MSC students may lose the option of taking winter session courses, but could enjoy a longer summer vacation.

Extending the summer break by one week and shortening the winter break by the same are just two of the issues being examined by the calendar and scheduling committee.

Examining the soundness of a three-week consolidated course and a declining winter session registration are a few of the reasons the program is being re-evaluated.

Jessica Bieri, S.G.A. legislator and member of the calendar committee, said that the school year runs too far into the summer compared to most colleges and this makes it harder for students to gain summer employment. Bieri also stated that the idea of an entire semester of study being crammed into a three-week period is what committee members have termed as being "pedagogically unsound."

The proposal also seems to have the support of a majority vote by the students. As part of the S.G.A. elections ballot in April the question of eliminating the calendar committee, said that the school year runs too far into the summer compared to most colleges and this makes it harder for students to gain summer employment. Bieri also stated that the idea of an entire semester of study being crammed into a three-week period is what committee members have termed as being "pedagogically unsound."

The main function of the calendar committee is to set the academic calendar for the following school year. There are many issues to consider such as which holidays the school will observe and specific start and finish dates for classes and exams. Each decision must take into account possible ramifications. Any one change may affect dormitory check-in dates, which will affect the maintenance department, food service, campus security, etc.

The calendar committee must now write a recommendation to the college senate, the senate will vote on the recommendation and pass it on to President Reid. Reid will then bring it before the executive committee for final approval.

MSC may lose winter session but summer vacation may be longer

Mardi Gras celebration at MSC

by Melissa Myers

The first Mardi Gras celebration will be held this weekend April 24-25 at the college Amphitheater. The event is an attempt to cut apathy on campus by promoting harmony and unity through an educational yet entertaining atmosphere, said Sandra Garcia of the Latin American Student Organization.

The weekend’s events will run from 12:00 pm to 7:00 pm and are designed to be entertaining as well as educational. Saturday’s events will include: jugglers, marachi bands, a Broadway musical review, an international fashion show, Latinsismo, performances by OSAU dance troops, a gospel choir and other local bands. While on Sunday Class One Concerts will be sponsoring performances by Digable Planets, Sweet Lizard Illet, and D’Influence.

Organizations such as Student Intramural Leisure Council will be sponsoring intramural activities while the Greek Organizations will be sponsoring booths, tables and participating in lip sync and step shows. Aidan Food Service will also be there with refreshments.

The Mardi Gras: Multiculturalism At It’s Finest originated in the newest subcommittee formed in the Student Government Association known as the Multicultural Advisory Committee chaired by Ritu Chib. This committee was formed in response to the growing need for students to have a place to bring this problem and suggestions concerning racial issues that arise on campus.

"The Mardi Gras is the start of a change in the student body as far as apathy is concerned and will also bring a new positive awareness to what multiculturalism really means," said Garcia.

Earth Day celebrated at MSC

by Kathy Garcia

The MSC Conservation Club held its 1993 Earthday celebrations on Wednesday, April 21 at the Student Center Mall. The event was part of a week long celebration of the earth which included environmental speakers, campus cleanup, and petition signing.

There was no set theme to the celebration instead students included as many different environmental issues as they could into the fair. One of the main goals of the day was the signing of a petition for the renewal of the Endangered Species Act. Over 200 petitions were signed to send to both state and federal representatives.

The Endangered Species Act was not the only petition being passed out at the celebration. Other petitions included were, one against the Mitsubishi Corporation and its affiliation with companies that are destroying the rainforests, the other against the legalization of the sport of whaling in other countries around the world.

Students say that the day was a big success. Ann Caldiero, an MSC student with the Conservation Club said, "We try to educate people so that they know they have the choice to buy products that were made with natural things." She also said that students should be aware of the different companies that contribute to environmental organizations.

Earth Day, some students said is a day in which we celebrate the earth and teach those who don’t know that we can make it a better place. As Caldiero points out, "they'll know what's going on and hopefully make a change."

Other organizations that participated in the celebration were: The Body Shop, The New Jersey School of Conservation, Rain Forest Relief, New Jersey Animal Rights, and PSEG.

The 1992 edition of the Montclair State College La Campana Yearbook should have been taken.

This is the first occasion that all ethnic, Greek and Class One Organizations will have the opportunity to work together as well as with the faculty, staff and administration. Every organization involved will be using their own budget to contribute to the funding and success of this event.

"The faculty, staff and administration applaud the initiative and enlightenment of the students," said Ron Hollander, the chair of the Multicultural Initiative Subcommittee on Campus Climate and Ethical Concerns.

The second and last proof of the 1992 staff, he felt that he was involved the vehicle which was used during the spring of 1992. Andy Krupa, volunteer assistant manager on duty and campus police because it is afraid of her boyfriend's bad temper. He claimed that it was signed by the female's roommate. He was escorted out and was told not to return.

1992 yearbook release delayed, to be available in May and sent to '92 seniors

d by David Ecker

The 1992 edition of the Montclair State College La Campana Yearbook should have been available last fall, but due to the delay caused by the problems of that year's staff, it will be available in May and sent to the 1992 seniors, due to the efforts of the 1993 staff, who in addition to handling last year's work, is ahead of schedule with the 1993 edition, said Walter Kulick, Editor in Chief.

Kulick said that he finished the second and last proof of the 1992 book last week. He also said that it will take two or three weeks for the publisher, Jostens, to print it.

Kulick said that he expects the 1993 book to be ready as soon as the middle of September. said Kulick said that it was the Editor in Chief, who in 1992 was Kevin Onorevole, who was ultimately responsible to make sure that the book, which is usually around 300 pages, came out in time. Kulick also said that the Editor in Chief's responsibilities included overseeing every facet in the book's production.

In a telephone interview Monday afternoon, Onorevole said that he had nothing to say about last year's work, is ahead of schedule with the 1993 edition, said Walter Kulick, Editor in Chief, who in 1992 was Kevin Onorevole, who was ultimately responsible to make sure that the book, which is usually around 300 pages, came out in time. The Mardi Gras is not serving to replace Montclair’s annual Spring Carnival which has been cancelled this year due to several problems that occurred at last years. The events scheduled to take place are designed to have a calming effect opposed to the high level of excitement a Carnival produces.

The event has been publicized on our campus only in an attempt to minimize the threat of outside problems and to concentrate the effort towards our campus and students. The necessary precautions for extra security has been taken.

Yes—but I think such extreme action should have been taken sooner.

I loved my 75 VW Bus. Its dead now. I miss it. Dig that.

Critics always have conflicting opinions, and I am no exception. Well, this time I'm disputing the mighty TV Guide. This week, they are offering the "All-time Best TV," and being the argumentative little sod that I am, I have to put in my two cents. Here it is: The Couch Potato Update's All-time Best TV.

Best Sitcoms: M*A*S*H. Forget about it. The merry men and women of the 4077th get my vote, and certainly blow most of the junk that's on TV today out of the water. Cheers runs a close second, but M*A*S*H blended comedy, intimacy, frustration, war, and made it all come together.

Best Cop Show: Cagney and Lacey. A transmission here, a transmission there, and your 75 VW Bus is down the road in 20 year old cars without a key. Have mercy upon those who tread your roads in 20 year old cars without inspection stickers and I promise you, to feed my beast's hunger for oil and wiper fluid until it is my time to perish!! OOGY BLOOK SHLOCK OOGY!!

Best Animated Sitcoms: BANG CRUNCH GRIND SPIT... plunk plink plunk! Now 'plink plink' is not a good sound under most circumstances, especially when you are already hurtling yourself towards certain destruction. Cars honking, and your mangled body from the tomb at 6:45 A.M. knowing full well that you won't be once again. It is time to make a decision. You can recognize the agonizing sounds and you can let your Bus be conveying to you and for the betterment of public safety, be on the next toll plaza, OR push on with complete disregard for the health and well being of yourself and fellow drivers. I mean, you do still have to get to work. You start to pray...

"PLEASE! Oh gracious god of the asphalt bestow upon me the ability to transport myself to my place of employment. Have mercy upon those who tread your roads in 20 year old cars without inspection stickers and I promise you, to feed my beast's hunger for oil and wiper fluid until it is my time to perish!! OOGY BLOOK SHLOCK OOGY!!"

Welcome, loyal readers, to yet another thrilling installment of PROPHET BIGG!! And now, sit back and relax. Let the Prophet take you on a wondrous journey.

Some of you may remember that last semester I brought to you an interview with George "Spanky" McFarlane. (Backdraft) and Kevin Costner (Dances With Wolves) are both starring in films about Wyatt Earp. Russell's film, Tombstone is a Disney film, and we never know what that means anymore. do we? Costner's film, without an official title, is still in development. I'm looking forward, however, to Geronimo, starring Dances With Wolves and Last of the Mohicans own Wes Studi. Jason Patric's film also stars as the opposing cavalry officer. Look for it this summer! And finally, there is talk of an F-Troop film. Where will the madness end?

It's official. DeNiro(Mad Dog and Glory) has signed to play Wild Bill Hickock for Tri-Star. Kenneth Branagh(Henry V. Dead Again) will play the Prophet for M*A*S*H. F-Troop will be the chief producer, but I could not confirm.

And finally some PROPHET notes. To Maryann, Happy Secretaries Day, now, where the hell's my tea? To the Parkway and...

Indian Summer starts Elizabeth Perkins, Diane Lane, Alan Arkin, and Matt Craven

by Mark Loughlin

Remember those good old days when Mom and Dad used to ship you off to summer camp, and you’d get back to nature with a kindly old gordon named Uncle Lou who would show you how to make a nest in its natural habitat? No? Then I guess Indian Summer will not be for you. This new ensemble nostalgia comedy is from writer director Mike Binder, who prior to filmmaking was best known as an extremely unfunny comedian and writer of the Danny Bonaduce look alike contest. Here, he has assembled an incredibly talented cast of young actors who do a lot more justice to his ill formed script deserves. Vincent Spano, Elizabeth Perkins, Kevin Pollak, Matt Craven, Bill Paxton, Julie Warner, Diane Ladd and Kimberly Williams are the now yuppy group of former campers invited back to their beloved Camp Tamakwa by their former head counselor Uncle Lou, played by Alan Arkin. Also along for the ride is Evil Dead director Sam Raimi, who doesn’t speak much, but has most of the laughs in the film.

I won’t regurgitate the story of Indian Summer, because I don’t want to ruin the shocking plot development that occurs about halfway through. Just kidding. Actually, that’s all there is to it. A bunch of former campers get together to spend a week contemplating their lives, and building their relationships. Sounds good, but Binder’s script, seems to be written in secret Tamakwanese Indian code language. We are supposed to laugh when they tell stories of twenty years ago, when so and so made out by the swing set. It’s hard, actually impossible, to make the audience feel nostalgia for something that they have never come close to experiencing. There’s a two minute prologue, but after that, it’s just “remember when” talk! If you’ve been to a summer camp, perhaps you’ll be able to relate a bit, but dialogue of twenty years ago, that occurs about halfway through... just kidding. Actually, that’s all there is to it.

There are three categories. The first is the traditional five star rating. The next is the number of good songs compared to the number of total songs (ex: 7 of 10). Thank you Eddie. And the last criteria and probably the most important to the reader, is the number of times I’ve listened to the album. For example, “5 Listens” or “Didn’t Bother”. Finally now, to the rivers.

You know, it’s serious Eddie, The Mets could have had three Cy Young pitchers... And Cone should have had a Cy Young, except that the year he went 20-3, Orel Hershiser had a better season than Cy Young ever did. If Schook could ever put it all together, they could have sent Fernandez to the bullpen and have the two most dominant relievers in the game. I don’t know why Cashen couldn’t face it the Rangers are still in the thick of things (Ha!). Emmy award winning Cheers star, Rhea Perlman, auditioned (she needs the work) But couldn’t cut it. But she wasn’t alone as George Pitman from Queens and Shirley McClaine also got the ox. That’s right, the ox. Ms. McClaine claimed to have been decoated drummer John Bonham in a previous life but had to be reminded that the committee To Find Mediocre, Aging Actresses Who Were in, ELP finally disbanded their ultra top secret Senate prologue, but after that, it’s just “remember when” talk! The next candidate, Soon-Yi Previn was left dangling with a fake phone number, after a lengthy courtship. As was Rangers’ defense man James Patrick, whose unconventional double handed hockey stick method turned the Senate’s twenty million dollar drum set into a pile of rubble. And let’s face it the Rangers are still in the thick of things (Ha!). Emmy award winning Cheers star, Rhea Perlman, auditioned (she needs the work) But couldn’t cut it. The committee finally decided on political activist Ross Perot who later declined, then hinted on accepting, did in fact, and was finally rought up by some Senate pages and kicked out of the building. After a lengthy contact negotiation, the committee signed former Eagles defensive lineman Reggie White, but had to be told by someone with half a brain that not only did his name not begin with a “P” but he couldn’t even play the f drums! Rebuffed by the NAACP, Jesse Jackson almost forced his candidacy by leading a march of thousands of drummer demonstrators to the gates of Congress. After being told that there was this groupie named “Tawnee” waiting for them in the lobby of the local Holiday Inn, the crowd quickly dispersed. Erik Estrada came in, offered to take drum lessons and change his name to “Pestrada”. The committee agreed to the name change and kicked out a furious Pestrada, all the while screaming “You want something with “P”! I’ll give you something with a “P”!!!

A few days later a spokesperson for ELP informed the committee that months ago, the band had agreed to rejoin with Carl Palmer. And well, they made a fantastic album. See you next week. Not. 8 of 10! 7 Listens.

Letters From The Dead

by Richard S. McDonals

What was missing from the theory of evolution in The Einstein dream state. The flaming moment. Okay. John Toth has always had different ideas, but it wasn't until then that he started reading about Amiga 2000, that he was able to put into a mass forum what he visualized in mind. Toth's overwhelming theme is diversity. It's not enough that he's a sculpture, painter, and graphics artist. He's always believed that the medium is only a starting point in his journey to express himself. To this end, he's taken his art and become a composer, a choreographer and a film maker to accurately reproduce what he envisions in his mind. When he is called a "intermedia" artist, there is no understatement to his claim.

Last year, Lori Young, a professor in the Art dept asked Toth to do an expanded version of his "Red States of the Heart" for the graduate student Alex Leonard's "Art Forum". Toth was impressed with the range of artists that had been invited to do the show, and accepted.

This resulted in probably the longest Art Forum yet, as his show lasted a shade under two hours. At times, it was repetitive, but no one could deny the originality of the work. The first piece was called "Fire/Flame". It was a video self portrait of digitized images, and a multitude of color changes. The computer represents his element of choice, he narrated as a means of giving himself a sense of control.

The next piece, called "Core Samples" dealt with the natural layers found on rocks covered by ice age, cylindrical core data collected on land or just the layers of colors that the sun creates as it sets. As these images danced complete with his artwork, Toth's computer always found the pieces together. As these images were displayed, Toth was able to recite their works to it. This resulted in an electronic "Fabric and Space". Made of tricot, the sheer fabric used in lingerie, he intended it's many stretched layers to show the invisible fabric of space. The exhibition ended as he pressed on his chaos theme with a choreographed dance complete with his artwork as well as the presence of a satirical feed while a singer and a poet sang and recited their works to it. This was one of the most interesting Art Forum's yet but it probably could have been more effective if it had been shorter, making Toth look more diverse instead of numbing the effectiveness of his works. There is no question however that not only is Toth a brilliantly unorthodox artist, he's also one that makes you think.

Next Week, Thursday, April 29, at 3PM in the Calcia auditorium. Shirley Kenada, painter and writer will discuss painting from the position of difference. She states, "If the task of painting is seeking truth as a singularity, in my case it is transformed into one of articulating it by comparisons. This constitutes an aspect of the feminization of formalism. My proposition is a re-evaluation of the terrain of abstraction as something fundamentally constructed and androgynous."

Montezuma's Box O' Tips
Welcome to Montezuma's hints and tips. This article and future articles will deal with hints and tips in the use of some of the software that is used in the computer labs, such as Lotus 123, Microsoft Works, Windows, Word for Windows, Harvard Graphics, WordPerfect and others.

WordPerfect for D.O.S.
Print envelopes with a keystroke.

Use this macro to grab the inside address from a letter and print it on an envelope. This trick works on any printer with a WordPerfect printer definition that contains a paper size called envelopepaper. First, open document that contains an inside address. Place the cursor at the beginning of the address and start recording the macro by pressing Macro Define (Ctrl-F10). At the Define Macro: Prompt, type Alt E. At the Description: Prompt, enter the words Envelope Grabber. Now you're ready to record the following keystrokes:

{Right}{Left}{Del}{Cancel}{Switch}{Footer}{Header}{Footer}{Header}{Footer}{Header}{Footer}

Press Ctrl-F10 to end macro recording.

The macro opens up a second document, so if you use the WordPerfect's Switch feature regularly, make sure the second document screen is empty. To use the macro, place the cursor at the beginning of the inside address on the letter you want to print the envelope for and press Alt E. For Hewlett Packard LaserJet, insert the envelope sideways in the manual feed slot.

Microsoft Windows 3.1
Make icons easier to find.

If your program groups are cluttered with icons and the titles run into each other, follow these steps to tidy up your desktop. Adjust the icon spacing to allow more room for each icon and its title. To do this select Desktop from the Control Panel and change the icon spacing to a larger number. The default is 77 and the maximum is 512, but anything over 100 takes too much real estate on most monitors.

Once you make the adjustment, you will have to select Arrange Icons to see the new layout. In Version 3.1, Desktop also has a Text Wrap option that allows icons to wrap into several pages; check this option for flexibility. While you don't have this luxury in version 3.0, you can always rename icons with shorter titles that are still descriptive. For example to rename Microsoft Word for Windows to WinWord, select the Word icon in Program Manager, choose properties from the file menu, and on the Description line type in Are you an advanced WordStar user who doesn't need basic help? Or a beginner who needs hands holding? Or a menu user who doesn't need to know obscure Ctrl key combinations? If you are one of these, you may find this tip of some use. Use WordStar's command line switch /T to select the level of help that you may need. Easy help screens load up when you start the program with WS/H3 at the DOS prompt. Help that takes a lot for granted loads up when you use WS/H10. Menu based help runs when you load with WS/H4. For more information about help levels, check out the help menu during a WordStar session. In addition to its obvious convenience, this technique ensures that WordStar loads quicker because it doesn't have to load all the help it has to offer.

PageMaker
When using PageMaker, common sense tells you to set up the margins to match the limits of text you plan for a page, including the footers and headers. But if the top and bottom margins you set up in the Page Setup dialog box include space that you intend to use for the headers and footers, PageMaker will automatically flow the text too long for each page, and you'll need to adjust the top and bottom window shades on every page manually. Set the margins precisely to the area into which you'll be flowing text, excluding headers and footers.

Movies Redone
by Mark Loughlin
Have you been to the movies lately and thought you've seen something just like it before? Are you in agreement with the many people who think that Hollywood has run out of new ideas? Then again, Tinseltown has never been known for taking many chances artistically. Witness one of the only really daring (and satisfying) films this year, The Crying Game. It was made in England by an Irish director for under four million dollars. That's how much Macaulay Culkin got paid for Home Alone 2.

So, if you are experiencing an acute form of deja vu when you glance up at the templex menu board, you are not alone. Almost every film currently in release has roots somewhere else. Some are just plain rip offs. Take a look!

The Adventures of Huck Finn
This is the ninth different adaptation of the Mark Twain novel and they still haven't gotten it right. Joel Siegel liked it.

The Crush
The Cradle that Rocks the Hand?! It's like Lolita meets Fatal Attraction, but without James Mason or Michael Douglas. What animal do they boil in this one? Only in America do we have screwed up sub genres like this.

Point of No Return - La Femme Nikita
Without the subtitles, or the style. But we do have Bridget Fonda wielding a really big gun. Now that's entertainment!

Cop and a Half
A guff, but lovley cop gets teamed up with a kid, gee I've never seen that before.

Last of the Mohicans
At last! A sequel, four remakes, two rip offs, and one just plain unoriginal film. This is actually nothing new. Last year's Last of the Mohicans, and the Steven Sagal rip off of The Cradle that Rocks the Hand?! It's like Lolita, but without the subtitles, or the style.

Earth day cometh

Along with April being the rainy month, and the information month, it also holds a most important day, a day where we pay homage to our surrounding little critters and their home. It’s Earth Day.

What does this day specifically revere? No, not the organic mildew growing on Bohn Halls’ public bathroom toilet seats, nor the moss spreading across Blanton’s salad bar. Earth day celebrates what we have of nature, while reminding us all of Mother earth’s needs. Her furry little critters being clubbed in the arctic conserving water instead of wasting it away in a nine hour hot shower. In an effort to promote awareness, The Conservation Club took over, holding their 1993 Earth Day celebrations on Wednesday April 21.

Their event was spread throughout the week. Besides speakers, they included Campus Clean up and petitions. One petition offered by the Conservation Club was in hopes for the renewal of the Endangered Species Act. Another dealt with a petition against Mitsubishi Co. for affiliating with companies destroying rainforests. Topics of recycling, conservation of water, as well as animal preservation are not held in a social high esteem. An important topic, our campus should be more aware of the needs of our planet and take a more serious outlook. As Ann Caldeo points out, "...hopefully [students] will make a change."

Our earth is one we need to share equally. Within this responsibility also lies a reality that we have to take care of our home. Despite the cynical outlook of most patrons on Earth, this world is as idyllic as it will ever get and is worth worrying about.

Although the day has passed, everyday should be a celebration of Mama Earth with the full recognition of how beautiful she really is.

daily allowing telephone calls to be routinely intercepted. Sounds like an accurate depiction of recent American imperialist policy in Nicaragua, or the former Soviet Union's eccentric forays into Afghanistan, however, if you were paying attention to the spelling contained within the above paragraph you would have noticed a distinctive English influence.

Whatever authorized under the guise of responsible reconnoitring or prosecutorial probing each of the above-mentioned inroads cast dispersions on the guarantees contained within the Fourth Amendment to the United States Constitution. Fears of governmental intruders necessitated the 1976 passing of the Freedom of Information/Privacy Act, Title 5 U.S.C. 552. Ostensibly this would provide the general public access to the records of many information hoarding administrative agencies. The underlying motive is that a more informed public will enhance the accountability and performance of government agencies and officials.

Yes, 1984 was one of the influences that shaped my political consciousness. Here is your chance to keep the government honest and find out what McCarthy like perjuries contained within the fourth amendment to the United States Constitution.

The deadline for letters to the editor is Monday.

ZBT does not condone, support, nor agree with what happened that night.

In our time, political speech and writing are largely intended to astonish the public, to make it feel that something happens. This is the main reason why we are all so interested in the printed word—why we are so eager to lay hold of any current event and to associate it immediately with the past.

No more Prophet

Although I am usually ap­athetic towards the Prophet Bigg’s “column”, I feel compelled to voice my opinion toward this wast of valuable newspaper space. Actu­ally, I enjoy Mr. Bigg’s failed at­tempts at humor and his outra­geously misinformed “facts”, but to tell the entire student body, in print, that The Crying Game is all hype and that Last of the Mohicans was the best film of the year… well, I fear for the paper’s credibility. He also said, referring to Clint Eastwood, “Let’s stop giving life­time achievement awards hidden behind other awards.” I’m won­dering if Mr. Schwoebel even saw any of these films, or if he’s just listening to too much Rush Limbaugh.

While The Crying Game is a completely original movie that is way ahead of its time in terms of subject matter, Last of the Mohicans is pretty much a dressed up melodrama that tells us once again that the Indians are savage, brutal killers. Where The Crying Game shows us what a human is capable of, and that heroes don’t have to save someone from a burning building, Last of the Mohicans lets us know that nei­ther the Indians nor the Colonists were trustworthy people. I under­stand that the Prophet’s political values and close-mindedness may have contributed to his disliking the film, but he should at least give some reasons why he thought it was all hype. Why was Last of the Mohicans so great? Why does he spout bits of poetry like, “a film that was looked over by the Acad­emy for lots of things.” It’s true that not everyone will like The Cry­ing Game; You have to be open minded. You can’t have any ma­jor discriminations against certain social groups, and you can’t idol­ize John Wayne. Perhaps the Prophet was disappointed that there wasn’t actually a “game” in the film.

Don’t get me wrong, I really couldn’t care less about the Os­cars, or his opinions, but letting someone print whatever the hell he wants, when he wants to, (the Oscars were two weeks ago) re­flects poorly on the paper. The film companies are nice enough to send The Montclarion tickets to advance screenings of their films and you send the gossip columnist! Good Luck Montclarion!

Support the Mardi Gras

Dig this here now. I was squawking in the Student Center Quad, absorbing the delicious weather, trying to adjust my shoe­lace, which had become unrav­eled and twisted around my ankle. It was a knotted mesh, and the more I struggled to release the lace’s grip, the tighter it contracted around my leg, cutting off the cir­culation entirely. I watched help­lessly as my ankle began to swell, turning a myriad of colors: purple, green and blue. It was at this point that I started to freak. Trapped by my own footwear, I whimpered and drooled in silent agony:

“Ooookiilh! Ooooom! Jesus! Mary! Frickin’ flickableck! OW!”

Something along those lines.

I was rolling now, limp over limb, hands and purple green blue feet thrusting about like a carnival at­traction. It was a pitiful sight to witness I’m certain. In the midst of the anguish, I noticed a dark haired, red lipped figure standing curiously above me, intently peer­ing at my technicolor ankle. Was I to be saved from my torture? Could this figure above me be the savior that would release me from the sinister shoelace of the under­world? Unable to speak, I raised my ankle, gesturing to the figure of my desire to be free from the bonds that held me. Finally, it SPOKE!

“Hi! I’m Ritu, the chairper­son of the SGA’s Multicultur­al Advisory Committee! I must say, I’ve never seen an ankle as di­verse as yours. I wonder if we might use you as a symbol, your lower leg in particular, to repre­sent the myriad of colors, creeds, and ethnicities that make up our campus. We’re holding a Multicultural Fair the weekend of April 24, 25 here on campus where various organizations including the Class 1’s, Greeks and others will converge in the spirit of pride and diversity!”

“Huh?” I replied

“On Saturday, OSAU’s Gosp­el choir will perform, LASO’s dance troupe will be on hand along with a multitude of organizations and students in the ampitheater enjoying the sun and exciting events!”

“Help! Reeeelp!” I cried

“On Sunday, the big finale happens with Class One Concerts providing live music! Diggable Planets will perform outside, for free, and you know they’re Cool Like That! Can I count on you being there to lend a hand, or shall I say, ankle?”

I could hardly speak, and with the last burst of energy left in my beaten leg, I raised my ankle one last time in the hopes of re­lief...

“Wonderful! I’ll see you there on the 24th of April!!” Ritu waltzed away quietly, a mass of black hair and passion for the Multicultural Fair vibrating above her head. I ended up at Mountainside Hospital, convinced the surgeon on duty not to amputate my foot, and started making plans for the 24th.Life is good.

The Multicultural Fair in the ampitheater the weekend of the 24, 25. It’s Cool Like That.

MSC's two most recent victories came as a result of a double-header sweep of Kean College on Tuesday in Union.

The Red Hawks easily handled MSC, 8-1.

Pohlman, a sophomore outfielder collected three hits including an RBI double and two singles. The New Foundland native has been on an offensive tear as of late.

Junior Michelle Serio's steady pitching (10-4, 2.15 ERA) has been instrumental during the Red Hawks' recent surge.

Knicks' superguard John Starks also a mild-mannered man

You could liken the difference in his demeanor on and off of the court to the story of Superman, minus the wardrobe change in the telephone booth.

He's playing in front of huge crowds, New York Knicks' guard John Starks is a tough, emotional, fearless star who's been an intrical part of the team's rise to the top of the Eastern Conference this season.

He drives to the basket with reckless abandon, sacrifices his body by drawing offensive fouls, gets into classic trash-talking battles with opposing players, bombs away from three-point range with justifiable heat and it's like having a player-coach out there. Also, he's taught me some things that I need to learn because I never had the opportunity to learn them in college and in the CBA. Being under his tutelage has certainly helped me become the player that I am.

JS: The "Bad Boy" image that the Knicks have been branded with is that of a bad rap. Despite what some people misunderstand what he's about. Fans develop their opinions of a player from what they see on the court. However, in Starks' case you must look deeper. That's because John Starks, the basketball player and John Starks, the person are quite different.

His story is one of desire and determination. After attending four colleges, playing in the CBA and working at a grocery store, John Starks has finally made a name for himself in the NBA.

The undirect path he took to achieve his current status keeps him humble. He speaks in a low tone and keeps everything in perspective. Sitting down and talking with him this past Sunday afternoon was a refreshing experience. This young man is a considerate, honest gentleman that genuinely appreciates his fame and fortune.

Keith Idec: Has the level of success that you've achieved actually sunk in yet?

JS: No, not really. I've just tried to remain level-headed through it all. I think that this will all really hit me when my basketball career is over.

KI: After moving around from place to place, do you believe you've found a home in New York?

JS: I hope it is, but this business is kind of funny. Right now, I'm playing very good basketball and everyone around me seems to be very happy with my play. So, hopefully this will be a permanent home for me.

KI: After everything you've been through, how much easier has the financial security of a five-year, multi-million dollar contract made your job and your life in general?

JS: It feels real good to be able to take care of my family. I don't have to worry about which bills are going to be paid and which bills aren't going to be paid and that's a great feeling. The financial security gives me peace of mind and it allows me to rest easy at night.

KI: To what extent has Pat Riley had an influence on you?

JS: He's had a tremendous effect on myself and Anthony Mason. His reputation has given some added credibility to what Anthony and I have accomplished on the court. He's won four World Championships and has coached some of the best players to ever play the game in Magic Johnson, so he knows what it takes to be successful.

One of the best things about Pat is that he relates to players so well and it's like having a player-coach out there. Also, he's taught me some things that I need to learn because I never had the opportunity to learn them in college and in the CBA. Being under his tutelage has certainly helped me become the player that I am.

KI: Is the "Bad Boy" image that the Knicks have been branded with justifiable?

JS: We're the type of team that plays hard and physical. I think that when you play as aggressively as we do, you're going to be labeled as a dirty team. The old Detroit Pistons were the "Bad Boys" because they used to go out and take cheap shots on people. We're not like that. We just play hard-nosed basketball and try to win games.

KI: What would you like people to know about yourself that's not related to basketball?

JS: I give a lot credit to God for giving me a chance and making life a little bit easier for me. I'm off of the court, I'm a family man first and foremost. I love my wife and kids dearly and spending quality time with them is very important. Due to the fact that an NBA schedule is so hectic, those times are very precious.

KI: You've reached a level of success that could put you on an NBA All-Star team in the future. Is that a personal goal for you?

JS: At this point I'm just concerned with winning. I just want to remain patient, the individual honors will come in due time. I'll just take the accolades as they come.

KI: Can the Knicks get past Chicago and go on to win an NBA Championship this season?

JS: That's a realistic goal for us. The Knicks organization did a great job over the summer getting the players that we needed to reach the next level. We've also added some leadership to the team. So, now we'll just have to wait and see.

Red Hawks shot down by York, William Paterson

by Brian Falzarano

Are the Red Hawks overrated? Or did they just have one of those weeks? After exploding out of the gates at 14-2, MSC (16-5) has lost three of its last five including a 9-8 loss to York College (Pa.) at Pittser Field on Tuesday.

This game started out as if MSC, which beat York (10-9), 6-5 last year in the Mid-Atlantic Regionals, was in complete control.

Baseball

After all, Chris Rampone had a 4-1 lead in the fifth and was well out. The relief pitching should have held the lead. But three innings later, MSC was down 9-5, as York took its sword and stabbed the Red Hawks in their Achilles Heel - their relief pitching.

Of the infamous middle relievers, John Blachansky (1-1, 15.43 ERA) was tagged with the loss, giving up a 4-1 lead in the fifth and was taken out after another brutal outing from this relief corps.

MSC seemed to come alive in the eighth. Tony Martinez singled and Joe Critelli (4 hits, 4 RBI) hit a sacrifice fly to bring in the tying run. But the Red Hawks, with a flare for the dramatic, came back to score two more runs, pacing MSC's four-run rally, which cut the lead to 7-5.

Rampone scored a run in the ninth, and with two outs in the ninth, it again seemed over. But the Red Hawks, with a flare for the dramatic, again rose from the ashes. John Pallino singled and Ralph Yezza lined a 1-2 pitch over the center field fence to tie the game at 9-9, sending it to extra innings.

Although lost beneath their powerful hitting, their middle relief has been unsatisfactory. T.J. Costello (2-2) walked Paul Bumbaco and gave up a single to John D'Addetta, prompting Schoenig to bring in erratic right-hander Todd Sak, who responded the way many view a freshman - devoid of poise and out of control.

Sak then threw two wild pitches. The latter scored Bumbaco with the game-winning run.

"Our middle relief isn't very good right now. Games are won and lost in middle relief," Schoenig said emphatically. It has let too few games to get away and must improve if MSC has any hope of overtaking WPC.

"I think we will see them (WPC) at least two or three more times. We're not done yet," Schoenig said.

If MSC is going to reach its expectations, its middle relief had better shape up. Or the Red Hawks may ship out.

Can past glory be recaptured?

This upcoming weekend marks the onset and completion of one of the most spectacular events in the sport of track and field. The Penn Relays, it's where that athletes from every level of the sport meet to display the talent that they spend hours each day refining and developing. And the hopes of one day running the race that they have spent many long nights dreaming about.

Track Talk

by Mark Alan Belnay

For a handful of individuals this weekend will be a moment they will hold close to their hearts until the day they pass. For others who fail to achieve their magic moment it will be another rung on the ladder that will one day lead them to their dream.

For the MSC track and field team it is a chance to atone for all of the lost games and strilures that seem to have plagued this talented team throughout the season. For head coach John Blanton and his team it is culmination of hours of time spent watching films and motivating their athletes to reach the pinnacle of their talents. To be brief, it is their magic moment.

With the MSC team heading into the Penn Relays following a somewhat stronger performance than turned in during recent meets it's quite possible that the team may at last be hitting its stride in terms of putting it all together. Blanton, however, warns of being too optimistic based on this past weekend's results. "It may look good on paper, but in reality we are still lacking the fundamentals needed to perform at the Penn Relays," he said regarding the promise displayed statistically this past weekend at the Monmouth Relays. It has been this precise problem that has hung over the team since the onset of the season. The performances are, for the most part, good, but the practices are definitely comparable to watching paint peel as far as intensity is concerned.

With the MSC team being represented in the relay sections in the 1600 meters, 400 meters, 800 meters, and the sprint medley it has the talent to leave a lasting impression upon its Division I foes.

With the team awaiting the return of Sharon Lindsio from injury, the brunt of the leadership duties as far as the women's squad is concerned have fallen on the capable shoulders of Shantay Brame. This past weekend she let her rival Danielle Humphries of William Paterson know that there is still enough left to leave a trail for Humphries to follow to the finish line and disheartening seconds place finish. Brame qualified for the Nationals with a time of 25.20 in the 200 meters.

The men's team turned in several stellar performances this past weekend. The 400 meter relay team took first with a time of 41.84. The sprint medley team of Dwayne Stevens, Neal Rutt, Wayne Dennis, and Jacinto Aloyan will need to regain their old form and repeat their first place finish at Monmouth Relays.

Individually the men looked good at Monmouth with Stevens qualifying for Nationals in the 200 meters with a time of 21.36. Dennis took first in the 800 meters but didn't run at all close to his potential according to Blanton. As mentioned earlier in the article this is a weekend in which everything that the MSC team has gone through this year in terms of injury and disappointment can be forgotten. In the minds of the athletes and the coaching staff alike the ability and talent is not a question. It is the heart and determination that seems to be questionable going into the weekend.

Sometimes the best thing that can happen to a champion is to be knocked from the sky by those that have patiently waited for the opportunity to do so. It is into their hearts that these athletes must reach in order to regain that single moment of greatness, that magic moment that belongs only to them and will forever be a part of their memories.
