Walkie-talkies stolen from C.L.U.B. office

by Caroline Burgess

Four rented walkie-talkies used to help during the Homecoming weekend were stolen from the College Life Union Board (CLUB) office Friday afternoon.

The walkie-talkies were delivered at 2:10 p.m. and David Lalla, production manager of WMSC, signed for them.

There was no one of authority around, so I signed for the package myself,” said Lalla. Rather than leave the two boxes outside of an empty office, Lalla found an open office, left the packages there, and left the Student Center.

Lalla left the two boxes in the unlocked SGA Class II and III office.

CLUB president Chuck Rioreturned to the CLUB office and found the two boxes there, one of which was ripped open with four walkie-talkies missing.

The walkie-talkies were rented from Regional Communications, Inc. and used to help CLUB members keep in contact with each other during the float building and parade.

According to Francois Dander, SGA president, the remaining four walkie-talkies have been returned to Regional Communications, Inc. and the incident is under investigation by the Department of Campus Safety and Security.

“I’m upset that someone would be so inconsiderate as to cause such an inconvenience to CLUB and the entire student body on an event everyone worked so hard for,” said Dander.

Attorney General’s sudden resignation stuns legislature

by Greg MacSweeney

In an unexpected move, SGA Attorney General Michael Anthony Costa resigned from his position during an emotional five minute speech where he cited unhappiness with the "quality of people" running the SGA.

Costa also said during a later interview that "inflated egos, power-trips, dishonesty and incompetence" inside the SGA moved him to resign.

"I may have been around too long and knowing too much about the inner workings of the SGA is very disenchanting. I’m ecstatic with my decision," said Costa. "I feel that a huge weight has been lifted off of my shoulders."

Fellow SGA legislators said that Rossener and Costa were "very close" and that Costa was "somewhat of a mentor to Rossener."

Costa also said that he had "no enthusiasm" and that "doing a job that he didn’t want to do did nobody any good."

After Costa left the meeting a few legislators apparently felt that the legislature was attacked during Costa’s speech.

Costa responded later, "I wouldn’t want anybody to be discouraged by what I said. I wish everybody well that is part of the SGA."

Costa also said, "The SGA wastes a Career Services has won a $10,000 grant from the New Jersey Developmental Disabilities Council to be used on a three-step program which will better assist MSU’s disabled students in pursuit of jobs.

"This grant opens up many doors and will create accessibility to Career Services for students with disabilities,” said Eileen Bruck, Director of Career Services.

The three-step program includes outreach activities, new voice-activated computers, and advanced staff-training.

Outreach is a service headed by Joe Amoroso who coordinates the Office of Services to Students With Disabilities. He will join forces with Career Services to make disabled students aware of the new, helpful computers that are available.

He will inform them of the up and coming career planning seminars, and will work on academic and adjustment issues with disabled students.

Next, there have been several computers purchased which have the ability to vocally activate text with the help of speech synthesizers. Therefore, blind and learning disabled students can easily access material that interests them.

Career Services also has a “home page,” which is a specific web site where students can find out information about the organizations and services that are available to them. These new computers also contain List Serves, which are conversation groups that allow disabled students to contact other students in similar situations to themselves.

This will allow them to receive helpful advice about preparing resumes and what to be ready for when going on interviews from someone who has already been through it.

Lastly, the staff at Career Services will be specially trained through workshops in accordance with the Americans

Latin American and Latino Studies program approved

by Anthony R. O'Donnell

At a meeting of the General Education Review Committee on Oct. 2, members stated their resolve to seek ways of increasing student interest in the evaluation of the current General Education Requirement (GER).

The committee, made up of representatives of the Provost, the University Senate, the academic schools and the SGа, was convened in May 1994 by Provost Dr. Richard Lynde and the University Senate, and began work in September of that year. Their immediate goal is to achieve significant student participation in the upcoming University Day Convocation on Oct. 31, the theme of which is Approaches to General Education: A Time for Change?

Representative of the School of Humanities and Social Sciences Dr. Kay Wilkins said that the last such review of the GER took place over fourteen years ago, and that certain factors made recommendations for changes likely. Among these she cited technological developments and the need to adapt the GER to the needs of increased numbers of commuters and transfer students.

Committee leader Dr. Helen Robson-Perspectives on Latin America, said Dr. Wilkins, "With the introduction of a strong African and Asian influence, but also at the European tradition."

Zapata and Dr. Jo Anne Englebert.

The committee is described as responsible for the academic multicultural requirement. Dr. Zapata said the course will focus on "different approaches to how Latin America is a very heterogeneous continent. We will provide an overview of different Latin cultures in Latin America and the USA...We will look at the indigenous African and Asian influences, but also at the European tradition." Zapata said that the faculty hoped for ample feedback from students. "We hope they will not only be learning but asking very important questions. Those questions are what make us honest in this academic environment," he said.
Bohn Resident charged for false public alarm prank

by Christine Miller

Bohn Hall resident Antoine Amay was arrested for pulling a False Fire Alarm on Sept. 30 at 3:50 a.m. after a Bohn Hall RA witnessed Amay pulling the fire alarm and later identified him re-entering the building.

Amay was arrested and charged with False Public Alarm, a fourth degree crime. Bail was set at $5,000 in Clifton Municipal Court.

The case is now being referred to Passaic County Court, and the trial date has been set for Oct. 16.

Although unable to comment on the disciplinary actions MSU will take concerning the matter, Dean of Students Helen Matusow-Ayres said that any student accused of such a crime will be subjected to preliminary and disciplinary hearings, and actions will be taken from there.

MSU Code of Criminal Justice 2C:33-3 states: “A person is guilty of a crime of the fourth degree if he initiates or circulates a report or warning of impending fire, explosion, bombing, crime, or catastrophe, knowing that the report or warning is false or baseless and that it is likely to cause evacuation of a building ... or to cause public inconvenience or alarm.”

“We take it very seriously,” Dr. Matusow-Ayres said. “It’s a federal crime, and it endangers the community.” She said that the false alarms have now created a distrust among the residents of the validity of the alarms in Bohn Hall, and that such a dismissal is highly dangerous.

Bohn Hall resident Bob Czechowicz said, “I don’t know why anyone would want to do it or what pleasure they get out of it. It just really irks me because the damn alarms, whether planned or false, always happen just as I fall asleep. The only good thing is that I get to show off my tiger slippers.”

Matusow-Ayres said that the severest charges Amay faces are suspension from MSU and expulsion from the residence halls.

A final decision in the matter has not yet been reached; however, according to the False Public Alarms Policy here at MSU, “Montclair State University will enforce false public alarms laws to the fullest extent.”

lot of time and energy on things that they can't do anything about.

"Sometimes what the SGA does is pathetic. It drains good people with good ideas of everything they got," said Costa.

Newly appointed SGA Attorney General Fisher said, "I'm excited but at the same time disappointed that we lost such a valuable asset to the student government, namely Mike Costa.

Fisher was not sure of her goals as attorney general, but said, "Being that the resignation of Mike was so sudden, I haven't had time to contemplate my goals as attorney general. Pennies for the Child Care Center

I would like to enlist the entire campus community in a worthy cause that will benefit YOU and the CHILD CARE CENTER.

As I walked past the Child Care Center recently and saw the children in their playground, I admired the new equipment, and realized that what was purchased through the fundraising efforts of the staff and parents. Jane DeLuca, director of the Center, told me of a need for further improvements, such as the construction of a tricycle path and a children's garden.

Can you help the Center to reach its goals through a “Pennies for the Playground” campaign? Like me, you may be in the habit of tossing pennies into a container at the end of the day. Those small amounts can be a nuisance in your home, but a real boon for the children when pooled by a large number of participants from all campus constituencies.

Please join me in collecting pennies for the Child Care Center. Our Resident Assistants are eager to handle collection and counting of the coins as their contribution to the project. Please establish a collection spot in your office, and then call Matthew Kane at x5248 to arrange for pick-up of the coins on a weekly basis. A few small pennies can make a difference in the lives of our children.

Egg Donors Are Needed

The Diamond Institute is Looking For A Few Very Special Women.

In the past few years a process called “Donor Egg” has made the miracle of pregnancy and having a much wanted baby possible for thousands of couples who were formerly considered “infertile”. The procedure involves taking an egg from a female donor, fertilizing it “in vitro” (out of the body) with sperm taken from the husband, and implanting the resulting embryo into the uterus of the woman trying to become pregnant. We are seeking women of all ethnic & racial backgrounds between the ages of 20 to 34.

Your Donated Eggs Can Help Create the Miracle of Life for Couples Who Couldn’t Otherwise Conceive.

Donors Will be Paid $2000 Per Procedure

Cafeteria walls still bare

by Kerri Mazzoni

By the start of next semester, the Student Center cafeteria will be decorated in a way that equally presents all campus organizations.

The 20 Greek banners that once hung in the cafeteria were taken down in the beginning of August in order to "clean up the serving area," said Dr. Lee Wilcox, vice-president of Student Development and Campus Life.

"The Student Center was in the biggest need for a major upgrade, and not just the food, but also the ambiance. The room was an embarrassment to the university," he said.

Due to the renovations done in the cafeteria, the banners no longer fit in the upgraded space, Wilcox said.

Francois Dauder, SGA president, proposed the idea that the cafeteria should be designed so that not just Greeks, but all organizations, such as Class I, II, III and IV organizations, the SGA and athletic teams are equally represented. The cafeteria will be designed so that all organizations can show off their logos.

With $195,000 of MSU money, Cody Eckert and Associates, an architectural and interior design firm, were hired to renovate the kitchen and serving areas. This company was also hired to work on a way to present the organizations more professionally. "So when you walk in, it looks like a university," Wilcox said.

A meeting was held last week with members of the SGA, Greek Council, Dr. Wilcox and Cody Eckert, and a contract was signed in order to develop two or three design concepts. "It will not be just social fraternities and sororities that are going to be represented; we are trying to give all organizations a chance to be seen," said Greek Council President John Cvelic.

Wilcox said that the banners will not be put back up. "We are going to wait until we do it right. University life will be represented in a high quality way," he said.

The final idea about what the room will look like has not been decided, but ideas are being collected by the SGA.

The banners are presently located in the Gestetner room in the SGA office. Owners of these banners are "more than welcome to come and pick them up," Cvelic said.

Two weeks of SGA News is twice as nice

by Victor Carillo

The Student Government Organization, on September 27, saw the Newman Catholic Community come up for recharterment as a Class III organization. A Class III organization, according to the SGA statutes, is an organization that, through programming, appeals to a specific area of interest and is entitled to approach the legislature for monies for specific programs.

The Newman Catholic Community is the main campus ministry at MSU. It is a student run group funded by the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Newark and private donations. The Newman Catholic Community is composed of students, faculty, staff, alumni, and friends. According to Father Art Humphrey, chaplain/campus minister, the main purpose is to help students with problems of a spiritual nature. He also mentioned that the ministry is committed to helping other ministry groups not chartered by the Student Government.

When Bill #F95009 Newman Catholic Community Class III charter came up to the floor, it passed 30-0-2.

In other SGA news for Sept. 27, Bill #F95020 MSU Ski Club appropriation was placed into the Appropriations Committee and Bill #F95021, Spanish Club Class III Charter, was placed into the Constitutional Review Committee.

The meeting on October 4 was interrupted by a big discussion on the Bohn fire alarm issue. During Cabinet reports, Director of Residence Life Susy Carella and the legislature discussed this issue thoroughly. According to Carella, there have been 15 false fire alarms pulled since the beginning of school, with only one culprit arrested. He was arrested by Clifton police, fined 5,000 dollars, suspended and has to perform community service. "This was a serious event (violation), he will be suspended from housing because it is a federal offense," Carella said.

At this point during the discussion, Legislator Antoine Wheeler petitioned for a point of information and explained the culprit's side of the story. "The individual who was arrested was not treated fairly, there were others who were not punished.....He is very apologetic for his actions and is asking for justice," Wheeler said.

He further mentioned that his rights were violated, because the Student Handbook guarantees a student fairness and a notification in writing, therefore he couldn't get suspended. Legislator Brian Cosgrove then explained to the legislature that when you sign a contract with Residence Life, the contract clearly states that they could remove you any time for any misconduct.

There will be a News Section Meeting on Tues., Oct. 17 at 3 p.m. Everyone must attend! If you can't make it, please call the News Desk at x5216 or the editor at x5666.
Homecoming Parade a success despite the light rain

by Jessica Nunez

On Saturday, Oct. 7, the university community gathered together on Valley Road to await the Homecoming Parade. Despite the light rain, everyone was very enthusiastic about the event. Brian Cosgrove, WMSC radio station DJ, kept the best music on and kept the audience entertained.

Dr. Irwin Gawley was the Grand Marshall for the 1995 Parade. A graduate of the 1949 MSC Teachers’ College, he served as a faculty member, Dean of Math and Science, and as an Alumni Association board member at Montclair State.

Our MSU cheerleading team opened the parade with one of their routines. Then, Zeta Beta Tau and Alpha Iota Chi gave us a Halloween float. They danced to mixed oldies in their ghost-like costumes. “Arabia” was one of the most cheered performances.

Sigma Sigma Sigma and Theta Xi got together to dance to Janet Jackson’s “If” in a mixture of modern and arabic moves. The choreography spelled out talent and hard work. Theta Kappa Chi and Tao Phi Beta prepared a medieval scene where the royalty joined the town for a dance after the cruel fight. The float and the costumes gave a touch of authenticity to the act.

SIGO presented a temple from the Aztec era and danced Latinismo, in which they showed their devotion to the Aztec gods. OSAU was also at the parade, and the gave us a gift from Africa: Magani, a social dance. Senate took us back to their game of chess, where they had to “move it.” Sigma Delta Phi and Delta Chi, represented the rebirth of form and function. Bees and flowers danced to an upbeat rhythm. Then, Phi Sigma Sigma gave us the Leprechaun’s tale. These little green devils stole their gold and danced to Irish tunes. Delta Kappa Psi brought with them a game of chess, where they had to “move it.” Sigoma Delta Tau and Alpha Chi Rho rekindled the roaring twenties and the rebirth of human spirit, with excellent choreography and colorful, enchanting costumes.

Last but not least, there was the Environmental Awareness float. This float was co-sponsored by the Communications Club and AmeriCorp’s NJ Community Water Watch. The main idea of the float was for the Red Hawks to recycle, reuse, and reduce the Keen College Cougars.

The 1995 Homecoming Parade, sponsored by CLUB, was full of the color and vitality.

Philosophy Club Update

by Moses Sarkwiti

As I made my way to the Montclair (full of duty and honor) I encountered New Testament distributors. I refused. It occurred to me that these people fell into a distinction that Plato makes in his Republic: that of the philodoxes, that of the philodoxes, philosophy means loving one’s beliefs, while philosophy is the love of wisdom.

For the love of wisdom the Philosophy Club, once again decided to stretch its minds. We attended a lecture at N.Y.U. by the British philosopher Susan Haack. Haack is a well-known and respected Miami University Professor with his focus in feminist and relativism. Haack spoke to us on the varying nature and definitions of the idea of philosophy. The basic precept of Haack’s presentation is that we (us) live in one world, in which there is a “fixed totality of mind-independent objects” that can be described by us, and only if our statements make sense. But do we accept her assertion that we live in one world? Many of us live in our own “worlds,” whether they be mental states, countries, or societies but all belong to a totality. All that we can think about is “the world.” This is the world that is there for us and remains when we are not there (sleeping, in a coma, etc.). Haack calls this perspective “innocent realism,” meaning a world that is independent of us and our perception.

We get in touch with reality when we make statements that match it. However, Haack sets forth a problem with this approach, for she says, “You can’t describe the world without describing it.” This means that when we start to make matching statements, we must begin with our own language, which is filled with varying cultural history, inconsistencies, paradigms, and many other things that are obstacles in our way of describing our one world. This does not mean our world is no longer one, but rather that our language is a mental barrier. We may regard a tree in its wholeness, its being, and its unity; but when we begin to describe it we loose the continued on p 8
Dear Career Services,
Q: I am a full-time student, working 20 hours a week, participating in school activities and attempting to have a social life. So what's the problem? I'm falling behind on my school work, I am often late to class and to work, I don't hang out with my friends as much and my family is upset because I am never available. There is so much to do and not enough time for everything!

A: It sounds like you are having a time management problem. In the 90's we are living in the fast lane and are expected to juggle school, work, family, friends and a multitude of other things.

In order to take control of your active life, you must start by taking control of your time. The two most important aspects of effective time management are organizing and prioritizing. Let's start with organizing. A basic tool that everyone on the fast lane must have is known as either an appointment book/ agenda or an organizer, because you don't want to rely on remembering every appointment, time and task despite your having a good memory. Next, before you begin your day's activities,

Dear Career Services,
Q: I have a minor in Criminal Justice and I'm interested in Law Enforcement. Where should I look for jobs?

A: Law enforcement can be done at the Federal, State or County level, depending on what area you're interested in. For example, if you are interested in working for the Federal Government, you can work for: Federal Law Enforcement; Federal Bureau of Investigation; Immigration and Naturalization Service; Drug Enforcement Administration; U.S. Marshal Service; U.S. Postal Service; U.S. Customs Service; U.S. Secret Service; U.S. Department of Transportation; General Services Administration; Internal Revenue Service; Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms; U.S. Department of Defense; U.S. Department of Interior and the U.S. Department of Agriculture; U.S. Department of Labor; U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

At the State level, a person can work as: Highway Patrol Officer; State Trooper; State Police Officer; Alcohol Beverage Control; State University Police; State Parks and Recreation; Department of Justice; Fish and Game; Consumer Affairs; Department of Motor Vehicle and the Department of Corrections.

At the county level, you may be able to find employment in: the Deputy Sheriff's Office; County Marshal's Office; Department of Probation; County Housing Authority; Districts Attorney's Office; County Animal Control; Harbor Patrol Department and the Department of Parks and Recreation.

At the Municipal level, the most visible law enforcement officials are the Police Officers, but there are other agencies such as: Animal Regulation; Airport Police; Harbor Port Police; Transit Police and School District Police.

Although each law enforcement agency has its own standards for entry-level personnel, there are general qualifications that are common to most agencies across the country. You must be a citizen of the United States, have no felony or criminal convictions, have a high school diploma or equivalency, have good health (eyesight requirements vary widely), meet the minimum age requirement which is usually 21 and pass a written examination.

Because each agency has specific standards, it is important that you contact the one that is of interest to you.

Knowledge. Says Haack, "The more precise you try to get, the more chance there is that you could be false." Try doing this with a tree. Where do you start? Do you describe first the roots? How much water it requires? the nature of chlorophyll? what animals it feeds or houses? the number of atoms it contains? As you see, it gets complex. If we expand this metaphor to the world, we see that any description we give it will ultimately be incomplete.

Haack also states that there are two parts to "the real." One is the "external," which is the world independent of what we think or try to describe it. This would be the tree itself, without our interpretation or description of it. Haack is saying that the tree exists as a tree regardless of what it is to us; it exists in the aforementioned "one world" as a mind-independent object.

The other is the "internal," that which is mind-dependent. The tree in this aspect is the tree as a fruit-bearer, a soil-holder, a home for Bluejays, the one you your grandfather planted, or a member of a maple sub-species. Green, tall, shady, sappy, and pretty are all descriptions of the tree that only exist because we provide them. Our attempts at a total description may possibly be reached, but then we are stuck in our own language, with its own history, etymology, and personal usage.

These different descriptions of the world may be compatible. However, a perception has necessarily its interpretation. On the other hand a direct perception has no interpretation, such as mathematics. Where is the line to be drawn? Is Haack sitting on the fence, or is he on both? Haack might say that this is the kind of relativism that she is concerned with.

Haack met some criticism regarding this standpoint. One of the questions raised was that if in some Galaxy X, beings had IQ's of 900 and 76 senses, then their description of the world would be more complete as compared with us; but, Haack says, these two perspectives would be compatible, for they are of the same world.

Yes, good old philosophy. These are the questions that the Philosophy Club wrestles with. To say that one description of the world is a complete and correct description is, as Haack would say, not enough. These people are the ideologists, dogmatists, religious fanatics in other words, the philosophers, so to speak. Perhaps Haack's aim is to combat this division with her idea of relativism.

Dear Career Services,
Q: I am a full-time student, working 20 hours a week, participating in school activities and attempting to have a social life. So what's the problem? I'm falling behind on my school work, I am often late to class and to work, I don't hang out with my friends as much and my family is upset because I am never available. There is so much to do and not enough time for everything!

A: It sounds like you are having a time management problem. In the 90's we are living in the fast lane and are expected to juggle school, work, family, friends and a multitude of other things.

In order to take control of your active life, you must start by taking control of your time. The two most important aspects of effective time management are organizing and prioritizing. Let's start with organizing. A basic tool that everyone on the fast lane must have is known as either an appointment book/ agenda or an organizer, because you don't want to rely on remembering every appointment, time and task despite your having a good memory. Next, before you begin your day's activities,

Dear Career Services,
Q: I have a minor in Criminal Justice and I'm interested in Law Enforcement. Where should I look for jobs?

A: Law enforcement can be done at the Federal, State or County level, depending on what area you're interested in. For example, if you are interested in working for the Federal Government, you can work for: Federal Law Enforcement; Federal Bureau of Investigation; Immigration and Naturalization Service; Drug Enforcement Administration; U.S. Marshal Service; U.S. Postal Service; U.S. Customs Service; U.S. Secret Service; U.S. Department of Transportation; General Services Administration; Internal Revenue Service; Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms; U.S. Department of Defense; U.S. Department of Interior and the U.S. Department of Agriculture; U.S. Department of Labor; U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.

At the State level, a person can work as: Highway Patrol Officer; State Trooper; State Police Officer; Alcohol Beverage Control; State University Police; State Parks and Recreation; Department of Justice; Fish and Game; Consumer Affairs; Department of Motor Vehicle and the Department of Corrections.

At the county level, you may be able to find employment in: the Deputy Sheriff's Office; County Marshal's Office; Department of Probation; County Housing Authority; Districts Attorney's Office; County Animal Control; Harbor Patrol Department and the Department of Parks and Recreation.

At the Municipal level, the most visible law enforcement officials are the Police Officers, but there are other agencies such as: Animal Regulation; Airport Police; Harbor Port Police; Transit Police and School District Police.

Although each law enforcement agency has its own standards for entry-level personnel, there are general qualifications that are common to most agencies across the country. You must be a citizen of the United States, have no felony or criminal convictions, have a high school diploma or equivalency, have good health (eyesight requirements vary widely), meet the minimum age requirement which is usually 21 and pass a written examination.

Because each agency has specific standards, it is important that you contact the one that is of interest to you.

Knowledge. Says Haack, "The more precise you try to get, the more chance there is that you could be false." Try doing this with a tree. Where do you start? Do you describe first the roots? How much water it requires? the nature of chlorophyll? what animals it feeds or houses? the number of atoms it contains? As you see, it gets complex. If we expand this metaphor to the world, we see that any description we give it will ultimately be incomplete.

Haack also states that there are two parts to "the real." One is the "external," which is the world independent of what we think or try to describe it. This would be the tree itself, without our interpretation or description of it. Haack is saying that the tree exists as a tree regardless of what it is to us; it exists in the aforementioned "one world" as a mind-independent object.

The other is the "internal," that which is mind-dependent. The tree in this aspect is the tree as a fruit-bearer, a soil-holder, a home for Bluejays, the one you your grandfather planted, or a member of a maple sub-species. Green, tall, shady, sappy, and pretty are all descriptions of the tree that only exist because we provide them. Our attempts at a total description may possibly be reached, but then we are stuck in our own language, with its own history, etymology, and personal usage.

These different descriptions of the world may be compatible. However, a perception has necessarily its interpretation. On the other hand a direct perception has no interpretation, such as mathematics. Where is the line to be drawn? Is Haack sitting on the fence, or is he on both? Haack might say that this is the kind of relativism that she is concerned with.

Haack met some criticism regarding this standpoint. One of the questions raised was that if in some Galaxy X, beings had IQ's of 900 and 76 senses, then their description of the world would be more complete as compared with us; but, Haack says, these two perspectives would be compatible, for they are of the same world.

Yes, good old philosophy. These are the questions that the Philosophy Club wrestles with. To say that one description of the world is a complete and correct description is, as Haack would say, not enough. These people are the ideologists, dogmatists, religious fanatics in other words, the philosophers, so to speak. Perhaps Haack's aim is to combat this division with her idea of relativism.

Have you heard of O.J. yet? If not, you can download a video file of O.J.'s reaction to the verdict at http://www.cnet.com/Central/News?oldid=100035.html. Let us forget the reason for the trial of the century, visit http://www.minet.net/thes/NBSC/index.html for the Nicole Brown Simpson Charitable Foundation's homepage. The logo is an angel holding a child against her shoulder and the motto is No Excuse For Abuse. From there it's an easy segue to Zeno's Forensic Page at http://www.bart.nl/~gerade/forensic.html. Scroll through the available links to find DNA on trial, hair comparisons, forensic linguistics, and shoeprint system. Is your vehicle on the Stolen Cars list? Hopefully, your name will be missing from the computer crime directory. There's even a section devoted to forensic psychiatry. You might want to consider a career possibility here. Unfortunately, it's a growth industry.

Speaking of shrinks, there is the Keirsey Temperament Sorter, a personality test similar to Myers-Briggs. Take the test at http://sunsite.unc.edu/personality/keirsey.html. It will score it for you. While this is not meant to be a substitute for therapy or evaluation, it is an interesting tool that enables you to know yourself a little better. See if you agree or disagree with the results!

Those who signed up for the Exploring the Internet Workshop given via email should have received their course handbooks last week. Did not get it? No problem! Download it from the Spectrum virtual classroom at http://horizons.org/campus. Registration closed on October 6th, but those who missed out can still download from the website. You just cannot email in your assignments. Think of it as free textbooks. What a concept!

Attention education majors and teachers. It's Christmas in October. I have downloaded a huge list of sites (websites and some FTP for Lesson plans. This info, compliments of Ms. Joan Berger, an Internet Educational Consultant with the Roslyn (NY) Public School System, was posted to one of the many lists I subscribe to. It includes Mega Math created by the Los Alamos National Lab's Elementary Teacher Resources, Newton's Apple, John Muir, Sea World, Nine Planets, the National School Network and lots more! It's way too much for me to list here, but if you would like a copy, email me a request. That's bronnenkant@msn.com. At the TO: in Alpha mail. As Ms. Berger reminds us, the Internet is for sharing—please be generous with your time, creativity and ideas. Don't forget to give back when you have something worthwhile to share.

October 11th is National Coming-Out Day, so we can read the brochure Someone You Know is Gay for information on sexual orientation, the process of coming out and stereotypes of gays at http://akebono.stanford.edu/yahoo/Society_And_Culture/Sex/Homosexual_and_Bisexual_Resources. This is a major list of links including the Gay and Lesbian Web Alliance, Gay Sports, Gay Travel Network, Justice For All, and the Institute of Gay and Lesbian Studies. No time like the present to increase your sensitivity to others.

We are now less than a month away from Election Day. Are you registered to vote? Why not? Get to it—your country is counting on you! How does a voter sort out all the political hoopla? Well, besides using a large shovel, you can check our Vote Smart Web at http://www.votesmart.org. When I surfed through I noticed a link to info on New Jersey. Now you don't have any excuses for remaining uninformed. You rocked the vote once. You can do it again.

Food Focus: Hunger in Our Neighborhood Food Drive

by Ann Margaret Kane

Help your hungry neighbors by participating in World Hunger Day on Sunday, October 15.

People are going hungry. Not just in poverty-stricken Third World countries. But right here in New Jersey.

Hunger lives with our elderly, our unemployed and especially our children. To help address this problem of increasing hunger within our neighborhoods, many organizations are getting involved in the battle against hunger.

"There are one million people in NJ alone that go hungry," said Michael DeAngelis, president of the Montclair State Dietetic Organization. MSDO is sponsoring a "Hunger in our Neighborhood" Food Drive, which will be ongoing until November.

The organization's officer's include: vice presidents Dee Grasso and Lori Herko; secretary Susann Genovese; treasurer Tami Jones and advisors Mary Finikor and Dr. Doremus.

The largest organization in this area is The Center for Food Action in New Jersey.

The center, established in 1976, provides direct food relief, advocacy and education to hungry people. CFA is working in conjunction with The Record by hosting a food drive on World Hunger Day.

CFA also operates The Statewide Emergency Food and Anti-Hunger Network (SEFAN). The network provides training and technical assistance to other emergency food providers and documents the situation of hunger in New Jersey.

Another statewide organization is SHARE, which stands for Self Help and Resource Exchange. SHARE, a self-supporting unit, provides food at low cost for those in need.

Hospitals also participate in the food relief effort. Two of the contributing hospitals in the area are Ridgewood's Valley Hospital and Paterson's St. Joseph's Hospital.

Valley holds a food collection and gives all donations to the CFA. St. Joseph's Sister Ann Stango, heads The Mission Services Division, which meets hunger and other needs on a year round basis.

Montclair State University also contributes to the anti-hunger campaign. The Campus Ministry addresses hunger through the MEND, or Meeting Emergency Needs with Dignity Program. The program, headed by Father Arthur Humphrey, interfaces with Newark's Food Bank, which then distributes food to 28 local food banks. In addition to MEND, The Campus Ministry and Greek Council combine efforts by holding an annual Thanksgiving Food Drive.

"Any organization or individual can donate food," said Father Art. The Father encourages anyone to become involved with MEND's efforts.

It is easy to become a part of the war against hunger. You and your organization can be involved in many ways.

MSDO's Food Drive, located outside of Room 110 in Finey Hall, will be there until November 6. "Hopefully, this drive will increase student hunger awareness," said DeAngelis.

CFA is also accepting individual or group contributions of canned and non-perishable foods. In addition, you might consider participating in this Sunday's local CROP Walk or with The Record Food Drive.

If the above activities seem too involved, participation can be as simple as a phone call. Just contact the CFA site nearest you or call Father Art at 746-2323.

Campus Life needs writers, photographers and people eager to cover on-campus events.

All those who are interested in becoming involved with the campus Life section, please come to Student Center Room 113 and ask for Erica or call x5169.
CLUB wishes to thank everyone who helped make this year’s Homecoming a great success. I appreciate the members...Wendy, Juan, Jackie, Sorrin, Ginny, Valerie, Karyn, Kristy, Joy, Kathy, Lisa, Veronica, Linda, Draggin & Deanna who donated their time and energies throughout the week. I enjoyed working with everyone and I know that this is only the beginning of a really great year.

I would especially like to thank the Homecoming committee, the campus police, student activities, the SGA Executive board, especially Francois and Jane, the Greek community, Brian Cosgrove, Mike Costa, Frank from WMSC, Athletics department, Juan Valdez, Barry, Selina, Amy, Maintenance, The Montclarion, and all the organizations involved.

In addition, I want to give my sincere gratitude to Chuck, Adam, and Satik for their assistance and support, to John Celvic for allowing me to make Homecoming announcements at Greek Council meetings and Melissa for tolerating me during my mood swings, for completing my dreaded paperwork and for always being there when I couldn’t be.

Thank you,

Five Stars For A Few Good Men

by Victoria Coldes

The Mainstage Theatre Series opens in Fall '95 season tonight in Memorial Auditorium at 8 pm with Aaron Sorkin’s drama, A Few Good Men, directed by Jim Ligon; set and lighting design by John Figola; and costume design by Jennifer Larsen.

A Few Good Men is quite a mystery, which is unraveled through a series of flashbacks in Act One and a powerful trial in Act Two. The scenes occur during the summer of ’86, in various locations in Washington, D.C. and on the United States Naval Base in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

The play follows the trial of Lance Cpl. Harold W. Dawson (Wilson Mendietta) and Pfc. Louis Downey (Raf Makarewicz) two marines accused of murdering Pfc. William T. Santiago (Zacrah Battle).

Mendietta brings his overpowering and strict character to life. He believes in honor, respect, and discipline. On the other end of the spectrum, Makarewicz makes you believe he is a timid, scared, country boy that doesn’t belong in the marine or in a courtroom. Battle’s plea for a transfer from Cuba is emotional and disturbing; especially since his request is only answered by a Code Red, a disciplinary engagement that results in his death.

The resulting courtroom drama focuses on Lt. J.g. Sam Weinberg (Jerry Amiraunt), Lt.j.g. Daniel A. Kaffee (Todd Thoenig), and Lt. Cmdr. Joanne Galloway (Susannes Furda) battle over whether or not to take on the entire U.S. military system in their defense.

Amiraunt plays his supporting role splendidly with humor and wit. He is constantly trying to see his wife and daughter, but he puts the trial, co-worker, and friend first. Thoenig’s character, a sarcastic, slick, Harvard lawyer, grows throughout the production. The case, which he thought would be an open and shut deal, brings him to the courtroom for the first time. Thoenig’s portrayal of a proud boy, who learns integrity and maturity, is believable and excellent.

Furda shines on stage. Her character is a strong, hardworking woman, who comes off as a bitch. Furda’s role describes the small presence of women in the military, and the military’s views on women. Thoenig, at first, refuses to acknowledge her opinions and ideas, but he does realize that she is right, and he agrees to put Lt. Col. Nathan R. Jessop (Brian Olton) on the scene. Olton plays the role of a man that only knows a militaristic lifestyle. He is strong and half insane. Olton belittles and conveys the other actors with style.

Overall, the entire cast came together to put on a fantastic performance. Capt. Julius Alexander Randolph (Raf Ricci) the serious judge put an awe into the courtroom scenes. One character, who had a small but important role, deserves much recognition. Will Coles played the role of the Sentry. The audience never sees his face, but he did a great job.

Several scenes were shocking while others filled the audience with rage, laughter, and silence, keeping the audience on the edge of their seats. Even the scene changes and music fit into the storyline.

A Few Good Men is more than a drama. The play invites the audience into the military world, touching on various subjects: honor, discipline, respect, and the truth.

O.J. and Nicole and Denzel

by John Springman

Like everyone else, I’ve been viewing the world through O.J.-colored glasses. And as you all know, in our racially divided nation they come in two shades. One pair shows an African-American of real and dear.

On the other side of the racial aisle, so suading her young lover to kill her inconvulnerability and the power she wields

To Die For.

stuck me that an ambitious blonde newswoman is an awfully easy target for satire. Male newscasters may be gently parodied as buffoons a la Ted Baxter, but an ambitious female is portrayed as remorselessly evil, accompanied in song by Donovan’s “Season of the Witch.”

At crucial point, it seems like Suzanne will get away with and profit from her crime — and I had a flash of pain and the thought, “No, not twice in one week!”

Instead, there’s an act of revenge which I could not wish even on the worst ex-Heisman trophy winner. It’s sick, twisted, wicked — and an inspired ending for To Die For.

How do rate O.J., Nicole, and Denzel? One’s uplifting and respectable; one’s sexy and outrageous; but only one’s a real killer. Decil In A Blue Dress: B; To Die For: B.
Shakespeare In The Park Comes to MSU

by Victoria Caldes

Players (a class one organization of the S.G.A.) presents William Shakespeare’s Much Ado About Nothing, October 13-15 at 2 pm in the Amphitheatre (or room 126 in the Student Center if it rains). Admission is free!

Directed by Joseph Masiello, who says “Shakespeare is life.” Much Ado About Nothing is in a group with Shakespeare’s most mature romantic comedies. The story has many subplots, which involve young love and deceit. When Claudio (Ian Perry), the youngest soldier and a young lord of Florence returns from war, he falls in love with Hero (Kristen Panaccione). They decide to marry, but Don John (Dan Patak), the villain, is jealous, and he decides to plot a war so he can destroy their wedding day.

Another plot exists between Benedict (Jason Wills) and Beatrice (Alicia Williams). Wills and Williams vindictive relationship is true to life. The audience really believes that the two hate each other, but underneath a true love lies.

Don Pedro (Anthony B. Guernica) plays the role of Cupid. He tries successfully throughout the play to bring the two couples together.

The entire cast performed excellently under the direction of Masiello. The script has not been changed at all, the costumes are of the period, and the accents—the cast must have spent time with the foreign exchange students because they are perfect.

Borge, a highly diverse illustrator

by Jodi Kastel

Would an artist with enough creativity to work with MTV, Phish, and Meat Beat Manifesto actually step foot onto our humble little campus? Well, last Thursday’s Art Forum class and its guests were fortunate enough to welcome renowned illustrator/designer, Rich Borge, to the Calcia Auditorium. A highly diverse illustrator, his work has been seen in such magazines as Guitar Player, Psychology Today, Keyboard, Zone, Ray Gun, and Playboy. Borge has also done work for MTV, IBM, and Sony/Epic Music, as well as for artists like Meat Beat Manifesto, Phish, and Shoes.

Borge began his presentation with a short introduction about his life, prior education, and beginnings in art, supplemented by slides of his early work and fellow artists he admired. He cites Eric Dinnyer, Jackson Bolts, and Matt Mahar as influences. Borge’s work, if you didn’t get a chance to see it, looks like the art that is in Tool’s video for the song “Sober,” or maybe in the Nine Inch Nails’ “Closer” video—very new and very now, encompassing many different media.

Borge uses anything from collage, to junk parts, to pen and ink to create his pieces. He also includes modern technology into the mix, using a MAC and a scanner. He says of his work, “I strive to have my pieces function as art as well as illustration...what I mean is I don’t wear two different hats, one as an illustrator and one as an artist...I just do what I do and hope it can stand on its own as well as in the context of a CD cover, etc. I use a lot of found objects in my work, which keeps me occupied when walking around.”

Though Borge has lived in a variety of places, like Arizona, where he was educated (University of Arizona MFA 1990), and North Carolina, where he was an educator himself (Western Carolina College), he has recently left teaching and has settled in New York City. He seemed like a very friendly, personable guy. Young, intelligent and imaginative with small wire-rimmed glasses for reading, he didn’t look a day over 25. He was open to questions and urged aspiring artists to follow their dreams but not to lose their heads regarding the business aspect of the profession. He believes that good art should never be compromised in the name of money.

Art Forum is a weekly lecture series that explores various aspects of art from painters, to sculptors, to photographers. Lectures are held every Thursday at 3:00 pm in the Calcia Auditorium (Room 135). The lectures are free, and open to everyone! Yahoo!
R.E.M., a unique talent, a natural high
by J. Alexander

On Friday, October 6, R.E.M. played to a nearly sold out crowd in Brendan Byrne Arena at the Meadowlands.

However, the excitement began the day before. I went to work and saw three tour buses parked outside. The buses were from Athens, Georgia (R.E.M.'s hometown). One of the doors displayed the clipping, "MIKEY LIKES IT." This deepened my suspicion, because Michael Stipe is the lead singer of R.E.M. My suspicions were confirmed when I arrived at Brendan Byrne Arena; the same tour buses were parked outside.

Entering the Brendan Byrne Arena, we were greeted by the opening act of Grant Lee Buffalo. They put on an excellent half hour show in a style similar to R.E.M. At 9:00 pm, R.E.M. appeared on stage to an overly enthusiastic crowd. They played a variety of songs including, "What's the Frequency, Kenneth?" a high energy song off of their latest album Monster. They played such hits as "Crush With Eyeliner," "Bang and Blame," "Man on the Moon," "Everybody Hurts" and their mega-hit "Losing My Religion." We were also privileged to hear three new songs by the group; "Dissent," "Wake Up Call" and "Revoluition in the Making," all of which were a much heavier sounding R.E.M. than we're used to.

Excellent as always, Michael Stipe has a fabulous stage presence and likes to interact with the audience. He knows the people listening are the ones who put R.E.M. on the map. The band is wonderful. Their unique talents combine to make an awesome stage show that gives everyone listening quite a natural high.

To anyone who has even just merely liked an R.E.M. song, I would highly recommend going to see them. I went as a not-so-dedicated fan and came out in love with the music.

After the show, the halls were filled with different environmental and social issue groups that you can visit to learn about what they stand for. They are invited by R.E.M., a very environmentally and socially aware group, to display their points and beliefs to their fans. It was an experience unlike any other concert I've been to. If you have a chance to see them live, I say go. An excellent show by an excellent group.

Fashion Police:
Guarding the Mall
by Christine Weber
When you work in a mall you tend to people watch. In between working I will stand in front of my store and watch the diverse group of people that pass me by. The good, the bad and the ugly. One thing I notice is how few people come to the mall to actually shop. They are too busy scoping out each other. Welcome to the Dating Game, Ladies and Gentle- men. No one goes unnoticed. The “beauti- tiful” people are praised, the ugly people condemned, and the ordinary people are quickly forgotten.
I like to watch hook-ups in progress. Coming my way is an attractive young woman with shoulder-length mahogany hair and a slender frame. She is dressed in a black A-line dress set off nicely with black patent-leather loafers. She grabs the eye of a group of jocks. The group’s eyes become the size of quarters. They look her over-up, down, left, right. “She’s hot,” one murmurs to the other. These jocks, as slick as they think they are, stop dead in their tracks and begin to follow this otherwise oblivious girl. I guess they found what they are looking for. So, now that they are following her, what are they going to do? I always wondered about that. Did they actually talk to her? Did they “strike out?” One can only hope she escaped unscathed.
I never see young people, ages 16-25, carrying packages. I think they come to the mall with bated breath to search for a significant other. The girls get all gussied up, hair done just so, make-up perfect, and wardrobe scrupulously put together. Guys overdose on their favorite cologne, they polish up their 14 karat gold rope chains, and they whip out their Gap jeans, and faux Doc Marten boots. Mating sea- son has definitely taken this mall by storm.
I feel like I just turned on the Discov- ery Channel and one of those nature shows is presenting an in-depth look at the courting and mating habits of the peacock. Peacocks will display their colorful plumage to a desired mate. They will even perform a “mating dance,” for lack of a better term. They will even sing to get the other birds’ attention. Only one Peacock from each group will end up becoming the happy couple. I do not think I have to tell you what comes next. People are no different from peacocks. Men and women show off their plumage (substitute feathers for brawny muscles or nice legs). Whenever girls pass guys, they tend to walk differently. They begin to “shake their booty.” Men, as always, will take notice. I find the whole experience very interesting. I think Soci- ologists, and even bird experts, should bring their students to the mall for a field trip. The case studies are rich and plentiful.

MAIN EDITORIAL

It was a sad and sudden end to a distinguished career in Greek and SGA affairs. After nine semesters of continuous service, Attorney General Michael Anthony Costa shocked the SGA Legislative Assembly by publicly resigning his cabinet post.

No one was more surprised than SGA President Francois Dauder, who had received no prior notice of Costa's intention to resign. To add to Dauder's distress, Costa followed the resignation announcement with withering criticism of "the SGA." Costa's token effort at discretion can have fooled few into believing his references to inflated egos, power-trips, dishonesty and incompetence were directed at anyone other than the Executive Board.

Dauder said that he found Costa's actions inexplicable and cited the latter's punishing schedule and "burnout" as a possible explanation. There may be some merit to this, but those who know Costa will speculate along different lines. They know that Costa's character demanded the opportunity to act energetically towards worthwhile goals. And they know that Costa - for better or worse - found compromise difficult when principle was involved.

Whatever the reasons behind Costa's actions, we regret that he did not use greater restraint. He should have notified the Executive Board of his intentions, and he should have reflected on how his comments might affect the morale of the new corps of legislators who so far have shown themselves remarkably untainted by cynicism. Costa's actions and statements do little to encourage their virtue.

Nevertheless, this last exaggerated gesture cannot eclipse Costa's incomparable record of service to the students of MSU. Indeed even in Costa's rough manner of departure we discern the stubborn insistence on principle which has characterized his career of service. We acknowledge that it is a quality which is too rare among us, and because of that, we will miss his presence.
Now I'm going to get serious. The real truth is that the MSU Department of Safety and Security really deserves our thanks for bending over backwards to fight crime. That is to say, Director Philip Calitre was right on target when, on October fourth at police headquarters, he told me his people are busting their asses to make the students feel safe.

This semester, we have three more security officers which brings us up to a total of 31 police and security. Moreover, there is an escort service in operation, increased emphasis on foot patrol, a self-defense/ crime awareness workshop going on right now, more emergency call boxes, parking attendants and gates on the way, and the possibility of a closed circuit TV system for the lots. This is not even to mention the enhanced parking lot lighting program being performed under the supervision of George Mellin of the Facilities Planning Department. Furthermore, I wish to recognize Director Calitre and Lt. Michael Postaski for having MSU PD Crime Prevention Officer Timothy Webster appear before the ISO (International Student Organization) and at the self-defense/crime awareness workshop. I know for a fact that a lot of communities don't have a designated crime prevention officer making the rounds. After all, Webster's services are instrumental since preventative measures (i.e., cutting down on careless habits such as leaving articles unattended) are the most potent weapon against crime.

Lastly, I wish to dispel the myth that campus cops are “keystone cops.” The ironic factor here is that the Division of Safety and Security have people with better qualifications than many municipal police officers. Director Calitre is a retired New Jersey State Police (NJSP) lieutenant with 28 1/2 years experience in special investigation (specializing in the use of polygraph, narcotics, and alcohol beverage control). He beat out 170 other candidates for the job. Sgts. Paul Cell and Boyd Lyons have expertise in the martial arts, Timothy Webster is well-versed in crime prevention techniques, and I believe there are officers who have emergency medical training. Honestly, I think we should all be thankful that the MSU Department of Safety and Security offers the campus all these assets. Just remember, there are many other communities which offer far less.

Tom Boud, French

In his column “Integration and social engineering failing in U.S. education system,” Mr. Paternoster raised the important issue that many inner city schools are failing. However, he misunderstands the liberal point of view. Few liberals believe that an African-American will be more educated by “sitting next to a white kid in class” or that the “percentage of each race’s kids attending the school are more important than good principles and teachers…” We believe that schools with a predominantly minority population tend to have worse administrators, teachers, supplies, and parental support. For example, in Bergen County, Englewood and Tenafly are similar towns, yet Tenafly (with a predominantly white and Asian population) is one of the top rated schools in New Jersey and Englewood (with a predominantly African-American population) is not considered a top New Jersey high school.

Mr. Paternoster correctly points to examples where “magnet schools” fail to create diversified student bodies. He fails to look closer to home, where many New York City “magnet schools” such as Bronx High School of Science and Arts, Stuyvesant, and Hunter College High School are stunning successes in the education system.

Of course, if the individuals that were present at the program had received a good sex education, one which stressed love, commitment, honesty, or marriage, then maybe there would have been a real discussion about relationships between men and women. After my friend and I decided to stop in, we quickly realized that this was not a serious discussion about relationships, but just another tawdry, talk-show like rap session. In just a few minutes, the topics ranged from penis size to g-spot location. I was forced to do a double take and check the program flyer to make sure this wasn’t a preliminary test for the Richard Bey Show.

This program was a prime example of what liberal sex education has taught young people. There was no discussion about love, commitment, honesty, or marriage. The talk was about sex when it should have been about how to gain a better understanding of the opposite sex. Should we be surprised that sex and love are never included in the same sentence when our school administrators are handing out condoms to 14 and 15 year-olds? Is there such a thing as sexual morality, or do we accept sex as a recreational activity, with a condom being issued as a piece of equipment like a glove is for baseball?

When a child is not ready to play baseball, we don’t encourage him to step into the batter’s box. Instead, we take the bat out of his hands and teach him the fundamentals of the game. Likewise, when a child isn’t ready for sex, we should take the condom out of his pocket and teach him about the fundamentals of life; the most important being that sex in the absence of love is wrong. Not because religion says so, but because our sciences do.

If the individuals that were present at the program had received a good sex education, one which stressed love, commitment, and marriage, then maybe there would have been a real discussion about male-female relationships. Perhaps in the future, parents and school administrators should put more time and effort into teaching our children important sexual values rather than simply taking the easy way out by giving out condoms.

How can we expect college students to seriously discuss relationships when their parents and teachers failed to teach them that the momentary satisfaction obtained by having casual sex pales in comparison to the unparalleled gratification of true love?

Simpson verdict proves that U.S. legal system grants equal opportunity for all

The rampant racism and possible, if not probable, tampering of evidence within the police department was directly responsible for the jury's verdict. Maybe now a real investigation into the LAPD will be made.

As for the reaction of whites to the verdict, it angers me. Were any of these people as shocked and angered when the Menendez brothers (after admitting that they shot, went outside, reloaded, and came back in to finish the job!) had a hung jury? Was the cry of outrage and disbelief displayed after the William Kennedy Smith rape trial or the Ted Kennedy trial? No. Some whites have said that it is because of the racial makeup of the jury, but if that is true, it is fair to assume that majority white jurors only decide on the basis of race? All this verdict proved is that money and education equal power.

The reaction by most blacks has been equally disturbing to me. The majority of blacks that have been interviewed have stated that they believe that Mr. Simpson was guilty, but he was a rich, powerful, and anti-Semitic sect, the Nation of Islam. The impact that the Simpson verdict will have on America will be positive; it will show that there is more equality now than ever, because as long as one has money and education, he can get away with anything. And as for the reactions on campus and from society as a whole, maybe everyone will think and be more consistent from now on.

Rubino

Nicole Brown Simpson was quoted as saying, “O.J. is going to kill me and he's going to get away with it.” Despite incriminating scientific and circumstantial evidence against O.J. Simpson, this is, unfortunately, exactly what happened. But the acquittal verdict is now the focus of our attention, and a number of factors necessitate a response.

I can acknowledge the myriad of people who claim to have felt there was “reasonable doubt.” In a powerful column in The New York Times, Scott Turow criticized the blunders of the prosecution. Detectives Mark Fuhrman and Philip Van Natter violated the Fourth Amendment by jumping the wall of the Simpson estate and Fuhrman, the prosecution’s star witness, tarnished his credibility by committing perjury. Twenty-five prosecutors worked on this case, yet nobody challenged the bizarre stories by the police. This included the reason the officers gave for jumping the wall, the same time Fuhrman found the famous Hockey glove.

Many cite the fact that Simpson’s millions bought his entourage of high-profile attorneys collectively referred to as the “Dream Team.” It is true the average citizen, never mind the poor and destitute, cannot always afford a top-rate defense. Money talks and bullshale walks. How many defense teams would be able to find the Fuhrman tapes? But it cannot be assumed that Simpson walked out of court a free man simply because he is rich. John Gotti had money. So did Mike Tyson.

Johnnie Cochran said after the verdict that this case was based on evidence, not on emotion. But colleague Robert Shapiro admitted the defense dealt the race card. It has been reported that the prosecution did not use the LAPD Detective Philip Van Natter did not immediately turn in the blood samples. Doubt was firmly entrenched even before the closing arguments were uttered. Did Johnson Cochran deal the race card from “the bottom of the deck” as Robert Shapiro states? Certainly, but that’s part of a defense lawyer’s job—do whatever he has to to get his client off. Should he have done it? No. Did he need to do it? Probably not, but why take a chance if he can assure an acquittal? Johnnie Cochran, aided by the LAPD and the prosecution, did his job. Dealing the race card doesn’t make him a model citizen, but it does make him a damn good lawyer.

I thought he did it,” one juror said, “but the prosecution didn’t prove it.” This verdict was more an indictment of the LAPD, than finding O.J. Simpson innocent.

Reactions to the Simpson verdict on the MSU campus and across the country were on opposite ends of the spectrum. Blacks were seen cheering, whooping and hollering. Whites sat stunned, angry, and upset. At first I was perplexed by these diametrically opposed reactions. I knew why blacks were happy; the LAPD finally got theirs, and there was some equality shown in the verdict proving that no matter what color one is, with money anything is possible. But why were whites so shocked and angry? I have been informed since then of why—the evidence was overwhelmingly in the defense’s favor and the defense presented an airtight case.

Innocent until proven guilty—this is the basis for the American legal system. The prosecution must prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt. Did the prosecution do that in this case? A review of the facts will answer that.

It has been reported that the prosecution did not use any of their peremptory challenges. A peremptory challenge is where the lawyer for each side gets to dismiss a preset amount of jurors without any explanation. Next, the prosecution allowed a change of venue to the more sympathetic downtown area. Then, in the closing argument Marcia Clark did not press two key points: the unaccounted for hour in the defense’s case, and if O.J. Simpson was innocent, why was he in the Bronco with money and a disguise? Also, the prosecution decided to put Mark Fuhrman on the stand. I still cannot comprehend how the prosecution could have used this racist police detective on the stand, and expect his testimony to be considered valid and helpful to its argument. Then, in the closing argument, Clark constantly reminded the jury that this man was a racist—and still expected to win! More news about the ineptitude of the prosecution has come out. The prosecution hired a jury consultant firm to assess each of the jurors. The firm found two interesting things that were ignored by the prosecution. The first was that 42% of the jurors felt that it was acceptable to use physical force on a spouse. The second was that nine of the twelve jurors said that O.J. Simpson could not have committed the crime because he excelled at football. With these two pieces of information at their disposal, the prosecution sat on their collective hands. The defense, conversely, had to place reasonable doubt in the minds of the jurors. The Los Angeles Police Department did not have a search warrant to go onto the Simpson estate. The LAPD did not have a murder weapon. The LAPD waited 10-12 hours to call a coroner. LAPD Detective Philip Vannatter did not immediately turn in the blood samples. Doubt was firmly entrenched even before the closing arguments were uttered. Did Johnson Cochran deal the race card from “the bottom of the deck” as Robert Shapiro states? Certainly, but that’s part of a defense lawyer’s job—do whatever he has to to get his client off. Should he have done it? No. Did he need to do it? Probably not, but why take a chance if he can assure an acquittal? Johnnie Cochran, aided by the LAPD and the prosecution, did his job. Dealing the race card doesn’t make him a model citizen, but it does make him a damn good lawyer.

I thought he did it,” one juror said, “but the prosecution didn’t prove it.” This verdict was more an indictment of the LAPD, than finding O.J. Simpson innocent.

Presidential candidate's words warrant ethical examinations

1996 is only a few months away, which means that in a short time we'll be bombarded with campaign ads and political conventions as the upcoming presidential election takes center stage. Amidst the usual hoopla and debate, some familiar, even tired old issues (tired in terms of how frequently they tend to come up) will undoubtedly resurface. These include: prayer in public schools, the welfare system, national health care, what to do or refrain from doing in response to homelessness, AIDS, and affirmative action. Most people's views on these matters tend to mirror either the Democratic or Republican party platforms. I do not wish to advocate one party or the other; rather, I'd like to address what I consider to be contradictions and hypocrisy in some of what I'm hearing from certain would-be presidents.

For instance, I've noticed that some candidates take what strikes me as extremely judgmental positions on these issues. To paraphrase, I'm hearing statements to the effect of "People on welfare and the homeless simply don't want to work; they just want to leech off of the system by getting something for nothing..." "Affirmative action is wrong because it places emphasis on race, ethnicity, and gender over job qualifications and credentials..." or "The absence of God from our kids' textbooks is a contributing factor to moral decay; we need to bring prayer back into the classroom..." Not surprisingly, the prayer these candidates are endorsing is often geared towards Christian theology. What I fail to understand, however, is how anyone can attempt to portray him or herself as a bastion of Christian values and simultaneously espouse the paraphrased views I cited earlier.

Mind you, I'm by no stretch of the imagination an authority on Biblical teachings, and would never suggest otherwise. However, it is not true that some of the key ideas mentioned in the Bible include making it a priority to assist those less fortunate than us without passing judgment? Didn't Jesus supposedly renounce all material possessions and encourage his followers to do the same? Conversely, isn't a significant portion of the so-called "American Dream" based on precisely the opposite—the acquisition of as many material possessions as possible, both to gain status and prestige and to keep our consumer driven society running smoothly? As for affirmative action, isn't it naive, at best, to assume that the enormous gap between the percentage of white men vs. the percentage of women and minorities with good jobs is going to take care of itself if we eliminate affirmative action programs? Why would employers who wouldn't hire women and minorities before affirmative action hire them now? Because racism and male-chauvinism are no longer overwhelming problems? Does anyone actually believe that? Therefore, is it not fair to say that those who condemn and oppose affirmative action are, in essence, saying "Not my problem?"

To summarize, I'd like to make the suggestion that we analyze some of these people a lot more closely. After all, if someone wants to bring their theology into the public classroom, aren't we at least entitled to know where they're coming from? If the person picks and pieces of their religious convictions to be taught in school, conveniently ignoring other bits and pieces which seem a bit too hard to live up to, aren't we entitled to an in-depth clarification of just how they resolve these and other questions?

Anyone who can easily reconcile "give, share, and love" by blaming disenfranchised people for their condition is what's commonly referred to, in vulgar parlance, as a bullshit artist, not a future leader.

The Tom Boud Report

How they should have Handled the OJ Affair

Hallelujah! After 474 years...uh...days the OJ trial is over! I thought for a while that OJ would die of old age before the court made up their mind; let alone hand down a verdict that made sense. Then again, I should have known about the "dream team". They're the team that makes convicting anyone a dream.

So what if DNA evidence has at least a one in one-billion margin of error? With the dream team, it has a one in one-billion chance in succeeding. They could make the devil look like a choir boy! In fact, I heard on Court TV that the team's original defense was that Popeye committed the murders. However, they quickly changed tack when Judge Ito wouldn’t let Bluto and the Sea Hag get on the jury.

But wait! Don’t chuck the gavel out the window yet! Let’s hear it for the TEN BEST WAYS THEY COULD HAVE HANDLED THE OJ TRIAL! Drum Roll please, (rrrrrrrrrr)

10. Make short work of OJ’s Bronco joyride by calling out the A-Team.
9. Produce search warrant from Colonel Klink to justify the LAPD’s unauthorized search of the Simpson estate.
8. Bolster the prosecution's case by finding a witness who can place the time of the crime by the TV show, Murder She Wrote.
7. Cut down on press contamination by leaving OJ coverage strictly to Tropicana™.
5. Sentence Marcia Clark to 474 days in Amsterdam's red light district for putting her hairdo and short skirt ahead of legal duties.
4. Hire Jake and the Fat Man on the dream team.
3. Invite the John Jay School of Criminal Justice to educate the jury on the meaning of proof beyond a reasonable doubt.
2. Ensure an impartial jury by having Leonard Nimoy and Brent Spiner handle jury selection.

...and now the number one answer...

1. Put OJ in the same room with Nicole Brown-Simpson’s and Ron Goldman’s family for a few minutes.

Anyone interested in Fitness

MSU has recently opened a Fitness Center in Pancer Gym. However, only a few campus employees and virtually no students are using it during the morning hours when roughly 30 world class state-of-the-art fitness machines stand idle. I hear that is a little crowded at night so why not come out and join me in the morning? It would be nice to have company. Stop in please!

Women's tennis ends on a high note

by Nick Gantafis

The 1995 women's tennis team ended their season on a strong note with an 8-0 victory on Tuesday over New York University, finishing with an impressive 10-1 overall record.

On Monday, MSU defeated Kutztown by a score of 5-4, in a very hard fought match. The Lady Red Hawks were led by freshman Crystal Jakober and sophomore Kristin Aquila. Both Jakober and Aquila went the distance against their opponents in extremely important three set matches. "The three set matches by Jakober and Aquila were absolutely essential for us," said McLaughlin, "If either one failed to win we would have lost."

Kutztown is a division II program that has given the Lady Red Hawks problems in the past. Monday was the first time Coach McLaughlin defeated Kutztown in the seven years he has been head coach. Playing teams with such caliber as Kutztown has been beneficial this season for MSU. "The reason we ended up at 10-1 was because we took 2 out of 3 matches against Kutztown, TSC, and Rutgers-Newark," said Coach McLaughlin.

Last weekend proved to be a successful outing for MSU as Paige Fuller made it to the quarterfinals in singles play at the Rolex Tournament. Also for the Lady Red Hawks, Wendy Saladino advanced to the second round of the tournament in singles play and later teamed up with Fuller in doubles action to fight their way to the semifinals before elimination. Coach McLaughlin was very excited about the exposure his team received at the Rolex Tournament. "Rolex was great for us. Our school needs to do these types of tournaments to gain experience," said McLaughlin.

The Fall women's tennis season has ended, but up next for MSU is a short spring season that consists of 4-5 matches and a tournament hosted by the Lady Red Hawks.

This season has been by far the most successful season in MSU history. Coach McLaughlin admits that this season wasn't as simple as it seemed, but the hard work paid off in the end. "There's been ups and downs because the team is so large. People were fighting for positions all season and that made our team stronger," said McLaughlin.

This season featured a new #1,2,5,6 singles from last year's squad. In the last three years, the Lady Red Hawks have a combined 26-8-1 record and they have established themselves as a top team in the area of college tennis.

Coach McLaughlin's duties are far from over, as he begins his recruiting season for next year. A successful season like this and the great media coverage his team has received should aid him in his battle in recruiting top area prospects.

Men's soccer looks strong as regular season winds down

by Rob Czechowicz

With seven games left in the regular season, the MSU men's soccer team may find itself in some must-win situations if they plan to qualify for the postseason. With three games this past week, MSU finished off with a record of 1-1-1.

Freshman Marlon Pollard continued to shine as he scored two goals in Tuesday night's game against New Jersey Institute of Technology. Pollard scored two of the team's four goals in the shutout effort. Pollard now leads the team in goals with 7. Notching the shutout for MSU was keeper Chris Mazurkiewicz, who had a fairly easy day, only facing 6 shots, and stopping them all.

On Saturday, MSU played host to Salem State. After a scoreless first half, Salem State put up two goals on the scoreboard. MSU could not find the net, and in the last eight minutes of play, six shots were stopped by the Salem State keeper. With 1:31 left to play, freshman Marlon Pollard found the back of the net to keep the Red Hawks from being shutout.

Last Wednesday, MSU traveled down to Rutgers-Camden looking for an important win. Goals were scored by Sebastian Dibello and by Rob Mcomish to knot up the final score at 2-2.

MSU's record now stands at 6-4-2 with key games coming up this week. They face Rutgers-Newark on October 11th and will square off against Ramapo College on Saturday, October 14. From now on, every game is considered a big game as the men's soccer team looks for a postseason playoff berth.
Defensive. When it comes to football, defense can be a deciding factor in fielding a winning or losing club. On Saturday night, 4,367 people watched as the MSU defense held the Kean Cougars to just 250 yards of total offense and just six points. Then again, the same crowd witnessed the MSU offense get shutout, 6-0, sending Montclair to its third straight loss. It's been four games since the Red Hawks have been shutout last. The previous one came in 1990 when Trenton State beat MSU 9-0.

While the streak of not being shutout just ended, a new streak is just starting. It has been six straight quarters that MSU has not scored, going back to the second half of the Southern Connecticut game, in which the Red Hawks were outscored 12-0.

Even though they didn't put the ball in the end-zone, Montclair did move the ball effectively, but key mistakes in the red zone kept MSU out of touchdown territory.

Montclair had put together a good-looking scoring drive in the third quarter, starting on the Kean 46. MSU was put in this situation after stopping Kean in a fourth and one situation. It was third and ten on the Kean 13 when QB Brian Cooney (Guttenberg) threw the ball into the end-zone, looking for wide-out Don Nardini (Parsippany). The pass was intercepted and returned 37 yards to end the drive with 8:09 left.

In the fourth quarter, Cooney was replaced by backup QB Sam Tirone (West Paterson). MSU got the ball back with 5:47 on the clock, trailing 6-0. Tirone led the Hawks all the way down to the Kean 10 yard line. It was a 13 yard pass to Ellis Allen (Norma), which put MSU in the first and goal predicament. On first down, Tirone was sacked, and on second and goal, sacked again. On third down, his pass fell incomplete, and on fourth, his pass was picked off. This was the fourth pass the Kean secondary intercepted, one from Tirone, and three from the hand of Brian Cooney.

The Red Hawks did manage to get the ball back with 1:17 left in the game. MSU had no time-outs, and got the ball back at the Kean 27 after a 16 yard punt return by Pat Ricks (Sayreville). MSU had four chances to put the ball in the end-zone, but three of Tirone's passes fell incomplete. Kean took over, and ran out the clock to end the game.

MSU's Frank Franco (Hanover Park), had another great game, verifying the fact that he is one of the best safeties in the NJAC. Franco came up with his fourth interception of the year and also had eight tackles, six of them solo. Junior DE Jeff Bargiel (West Paterson) put pressure on the Kean QB and running backs all night. He had eight tackles, five of them for a total loss of 27 yards, including a sack.

Leading the team in tackles was junior John Alvarado (Belleville), with ten tackles, five of them solo. Adding eight tackles was nose guard David Hadley (Millville). Hadley is now third on the team with 30 tackles.

The hard-nosed play of the defensive line was one of the reasons why Kean's running back Tre nell Smith was held to only 124 yards. Smith was averaging 241.3 yards a game before the MSU game.

On the season, MSU has racked up 13 interceptions, making the secondary one of the best in the nation when it comes to interceptions. It seems as if interceptions come so easy to our defense, that even offensive players want a piece of the pie.

MSU's leading wide receiver, Pat Ricks, got his name in the defensive side of the box score by picking off a feeble fake punt attempt by Kean. Ricks stepped in and stole away the pass, preventing a Kean TD.

For three straight weeks, head coach Rick Giancola will be looking for his 90th win. Coming into this Saturday's game against William Paterson, Giancola has a record of 89-38-2, making him the all-time winningest football coach in MSU history. Coach Giancola .700 winning percentage ranks him 16th in the nation on the all-time list.

This Saturday, MSU travels to Wayne to take on rival William Paterson. Game time is 4:00 PM at Wightman Field.

S.I.L.C. Back In Action

by Leanna Guido

With the school year well underway, so is S.I.L.C., the Student Intramural Leisure Council. S.I.L.C. features a new executive board which includes President Leanna Guido, vice-president Steven Gicchetti, treasurer Shanna Canfield, and secretary Michael Manning. Also, officiating is led by Bill Graybush, and assistant directors of programming Kevin Mc Lease and Jim Boll. "At this time I would like to congratulate Jim Doell for referee and umpire of the week," said president Leanna Guido. Jim has been an umpire for two years and has been very dedicated to the organization.

Last year, there were 10 teams in the flag football league, and this year, the team enrollment has jumped up to 17. The season is just beginning, and four teams are on top. The Red Eyes, lead by Kerry Eisman and Steve Padiano, Delta Kappa Psi, lead by Jonathan Montero and Chris Real, the Untouchables, lead by Kevin Mc Lease and Brad Edwins, and the Black Panthers, lead by Rodney Spence and Reggie King. Currently, the Black Panthers lead the league with an undefeated record of 4-0. S.I.L.C. would like to congratulate Rob Defalco from Dazed and Confused, who was named Player of the Week.

The One-Pitch Classic Softball Tournament is taking place Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, October 10-12. The two spotlight teams are the Outlaws and the Baseball Bunch. Women's soccer striving for playoffs

by Nick Gantaftsi

Last week the women's soccer team finished with a 1-1 record as they fell to the #1 ranked Trenton State Lions, and rebounded with a victory two days later against New York University.

Last Friday, the women's soccer team shut out the Dolphins of NYU 3-0 to improve their overall record to 6-5-1 and 0-2 in the NJAC.

After a scoreless first half, the Lady Red Hawks took control as Kristin Slivka (Kinnelon), Kristin Mazurkiewicz (North Arlington) and Jen Polifrone (Lynnhurst) led the way to keep MSU ahead for the remainder of the game. Goal keeper Kerrl O'Meara (Leonia) recorded the shut out, as she stopped 11 shots on 13 attempts.

On Wednesday, MSU dropped a 4-1 match against the top ranked team in the country, the Trenton State Lions. Despite losing, the Lady Red Hawks became the first team in history to score a goal on Trenton States home field. O'Meara once again had a great outing as she recorded 16 saves on 20 shots in 90 minutes of play. The score was 3-1 with three minutes to play until TSU scored their fourth and final goal.

Coach Fernando Barboto was well aware that NYU wasn't as nearly talented as the Lions of Trenton State. "NYU was not as strong as a team as TSU," said Barboto. "We didn't do anything different against NYU, we just played well.

Up next for MSU is rival William Paterson. The Pioneers are ranked 23rd in the country and Coach Barboto feels that this is the biggest game of the season for his team. "Tonight is the biggest game of the season. William Paterson is a very good team and tonight's outcome will dictate a post season possibility."

Playing against a 23rd nationally ranked team doesn't scare Barboto at all. "I'm very optimistic about this game," said Barboto. "If the team comes out and plays, we will win."

The Lady Red Hawks have five remaining matches after tonight. This will be the most crucial and important two weeks of the season if they plan on participating in post-season play.

Volleyball Looks To Break Even

by Nick Gantaftsi

The MSU women's volleyball team defeated Jersey City State 3-0 on Tuesday night to close within one game of .500 on the season. The Lady Red Hawks improved their overall record to 10-1 and 2-3 in the NJAC by beating JCS 15-13, 15-11, 15-11.

Leading the way for MSU was Krista Gastelu, who set a single match record by recording 18 kills in three games. Gastelu also had seven digs and two blocked shots. Nikki Kyle had 10 kills and 13 digs, while Lauren Mazurkiewicz shut down the Gothic Knights with 17 digs.

Last Thursday, MSU split a double header against Albright and FDU-Madison. The Lady Red Hawks defeated Albright 2-0 with Jill Gastelu recording six kills and nine digs in the victory. In the second match, MSU fell to FDU-Madison 2-0.

This Saturday, MSU takes on Rowan College at 2:00, as they look to reach the .500 mark for the season. The next few matches will help prepare the Lady Red Hawks for the upcoming NJAC Championships held on Thursday, October 26. The Rowan match, the Jersey City State Tournament and a conference match against William Paterson are all future matches that remain on the Red Hawk schedule.

Hard work and strong effort will put MSU in a good position to finish off a winning season.

Fearless Forecasts

BOB CZECHOWICZ: THIRD GRADE CRAB SOCCER MVP
Carolina +1 1/2 over Jets. I have a panther shaped birthmark on my wazoo.
Indy +10 over S.F. I had to shoot my pet colt because it made poopie.
Detroit +3 1/2 over Packers. My hobby is putting toothpaste between my toes.
Wash. +2 1/2 over Ariz. My mom hit me for using her lipstick as war-paint.

BRIAN HOFFMAN: HUMAN WRITING TABLET
Wash. +2 1/2 over Arizona. I used Bob’s mom’s lipstick as war-paint too!
Atlanta +3 over St. Louis. If I was Bob, I’d think of something funny.
Indy +10 over S.F. Mom and Dad, I use drugs! Can’t ya tell?

GREG MACSWEENEY: F@%$N’ GENIUS.
Oakland -3 over Denver. Sigma head coach Diana is key to success.
Dallas no line over San Diego. Cause I said so.
New Orleans +6 1/2 over Miami. I’m on the Miami disabled list.
S.F. -10 over Indy. I dug gold in ’49.

BRIAN COSGROVE: MSU STUDENT KNOW IT ALL
Vikings -2 over Bucks. Norsemen conquered the world list.

TOM TRACY: GALLOPING GOURMET, PART DEUX!
Giants -3 over Eagles. I’m a Giants fan, that is why I picked them.
KC -7 over New England. Bob’s comments are the best!
Jacksonville +7 1/2 over Chicago. If I were a Jaguar, I’d have sharp teeth.
San Diego no line over Dallas. If you think my comments are funny, thank Bob.

Now that the Yankees’ season is over, and I have wiped the tears off the keyboard, it’s time to look at what free agents are available for good ol’ George to sign in the offseason. Our old buddy Fred McGriff is available, for a small fee of $4,250,000. Don’t forget, Yankee fans, the Crime Dog was in the Yankee organization back in the day, and would add much power to the Yankee lineup.

One word, two syllables, BULLPEN! If I was George, I’d slip on my steel-toed boots, and give Steve Howe a big kick in the wazoo. This is one guy that has had too many chances, and just basically sucks.

How many saves has he blown? Too many. If the Yanks had a quality bullpen, they would probably be in the AL Championship Series right now. But I’m not going to dwell on the Yanks too much, I’m getting too disappointed. But before I stop talking about them, all of you bandwagon riders who all of a sudden are long time Yankee fans, you can jump off now and leave next year’s cheerin’ to the real fans.

Congratulations to Dominique Moceanu of Houston, who won a silver medal at the World Gymnastics Championships. America should be proud!

Good news for all tennis fans out there. The U.S. Open tennis championships will remain on CBS for at least five more years. Break out the champagne! Start the ticker tape parade! I really do love tennis. There is so much variation. It is always the same two guys always competing for major championships. The last one was Agassi-Sampras, the one before was Sampras-Agassi. I think I’ve seen them all before.

It wouldn’t be an After the Bell column if I didn’t mention the Devils. There, I mentioned them.

I think I’m a nice guy. I think I have a good amount of common sense. I think I like college. I think all my friends are great. I think my mom is beautiful. I think my dad is the smartest guy in the world.

I think that everything I just wrote has no relevance to my article, but I think I don’t care.
