Grease fire closes Student Center Cafeteria food grill

by Rosemary Gutierrez

The Student Center kitchen was closed March 29 due to a grease fire on one of the grills.

Drippings from a cooking hamburger fell underneath the char-broil in the grill and caused a fire to ignite at around 9:00 a.m. Friday.

No one was hurt and there was no damage to the grill, said Robert Ginser, director of kitchen services. The kitchen has been reopened and will continue with business as usual, he said.

The flame grew to about three feet in the air. It reached the ventilator system above the grill, said Ginser.

"It was the accumulation of the grease that burned. There was no structural damage to the building," said Chief Ed Pomponio of the Little Falls Fire Department.

"The flame was extinguished in the snap of a finger," said Ginser. The kitchen is equipped with a fire extinguisher system that immediately shuts off the gas flow and releases a powder chemical to put out the fire.

It was activated by executive chef of the kitchen, David Glazer. There was some smoke which was cleared in 10 minutes with the use of fans in front of the dining room door.

Campus police were notified, said Ginser. The fire department was called at 9:08 a.m. Pomponio came to inspect the area but no fire trucks were dispatched because the fire had been extinguished.

The grill will remain closed until the grill, ventilator, and the ducts are cleaned out thoroughly, Ginser said.

Ginser does not anticipate a food availability problem. The grill in the back of the main kitchen will be used until the other is serviced.

The cleaning of the grill will take place over the long Easter weekend. It will be back in service when classes resume on April 8.

Investigation of Sigma Phi Rho party begins

by Tom Boud

Campus police together with the Dean of Students Helen Matusow-Ayres, began their preliminary investigation into the Sigma Phi Rho party that went awry on March 23.

Associate Dean of Students James Harris said he met with Dean of Students Helen Matusow-Ayres on April 3 to discuss the March 23 Student Center party sponsored by Sigma Phi Rho fraternity.

The party ended in violence after campus police denied access to preserve the maximum ballroom capacity of 500 people. Three officers were injured and one male was arrested for allegedly assaulting another male. Also, an entrance door to the Student Center Annex (near the University Book Store) was damaged.

Harris said the Sigma Phi Rho investigation is still in the preliminary stage. "We are in the process of finding out who attended as well as what exactly happened at the event."

"From what I hear, there are mitigating circumstances which led to the dissatisfaction of the people attending the party. We are also considering all options in terms of possible disciplinary actions," Harris said.

Harris said the investigation will entail talking to all parties involved with the Sigma Phi Rho party. "We will be consulting with campus police, Sigma Phi Rho, and Student Center authorities, among other people."

"The important aspect of any investigation is to consult with everyone involved. If you exclude people, you run the risk of missing important information. We also run the risk of stirring up resentment, which is something we don't want to do," Harris said.

Harris stressed that most parties at MSU happen without incident. "If you were to go back and look at the number of on-campus parties, you will see that the overwhelming majority of them occur without any violence. We have historically not had any major problems with violence. Violent parties have always been the exception and not the rule. What led to this deviation is something we're really interested in," Harris said.

Campus Police Lt. Paul Cell said that Campus Police does not have the final say in the Sigma Phi Rho affair. "Our main concern on the evening of the event was the safety violations. We took the necessary precautions by closing the party down."

"Our department does not regulate administrative sanctions taken against student organizations," Cell said.

Britain Widens Police Powers on Terrorism
Fearing the continuation of IRA attacks over the Easter holiday, the British government pushed through a package of tough emergency legislation on Wednesday, extending wide new powers to the police, including the right to search suspected terrorists and non-residential premises, to cordon off areas for up to 28 days, and to impose temporary parking bans.

Incursions into an African Rain Forest
A remote rain forest home to Gaboni’s Pygmies is facing major changes that concern both residents and conservationists as convoy of trucks filled with stone bringing paving materials to French-led crews laying paved roads that will open up this area as never before. Lumbering and gold prospecting are two activities cited by environmentalists as dangerous to the pristine rain forest. Hunting has also thinned out animal populations. A Gabon government forest inspector fears that once commercial permits are issued, one of the last pure rain forests in the world will be destroyed.

Public Workers Plot in Bolivia
Striking workers, 50,000 strong, shut down public transportation, threw dynamite sticks at police, and looted stores and the offices of the recently privatized state railroad Wednesday in an attempt led by the Bolivian Workers Center, the leading national union. The union is seeking higher wages for its civil servants and is against the privatization trend in the country.

West: No Syria Peace This Year
Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres says he doubts a peace agreement will be reached with Syria this year, saying there is too little time and that the issues are too complicated. Damascus didn’t condemn or express condolences over a wave of recent suicide bombings in Israel. It is believed the negotiations will not resume until after the May 29 national elections.

The Cows Won’t Go Away
In the latest twist of the on-going British mad cow scare, a decision has been taken by government officials to slaughter 4.7 million “older” cows who are believed to have been exposed to the degenerative brain disease. While officials ponder the details of the logistical nightmare of how to kill the cattle and dispose of 15,000 carcasses a week for over five years, the London chapter of the World Hindu Council has volunteered to build a shelter for the sick cows and administer medical aid.

Hong Kong Readies for China
Tens of thousands of Hong Kong residents lined up for hours in a last-ditch attempt to gain British travel documents as a hedge against possible restrictions when China takes over Hong Kong next year. So far about 200,000 people have applied for the documents during March alone, compared with 12,000 for all of last year.

Commerce Secretary Missing
A plane carrying Commerce Secretary Ron Brown was reported missing in the Balkans Wednesday. Brown was traveling in Tulza during a three-day visit to Serbia, leading a high-level American business delegation representing 15 companies specializing in information infrastructure, transportation, energy, tourism and financial services. It was unclear who was on the plane with Brown.

Earlier Outrage Spreads
The videotaped police beating of two suspected illegal immigrants has sparked outrage in Southern California’s Mexican-American community. It’s also drawn condemnation from Mexico, concern from the White House and a statement from California Governor Pete Wilson, who said it seems excessive force was used. Two sheriff’s deputies who were captured on videotape beating the suspects have been suspended with pay pending an investigation. The FBI is investigating the incident for possible criminal civil rights violations.

Economy Rebounding?
The latest economic data from Washington show that personal incomes and consumer spending are up sharply. The Commerce Department says spending rose 1.1 percent to an annual rate of more than $8 trillion. Income from wages, salaries and other sources increased 0.8 percent to more than $6 trillion.

The figures reinforce the impression that the economy is gradually regaining some momentum after a weak spell at the end of last year.

Poll: Clinton Leads Dole
In a new poll out Wednesday, President Clinton holds a wide lead over likely Republican rival. About 1,000 adults were included in the poll which had a three-point margin of error.

Militant Standoff In Montana Continues
Senator Max Baucus of Montana says the best hopes for resolving the standoff between anti-government extremists and FBI agents remain with local people. The senator also criticized plans by out-of-state supporters of the “Freemen” to travel to Montana. The FBI reportedly is considering an offer from white separatist Randy Weaver to mediate the standoff. Weaver’s wife and son were killed in a standoff at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, four years ago.

Should Federal Agencies Have Access to AIDS files?
A complaint filed in Boston’s Federal district court Wednesday seeks to block Federal officials from obtaining the names and social security numbers of people with AIDS that receive Federal support.

few said Jackson.

Jackson said his office will be placed in the center because he is responsible for all of those programs that will be moved after renovations are completed.

"The plan is to cluster together all academic support. If a student needs assistance or help it will all be in the same building. One stop shopping," said Dr. Jackson.

Renovations will include tearing out a good part of the interior, as well as classrooms, hallways, and offices. Mellen said.

Additions will include a new elevator that will stop at the intermediate floors that are not a full level up, and a mezzanine will be built above the gymnasium for offices. The floor plan will include offices, meeting rooms, conference rooms, a library, tutorial work area, and a lounge with a coffee bar, said Mellen.

About 10 classes were relocated as a result of Morehead's closing.

The computer learning lab was relocated to Sprague library until Morehead is completed. When the renovations are complete there will be no classes rescheduled in that building, added Mellon.

MSU has hired Chanree Contractors to do the renovating of the interior of Morehead. Mellen foresees no interference with wiring and renovation, Morehead's wiring has already been cut off and rewired into the Academic Advising building.

The cost of the renovation is $4 million. The funds will be taken from the campus reserves and the residual master plan of 1988, which budgeted money for the renovation of the school buildings, said Mellon.

Asbestos was commonly used when the building was constructed around 1910, so steps are being taken to safeguard the health of students by keeping the building as contained as possible while they are renovating the interior, said Mellen.

All students invited to discuss updating GERs

by Matthew Connolly

Dr. Kay Wilkins, a representative of the College of Humanities and Social Science and a member of the General Education Committee, extended an invitation to all students to partake in a meeting next Thursday, April 11 to discuss the new GERs. The meeting will be held in the Student Center Ballroom C in two sessions: one from 12-1:00 p.m. and the other from 1-2:00 p.m.

Wilkins said "We are evaluating the current requirements to see how best to modify or change them. It is around 12 years since the last changes and a lot needs updating." She said the committee was eager to get student input and had already sent out surveys to gain student views.

"At present a 'Distribution Model' is followed but a 'Core Curriculum' approach has also been considered," said Wilkins. "Students complain about GERs, now is their chance to make their views known on both their past experiences and future demands," she continued. The committee has representatives from the SGA, Greek Council, Faculty, and Administration. It hopes to make recommendations to the University Senate and Faculty on the future content and structure of the GERs in the near future.

New Freeman Hall manager improves food, say students

by Doreline Norns

The December 1995 arrival of Roseann Rostoker, the new Chef/Manager of Freeman Hall, from Ramapo College where she was sous chef, has resulted in a noticeable improvement in the dining services at MSU according to residents. "When I got here, the first thing I did was to read the customer survey that was done before I came. I saw what was being asked and decided what choices to make," Rostoker said.

During lunch hours, Rostoker can be seen going from table to table asking students for their opinions. "I know what people like to eat, I know what I would want my own kids to eat. The students here are easy to please," she said. "You just have to listen to what they are saying." "I'm doing this for them," she said. "I don't do these changes for any greater glory than that." The students appear to be happy with what's been going on and agree the improvements were much needed.

"I like the fact that they leave the pizza and deli-bar open at dinner time," said Freeman Hall resident Theresa Rawlins, a Biology major. "They have more foods that I like, we have calorie charts and every now and then we have ethnic food nights, which is good because I get the chance to taste different foods including my own, West Indian," said Fabrice Jean-Denis, a 22 year-old Political Science major. She continued, "There is more variety in the menu and we now have fresh fruits every day which I think is good." Business major Otis O'Meally, 19, said, "I noticed the menu listing. They keep the place nice and neat, and we finally got a microwave." Rostoker said, "It's not a hundred percent what I want it to be; I try to please everyone. I like people to leave here happy not hungry.

Annual Health Fair 'Check-ups' on Students' Health and Fitness

By Gtna Saltmari

On Wednesday, April 10, the annual MSU Health Fair will be held from 9:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. in the Student Center Ballrooms.

About 60 representatives from various health agencies, hospitals, and centers on campus will hand out up-to-date health information and conduct several free health tests, including blood pressure and physical fitness tests for anyone interested.

The free event is held to promote student health, said event organizers. Organizations participating in the event include: Planned Parenthood, The National Council on Alcohol and Drug Dependence, Montclair YMCA, New Jersey Buddies, and the American Cancer Society. Representatives from various health plans including HMOs will be present to answer students' questions.

Bioreference laboratories will be offering the following tests in the morning hours: Chem-profile, HDL, Cholesterol, Plasma Test for a fee of $27.00 and a Glucose.

Recruiting season begins: Career Fair coming to MSU on Tuesday

by Lorren Magnus

Career Services will be holding its second annual Career Fair on Tuesday, April 9, in Dickson Hall. The fair will consist of 51 tables of possible employers for students of all majors. Employers from different companies and varying job fields will be on hand to answer questions, give information about prospective positions, and collect resumes from possible student candidates.

The employers participating in the fair range from very prominent organizations such as Bloomingdales, Dell Atlantic, and the FBI, as well as smaller businesses such as Computer Associates and AOE/Ricoh.

The fair will focus on a variety of fields as well as cover a large majority of majors. There will be representatives from business services, retail markets, food services and sales, health care, computer services, law enforcement, social services, telecommunications, recreation, and public accounting, among others.

Eileen Bruck, director of Career Services, wants to be clear that the fair is intended for all students, not just for the graduating seniors. "The focus of the fair is to get employers and students together," said Bruck. "For graduates and undergraduates there are actual jobs available, whether they are full-time, part-time, or internships. It (the fair) is a reflection of the job market."

Bruck also said that many students get discouraged because they fear that their field of interest will not be represented. Career Services is trying to address such concerns with this fair. "We want to give opportunities for all majors and all kinds of interests," Bruck said. "The fair will represent all the industries, and I want it to be a fair where everyone can find something useful to them."

Bruck said that students should be aware that they can go to the Career Services office and pick up a grid of all the companies attending so they can plan to visit the tables of companies that they are interested in. "If the students come to the office and get a grid," she said, "they can plan ahead strategically as to where they want to go. They should also plan ahead as to what it is they are going to say. Students should be prepared to tell about their qualifications if asked by an employer. Serious students should come dressed-up with resumes in hand."

Since the last career fair attracted a turnout of 800 students, Career Services has decided to make this fair an annual event. "This fair will be a learning experience," said Bruck. "It is there to help those looking for non-permanent employment as well as those who are searching for future careers. The companies on our list are more diverse than a specialized, one-specific-area-of-interest fair, and they also have the most available jobs. I am hoping that students will enjoy it and learn from it. The fair is for everyone."

MSU’s AFCS to raise money for student

by Matthew Connolly

Megan Connolly of Glen Ridge is a Master of Arts in Teaching student at Montclair State University who was diagnosed with Hodgkin’s Lymphoma in June 1995. Megan graduated from Holy Cross in May 1993 and found that her lifetime dream was to influence and educate our youth. In order to accomplish this, she went back to graduate school to obtain her Masters Degree in Education. While attending MSU Megan re-founded the MSU Association of Family and Consumer Sciences (AFCS) and recruited many new members.

Her illness has forced her to put a hold on finishing her degree in order to seek treatments, including chemotherapy and radiation, which are very costly. She has no health insurance and has incurred many bills which she is unable to pay. The MSU AFCS has organized a dinner/dance on April 13, 7:00 p.m.-11:00 p.m., at The Robin Hood Inn in Clifton. The dance will raise money to help with some of these expenses.

Cunningham recently appointed Director of Global Education Center

by Joseph A. Cerqueira

Dr. Marina Cunningham has been appointed to head the Global Education Center, said Dr. Gregory Water, deputy provost and vice president for Institutional Advancement.

Cunningham comes to MSU from William Paterson College, where she was Assistant Director of Continuing Education for eight years.

Born in China to Russian parents, she went to high school in Ecuador and earned degrees from the University of Illinois and Northwestern University. She has a Ph.D. in Slavic Languages and Literature.

She speaks many languages including Russian, Spanish, French and Chinese.

Cunningham said there are three goals she wishes to accomplish at MSU. "I want to increase the number of students wishing to travel abroad, and to get involved in exchange programs. I would also like to implement collaborative programs with other universities," said Cunningham. More research and grant opportunities are also on her agenda. Lastly, "I would like the Global Education Center to be an international resource to the community, and offer travel programs to the public," she said. Cunningham added that they would be able to "answer any questions people have about international matters."

Dr. Cunningham says that her strengths lie in her strong personal background, experience, networking and contacting capabilities with scholars, and her ability to create programs. She also considers her ability to work well with faculty as one of her strengths.

On the personal side, her hobbies include traveling, theater, and anything cultural in New York City. An avid reader, she is married with two children. She has a son who is a lawyer in New Orleans, and a daughter who interned with a Massachusetts senator.
SGA begins letter writing campaign against tuition hike

by Tom Boud

SGA Director of External Affairs Victor Cirilo announced plans for a campus-wide letter writing campaign to the state legislature in Trenton concerning tuition increases. Cirilo said summer tuition will increase by nine percent and that there may be additional increases for the fall semester.

"Tuition hikes concern each and everyone of us. As leaders of the campus community, it is our duty to inform the community and get them to react. What I have in mind is a flyer with a letter attached which will be distributed all over campus. The students can sign the letter and deposit it in a box which will be located outside the SGA office.

"These letters will in turn be mailed to the state legislature to show them we will not stand for any tuition increases," said Cirilo. Thousands of flyers with letters will be printed in the near future and the copies will be free by using the SGA office copying machine, Cirilo said.

SGA Vice President Julio Marenco announced his candidacy for SGA president at the April 3 meeting. Marenco said he is running for president in order to finish tasks undertaken by the Dauder administration.

"It would be a waste of my talent if I didn't run for president. I have a very good idea on how to run things. As president, I would continue to strive for better programming for all the Class Ones and I would work doubly hard with the university administration on individual student issues. We stand today at the edge of a frontier. The frontier is not a set of promises, but a set of challenges."

It is with the best of intentions that I announce my candidacy for president of the Student Government Association," Marenco said.

Regarding the upcoming election, SGA Legislator Brian Cosgrove called on every legislator to set aside two hours for poll supervision. "Last year, the SGA was under a lot of fire and heat for looking like idiots. That's a problem that we must address. So far, only eight or nine people have signed up to watch the polls, so I am asking you to please volunteer two hours of your time for the benefit of the SGA," Cosgrove said. In other affairs, Cosgrove was appointed as Acting Attorney General until April 19 to replace Amy Fisher who is running for Vice President.

SGA Secretary Lauren Pytelski said that any SGA legislator who does not put in two hours of poll supervision will be stripped of their voting privileges for one meeting.

"All we are asking for is two hours. We are not asking for a major part of your life," Pytelski said.

In legislative business, the SGA voted to recharter SILC and the Student Paralegal Association for the 1996-97 year. The SGA also voted 25-0-2 to fund the Caribso Spring Festival Association and 27-0-3 to appropriate $100 to Pride for AIDS education programming.

Dear Career Services,

9. My friend who attended the Career Fair last year said "It was very busy, and some employers had lines of students waiting to speak to them." I plan to come on April 9. How can I make the most of the day?

A. Your friend was right. The ballrooms were packed with representatives from 50 employers, and 800 students attended. To make the most of the day, it is a good idea to prepare your strategy beforehand.

Come to Career Services and get a list of employers who are attending and learn about the kinds of positions that are available. Read the list carefully and then decide which employers you want to meet. You'll be better prepared.

Recruiters have made the following suggestions:

- Come dressed as you would for an interview. It communicates to the employers that you are serious about the job hunt.
- Introduce yourself in a positive and confident manner. Smile, project enthusiasm, and offer a firm handshake.
- Give the representative a resume and be ready to discuss your background, qualifications, and career goals.

Women are fairly represented in the education field but the prestige of being an educator isn't as great now as in the past. There have been women in banking, but the room for advancement is far less likely. In the 105 year history of the American Psychological Association, only eight women have served as president. Only 43 representatives out of 435, and eight out of 100 senators in the United States Congress are women although they make up 51 percent of the population, Cantor said.

Cantor offered hope and optimism, citing improvements in working conditions for women and in the setting of goals for specific improvements. Women have made many advancements professionally in recent years, said Cantor. 61 percent of Doctorates awarded in psychology in 1991 were earned by women.

An influx in the medical professions has also been seen, namely in general medicine, psychology, and veterinary medicine. An increase in the number of women editors of professional journals has also been recorded.

Dr. Cantor and the Task Force on Urban Initiatives, of which she is a member, attribute this "gender shift" to a few simple causes. First, legislation passed by the federal government has had a considerable impact.

The Women of MSU and ACE-NIP Women's Center, welcomed Cantor at The Robin Hood Inn sponsored by The Women's Center, the Psychological Services Department, and The Women of MSU and ACE-NIP.

Dr. Joan Pickle, Director of the Women's Center, welcomed Cantor and gave the audience of MSU students, educators, and other professionals insight into Dr. Cantor's practice, achievements, and characteristic personality.

Cantor, a Westfield resident, presented the facts about women's misrepresentation and lack of advancement in a wide range of professions.

Dear Career Services,

On March 6, Dr. Dorothy Cantor, president-elect of the American Psychological Association spoke on "The Changing Gender Composition of Professions," during a luncheon held at The Robin Hood Inn sponsored by The Women's Center, the Psychological Services Department, and The Women of MSU and ACE-NIP.

Dr. Joan Pickle, Director of the Women's Center, welcomed Cantor and gave the audience of MSU students, educators, and other professionals insight into Dr. Cantor's practice, achievements, and characteristic personality.

Cantor, a Westfield resident, presented the facts about women's misrepresentation and lack of advancement in a wide range of professions.

Secondly, Cantor said that men "tend to go where the money is," leaving a gap that women can, in turn, fill and use as a stepping stone to the job which they truly aspire.

Cantor said that the three goals of the task force are to identify the problems women face in the workplace, to help policy makers address and rectify problems, and to meet with professionals in other disciplines.

Cantor urged everyone to become "creatively aggressive," to couple one's mind and imagination in order to meet personal goals. She advised setting short range as well as long range goals, and she reminded everyone "If you want success to fall into your lap, first you have to put your lap there."

MSU students take part in
New York City Tournament

Quinones, and Ray Reima. There are three areas on the east coast that teach GJJ, Raritan, Philadelphia, and New York City.

The team had an impressive showing, Jason Iorio stream-rolled to a 12-0 lead over the eventual champ of the heavyweight division, level 2, but the endurance factor weighed in and he was caught in an armlock. "I had the guy beaten on points until I ran out of gas," said Iorio. "It was tough seeing him go on and beat everyone else in the division."

Dan Quinones, a freshman at MSU, won the heavyweight division, level one. He confidently said "Most of my opponents were bigger and stronger than me, but they could not defend against my technique."

The MSU Gracie Jiu-Jitsu practitioners are looking forward to taking part in another tournament in Philadelphia this June.

Editor's Note:

Although Women's History Month concluded in March, this week's Campus Life section is running two stories which I feel to be very important and deserve publication.

The Women's Center and the Women's Studies Program planned a series of events which highlighted every aspect of women's history. Authors, doctors, and performers visited MSU to educate students on everything from dating violence to self-esteem. It was definitely a very interesting month!
The Real World
by Jennifer Boehm

Last semester, when I first entered the office of Cooperative Education, I was unsure of what I wanted to pursue. I knew that I wanted to use the skills I had been developing in my classes, but that didn’t help narrow it down. I was mostly looking off-campus because I thought that it would look good on my resume.

After several interviews, I was called by the office of Alumni Relations at MSU and decided to do my Co-op there. I am finding the experience to be very rewarding. I’d like to share with you some of the advantages of doing an on-campus co-op.

The most obvious advantage is traffic – there is none. I do not have to worry about rushing from class to work and being late because of a traffic jam on Route 46. I live on campus, so I do not have to lose my parking spot every day that I go to work and being late because of traffic – there is none. I do not have a traffic jam on Route 46. I live on campus, so I do not have to lose my parking spot every day that I go to work.

Another advantage is the contacts that you can make. I spend half of my time in other offices in College Hall. I found how resourceful College Hall offices are.

I meet new people almost every day. You can just guess all the little advantages of knowing the people in College Hall. For one of my classes, I had to make a contact file and half of my file was people I have met through this on-campus co-op.

I would like to mention one last advantage of having a co-op on campus, especially at the Alumni House. I have learned a lot about the campus itself and the people involved in making it work. I have acquired a lot of information about MSU in the short time I have been here that I never would have learned otherwise. If you are ever given the opportunity, I would definitely recommend that you co-op on campus. Would you rather sit on Route 46 during rush hour or wait 15 minutes for a shuttle bus? The decision is simple.

The best answer may be that you can never have a shuttle bus? The decision is simple.

• Ask questions about career opportunities, specific job openings, and the organization. Collect business cards and literature to familiarize yourself with the different employers.
• Ask representatives about possible opportunities even if they are not listed in the employer directory.
• Speak with as many representatives as possible. Instead of standing in line to speak with one recruiter, you can probably talk with two or three in the same period.
• Come early. The doors open at noon. As the day continues, the ballrooms become more crowded. Good luck!

In my last job, my boss and I disagreed about almost everything. This is the first time I have ever had this happen. Last Friday, I told him that I was going to leave. He commented that he thought it was a good idea, as he was going to let me go. What should I say when I am asked why did you leave your last job at my next interview?

A. A cardinal rule of interviewing is never to say anything negative about yourself or employers for whom you have worked. If you say there was a personality clash between your boss and yourself, you might as well walk out of the interview. Find something positive about each work experience you have had, in terms of skills you have developed or situations you can now handle. The best answer may be that you desired a better job, or want to learn new skills and broaden your work experience.
The Commuter Connection

by Valerie Winslow

The Town Meeting for Weekend College students was held Saturday, March 30, in the Brantl Lecture Room. A panel of Students Dr. Helen Matusow-Ayres and Student Government Association President Francois Dauder were present to talk to students for over two hours.

During the informal meeting, the discussion was concentrated on issues that affected out-of-classroom experiences for MSU commuter students.

Some of the issues discussed included parking on campus, academic advising, campus security, and student fees. It was a time for students to voice their concerns.

One student, Diana Woods, who attended the meeting, said, "The meeting was informal and open. It gave me a platform to talk to the Dean of Students and the SGA President about issues I would like to see MSU administrators address."

This first town meeting was the beginning of a continuing format for all students who want to express themselves and/or get involved in making changes happen.

Expatriate reflects on origins: "When I was Puerto Rican"

by Sandy Garcia

The celebration of Women's History Month continued on March 26 "Reading and Reflections" by Esmeralda Santiago, author of "When I was Puerto Rican."

Santiago's lecture/reading was the first of events for Latina Day, which began at 12:00 p.m. at the Brantl Lounge in Dickson Hall. The day of events was coordinated by Carmen Reyes-Cuevas of the Educational Opportunity Fund department.

The event was so heavily attended that people were standing outside the doors.

Esmeralda Santiago writes about her experiences of living as a child in Puerto Rico and moving to New York with her mother and siblings. Her writings also tell about her problems surviving high school and her graduating from Harvard with magna cum laude honors.

"Women's history is very important to me because in my early experiences in the United States I saw a lack of information on Latina Concerns, or from the Latina perspective that I was looking for, " Santiago said. Reading was "very big part" of her life and education was respected in her family even though economic problems forced both of her parents to drop out of school at a very young age. This encouraged her to learn English on her own when she moved to New York. She went on to explain the reasons for the past tense in her title as "that period in my life was when I was purely Puerto Rican."

Santiago described the criticism that she experienced when she went back to Puerto Rico for the first time in thirteen years. She discovered that her living in the United States had made her something other than "purely puertorican" and that this distanced her from those who saw themselves as fitting that description. But, said Santiago, leaving one's homeland can be seen positively when a person is "looking for something that one's culture can't provide."

The highlight of the event came when Santiago read a chapter from her book entitled "Why Women Remain Jamona." This term refers insultingly to a woman who has never married. The chapter tells a colorful tale of Santiago as a young child going to spend a week with her grandparents. Her father's infidelity and the issue of respect for one's elders come into play.

"I want my children to know that my cultural identity is important to me," Every time I write about Puerto Rico," Santiago said, "I'm discovering about my culture."

This event was sponsored by the Hispanic Caucus, Women's Studies Program and the Women's Center. Mu Sigma Upsilon Sorority, Lambda Tau Omega Sorority, Lambda Theta Alpha Sorority, the Latin American Student Organization, the Latin American and Latino Studies Minor program, the Office of the President, the Office of the Dean of Humanities and Social Science, the English department and the Spanish-Italian department.

You’re more likely to die of a heart attack, but you fear cancer more.

More than 8 million Americans living today have had some form of cancer. This disease can attack anyone at any age. Fortunately, a healthier diet alone can cut your risk of cancer.

According to the Jan/Feb. 95 issue of Nutrition Action, "people who eat at least five servings of fruits and vegetables a day as opposed to two or fewer servings, have about a 40% decrease in risk for colon, stomach, esophagus and oral cancers." Cancer is a group of more than 100 diseases. Although each type of cancer is different, they are all diseases of the body’s cells.

Healthy cells grow, divide and repair, however cancer cells lose their ability to limit and direct growth. Cancer cells grow so rapidly and produce too much tissue. Overproduction of tissue results in tumors. Tumors can be either benign or malignant. Benign tumors are not cancerous and therefore do not spread to other parts of the body. Malignant tumors are cancerous. They can spread, invade and destroy other healthy cells in the body.

Half of all cancers are diagnosed in people under 67. Four cancer sites — lung, colon, breast and prostate account for more than half of all cancer deaths.

Lung cancer strikes fewer people than various other cancers, yet it's the biggest cancer killer. Cigarettes contribute about 85% of lung cancer deaths. Unlike other cancers, heredity plays a role in the development of breast cancer. Self breast examinations, increasing exercise and controlling alcohol content are some factors that can help in breast cancer prevention.

Like breast cancer to women, prostate cancer affects one out of every eight American males. African American males are twice as likely to die of prostate cancer. Recent studies have found Vit. E to protect against cancer. Vit. E, like Vit. A is an antioxidant—which protects the body against disease.

Foods such as wheat germ, whole grain products, nuts and seeds are rich in Vit. E. Surprisingly, pizza may also reduce the risk of this prostate cancer. According to the Jan. 96 issue of Environmental Nutrition, "pizza, tomato sauce and tomatoes in particular were linked to a lower risk of cancer." In a recent study men eating more than 10 or more servings of tomato products a week were 45% less likely to develop prostate cancer.

Although accounting for only 1% of all cancers in men, testicular cancer is found mostly in young men between the ages of 15-34. What’s even more alarming for the college aged male is that the majority of testicular cancers have been seen between the ages of 18-22. Most testicular cancer has been found by men themselves, usually by accident. However, like breast self-examinations for women, men can give themselves testicular self examinations.

If you or anyone you know has cancer, The American Cancer Society, a non-profit organization offers a variety of services for cancer patients and their families. Local ACS offices are listed in the telephone directory. Also the Cancer Information Services, at 1-800-4-CANCER, can provide information to doctors, patients and the public.

Although there are more forms of cancer, such as stomach, liver, pancreas and mouth, the cancers listed above are the most common and deadly for Americans today. Cutting your risk of cancer could be as easy as finishing all your peas at dinner time. Prevent today, what could be fatal tomorrow.

Here are some tips for cutting your risk of cancer.

• Don’t smoke.
• If you drink alcohol, limit to less than one drink a day.
• Eat at least five to nine servings of fruits and vegetables.
• Cut back on fats, especially saturated and red meats.
• Use whole grains, such as whole wheat.
• Exercise four hours a week.
• Avoid obesity.

Psychological Services' response to criticism: Give us a bigger staff

The article "College at Thirty-something" in the March 28 issue of the Montclarion brought attention to the University community of the press for services experienced by Psychological Services. The author takes issue with asking students to fill out informational forms which help us understand the nature of problems as well as possible therapists for referral. As the author notes, this takes about 15 minutes. The application is then processed by the secretary and is reviewed by one of the staff psychologists.

We ask students to give us as many available times for appointments as possible to ensure an appointment as quickly as possible. If this were an emergency or a crisis, the student would have been seen right away or the next day. If a student calls us from the bridge, as she alludes, someone from our office would have come immediately. However, it was not an emergency, and at this point in the semester most of our available hours are filled. Students often only give us few times that they can be seen. With a limited staff, therapy hours fill quickly and at this point in the semester this may mean a wait of a week or so. The only time a student may wait several weeks is when their schedules have very limited availability and they cannot make appointments at times that we can offer them.

Our office is busy and hectic. All our office staff, our secretary, and our student assistants try to work as professionally as possible in a busy and complex setting. Everyone is trained to speak calmly and politely and to pay attention to any student who is in obvious distress. The best answer to the dilemma is to increase both our office staff and our professional staff to meet the increased demands for service that our office gets. Until then, we will continue to try to offer students as effective and efficient service as our staffing will allow.

"Hey baby, how you doin' today?" That is the greeting that I usually receive from Betty, the lady who swipes I-cards at the Blanton cafe. It makes me feel welcome there. But Betty better be careful, as Bernice Harris can tell her.

Mrs. Harris is a 58 year old cashier in a Senate coffee shop who received a sexual harassment complaint from a nineteen year old Senate staffer. Her offense was that she called this boy by the same name that she has used for everybody from Senators to janitors over the past 30 years; "baby." Christopher Weld, the part-time mailboy who filled the suit, complained to his office manager and was told that he had three options: talk to Mrs. Harris, contact the Senate Office for Fair Employment practices, or do nothing. He sent the letter to Mrs. Harris, who is black, a letter headed "Sexual Harassment: I am reporting this not as a racial thing, but the term that you quoted does make me feel uncomfortable."

Bernice Harris' supervisors decided to transfer her from the coffee shop to a large cafeteria in the Capitol because, as she stated, they were afraid that she "might make the same slip and call him "baby" again and this guy could sue." Rather than take the transfer, Mrs. Harris quit, a little more than a month before her May 6 retirement that would have given her full benefits. "Yeah, I risked a couple of dollars by quitting," she shrugged, "but it wasn't right."

She was gone for about a day when several senators and staffers rallied to her defense. Letters of support and flowers were sent to Mrs. Harris. Two days later she was back on her old 6:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. shift. "They told me to stop quitting," she said. "They told me to come back to work."

Her offense was that she called this boy by the same name that she has used for everybody from Senators to janitors over the past 30 years, "baby." "I treat people like I want my kids and grandkids and myself to be treated. I don't know why he's upset," she said. And the same is true at MSU.

On this campus, if one were to call someone "baby" he would be branded as sexist by the liberal students. Whenever someone is referred to as a "girl" around here, the speaker is quickly corrected. "I am a womyn with a y," is usually the retort that follows.

In this really unfair atmosphere that we want to foster on this campus and across the country: an unwritten speech code?

Sexual harassment is a serious crime, but it seems to be treated seriously only when it is convenient. Bob Packwood was truly harassing women for 27 years on Capitol Hill before he was kicked out. But if a construction worker in Minnesota looks at a woman for more than seven seconds, he is guilty of ogling her and is immediately dealt with. Or if Bernice Harris says "baby" to some nineteen year old boy, she's out within a day. Episode like these cheapen and demean sexual harassment when it really does take place.

Obviously, Mrs. Harris was not trying to make any advances on Mr. Held. Nonetheless, he was offended by a word that she used, so the PC police acted quickly before Bernice could strike again. It is also evident that if someone says, "You are one smart girl" that they are not trying to demean whomsoever they are talking about. In other words, before attributing a sexist motive to the comment, take the statement in its true context. "It's gotten so doggone bad you can't even tell someone they have on a pretty dress or that their necklace looks good," Mr. Campbell said. And isn't that a shame. It seems that the liberals have created an atmosphere in Washington and on college campuses where one is free to say whatever she thinks, as long as it fits into their list of acceptable words. One result is that sexual harassment is turned into a joke, which hurts the true victims. Another is that the hard working people like Bernice Harris are the ones that suffer from the enforcement of PC rules.

"I treat people like I want my kids and grandkids and myself to be treated. I don't know why he's upset," Mrs. Harris said. "Weld's problem is simple: he has been co-opted by the politically correct Thought Police. So, Bernice is going to do what the PC police strike again."

The PC police strike again

Andy Warhol said that, "In the future, everyone will be famous for 15 minutes."

Last week at MSU, two people seemingly of little importance did things worthy of burning an impression for at least that prescribed period of time.

It was reported that during an MSU softball game MSU players. She brought with her a degree to lend she left her clothes behind. The display was tabbed tators, but it raised consternation among MSU security.

But that wasn't the end of the madcap festivities. Later that evening, an alleged perpetrator was a player when the latter realized that the intruder was Panzer Gym. This aspiring characterization which could probably be patented a gym bag with a strategically tailored hole along with an unwitting Playgirl models. In his attempt to create brought fame to both himself and to some cova any Campus Police has since supplied prosaic performan performances, leaving us all to make what we will of cases that have reinforced the impression of a chaos. Seeing the full moon above (no pun intended) the happen next, and whether good old MSU apply any alternatives. Still others are pondering what was either the confiscated video footage.

If it hadn't been for a chance meeting with Dr. Jim Nash, chairman of the English Department, I would have overlooked the recent Career Night sponsored by the same department. There wasn't much publicity about it, sorry to say. I did attend, and I'm very glad that I took the time to do so. It was well presented and organized, and after some opening remarks, all in attendance were invited to sit in on two of seven different sessions dealing with some aspect of the employment possibilities within the field.

I chose the sessions on Journalism and Freelance Writing. Both were conducted by faculty and alumni who had graciously returned for the evening to share their work experiences with those of us who are getting ready to dive into the post-graduation world. The remarks of these MSU graduates were candid, animated, and seemingly truthful. But they didn't come to strut their stuff. They did not descend in any way, shape, or form. But rather, these successful men and women welcomed a chance to paint a picture of what the real working world is like after exams, registration, and shuttle rides from the quarry. And that world is wide open if we take the time to look.

My personal concern is that at thirty-something I won't be marketable once I graduate. This has been a recurring toothache of mine for a while. I spent my early adult years working in restaurants as a waitress and bartender. The hours were conducive to raising kids who were school during the lunch shifts or by their Dad's house over the weekends. And, yes, it was a very real job, but... Before I knew it, a lot of time passed by and when I decided to hang up my apron and bowtie, I was leaving a job I worked at for almost twenty years and didn't even have a gold watch or pension plan to show for it. The reality of the rest of the working world slapped me in the face, and it's scary out there.

But these folks that I met at this Career Night assured me that my fears were unfounded. They told us stories about having to start at the bottom of the totem pole and working hard to climb higher – this won't be anything new for many of us. They offered encouragement to tap into that side of our brains that controls the innovativeness and creativity it will take to shine among the masses of stars in that big sky of employment waiting for us. And our age won't matter, only our strengths and earnest desires.

With kind and honest words, they gave this thirty-something hope and some consolation that all the hours I spend in front of my word processor and on my recliner past the last episode of "I Love Lucy" on Nick at Night will not have been in vain.

The faculty and staff of the English Department have good reason to be proud of their alumni. Career Night was a success, at least for me. Dr. Nash, thanks for inviting me. And by the way, the coffee was delicious. And coming from an old pro waitress, that's just as much a compliment as I intended the rest of this column to be.

I don't make enough money to gamble. And even if I did make enough I'd find another excuse not to gamble. The casinos are filled with thick, disgusting smoke that penetrates even the most overzealous Aqua-Velva man, and I don't prefer elbow-to-elbow crowds with people who are not that clean and not too attractive.

But in most hypocritical fashion, I fancy the Garden State's own Atlantic City (AC to the regulars). I love the flashing lights and ringing bells and the loud crashing sound of coins and, in an odd way, I even sort of like the elbow-to-elbow crowds. I like watching old ladies manipulate two and three slot machines at one time. I enjoy examining the stoic faces that surround the card tables. I like looking for the "big" tables, the ones that have minimum antes that cost more than my weekly paycheck. I like watching the slick way they hold their cigarettes and nod their fingers at the near-topless waitresses when they order their drinks.

I enjoy this, yet if I think about it, I feel quite perverse. I feel like a voyeur, peeping at the chinks in the armor of the rest of the working world. And, yes, I am left wondering what could be the ramifications of these extraordinary perambulations of some of my fellow students charged with campus safety and development for attention from other human beings.

I was apprehended by an MSU football player once while I was videotaping male athletes in the locker room. He had crafted an elaborate contentedness that concealed his video camera in a d hole through which the lens could film the action at the near-topless waitresses when they order their drinks.

I love the flashing lights and ringing bells and the loud crashing sound of coins and, in an odd way, I even sort of like the elbow-to-elbow crowds. I like watching old ladies manipulate two and three slot machines at one time. I enjoy examining the stoic faces that surround the card tables. I like looking for the "big" tables, the ones that have minimum antes that cost more than my weekly paycheck. I like watching the slick way they hold their cigarettes and nod their fingers at the near-topless waitresses when they order their drinks.

I enjoy this, yet if I think about it, I feel quite perverse. I feel like a voyeur, peeping at the chinks in the armor of the rest of the working world. And, yes, I am left wondering what could be the ramifications of these extraordinary perambulations of some of my fellow students charged with campus safety and development for attention from other human beings.

I was apprehended by an MSU football player once while I was videotaping male athletes in the locker room. He had crafted an elaborate contentedness that concealed his video camera in a d hole through which the lens could film the action at the near-topless waitresses when they order their drinks.

From construction worker to working with Rambo: A Filmmaker’s Story

by John Springman

On Monday, April 1, a Dickson Hall audience was treated to filmmaker Michael Corrente’s fascinating story on his breakthrough into the motion picture industry. MSU’s Film Studies Program Visiting Writer’s Program cosponsored the evening with Corrente and his guest, character actor Frank Vincent. Corrente regaled an absorbed audience with details of his journey from working construction in Providence, Rhode Island, to directing Academy Award winner Dustin Hoffman and Emmy Award winner Dennis Franz in the soon-to-be-released film, American Buffalo.

Corrente’s overriding message to prospective filmmakers was that making it in the film industry takes perseverance and the passion to tell a story. He decided to become an actor in the late 70’s, and after suffering through many fruitless auditions, decided to produce his own plays and simply cast himself in them. As an off-Broadway producer, he discovered that the rights to plays and simply cast himself in them. As an off-Broadway producer, he discovered that the rights to such as Sam Shepard are very expensive, so he became a playwright as well.

Corrente ultimately produced his own and others’ plays, including David Mamet’s American Buffalo. After several years, he decided to make a screenplay out of one of his plays, a story of five Italian-American youths in Providence, entitled Federal Hill. A Hollywood studio bought an option on his screenplay, and over the course of the next seven years various well-known actors and directors committed and uncompromised to the project. 'In 1993 I finally realized that Hollywood was never going to make Federal Hill, not my from childhood friends, and his brother-in-law took a second mort-gage on his house to pay for the last week’s shooting of Federal Hill. Corrente amused the audience by telling how friends were able to help him get credit from Kodak and thus obtain 85,000 feet of black and white film stock, an order they hadn’t filled since the last Woody Allen film. I had three friends sit by their phones until Kodak called. They answered the phone ‘This is such-and-such company. We’ve done extensive business with Mr. Corrente and he’s never missed a payment.’ ”

Corrente spoke of many sleepless nights of uncertainty about the financing of Federal Hill, but he always felt that he had his wife’s support and encouragement. Federal Hill was finally completed at a cost of $80,000 and Corrente proudly told the audience, “Every single person who worked on the film got paid, and that’s unusual in making a low budget feature like this.”

Corrente showed a clip of Federal Hill, in which Vincent plays a father determined to straighten out a wayward youth, a scene from Goodfellas and other Martin Scorsese films, said that he took the role because he was so impressed by the screenplay. Federal Hill was shown at several film festivals before being picked up by Trimark Films for national distribution. A Hollywood producer who saw the film put Corrente in touch with David Mamet. Mamet liked the movie so much that he decided he wanted Corrente to direct the film version of American Buffalo.

Corrente expressed profound gratitude to Mamet, saying “I never would have made this film if not for him.” Dennis Franz (NYFD Blue) committed to the project early, but the casting of Hoffman was a last minute coup. Corrente, doing a dead-on Hoffman impersonation, described how he met with the actors and convinced them to come aboard. “I told him there are three great roles in American theater: Stanley Kowalski in Streetcar, Willy Loman in Death of a Salesman, and Corrente continued on page 18

Cracker to perform as part of a musical memorial

by Jodi Kastel

On April 28, Cracker will perform in the amphitheater as part of a "musical memorial" to celebrate the lives of two distinguished area professors. The concert is the realization of Dr. James McRoy’s wish to have a musical memorial on campus upon his death, as stated in his will. The memorial will also honor Dr. McRoy’s close friend and fellow professor, Dr. Douglas Tomlinson. Both men passed away in June 1992 from AIDS-related causes.

Dr. McRoy was the head of the Psychology Department at Upsala College, formerly in West Orange. During his career in teaching, he also was president of the New Jersey chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

Dr. Tomlinson was a film professor at MSU. He was in the process of writing a book on the art of acting in motion pictures when he passed away, shortly after the completion of the spring 1992 semester. The book, Actors on Acting for the Screen: Roles and Collaborations, has since been published by Garland Press.

Dr. McRoy requested that 20 percent of his estate be set aside to subsidize a "musical memorial" on the MSU campus. Dr. McRoy chose MSU as the sight for his memorial after a visit to campus on one sunny, spring day a few years ago. Echoing through the trees, he could hear the sounds of music and laughter. He was touched by Class One Concert’s (C1C) annual "Outdoor Jam" idea and decided to include a provision in his will to support that type of concert. Dr. Douglas Schwegel of the English Department, a friend of both men, is the executor of the will. The will yielded a $8104.35 check for use towards the concert, which was officially signed over to C1C on March 29. C1C Executive Producer, Joann Munoz, received the check from Dr. Schwegel after the agreement was signed by both parties and finalized by SGA President Francois Dauder.

According to C1C:

The event itself will begin with a dedication of the performance to Dr. McRoy. The concert will focus on AIDS awareness. Organizations like Life Beat, Q 104.3, The AIDS Quilt Chapter of New Jersey, to name a few, are dedicating their time to educate all the attendees about AIDS prevention and awareness. All donations will go to the Newark Children’s Hospital AIDS Unit, the Hyacinth Foundation, Life Beat, The AIDS Quilt, and other Essex and Passaic County AIDS Service providers.

We are hoping that his event will help in the crusade of an eventual eradication of this dread disease.

Munoz said, “Dr. McRoy’s donation will not only impact MSU students, but the whole Montclair community in attendance. The outdoor jam was transformed from just a concert before exams to a show honoring
Twisted Willie, A Rollicking & Eclectic Collection

by Dylan Archilla

OK, I admit it, country music and the lifestyle that surrounds it makes me cringe. I think ten-gallon hats look silly. I sincerely believe that the combination of line dancing and snake skin boots lowers one's intellect by at least ten points. The sight of a gun rack in the back of a beat-up Ford pickup frightens me. The sound of a pedal steel guitar tends to make my flesh crawl. And sure, Garth Brooks' stage show rivals any metal band from the mid-eighties in the pyrotechnic department, but to me, country music sounds, well, small.

That's not to say, however, that nothing good has come out of the genre. Willie Nelson, he of the braids and multiple marijuana arrests, has always been seen as the gentle rebel of the music industry. He's a political activist on a real grass-roots level (he founded Farm Aid). He's shunned the uniform of the ever zany Dan Patak.

But not just anyone can become a hero of the ever zany Dan Patak. The man in black himself, Johnny Cash, Never Cared for depressingly Waylon. I was crooned by Jennings and "Sad Songs and Waltzes," sung by someone named Jesse Dayton all appear to adhere like super glue to the originals. And that's disappointing, because when a band covers someone else's music, I like to hear a variation on the theme, something at least a little different.

Not ironically, the songs that veer furthest away from the originals (or I think so), are the ones that score the most. "Shotgun Willie," covered by Tenderloin, is an energetic workout and kicks butt with real zeal. I doubt the original sounded anything like this, and if it did, then my hat (not a ten gallon!) is off to Mr. Nelson. Of note to you musicians out there, check out the bass line, it's rather tasty.

The Presidents of the United States of America's cover of "Devil in a Sleeping Bag," is, well, very Presidential if you know what I mean. The lyrics of this song seem to fit the Presidents' quirky style to a "T."

We're headed to Seattle for Promotion sickness on the road/Takin' it home to rock out for the kids/Dropped a tranny, jumped a railroad/And went through a music store/If you want to buy a van we're takin' bids...

Jerry Cantrell and Sean Kinney of Alice in Chains cover a song that could easily fit comfortably onto Alice's new acoustic album (if there is one), entitled "I've Seen All This World I Care to See." This ballad suits Cantrell's limited vocal range nicely and his guitar playing really stands out.

The most interesting and surprising facet of this CD is the inclusion of former Dead Kennedy leader and government scapegoat, Jello Biafra. He, with the help of a band called Life After Life, cover a Nelson ballad called "Still Is Still Moving to Me." One wouldn't think that Jello's high, quivering voice would work well in this genre, but it does.

In the end, this tribute CD is, depending on your taste, a hit or a miss proposition, but as a recognition of Willie Nelson's contribution to music, it's a winner. The Reverend Horton Heat says it best, "There's an area in Texas between Hillsboro and Austin where just about everyone wears T-shirts, shorts, and flip-flops. No matter who holds the deed, Willie Nelson owns the land. He is the King of Texas."

Players: It Must Be The Food

by Robert Duane

Last Saturday night, March 30th, at 8 p.m. MSU Players presented It Must Be The Food. The show consisted of numerous original skits written by some of Montclair's finest with two musical performances by the talented John Oakes, assisted by the ever zany Dan Patak.

The show opened on a 'typical' day in Blanton Cafeteria, where killing the food is half the battle. Introductions were made by the evenings emcee Sean Hale. Soon a change of continents occurred and brought the audience to Bosnia to peek in on the Real World. Scott Maccio, Will Coles, Dan Patak, Judi Lipshitz, Ian Antonoff, Tony Guernica, Mia Diaz, and Melissa Froio portrayed a sex hungry cast.

Next, the audience met Michael Weckes and Robert Duane, who acted as the evening's running gag. The show then mocked television's Quantum Leap as Sam Beckett and his friend leapt through the entertainment worlds of music, television, and film. They landed in Apollo 13, Friends, and finally the life of Kurt Cobain.

A question was then posed, "What if everybody thought they were Marlon Brando?" A cast of characters including, Jason Wills, Brian Jude Piatkowski, and Stefante Cummings recited famous quotes in the voice of the famed Brando, only to be interrupted by Weckes chasing Duane across the stage with a plunger.

The News Report that followed was hosted by Tracy Costa and Piatkowski, and included some crazy weather and a revealing editorial. After Oakes' first song, the cast showed an unreleased scene from the movie, E.T. and asked the audience, "What if Christian Slater was Jack Nicholson's son?" After another quantum leap, a humorous spoof on the MSU phone registration, although this one had an added sex option, featuring the sultry voice of Jen Turic.

Jumping into the nineties, a self-help infomercial followed, interrupted again by the running gag duo, who engaged in a brief sword fight. John Oakes performed his second song immediately followed by a sound effects showdown where Guernica and Hale faced off. The audience was then transported back in time and were treated to William Shakespeare. With a unique twist, it was performed by Star Trek characters.

McGinnis’ “Haute Couture,” pushing the edge of art

by Victoria Caldes & Erin Perry

Yesterday, April 3rd at 4 p.m., Gallery 3+1/2 held an opening reception for Jim McGinnis and his series of handmade paper and mixed media collages entitled, “Haute Couture.”

Made up of twelve pieces, McGinnis explains in his statement, “This exhibit encompasses my exploration of papermaking to date. The pieces represented here deal with many issues and themes both visually and in concept.” The collection reveals the artist’s works from November of ’95 through March of ’96. Each piece was hung by a wire hanger and presented on a brown cardboard background much like a clothing rack that people can sift through.

McGinnis is a BFA graduating senior with a concentration in photography. This is his secret little side project that ‘no one expected.’ He states, “I consider myself a photographer. I am the one behind the camera making the image to be printed onto a surface, which is usually paper. In this series, I am not the one making the images. I am making the actual surface...”

McGinnis creates his surfaces with pictures of models, Kodak and Fuji film boxes, tape measures, pins and needles, cloth, pencil skETCHINGS, and glass to reveal his unique visions that “…consist of people involved with the fashion industry. Basically, the people depicted here are either designers or models.” McGinnis work is unique and innovative. Unlike past exhibits appearing at Gallery 3+1/2, this presentation is unconventional. “My stuff isn’t that traditional. You have to take it off the wall, it’s not really meant to be hung. It pushes the edge of art and it enters its own dimension.”

This is the artist’s first solo show, but his work has previously appeared in group shows. The artist has his own favorite works. “Colour” and “13” because, “The composition and color are strong in both. I’m real happy. They are final pieces in this series,” and added laughing, “They’re for sale and cheap, but I think it would be kind of strange to have them hanging in your home.”

When asked if he likes to work with black and white film opposed to color, McGinnis chuckled and said, “I prefer good photography.” And then seriously responded, “I practice with black and white but I like color.”

“Haute Couture” is well worth a visit. And, maybe, if you’re really lucky, you’ll get to meet the eccentric Jim McGinnis who declared, “It’s all a part of my master plan. People who wear overalls and drive Volkswagen buses are going to take over the world.”

Teach in American Buffalo. You’ve played one, it would be a shame if you passed up a chance to do one of the others. Hoffman looked at me for a while, and then he did what all smart men do: he called his wife. He asked her if she’d mind spending the summer in Newport while he filmed in nearby Providence. She agreed and thus Hoffman became Teach.

Corrente explained that there are two ways to get big-name actors for your project. “If you give them a ton of money, they might do it even if the script is mediocre. If you have a great role for them, they’ll pay you to play it.” Hoffman, whose usual asking price is several times the $3 million budget of American Buffalo, worked for scale, as did Franz.

The MSU audience was treated to a rough trailer for American Buffalo, which will be released this summer, and Corrente then welcomed questions.

When asked about other movie directors, he responded, “Hal Ashby is my favorite. Few people realize the wide range of his work, including films such as Shampoo, Coming Home, Being There, and 8 Million Ways to Die.” Corrente plans to direct a wide variety of movies himself, some of which he’ll write. His next project will be another “small” movie with a big star—Sylvester Stallone. Stallone liked Federal Hill and decided he wanted to get back to doing that kind of work.

Corrente, who never went to film school himself, provided the audience with an enthraling look at the making of Hollywood. His story was both inspiring and daunting for potential filmmakers. “Film school is fine,” he said, “but don’t expect after graduation that someone will hand you $30 million and ask you to make a movie. Most of the film school graduates I know were production assistants on American Buffalo.”

actors. As usual, the skit was interrupted by Duane and Weekes using a tribble and a phaser.

When Sam’s final leap was complete, the running gag concluded that the whole thing was case of mistaken identity. The cast then reunited and were applauded by the audience. Two writers not appearing in the show, Craig Klein and Eric Lamendola, were also thanked for their hard work.
Fargo: Murder and Comedy in the Heartland

by John Springman

Fargo is a new black comedy/murder mystery by Joel and Ethan Coen (Raising Arizona). It's received rave reviews from critics, but may be less enthusiastically greeted by the public. To me, Fargo is an Oscar-sweeping tour de force—minus about 15 minutes of film. It's a great ride that ends before it goes off the rails. The film is well worth seeing but shortchanges the audience by not showing us any of these events affect the characters.

Fargo begins with Jerry Lundegaard (William H. Macy), an embroiling car salesman from Minneapolis, arranging the kidnapping of his wife, so he can get money out of his rich father-in-law. He travels to Fargo, North Dakota and hires two low-life scum to carry out the deed. As it turns out, the plan goes awry, and a series of murders is the result.

A midnight phone call wakes expectant mother Margie Gunderson (Frances McDormand) and her husband. He gentry insists on making her eat something before she goes off to work, and we discover that she's the local chief of police, who will be investigating the murders. Margie is one of the most endearing characters I've ever seen in movies—a cross between your fantasy mom and Columbo. I relished watching her flawlessly reconstruct the sequence of events at a crime scene, and laughed as she gentry pointed out to her slow-witted husband that "DLR" license plates on a brand new car probably stands for "dealer." McDormand has created a character who's open-faced, gentle, intelligent, and courageous. I don't know if the Coens are up for a sequel, but I'd love to see more of her.

In a good black comedy there are moments when you don't know whether to laugh or scream. Fargo's kidnapping scene is a classic example: Jean Lundegaard tries to hide from the would-be abductors in the shower, is discovered and flees through the house entangled in her shower curtain, before plunging down the front stairs—the Three Stooges meet Hitchcock. The kidnappers themselves are a memorable pair, a weird looking chatterbox (Steve Buscemi) and his silent but deadly partner.

Style and plot are the Coen brothers' strengths as filmmakers; at times they tend to look down on their characters. I don't think that's the case in Fargo. Many of the characters are of Swedish descent and are portrayed as simple, straightforward souls who say ya a lot, but Margie is one of them and she's the heart of the film. I doubt that the Swedish-American Student Organization will picket this movie.

The Coen brothers' films often have a unique and beautiful look. Fargo is visually very bright, with much of the action taking place in snow. There's a wonderful overhead shot of a car and several lamposts in a snow-covered lot that could be framed as a work of art. It's a pleasure to watch these images, and when they're combined with a riveting plot and a great character, we have a real treat on our hands.

However, when Fargo ended, I felt cheated. We're given a brief glimpse of Margie with her husband, but don't really find out how these senseless killings have affected her. We see Jerry Lundegaard being pitifully hauled off to jail, but how does he feel about setting these events in motion? The characters are supposed to be emotitional Swedes, but I think the Coen brothers are hiding behind that stereotype, so they don't have to deal with these human issues.

Fargo has a great visual style and a strong story, and thanks to McDormand, a wonderful character. We deserved to find out more about her, but it's a strong movie that leaves you hungry for more. Fargo earns an "A."

by John J. O’Sullivan

Although it may seem that I, John J. O’Sullivan, spend entirely way too much time typing in all of your senseless Personals™ all day long five days a week, I actually find time nowadays to go to beautiful Panzer™ Gym to go and work out.

STOP LAUGHING! STOP LAUGHING, DAMMIT! STOP LAUGHING!

Yes, even though I look like I have the body of an eighth grader, I go and work out four days a week and lift rather large things over my head until my arms fall off. When my arms fall off, I go on the stationery bike until my legs fall off. After that, I limp out of the gym in my good old reliable Radio Flyer™ Red Wagon, which I have hooked up to a V8 Engine, which, needless to say, is a whole lot of fun.

The only problem that I have with the whole experience is this: There are people who are entirely way too strong in that place. When I walk in, I feel like a Smart™. There are all of these “Arnold” guys walking around, sans necks. Once they walk in, they do their 23,458,975,483,967,894,375,897,423 pound reps, pick up a few cars, and then talk to the women floating around beautiful Panzer gym. They are really confident, in a built guy sort of way. Their conversations with women sound something like this:

Built guy: Hey, what exercise are you doing? Do you want me to spot you?
Incredibly Attractive Woman: Um, well, I’m doing lifts and stuff. I guess (giggle) if you want too, you can watch me (hehehehchc).
Built guy: Cool; afterwards you can watch me pick up the Student Center...okay?
Incredibly Attractive Woman: Okay, I’d love too (giggle).

Me: Argh ummmmmm heh hch heh argh. (Drool)
Incredibly Attractive Woman: I’ll be over there...and wipe that drool off of your chin.

Me: Argh ummmm heh heh argh. (Drool)
Incredibly Attractive Woman: Okay, I'd love too (giggle).

Built guy: Cool; afterwards you can watch me pick up the Student Center...okay?
Me: 1 thought so. Pass the popcorn

Me: WHERE AM I??? WHERE AM I???
My Imagination: You’re at pastures new.

Meanwhile on pastures new...

Me: WHERE AM I??? WHERE AM I???
My Imagination: You’re at pastures new.

My Imagination: I don’t know, you used the damn saying.
Me: What is this, am I going insane.
My Imagination: You’re at pastures new.

I do enjoy the self-torture though; it is really fun to race against the stationary bike computer. I do it all the time. It is really cool. Yeah. The only thing that I avoid like the plague is the NordicTrac™. I refuse to do the NordicTrac™. The last time I tried it, I nearly killed myself. I started tripping off of the damn thing, and looked like I was walking around MSU during the winter. The crazy gym guy pointed out where I was nearly killed myself. I started tripping off of the damn thing, and looked like I was walking around MSU during the winter. The crazy gym guy pointed out where I was I’ve got an idea. How about if I just tell me when your done.

Me: Argh unmmmm heh heh heh argh. (Drool)
Incredibly Attractive Woman: I’ll be over there...and wipe that drool off of your chin.

Meanwhile on pastures new...

Me: WHERE AM I??? WHERE AM I???
My Imagination: You’re at pastures new.

Me: Who are all of these cows, and why are they looking at me?
My Imagination: I don’t know, you used the damn saying.
Me: What is this, am I going insane.
My Imagination: Yep

Me: I thought so. Pass the popcorn
My Imagination: Ok.
Cow: Moo.
Mad Cow: Moo. DAMN YOU FOR CUTTING ME UP, YOU WILL PAY! Moo.

John J. O’Sullivan is going insane. Please pass the popcorn.

The word for today is: paternoster lake.

Safety Tip #61648392a:
If you make toast, do not do it in a bathtub, or else...wait is this actually necessary for me to say this?? Doesn’t common sense prevail in such matters? Okay, let me put it this way: If you have even considered making toast in a tub, DO IT!! You are dirtying up the gene pool. Hand in your keys, you’re fired.

Aries (Mar. 21 – Apr. 19) The rich, smooth taste of fine Carolina tobacoo should be savored at all possible costs.

Taurus (Apr. 20 – May 20) These jerks at the Surgeon General’s office are nuts if they think nicotine gum is a substitute for a Lucky Strike.

Gemini (May 21 – June 21) For God’s sake, keep sweets out of the house when you’re kicking the habit or you’ll blimp out like Violet Beauregard.

Cancer (June 22 – July 22) Cancer, schmancer! Is life really worth living if you can’t enjoy a butt or two with coffee?

Leo (July 23 – Aug. 22) The stars say you’ll enjoy a week-long cry-over just when you give up smoking. Make that two weeks.

Virgo (Aug. 23 – Sept. 22) The thoughtless phish who coined the phrase “coffin nail” has obviously ignored the cigarette’s many life-giving powers.

Libra (Sept. 23 – Oct. 22) Tell those nonsmoking fascists at work to lay off the wisecracks. Can’t they see how you’re suffering?

Scorpio (Oct. 23 – Nov. 21) So what’s the harm of smoking a cigar every once in a while? It’s not crack, for corn’s sake.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 – Dec. 21) The nicotine patch was a complete bust. I didn’t feel so thing. Hell, I’d need a damn nicotine body suit to compensate for my habit.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 – Jan. 19) Despite what the ads say, hypnosis and subliminal tapes don’t work. They just make you crave expensive imported Turkish brands.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 – Feb. 18) Wait, I’ve got an idea. How about if I cut back to three packs a day from my usual five? Or if I just promise to stop digging half-finished bars out of the ashtray?

Pisces (Feb. 19 – Mar. 20) Can’t you see where you hid my Cam—Lucy! Tell me where you hid my Camouflage tutor?

Look, if you think a talking stuffed moose is pretty amazing, listen to this. I was hanging out with some of the boys the other evening. One of them just bought a new Macintosh. Evidently, Apple is offering incredibly low campus prices on Macintosh computers right now. So he pops in this CD-ROM. Man, you wouldn't believe what this thing could do. No wonder the Mac is one of the most advanced multimedia computers. We're talking sight, sound, full-motion video—the works. Gee, wish I could move like that.

This week in Red Hawk Sports

As compiled by the Red Hawk Sports Department

Weather causes havoc for Red Hawk Sports

Towards the end of March, the weather began to show a glimpse of the warmer Spring days that are expected by all. And then, snow and rain bombarded Montclair State Athletics. Rain and high winds canceled the Men's tennis match against Jersey City State College on March 29th and that was just the beginning of the adverse weather conditions.

The Red Hawk baseball team had two games against Frostburg (Md.) and Albright later in the year are the two being credited to Junior McOmish (Montclair) with two goals and Chris Frowbridge (Boonton) with two goals and one assist. Next up for the Red Hawks is a game versus NY Maritime on April 10 at 4:00 PM.

Men's Lacrosse a loss a heartbreaker in overtime

The men's lacrosse team traveled to Drew University last night and put up a strong fight before losing in overtime 11-10.

MSU (1-6) led at halftime 6-5 and at the end of the third quarter 10-8. In the fourth quarter, Drew (4-3) moved within one goal, scoring a power play goal just :54 seconds into the period. They tied the game up at 10 goals a piece when they scored the period. They tied the game up at 10 goals a piece when they scored another two," said Roof. He then added "This was also key because we've had so much time between games, (one week) this got us going again."

The Red Hawks open their NJAC schedule, looking to even up their record in the season. The Hawks are the two time defending NJAC champions and are ready and eager to defend their title.

"This was another big win for us within the Mid Atlantic region. We play four key out of conference games within the region, after the Allentown win, we are 2-0 in those games (out of conference). York and Albright later in the year are the State on March 29th and 30th canceled. They played on March 26th against Allentown (PA.) College and did not resume action until Tuesday when they posted a 13-5 win over Elizabethtown (PA.) College. Weather permitting, the 5-6 Red Hawks will travel to Jersey City State College to open up their NJAC schedule, looking to even up their record in the process. The first pitch of the afternoon is scheduled for 3:30.

Baseball, con't from back cover

In the fourth inning of the contest. This home run was only the second for the Hawks on the season, with the other being credited to Junior Center fielder Mike Mullane (Bayonne). Senior Tom Yelliis (Wallington) continued his good hitting with a two-hit, two-RBI day for the Hawks. The Hawks got off to a fast start, putting Elizabethtown down early with three runs in the second inning, and put away the game in the fifth with a five-run outburst.

Softball from back cover

They play on Saturday at Trenton State. Game time is at 1:00 PM. The Spring sports schedule looked like it would be exciting on paper, and now with more cancellations than games played, coaches, players, and fans can only hope that brighter days are ahead to enjoy the rest of the season.

Gray box denotes home game

no games scheduled this week

It's going to be quite a spring

by Tom Tracy

It seems as though the Mets are a doomed rather than destined team when it comes to discussing the possibility of their season extending into the post-season. This is mostly because of the horrible news they received when it was discovered that the elbow that had been bothering starting pitcher Bill Pulsipher since the middle of March contained a torn ligament.

One thing that this injury does is make General manager Joe McIlvane look like a genius for trading away Ryan 'I will never live up to my expectations' Thompson and Reid Cornelius to the Cleveland Indians for starting pitcher Mark Clark. He is a solid starter who while not being able to replace the loss of Pulsipher will still be able to give the Mets quality innings during the season. Hey, who knows? When it comes to the Mets you never know what to expect.

Congratulations to the Kentucky Wildcats, I guess, even though you beat my beloved Syracuse Orangemen. As long as I don’t see any clips of Kentucky players gloating over an "easy" win, then I think I should be able to get over the loss in about three years or so.

Seriously though, the Orangemen put forth a valiant effort in attempting to derail the Wildcat express, with John Wallace showing that he is definitely ready for the NBA. I’ve always liked Wildcat coach Rick Pitino, this is a well deserved win for him that just might springboard him back into a head coaching job in the NBA. Maybe a return to the Knicks? Wishful thinking.

Speaking of the Knicks, as long as they don’t have to play the Magic, Bulls, Sonics, or Spurs in the playoffs, then I think they will have a 50-50 shot at winning the title. Give them some credit for their win over the Pacers a few nights ago, but unless this team really gels down the stretch and stops the internal bickering, it looks like the end of an era in New York. So long Patrick Ewing, see ya in Miami.

On a local note, watch out for the Red Hawk baseball team. After a sluggish start in Florida, the Hawks have pulled it together and look every bit like they can three-peat in the NJAC as they open up their conference schedule today.

Kudos as well to the softball team, who at 15-2 also appear to be poised to pounce on the rest of the NJAC this season.

MONTCLARION 27
Only bad weather slows the Red Hawks as they near the .500 mark
by Kevin Culley

The weather has continued to affect the 1996 Montclair State Baseball team. The Red Hawks were scheduled to play two games this past weekend in Frostburg, Maryland against Frostburg State. Unfortunately, Mother Nature decided to step in and reek havoc with the schedule for the second time this season. Thursday brought high winds and rain to the Mid Atlantic region and blanketed it with a covering of snow last Friday. That was enough to cancel the Frostburg games, the third and fourth games snowed out this season. Head Coach Norm Schoenig scrambled around looking for an opponent to play. Schoenig called teams from Virginia to upstate New York, but was unable to schedule a game to replace the Frostburg games.

The next opponent for the Red Hawks was a tough Elizabethtown, Pa. College team who came into the game with an 11-5 record. The Hawks were able to win in convincing fashion 13-5 improving their record to 5-6 in the process.

Senior co-captain Brian Cordiero (Matawan) started the game on the hill for the Red Hawks. The left hander was in control of the game from the start, striking out nine batters while walking four and giving up no runs in seven innings of work. Senior Todd Sak (Edison) entered the game in the eighth inning in relief and subsequently gave up three runs. Sophomore Adam Liccardo (Wayne) relieved Sak in the ninth and gave up two runs. Freshman Brad Bava (Edison) then came out of the pen and closed out the game for the Red Hawks. Cordiero was credited with his first victory of the season, after going 9-1 last season. His record now stands at 1-1.

The Red Hawks were in control the whole way and never trailed. On the offensive side of the ball, highlights for the Hawks were a two run single by defending NJAC RBI champion Chris Roof (Berekely Heights) and a two run double by stalwart catcher C.B. Leon (Bogota). Freshman first baseman Shawn McCorke (Newton) hit the first home run of his career please see baseball, p. 26

MSU softball loses to Mother Nature, then loses to Allegheny (PA.) College 6-4
by Brian Brodsky

Much like the baseball team, the softball team has not fared well this year against Mother Nature. The team has had five games canceled this year due to inclement weather. The Montclair State University-Kean College Softball Classic, one of the most competitive in-season tournaments in New Jersey, was scheduled for March 29th and 30th, was canceled due to four inches of snow.

Poor field conditions down on Sprague field sent the 15-1 Red Hawks to Kean College in southern New Jersey, where they lost 6-4 to Allegheny (PA.) College. The loss snapped MSU's eight game winning streak.

Senior pitcher Robyn Baron (West Milford) started the game for the Red Hawks and wound up losing for only the second time this season. She pitched six innings, giving up six runs on ten hits while walking three and striking out seven. Her record now stands at 9-2 for the year.

Despite the losing effort, a strong performance was turned in by Junior shortstop Ro Guzzi (Long Branch). She had three hits in four trips to the plate, collecting one run batted in. She also stole two bases and scored a run. Denise Warnock (Kearney) had the only other hit of the game for the Red Hawks.

Lately, the weather has been changing rapidly from warm and sunny to cold and rainy; no one knows what to expect anymore. MSU is scheduled to play a double-header today against FDU Madison at 3:30 PM. Then please see softball, p. 26
