The SGA Debates...So this is who you voted for*

by Bonnie Dexter Greenspan

*Because of the rain delay, we regretfully couldn't have the debate coverage in last week's issue.

The SGA debates were held last Thursday in the Student Center Quad. Originally scheduled for Wednesday but delayed due to rain, the event was attended by approximately 100 - 200 people.

Nominees for president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and Board of Trustees (BOT) alternate stated their positions and responded to questions from a panel consisting of current SGA president James "Appetite" Cotter, WMSC General Manager Mike Hyde and Rich Adams, Greek Council president. In addition, members of the audience were given the opportunity to address the nominees. James Henaghan, currently SGA treasurer, acted as moderator.

Natalie Vaccaro, running unopposed for BOT alternate, a non-voting position, describes it as being "the most powerful student," because she would be "dealing with issues that the SGA will deal with." She said she would work to get the student voting member into closed BOT sessions and vowed, "They will hear me roar."

The nominees for Vice President are April Steinmetz and Francois Dauder. Both have held the position of SGA attorney general. Steinmetz, a sophomore, running for treasurer and believes her experience will enable her to be "fair and objective" as SGA VP.

Steinmetz also stressed the need for better publicity for weekend students.

Dauder also stated his concern for safety on campus and said he sees a need for more effective Campus Police. He also said that he plans to do more work to get the student voting member into closed BOT sessions and vowed, "They will hear me roar."

Sal Anderton
SGA President

"I'm excited to start working as SGA President," said SGA President elect Sal Anderton. "As of Monday. I'm going to start digging in and planning for next semester." Anderton, an SGA member for three years and a Board of Trustees member for two years, says "he knows the system well" and since he only has six credits left plans to take three credits in the fall and spring so he can concentrate on being SGA President. He hopes to get the students more involved and enthusiastic about MSC.

"I want everyone to like this place as much as I do," said Anderton. "Why don't we have more fun here?" Anderton asked.

Anderton criticized the "asinine" Residence Life policy which restricts the number of visitors a student can have and said it was "not a party policy.

Anderton also would like to make MSC a more "user friendly" institution and proposed an SGA academic affairs hotline, which students could call about problems with grades, professors and courses.

He would also work towards implementing a phone in registration system which would end the long lines and tiresome waiting during registration.

April Steinmetz
SGA Vice President

"I'm overwhelmed," said SGA Vice President elect April Steinmetz. "Whether it was me or Francois (Dander) as VP, we both would do a good job. The vote was very close."

Steinmetz, the current SGA Attorney General, stated that her main goals are to foster communication and unity between the branches of the SGA. She suggested that apathy is the core of campus problems.

"As SGA VP I plan to promote SGA organizational unity and by the time the Freshman Orientations come around I hope to have a packet ready to inform all incoming freshman of the advantages of joining the SGA or other SGA organizations.

"The four of us (SGA E-Board) all know each other and all work well together," said Steinmetz, "We are all ready to jump in there so we can get things started right away."

Rick Leto
Treasurer

"Rick really researched this job before the elections, he's ready to take over," says his campaign manager Gary Pankiewicz. Leto campaigned on a platform of raising the student excitement with the new University tag. "I want to form some serious ties here at school," Leto said at the debates last Thursday.

Admittedly Leto doesn't have much experience with financial matters but doesn't feel that will hamper his abilities as SGA Treasurer. "The Treasurer is responsible for getting out to students, not doing paperwork." Leto will work towards making the Legislature more autonomous so that the Executive board will be freed up to work with the Class P's.

Michelle Crifasi
Secretary

"I had a very worthwhile opponent," Crifasi said, and it proved true. Yan Pereplechikov, her opponent for SGA Secretary came within 43 votes of taking the election. Crifasi is excited about working with the new SGA Executive Board, "I am looking forward to working with such an electric staff over the next year," Crifasi said. Her plans for the new year include heavy promotion for the SGA and the Class I organizations. "I want the students to be more aware of SGA events and services," Crifasi said. "Now that campaigning is over and school is close to ending, I'm looking forward to starting work with the SGA over the summer to prepare for next year."

Natalee Vaccaro
Board of Trustees Student Alternate

Natalee Vaccaro ran unopposed for BOT Student Alternate and described the position as being "the most powerful position because she would be dealing with issues that the SGA deals with."

The normally vocal Vaccaro vowed that at BOT sessions, "They will here me roar!"

At 4.5 lbs., Canon's Typestar™ 10 and 220 may be lightweight, but they're heavyweights in the world of portable typewriters.

They print crisp, clean characters sure to impress the most demanding professors.

And they have automatic features like word and character delete, underlining and centering to make it easier to create better looking papers. On the Typestar 220, there's even a built-in spell checker/corrector so you don't have to drag along a dictionary.

What's more, their non-impact printing lets you take them to quiet places such as the library. And because they can also run on batteries, you can even take them to the park.

Governor proposes restructuring of BHE

by Jason Wren

Governor Whitman's proposal of restructuring New Jersey's Board of Higher Education has met with much opposition on this campus and throughout the state.

The governor's "...planning to abolish all together the Department of Higher Education and to dissolve the Board of Higher Education," said Louise Wilson, Public Information Officer for the Department of Higher Education. The Board of Higher Education is non-partisan and its main purpose is to act as an intermediary between state government and institutions of higher education.

MSC's Vice President for Administration and Finance, Thomas H. Auch says that the Board of Higher Education "...serves as a focal point to keep us distant from the political structure." He also said that if the board is restructured or eliminated, the college may see itself becoming more politically involved when decisions are made.

The Student Government Association of MSC will be holding a letter writing campaign either in support of or against the proposal restructuring, according to Kristen Di Novi of SGA's External Affairs Committee. The campaign will begin after the SGA's upcoming Executive Board election. The stand that the SGA will take on this issue will be known after Friday, the deadline for legislators to give their positions on the issue to External Affairs. Di Novi said that since these legislators are elected by students, "...whatever decision [they make] will reflect [the interests of the student body]."

Regarding the possible restructuring and its effects, Di Novi said that on one hand, restructuring could stabilize tuition, but on the other hand there would be no one to lobby for student interests. Talking specifically about the effects of the possible restructuring on SGA services, she said, "At first [nothing would be affected], in the future there may be [budgetary] cuts that would affect money that we would have for services."

Dr. Donald Silberman, president of the council of New Jersey State College Locals (AFT, AFL-CIO) said that his group is against the plan. The Council recently voted unanimously to oppose the elimination of the entire Department of Higher Education. "We see this as a 'power grab' to control higher education. The power will shift from the Board of Higher Education, a non-partisan group, to the governor's office and the executive branch [of state government]."

Wilson, of the Department of Higher Education says that Governor Whitman wants to "...replace the department with a series of councils and organizations at a low level of state government." The department helps to administer programs that state colleges rely on, such as financial assistance to students.

Without the DHE, student financial assistance might be a duty handed over to the state Treasury Department, according to Wilson. Also, the Department of Higher Education has information on college enrollments and other data that is important for research and planning. Without the Department of Higher Education, there will be "no central contact point for students, faculty members and administrators to get guidance," said Wilson. Also, Wilson said, "There is not much of a realization of how important the Department of Higher Education is," some people will only begin to realize its importance after it is gone.

The Department of Higher Education sent an eight page memo to the Montclarion which discusses a proposal to create a commission to see if it is necessary to make changes in the Board of Higher Education. There probably will not be a formal committee to discuss this, according to Wilson, because "the time frame for the whole restructuring is so short that there is no adequate way to study it in depth." Instead, various members of the board are speaking to college officials, students and the general public to inform them about what could happen.

Wilson said that if the Department of Higher Education is eliminated, there will be no voice in the governor's cabinet for the colleges to discuss their budgets. In that case, the colleges might have to speak to politicians directly about their budgets.

Last week, the Montclarion reported that Governor Whitman tried to cut MSC's budget by $663,000 for the month of June. With the intervention of the Department of Higher Education, the cut was reduced to $214,000.

Students rally against Whitman's broken promises

by Jason Lynch/Associate News Editor

TRENTON - Over 500 students, faculty and unionized higher education staff members flocked to the steps of the Statehouse yesterday morning to rally against Gov. Christie Whitman's decision to back down from placing a cap on a 3.5 percent tuition increase and to eliminate the Department of Higher Education.

The rally was sponsored by the Challenge 2000 Higher Education Coalition and was the third annual statewide higher education rally. Challenge 2000 Chairperson Chris Benzinski and United Students of New Jersey Chairperson Compton Hubbard co-encceeded the rally, which featured a variety of speakers. The speakers and most of those in attendance expressed their outrage at the plans for the future of higher education in New Jersey.

"We are here, at the governor's front door, to let her know that we are very upset with some of her plans for us and for our colleges," Benzinski said.

"In three months, the governor has managed to offend the entire higher education community, with the exception of a handful of college presidents," he said.

Hubbard said he wants "no more lies" from Whitman, referring to the governor's recent announcement that she was backing down from her promise to hold tuition increases to 3.5 percent.

Throughout the rally, the energetic crowd's chants included "They say cut back, we say fight back!" "Whitman must go!," "Fund the future!," "Education now, or education never!" and "Fight, fight, fight, education is a right!"

"I wonder every night if I'm going to be able to attend Rutgers University next year," said University Sen. Steve Guzman, a Livingston College first-year student.

Guzman referred to a sign reading, "Knowledge = Power," adding that "(Whitman) ain't toying with my power...we voted her in, we can easily vote her out."

According to Guzman, University President Francis L. Lawrence "(doesn't have) the guts to stand up for what he believes in...and if (Whitman) had any guts, she'd stand up for the continued on page 6 students.”

Jen Stanton, a Rutgers College junior and member of the Campaign for an Affordable Rutgers Education, said she is angered by the creation of the Council of College Presidents, who “don’t represent me.”

Stanton said if taxpayers don’t pay for higher education now, they’ll end up paying later on, through welfare, unemployment or through the jails.

“This is our state; it’s time to take it back!” she said.

Delia Sosa, a senior at William Paterson College, said that a student voice has not been heard in any of Whitman’s decisions.

USNJ Vice-Chairperson Gina Guerrieri, a Rowan College senior, quoted from Whitman’s budget speech in March, when she called higher education “the cornerstone of our future.”

“So much for that!” Guerrieri said.

Carol Golden, Whitman’s spokesperson, said Tuesday that Whitman opted against imposing tuition caps because she wants to give colleges more freedom to decide their own missions if the BHE was disbanded.

“We are not asking for special treatment, we are only asking for fair treatment,” said Mariela Orenela, a Hudson County College student.

Walter Fields, a political action director for the New Jersey chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said the NAACP is supportive of the efforts at the rally.

“We have before us a governor who is clueless, who doesn’t realize she’s about to marginalize your future,” Fields said.

Fields said the issue was not about education, it’s about politics, “and urged everyone to write to their legislators urging them to fund higher education.

Berzinski said he thought the rally went “very, very well. I think the message got through loud and clear. Now the question is, ‘Is (Whitman) going to act?’”

Sharon Ginsberg, a CARE organizer working with USNJ on the rally, said she thought yesterday’s event was successful, but added she was “definitely disappointed that there weren’t more students there.”

Ginsberg said not enough Rutgers students have opened their eyes to the effects of Whitman’s proposals.

“Everything (Whitman is) saying goes into effect July 1, and (students) are going to be feeling it in the summer when they’re paying their tuition bill,” she said.

Alumni return to encourage journalism students

by Linda Cerkvenik

Journalism Career Day was presented on Monday, by Prof. Ron Hollander, coordinator of the journalism program, in the Student Center, room 417. Three MSC graduates who are currently working in different writing careers, talked to the audience on how they really is in the field.

The graduates were Lynn Cowan, Anthony Floreno and Jean Paternoster.

Cowan, 26, of Staten Island, N.Y. graduated in 1990. She also went to Columbia Journalism School. Cowan is now currently working as a reporter on the Staten Island Advance. Previously, she was a copy editor for two years at the Advance. As for reporting, she said she "loves it" and "is never bored." While at MSC, Cowan was the editor-in-chief at the Montclarion for two years. She also worked for her town newspaper, the Essex Tribune. She said that journalism students should "get a summer internship and get the clips." Even though her salary is $38,000 a year, Cowan said that "you really can't be in this job for the money." She said she would easily take a $10,000 cut in salary to do something more interesting.

Anthony Floreno, 23, of Newark, graduated in 1993. He is currently a research assistant and writer at New Jersey Monthly magazine. He writes for "The Garden Variety" up-front section and also did recent feature pieces on "How to Rent a Shorehouse" and "Living in Newark." He said that he sent his resume out to all different places in hopes of getting a reply. New Jersey Monthly called him for an interview and he got the job. Even though Floreno doesn't make a large amount of money, he feels he is "going in the right direction." He said that it is "giving (him) a start." He said that he wants to gain clips from this experience. As a research assistant, Floreno does preliminary copy editing, which entails checking the facts of articles.

Jean Paternoster, 40, of Clifton, graduated in 1993. She is currently a writer in the Public Relations Department of St. Joseph's Hospital and Medical Center in Paterson. She writes press releases, in-house publications and brochures. Paternoster said that she "loves it." The Public Relations Department is making the public aware of the services the hospital provides and serves the community. Paternoster does proofreading, editing and copying, but her job also includes other duties such as, planning special events, coordinating health fairs and escorting dignitaries. She said she received the job through networking. As an added plus, she previously worked at the Hackensack Medical Center. Paternoster said that talking to people is a good way to get a job. She makes $24,000 a year and says Public Relations "opens a lot of doors." She also encourages students to read a book entitled, What Color is Your Parachute? Prof. Ron Hollander summed it up by saying, you are "not going to get wealthy" in the journalism field, but it can be a nice middle-class living.
Players isn't just for Actors
by Art Greenberg

Players has been receiving a lot of publicity lately and we are elated here at the office to have the opportunity to inform the campus just exactly who we are. Players was founded in 1937 to give MSC students the opportunity to work in theater. Since its inception, Players has produced over 130 plays and musicals for the students of MSC. In the early 1970's Players became a Class One Organization. The 1974 Players production of One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest featured our most famous alumnus, Bruce Willis. More recently, Players received recognition as the "1992-93 Most Improved Class One of the Year."

The attraction of Players is that it has a niche for every student to fill - not just theater majors. If you are an actor, musician, dancer, artist, designer, writer, technical engineer, publicist, marketing director, or business manager, then Players wants you! We also accept student written plays (Paper Rain in the Shower by Roxanne Leinhausen and Tea for Two by Anthony Floreano were produced in December of 1991 for example). Famous productions include Godspell, Pippin, Glass Menagerie and Little Shop of Horrors.

Currently, Players is in the process of putting on a production of the 1968 rock musical, Hair, by Gerome Ragni, James Rado and Galt MacDermont. This production is by far the largest undertaking ever attempted by the organization with an unheard of cast of 45 people and involvement with many other Class One's. Several contemporary issues such as war, drugs, sexual freedom and racism are confronted in this avant garde "hippie" play. Hair will be a free show on May 12, 13 and 14 at 8 p.m. in the Amphitheater. Players continues to produce quality theater for students, by students. The office is located in room 118 in the Student Center and general meetings are every Thursday at 5:30 p.m. Even as you read this article, Players is hard at work planning next semester's line-up. Remember, "These are your SGA fees at work. Why not take advantage of them?"

Learning new label lingo

by Renee Anderson, Dawn Kelly and Lorraine Hoffman

Have you noticed anything different on that box of Cheerios you ate for breakfast this morning? Or what about that carton of OJ? Have you seen the words "Nutrition Facts" staring you in the face? Well, these are the new food labels, mandated by the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). After May 5, 1994, these new labels are to become mandatory features on all packaged foods.

The new food labels are designed to clear up the confusion of their forerunner, as well as entice food manufacturers into producing more nutritious foods. The most important contribution is their use in lending a helping hand towards a healthier meal plan.

How does this panel plastered on the side of a package help you to plan your diet? We are here to help you figure this out. To the right is a representation of the new food label. On either side we have highlighted the key components that you should keep in mind while grazing on your morning bowl of Cheerios.

New nutrient content claims, what do they mean?

Free: The product contains only a tiny or insignificant amount of fat, cholesterol, sodium, sugar and/or calories. For example, a "fat-free" product will contain less than 0.5 grams of fat per serving.

Low: A food described as "low" in fat, saturated fat, cholesterol, sodium and/or calories could be eaten fairly often without exceeding dietary guidelines. "Low in fat" means no more than 3 grams of fat per serving.

Lean: Ignore "lean" claims except on fresh meat and poultry, which were their originally established use. It means no more than 10 grams of fat, 4.5 grams of saturated fat, and 95 milligrams of cholesterol. This does not mean "Low in fat" or cholesterol.

Extra Lean: "Extra lean" is still not as lean as "Low". This means the product has less than 5 grams of fat, 2 grams of saturated fat, and 95 mg of cholesterol per serving.

Reduced, Less, Fewer: Indicates the product contains 25 percent less of a nutrient or of calories than the original product.

Light/Lite: Means a product has been altered to 1/3 fewer calories or 1/2 the fat of the original product.

High: Means that a serving of the food contains 20 percent or more of the Daily Value for a particular nutrient.

More: A food in which 1 serving has at least 10 percent more of the Daily Value of a vitamin, mineral or fiber than usual.

Good Source Of: One serving contains 10-19 percent of the Daily Value for a particular vitamin, mineral or fiber.

Identifying ingredients

The onset of the new food label regulations will mandate food manufacturers to print a more detailed picture of a product's ingredients. Those with allergies, sensitivities, or religious/cultural restrictions will soon be able to look at the ingredient label with confidence.

Packaged products containing 2 or more ingredients must display a complete list of ingredients in descending order by weight. Foods such as jelly and mayonnaise, which didn't have to list their ingredients in the past, will now be identified as a milk derivative.

Similarly, vegans and religiously restricted people will be happy to see the origin of protein hydrolysates (proteins broken down into their amino acids) listed among the ingredients, i.e., corn protein or hydrolyzed casein.

Lastly, sulfiting agents such as sodium bisulfite found in bottled lemon juice, must be declared on all labels. Some people are sulfite sensitive and report breathing difficulties upon consumption.

The new food labels will now list all additives. For those of us who must and want to read the ingredient list, the labels will now more accurately tell us what the food contains.

The agency responsible for enforcing the new regulations, the FDA, will be allowing food manufacturers to make certain health claims on their products. This is a revolutionary idea for the FDA. Until 1984, if a food label mentioned a disease like cancer, the FDA considered the food to be a non-approved drug—in other words, illegal. If you see a health claim, you will know that the food is low in the Daily Value for fat, saturated fat, sodium or cholesterol. Seven of these claims, all supported by scientific evidence, can now be made. Bravo FDA for the supportive message that a proper diet is the best defense against disease.

EOF leaves behind the most needed

EOF sucks. Granted, in theory, it was a good idea - give people with a disadvantaged educational and economic background a chance at a college education. Very noble. But it has been misused and abused.

I have a friend who is Hispanic and comes from Hudson County. His grades weren't too hot but he had good SAT scores (1200). His parents own their own business and could easily afford to send him to college four times over and pay for every penny. He got EOF. He went to college for free. He got paid for going to college!

I am an Asian-American and come from an Essex County suburb. I had decent grades and good SAT's. When I transferred here from NYU, I almost couldn't go because I wasn't considered independent. I had been living on my own for two years and was practically broke. My parents refused to pay for any of my education. So if I declared myself dependent (which I most definitely was not), I would not have been able to pay for the college I had been accepted into. I had to fight for eight months to be considered "independent" and get loans (I still never got state aid). What does this have to do with EOF? Well, the reason I was ineligible for independent status was because of people who misused the system and falsely reported themselves as independent, when, in fact, they were anything but. I'm sure all of you out there have either heard of this or even done it.

Well, EOF, in its current implementation, is being misused in the same way. Not only are people who can afford to pay getting full aid (plus some) for going to school, but other people who have no intention of taking their education seriously are allowed into a soon-to-be university (or so I hear) without any effort or money on their part.

When people who never bothered to work in school before, get into a college anyway and get paid to, how could anyone expect them to appreciate the value and importance of a college education? EOF is the educational equivalent of welfare. It makes it easier not to work and get by on the system. In article in last week's Montclarion, it was reported that only 20% of EOF students graduate. I am not saying that every EOF student isn't industrious and intelligent, I just feel that the EOF program should have a more demanding educational requirement. Those who don't meet it need further education before they move on to a soon-to-be university. They can go to a community college and earn the right to go to a higher institute of education. I am not against the poor and underprivileged. I, myself, was penniless and homeless, living in the worst part of Paterson. I am against the abuse of the EOF program by people who don't need it and people who won't use it to further their education.

Why then would a college continue bringing students in, 80% of which won't finish what they started? Well, beyond the honorable goal of Equal Opportunity and Affirmative Action, there is the financial angle. EOF allows many people who wouldn't be able to get into MSC the usual ways to be accepted. This leads to more tuition money for MSC. It doesn't matter to them who's paying the tuition - the students themselves or the taxpayers, all that matters is that they get more tuition money by admitting these students. So, aside from the humanitarian aspect of EOF (giving the underprivileged and/or minorities a chance at a college education), there is the financial angle. EOF is further their education.

Just as the Federal Independent Eligibility was altered due to abuse, so could the EOF program be. People who are decent workers and have a real economic need may not be able to get into the program anymore. Moderation is the key. The Federal Aid for Independent students was ruined by overcompensation for misuse - and now the pendulum has swung from being bad for the taxpayer by wasting her money to being bad for the student by not "Financially Aid-ing" those who may need it most. And this would be a shame, for the EOF program truly is a humanitarian concept.

So, the answer is, not to discontinue EOF or make it virtually unattainable - it is a noble idea, it just needs to be utilized nobly.

A late call from the faculty

Editor's Note: This is a response from February 20th towards George Calle's weekly column. It is being printed now after many requests.

February 20, 1994

Dear George Calle:

In your editorial column of February 10, you have finally crossed the line separating mere invective from unacceptable and outrageous journalistic practice. In doing so, you have committed a grievous affront to our colleague Grover Furr. We believe your only course of action is to immediately offer a public retraction and tender at the end of your recent column cannot go unchallenged. No First Amendment claims would be needed to protect you from culpability in such a potential attack. Even easier to imagine is the (distinct) possibility of another member of the faculty or staff or a fellow student refrain from publishing a moral or political opinion dissenting from your stated views for fear of another physical threat from you in response. This potential stifling of expression runs counter to the explicit purpose of a college newspaper. There is simply no place for this behavior in our community. It is time for you to "do the right thing" and step down.

Sincerely yours,

EOF sucks. Granted, in theory, it was a good idea - give people with a disadvantaged educational and economic background a chance at a college education. Very noble. But it has been misused and abused.

Another resident moves off campus

To the Editor:

A recent article in the Montclarion described some of the unjust practices of Residence Life at MSC. I too am a victim of these unjust practices. I am being put on probation for allegedly trying to sneak into my own building after the fire in Blanton Hall on March 13, 1994.

Let me explain what happened on the night in question. I came into Blanton and someone was yelling over the balcony, to the desk, that their bathroom was on fire. They pulled the alarm on their floor but it did not work. After at least 15 minutes, the fire alarm finally went off.

When residents were allowed back into the building I was among the first to get back in and my friend unknowingly dropped her ID. I did not have my ID because I had just lost my wallet. An RA asked to see my ID and I said that I did not have it. My friend’s ID was then taken from me and I was told to give the desk my social security number. I did as I was asked and went upstairs. Almost four weeks after this happened I received a document saying I was being put on probation until October 14.

In the document I received it says I was holding the ID “up like everyone else.” This is totally false. The RAs involved were not questioned about this incident until almost a month later. How can they remember how I was holding the ID? They don’t even know what I look like.

The document also states, “this act was so unnecessary being you live in the building yourself.” Doesn’t Shelly Jackson, the director of Blanton, think that I know this? Why would I try to sneak into a place that I already pay too much money to live in and why would I use an ID that has a female’s picture on it to do so?

I met with Shelly Jackson to fight this idiotic punishment. I asked her why she thinks I would do this. She said that I was too tired to follow “proper procedure.” (She told my friend who dropped the ID that I was too lazy.) The proper procedure is giving your social security number. I’ve done it many times before and I did it that night. If the RA thought that I violated procedure why didn’t he take my name then?

This whole incident was a total waste of my time. I have much better things to do with my time then sit in Shelly Jackson’s office to fight a probation for something so stupid. I put up with all the ridiculous practices of Residence Life such as getting my bag searched when I come back from class and coming back from a fire to find my door unlocked. Why should I put up with being put on probation for something I didn’t do? I met with Shelly Jackson twice and it got me nowhere. She decided not to fine me $50.00 and said that was “working with me.”

I have decided to move off campus next year. I’ve lived in Blanton for three years and I regret it. Blanton Hall was built by someone who designs prisons and it is run like a prison. Almost any resident can tell you a story of being unfairly documented. Residence Life documents people because they suspect you of doing something. You are guilty until proven innocent. No wonder Residence Life can’t fill up their buildings. Who wants to pay to live in a prison?

An angry resident of Blanton Hall,

SAT is as racist as Hitler

To the Editorial Editor:

The notion of “reverse racism” - that undeserving non-white students are being admitted to MSC and other colleges because of “lowering standards” - is completely false.

Jason Alders (letter, April 14) has been misled about the nature of the qualifications or standards that are used for admission into college. These standards are racist and elitist ones. They hurt all working-class students, whites and non-whites alike.

College admission “standards” at MSC are made up of high school grades and SAT scores. HS grades are the best predictor of college success. If HS grades alone were used for college admissions, the top students at mainly minority HSs would be treated the same, for college admission purposes, as the top students at wealthy suburban, or private, or any other HSs.

But in a capitalist system everything is always stacked in favor of the rich. One example is college admissions. SAT scores are merged with HS grades to create a racist and elitist result.

The “Scholastic Aptitude Tests” (SATs) are a fraud. There is no such thing as “scholastic aptitude.” This is simply the name the test-makers long ago gave this test. It sounds “scientific,” and so it intimidates ordinary people from understanding what is really going on.

SAT scores “predict” family income and race more accurately than they do anything else, including college performance. On average, the higher the family income, the higher the SAT score. As between races, on average whites do better at every income level than latinos and blacks.

The tests, then, serve to perpetuate the status quo, in which the wealthy get the benefits while the working class, black, latinos and white, get cheated. At the same time the SATs dupe the public into believing that wealthier students, who get higher scores, are “more deserving,” while all others, but especially non-whites, are “undeserving.” The SATs perpetuate the illusion of “equal opportunity” while disguising the reality of privilege.

Having been taught the racist lie that “scholastic aptitude” exists and that blacks and latinos have “less” of it than whites, many white students draw the conclusion it has been intended for them to draw - that many non-white students are “undeserving.”

This racism is essentially no different than that of Hitler or the Ku Klux Klan. And it has the same purpose and result - to divide black, latin and white students against one another, in order to prevent their uniting together to fight for better conditions, including lower tuition and open admissions.

Welcome, loyal readers, to another sensational episodic adventure that I like to call PROPHET BIGG! This week, Henry Rollins. He started out at the beginning of the punk rock era as the lead singer of the group Black Flag and is now enjoying a resurgence of popularity with the Rollins Band. Rollins also enjoys writing and owns a publishing company which, in addition to producing his own work, publishes mostly unknowns.

Henry Rollins- I can’t believe you guys are here on a Saturday (laughter). Anyway, the band and I are here in New York right now practicing and getting ready to go to Europe. We did the Conan O’Brian show last night. And...uh...he must know this show’s on the way out. He just doesn’t want to talk to anybody. But we met John Waters and he’s an incredibly talented, right now practicing and getting ready to call PROPHET BIGG this week, Henry want to talk to anybody. But we met John mostly unknowns.

Before they’d start shooting he’d be cursing. You know, we’d be around and beat the shit out of people. I’m 33, man. Seventeen-year-olds can kick my ass. I’m average height, medium build. I’ve often gotten into confrontations with people through the music thing. Sometimes when we play, a lot of guys see it as “to be a man, I must come up on stage and slug Henry Rollins.” Another thing might be that I wear very little clothes when I play because I swear too much—not because I think I’m stupid. I’m not. So, I get that every once in a while. Especially when journalists use words they don’t know the meaning of and I correct them on it. Ooo-hoo man (laughter).

Also, some people think I’m really stupid. I’m not. So, I get that every once in a while. Especially when journalists use words they don’t know the meaning of and I correct them on it. Ooo-hoo man (laughter).

“You’re very ecclesiastical today.” And I’m like, yeah, you better look that one up, son (laughter).

Q- What’s your reaction to your fans who don’t get the message, or even worse, get misinterpreted.

H.R.- I think if you’re gonna go out there and do something that’s not your music, you’re gonna get misinterpreted. So, I strive for clarity. I use as few words as possible. I try not to use adjectives, unless, you know, I’m tryin’ to be funny. And, typically, I try to hit it quick. Like Haiku. That’s what I try to do. I think what sometimes gets confused is what people get from the media, cause media people...I trust you guys [college media] and I’m not tryin’ to kiss your ass either, (laugh) but I have more trust in people like you all, than someone from Premiere or Entertainment Weekly. They fuckin’ hate everyone anyway. But, otherwise, I get over a hundred letters a day. I can’t answer all of ‘em, but I read it all.

Q- You and Rick Rubin have a record label you’re starting up. What’s that all about?

H.R.- We have a label called Infinite Zero and what we do with that label is we put out records that are out of print. First releases are coming in June. One of the cuts is the second Devo album available for the first time on CD in America. It’s an album I grew up with. And Warner Bros. doesn’t care about Devo cause it’s not Madonna. It was sitting in the Warner basement and we said oh, we’ll put that out and they said (makes a blowing sound) “Here, you can have it” (laughter).

Q- How do you explain the growth of your popularity?

H.R.- Major label, good press agent, and a lot more money being put into the stuff I do. Have I gotten any better? I don’t know. I mean, I feel better, but that’s all it is. Stuff doesn’t happen, like, overnight. It’s not like I find myself on the cover of some magazine cover and flip out. I know I’m gonna be on that cover six months before it happens. It’s money, man. Pure mechanics. MTV is all about mechanics and politics. How do you get on the cover of Spin? You hang out with Bob Gruichioni, Jr. for two years. Hi, Bob. Hi, Bob. Hi, Bob. I’m getting grayer. Hi, Bob, god damn it! Also, once you get a foot in one door, all those people suck each other’s butts. So, you do Arsenio, you get the others going, “Well, we should get him on our show too, so we can have a piece of him too.” Just like the movie thing. You barely do a part and then every studio wants you. I mean Disney called me (laughter).

So, it becomes important for a guy in a band, like me, to maintain his integrity and his art and just have fun with the rest of it.

Q- Given your history of lack of love for the cops, in the movie, The Chase, was the cop role one you couldn’t pass up?

H.R.- Yeah, I mean, the guy’s an idiot. I mean, not to bore you, but the basic premise of the film is me and Josh Mostel are cops. In the back seat of our car is one of those real-life cop TV show crews. And we’re driving through our small town trying to impress these TV guys that we are rock n’ roll, action cops “We get murders. We get drive by’s, drug deals, prostitution.” And my partner goes “No we don’t” (laughter).

And all of a sudden, Charlie Sheen comes running through our town and we’re involved in this high speed chase. But, my role was, like, all improv. The director let me fake the whole thing. So, I showed this guy tryin’ to be the man for the camera and actually showing what a true bone head, dick that he is. Yeah, I wanted the...continued on page 19.

The PROPHET and Henry Rollins engage in witty conversation.
Go Clippers!
Okay, now that I've gotten that out of the way, let me say something about this week's article. I'll be reviewing two movies this week since I doubt either of them will be in the theaters very long (due, in part, to the do-or-die attitude of the post-Oscar/pre-summer movie season when the movie studios release all their excess baggage).

First is Sirens, starring Hugh Grant and Elle McPherson. It's a 1930's story about clergyman Anthony Campion (Grant) and his wife who visit an artist (Sam Neill of The Piano and Jurassic Park) who paints sensational nudes. Once there, the two are confronted with scenes of hedonism that any good Christian would denounce.

It is a story of the sensual awakening of a woman who has been taught, in a man's world, not to enjoy herself and especially, sex. Beyond that, the movie is an extended metaphor, a few extended metaphors, in fact! First and foremost, the artist/estate represents the way the world would be if men and women were equal. My girlfriend, Lynn Stevens, felt the movie was great because of the way the metaphor was portrayed:

"There's no one who owned the women, he simply appreciated their beauty. The women were beautiful and the embodiment of sexuality, but were no less equal for it. (They) represented all different types of beauty (body type, etc.) and were presented positively - they were equal and strong, although they were both soft and sexy."

The women, in the artist's estate - the ideal world, did not have to be masculine (as most Hollywood movies represent them) to be equal, they can merely be themselves, since natural equality is a given.

In contrast, the "real" world, the man's world, is represented by the characters' excursions from the estate into the local Australian town, where these "free" women are seen as sluts and witches, a bad influence on the children.

Other metaphors to look for are the references to the snake (sorpent of Genesis) and apples (perhaps suggesting the artist's estate as a "Garden of Eden"); as well as the images of their cruise ship, of the myth of the Sirens and even a quick picture of the Titanic.

The movie has great writing and is a wonderful story of awakening, just as potent as The Piano, but in a more fanciful setting. The only drawback is the fact that the movie may have been limited compared to The Piano; there is a lot of nudity (the most in any movie I've seen recently), the audience may be uncomfortable with fully realizing the traits of McPherson's character and her intents on the clergyman's wife. This is understandable considering the controversy surrounding Henry & June not too long ago. It's a shame America was settled by Puritans.

As for the acting, all did a fine job, especially Grant and his wife. Also turning in a surprisingly good performance is McPherson (who put on 20 pounds to look more the part of a 1930's model - our new DeNiro!). All in all, I would recommend this movie highly, it is an intelligent, sexy, witty film with an important message.

Okay, this doesn't leave me much space for my second review this week so I'll make it short. Four Weddings and a Funeral - 3 1/2

Next week - the mysterious "Fourth Man" joins us! Who?

REVIEW: Pink Floyd, The Division Bell

by Frank Frederick III

I have been a fan of Pink Floyd for many years. The first Pink Floyd cassette I ever bought was The Dark Side of the Moon which to this day I consider their finest work. Dark Side showed that the band was not only at the forefront of the psychedelic rock bands, but that they could easily fit into the mainstream (Dark Side remained on the Billboard charts from the time of its release in 1972 until the early 1980's).

However, their latest work, The Division Bell is a turning away from their psychedelic-mainstream work. This is the first work in eight years by the three remaining members of the original Floyd: guitarist David Gilmour, percussionist Nick Mason and keyboardist Rick Wright (bassist and lead singers Roger Waters left the band in 1983).

The Division Bell delves into the realm of human relationships. The songs deal with people. The song "What Do You Want From Me" echoes the voice of a man frustrated with his mate. "Wearing the Inside Out" is a song about inner feelings, heightened by Wright's soulful voice.

The music itself is almost classic Floyd; Gilmour proves himself once again as a master of the guitar with the electric riffs that seem to rise in and out of every song in a style reminiscent of the classic Floyd songs. Mason and Wright add to the continuity of the music with Mason's hard-hitting and rhythmic beat and Wright's soulful, almost luscious notes on the keyboard.

The songs are a definite change from the classic songs, even more so than the Waters-less 1987 album A Momentary Lapse of Reason, which to some fans is not even considered a true Floydian album. However, to Floyd fans and non-Floyd fans alike, The Division Bell is worth a try.

The CD Critique by Paul Dowd

Barkmarket - Gimmick (American)

Barkmarket sound like a third place finisher in a battle of the bands contest. Power chords and screaming vocals often mask funky grooves laid down by John Nowlin on bass. Anger and anti-establishment themes are a constant throughout the 12 track CD entitled Gimmick.

From the opening track, "Easy Chair" to the closing one, "Better Made Man," every song blends into another, making them hard to distinguish. Barkmarket sticks true to its punk roots by accomplishing noise and self-defeating angst. Barkmarket truly is raw punk and nothing else - a garage band with studio time. If you think you're into an untalented version of the Sex Pistols, Gimmick is for you.

Kevin McCabe - Fearless (Westwood)

Otis Rush first burst onto the blues scene in Chicago, 1956 with the song, "I Can't Quit You Baby," which was later covered by Led Zeppelin. Rush's latest album is Ain't Enough Comin' In (Mercury). No changes, just more great blues in its purest form.

On "Don't Burn the Bridge," an Albert King-penned song, Otis makes every note bend and wail to his liking in a way that only the masters can do. While his guitar work is still one of the best, it's his voice that adds the special ingredient. "Somebody Have Mercy" shows his changes, the new great blues in its purest form.

Otis Rush is regarded as one of the blues greats. Hopefully this album will expose blues lovers to an often overlooked performer who should get his due.

This is funny, is it true? If I step out of line once tonight, Boffo will tell my mom and dad will kill me. Even when they get home.

Did you ever wonder...

By John J. O'Sullivan

What if...they replaced every single baseball player in the majors with...mimes?

“It's another exciting game-day here at beautiful Yankee Stadium said the Yankees announcer—maven Phil Rizzuto on Channel 11. “We’re expecting a fine match-up between the Yankees and the Baltimore Orioles. Bob, how do you think the home team will do tonight?” Bob replies, “Well Phil, I think that the Yanks...insert announcer babble at ‘ad nauseam’ levels here”

What we haven’t told Phil, Bob, George, or anyone else at Yankee Stadium is that we placed their regular Yankees with Folger’s...oops...[sorry about that; it’s a force of habit. JJO’s]...mimes.

“AND NOW, THE NEW YORK YANKEES!!!!” the powerful PA announced to the awaiting fans! Interim coach Knight has MSC back on track

by Keith A. Idec

To call the task that Leander Knight was faced with when he was named MSC's interim head track and field coach in February unenviable would be an understatement.

Basically, Knight had to rebuild a once-nationally prominent Division III program from scratch.

After the suspension of former coach John Blanton on charges of sexual and official misconduct, the team came apart at the seams.

Under interim head coach Charlie Bethea, who eventually resigned for personal reasons during the indoor season, participation in meets dwindled, as did practice time and team membership. At its lowest point, the team was down to six members that actually attended practices regularly.

Knight, an MSC graduate and former NFL defensive back with the Houston Oilers, New York Jets and Atlanta Falcons, was appreciative of the opportunity to put together the team again.

"I may not be able to bring the program back to where it was last year right away," said Knight. "At first it was a little difficult because I didn't know what each of the runners was capable of. But they've had a lot of input and so far everything is going fine."

There are currently 18 student-athletes on the track and field roster, a sign that there has been a revival of interest.

That all started with an informal meeting in early March. Knight, who is a health teacher at Patrick Hilley Junior High School in East Orange, then called several runners and asked them to give track and field another shot. The team also benefited from word-of-mouth. Knight credits the 10 athletes that showed up for the original meeting for getting others to come out.

"We have a good nucleus of runners," Knight said. "We've got some veteran runners back that know the ropes, so they are helping with the younger runners. And our assistant coach Noreen Cassidy has done a great job with the men and women distance runners."

In the Red Hawks' latest meet this past weekend, the women's team finished third overall with 74 points, while the men's team placed fifth with 43 points. Trenton State won the women's points. Trenton State won the men's division with 233 points.

The bright spot for MSC was junior Sharon Lindo, who was named the NJAC Female Track Award winner. The Brooklyn, N.Y. native won the 200 and 400-meter races with times of :26.80 and :59.16 respectively.

"He's playing with the confidence of a veteran," Knight said. "More than likely, we'll have a team in the NCAA's," Knight said. "Because they didn't have an indoor season, it's taken them longer to get into race shape."

"Everything is coming along nicely, though."

Considering the job that he's done thus far, that too is an understatement.

Red Hawks rock FDU-Madison, 22-10; prep for "New Jersey War" with Kean

by Maureen K. McLeer

Initially, the MSC lacrosse team may not have taken FDU-Madison seriously this Saturday when it played host to the Jersey Devils at Sprague Field.

After taking only a 10-6 lead into the intermission, the Red Hawks received a tongue lashing from head coach Doug Alsofrom. Heading the seventh-year attackman Neil Blaney. "But after a tongue lashing from head coach Doug Alsofrom at halftime, we got our act together and played like we really know how."

Alsofrom agreed with Blaney's assessment. "Let's just say that we played a bad first half and a good second half," said Alsofrom.

Senior midfielder Keith Van Ness, who scored 10 goals in two wins was the NJAC College Division Lacrosse Player of the Week, for the week ending April 16. "Keith has been playing extremely well for us," said Alsofrom.

"He's playing with the confidence of a senior and he is difficult to cover." Van Ness has tallied 26 goals on the season, good for an average of 3.7 per game.....Morano has also been outstanding with 24 goals and nine assists.....Neil Blaney leads MSC in assists with 21.
MSC gets rare easy win over York College, 10-4
Offense still producing, pitching still shaky as team searches for consistency

by Brian Falzarano

Things usually don't come this good for the Red Hawks. Actually, it seemed like it was only last week that MSC beat Trenton State, the NJAC's top team, 15-9.

Sure, it was only a week ago. But they will take a return to their old form anytime they can get it. That return came on Tuesday in the form of a quality road win, 10-4 over York College.

“We're going forward,” said MSC coach Norm Schoenig. “They showed a great deal of character. Character wins championships.”

Senior lefty Drew Yocum, who had been pitching in relief while working out the kinks from arm surgery, pitched into the eighth inning, striking out nine. Yocum (1-0) even worked out of a first inning quandary with the Red Hawks up 2-1. His return is a big boost to the MSC (13-7, 4-2 NJAC) pitching staff.

“I think they're starting to come on,” Schoenig said. “They know the things that they have to do.”

In the mean time, Mike Micucci has worked out of his early-season slump. The junior catcher had two doubles and an important two-run home run on a 1-2 pitch in the fourth inning to give MSC a 4-1 lead. Also, senior first baseman John Pallino had three hits and three RBI, including a two-run triple, while Chris Roof smacked his fifth dinger of the season, a two-run blast in the fifth.

If a team, which is winning nearly two out of every three games despite having relief pitchers that have been throwing as if incompetency and insanity are their main goals, is that team good or just plain lucky?

No, it is not an SAT question. For the Red Hawks, relief pitching has been more like Chinese water torture. They jump out to a big lead and make it vanish into oblivion. Something as simple as holding a five-run lead has become difficult and painful.

MSC's sophomore outfielder Chris Roof slides home safely during the Red Hawks' doubleheader split with Kean College in NJAC play on Sunday at Pittser Field.

MSC's staff, third in the NJAC with an ERA of 4.27, has a mere five pitchers with wins and only three main contributors with above an ERA of four.

Against William Paterson on Monday, the Red Hawks received a welcomed boost, only to have a four-run lead almost become obsolete. John Carlson, pitching for the first time since April 9, turned in a solid effort against a Pioneer (9-10, 4-3) team that has fallen on hard times of late, helping MSC to a 7-6 win at Pittser Field. Carlson (2-2) allowed only five hits and two earned runs in 7 and 1/3 innings to get the win. Lately, things have either completely collapsed or they turn into something directly out of a Hollywood script.

In this case, the ending was something you might expect to see in Major League II. After Chad McConnell (two hits, one earned run in over an inning of work) was ineffective, the stage was set for the gofor of the previous day, Stan Bazydlo.

Bazydlo had allowed seven runs in the ninth inning against Kean College in the nightcap of a doubleheader which enabled the Cougars to come back from an 8-3 lead to win the game 12-8.

Schoenig either was showing confidence or using a psychological ploy, maybe a mix of both, in putting Bazydlo in the game with a one-run lead with the bases loaded and two out. By doing this, the seventh-year coach was clearly hoping the junior would shake the cobwebs from the day before.

Fortunately for the Red Hawks, he justified their confidence. He got Pioneer left-fielder Paul Bumbaco to fly out to end the game. In the process, he earned his first save at MSC.

"He showed a great deal of character," said Schoenig.

As was told earlier, the latter game of the twin-bill against the Cougars was eventful. Going into the top of the ninth up by five runs, the Red Hawks should have been able to experience a stanza of little or no occurrence.

Enter Bazydlo, who came on in the Red Hawks slowly forgetting how to fly

Have dropped eight of last nine; fall to 15-13

by Keith A. Idec

Taking into account that the MSC softball team returned from Florida with an impressive 9-3 record, the current state of the team seemed unimaginable several weeks back.

But that's what a tough stretch, which included six straight games against nationally ranked Division III opponents, can do. MSC dropped five of those six contests and is now faced with the possibility of not making the NCAA tournament if things don't change quickly.

Overall, the Red Hawks have lost eight of their last nine games, have gone 6-10 since returning from the Sunshine State and are 15-13 (2-6 NJAC).

The latest in what has become a long line of disasters, came on Tuesday afternoon when MSC dropped a two-game set to Rowan College, the No. 7 in Division III at the Quarry Fields in Upper Montclair.

In the second game, MSC looked as if it had a chance to break out of its slump with the score tied 5-5 heading into the bottom of the sixth inning. However, the Pros exploded for six runs in that inning to give themselves a comfortable lead and held on for an 11-8 victory. Sophomore shortstop Joy Pittner and senior right fielder Amu Mund stroked two-run doubles, while sophomore second baseman Cindy Coker added an RBI single for the Pros.

MSC plated three runs in the top of the seventh, but could come no closer than three runs. Junior right hander Elisa Ervin took the win for Rowan (21-5, 4-1 NJAC).

Junior second baseman Jenn Finn and senior catcher Kristi Kuchinski each knocked in a pair of runs for MSC in the losing effort.

If a team, which is winning nearly two out of every three games despite having relief pitchers that have been throwing as if incompetency and insanity are their main goals, is that team good or just plain lucky?

In the first game, senior catcher Kara Gilligan and freshman first baseman Jam Muese belt around home runs to power Rowan to a 7-4 win. In a 7-1 pasting of Western Connecticut State at the Red Hawk Courts on Friday, first singles player Anthony Shottt improved his individual match record to 5-3, while Dan Kanowith (second singles), Pete Beckus (third singles), Doug Fede (fourth singles), Craig O'Connell (fifth singles) and Mike Pisano (sixth singles) all came up with victories.

The doubles teams of Shottt and Beckus, and Fede and Marty Visitacian also were winners.

Men's tennis wins pair; moves to 4-5

After starting the season with a dismal 1-5 record, the MSC men's tennis team has won three consecutive matches to improve to 4-5 (1-4 NJAC) on the year.

In a 7-1 pasting of Western Connecticut State at the Red Hawk Courts on Friday, first singles player Anthony Shottt improved his individual match record to 5-3, while Dan Kanowith (second singles), Pete Beckus (third singles), Doug Fede (fourth singles), Craig O'Connell (fifth singles) and Mike Pisano (sixth singles) all came up with victories.

The doubles teams of Shottt and Beckus, and Fede and Marty Visitacian also were winners.

In earlier action, MSC topped East Stroudsburg University, 8-1 on Thursday. The results of yesterday's match at Steven's Tech were not available at press time.
MSC track and field: Glad to be a team again

by Glenn Steinberg

MSC’s track program seems to be taking steps in the right direction after, for all intents and purposes, not actually being a program for several months during the winter.

Under the guidance of Leander Knight, who was named the new coach in late February when Charlie Bethea did not return for unknown personal reasons, the team is now somewhat back to normal.

Bethea was named the replacement for John Blanton, who was suspended on Sept. 24 after being accused of sexually harassing female members of the track team.

During the fall track season, the team experienced some difficulties resulting from the absence of Blanton. According to distance runner John Brennan, the field house wasn’t always available on Friday’s to the team at 4 p.m., their normal warm-up time. This meant that they had to wait until Bethea and his assistant coaches arrived at 4:45 p.m. to start their warm-up.

Also, during the winter, the team missed almost its entire indoor season, only participating in meets in late December and early February. Barry Camhi, also a member of the team, did not compete at all during the indoor season.

“I figured, why should I give up my eligibility for only two meets, so I redshirted,” said Camhi.

Brennan said there were only about 10 people on the team due to eligibility for only two meets, so I redshirted,” said Camhi.

Another two former members who didn’t know what to do.”

Also, during the winter, the team missed almost its entire indoor season, only participating in meets in late December and early February. Barry Camhi, also a member of the team, did not compete at all during the indoor season.

“I figured, why should I give up my eligibility for only two meets, so I redshirted,” said Camhi.

Brennan said there were only about 10 people on the team at that point. After winter break, he thought that there weren’t many people on the team due to the lack of direction and the fact that they weren’t participating in any meets.

“We were very unorganized after he (Blanton) left,” said Camhi. “We dropped meets because there weren’t people to drive to them. Bethea really didn’t know what to do.”

Another two former members who did not compete during this time were Sharon Lindo and Shantay Brame.

The difference then is that we were doing an excellent job considering he was also a football player in the mid-80’s.

Smith agreed, saying that Knight is doing an excellent job using the same pitch. The Cougars tagged the junior right-hander for seven runs, taking advantage of walks, hit batters and miscues in the field. Mercifully, the rally ended after Chris Ziolkowski cracked a grand slam off of T.J. Costello.

“It just got away from us,” Schoenig said. “It is something that does not belong in the game. It should never happen. It did. No excuses.”

Schoenig believes he knows why Bazydlo performed the way he did. “An emotional breakdown,” Schoenig termed it. “He let the game get the best of him. He’s better than that.”

Their pitching, mostly their relievers, have been inconsistent all year, which must change in time for the NJAC season.

Yes, it was that bad. Even worse is that the damage was done with one out in the ninth against reliever Stan Bazydlo. The Cougars tagged the junior right-hander for seven runs, taking advantage of walks, hit batters and miscues in the field. Mercifully, the rally ended after Chris Ziolkowski cracked a grand slam off of T.J. Costello.

“It just got away from us,” Schoenig said. “It is something that does not belong in the game. It should never happen. It did. No excuses.”

Their pitching, mostly their relievers, have been inconsistent all year, which must change in time for the NJAC and NCAA tournneys. “I think the weather has something to do with that,” Schoenig said. “I think being ready to pitch until we get the 27th out is important for all of the staff members.”

Quality pitching is the key ingredient for success and the Red Hawks will certainly need more than they’ve received thus far to get where they want to go.

eighth in relief of starter Todd Sak (7 IP, one hit, no earned runs). His antics were instrumental in MSC blowing this game, losing 12-8.

With one out, Kean (15-7, 4-3) loaded the bases. Centerfielder Tom Headrick was hit by a pitch, forcing in a run to cut the Red Hawk lead to 8-4. Lou Romeo hit an RBI single to cut it to 8-5. Then, Frank Malta hit a grounder to first base, on which a game-ending double play could have been turned. It was botched, allowing a run to score to make the score 8-6.

George Salinovich relieved Bazydlo with the score 8-7 and walked right fielder Chris Dunbar on four pitches, tying the game at 8-8.

T.J. Costello was the next to try his hand at stifling the Cougar hit parade. Chris Ziolkowski scoffed at his attempt, crushing a 415-foot grand slam to give Kean the final margin of victory.

In the opener, Pallino's bat set these two teams apart. The senior stroked an RBI single to right-field which gave MSC its first lead of the game, 4-3, as MSC held on to win, 5-4.

MSC to add women's golf

If there are any female MSC students who have wanted to participate in the golf program, but were unable because there was only a team for men, can put their minds at rest.

If there is enough interest, beginning in the fall, MSC will participate at the NCAA Division III level. To promote the possibility of a women's golf team and to inform those who are interested, there will be a meeting for prospective team members.

Those interested, experienced or inexperienced, are urged to attend the first team meeting on Tuesday, April 26 at 1 p.m. in the Student Center Cafeteria.

The idea is part of a concerted effort by the MSC Athletic Department to provide more athletic opportunities for females. But nothing is definite yet.

"First, we have to ascertain the level of interest in a women's golf program," said MSC assistant Athletic Director Holly Gera.
