MSC may lose winter session but summer vacation may be longer

by Michael Rennie

MSC students may lose the option of taking winter session courses, but could enjoy a longer summer vacation.

Extending the summer break by one week and shortening the winter break by the same amount is just one of the issues being examined by the calendar and scheduling committee.

Examining the soundness of a three-week consolidated course and a declining winter session registration are a few of the reasons the program is being re-evaluated.

Jessica Bieri, S.G.A. legislator and member of the calendar committee, said that the school year runs too far into the summer compared to most colleges and this is making it harder for students to gain summer employment. Bieri also stated that the idea of an entire semester of study being crammed into a three-week period is what committee members have termed as being "pedagogically unsound."

The proposal also seems to have the support of a majority vote by the students. As part of the S.G.A. elections ballot in April the question of eliminating the winter session courses, but could enjoy a longer summer vacation. This change would not take place over night," he said. "If students here would like to see the program continue but would like to see a wider variety of classes offered. Anna Kovacs, a senior in the same major said, "Many students are only looking at getting out a week early in May." Kovacs would also like to see the program continue.

The main function of the calendar committee is to set the academic calendar for the following school year. There are many issues to consider such as which holidays the school will observe and specific start and finish dates for classes and exams. Each decision must take into account possible ramifications. Any one change may affect dormitory check-in dates, which will affect the maintenance department, food service, campus security, etc.

The calendar committee must now write a recommendation to the college senate, the senate will vote on the recommendation and pass it on to President Reid. Reid will then bring it before the executive committee for final approval.

Mardi Gras celebration at MSC

by Melissa Myers

The first Mardi Gras celebration will be held this weekend, April 24-25 at the college Amphitheater. The event is an attempt to cut apathy on campus by promoting harmony and unity through an educational yet entertaining atmosphere, said Sandra Garcia of the Latin American Student Organization.

The weekend's events will run from 12:00 pm to 7:00 pm and are designed to be entertaining as well as educational. Saturday's events will include: jugglers, mariachi bands, a Broadway Musical review, an international fashion show, Latinísimo, performances by OSAU dance troops, a gospel choir and other local bands. While on Sunday Class One Concerts will be sponsoring performances by Diable Planet, Sweet Lizard Illet, and D'Influence.

Organizations such as Student Intramural Leisure Council will be sponsoring intramural activities while the Greek Organizations will be sponsoring booths, tables and participating in lip sync and step shows. Aldan Food Service will also be there with refreshments.

The Mardi Gras: Multiculturalism At Its Finest originated in the newest subcommittee formed in the Student Government Association known as the Multicultural Advisory Committee chaired by Ritu Chib. This committee was formed in response to the growing need for students to have a place to bring this problem and suggestions concerning racial issues that arise on campus.

"The Mardi Gras is the start of a change in the student body as far as apathy is concerned and will also bring a new positive awareness to what multiculturalism really means," said Garcia.

Earth Day celebrated at MSC

by Kathy Garcia

The MSC Conservation Club held its 1993 Earthday celebrations on Wednesday, April 21 at the Student Center Mall. The event was part of a weeklong celebration of Earth Day which included environmental speakers, campus cleanup, and petition signing.

There was no set theme to the celebration. Instead students included as many different environmental issues as possible into the fair. One of the main goals of the day was to get students to write letters to state and federal representatives.

The Endangered Species Act was the only petition being passed out at the celebration. Other petitions included were, one against the Mitsubishi Corporation and its affiliation with companies that are destroying the rainforests; the other against companies that contribute to environmental organizations.

Other petitions included were, one against the Body Shop, The New Jersey School of Conservation, Rain Forest Relief, New Jersey Animal Rights, and PSEG.

1992 yearbook release delayed, to be available in May and sent to ’92 seniors

by David Ecker

The 1992 edition of the Montclair State College La Campana Yearbook should have been available last fall, but due to the delay caused by the problems of last year’s staff, it will be available in May and sent to the 1992 seniors, due to the efforts of the 1993 staff, who in addition to handling last year’s work, is ahead of schedule with the 1993 edition, said Steve Sebok, who in addition to handling last year’s staff, it will be available in May and sent to the 1992 seniors, due to the efforts of the 1993 staff, who in addition to handling last year’s work, is ahead of schedule with the 1993 edition.

The event has been publicized on our campus only in an attempt to minimize the threat of outside problems and to concentrate the effort towards our campus and students. The necessary precautions for extra security have been taken.

The Mardi Gras is not serving to replace Montclair’s annual Spring Carnival, which has been canceled this year due to several problems that occurred at last year’s carnival. The events scheduled to take place are designed to have a calming effect opposed to the high level of excitement a carnival produces.

Do you think the FBI handled the crisis in Waco, Texas properly?

Yes-but I think such extreme action should have been taken sooner.

I think they did the best they could with the situation. The people were brainwashed and really believed that guy, so the FBI could not just force the people out if they didn't want to go.

I loved my 75 VW Bus. Its dead now. I miss it. Dig that.

Critics always have conflicting opinions, and I am no exception. Well, this time I’m disputing the mighty TV Guide. This week, they are offering the “All-time Best TV,” and being the argumentative little snob that I am, I have to put in my two cents. Here it is: The Couch Potato Update’s All-time Best TV.

Best Sitcom: M*A*S*H. Forgettable, the merry men and women of the 4077th get my vote, and certainly blow most of the junk that’s on TV today out of the water. Cheers runs a close second, but M*A*S*H blended comedy, suspense, frustration, war, and made it all come together.

Best Couch: Hill Street Blues. Hill Street also gets my vote for Best Dramatic Series. It was a remarkable show for the seven seasons it was on, and it did the most gracious thing it could: quit while it was ahead, rather than shifting its writing staff and produce “Bobby comes out of the shower” quality stories. Best Nighttime Talk Show Host: Johnny Carson. Yeah. As if there would be any other choice. He is the indispensible master of the late night, and everyone else will have the horror and humor of having to live up to him and his skin.

Best News Show: 60 Minutes. This one was a tough one. 20/20 is too fluffy, and the only current content in the field (not in the tradition of America’s favorite stopwatch has is Nightline. 60 Minutes remains the leader, and if imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, then CBS must be flattered pink.

Best Variety Show: Saturday Night Live. The Great Expectations developed into a Saturday night mainstay. Numbers notwithstanding, SNL paved the way for many talented comedians, and spawned a legend or two. Baba Wawa, the Coneheads (soon to be a movie, and... John Belushi all made SNL what it was, and, if possible, will have the last laugh.

Best Cartoons: Warner Bros. Looney Tunes. Step aside, Barth. Although introduced as movie shorts, they gradually found their way onto the small screen. Three generations grew up with Bugs and company, and after all these years, the coyote still has yet to catch the road runner. Guess what? We’ll keep waiting.

Best Science Fiction: Star Trek and Star Trek - The Next Generation. Trek purists are screaming, but this one comes as a tie. The original Trek introduced present day political issues, and after we said goodbye to the original cast, we realized that it was happening in the here and now (Remember the episode where two guys were fighting to the death because they had half-black and white skin, but on opposite patterns? Isn’t racism just as stupid?) TNG still presents some issues, but is slicker and less cheesy-looking than the original, thanks to George Lucas’ SPFX company, Industrial Light and Magic. Gene Roddenberry deserves more than just credit for taking us where no man has gone before, he gave us hope that humans aren’t that screwed up.

Welcome, loyal readers, to yet another thrilling installment of PROPHET BIGG! And now, sit back and relax. Let the Prophet take you on a wondrous journey.

• Some of you may remember that last semester I brought to you an interview with George “Spanky” McFarlane of the Little Rascals fame. Well, Spanky called me of late to tell me he’s doing fine. He’s looking forward to doing some personal appearances up this way (He lives in Texas perhaps with Tommy Bond “Buck”) and he’s playing a lot of golf. If you have an organization that would like to sponsor some events, he’d be interested. His phone number is 904-555-1212. Don’t call. He said he would not be available.

• It’s official. Robert DeNiro (Mad Dog and Glory) has signed to play Frankenstein’s monster for Tri-Star. Kenneth Branagh (Henry V, Dead Again) will play the doctor and will also direct. There is a rumor that Francis Ford Coppola (Bram Stoker’s Dracula) will be the producer, but I could not confirm.

• The Montclair College, Upper Montclair, N.J. administration that would like to sponsor a film, without an official title, is in development. I’m looking forward, however, to Geronimo, starring Dances With Wolves and Last of the Mohicans own Wes Studi. Jason Patric/Bush also stars as the opposing cavalry officer. Look for it this summer! And finally, there is talk of an F-Troop film. Where will the madness end?

Summer set to ruin your happy camp memories

by Mark Loughlin

Remember those good old days when Mom and Dad used to ship you off to summer camp, and you’d get back to nature with a kindly old gentleman named Uncle Lou who would show you a moose in its natural habitat? No? Then I guess Indian Summer will not be for you. This new ensemble nostalgia comedy is from writer-director Mike Binder, who prior to filmmaking was best known as an extremely unfunny comedian and writer. If the Danny Bonaduce look alike contest, here, he has assembled an incredibly talented group of young actors who do a lot more justice to his ill formed script deserves. Vincent Spano, Elizabeth Perkins, Kevin Pollak, Matt Craven, Bill Paxton, Julie Warner, Diane Ladd and Kimberly Williams are the now yuppie group of former campers invited back to their beloved Camp Tamakwa by their former head counselor Uncle Lou, played by Alan Arkin. Also along for the ride is Evil Dead director Sam Raimi, who doesn’t speak much, but has most of the laughs in the film.

I won’t regurgitate the story of Indian Summer, because I don’t want to ruin the shocking plot development that occurs about halfway through…just kidding. Actually, that’s all their is to it. A bunch of former campers get together to spend a week contemplating their lives, and re-building their relationships. Sounds good, but Binder’s script, seems to be written in secret Tamakwanese Indian code language. We are supposed to laugh when they tell stories of twenty years ago, when so and so made out by the swing set. It’s hard, actually impossible, to make the audience feel nostalgia for something that they have never come close to experiencing. There’s a two minute prologue, but after that, it’s just “remember when” talk? If you’ve been to a summer camp, perhaps you’ll be able to relate a bit, but dialogue like, “we ought to spend the better part of this week making the rest of their lives a living hell,” Kevin Pollak barely gets out the protracted line, now he has to make it funny.

Binder definitely seems to have a passion for his subject, but his direction lacks any inspiration and at the end result makes it seem like this could be a glorified TV movie of the week. The plot would be perfect for a Meatball cast reunion. They pull silly pranks on each other, run around in the woods and “court” each other. The only difference is in Indian Summer they get amusing once in a while, something we’re spared in the Bill Murray film. After all, it is a bit difficult to take people seriously when you are sleeping in little cabins with pictures of Spiderman on the wall, and eating Frosted Flakes! Regardless, this film would probably be like making a serious film about a high school marching picture, it is a stirring portrait of a troubled young musician, who wears a big feather on his head.

Indian Summer starts Elizabeth Perkins, Diane Lane, Alan Arkin, and Matt Craven

Hello. This is the “Final Review”, so called because I named it. I’m your host, Paul, so called because the IRS has put out a contract on me. I assure your readers now, that if you read on, you’ll get your entire money’s worth, or my name isn’t Paul Donefsky.

As the world’s most brilliant particle physicist, I’ve taken great pains to create a reviewing format that is so intricate, so humorous, and so... um you know, that word for something really, you know, really there. Anyway, here it is.

There are three categories. The first is the traditional five star rating. The next is the number of good songs compared to the number of total songs (ex: 7 of 10). Thank you Eddie. And the last criteria and probably the most important to the reader, is the number of times I’ve listened to the album. For example, “5 Listens” or “Didn’t Bother”. Finally, now to the rivers.

You know, your serious Eddie, The Mets could have had those Cy Young pitchers... And Cone should have had a Cy Young, except that the year he went 20-3, Orel Hershiser had a better season than Cy Young ever did. If Schourek could ever put it all together, they could have sent Fernandez to the bullpen and have the two most dominant relievers in the game. I don’t know why Cathy couldn’t have loosened the purse strings a little and (tapetapetapetapetapetapetapetap) Okay, okay, here we go. For all of you, who like me, know nothing about music and have a guitar collecting dust somewhere, this review’s for you. All you, who like me, know nothing about music and have a guitar collecting dust somewhere, this review’s for you. All you, who like me, know nothing about music and have a guitar collecting dust somewhere, this review’s for you.

The next candidate, Soon-Yi Previn was left dangling with a fake phone number, after a lengthy courtship. As was Rangers’ defensemen James Patrick, whose unconventional double handed hockey stick method turned the Senator’s twenty million dollar drum set into a pile of rubble. And isn’t that the Rangers are still in the thick of things (Ha!). Emmy award winning Cheers star, Rhea Perlman, auditioned (she needs the work) But couldn’t cut it . But she wasn’t alone as George Pitman from Queens and Shirley McClaine also got the ox. That’s right, the ox. Ms. McClaine claimed to have been decoated drummer John Bonham in a previous life but had to be reminded that the committee To Find Mediocre, Aging Actresses Who Were John Bonham In a Previous Lifetime was down the hall.

Vampires and Nukes Begins Letters From The Dead

by Richard S. McDonals

The Vampire Lestat opens with Lestat walking from a form of hibernation to find The major part of the story deals with Lestat's early life, as a human in Pre- naming himself in the modem day. Here I must make clear that in the first eighteen pages of The Revised Edition, I will be reviewing new titles, and older books worth looking at, like Interview With the Vampire. Although grossly misrepresented by Louis, this fills Lestat with a desire to see Louis. Another side effect is Lestat's writing his own story, which we are led to believe is the novel held in our hands. Lestat reveals himself to the mortal band and uses them as a tool with which he plans to force the other vampires to reveal themselves - publicity. This smaller storyline, it seems, leads into what I assume will be the plot of Queen of the Damned. But alas, I have yet to get my hands on a copy of Queen, so my suspicions are unverified.

If Interview is an excellent novel, then Lestat is equally so, only on a much greater scale. The loneliness of a vampire's existence is explored to greater degree as well; the fledgling vampire Lestat, first not knowing whether or not any others as like him exist, soon finds that any vampires he creates are lost to him in another way, for he can no longer read their thoughts. But other vampires do exist - and they are watching him. The Les Innocents coven follows the old superstitions. They believe they are the Children of Darkness, the chosen of Satan, and see Lestat as a heretic for walking as a gentleman, passing himself off as a mortal, brazenly entering churches, well it it. Armand tells Lestat that Marius cared for Those Who Must Be Kept, but as for more about Finally, the last book to be reviewed takes a totally different direction. It is Childhood's End by Arthur C. Clarke. This classic story of science fiction was published in 1956 and is one of those rare books that reads just as fresh and true today.

It begins with man at the brink of interstellar travel. On the day that the first launch in planned, however, a fleet of alien spacecraft come to rest above every major city in the world. These aliens, called "the Overlords" by successive generations of humans, proclaim themselves rulers of earth, and that humanity will remain free, but that it must never go into space.

The few scattered attempts at resistance are futile. A nuclear weapon launched at a ship is simply disarmed. No retaliation follows. Not a single human life is harmed by the Overlords. They ignore sovereign nations, instead going straight to the U.N. Soon, humanity is enjoying the boon of a golden age of utopian society.

Then, the golden age ends. The end of Mankind begins.

Vampire Luisinae has some very wise Vampire who created him, and was burned by the Children of Darkness for living among mortals, as a painter. Armand tells Lestat that Marius cared for Those Who Must Be Kept, but as for more about Finally, the last book to be reviewed takes a totally different direction. It is Childhood's End by Arthur C. Clarke. This classic story of science fiction was published in 1956 and is one of those rare books that reads just as fresh and true today.

Montezuma's Box O' Tips

Welcome to Montezuma's hints and tips. This article and future articles will deal with hints and tips in the use of some of the software that is used in the computer labs, such as Lotus 123, Microsoft Works, Windows, Word for Windows, Harvard Graphics, Word Perfect and others.

WordPerfect for DOS
Print envelopes with a keyboard.

Use this macro to grab the inside address from a letter and print it on an envelope. This trick works on any printer with a WordPerfect printer definition that contains a paper size called envelope.

First, open document that contains an inside address. Place cursor at the beginning of the inside address on the line you want to print the macro for and press Alt E. At the Define Macro: prompt, type Macro Define (Ctrl-F10). At the Define Macro: prompt, type Macro Define (Ctrl-F10). At the Define Macro: prompt, type Macro Define (Ctrl-F10). At the Define Macro: prompt, type Macro Define (Ctrl-F10).

H to select the level of help that you may need. Easy help screens load up when you start the program with WS/H3 at the DOS prompt. Help that takes a lot for granted loads up when you use WS/H0. Menu based help runs when you load with WS/H4. For more information about help levels, check out the help menu during a WordStar session. In addition to its obvious convenience, this technique ensures that WordStar loads quicker because it doesn't have to load all the help it has to offer.

PageMaker
When using PageMaker, common sense tells you to set up the margins to match the limits of the text you plan for a page, including the footers and headers. But if the top and bottom margins you set up in the Page Setup dialog box include space that you intend to use for the headers and footers, PageMaker will automatically flow the text too long for each page, and you'll need to adjust the top and bottom window shades on every page manually. Set the margins precisely to the area into which you'll be flowing text, excluding headers and footers.

Movies Redone

*Have you been to the movies lately and thought you've seen something just like it before? Are you in agreement with the many people who think that Hollywood has run out of new ideas? Then again, Tinseltown has never been known for taking many chances artistically. Witness one of the only really daring (and satisfying) films this year, The Crying Game. It was made in England by an Irish director for under four million dollars. That's how much Macaulay Culkin got paid for Home Alone 2.

So, if you are experiencing an acute form of deja vu when you glance up at the templet menu board, you are not alone. Almost every film currently in release has roots somewhere else. Some are just plain rip offs. Take a look at The Adventures of Huck Finn - This is the ninth different adaptation of the Mark Twain novel and they still haven't gotten it right. Joel Siegel liked it.

The Crush - The Cradle that Rocks the Hand?! It's like Lolita meets Fatal Attraction, but without James Mason or Michael Douglas. What animal do they boil in this one? Only in America do we have screwed up sub cultures like this.

Point of No Return - La Femme Nikita without the subtitles, or the style. But we do have Bridget Fonda wielding a really big gun. Now that's entertainment!

Cop And a Half - A graft, but lovable cop gets teamed up with a kid, gee I've never seen that before.

Born Yesterday - Don and Melanie star in a modern reworking of a good film from the 30's. Don plays an intellectual, which is undoubtedly a stretch for him.

Indecent Proposal - It has the same plot as Honeymoon In Vegas, except it's not funny. Starring Robert Redford, Woody Harrelson, and Demi. "I want a bigger trailer close to the set!" Moore. Homeward Bound - Another remake, this time of an older Disney film that needed some of the advantages of modern film techniques...voice overs! *Have you been to the movies lately and thought you've seen something just like it before? Are you in agreement with the many people who think that Hollywood has run out of new ideas? Then again, Tinseltown has never been known for taking many chances artistically. Witness one of the only really daring (and satisfying) films this year, The Crying Game. It was made in England by an Irish director for under four million dollars. That's how much Macaulay Culkin got paid for Home Alone 2.

So, if you are experiencing an acute form of deja vu when you glance up at the templet menu board, you are not alone. Almost every film currently in release has roots somewhere else. Some are just plain rip offs. Take a look at The Adventures of Huck Finn - This is the ninth different adaptation of the Mark Twain novel and they still haven't gotten it right. Joel Siegel liked it.

The Crush - The Cradle that Rocks the Hand?! It's like Lolita meets Fatal Attraction, but without James Mason or Michael Douglas. What animal do they boil in this one? Only in America do we have screwed up sub cultures like this.

Point of No Return - La Femme Nikita without the subtitles, or the style. But we do have Bridget Fonda wielding a really big gun. Now that's entertainment!

Cop And a Half - A graft, but lovable cop gets teamed up with a kid, gee I've never seen that before.

Born Yesterday - Don and Melanie star in a modern reworking of a good film from the 30's. Don plays an intellectual, which is undoubtedly a stretch for him.

Earth day cometh

Along with April being the rainy month, and the information month, it also holds a most important day, a day where we pay homage to our surrounding little critters and their home. It's Earth Day.

What does this day specifically revere? No, not the organic mildew growing on Bohn Halls' public bathroom toilet seats, nor the moss spreading across Blanton's salad bar. Earth day celebrates what we have of nature, while reminding us all of Mother earth's needs. Her furry little critters being clubbed in the arctic conserving water instead of wasting it away in a nine hour hot shower. In an effort to promote awareness, The Conservation Club took over, holding their 1993 Earth Day celebrations on Wednesday April 21.

Their event was spread throughout the week. Besides speakers, they included Campus Clean up and petitions.

One petition offered by the Conservation Club, was in hopes for the renewal of the Endangered Species Act. Another dealt with a petition against Mitsubishi Co. for affiliating with companies destroying rainforests.

Topics of recycling, conservation of water, as well as animal preservation are not held in a social high esteem. An important topic, our campus should be more aware of the needs of our planet and take a more serious outlook. As Ann Caldieo points out, "...hopefully [students] will make a change."

Our earth is one we need to share equally. Within this responsibility also lies a reality that we have to take care of our home. Despite the cynical outlook of most patrons on Earth, this world is as idyllic as it will ever get and is worth worrying about.

Although the day has passed, everyday should be a celebration of Mama Earth with the full recognition of how beautiful she really is.

Quote of the Week by Andy Krupa pg. 1
April is Freedom of Information Month. In celebration of Freedom of Information Month I have been coaxed, okay coerced, from the maw of graduate literary obscenity and asked to pen the following elucidating essay:

In our time, political speech and writing are largely concerned with the evaluation of governmental policy and actions. Whether authorized under the guise of responsible reconnoitering or prosecutorial probing each of the aforementioned governmental inroads into our in-home telescreens, government today, is that a more informed public will enhance the accountability and performance of government agencies and officials. No more Prophet

Although I am usually apathetic towards the Prophet Bigg's "column," I feel compelled to voice my opinion toward this wast of valuable newspaper space. Actually, I enjoy Mr. Bigg's failed attempts at humor and his outrageously misinformed "facts," but to tell the entire student body, in print, that Last of the Mohicans was the best film of the year...well, I fear for the paper's credibility. It was the best film of the year...well, I'm won­

Dig this here now. I was squatting in the Student Center Quad, absorbing the delicious weather, trying to adjust my shoelace, which had become unstrung and twisted around my ankle. It was a knotted mesh, and the more I struggled to release the lace's grip, the tighter it contracted around my leg, cutting off the circu­ itely. I watched help­ ness as my ankle began to swell, turning a myriad of colors: purple, green and blue. It was at this point that I started to freak. Trapped by my own footwear, I whimpered and drooled in silent agony:

"Ooooldugh! OOOoow! Jesus! Mary! Frickin' flickableck! OW!"

Something along those lines. I was rolling now, limb over limb, hands and purple green blue feet thrashing about like a carnival attraction. It was a pitiful sight to witness I'm certain. In the midst of the anguish, I noticed a dark

I could hardly speak, and with the last burst of energy left in my beaten leg, I raised my ankle one last time in the hopes of re­

"Wonderful! I'll see you there on the 24th of April!!" Ritu Waltzed away quietly, a mass of black hair and passion for the Multicultural Fair vibrating above her head.

I ended up at Mountainside Hospital, convinced the surgeon on duty to not amputate my foot, and started making plans for the 24th...Life is good.

If everyone switched to energy-efficient lighting, 1.3 million tons of sulfur dioxide, 202 million tons of carbon dioxide and 600,000 tons of nitrogen oxides could be eliminated every year. Your eyes won't notice the difference. Just your lungs. For more ways to help the earth, call 1-800-488-8887.

Men's tennis (5-5) struggles to finish season above .500

by Maureen K. McLoor

As the end of the season nears, the MSC men's tennis team is struggling to keep its record at .500. After dropping their last two contests, the Red Hawks currently sit at 5-5.

The Red Hawks showed promise as their record was 5-3, but their recent setbacks have side-tracked them. One of the team's major goals at the beginning of the season was to finish above .500.

With improved talent and a new coach there has been reason for optimism in Upper Montclair.

The most recent loss came at the hands of conference rival Trenton State on Monday. The Lions easily handled MSC, 8-1. Trenton clearly outplayed MSC during the impressive showing. The only victory that MSC picked up in this one was from the third-doubles tandem of Wade Whitehead and John Morolis.

Trenton, a top NJAC team, left an undeniable impression on MSC head coach Barri Pollner. "They're one of the best teams we've played all year," she said.

Prior to Trenton loss, MSC was upended by New York University, 7-2 on Saturday, April 10. The Red Hawks picked up only two victories in this non-conference match. The first-doubles tandem of Jason Cuomo and Jeff Clemente, and second-doubles partners Dan Kanowith and Craig O'Connell kept MSC from being shut out.

Pollner is pleased with the performances of these two new doubles teams. "I knew I needed to re-arrange the doubles teams, and the new partners seem to work well together. They've definitely boosted our overall team strength," she said.

MSC's last victory came on Friday, April 16 as the Red Hawks edged Ramapo, 5-4.

This was a tight match that included hard-fought singles victories for Cuomo and Clemente. Kanowith and O'Connell also picked up a doubles win. MSC's Doug Sede lost his match, but was impressive in his first varsity outing.

Sede is expected to be a key contributor in the future for the Red Hawks. The varsity experience as a freshman can do nothing but improve his game and boost his confidence.

MSC closes out its' season with a two-match set this weekend against the United States Merchant Marine Academy and New Jersey Tech. Both are non-conference opponents. Check the MSC Sports Schedule for dates and times.

CLUB is a Class One Organization of the SGA
Knicks’ superguard John Starks also a mild-mannered man

You could liken the difference in his demeanor on and off of the court to the story of Superman, minus the wardrobe change in the telephone booth.

When he’s playing in front of huge crowds, New York Knicks’ guard John Starks is a tough, emotional, fearless star who’s been an integral part of the team’s rise to the top of the Eastern Conference this season.

He drives to the basket with reckless abandon, sacrifices his body by drawing offensive fouls, and is the epitome of what hard-nosed basketball and everyone around him with a negative label.

Starks has become a victim of a bad rap. Despite what some may think, Starks isn’t arrogant nor is he a dirty player. While he certainly has his legions of fans, some people misunderstand what he’s about. Fans develop their opinions of a player from what they see on the court. However, in Starks’ case you must look deeper. That’s because John Starks, the basketball player and John Starks, the person are quite different.

His story is one of desire and determination. After attending four colleges, playing in the CBA and working at a grocery store, John Starks has finally made a name for himself in the NBA.

The indirect path he took to achieve his current status keeps him humble. He speaks in a low tone and keeps everything in perspective.

Sitting down and talking with him this past Sunday afternoon was a refreshing experience. This young man is a considerate, honest gentleman that genuinely appreciates his fame and fortune.

Keith Idee: Has the level of success that you’ve achieved actually sunk in yet?

John Starks: No, not really. I’ve just tried to remain level-headed through it all. I think that this will all really hit me when my basketball career is over.

Keith Idee: After moving around from place to place, do you believe that you’ve found a home in New York?

John Starks: I hope it is, but this business is kind of funny. Right now, I’m playing very good basketball and everyone around me seems to be very happy with my play. So, hopefully this will be a permanent home for me.

Keith Idee: After everything you’ve been through, how much easier has the financial security of a five-year, multi-million dollar contract made your job and your life in general?

John Starks: It feels real good to be able to take care of my family. I don’t have to worry about which bills are going to be paid and which bills aren’t going to be paid and that’s a great feeling. The financial security gives me peace of mind and it allows me to rest easy at night.

Keith Idee: To what extent has Pat Riley had an influence on you?

John Starks: He’s had a tremendous effect on myself and Anthony Mason. His reputation has given them some added credibility to what Anthony and I have accomplished on the court. He’s won four World Championships and has coached one of the best players to ever play the game in Magic Johnson, so he knows what it takes to be successful.

The Knicks organization did a great job over the summer getting the players that we needed to reach the next level. We’ve added some leadership to the team. So, now we’ll just have to wait and see.
Red Hawks shot down by York, William Paterson

by Brian Falzarano

Are the Red Hawks overrated? Or do they just have one of those weeks? After exploding out of the gates at 14-2, MSC (16-5) has lost three of its last five including a 9-8 loss to York College (Pa.) at Pittser Field on Tuesday.

This game started out as if MSC, which beat York (10-9), 6-5 last year in the Mid-Atlantic Regionals, was in complete control.

Baseball

After all, Chris Ramponie had a 4-1 lead in the fifth and was taken out.

The relief pitching should have held the lead. But three innings and eight runs later, MSC was down 9-5, as York took its sword and stabbed the Red Hawks in their Achilles Heel - their relief pitching.

Of the infamous middle relievers, John Blacharsky (1-1, 15.43 ERA) was tagged with the loss, after the usually不出活 from this relief corps.

MSC seemed to come alive in the eighth. Tony Martinez singled and Joe Critelli (4 hits, 4 RBI) hit a two-run, opposite field homer. This set the stage for Ralph Yezza, who was 0 for 4 at that point, to hit a deep fly ball to center. The center fielder went back, and it was caught at the fence. MSC was finished and so was Yezza’s hitting streak.

“Ralph has been very consistent for us,” said MSC head coach Norm Schoenig. Unfortunately for the Red Hawks, the best of hitters have off days.

MSC also came up short on Monday afternoon. William Paterson was unable to take advantage of a three-run lead over the Red Hawks, 10-9, in 11 innings. The victory, which gave the Pioneers (39-4, 8-1) a one-and-a-half game lead over the Red Hawks in the NJAC, was the ninth consecutive in the series.

William Paterson came out of the gates quickly taking an 8-3 lead into the top of the eighth. With one out, it seemed all but over. But the Red Hawks came back to stroke four consecutive doubles, pacing MSC’s four-run rally, which cut the lead to 8-7.

This set the stage for Ralph Yezza, who had a 19-game hitting streak to be broken. Yezza, who was 0 for 4 at that point, hit a deep fly ball to center. The center fielder went back, and it was caught at the fence. MSC would later lose to York College (Pa.) at Pittser Field.

Although lost beneath their middle relief isn’t very good right now. Games are won and lost in middle relief,” Schoenig said emphatically. It has let too many games slip away.

Few games to get away and must improve if MSC has any hope of overtaking WPC.

“This, I believe, is the moment we will see them (WPC) at least two or three more times. We’re not done yet,” Schoenig said.

If MSC is going to reach its postseason goals, it will need to regain their old form.

Lacrosse wins, improving as post-season nears

by Nicole Festa

A season of high hopes and aspirations has turned into one of disappointment and hope of salvation for the Red Hawk lacrosse team.

Following last season’s cause for optimism, an 11-3 record and an ECAC Metro Tournament Championship, MSC’s sights were set on a first-ever NCAA tournament bid.

It didn’t seem as if those hopes would turn into reality. After last week’s defeat against NYU-Albany, the Red Hawks bounced back and dominated Fairfield College, 13-5, which may be a painful reminder of what could’ve been.

MSC (4-4) was in control from the outset, taking an 8-2 lead at halftime. There were several quality performances, four of which stood out.

Top-notch junior midfielder Keith Van Ness led MSC with five goals and sophomore mid-fielder Mike Bruton added a hat trick (three goals). Freshman attacker Jim Nugent added a goal, but his key contribution was his game-high four assists. Ken Kane, MSC’s All-America candidate in men’s lacrosse wins, improving as post-season nears

Track Talk

by Mark Alan Belnay

For a handful of individuals this weekend it will be a moment they will hold close to their hearts until the day they pass. For others who fail to achieve their dreams on this past weekend’s results. “It may look good on paper, but in reality we are still lacking the fundamentals needed to perform at the Penn Relays,” he said regarding the promise displayed statistically this past weekend at the Monmouth Relays.

It has been this precise problem that has hung over the team since the onset of the season. The performances are, for the most part, good, but the practices are definitely comparable to watching paint peel as far as intensity is concerned.

With the MSC team being represented in the relay sections in the 1600 meters, 400 meters, 800 meters, and the sprint medley, it has the talent to leave a lasting impression upon its Division I foes.

With the team awaiting the return of Sharon Lindo from injury, the brunt of the leadership duties as far as the women’s squad is concerned have fallen on the capable shoulders of Shantay Brance. This past weekend she let her rival Danielle Humphries of William Paterson know that there is still enough left to leave a trail for Humphries to follow to the finish line and disheartening second place finish. Brance qualified for the Nationals with a time of 25.20 in the 200 meters.

The men’s team turned in several sterling performances this past weekend. The 400 meter relay team took first with a time of 41.84. The sprint medley team of Devon Stevens, Neal Ruda, Wayne Dennis, and Jacinto Alayon will need to regain their old form and repeat their first place finish at the Monmouth Relays.

Individually the men looked good at Monmouth with Stevens qualifying for Nationals in the 200 meters with a time of 21.36. Dennis took first in the 800 meters but didn’t run at all close to his potential according to Blanton.

As mentioned earlier in the article this is a weekend in which everything that the MSC team has gone through this year in terms of injury and disappointment can be forgotten. In the minds of the athletes and the coaching staff alike the ability and talent is not a question. It is the heart and determination that seems to be questionable going into the weekend.

Sometimes the best thing that can happen to a champion is to be knocked from the sky by those that have patiently waited for the opportunity to do so. It is into their hearts that these athletes must reach in order to regain that single moment of greatness, that magic moment that belongs only to them and will forever be a part of their memories.
