Board of Trustees votes to submit 1996 budget

by Jeff Zarrillo

The MSU Board of Trustees voted yesterday to submit the school’s $41.89 million fiscal year 1996 budget to the state legislature for approval.

According to Vice President of Administration and Finance Tom Auch, MSU is asking for a “six-percent increase in appropriations above last year.” Last year MSU received $39.52 million of its $63 million plus budget from the state. “This year the university is asking for $41,897,000,” said Auch.

If the state denies the request, students can expect their tuition to increase “anywhere from 4-percent to double digits,” said MSU President Irvin Reid. However, Reid said he was “encouraged” after a meeting with Chuck Haytaian, a representative from Governor Whitman’s restructuring of the state’s higher education program. A small tuition increase, probably less than 5-percent, will occur regardless of the budget’s outcome, said Auch.

“An increase in funds will allow us (MSU) to do things we’ve not been able to do in the past,” said Auch. “We could improve our campus facilities, such as putting an elevator in Life Hall,” Auch added.

Another reason for requesting more money, Auch said, was “because graduate education is so expensive.” He added, “Hopefully the state will consider providing more money because MSU has one of the top graduate programs in the state.”

According to Auch, the proposed budget will “probably not” be approved. “New Jersey, as a whole, appropriates $15 billion to fund its state institutions but the state is in such financial trouble that it is $2 billion below the level the state.” Auch said.

Today is the first day on the job for three new police officers at MSU. They are on the schedule only one day after graduating from the Bergen County Police Academy.

“The academy is one of the best in the country,” said Sgt. Paul Cell of the campus police. The officers will join the existing officers, bringing the total number to 13.

The graduation ceremony was held at Fairleigh Dickinson University. 500 people were present at the graduation including several mayors, police chiefs, and the Bergen County Prosecutor. Of the class of 105, 91 completed their training. The training lasts 19 1/2 weeks.

“The training is rigorous,” said Cell. “They are as well trained as any other police officer.”

The training includes all aspects of police work. The officers are trained in motor vehicle laws, New Jersey criminal laws, arrest search and seizure, cultural diversity, firearms, and each is a certified Emergency Medical Technician. They also endure extensive self defense and physical conditioning programs. The names of the officers are Juan Rivera, Timothy Webster, and Miranda Hermer. Each of the officers was distinguished in some way at the ceremony.

Rivera was given the Meritorious Award. This is a very high high honor, explained Cell. Only one cadet receives this award out of a whole class. The award is given to the cadet who is voted by his classmates and staff as a true leader and good example.

Hermer and Rivera were both recognized for helping out in a real police situation while they were still in training. They helped out the victims of a car accident until police could arrive.

Finally, Webster was given a certificate for being an expert in firearms.

Sgt Cell said, while the three extra officers will be a great help, they are not the total solution. The crime rate at Montclair State University is the second highest of the state schools, but our Campus Police is not equipped to correctly handle the situation. The problem does not lie in the ability of our officers. Campus Police at Montclair have the knowledge and experience to handle any problems that may arise here. “There is no function of police work we can’t do,” said Cell, “but in no way does the addition of three officers serve as an alternative to carrying firearms.”

Cell mentioned specific instances that could have been averted if the campus police were armed.

A stabbing that occurred during a fight at a party could have been prevented if the police had firearms to overpower the threat of the knife. Another instance involved a student pistol whipping another student. When the Campus Police arrived at the scene, they would have been helpless if the man began shooting. They have even pursued gun-toting criminals without firearms of their own.

Congratulations to all the new sisters.
We love you!
SGA Legislators trek to Rutgers to speak about financial policies

by Sheila Patnode

Three MSU students spoke in front of the Commission of Higher Education Wednesday, Dec. 7 to provide testimony for the allocation of funds for the upcoming school year.

Emily Ortiz, SGA Legislator and Vice President of LASO, is one of the speakers who provided the commission with her personal experiences in getting financial aid. "By the time I graduate, I will owe almost $20,000 in student loans," Ortiz said. "If they don't get grants, minorities won't be able to afford college and putting them to the side, won't be able to get an education."

Ortiz, a recreation and leisure studies major, would like to one day open her own business. Her dream will have to be delayed as she works to pay off her loans. "I wanted to make the commission aware that the parents of minority students have an especially hard time affording college for their children," Ortiz said. "If they don't get grants, minorities won't be able to afford college and won't be able to get an education.

A junior at Memorial High School in West New York, Ortiz applied for EOF and received it based on her financial need. The grant was soon revoked. Her dream for attending college, she took out loans to cover the cost of her education. The financial aid office has discouraged her from applying to be declared as an independent because she is only 21. The office told her that students generally have to be 24 before their application will be approved. Ortiz's mother moved back to Puerto Rico to take care of her mother and Ortiz works part time to cover all her expenses.

"I don't know why they weren't thrown out," said Scala, "Security was called for back-up and other campus police officers arrived to assist."

For the first time in 25 years, a Redhawks basketball game was curtailed after, what was deemed, a "hostile situation," by officials, arose at the Dec. 7 home game against Jersey City State College. The game was stopped with 49 seconds left on the clock after Jersey City State College fans threw cans of soda on the court and excessively screamed obscenities at MSU players and officials said Assistant Director of Athletic Information Mike Scala.

"Jersey City State) Fans of the team thought that they weren't getting fair officiating calls," said Scala.

A source from the MSU Athletic Department said that a janitor armed himself with a bat as the situation worsened. Scala said that the "spectators code of conduct," which was devised by the NCAA, should be followed at all games. "But, I've never been in a situation like that before."

"I have no knowledge of athletics filing any type of complaint against our officer," said Cell. "I have no knowledge of athletics filing any type of complaint against our officer."

The Jersey City State Athletics Department acknowledged that they were aware of the event but had no comment.

"MSU and Jersey City State are two rivals and it is a very physical game when you put them together," said Scala.

SGA passes Residence Life resolution

by Brian Staples

One of the well known facts to many MSU students is that problems often arise because of their housing contracts. Students are given only 24 hours notice until they are evicted from their place of residence after breaking certain rules in their housing contract. This and other housing concerns were brought up during the last SGA meeting of the semester.

The idea for a new residence life contract was one of the more relevant topics brought up at the meeting. Many ideas were suggested to change the existing contract. The current set of rules is under scrutiny because of its general disregard for the student. In this "year of the student," it was the consensus of the entire SGA that this deserves attention. The bill passed unanimously.

There are many provisions that the legislators found problematic. First, students are only given 24 hours notice if they are to be evicted from their room, but if they want to leave voluntarily they must allow at least two weeks notice. Another problem is that if a student decides to move off campus after the first five weeks, they only get back 48 percent of their money. If they decide later than that, they lose all their money. The lack of concern for students' privacy was also discussed. This is shown by the way work orders are handled. Under the current contract, a repairman can come at any time after the work order is put in.

The final meeting was roughly five hours long. The extended length was a result of an ongoing argument between some members of the SGA and the MONTCLARION. The President expressed his dismay along with other SGA members about problems of bucking at this meeting and others earlier this year.

SGA Treasurer Rick Leto and MONTCLARION Investigative News Coordinator George Calle continued an ongoing argument about Leto's alleged misuse of SGA funds for a trip to Pine Grove versus the MONTCLARION's suggested misuses of advertisement funds collected. While it is hard to determine the truth about Leto's accusations, the Advertising Director of the MONTCLARION Kevin Schwobel invited anyone to look at his records, assuring they were in order.

Calle likened the Pine Grove trip to the Pentagon Papers, and spoke about the role of the MONTCLARION to follow up on stories like this that are of concern to students. Leto maintained that the problem with the advertising existed at the MONTCLARION and that it was very important.

There was also brief discussion about proposed tuition hikes. The hikes may come as a result of a two billion dollar deficit that needs to be solved. The hike could be as low as three percent, but it all depends upon the state. If they don't provide the extra five to six percent that has been requested, tuition hikes may be higher.

Other SGA News

Several other bills were passed during the meeting. The College Bowl Club was sponsored by the SGA for their upcoming tournament at the University of Pennsylvania. MSU is one of 30 schools in the tournament. MSU was invited back after last year when they fared well, losing only by a small margin to the University of Pennsylvania. During the vote, a debateoccurred over the funds being given since the event was not an on campus affair. Also, there was a question concerning why non-chartered organizations can apparently get funding easier. The vote went up at least three times before the final decision was made.

Amnesty International was issued a Class Two charter. The organization is known worldwide for its battle for human rights. Their goal is the release of people that are restrained for their beliefs. They attended the New Jersey State Conference of Amnesty, and participated in a project concerning children's human rights. The project involves a letter to be sent to president Clinton from local grade schools. They also write over 100 letters a week concerning the wrongful torture and deaths around the world.

The Jewish Student Union received a Class Three charter. The organization provides social and religious development for MSU students, offers lectures such as their recent presentation of Schindler's List, followed by a panel of speakers that included survivors of the holocaust, and is involved with national conferences relevant to the Jewish community.

Delta Sigma Theta was given a Class Four charter. With only four active members on campus, the organization has been able to achieve a lot. Some of their interests include Project Homeless and working with children infected with AIDS.

CARIBSO, the Caribbean Student Organization, was granted a Class Three charter as well. Their goals are to promote Caribbean culture on campus. They achieve this through various educational and social events.

Zeta Phi Beta was given a Class Four charter. They are concerned with issues such as self defense, breast cancer, unprotected sex, and AIDS awareness.

Finally, there were four resignations at the meeting. Rich Adams, Director of Welfare and Internal Affairs, Mike Lampe, Director of Academic Affairs, Greyson Hannigan, Director of Residence Life, and George Calle, Legislature.

a billion short of that amount,” said Auch. He added, “We might not even get what we got last year.”

Auch said having “university status” does not guarantee money from the state. It only helps in fund-raising, he said.

In other meeting news:

Dr. Lee Wilcox, vice president of Student Development and Campus Life, said, in a report to the Board, enrollment has declined at the university in the past few years. Wilcox said this could be “related to demographics and our (MSU) own reasons for not admitting more part-time students.” He added, “This helps with the student/teacher ratio, allowing for smaller classes and more learning.” Wilcox also said, “This downward trend in admissions is happening at all state institutions.”

Reid has put Wilcox in charge of developing ways to build the university’s enrollment back up. Wilcox said his first plan is to increase the freshman class next fall by taking advantage of Montclair’s “university” status.

The Board approved a policy concerning the rights of people with disabilities. The policy will require all programs and activities conducted by MSU be accessible to the disabled. Vice-Chairman of the Board William Wimberly, called the policy “long overdue.”

The board also publicly encouraged the faculty and administration to develop a limited number of doctoral level programs with hopes the first proposal be submitted for Board approval before the end of the current academic year.

have the grades and the desire but not the money.”

Ortiz said the commission was “attentive” and “alert” during the testimonies and that there were two voting students representatives on the commission. The testimonies from the meeting, which was held at Douglas College in New Brunswick, will be sent in transcript form to Governor Whitman.

Re-schedualing of winter classes confuses students

by Christina Mathison

This week’s change of class schedules, making Tuesday Dec. 12 a Thursday, is a direct result of the “student voice,” said Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs Dr. Richard Lynde.

The University Senate recommended that the academic schedule be balanced at 15 weeks per semester, making the spring term end almost two weeks early.

The Spring 1995 semester will be complete on May 16.

Lynde said that because New Jersey Administration Code requires a certain number of class sessions per semester, Tuesday’s class schedule was changed to Thursday’s as a result of Thanksgiving break.

Although Lynde sent a memo on Sept. 16 notifying all faculty of the change, many students were unaware of it.

One student, a sophomore, said that he was “a little annoyed” that the change wasn’t publicized to the student body and was “very surprised” to find himself sitting in the wrong class Tuesday afternoon.

Lynde said, “This is the first semester that the program has been implemented,” and that “a change such as this one will happen almost every semester.”

He forewarned that Thursday, May 4, 1995 will actually use Monday’s class schedule.

Class I Winter wrap-up

This final week of this semester has been highlighted by many Class One organizations finishing off the semester strong. On December 13 Players held another successful Cabaret Night. The crowd that attended was entertained by hometown students on the MSU campus. The audience was treated to comedic skits, singing, instrumental selections, and dancing. Each Cabaret night is an excellent event because of the low cost to put it on, and because regular students perform—the audience becomes more energized.

The Conservation Club was busy this week with their end of the semester events. They had a lecture on Tuesday which was well attended. The Conservation Club also had a van outside the Student Center that day to disseminate information on environmental issues.

Was life good this semester? Is the Montclair State University the type of school you would want to be? Hey, we’re here to help.

What was life?

The Year of the Student is half over and what do we have to show for it? It was our first full semester with our University status, but did it really change the way you, the student, look at the school?

In the middle of your stress filled finals, what do you remember about this semester? Speaking for the student body as a whole, the Confederate flag flap comes to mind. Like it or not, we received more media coverage out of this incident than we got for receiving university status.

Was this issue dealt with in a way that was beneficial to the student? That question can be debated, but what’s done is done. Did this crisis draw the students of MSU any closer together? No, I don’t think so.

Of course on the positive side, phone registration is coming to our humble halls in time for spring registration. Some students are worried about using it because it seems so “technical.” The bottom line is that now you can be annoyed about registration from the comfort of your own home. It can’t be worse than standing in the leaky hallways of the student center.

Party life turned its focus back to campus as the Ratt attempted to regain its former image of being the ‘cheer’ to place to be. Not a bad effort by SGA and certainly a necessary one since we don’t have a fraternity row to socialize around.

Painting rocks was a major issue as well. Once again, it seems we spent a lot of time worrying about something that has yet to materialize. I guess that’s part of life too.

With the impending holiday season, we should all smile at one total stranger and make the world a brighter place to be. I guess.

Was life good this semester? Is the glass half empty or half full? Did you learn, work and have fun in whatever order your priorities may be? Is what was life nearly as important as what will life be?

These are just a few of the questions you can ask your teachers right before your final. It might inspire your professor enough to give you an ‘A’. Hey, we’re here to help.

A co-op writer’s experience goes to the presses
by Kristy Capobianco

"Write about your Co-op experience this past summer," said Reesa Greenwald, my Co-op advisor and coordinator of the Co-op services here at MSU. "Who wants to read about my personal experiences?" I said. Well, anyway - here goes.

This summer I had a part-time co-op position as a staff-writer at a magazine called American Foreclosures & Auc­tion Magazine. American what? That was exactly what I said when I first went on the interview. But then I learned that this magazine was a trade publication which listed all foreclosed properties in New York and New Jersey. And, more importantly was in need of a new writer. And you would like me to write about what? Was my second question. What did I, a Speech Communication Major with a Journalism minor, know about foreclosed properties, loans, banks, mortgages, real estate and failed savings and loans? Well, let me tell you learn and learn quickly was what I did! I did have some previous writing experience, thanks to the Montclarion and a weekly newspaper I had worked for prior to this position. So the writing part I was able to manage. But the subject matter? That was a lot more than I had bargained for! At first, I felt overwhelmed and nervous. I didn’t think I was ready or qualified to handle this position. But then I was ready and qualified to handle the position. Then I realized that it was sink or swim and that I had taken this position through the co-op office to learn and gain experience in my field. (And the comfort of a whole co-op office being only a phone call away should I really need help was a plus!).

The learning experience I had planned on was to improve my writing skills. But, what I did learn proved to be invaluable. Along with a sharp-eyed editor at this magazine toning my grammar, catching my spelling mistakes, and helping me to improve the quality of my writing, I learned how to research, work independently, pitch articles, and actually experience what it was like to be a magazine staff-writer! One particular article that I wrote pertained to auctions. Luckily for me, I was able to get out of the office, and I got to travel and several parts of New Jersey, New York, and Philadelphia (all-expenses paid) to attend related functions. I also learned a very important lesson, which was to open my eyes to a variety of things. I accepted this position to get some articles in print. What I also learned was that real estate is such an interesting market, with a lot to write about and a lot to learn about. In such a short time I learned an amazing amount. Real estate was not a field I had ever considered. I also have several clips to demonstrate my new found knowledge which will hopefully assist me in landing future positions.

Fresh out of college I would never have been able to land such a position on my own, with such a limited experience. But the co-op office helped me to find the experience of a lifetime! The only advice I can give to my fellow students is that they aren’t kidding when they tell you how impressive something like this is on a resume! Take the time and sign up with the co-op office. A little experience goes a long way!
For Italian cuisine, E&V is the place to be

by Greg MacSweeney

Reservations are not accepted at E&V Italian Restaurant in Paterson but the average wait is well worth the time for the cuisine is affordable and most importantly delectable.

The small 15 table restaurant in Paterson makes up for its lack of atmosphere by providing a full Italian menu at reasonable prices.

A dinner for two with an appetizer, salad, entree and a bottle of house wine will run about $30 to $40.

The service is especially swift and pleasant, although they are not overbearing during the course of the meal. The waiter or waitress will not come up to the table during the meal and ask the ever annoying question, “Is everything O.K.?” Instead they will stand by the kitchen door while you are eating and will only interrupt your meal if they see that something is wrong or if you call them to the table.

Although every table can be considered near the kitchen and the decor is obviously early 1980’s, the food makes up for the sometimes unpleasant surroundings. The management has apparently decided to put more time and effort into preparing the meals and concentrating on great service rather than spend the time to upgrade the atmosphere.

Some may argue that the atmosphere adds to the meal. True, but the decor is not all that distasteful (fake wood paneling) especially when the food and the service takes the diner’s mind off of their surroundings. The candlelight atmosphere adds to the surroundings as only candlelight can.

Especially delicious is the veal Parmesan which costs $10.95. The portion, as with all the entrees, is more than adequate and many require a “doggy bag.” The veal cooked to perfection along with the hearty sauce makes the perfect Italian dinner. Also along with every entree comes a salad and choice of a side dish.

Equally appetizing is the Fetuccini in pink sauce. The plate is more than enough for one person but one may end up eating the entire entree because of its outstanding taste.

While the meal may be the main course, the appetizer to the appetizer is exceptionally delicious. E&V bakes their own bread. No, not Italian bread but small loaves of brown bread with a crunchy crust which are served perfectly soon after they are taken out of the oven. Don’t fill yourself with the bread, however, because the best is yet to come.

Reservations are not accepted at E&V for obvious reasons. Restaurant goers would be booking tables for days in advance. As it is now, between six and eight o’clock, a 45 minute to an hour wait is not uncommon.

For a romantic evening, or even an evening with the family, E&V serves as an affordable alternative to the Bennigan’s or TGI Friday’s that serve almost identical menus.

Without You, LIFE is DEAD!

The Life section will be without an editor (or an assistant, for that matter) unless YOU come down to the MONTCLARION office and save it! An interest in campus activities and student concerns is necessary. Some computer experience would be nice, but it’s not a requirement.

Don’t let LIFE die! Come down to the office and talk to Dave or Heather, or call X5252. It’s up to you!
The holiday season is almost here and I'm sure you're all looking forward to family get-togethers, romantic dinners, office parties or formal dances. This season's formal wear is geared to accommodate a wide range of preferences.

The hot sellers in evening wear this winter are rompers, Tadashi lyres dresses, short slip dresses and rhinestone-studded suits, according to Cheryl Bullcock, manager of Cache at the Willowbrook Mall. Gold, ivory, red and of course the old standby, black, seem to be dominating sales. Cache offers "capelets" during the holiday season. This unique invention is similar to a shawl but is entirely beaded with black and gold accents.

The Gap (อาศร 476.Willowbrook Mall) seems to champion both silver and black this season. A simple silver knit, short-sleeved A-line dress is presented that could be worn just about anywhere. Also grayish-silver button down shirts and spaghetti strap A-line dresses are definite possibilities. The ensemble that caught my eye is a panne velvet button-down dress. It is smartly paired with a black velvet body suit and leggings. This is a sensible outfit primarily because the three separate pieces could be worn both during and after the holidays. Therefore, you're getting more for your money.

Banana Republic (at Willowbrook) has surprisingly combined two fabrics this season. A black cropped button down sweater is accented with beaded velvet to create a winning combination. The black suits, spaghetti-strapped slip dresses and short-sleeved A-line dresses offered look plain on the hanger but make a refined statement.

So sticking to red, gold, silver and black is your best bet this season. There are many great styles out there to choose from. Just remember, it's always better to be overdressed than to be underdressed in any situation.

No. How can you explain to someone who has lost faith to keep it, when they have no reason (that they see) to keep it? That has to be a personal issue, not the be all, end all. Sometimes, all you can give is moral support, a shoulder to cry on, an ear to listen to. Maybe even a hug or five.

What brought all this on? I won't lie and say life's been great this past month. It hasn't. I was thinking just how my life and those close to me have been through the meat grinder. I was thinking about my EMS job, how every time I try to better myself, there are even more obstacles in my way. I was channel surfing and mentally preparing to do something stupid, like drive my car off the Palisades and into the Hudson. When I got caught up in one of those TNT Classic Movies.

You guessed it—It's A Wonderful Life. Hell, if Jimmy Stewart can see the light I sure can.

Since then, life's been a little bit brighter for me. We're all recovering from various hurts—me and those I've mentioned. I have friends that are still in need of help and if they read this, they all know I'm available almost 24-7. If they need help, I will do anything in my power to be there for them.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He gave me my life back. I hope I can be one of his elves and help others get back their life.

It's a wonderful life. See you next semester.

Time to reincarnate Residence Life

Residence Life at MSU continues to evolve with so many twists and turns that it wouldn’t be surprising if Aaron Spelling has secretly been its director during Fall Semester ’94. What do we mean? Before you break out the Bobby Sherman Christmas album, read on.

Judging by the agenda of a SGA meeting, an outcry is breaking out by the denizens of MSU dormitories, and for good reason. The rules and regulations imposed on students, although somewhat familiar (shades of Registration abound), are tilted in favor of Residence Life. For example, a student can be evicted and have no more than 24 hours to high-tail it out. If a resident decides to leave, they must give two weeks notice to take advantage of a withdrawal program that truly withdraws the students money.

It’s a nice place to visit, but...

Even aside from its controversial contracting strategies, Residence Life seems to be bent on making a students stay as difficult as possible. Regular complaints are lack of privacy, cleanliness in hallways and lobbies, and of course, water and heat that is never the right temperature.

The checking-in desk, for all intents and purposes is necessary, but isn’t operated at the standard it should be. Many visitors to dorms walk right by the desk as the clerk reads or blasts Rap music. Then, when clerks perform their tasks dutifully, it’s done in a manner that prompts one to definitely think that Big Brother is watching. Students are subjected to bag checks which are an obvious invasion of privacy. Although Residence Life claims it is for safety. Let’s leave the safety to Campus Police and the comfort to Residence Life.
Dear Diary: Memoirs of a Drunken Driver

July 3, 1994: Last night was the worst night of my life. I went to a party and was having a terrific time, so what did I do? -- drink. I was pretty buzzed but it didn’t help how I was feeling. When it was finally time to leave I thought that I was O.K. to drive. My friend offered to let me spend the night but I had to work early the next morning so I wanted to drive home.

As I started driving I considered pulling over to rest, but I just kept driving. My nightmare began when I turned a corner and saw the flashing lights behind me. My heart stopped. I pulled to the side of the road and the officer informed me that I was swerving. Then he asked me if I had been drinking and I told him that I had a few drinks a couple of hours ago. While I was still in the car the officer asked me to say the alphabet. I thought it would be easy but I was very nervous and I couldn’t remember what came after “G.” Then the officer asked me to get out of the car and perform some test of balance, none of which I could do.

The next thing I knew I was in the back seat of the police car, and the officer was reading me my rights. I was being arrested for drunk driving. At the police station I was put through a battery of tests. This time I was video taped. I was asked a lot of questions and I answered all of them while I was waiting to take the breathalyzer test. Even though I was scared I was still hoping that I would be below the legal limit of 10. But, this was not the case. I was legally drunk with readings of .12, .12, .11. Two hours later I was finally released but I was terrified because I had to tell my parents.

I have been a resident of MSU since the fall of 1991. Over these past few years I have been a witness and victim to the many unfairly imposed B.S. rules and regulations of the dictators who…oops, I mean Resi­dence Life.

For instance, last year my roommate of Blanton Hall was fined for sneaking into his own dorm! For years, until recently resident halls have performed constitutionally illegal searches upon residents’ book bags. Like students can’t get beer into the dorms anyway, get real. Well, the list could go on and on. Recently my girlfriend, a resident of Bohn Hall and her roommate were the latest victims of this stupidity.

Over Thanksgiving break they received two fines, one is somewhat understandable and acceptable and that is having a hot pot. I don’t understand how boiling hot water is going to start a fire, and every student living on campus has one anyway so what ever. My problem lies within the $20 fine which Joseph Dimichelle, Bohn Hall director admixes “ridiculous.” They received this fine for having curtains up. No, I didn’t say window, I said curtain! Now before I go on I might want to further explain by saying she lives on the tenth floor with a view consisting totally of New York City and it is impossible for any other person outside the building to look in.

So off we went to Mr. Joseph Dimichelle. We went to appeal and question this utterly insane fine. I walked into his lavish office with her with the hope that he would not walk all over her and be rude as residence life is famous for. I right away questioned the validity of such a fine. WHAM! Out came the political run around, “Well, there are regulations…” Blah, blah, etc., etc. So before I needed a shovel to get myself out of the office I said, “Well, could I know the reasons? His reply you may ask? To keep people from looking in, potential thieves I suppose. Well, as I stated earlier the only person who could command, I could bar, is perhaps an astronaut looking through the Hubble telescope or a bird, not exactly potential threats! The only thief I see is residence life. After I stated how dumb this reason is he said how curtains could also prevent a “draft from coming in the room.” Well first of all if the windows which Bohn Hall provides does not block wind then that is another story which should be addressed, but I don’t think curtains are going to help much there. I explained how even if there was a draft who would this draft affect since the room was locked for the weekend anyway. I am sure who ever gave this fine when the room was checked is brave enough to handle a slight breeze which was not even there to begin with.

That ended my discussion with Mr. Dimichelle because by this point I was “kicked out” of his office. He made it very clear how he didn’t want to be bothered and he being so damn well that she would be easier to talk down to. My girlfriend finished the discussion with Mr. Dimichelle and he gave her the story of how he didn’t make up the rules, and so on. She left with the old attitude that most people have towards certain issues, apathy. What can we do? We don’t pay thousands of dollars to live here to be unfairly scrutinized, harassed and fined no matter how large or small the fine is. I strongly urge residents to voice their opinions and fight for your very expensive right to live here comfortably.

Pissed off and frustrated,
Jason Alders

Spring 1995 Academic Calendar Revised

The Academic Calendar for the Spring, 1995 semester is markedly different than that of previous years. In an effort to eliminate misunderstandings, I will describe the major changes in this memo.

With the elimination of Winter Session, the Spring semester will still span a week earlier than in previous years. Classes are scheduled to begin on Tuesday, Jan. 17, the day after the Martin Luther King holiday. In order to schedule the requisite number of Monday classes, Friday evening will be canceled from Friday evening, Feb. 10 through Tuesday evening, Feb. 14. This represents a minor change from the published Academic Calendar and reflects the fact that all Weekend College classes, Friday night through Sunday, will be canceled as well as all Monday and Tuesday classes. White identified as a read-

OCTOBER 19, 1994: I went to court today and was never so nervous in my life. I felt so low because I know that I am really guilty. However, despite my guilt I was lucky; based on the report of the expert witness the case was dismissed. I still had to pay $230 in fines for 30 days. I never felt so relieved in my life. Even though the next 30 days will come and go quickly I know that I will never be the same again. I have realized that a lot of the bad things that have happened in my life have been a direct result of my drunkenness. This just happened to be the last straw. Yes, I am lucky that the charges were dismissed, but I am even more fortunate that I didn’t have an accident or worse...I could not even begin to imagine the horrible feeling of knowing that I killed someone.

This is a true story. The four months between the night I was arrested and the trial were the worst of my life.

While this may at first seem a bit complex, please be assured that there are exactly 15 class days of each weekday and 14 class days of each Weekend College day,” including Friday evening, when the calendar described above is implemented. The length of the Weekend College class period has been adjusted to account for the smaller number of meeting days. As recommended by the University Senate, the calendar provides for 14 weeks of instruction and one week of final examinations or alternate instructional activity in the 15-week semester. Please contact your dean if you have any questions about this calendar.

MONTCLAIR Vice President of Academic Affairs

Opinion/Thursday, December 8, 1994
Hairy Haggis in the Highlands

Just when the workload was getting intolerable my housemates decided it was time for a party. There was no avoiding it really. We had to do something with the holidays upon us, and we had to mark the departure of an old inmate and the arrival of a new one.

The preparations were impressive. Decorations were put up, a half-keg was rolled in, and a wide variety of grub was arrayed. Numerous bottles of wine, vodka, punch and tonic were placed at the ready and lights and music were put on standby. When everything seemed to be ready, the guests began to pour in. A short, intense interval seemed to follow, then suddenly it was over.

Since I was still wide awake as the last stragglers trickled out, I found myself scratching my addled head wondering what had become of the time.

The very beginning had lulled me into unrepressed ness. Coy and tentative conversations arose in the large empty rooms. Hitherto unacquainted friends of friends tried to sound each other out and find some common ground. An atmosphere of shy cordiality hung in the air for a time, then all Hell broke loose.

In recent weeks the MONTCLARION has come under increasing fire for its coverage of the Confederate Flag issue. The main antagonist of these accusations is the one and only Greek Council President and Slayer of the First Amendment Michael Anthony Costa.

Costa, Costa, Costa, let’s be serious. First of all, I’m only responding to your article because, well, I feel FOOLish today. To start with, most journalists know about the laws about libel and privacy, but even the Woodwards and Bersteins can’t remember the small print written under each rule. For instance, who’s a private figure and who’s considered a public figure, who must disclose certain documents and who doesn’t have to. That is why the Montclarion has a copy of “Sanford’s Simplified Guide to Libel and Privacy Laws.” Believe me, if anyone wanted to libel someone they would not need a book to know how to do it.

Sure we are the “Three Amigos.” But it is the Editorial Staff that decides what goes into the Main Editorial. And yes, the “Three Amigos” have the final say about what should go into the News, Arts, Sports, Campus Life, etc. That’s why we are the Executive Board of the newspaper just as you are part of the Executive Board of the Greek Council. We make decisions about what should go into the paper just like you make decisions on who is “unbecoming.” There is a little more science to it.

That is why the Montclarion has a copy of “Sanford’s Simplified Guide to Libel and Privacy Laws.” Believe me, if anyone wanted to libel someone they would not need a book to know how to do it.

Looking at my life in 1994, and the times making it what it’s been, I am at once satisfied. Another year of trials and errors that has excited me, depressed me, and most of all impressed me in ways palpable and as yet unforeseen - but I know they’re there.

On the professional side of things, The MONTCLARION has proven to be a enriching, eyeopening experience. As an Editorial Editor, I have succeeded in getting people to write and vent their frustrations about the world around them, local and distant. As a writer, I have fine-tuned my craft to a level in which I have begun to carve out a style. I highly recommend to anyone taking up writing to carve out a style. National Health For Tiny Tim

Well, we have come to the end of another semester. This is my last column of the semester, so I thought I should try to make it my best one. I could have responded to my colleague Michael Rubino’s column calling for a Reaganite military superiority, I chose not to. This column will indirectly deal with war and military affairs, and peace. This column is about my favorite time of the year: the holiday (Christmas) season.

I have never pretended to be a religious person, despite my twenty-two years of being Catholic. I recently broke with my Catholic upbringing by joining the Unitarian faith, a much more liberal faith that I feel at home with.

Although I have joined the Unitarian faith, a free-thinker’s church, I am still a firm believer in the teachings and life of Christ. Christmas is still very important to me. As a liberal person, I think of the holiday season as a time of the year when true liberalism is celebrated: the spirit of giving and loving one another.

A true liberal sees every year and every age as illiberal because the liberal year year after year. I believe that at Christmas we are to be mindful and conscious of other people who have problems that some of us could never even believe. At the heart of liberalism (and Christmas) is compassion, or I call it “com-passion, feeling and giving with each other.”

Christmas is supposed to be about joy. However, for some, joy comes in short supply. Thirty million people live below the poverty level in our country. Yes, those are the people that organizations like the Salvation Army run toy drives and Christmas meals for. It also seems that more and more people need help year after year.

As the weather gets colder, many of us will see the homeless sleeping on heating grates and drinking hard liquor to keep warm. Many of us (myself included) will complain about the raw and windy weather, as well as the snow and the ice. However, before we all continue to carry on about the cold and the snow, stop and wonder what it’s like to live exposed to those elements night after night. I’m sure our complaining will diminish.

In a nation as rich as ours, we still tolerate these things. A writer from India once wrote, “The crime is not that you have more homelessness than we do. I’m inured to homelessness in my country - people live in the streets all the time. The crime here (in the United States) is that with the incredible wealth and talent, you’ve not been able to do anything about it.”

Our politicians continue to lock horns with each other over common sense things. The debates continue: welfare as dependency, or welfare as life-saver? Death penalty as deterrent or death penalty as barbarism? Should young children in the ghetto have to live with the risk of being shot, or are we going to talk about common sense gun control?

As I look forward to spending Christmas with my family and my girlfriend. I feel what every liberal feels when something isn’t right. A small twitch in the mind-or is it the soul? It’s called a conscience.

At this time of year, I remain firm in my belief that all humanity is interdependent. As our world grows closer together, we must abandon our petty differences and do the work that must be done. My belief on the interdependence of all life is this: them is us.

One of my favorite Unitarian writers, Dr. Jack Mendelssohn, once wrote of the impulse that drives true liberals. He wrote, “The most powerful liberal instinct is a grating hunger for more freedom, more justice, more fairness, more inclusion, more fulfillment for more of earth’s creatures.” I find in that statement the essence of the liberal credo.

I would like to extend to all the very best for a joyful, safe, and mindful holiday season. I will be back next semester with more writings, and more wit and wisdom. I’ll see you then.

Would You Like Fries With That?

While thumbing through the local sports section last week, I came upon an article just laden with controversy. No, it wasn’t whether or not the Jets would make the playoffs. Nor did it concern the persistent chatter of baseball strikes and hockey lockouts. Instead it told how the most qualified for the job. There was no transgression of the liberal credo. A true liberal sees every year and every age as illiberal because the liberal year year after year. I believe that at Christmas we are to be mindful and conscious of other people who have problems that some of us could never even believe. At the heart of liberalism (and Christmas) is compassion, or I call it “com-passion, feeling and giving with each other.”

At this time of year, I remain firm in my belief that all humanity is interdependent. As our world grows closer together, we must abandon our petty differences and do the work that must be done. My belief on the interdependence of all life is this: them is us.

One of my favorite Unitarian writers, Dr. Jack Mendelssohn, once wrote of the impulse that drives true liberals. He wrote, “The most powerful liberal instinct is a grating hunger for more freedom, more justice, more fairness, more inclusion, more fulfillment for more of earth’s creatures.” I find in that statement the essence of the liberal credo.

I would like to extend to all the very best for a joyful, safe, and mindful holiday season. I will be back next semester with more writings, and more wit and wisdom. I’ll see you then.

Roar from the Right

by Michael Rubino

While thumbing through the local sports section last week, I came upon an article just laden with controversy. No, it wasn’t whether or not the Jets would make the playoffs. Nor did it concern the persistent chatter of baseball strikes and hockey lockouts. Instead it told how the most qualified for the job. There was no transgression of the liberal credo. A true liberal sees every year and every age as illiberal because the liberal year year after year. I believe that at Christmas we are to be mindful and conscious of other people who have problems that some of us could never even believe. At the heart of liberalism (and Christmas) is compassion, or I call it “com-passion, feeling and giving with each other.”

Christmas is supposed to be about joy. However, for some, joy comes in short supply. Thirty million people live below the poverty level in our country. Yes, those are the people that organizations like the Salvation Army run toy drives and Christmas meals for. It also seems that more and more people need help year after year.

As the weather gets colder, many of us will see the homeless sleeping on heating grates and drinking hard liquor to keep warm. Many of us (myself included) will complain about the raw and windy weather, as well as the snow and the ice. However, before we all continue to carry on about the cold and the snow, stop and wonder what it’s like to live exposed to those elements night after night. I’m sure our complaining will diminish.

In a nation as rich as ours, we still tolerate these things. A writer from India once wrote, “The crime is not that you have more homelessness than we do. I’m inured to homelessness in my country - people live in the streets all the time. The crime here (in the United States) is that with the incredible wealth and talent, you’ve not been able to do anything about it.”

Our politicians continue to lock horns with each other over common sense things. The debates continue: welfare as dependency, or welfare as life-saver? Death penalty as deterrent or death penalty as barbarism? Should young children in the ghetto have to live with the risk of being shot, or are we going to talk about common sense gun control?

As I look forward to spending Christmas with my family and my girlfriend. I feel what every liberal feels when something isn’t right. A small twitch in the mind-or is it the soul? It’s called a conscience.

At this time of year, I remain firm in my belief that all humanity is interdependent. As our world grows closer together, we must abandon our petty differences and do the work that must be done. My belief on the interdependence of all life is this: them is us.

One of my favorite Unitarian writers, Dr. Jack Mendelssohn, once wrote of the impulse that drives true liberals. Calvin and Hobbes

I think Santa is going to teach my behavior this year. I want to be such a good boy.

I mean, let's face it, I'd like to have a lot of Christmas stuff for Christmas."

Calvin and Hobbes

"Huh?"

Calvin and Hobbes

"Somebody's gonna do it to get a little little." Calvin, Christmas, New Year's tree?

Calvin and Hobbes

"Now are we all sworn to promise a little little?"

Calvin and Hobbes

"You're all a bunch of losers."

Calvin and Hobbes

"OK, Hobbes. As my lawyer, you need to review the facts of my case.

Calvin and Hobbes

"We're not copying an answer."

Calvin and Hobbes

"You're supposed to argue that you haven't been bad this year, and I decide to be on Santa's "good list."

Calvin and Hobbes

"If I don't get a case, I know you're going to settle out of court.

Calvin and Hobbes

"You calistically have a question?"

Calvin and Hobbes

"You're all useless."

Calvin and Hobbes

"The entire staff of the Humor section would like to wish you and yours a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Oh, and lots of really cool toys and stuff too!"

Calvin and Hobbes

By secretly working out for many months, Irwin became the envy of all the 96-pound weaklings.
M ore Amphitheater, of course. Sitting down on those rock benches was so gosh darn uncomfortable. Something had to be done to alleviate my pain and suffering. As I sat in the amphitheater, on the rock benches, a furry friend came by that looked like a squirrel and gave me the answer. NUTS!!!

Imagine that, he said nuts! Well, I stuffed the little fucker and gave him to my friend to mail as an early Christmas present, and went along my way. Rolling along on top of the houses, I passed a particularly small one, smaller in fact than my balls. I looked down and realized that it was Anthony O'Donnell's house. Hey, I've never even met him. But I knew his house was smaller in fact than my balls. I looked smaller than my balls. I looked down and realized that it was Anthony O'Donnell's house. Hey, I've never even met him. But I knew his house was smaller in fact than my balls.

Sure, my grant from the National Endowment for the Well-Endowed had lifted the burden, financially at least, but still I was unprepared for what lay ahead.

Sure, my grant from the National Endowment for the Well-Endowed had lifted the burden, financially at least, but still I was unprepared for what lay ahead. It was difficult enough to find a suitable ride to school that day given my physical affliction. Once I arrived, I realized the campus was not geared to handle those like me.

So there I was my first day of the semester. My friends told me I'd have to face my dilemma someday but now that day had arrived. I was unprepared for what lay ahead.

I was unprepared for what lay ahead. Everywhere I went, every class I attended, every professor I met. I could not shake the feeling that I was special compared to the other students. All of my classes were held outside in the Amphitheater, of course. Sitting down on those rock benches was so gosh darn uncomfortable. Something had to be done to alleviate my pain and suffering. As I sat in the amphitheater, on the rock benches, a furry friend came by that looked like a squirrel and gave me the answer. NUTS!!!

Aries: (Mar. 21–Apr. 19) Comely actress Sandra Bullock will come to stick a scissors in your throat.

Taurus: (Apr. 20–May 20) Co-workers become annoyed at your insistence to be called "El Albondiga."

Gemini: (May 21–June 21) You'll be kicked out of a local fast-food restaurant after paying for your burger in ha-pennies.

Cancer: (June 22–July 22) Diplomatic communication with France will be all but ruined after the XYZ affair.

Leo: (July 23–Aug. 22) Don't put any air fresheners in your bathroom, because you may eat them because they smell so good.

Virgo: (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) You'll encounter a particularly bold squirrel who demands you give it a nut—or else!

Libra: (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) Have you hugged your kid today? Well, don't, because that's a good way to get leprosy.

Scorpio: (Oct. 24–Nov. 21) The stars say eggs will taste extra good this week.

Sagittarius: (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) If you meet any compulsive gambling addicts, don't give them any money, because they'll just gamble it away.

Capricorn: (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) The stars reveal there will be twenty-five cent taps at the Hootchie-Cootchie Strip Bar on every Tuesday.

Aquarius: (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) Go to hell. Go to hell you awful, awful bastard. I demand satisfaction!

Pisces: (Feb. 19–Mar. 20) The stars say absolutely nothing, as they are simply giant balls of gaseous matter incapable of communication.
As you can probably see, I have a huge blank space this week, since many of my contributors have taken to hitting the books. So if you could, imagine that you are looking at the funniest cartoon you have seen. If this doesn't work, too bad; sucks to be you. -JJO'S

So, we finally meet again, my hairy nemesis! And it's about time, too!

Not if I can help it, you nasty vegetable!

Die! Die! Arrgh!

But I, the evil Brussels Sprout, escaped from my chilly tomb. Now I've found you.

Prepare to die, you idiots!

Curse! Failed again!

THEATRE OF THE ABSURD

By JOHN J. O'SULLIVAN

Last semester, I came up with a list of the things that really annoyed me during that semester. It was the one (okay maybe the second or third) time that I could get out of all of my frustrations of the world and just laugh at things I could not stand. Well, hold onto your seat, cowboys and cowgirls, since it is the end of THIS semester, and well...it’s time for....

THE LIST OF THINGS THAT PISSED ME OFF!!! THE SEMESTER IN REVIEW.

1) Route 46: I can’t take driving on this road. Sometimes I would rather go back and forth from school and work on a unicycle, riding on a high wire, connected from the top of Bohn Hall to the Willowbrook Mall than drive my car on Route 46. I don’t know how they get all of those psychopathic maniacs to drive on one road at the same damn time!! All I know is that on the way back to my room from my job at Radio Shack™ on Sunday night, I was cut off by 3 people, stuck behind 1 42,348,324 year old man, and NO ONE would let me into the damned third lane to escape from the 42,348,324 year old man and to get to MSU. I HATE ROUTE 46.

2) That rancid lemon scented cleaning solution that housekeeping uses for the bathrooms in Bohn Hall (whoa): Sometimes I would rather smell the dreadful scent of 3 unflushed “automatic flushing” toilets then smell that horrible rancid lemon scent. I really wonder sometimes if it says on the label of the bottle of rancid lemon scented cleaning solution, “Rancid lemon scented cleaning solution.” It wouldn’t surprise me if it did.

3) Loud Rap: “Gee...let’s take the same tired old rhythm, add some annoying clips taken from other people’s work, yell into a microphone, and blast the volume so everyone in the New York metropolitan area can hear it. Especially when John J. O’Sullivan is trying to take a nap after working all day and all night on a frigging paper.” By the way, what the hell does “Pump up the jam” mean?? Does it mean taking a bottle of Smuckers™ Grape Jam and blowing it up?? Please explain.

4) The Pudding in Blanton Hall: WHY MUST THEY PUT FRUIT IN THE PUDDING?? WHY?? WHY?? WHY?????????????? The pudding would be alright if they didn’t put fucking grapes in the pudding! But NO!!! One must feel like they are eating rat turds when eating in Blanton, I guess.

5) AT&T™ Commercials: Reach out and MAKE ME PUKE!!!! I DON’T CARE ABOUT MCI™, ALRIGHT? I JUST DON’T GIVE A SHIT!!!! I don’t want ANYTHING put into writing; it would just clutter up my already cluttered desk space. I don’t want to hear what I’ll be doing in the next few years; I get enough stress thinking about what I am going to do tomorrow. And I certainly don’t want to hear any frigging “heartwarming” stories about a mother saying goodnight to her kid, okay? I JUST DON’T CARE!!!

6) Bob Sagat: Don’t you just want to bash in his head?? I mean, that shit-eating grin, that annoying persona, that...HAIR. I cannot take watching this guy, or his vomit inducing shows: “Full House” (the leading cause of death) and “America’s Funniest Home Videos”. In “Full House”, we get to watch Bob, Dave Coulier (lame), and that annoying rock-n-roller wanna-be guy (lamer) act like assholes around the always way-too-cute and obnoxious Olsen Twins. In “America’s Funniest Home Videos”, we get to see America (literally) killing themselves to make some quick cash. Take this guy and shoot him, please.

7) Negative Campaigning: “Senator John Smith was caught having sex with bears. John Smith stole 2342376324 dollars from the State Legislature, and he listened to the New Kids on the Block. For God’s sake, DON’T VOTE FOR HIM” Doesn’t that sound ridiculous? Well, it is slightly (hehehe) exaggerated, but that’s all that the American populous heard for months before the damned elections. Easy solution; blow up all the politicians. It may sound a bit icky, but hey; it might make America a nicer place to live. (The John J. O’Sullivan PSA of the day!)

8) Barney: I know, I know it’s a bit repetitive, but I CANNOT STAND THIS DEMONIC DINOSAUR FROM HADES!!! The bubbly “I love you” atmosphere is actually a cover of a multimillion dollar hate machine!! Did you ever play a Barney tape backwards? Well on the same tape that says, “I love you!”, when played backwards it says, “KILL YOUR DOG!! EAT SNICKERS™ BEFORE DINNER, WATCH BOB SAGAT!!!” Something must be done to protect the kids!!! Get rid of Barney before it’s too late!!

9) Personalas: ’Nuff said.

10) Talk Shows: Is it just me, or does it seem that everybody has their own talk show? Pretty soon, my cat will have her own talk show. And doesn’t it seem like every single miscreant of society is in those audiences? Since most people WILL have their own talk show by the year 2000, even the miscreants, there won’t be anyone for the audiences. People will have to be cloned, then the clones will rebel in the various audiences, and soon...WORLD WAR III!!! These shows must be stopped, or else.....

Well, on a happler note, I wish you all peace and inner happiness during these upcoming weeks of joyful love! But, if you piss me off, you will die.

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!!!!!

Close just not enough for Lady Red Hawks

MSU misses Misiejuk in tough 74-70 loss to Rowan on Saturday

by Glenn Steinberg

For the Lady Red Hawks, the biggest factor in their 74-70 loss to the Rowan Profs in Glassboro on Saturday just may have been the non-factor.

Starting center Maggie Misiejuk missed the team bus on Saturday that was headed towards Rowan College (5-1, 1-1) for MSU’s (5-2, 3-2) seventh game of the season. Her absence may have been the deciding factor in the game and the team snapping a five-game winning streak.

According to head coach Gloria Bradley, Misiejuk, a 6-foot-8, 265-pounder, is a star-caliber player for the Lady Red Hawks. She is the starting center for MSU and is a crucial player for the team.

“Her absence hurt the team mentally because they did not know what happened,” said Bradley. “We were not focused in the first 10 minutes of the game. It was a mental thing for the players.”

Misiejuk’s absence caused the coach to shuffle the starting lineup around. Kim Kovar took over at center, while Jill Schultz started for the first time this season at the power forward spot. Other first time starters this season included point guard Lisa Villalta and small forward Jennifer Owens.

The Lady Red Hawks got off to a slow start and fell behind early. The biggest lead the Profs held was 15 points in the first half. Without Misiejuk not only were her teammates unfocused, they were also missing a vital presence on the court.

She was leading the team in blocked shots with 27 (average of 4.67 per game) and in rebounding with a 10.5 average per game. Therefore, Rowan out rebounded the Lady Red Hawks, 45-30.

“The time off lets us work on the fundamentals instead of our next opponent,” said Bradley. “We must come together as a team. If we achieve this, it is a positive.”

Winning four straight games and having five players score in double figures in back-to-back games could leave a team optimistic. Especially with one game left in the first half of their season.

Optimistic is what the Red Hawks have every right to be. They have won four straight games, the last being a convincing 83-60 victory over the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy on Tuesday night before only 212 fans at Panzer Gym.

Senior guard Chris Smith was one of five players who scored in double figures in MSU's win over the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy on Tuesday night at Panzer Gym.

See story on security problems at MSU basketball games this past week in News on page 3.

Trailing early on by a 6-5 deficit, they used a 33-12 surge to take a 39-17 lead with 4:29 remaining. Reilly, a freshman who has played well during the winning streak, and Smith combined for 13 points during the run. Both finished with 11 points in the contest.

In addition to scoring the most points (22), they had scored the 112-84 trouncing of Kean College on Dec. 9, 1974, MSU also set two single-game team records with 10 three-pointers and 29 assists.

RED HAWK NOTES: Spinogatti had six assists against the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy, leaving him eight shy of the MSU assist record set by Ed Dolan from 1983-1986.

What do you want for Christmas? A stereo, perhaps? Maybe a television? How about a brand new wardrobe? Or a personal servant to satisfy every single one of your desires, no matter what they are?

Sorry, but I can’t give you any of that. But I can give you a chance to boost your resume and participate in the campus community. I can use people for ideas, editing, and especially for writing. You can do so on a weekly or a semi-weekly basis. All backgrounds and levels of experience are welcome to give it a shot.

If interested, please come down to the MONTCLARION, Student Center Room 113, during the week. Or call me, Brian Falzarano at 655-5241.

Happy Holidays and a Happy New Year,

Brian Falzarano.

All I want for Christmas is...

by Brian Falzarano

It’s Christmas time at MSU. And you know what that means. All right, so you’re really confused as to what this is supposed to mean to you.

Well, it is time for me and the rest of our MONTCLAIRON staffmates to make our Christmas wishes. I could list one of my fellow MONTCLAIRON members do their wish first and be a nice guy.

But just because it is Christmas doesn’t mean that I am going to let them go. I may see another lump of coal in my stocking. But that won’t make this Christmas different from any other one in the past.

There are so many things I would like to see happen. I mean, I would like to see a club that was just as good as the others. I would like to see the New York Mets return to the World Series.

Also, I would like to see the New York Giants win the Super Bowl. The Oilers would be great. They would be able to shed their image as chokers. Besides that, I would like to see the Oklahoma-Oklahoma State rivalry already one of the best in the league.

I would like to see Barry Switzer put on probation so that the Cowboys do not get to three-peat this year.

The best part about that would be if Deion Sanders picked off a Troy Aikman pass and ran it down the sidelines, high-stepping along while he passed Jerry Jones.

What should stop, in my opinion, is people making excuses for the Jets. The fact is, they’re not a good football team.

There, I stated the obvious. But I’m not done with my wishes.

As far as college basketball goes, it would be nice to see Danny Hurley be right and have Seton Hall return to the NCAA Tournament again.

Also, to see UMass win it all, Rider to make the tournament and win in the first round, and for Corliss Willliamson to go pro and be the number one pick in the NBA Draft next June.

On the local front, it would be nice to see both the MSU men’s and women’s basketball teams go to the NCAA tournament in their respective brackets.

Finally, my last wish is about the New Jersey Nets. I can’t say I know anyone of them personally. And it is tough to criticize someone you don’t know well enough. But Chris Morris is ridiculous. How many good men do you know that make a point by not tying their shoes? And who averages 11 points per game and wants to know why he isn’t an All-Star? I think Morris needs a severe reality check.

Talent-wise, the Nets are lacking in spots. With Kevin Edwards hurt, they only have a handful of legitimate players: Coleman, Kenny Anderson, Armon Gilliam and P.J. Brown. Morris needs to be more consistent before he can be added to that list.

I hope that the Nets grow up and learn how to win sometime soon. That is all my wishes. Others on my staff wish (no pun intended) to do their Christmas wishes.

TOM TRACY, our treasurer, wishes for the following things:

For the Giants to receive a playoff berth, for the Knicks to win the NBA championship and to be able to see a live professional baseball/hockey game again before he dies.

Also, to see Jimmy Johnson be the coach of the Jets because he is tired of watching them stink up the field his beloved Giants play on.

I want someone to put the Nets out of their misery. How many people can actually name their starting five?

I want a Super Bowl without the Cowboys or Bills.

I want to see Penn St. beat Nebraska in a winner-take-all National Championship.

I want Shaquille O’Neal to pick a career. Either play basketball, be a rap star or become the star C’mon buddy, make up your mind.

I wish the best of luck to all of the MSU teams and that one of them will bring home a championship of some sort.

I want Brian Falzarano to have much better luck in any predictions he boldly makes next year.

Above all, I wish everyone much joy and happiness for next year. See ya in ’95! Chris Hinck, our managing editor, would like to see the following:

I wish someone would give me some competition with Fearless Forecasts.

I hope that the Cowboys win another Super Bowl this year. But first, I hope they beat San Francisco to get there.

I think it would be nice to see the Jets make the playoffs by the time I graduate. Finally, I would like to wish Brian Falzarano luck with his picks in 1995.

MICHAEL LAMPE, our new editorial columnist, has a few hopes of his own for the holidays. Here is a sample:

The Niners will beat Dallas in the NFC Championship game when in the final seconds, as they are behind by four points, they line up Jerry Rice, John Taylor, Brent Jones and Deion Sanders as wideouts. The thoroughly confused Dallas secondary won’t even move off the line as Deion high steps into the end zone.

As a result, the Super Bowl will be cancelled for what Paul Tagliabue calls “a lack of suitable competition from the AFC,” whose Bills would have been back for their fifth straight loss.

Our advertising manager, Kevin Schwobbel (a.k.a. THE PROPHET), feels that he must offer a few yuletide wishes. Well, if he must...

I wish that Jeff Frier of the Seahawks will walk again.

I would have to be a miracle for the Seahawks to play in the post-season, but I love them any way.

Besides that, my wish is that we get a sports editor that can pick better than an entertainment columnist/Advising Director, who hasn’t really a clue about sports.

Finally, I hope that I get to be a hockey fan.

Now with more from the peanut gallery is my assistant, the dubious Glenn Steinberg:

I hope that the Giants make the playoffs this year.

I wish that Brian Falzarano would give me the money who owes me, and that he would realize what a better team the Giants are than the Oilers.

And I hope that the L.A. Jazz win it all.

More nonsense from comics editor John O’Sullivan:

I wish that things would get more interesting in football. It bores me.

I wish that they would have some real entertainment on the Super Bowl halftime shows. If I have to watch a county music fest at halftime again, I will never, ever watch another athletic contest again...

Thanks for your time, John. Rounding out our things for our staff is our fearless Editor-in-Chief and die hard 49ers fan, Greg MacSweeney.

Needless to say, my Christmas Wish is to have the 49ers win the whole thing. The only difference: between my wish and every one else’s is that its not a wish...its destiny.

I also wish that the AFC gives the 49ers someone worthy of beating up. Not the Bills again, please!

I wish that Emmitt Smith’s shoulder will finally break or something so we can be sure that he won’t go to the hall of fame and be with the real “greats.”

Finally, I wish (and this is a real wish) that hockey returns to North America sometime before the end of the century.

As for baseball, who really cares!!!
Falling short
