get enough water in that strip of grass between the sidewalk and curb. Circular scars show where the trees have lost branches to make way for the wires that span across the road.

The temperature soars in the hot summer sun beating off the sweltering pave. It's hard to look at the houses reflecting the sun rays. Deep burrows and rotted stumps mark where most of my grandpa's trees were. Yet some are still left. Many are sick and their branches, mainly at the top, are turning black and becoming sparse. The neighbors know well the remaining icons he planted nearly 65 years ago, but they are just getting used to the strangely young saplings I put in these past last two years.

Only by my part of the street does it ever seem to get any greener, yet still things aren't quite the same. The cacophony emanating from route 80 at the end of the block has kind of taken the soothing quality from the rustle of the leaves. I wish more people could know and feel the life that is dying within these trees.

FOREST GLOSSARY

Clearcutting - the method of logging a forest so that all or most of the trees are cut down immediately or within a few years.

Even-age farming - plots of clearcut land are replanted with monoculture, all the same age. There is no diversity of life.

Biodiversity - a variety of living organisms

Selection Management - the method of cutting only individual or small groups of trees in a healthy natural forest at periodic intervals.

Science now can only be considered a fraction science since the extinction of plants, bugs and animals. We will never know what we missed, what we altered or what we could have been if we only walked slowly and listened to the forest and the life that is in it, you will be forced to concede something must be done for humanities sake. Did you know they found a tree in Cambodia which showed promising pharmaceutical benefits for the HIV infection only to go back and discover it was no longer there? And what about the Yew tree in the Pacific Northwest which for years was considered a trash tree by the timber industry but is now found to contain within its bark the most promising cure for ovarian cancer?

Please get involved. Let your representative know what you think. You put them in office, you pay their salary and they are there to serve you. Don't be intimidated, just write a letter. Our National forests, subsidized by taxpayers money are being clearcut at unsustaintable rates. It is estimated that if we continue at these rates, the mere 5% of wilderness areas now left will be gone within 10 years.

Registration Deadline: April 25

This announcement has been sponsored by the Economics and Finance Society of Montclair State, a Class II Organization of the SGA.
In this corner, Professor Bigg! In this corner, Johnny Depp! Gentlemen, you want a good, clean fight...
Congratulations, can you dig it?

The votes are in and MSC has a new SGA President, James “Appetite” Cotter. As we all hope, this upcoming year will be one full of profitable changes for MSC as well as the fun of seeing Appetite’s promise come full circle with our school, “spinning like a top.”

This year a field of four candidates entered the race for SGA President. Any one of the candidates could have won the race in any given year. Each had a unique set of abilities, talent and experience to bring to the office. Richard Kunze is the reigning SGA Vice president with four years of SGA experience under his belt. Sam Rock is a three year veteran of the SGA and a member of a handful of Class One organizations. George Calle, an executive board member of The Montclarion and former SGA legislator, took a Ross Perot stance, promising the SGA presidency a badly needed breath of fresh air. And finally, there’s James “Appetite” Cotter - with his huge 529 vote mandate, he surely has the clout to fulfill “spinning top” mandate.

With the new liberal views descending upon our fair country with the four year reign of Clinton, Appetite seems to be a logical progression for our campus. He stated in his campaign of his “working man” ethics, of being their for the students and not planning on inhabiting the ‘office’ as much as former presidents. The Montclarion wishes him congratulations.

With Natalee Vaccaro as Vice President, James Henaghan as Treasurer, Liz Valandingham as Secretary and Michael Costa as Board of Trustees Student Alternate, change seems to be in the air for our campus. Perhaps, now with alcohol inhabiting the Rat, we as a campus, with the help of our newly elected leaders, can move forward and bring more progressive changes to our campus. Changes with parking, the cafeterias, and one word - Bohn. The students of MSC need a better selection of activities for those of us stranded every weekend on campus; more movies in the ballrooms, speakers directed toward college students. In summary, we look towards our new leaders to lead MSC students in a direction we, as a campus, chose to go.

Congratulations to all the candidates and good luck in the coming year.

Grab the bread, my ex-wife's got the mayo

So I'm sitting in my soon to be former apartment, with my soon to be X-wife, watching one of those eyewitness, candid camera, better than the real thing television shows, when a news story came on about those 49 whales that have purposefully swam ashore and beached themselves. My soon to be X-wife goes, "Boo-hoo, look at those poor things, this is so sad!"

A dramatic rescue operation begins to unfold as thousands of people race to the seashore to help build shelters for the whales, sprinkle sea water on their backs, talk whale-talk with them and eventually coax them back into the ocean. The army even pitches in. The whole time people are crying and talking about how this experience has changed their lives. My wife just sits there going, "Boo-hoo, isn't that the saddest thing you ever heard?"

I say, "SAD, you and this whole @-@^&-ing planets gone nuts. A bunch of big fat fish with tiny brains can't figure out the difference between sand and water, oh what poor creatures, let's save the big fat dumb fish, cry and run home and eat big fat dumb tunafish sandwiches. Remember tunafish! They're another big fat dumb fish, they just happen to taste great with mayonnaise. You know what would happen if 49 of them decided to beach themselves, thousands of people would race towards the ocean with hundreds of loaves of rye bread, gallons of mayo, and countless Vadalia onions, all of them screaming, "Lunch!"

Don't pass up Passover

What makes whales so special that they reduce people to tears by doing something as stupid as trying to swim in sand? By the way, do you know what type of whales they were? Killer whales, Yep! Those are the same whales on that nature video that cost $49.95 and shows the best nature highlights of animal eating animals, and you know what our precious killer whales are doing in that video, they're eating baby seals. Remember them? They are those little dopey guys we used to splash ink on so big budy tuna-eating Lumber Jacks wouldn't club them with their Louis­ville Sluggers.

Save the Whales! Save the Whales! Give 'a Hoot, Don't Pollute! Nile Iqra' Try Ted Bundy!!!

My wife is leaving me, she says I'm too high strung. Grab the bread, my ex-wife's got the mayo.

Reflections
by Lisa Cohn

During the month of April, the Jewish people around the world will be celebrating the holiday of Passover (Pesach). It is a holiday filled with traditions, as are most Jewish holidays (and each family has its own set of traditions). If you aren't Jewish, you may not understand the holiday or the traditions. Let me explain.

This year, Passover starts on April 5 and continues until the 13th (the date varies because we use the Hebrew calendar - the holiday always starts on the 5th of Nisan). It commemorates the Exodus of the Jews from slavery in Egypt to freedom in Israel. To summarize the story: Moses managed, with divine help, to convince Egypt's Pharaoh to free Jews from their slavery in Egypt and then led them to freedom in Israel. If you're interested in the details, you can find them in any "Old Testament" text.

First, why do we call it Passover? While Moses was trying to convince the Pharaoh of Egypt to let the Jews go (not an easy task, we were a source of free labor for all those pyramids and whatever), God helped by sending ten plagues on the Egyptian people. The last plague was the slaying of their firstborn sons (I believe this was in retaliation for something the Egyptians had done to the Jews). Jews smeared lamb's blood on the doors of their homes so that the Angel of Death would recognize these as Jewish homes and "pass over" them. Draw your own conclusions, I'm just explaining the traditions.

It is general knowledge that Jews are not allowed to eat bread during Passover. That's not entirely accurate; we can't eat anything that has grain in it. Instead we eat matzoh, or unleavened bread. It looks like a big cracker, and tastes like cardboard. There is a reason why we are supposed to eat matzoh. When the Jewish people finally had the permission of the Pharaoh to leave Egypt, they didn't wait for him to change his mind. The Jews grabbed whatever they needed and ran for it. They were in such a rush that the bread they wound up eating matzoh for most of the trip.

The first two nights of Passover are special. A seder is a traditional dinner with family and friends. We eat certain foods, and keep certain traditions. One of these traditions is reading the Haggadah ("narration"), which is a running commentary on Jewish history up to and including the Exodus from Egypt. Most Haggadahs include a step by step list of what rituals should be done during the seder (for the less observant Jews who don't really know) and include popular folk songs to conclude the seder.

During the seder, there are various rituals using wine (grape juice for children). The youngest child sings the Four Questions in Hebrew, which is taught in Hebrew school. All these questions are asking: "Why is this night different from all other nights?"

When the seder is over, one of the adults wraps a piece of matzoh in a napkin and hides it. My father always came up with some unusual hiding spots, usually behind one of the pictures on the wall. The child who finds it wins a dollar, at least in our family.

In the past, some fanatics have used Passover as an excuse to massacre Jews. In the 12th Century, we were accused of using the blood of Christian children to bake matzohs. This blood libel caused the massacres of quite a few Jewish communities and gave rise to the legend of the Golem (a big, gentle stone creature, shaped like a man. He was created by a Rabbi to protect the Jewish population from their persecutors).

I am very concerned about the way in which your paper is covering the SGA elections. A college newspaper should be objective and fair, but your paper is subjective and biased. Although you may give the candidates equal space, you have not given them an equal chance. I was very impressed by the two editors of The Montclarion that there is hostility directed towards the current SGA president and executive board. This is evident through constant coverage of the room 1121 issue. In addition, endorsement of your own editor is an apparent nepotism. Your paper should be embarrassed by this obvious attempt to persuade the student body.

Unfortunately, The Montclarion has become the Enquirer of our school by printing the general opinions of your staff.

The Montclarion reaches out to the students and faculty of MSC. It should try to do its best to make the members of this campus aware of the factual happenings and events. Unfortunately, The Montclarion has become the Enquirer of our school by printing the general opinions of your staff.

I hope the members of your organization realize that the April 1 edition is general dogma and disappointment to the hard working leaders that are running for the most powerful positions on this campus. The students who are voting should disregard the attempts of The Montclarion to influence their votes. I urge you to listen to debates and speak directly with the candidates on student concerns.

Editor's Note

Firstly, there were two editors of The Montclarion running for SGA president as well as one popular columnist. The three staff members running for office voted in the endorsement process (although not for the position they sought).

Secondly, while The Montclarion appreciates your concerns for the general practices of the student newspaper, we would like to educate you as to the editorial capacity of this and all newspapers. Editorial cartoons, opinion columns and the endorsement of political candidates are all forms of an editorial. An editorial is, by definition, the "general opinions" of a newspaper's staff. This opinion is arrived at by a vote of the staff members. That you do not personally agree with the editorial content of this or any other newspaper does not necessarily constitute a "disgrace and disappointment." Should any member of MSC's student body be interested in contributing to the editorial content of The Montclarion, they are welcome to join our organization.

The Montclarion would like to point out to its readers that Ms. Merkel works as a secretary in the SGA office. -K.C.

UNFORTUNATELY, THIS IS WHERE PEOPLE ARE PUTTING TOO MANY RETIREMENT DOLLARS.

Every year, a lot of people make a huge mistake on their taxes. They don't take advantage of tax deferral and wind up sending Uncle Sam some money they could be saving for retirement.

Fortunately, that's a mistake you can easily avoid with TIAA-CREF SRAs. SRAs not only save your current tax-bite, they offer a remarkably easy way to build retirement income—especially for the "extra" that your regular pension and Social Security benefits may not cover. Because your contributions are made in before-tax dollars, you pay less taxes now. And since all earnings on your SRA are tax-deferred, as well, the money you don't send to Washington works even harder for you. Down the road, that can make a dramatic difference in your quality of life.

What else makes SRAs so special? A range of allocation choices—from the highest teacher quality to the guaranteed security of TIAA to the diversified investment accounts of CREF's variable annuity—all backed by the nation's number one retirement system.

Why off the chance for a more happy returns.

Lindo and Brame expect to pick up the pace in the outdoor season

Lindo: Hopefully we, as a team, can develop an atmosphere of winning that will allow the team to maintain the necessary confidence needed to reach the Nationals as an entire team, instead of just a few individuals.

Brame: Sometimes you set goals that are based on raw potential and you forget about the dedication and discipline needed to mold that potential into victories on the track. Sometimes we ran just to get by in practice. In order for us to reach our goals, it is important to do more than just get by.

Both the men's and women's teams did a good job just getting by at the Nationals with Ruiz, Stevens and the men's 1600 meter relay team all running superb races. Ruiz took third in the 55 meters with a time of 6.44 and finished second in the long jump with a mark of 24 feet 6 inch. Stevens ran a 49.20 for 400 meters with a time of 49.20 to round out another excellent season. And the 1600 relay team took second in their event. Overall, the men's team took fourth place at the Nationals.

Lindo: Seeing the whole team reach the Nationals together.

Brame: The attitude and the focus to be there in practice so we could build from there.

Lindo: If you could say one thing to your teammates about the upcoming season, what would it be?

Lindo: No one's head, including Shantay's and my own, was in the sand when it came to training.

Brame: The attitude and the focus to be there in practice so we could build from there.

Lindo: I think if you think led to the inconsistency shown by the women's team this season?

Lindo: No one's head, including Shantay's and my own, was in the sand when it came to training.

Narrator: Do you think you could have been victorious in the 55 meters?

Shantay Brame: I think I was just content to be there and the team did a reasonable job just seemed to follow me.

The thrill of victory and the agony of a timeout

A thrill is defined as something that causes a sudden sharp feeling of excitement. Dean Smith and his North Carolina Tar Heels experienced this on Monday night when they won a National Championship by defeating the Michigan Wolverines, 77-71 at The Louisiana Superdome.

After being dubbed by most observers as the least likely of the Final Four teams to win it all, North Carolina, led by sophomore guard Donald Williams and senior forward George Lynch proved its doubters wrong.

There always seemed to be a team that was supposed to beat the Tar Heels. First it was Kansas in the Final Four. Again North Carolina responded with an, "I think not!"

Lastly, it was alymghty Michigan. There’s no way the Fab Five would be denied for the second straight year, right? "Guess again," said the determined Tar Heels. Atlast, 11 years later, Dean Smith finally won his second National Championship.

Agony is defined as the feeling of intense pain of the mind or body. That was certainly the feeling in Wolverineland on Monday night. Chris Webber’s attempted time out call with :11 remaining in the game crushed the hopes and dreams of Michigan. True, Michigan would not have had the opportunity to win what every college basketball player dreams of. Whether people were yelling at him to call timeout is irrelevant. He should’ve known what to do in that situation.

Actually, Webber’s blunder served justice because he walked on the other end of the floor before he crossed midcourt and called a timeout in the corner.

Webber shouldn’t fret over this too much because if this is the worst thing that happens to him, he will have led a charmed existence. As for North Carolina, the thrill of victory will not last too much longer. Soon enough it will be back to the drawing board for next season. But at least they had what the song says, One Shining Moment.

MSC (9-2, 2-0 NJAC) won a squeaker over Rutgers Newark, Monday at Pittser Field. Rob DiLaurenzo started things off in the eighth with a double and moved to third on shortstop Tony Martinez’s sacrifice bunt. Senior to three games.

Senior rightfielder Joe Critelli, who was 0 for 3 at that point, singled home DiLaurenzo with the game winning run in the eighth. Then Critelli stole second and came around on John Pallino’s (3 for 4) single, a stolen second and came around on John Pallino’s (3 for 4) single, a

The question was rather obvious. Would a 10 day layoff between games help knock the MSC softball team out of a groove that had allowed the Red Hawks to win eight of their first nine games?

The answer was even more obvious. An emphatic no!

The way MSC has been playing, opponents can expect similar showers in the future.

Despite having their eight-game winning streak ended by Georgian Court in the first game of a doubleheader on Tuesday, the Red Hawks are currently 10-1 and eager to start up conference play.

MSC won the tournament for the first time since its inception four years ago. The Red Hawks pounded out 28 hits as they defeated defeated Bridgewater State, 10-2 in the first game and edged Cortland State, 8-7 in the final of the Classic.

The tournament marked the first time that softball games were played on the turf of Sprague Field. While the experience was understandably different, the games were not heavily affected by the turf. Other than just a couple of odd bounces, "the tournament on the turf" went rather smoothly.

MSC returned to The Quarry Fields for the Georgian Court games.
