From the editor’s desk...

Calle-in-Chief

Here we go again...Is it possible that one letter from yours truly could spark such a controversy?[See pp. 14-15]

I have a few things I would like to make clear to the entire campus: The Montclarion is in the business of news reporting. I will personally oversee that this gets carried out in the most professional way we can do it. All are treated equally. No exceptions. Don't ask for exceptions. It will not happen.

Secondly, this newspaper, so long as I am the Editor-in-Chief, will strive to present international issues to our readership whenever it is timely and possible. There is no excuse for a newspaper to overlook major issues which affect us all. At times we are unable to report on all of them because we do not have a large enough staff or sufficient funding.

This brings me to my final edict. The printing cost of this publication you now hold in your hands is approximately $1700 per issue. We are budgeted approximately $2700 for printing the whole year!

Add office and production supplies to that. Now add over $600 weekly payroll that goes towards keeping a full-time advertising, production and office staff to perform certain duties that no one, in my three years here, has ever offered to do for free.

You see my point?

If we are to have enough time to dedicate to news reporting, which is our main objective, then we must be given sufficient funding! The paper looks like one big advertisement this year! I am, however, regretfully put in a position that requires me to deliver that kind of a paper to you.

Last year’s SGA, which I have no love lost for, decided to let my warnings go unheeded. They drastically undercut our proposed budget and left us no other alternative than to plan our year accordingly.

At this year’s leadership conference, which I discussed two weeks ago in this very column, I reached out to this year’s SGA and explained our situation. They were very receptive and expressed an interest in helping. I hope that they will do so.

On the lighter side...I would like to congratulate all those who participated in last week’s Homecoming. It was GRAND!!!

P.S. Hey Blue-eyes-- Looking forward to some lemon-drops and Rumplemintz! (I told you I’d mention you in here)!

See you at registration,

George Calle

3,500 attend Cypress Hill concert

by Kelly Schah

Three thousand, five hundred people attended the Cypress Hill/House of Pain/Whoopidiganz/Funkt doobiest concert, which included elaborate security measures, last Sunday without incident.

The event, organized by Class One Concerts, cost approximately $60,000. Tickets sales were initially low but picked up in the final days.

"We were absolutely thrilled at the turnout we received and the overwhelming support from all the students on the campus," said Paul Giamboi, president of Class One Concerts.

He added, "Being able to get our fifth of the undergraduate student body (2,000) to a Class One Concerts event makes us feel good that students are taking advantage of the programming they help fund."

Concern over the possibility that violence would erupt led to special security measures at the event but the concert, which lasted a little over four hours, was performed in relative peace.

"There were marvelous coordination considering the overwhelming numbers that attended," said Kevin Schoebel, assistant security supervisor at the event.

Five walk-through and several handheld metal detectors were used on the day of the event. Class One Concerts personnel and security chiefs were equipped with walkie-talkies to ensure communication across campus.

In addition to the regular campus police force, 80 Executive Security officers were also employed.

Montclair and Clifton police forces joined to direct traffic on and off the campus.

Officers were placed at all entrances to the campus and diverted concert goers to the Clove Road lot.

SGA Treasurer James Henaghan said, "We apologize to those students who may have been inconvenienced by the diversion of traffic in their attempted to attend weekend classes or to visit the library. We hope they understand the reason these measures were taken."

Henaghan added, "I feel the show was a huge success and proved to the doubting Thomases that the students can program such enormous events successfully."

Chris Natale, stage production manager, added that he wishes there were, "more people and a larger crowd" but "I'd rather have a small crowd that has a good time than a large crowd that doesn't."

Natale is grateful to the people who helped to put together the show and cleaned up.

"It's easy to sit and watch but it's not easy to get it together and take it down especially when you're not getting paid," said Natale.

Homecoming '93 proves to be a smashing success

by Glenn Steinberg

Homecoming '93, an annual event at MSC, was presented by the College Life Union Board (CLUB) this past weekend.

The festivities began on Friday night and did not end until late afternoon on Sunday.

According to Sam Rock, president of CLUB, "Homecoming was a big success."

Rock said the approximate $11,500 spent by CLUB was spent mainly on police officers, prize money, fire works for halftime at the game, trophies, reimbursements of the floats, a disc jockey and a donation to the fire department that assisted in the bonfire.

He also said that everything went smoother than in the past, stating that there were no major complaints and there was a good attendance for the parade.

This year's homecoming consisted of different events such as hay rides, a bonfire, the football game, a concert, the announcement of the Homecoming King and Queen and the parade.

On Friday night around 8:00 p.m., a bonfire and pep rally took place near the Field House. At the rally, different players from the MSC Red Hawks football team spoke to the crowd about Saturday night's game against Kean College. As part of the rally, the Red Hawk cheerleaders were present and performed different cheers for the football team.

Also at the bonfire, Gina Vasel, treasurer of CLUB, announced the five finalists for the Homecoming King and Queen.

After the rally, hay rides which were sponsored by Tau Kappa Epsilon (TKE) fraternity were given for free in the parking lots in large flatbed trucks.

Fraternities and sororities built their floats out in Lots 22 and 23 after the bonfire, which were displayed in the parade on Saturday.

The parade began at 12:00 p.m. and ended around 2:30 p.m. The parade started with the presentation of the float made by Delta Xi Delta sorority and Theta Xi fraternity and the float for Residence Life ended the parade. The fraternities and sororities built their floats to represent different themes such as a movie, a specific era or any other motif while they dance and/or lip sync to music. The winners of the contest were announced after the football game.

The game which pitted Kean College against MSC began at 7:00 p.m. and ended with MSC's fourth consecutive victory.

After the game the winners of the Homecoming King and Homecoming Queen were announced by Selina Lawson, Homecoming King and Queen Chairperson. Angelina Chi Chillemi of Delta Phi Epsilon and Owen Bonner of Alpha Chi Rho were the winners which was determined by student voting.

The victor for best performance for the float was the one by TKE and Sigma Delta Phi. They modeled their float after "Alice in Wonderland Through the Looking Glass," and decorated their float as the cheshire cat.

On Sunday, the lone event was the concert hosted by Class One Concerts. The concert included four bands: Cypress Hill, House of Pain, Funkdoobiest and Whoopidiganz. It began at 1:00 p.m. and ended around 4:00 p.m.

Gera said she is concerned about theft from the Field House because there is valuable equipment in there. She added that though Lawton may not do anything wrong himself, he may lend the key to someone and they may steal equipment.

"The number of keys that are available are limited for security reasons," Gera said.

Gera did say that she never heard about the incident with the one-pitch softball tournament which took place on Oct. 2, but does not believe that it is much of a problem.

"I don't want to make a big deal out of something that's not a big deal."

According to Lawton, Gera who is involved in Campus Recreation, wants to run intramurals and have officials run it, not the students.

Lawton said that the most recent problem they are having is with flag-football, their biggest event of the year.

He said that because the track is still under construction, they do not have use of it because the construction company is responsible if someone were to get injured.

Lawton said that he was told by Gera that the track was supposed to be finished by the beginning of the semester.

Gera has now said that she hopes to have the track completed by the end of the month, which is too late in Lawton's views.

Lawton said he just wants access to what is theirs, which is a key for the outside and inside door of the Field House, keys to their lockers and a key to Gym Six in Panzer for basketball and volleyball.

"I want to have the opportunity to bridge the gap between Italian Americans and the rest of the campus," Socio said.

An obstacle Socio faced was the difficulty of getting organized because, "I had to get all the information from the past executive board," Socio said.

The treasurer of I.A.S.O., Domenia Parisi, 22, a senior and marketing major, said "this year we have a strong executive board." Parisi also said that "part of the organizations failure in the last two years was due to a lack of communication between the executive board members...they weren't willing to do anything."

In order to attract new members, Socio and Parisi said they will sponsor trips and events for the entire student body, not just Italian Americans.

"Anybody can join," Parisi said.

SGA president, James A. Cotter, who is also an Italian American had a decision in reestablishing the organization. He backed the organization when they were first chartered in the Spring of 1992. He said the I.A.S.O. is important because it's a place where Italians can discuss their interests and needs.

Cotter said if he had the time to be part of the organization it would depend on the topics being discussed. "If they're going to talk about mom's famous lasagna, I wouldn't go, but if they discussed issues like politics, why not?" Cotter said.

Cotter also said the SGA will match dollar for dollar the money attained through fund raisers sponsored by the organization.

Dr. Possiedi, who teaches at MSC, is one of the professors within the organization. He said he hopes more students join this year since the campus population of Italian Americans is nearly 45 percent. He also said "the students do not have to be Italian, anyone can come to the meetings."

Rosangela Cappelluti and Erica Pecorelli, who are members of the I.A.S.O. said that all Italian Americans should come together to learn more about their culture and that it's a great opportunity to meet other Italians and feel the unity of the social group.

Socio said that 20 new members have joined so far, and hopes that more will come to the meetings.

The meetings will be held every Monday at 3 p.m. in room 338 in the new building, all are welcome.

Close your eyes and picture yourself in another place and another time. Picture yourself in a five-and-dime that was your "home away from home" for so many years. Picture yourself reuniting with old friends and sharing old memories of a time long ago. This is the feeling you will get when you are watching Come Back to the Five and Dime, Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean. This outstanding play portrayed the lives of a group of friends that were changed by the image of one man - James Dean.

The play was inspired by the remnants of Reata, home of the cattle rich Benedicts of Giant, the last film made by James Dean. As Ed Graczyk wrote Five and Dime, the play was filmed in a small five-and-dime in McCarthy, Texas. It flashes from the years 1955 to 1975. Graczyk succeeds by the image of one man - James Dean. However, being the best written song on the record, it also tells of Cobain's admitting to being different, but of being happy. In songs such as "Serve the Servants," (self-appointed judges judge more than they have sold), "Rape Me." (Hate)

One of the things that made this performance so special was the work put into it by the students of the Department of Broadcasting, Speech Communication, Dance and Theater of MSC. The fantastic set was designed by Sharon Mayerchak, a senior in the BFA Design/Production program. The set was one of the most character without flaw.

The production is directed by guest directors, Jim Ligon. This actor/director is a credit to his profession. He has directed and performed in many plays. The Mainstage Theatre Series is lucky to have a talent as great as his on their side.

The remarkable cast includes Rebecca Rhodes (Juana), Jennifer Ritchkoff (Mona, 1975), Melanie Stroming (Mona, 1955), Elyse Wolf (Sissy, 1975), Jennifer Celia (Sissy, 1955), Karen Finckenor (Joanne), Frank DiGuccio (Joe), Antionette Mangano (Stella May) and Beth Laird (Edna Louise). Every member of this cast did a superb job. Their portrayal of their characters was terrific and their talents are endless. All of the students who participated in this production are an asset to their profession and to MSC.

Come Back to the Five-and-Dime Jimmy Dean, Jimmy Dean is definitely a must see!

Don't miss the opportunity to take yourself to another time and another place. Bravo to all who made it possible!
First off, let me say that I did not attend the Friar's Club roast in which Whoopi Goldberg and Ted Dansen turned a few heads and raised a few eyebrows, and all that was said I heard second-hand on the news.

However, after listening to the news and endless commentary on the subject, I feel that a few things must be said, and then the issue will be closed within the borders of my column.

The hubbub ensued when Ted Dansen entered the room in Al Jolsen blackface, and broke out in a comedy routine that offended some of the guests.

I am also aware that the statements made were off-color and could be construed as racist, et cetera.

Despite all that happened, I can't see what the big deal was. Okay, I understand how Ted's little routine may have offended people. That's the risk any comedian takes when he/she goes on stage, or for that matter, any public place. Dice's comedy exists to offend, and there is quite a bit that offended me. Eddie Murphy's Raw offended me. Buddy Hackett sometimes rubs me the wrong way. Here's the red flag on the play - this wasn't in public. It was a private affair. It was not open to the public.

Here's the second red flag - the comedy routine that Ted Dansen performed was written by Whoopi Goldberg. In addition, news reports said that Whoopi was having a great time at the roast. The people whom the Friar's Club were roasting were roasted, and it was the guests, especially Montel, who were offended.

Comedy was based on making fun of yourself. How many Jewish jokes do Mel Brooks, Buddy Hackett, or Jackie Mason perform and have they been so publicly reprimanded? Robert Townsend based an entire routine on making fun of where he came from and about being black in general. Pat Cooper does it all the time. As a matter of fact, Jackie Mason and Mel Brooks agree on one thing - politically correct is killing comedy.

I'm not an evil person, and I can see how something like this would offend another human being. But if Whoopi Goldberg writes the skits and Ted Dansen performs them, where lies the problem? If Dice comes at me with a joke/crack that offends me, he'd respond with a resounding "Tough. Deal with it.

Why can't the same be for Whoopi and Ted? See you next week.

The Fashion Boutique
by Deanna Mazza

Fall '93 for men's fashion is in one word, "trim." The "boxer" suits of the 80's are forgotten with the introduction of a narrower form, Scott Omelianuck (GQ) Magazine says the suits that will be gracing the work-place are less padded, have more buttons to accentuate form and more material has been added to the jacket's waist area.

All of these changes give way to a softer look. Ultimately, these new garbs are somewhat reminiscent of the 20's and 30's. The jackets themselves have smaller holes and a higher button stance which surely gives the suit a more professional look.

The material being used this season is seemingly lightweight. Tweeds of all sorts are being used and can be layered due to their soft and delicate texture.

To accentuate these suits, Dan Rodricks (GQ), has a vintage idea. Old ties that can be found at garage sales as well as antique stores are making a comeback. These dapper ties are splashed with outrageous colors and designs that can be a lot of fun to collect and wear. The best thing about these ties are the price, vintage ties can be purchased for as little as two dollars. Compared with the ties bought at department stores for forty dollars or more, this is a great buy.

It seems that the shoe this season is rugged and comfortable. The popular style is the lace-up Oxford with either a light leather sole or a rugged rubber sole that is smooth or like a work-boot. The primary leather being used on new shoes and boots is suede. Warm colors like blacks, light browns and light greens are the way to go this season.

The standout on this record is "Heart-Shaped Box." Cobain's vocals are excellent, beginning very light and getting louder as the song gets faster. While a great song, Z-100 has maimed it already, which means that it can never be a classic.

In Utero is definitely harder sounding than Nevermind or Incesticide, but it is their best work yet, despite terrible production.

Charles Barkley, who had Nirvana as his musical guest when he hosted Saturday Night Live, said, "I am not a role model and these guys definitely are not role models."

Nirvana doesn't care about fitting in or being famous. They just want to make good music, which isn't so bad.

I've fallen and it's your responsibility to get me up!

Welcome to my first column, and a belated welcome to the '90s. Oh, which '90s do I refer to? The decade of victimization. A time when people are scurrying about, attempting to pin on themselves a dilemma, debilitation or handicap that somehow exempts them from the mainstream and moreover demands kid-glove treatment and suspends scrutinization. An era when concepts of racism and sensitivity are distorted to the point of being almost unrecognizable.

Although this immature condition, like a horrible cancer, has eaten its way into America’s culture, its origin is not yet attributable to any one factor. In the final analysis, perhaps the majority of the mass media shall be held accountable. The current information age, where everything is purportedly bigger, faster and more thorough, can certainly sway individual’s views, molding them into an enclave of unchallenged groupthink. Or maybe it’s a different response to this stimulus. It could be that the inundation of technology has left people beguiled to a point at which a lack of self-confidence has led to an ingrained paranoia of sorts.

A recent example of this “suffering martyr” chic came in the form of a letter to the editor in the Oct. 7 issue of the Montclarion. The author was Erik Hunter, Director Of Stone Hall. Hunter, who went out of his way in his inverte to state he was an “African-American” (note: this is a ‘90s buzzword; what did he call himself 10 years ago?) attempted to string together campus news events and even a cartoon in an effort to demonstrate a lack of sensitivity in these very pages. He also castigated the Montclarion for using available photos.

Logical explanations are easy. In journalism, the main purpose of reporting is its namesake, collating detailed information to tell of a particular happenstance. A photo is a valuable asset to a writer and, if available, can say 1,000 words. Hunter, obviously running out of gas, cited the Far Side comic from Sept. 30, claiming it was insensitive to African-Americans. Upon inspection of the piece of animation it proves nary impossible to detect any sort of racial discrimination. The drawing utilized figures that were the color white on a boat of Viking design. They were not evocative of any particular segment of the human race, save for fictitious take-offs like Mr. Suiter and the Michelin Tire Man.

The formula followed by Hunter (like so many other people) was simple. First, identify one’s supposed overriding disparity. The purpose here is to qualify for kid-glove treatment. Second, suggest and/or imply racism. The goal here is somewhat akin to showing light to Dracula. Third, demand sensitivity, which initially sounds normal but this sensitivity apparently has a silent hyphenation, spelled “-o-v-e-r-.” Mr. Hunter’s composition serves a great purpose; its just not the one he intended. It displays the willingness of people to rely on crunches of heritage under the guise of equality.

In conclusion, what can we do to curb this burgeoning counter-culture? People can start to really open their eyes to what’s around them, introspect and replace negativity with a more sanguine outlook. Paranoia must be replaced with a concept of self-worth. The gained perspective will put into focus more important concepts, for instance the concept that a substratum of sensitivity is equality. I feel the ‘90s are going to shape up as a period of growing pains in America’s and the world’s history and would like to try to help it along. It has been said nothing is easy - but sometimes it could be easier.

What are the minority fraternities all about? Party or Commitment?

To the Editor,

What are the purposes of black fraternities on a college campus? Are fraternities’ primary purpose just throwing parties and gratifying their social prestige? What role in the campus community are the vanguard fraternities establishing? As I converse with members of these various groups, I hear the word “conscious” surface. Is it “conscious” to make thousands of dollars a year from the black campus community and not generate some of the money in educational programs for that same black campus community.

If these black male organizations are “conscious,” they would attempt to preempt the worsening black academic retention at MSC. Simply, many blacks at this institution do not stay in school to graduate. One would presuppose that the vanguards of the minority Greek community will divert some of their influence to study sessions in order to increase our black graduation. These very same Greeks have the audacity to conceptualize that they “run the yard!” It is very simple to run a controlled environment such as college; but can these Greek boosters rule the area in which they permanently reside. Simply, the urban areas. My paradigm enables me to see what these fraudulent, superficial, boastful Greeks are about - nothing much.

Tim Dawg

Smells like school

Plenty of people in MSC’s administration, staff, faculty and students are little wary going into last weekend. A certain contingent of the weekend the same way legion of bell-bottomed couch potatoes like Eviel Keneval stultified the late seventies - they wanted to see the part of the draw lay in the possibility the daredevil might fall. This weekend the campus has been sleepwalking. Last weekend they were loud.

MSC’s happiest weekend of the calendar year to date was last weekend. From the start of the festivities and pep rally near the Field House, through the hay rides, the coronation of the new King and Queen, the biggest parade in memory of Cypress Hill, the campus on the hill that slept through a white Christmas, never slowed down. Some might even say it was “spinning loud.”

Hearty congratulations are due to the organizations Cyshoe and the Greeks for providing the fuel, the SGA for paying the student body for lighting the match (as well as keeping the fire from getting too loud). The programmers of activity have proven their competence, and proven its maturity. Maybe now someone can start thinking about resurre...
like school spirit

The administration, staff, faculty and student body were a tad. A certain contingent of the campus looked forward to dozens of bell-bottomed couch potatoes looked forward to an seventies - they wanted to see him make it, but a strong ability the daredevil might fall just a wee bit short of the.

requests of MSC cleared the barrels. And then some. I probably don't know this, but the MSC social calendar week. Spring Week was seven days of programing that Carnival. Two years ago, a rogue click of ruffians marking a riot on the opening night of the event. Since walking. Last weekend the alarm clock rang.

end of the calendar year to date started promptly on Friday evening. Do not forget, oh "Woman of Color," that "piss barren" America "with its war, corruption, hate, and greed" unfortunately feeds, clothes and educated you....

An Open Letter to the "Woman of Color."
As I read your response to Editor-in-chief George Calle's Sept. 30th column in the Oct. 7 issue, I was disgusted by your apparent ignorance and horrified at the fact that you attend this school. I realize that you were highly offended and upset by Calle's brutally honest remarks on his personal opinions of Somalia and American involvement over there. But I feel you should have written with more dignity and class on the reason of your discontent with his remarks, rather than the poorly chosen slang words you opted to represent you and people of color. You should have spoken with more knowledge when addressing the problems of Somalia. Do not forget, oh "Woman of Color," simply because you are from Somalia or are a minority does not necessarily make you the spokesperson on Somalia or her people. You lost that right when you moved to America! Do not forget, oh "Woman of Color," that "piss barren" America "with its war, corruption, hate, and greed" unfortunately feeds, clothes and educated you and hundreds like you. That causes me to hate people like you who have no respect or appreciation for what this great country gives us: life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. I am not so foolish as to think that everyone gets his/her fair share here.

There are good and bad aspects to everything in life. But I also know that thousands upon thousands of my people never got their share. My people suffer from poverty, hunger, oppression and ignorance in South America on a daily basis with no hope for rescue. I am one of the lucky ones, able to live my life as I please. Unfortunately, you, and others like you, are lucky too. As I'm sure you have already discovered that being a minority in America (while having its disadvantages) has many advantages such as; special admission programs, affirmative action, financial aid programs, special considerations and adjustments based on race.

So, oh "Woman of Color" why don't you do this country and our school a favor and go back to wherever you came from!

Jacqueline Davila

Something tells us the Wonder® people will be sending a letter soon*

To the Editor,

I am writing in response to a letter by Erik Hunter printed in the Oct. 7 issue of the Montclarion. Last two paragraphs - no problem. As for the first two...

Hey Erik Hunter, you have too much fucking free time on your hands! The Far Side cartoon from Sept. 30 was hysterical and was by no means derogatory to “African-Americans” in case you didn’t know. African-Americans were not the only peoples in the world to be slaves! It’s called black humor (no offense) and if you don’t like it, then don’t read it! Nobody forced you to read the cartoon. I suggest you stay far away from Gary Larson and his type of publications and you will be very happy!

P.S. You know, I’m sure you’ll be quite offended by the Oct. 7 Far Side since it’s derogatory towards dead people and I’m sure there’s gotta be somebody in your family that’s dead.

Dino Dilauro

* (see The Far Side, page 18)

Equal opportunity oppression

The idea that African-Americans were the only slaves is plain ignorance and very racially insensitive to those of us whose ancestors were also slaves.

To the Editor,

It has become apparent to me that some readers of the Montclarion have allowed ignorance to destroy their vision and reasoning.

Erik Hunter’s letter claiming that The Far Side comic strip was racially insensitive is a display of his ignorance. Unless he is blind he can obviously see that the slaves were not African-Americans. Judging by the fact that it is a Viking ship the slaves were probably English (since that is who the Vikings used as slaves, not African-Americans). The idea that African-Americans were the only slaves is plain ignorance and very racially insensitive to those of us whose ancestors were also slaves.

Another issue African-Americans related, are still being oppressed by the English, but because England is an American ally no one cares. So Mr. Hunter before you make comments about racial insensitivity you better take your own advice and “check yourself”.

Reader suggests Freshman Comp. prerequisite for letter writers

To the Editor,

It is with some concern that I’ve read the latest boardside directed at the editorial board of the Montclarion. I was also mildly disturbed by the fact that a number of the inane writers who wrote to the editor in last week’s edition couldn’t even pursue their righteous indignation aside long enough to write in standard English; for but one example, I challenge “A Woman of Color” to find “ignorant ass mind” in The Elements of Style.

If Erik Hunter had a sufficient working knowledge of history to say nothing of sense of humor, he would have realized that the ship depicted in Gary Larson’s cartoon is in fact of Norse design.

The assertion that the Montclarion depicts African-Americans as “chattel” is not only mistaken, but also a cheap shot at sensationalism....

I offer the following point to the brothers of Phi Beta Sigma: If, after due investigation, the allegations raised against Coach Blanton are found to be true, he will have himself, and no one else, to blame for any detrimental effect which his actions have had upon either his reputation or his employment. Whatever his achievements since 1988, he must still be held responsible for his conduct—regardless of his race.

I, too, offer my support to Mr. Blanton, as well as the sincere hope that his case is investigated with all the fairness he deserves. I also hope that the Montclarion, in trying to uphold the very journalistic standards which Erik Hunter claims they lack, continues to give him the same level-headed coverage which they have offered up to this point... regardless of the hue and cry raised by their detractors.

Correspondence Theatre proudly presents:

“A hero for the ‘90s”

To the Editor,

Up in the sky; “It’s a culture.” “It’s a fly. No it’s Politically-Incorrect Man.” Faster than the spread of a malicious rumor; more powerful than public opinion; able to leap tall piles of dirty socks in a single bound. In our darkest hour of ineptitude, when we can’t even turn around without taking an opinion poll, he is here to save society from itself. For the first time an exclusive interview....

Me- Do you mind if I label you as stereotypical super hero? P.U.M.- No not at all.

Me- What do you think of the Montclarion’s racist editors? P.U.M.- I think that they have seen the error of their ways. On the back cover of this week’s Montclarion is a tribute to a great Black man and on the front cover there is a group of blacks dragging a dead White guy.

Me- How about the Coach Blanton controversy? P.U.M.- Hey, he’s a faculty member who, according to sources, is being brought up on some serious charges. Montclarion being the school paper and all; it makes sense for then to cover it. Even put it on the front page. Me- Do you believe that President Reid’s judgment in the Lisa Pageant was degrading to women? P.U.M.- No... What else are they good for? Besides there is a woman in the highest elected office in the land. The strives they can make when we let them are unbelievable.

Me- A man of color, namely green, did you find last week’s Far Side offensive.

P.U.M.- Actually, I thought it was hilarious. But in all seriousness, I can’t believe you asked that question. The cartoon in question depicted a Viking long boat. Vikings used White slaves, much like yourself; they never used Black ones. The slaves were captured enemies much like the early Black slaves were. No your history and you know yourself; I always say. Though, it seems to me that they’re asking for the backlash from grave robbers, in the latest Far Side.

Me- Hey wait a minute I’m no slave. P.U.M.- Yes, you are. You are a slave to political correctness; bound by the chains of public opinion. The chains made from the mistakes of your forefathers. These chains which I will break for you and your fellow man.

Me- Well, he just flew out a window and this concludes our interview.

Frisky Montclarion editors jump gun, ruin Blanton

To the Editor,

In regard to the Coach Blanton case: I would have hoped that the Montclarion would not have let this escalate into a Senator Packwood scandal, but now that the damage is done, I would like to say a word about coach Blanton and the situation in general. We should keep in mind before judging Coach Blanton that this has happened to teachers in New Jersey before and at least one has been proven innocent, but not until his reputation had already been ruined by journalists who jumped the gun, and assumed he was guilty.

Two of Coach Blanton’s female track students worked with me; they admired Coach Blanton, and considered him a good man and a fine coach. He has always been considered a good man and a fine coach. Always concerned with individual interests, Blanton expressed an interest in broadcasting for instance, he would bring them to the T.V. center for a personal tour. How many coaches would do this for their students? I was shocked by the allegations of sexual harassment and at this point I am not yet willing to believe them. By now, Coach Blanton probably has as much cause to complain of harassment as the unnamed students (whose identity, unlike his, is being protected).

Coach Blanton probably has as much cause to complain of harassment as the unnamed students (whose identity, unlike his, is being protected). The harm is done to Coach Blanton, but it also hurts the cause of feminism to allow our campuses to degenerate into a witch hunt atmosphere where sexual and racial tensions have begun to override our academic concerns. Above all, I, the students and faculty of this campus should give a fair chance to man who has given more than his fair share of time and effort to helping students.

Quest for glory makes Montclarion unsuitable for framing

To the Editor,

Atrocious is right! There could not have been a more appropriate title to put on [last week’s] Montclarion. However, it should not have been used to describe the picture of the dead American soldier being dragged through the streets of Somalia, but rather it should have been used to describe the Montclarion and its staff for deciding to put that cover on the front page.

Yes the public has the right to know what’s going on, and yes the media has the responsibility to inform us of these things, but in this instance, I feel the media has made a very poor error in judgement. It was bad enough that I had to see this horrible image on television and plastered on the front page of every newspaper, but in the Montclarion too. Come on guys, show some sympathy. This picture was totally uncalled for. You guys are a non-profit organization, right? So why the picture? You don’t have to worry about sales and profits! But in the Montclarion’s never-ending effort to be the best college paper around, you threw your morals out the window for this one.

I must thank the Montclarion, however, because in your decision to be just like all the other three concerned President Clinton’s health insurance issue (‘wow,’ that’s a newswrecker), the Somalia problems, and finally, the Russian Parliament upheaval. Now I ask you, only three things happened at this college last week! Were there only three things to talk about?

What about the hardwork and preparation that goes into Homecoming (which happened last week, in case this paper forgot over it)? Or the ongoing renovations in Russ Hall? In fact, there should be a “construction update” in this paper every week. What about mentioning New Jersey Network and how it will broadcast last week’s football game on Sunday morning? How many coaches would do this for their team? What about some faculty stories? We do have teachers who have not been arrested on this campus somewhere, don’t we? The only time a faculty-member is mentioned in this paper is when he or she is either fired or accused of something.

The bottom line is that I can read the New York Times or the Star-Ledger any time I want, to discover or find out about important happenings. I do not need to come into school on Thursday morning and see the same pictures and read the same stories I’ve been seeing and reading about all week, in the school’s newspaper.

I do not need to come into school on Thursday morning and see the same pictures and read the same stories I’ve been seeing and reading about all week, in the school’s newspaper.

To the Editor,

I think its time to change the name of this newspaper. Here are some suggestions: How about, The New York Montclarion Times, Or the Star Montclarion Ledger? Better yet, what about The Bergen Montclarion Record? Or the Ashby Park Montclarion Press?

It is refreshing, and quite relieving to know that when I spend the entire week under a rock in my black cave, and have absolutely no idea what is going on in the outside world, that I can come to college and pick up the school newspaper and find out about all the world’s events. In mean, if it were not for the Montclarion, my God, anybody know anything?

What great newswreckers to put on both covers last week: the Somalia situation on the front, and Michael Jordan on the back. I see MSC connection right away! Jordan must have mentioned MSC in an interview once while golfing, therefore meriting a back page spread, and the Somalia situation, well, there is “ia” in Somalia to match the “ai” in Montclarion. That must be it!

What’s going on over there! This is the school newspaper, is it not? Shouldn’t we have school issues on both of the covers? Shouldn’t the inside pages be filled with school-related issues? Granted, there should be columns and editorials devoted to world and national issues, but the front pages? Its like no one knew about these stories folks.

Here’s an example: There were six total news stories in last week’s issue, starting on page three and ending on page seven. Only three had to do with MSC, just half. The other three concerned President Clinton’s health insurance issue (‘wow,’ that’s a newswrecker), the Somalia problems, and finally, the Russian Parliament upheaval. Now I ask you, only three things happened at this college last week! Were there only three things to talk about?

I would like to see things about MSC. If this is not the case, then change your name, start renting space from the college, and sell your paper in a box on the corner.

Oh, and by the way, how about writing one headline without using an exclamation point.....

MSC declaws Cougars, 16-14
Martess and Ruiz power Red Hawks to fourth straight victory

by Brian Falzarano

For those of you wondering what the difference of a week makes, it may not be applicable in this instance.

Powered by long touchdown runs by Neal Ruiz and Jerry Martress, the Red Hawks inched by the Kean Cougars for the 18th time in 19 tries, 16-14, before a homecoming crowd of 5,618 at Sprague Field on Saturday.

Football

Although it was not as close as the score indicated, after almost shameful performance last week against FDU-Madison, MSC (4-0, 1-0 NJAC) came out slow and almost did not live to stay unbeaten.

“I don’t think we played a real good game today,” said Ruiz, who is also a track star at MSC. “They weren’t as good as the game score said.”

Head coach Rick Giancola had a different take on the victory. “I’ve got mixed feelings about the win,” he said. “I don’t think the score reflects how chances.

besides this, the Red Hawks committed three cardinal sins, as they had three scoring opportunities and only got two points out of them. That is like having three golden eggs and deciding to crack them to make an omelette.

“We have to be able to finish it by putting points on the board,” Giancola said. “We have to concentrate more.”

The first sin occurred in the first quarter. Kean put a snap over punter Kurt Wieboldt’s head, which was recovered by Wolsko at the Kean 5 yard line and was ironic considering Wolsko also had a bad snap.

After two plays, Volker threw a pass to Tyrone Rolls that would have been a touchdown if it didn’t deflect off of Rolls’ hands into Will Lane’s hands.

Women’s tennis seeks second straight winning season

by Karen Plumstead

The MSC women’s tennis team’s season has been a rollercoaster ride. The Red Hawks make the uphill battle to victory, but come sailing down the other side to defeat. As the season nears to a close, the Red Hawks hope to stay on top of the hill.

The Red Hawks (7-4-1) tried to avenge last year’s 6-3 loss to NYU on Monday, but fell short. MSC rallied for the win, but darkness set in on the Red Hawks to keep them from victory. It was decided that the competition would result in a tie with NYU due to darkness. No. 3 singles player Leanna Guido played three sets before her rival succumbed to defeat. She then went on to join up with Jen Kolodziej in a doubles win.

MSC improved their record to 7-4 after defeating Hunter College 6-3 on Sunday. Head coach Brian McLaughlin was pleased to see an improvement from last year, when Hunter beat MSC, 5-4.

“It’s nice to see an increase of individual games won from year to year,” he said.

Traci Szymanski’s match created some sparks for the Red Hawks. In Szymanski’s first set, she was down 1-5. She came back to win the set 7-6 in a tiebreaker. She later went on to win the match.

Szymanski said, “When it came down to it, I wanted it more than she did!”

Jen Kolodziej also showed she had the guts to go the distance. She defeated rival Roweie Plechecki 3-6,3-7,5- in a lengthy No. 4 singles match. The MSC high didn’t last for long.

A serious blow occurred as MSC dropped a tough 5-4 defeat to Rowan College on Saturday. Rowan reversed the 5-4 outcome from the ’92 season, this time Rowan as the victor.

MSC and Rowan seemed to be deadlocked after the single matches, 3-3, when Guido and Kolodziej pulled off doubles victory, to give MSC a 4-3 lead. It wasn’t enough, however, as Rowan’s impenetrable first and third doubles teams rallied triumphantly to secure the win.

Just two days after struggling to win any points against Kutztown, MSC dominated the courts at Upsala, 9-0.

Volleyball shatters school win record
Janish and Fejan lead Red Hawks to victories No. 10 & 11

by Nicole Festa

At a time when the MSC football team is grabbing all of the headlines, the MSC women's volleyball team continues to soar along in its path of new found respectability.

They have set a new standard of credibility, and last Thursday against FDU-Madison, set a new school record for wins. The victory, number 10 for the Red Hawks, surpassed the old record of nine set in 1991.

This accomplishment pleased fourth year head coach Anita Kubicka. "I am very much a competitor. Since the program is still developing, that says a lot," she said.

MSC (11-6, 0-3 NJAC) won its most recent game this past Saturday on Homecoming, pulling out three hard fought sets for a 15-8, 15-12, 15-13 upset over Division II Kutztown University.

Junior Jill Janish made this win possible with a fine performance. The NJAC Player of the Week sparked her team with 11 kills and two aces. Also, Anneliese Fejan set a school record with 141 kills.

The record, one of the 16 the Red Hawks have erased from the record books this season, had stood since 1991, when Tori Muller had 132.

In the previously mentioned game against FDU-Madison, Janish had six kills and a school record 25 digs and Fejan added eight kills and 16 digs as MSC dropped the Jersey Devils, 15-2, 9-15, 15-4, 15-3.

However, MSC began the week on a flat note as they were drubbed by first place Rutgers-Newark, 8-15, 8-15, 3-15. Forget that Rutgers-Newark was that dominant. It was that MSC was that sluggish.

"We were terrible," Kubicka said, obviously upset at how her team played. "They (her players) were flat. It was probably the worst game I've seen us play as far as movement.

The loss kept them in last place in the NJAC. But despite a bad game, at least they have been respectable. That's more than they have been in the past.

Newcomer Sharon Scott said of the Upsala victory, "I received valuable court experience and felt a sense of belonging to my new tennis team."

McLaughlin said, "It was a key match, we needed to uplift our spirits from Kutztown."

Unfortunately, MSC took an all-expected beating from Kutztown University on Oct. 6. It was an exact repeat of the 9-0 beating it received from Kutztown in the '92 season. Kutztown overpowered the Red Hawks in both singles and doubles competition.

McLaughlin said, "We gave it our all, but they are a tough set of tennis players."

Red Hawks head into must win weeks

by Keith A. Idee

The time has come for the MSC men’s soccer to step up. If the Red Hawks have any chance to get a bid to the NCAA tournament, they must put together a winning streak of some sort in the upcoming two weeks to even be considered by the seedings committee.

Men’s soccer

Should there even be a remote possibility of MSC getting the NCAA bid, the Red Hawks (7-4-1) will need the players that are currently injured to return to the lineup.

This season has been a frustrating one for the Red Hawks due to the frequent injuries and the four losses by a total of five goals.

The frustration continued last Thursday night in MSC’s 1-0 loss to SUNY-Albany at Sprague Field. Although the Red Hawks outshot the Great Danes, 13-11, they couldn’t score on the SUNY-Albany defense.

MSC’s leading scorer Erik Neubart’s 10-yard shot hit the crossbar and the Red Hawks eventually lost their third game in five tries.

Sophomore midfielder Alex Zapata returned to action this week after missing six games to bolster the MSC lineup in its 3-0 win over Rutgers Newark last Wednesday.

But just when things on the injury front looked better, junior forward Ricardo Jaramillo went down with a foot injury in the SUNY-Albany loss. He and junior back Melken Noriega (also a foot injury) are both expected back in about a week.

MSC’s big test comes this Saturday when the Red Hawks travel to Pomona (also a foot injury) are both expected back in about a week.

MSC’s big test comes this Saturday when the Red Hawks travel to Pomona to take on the 12-1 Stockton State Ospreys. Stockton, third in the NJAC, are the surprise team of the conference this season.

Untouchable!

The Red Hawks slipped past Kean, 16-14, to stay undefeated (Falzarano, p. 20)
