Wilcox leaving MSU for Georgia Tech

by Keri Dwyer
Staff Writer

Vice President for Student Development and Campus Life, Lee Wilcox will be leaving Montclair State University in early June.

Wilcox is scheduled to leave after serving Montclair State for three years and join the faculty at the Georgia Institute of Technology, commonly called Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

Wilcox has been in charge of overseeing many departments at the university. Those include Admissions, Campus Safety and Security, Dean of Students, Financial Aid, Registrars Office, Intra-Collegiate Academic Programs, Residence Life, and the Student Center. He has been responsible for the many programs within each department.

He has also acted as a liaison between the students and the administration. Wilcox would meet regularly with the Student Government Association President and try to represent student interests within the university administration.

Wilcox, who received his undergraduate degree from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, N.Y. and his Ph.D. from the University of Minnesota, worked at Rensselaer for 14 years before coming to MSU where he held the position of Vice President for Student Affairs.

Once at Georgia Tech, he will assume the role of Vice President for Student Affairs. He will be responsible for overseeing many of the same departments as here at Montclair State.

"It will be a new challenge at a world class university," Wilcox said. "It will be a capstone experience for me. I have worked at technical universities and public universities and Georgia Tech is the country’s best technical public university. It seemed like a once in a lifetime opportunity."

"It will be a tremendous loss," said President Irvin Reid. He has the ability to organize and to be able to work toward a common goal," said Reid. "I wanted someone who shared my vision of what student services should be. Dr. Wilcox shared my view of what student life should be. Taking the position at Georgia Tech was a very difficult decision for Dr. Wilcox but a wonderful opportunity. His contributions will be valued for many years to come," said Reid.

"Losing Dr. Wilcox is like losing one of the biggest assets to this school," said John Cvelic, Student Government Association President. Continued on p. 3

by Kevin P. Hancock

Proof that you are an MSU student will now be required if you wish to use a campus computer lab in order to prevent non-MSU students from using them, said Charles Fraser of Academic Computing.

Prior to the change anyone could enter and use the services of MSU’s computer labs as no proof of enrollment was required.

The change comes after numerous complaints that MSU students were being prevented from using computers by people who do not even attend the university.

Suggestions by SGA legislators and complaints aired by students convinced Academic Computing to order lab assistants to start checking I-cards, said Director of Academic Computing, Clifford Gillman.

"Basically we were under pressure from the SGA and students that there were too many off-campus people using the labs,” said Fraser.

Lab assistants started requesting I-cards from students entering campus computer labs on Monday. If a student does not have their I-card with them, they can also log on to their Alpha E-mail account to prove they are an MSU student, said Fraser.

“We are doing our best to serve Montclair students so we are making sure only Montclair students enter the labs,” said Gilman.

Dream trip turns into nightmare for students

The sisters from Phi Sigma Sigma would like to send a big warning to all of Montclair State’s students - be cautious of what you read on the promotional flyers on campus.

The Phi Sigma Sigma sisters from Montclair State University, along with many other students from other universities, learned their lesson the hard way when a much anticipated spring break vacation turned to a disaster.

The company they learned about after reading a flyer they found on campus, Take-A-Break, promised them a great deal and a stress-free vacation, said Donna Batista, a sophomore travel and tourism major.

Batista is determined to fight back because Take-A-Break did not deliver what they claimed. Rather, Take-A-Break constantly changed her and her sisters’ travel dates, abruptly canceled their flight home, and made them endure countless inconveniences.

She has hired a lawyer and intends to do all she can to retrieve the $600 she and her friends each had to spend to get flights home from other airlines after Take-A-Break canceled their flight home.

Apparently these blunders are not firsts for Take-A-Break, according to Jackie Ruege and Kim Andreuzzi, who went to Panama City with Take-A-Break last spring break. Ruege said they their hotel was encircled by yellow caution banners and the pool was full of glass and beer cans.

For the Phi Sigma Sigma sisters

The Montclarion is published weekly, except during examinations, summer and winter sessions. It is funded in part by student fees distributed by the Student Government Association, Inc. of Montclair State University. The views expressed in the opinion section, with the exception of the main editorial, do not necessarily reflect the views of The Montclarion.
The latest Student Government Association meeting was highlighted by further discussion regarding the student strike on April 15. Also, the legislature passed two appropriation bills, as well as a Class Four charter.

The legislature passed two appropriations for Gallery 3 1/2, a Class Three organization. The organization was granted money to hold a gallery opening and to cover the cost of a prize for a graphic design contest. On April 23, from 4:00 to 6:00 PM, the organization will be having a photography exhibition of pictures taken by students. The funds granted by the legislature will be used to cover refreshments and refreshments for the event.

The organization was also granted $100 for a prize for a contest in which students submit designs for a logo for the organization. In addition to the prize money, the winner will also have his or her design used as the official logo of Gallery 3 1/2. The logo will be used on all stationery and promotion materials for the organization.

Lambda Theta Phi was granted a Class Four Charter for the academic years 1997-1999.

During the student open forum, at the beginning of the meeting, student Joseph Paternoster brought forth concerns that the student protest on April 15 was not being planned and organized properly. Paternoster claimed, "In order for this to work, egos need to be set aside. We're students first, then SGA President and Legislator and nobody." Paternoster said that the SGA needs to take better advantage of resources besides students. "If you contact your parents, you'll get at least one lawyer and one accountant, and they'll be mad as hell." Paternoster said that the event may not be as successful as hoped, due to the fact that when he contacted the office of the Governor, he was told that Governor Whitman had not even heard of the event.

Earlier, President Amy Fisher mentioned that she had spoken to Joan Ficke, and the response from the teacher's union seemed supportive of the students. Fisher further mentioned that the University Senate had unanimously voted down a proposal to support a tuition raise for next year. Finally, the times and locations for the upcoming elections were announced by Attorney General Greg MacSweeney. On Wednesday, April 16, the polls will open at 8:00 a.m. The polls will be open all day on April 16, 17, and 21, being open from 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. On Wednesday, April 23, the polls will close for good at 5:00 p.m. The polls will be open on Saturday, April 19, from 8:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m., and will be open on Sunday, April 20, from 5:00 to 8:00 p.m. Polls will be open on both Friday, April 18, and Tuesday, April 22. All undergraduates are eligible and encouraged to vote. The President, Vice President, Treasurer, Secretary, and Board of Trustee Alternate for next year will be elected.

Lambda Theta Phi was granted a Class Four Charter for the academic years 1997-1999.

The worst part was knowing that they knew since Saturday night that they didn't have a plane. They put us through hell.

- Donna Batista

Sisters this spring break, things began to go wrong right from the start. Their vacation was scheduled to begin on Sunday, March 16, and they were to depart from Newark Airport on Sunworld Airlines. However, Take-A-Break moved their flight to Friday, March 14, departing from JFK airport in New York City. After arriving at JFK, a damper was put on their spirits when no one they asked had ever heard of Sunworld Airlines. After much confusion they were informed of their travel agency, Tropical Tours, that Take-A-Break had pushed the flight back to Sunday, because of "bad weather in the Bahamas." Batista recalls returning home and checking a newspaper to confirm Take-A-Break's excuse. She said, "When I checked the newspaper, it was 82 degrees (at Bahamas)."

But that was only the beginning. On their return home, they were originally scheduled to leave on Sunday, March 23 at 12 a.m., and then it was changed to March 23 at 5 a.m. At about 4:40 a.m. that morning, when it was time to board, someone got on the intercom and said that their flight was definitely delayed. About five minutes later, someone said, "Your flight is definitely canceled." The person than asked everyone to go back to their hotels. Since everyone had already packed out, people went into a panic.

Batista said that when that was announced, "people started crying, people started screaming, and everyone went nuts." Since the girls did not know for certain whether they would have a flight home or not at the time, they bought tickets from other airlines to get to Newark. This is the expense Batista hopes to compensate for.

Cindy Loffa, a sophomore and a commercial recreation major, was one of the sisters who went on the trip. She was told from a travel agent she knows that the reason why there was so much trouble getting flights to and from Bahamas was because Take-A-Break's plane, the AL Atlantic, had been grounded by the FAA because the 30 hour delay explains its absence from the schedule, an airport official said. It is not clear then why Take-A-Break did not inform their clients of this delay sooner.

Michelle Hanusi, a freshman studying early childhood education, is also a Phi Sigma Sigma sister, who went on the trip along with Jalinda Briggs and Shil Cooperstein, also MSU students. They stayed behind to wait for the Take-A-Break charter flight to come in, and it took 41 hours for it to arrive, Hanusi said. She and the others were sent back to their hotels, and were provided with drinks but no food. Luckily, she and her friends had enough money to buy something to eat.

They finally got their flight home at 10:00 p.m. on Monday, when it should have been at 5:00 a.m. on Sunday. The pilot on the flight said a problem with the plane caused the delay, but Hanusi was forced to miss her classes on Monday and Tuesday because of the inconvenience.

Other problems they faced ranged from an unkempt hotel to lost luggage. Jackie Ruege, a senior and a history education major, explained that once they finally arrived at the Bahamas, they were taken to an orientation at Take-A-Break's office at the Bahamas.

There, the clients would be told the details of their trip, such as their itinerary. Ruege had been a trip leader since 1994, and knew that the office was only open from 9:00 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., and that to make arrangements they were not going to be told anything until the next plane flew in, because they did not want to repeat the speech.

The Towne Hotel, where they were staying, had problems of its own. The bathroom doors and windows were broken, and there was construction right across the street. Ruege said, "The pool was the size of a credit card."
In Memory of Yvonne Charmion Collins

BY SUZY CINEUS
THE BLUE AND WHITE FAMILY

Yvonne Charmion Collins was born March 4, 1974 in Atlanta, Georgia. She is the beloved daughter of Rev. Henry C. Collins and Patricia Ann Paden. Yvonne attended Public Schools in Tallahassee, Florida, Lawrenceville and Willingboro, New Jersey. She is a 1992 graduate of Willingboro High School where she was an honor roll student and cheerleader.

Upon graduating from Willingboro High School, Yvonne won many academic and extracurricular awards. In September 1992 she began Pre-med studies in the Health Careers program at Montclair State University. She was completing her last semester for the Degree of Bachelor of Science.

On the morning of March 10, 1997 Yvonne was found unconscious and was rushed to Rancocas Hospital. Doctors determined that she had internal bleeding in the brain. On March 14, 1997, Yvonne was pronounced as deceased.

Yvonne was a loving person who tried to bring love into the lives of everyone she touched. She gave the greatest gift, LOVE. Her radiance will surely be missed on earth, but God will surely enhance her radiance in Heaven.

A Tribute

May 16, 1997 - Commencement ceremonies will take place. Caps will be thrown, balloons will be raised accompanied by shouts of rejoicing from graduates, friends, family, siblings and sights of relief escape from the lips of parents and spouses. So it will go from every department except for one, the Biology department. This is not to say that they will not rejoice, not at all. They will reflect and remember their dear friend and classmate Yvonne Collins. When the Biology department stands, watch them. They will stand a little bit taller because they have lost and this had made them appreciate what they have gained.

Their hearts are all beating under their gowns in anticipation. Unfortunately, for all that were blessed to know her, they realize that one heart is missing. One heart has ceased. Yet her spirit, her memory, and her laugh lives on. This is why the Biology department and the Health Careers Program students will stand taller, because Yvonne is with them. I have witnessed the power of Yvonne or "Tweety" as we call her. She has bridged the gap between race, color, and majors to bring together persons who would have never spoken before. She has also solidified the union between those of us who are sisters and brothers. I, WE, personally thank you and remember her spirit, her memory, and her laugh.

Drug arrests up on campuses

BY COLLEEN DEBAISE
COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

WASHINGTON — Drug arrests on college campuses have soared in recent years, but that's due to more strict enforcement than a growing number of users, say campus officials.

Drug arrests jumped 18 percent in 1995, marking the fourth year in a row with a double-digit increase in arrests, according to an annual survey of 500 colleges by the Chronicle of Higher Education.

There were 6,797 drug arrests and 15,208 alcohol violations, confirming campus officials' impressions that alcohol is by far the biggest substance abuse problem. Overall, however, alcohol arrests rose only about 1 percent from 1994.

The Chronicle survey found that incidences of other crimes dropped in 1995, which paralleled national trends. There were 15 murders, down from 16 in 1994; 1,038 robberies, down from 1,157; and 16,011 burglaries, down from 16,789.

But the number of sex offenses rose to 973, up from 955 in 1994.

Colleges that receive federal funds are required by the 1990 Student Right-to-Know and Campus Security Act to disclose campus crime statistics. For its survey, the Chronicle analyzed data from only the largest universities—those with more than 5,000 students.

Most of the drug arrests involving LSD and cocaine were slightly higher, the survey found.

Eleven colleges reported more than 100 drug arrests in 1995: Arizona State, Michigan State, Northern Arizona and San Jose State universities; Rutgers University at New Brunswick and the universities of Arizona, California at Berkeley, Maryand at College Park, Michigan at Ann Arbor, North Carolina at Greensboro, and Wisconsin at Madison. The largest jump was at Northern Arizona, where drug arrests increased by 40 percent in 1994, then 70 percent in 1995.

But according to Larry Barnett, director of the university police department, the high numbers resulted from aggressive enforcement. By 1996, the number of drug arrests at NAU had dropped 23 percent.

"The first thing we did when we recognized there was an increase in alcohol and drug violations was involve the [campus] community," he said. A few

ALARMS:

3/25 - A fire alarm was triggered in Finley Hall. When the officers arrived, they found that the alarm was accidentally set off by a maintenance worker.

3/26 - A Bohn Hall resident set off the fire alarm after seeing some of her ex-boyfriend’s friends in the dorm. She felt that they were there to harm her.

3/27 - Two false fire alarms were sounded in Bohn Hall. The first was caused by an activated pull station on the ninth floor, the second was a pull station on the eighth floor. The Clifton Fire Department responded to both alarms.

3/31 - A fire alarm was triggered in Mallory Hall by water leaking into a mechanical room shorting out an elevator panel. Many sink faucets were found running in the two of the food labs. Ceiling tiles were damaged in rooms on the first and second floor. The alarm system couldn’t be reset, and the building was placed on a fire watch.

MEDICAL:

3/17 - A construction worker in Finley Hall was injured when an electrical box fell on his foot. He was transported to Mountainside Hospital by ambulance.

3/25 - A young boy cut his head on a door frame at the Psychological Education Center on Clover Road. First aid was given, and his mother took him to their family doctor.

3/26 - A woman fainted in the bathroom at the Du mont TV Center. She was suffering flu-like symptoms. She refused medical attention, and returned to her room in Bohn Hall.

3/26 - A maintenance worker fell from his ladder while he was fixing a light fixture in the Student Center, and injured his ankle. He was brought to the Health Center.

3/27 - A Blanton Hall resident experienced chest pains and shortness of breath. She was brought by ambulance to St. Joseph’s Hospital.

3/30 - A Blanton Hall resident was injured when she moved a chair in her room. A splinter off of the chair stuck in her thigh. An EMT treated her at the scene.

4/1 - A Stone Hall resident cut his tow while walking barefoot in the stage area of the Speech Building. He refused medical attention.

THEFT:

3/25 - An art object was stolen from the first floor hallway of Calcia Hall.

3/26 - A 1987 Dodge Omni was stolen from Lot 23.

3/26 - A Stone Hall resident reported that money was taken from her desk drawer.

3/27 - A Blanton Hall resident had clothes stolen from a third floor laundry dryer.

3/27 - A Stone Hall resident reported money was missing from her desk for a second time.

3/31 - A Bohn Hall resident had two video games and some food stolen from his locked room after returning from Easter Break.

3/31 - A 1998 Honda was stolen from Lot 27.

CRIMINAL MISCHIEF/HARASSMENT:

3/25 - A pane of glass was broken near an inner hallway door in Richardson Hall. An overturned garbage can was on the floor nearby.

3/26 - Three female Clove Road residents received harassing and threatening phone calls.

3/26 - Male roommates received harassing phone calls over a three week period.

3/28 - A male saw spotted removing a parking sign from the ground, and a description of the man was obtained. The sign was later recovered inside an apartment hallway. The suspect couldn’t be found.

3/31 - A man parked his 1995 Lexus in Lot 25 on March 27. When he returned home, his father found that the passenger side door lock was damaged.

3/31 - A Blanton Hall resident received harassing phone calls for the past three weeks.

OTHER:

3/15 - A vehicle was stopped for a motor vehicle violation on Quarry Road. Hernan Caques of Kearny was arrested on an outstanding warrant from Little Falls. He was transported to and left in the custody of the Little Falls Police Department.

3/20 - A passing motorist alerted officers to an accident on Clove Road at Route 46. Little Falls Police Dept. was contacted, and MSU officers assisted in traffic control.

3/24 - An officer gave Wayne Police Department with information on property stolen from MSU. Wayne PD arrested a male for the possession of the stolen property.

3/25 - An ex-boyfriend of a Bohn Hall Resident refused to leave the dorm room. Her roommate called the police, but the suspect left the room before police arrived.

3/27 - A Blanton Hall resident set off the fire alarm after seeing some of her ex-boyfriend’s friends in the dorm. She felt that they were there to harm her.

3/31 - A man parked his 1995 Lexus in Lot 25 on March 27. When he returned home, his father found that the passenger side door lock was damaged.

many years ago, Barnett started the Campus Safety Aides programs, in which students with police radios and mountain bikes patrol areas that police cars can’t reach. “They’re a real strong deterrent to rapes and that sort of thing,” he said. “The students have come across students smoking marijuana. They’re basically the eyes and ears of the police department.”

The 20 Campus Safety Aides are paid by the university, and those who are criminal justice majors can receive course credit. But Barnett, like other campus officials, reports that an increasing number of students are growing intolerant of their peers’ drug use. “We saw a significant increase in students reporting other students using drugs,” he said. There were 133 drug arrests in 1995, up from 78 the previous year, and many tips came from students sick of drug use in their dorms,” he said.

NAU also increased its police patrols during “peak hours” to crack down on offenders. Eight police officers now patrol the campus during the prime time for student parties, weekend nights from 9 p.m. to 2 a.m.

At University of Wisconsin at Madison, arrests rose from 99 in 1994 to 126 the following year. Campus officials say that’s because university police beefed up patrols of a parking lot where most of the drug activity seemed to originate.

Campus officials told the Chronicle that many kinds of campus crime can be linked to drug and alcohol use. “You are not as likely to get in a fight if you aren’t high,” Alan J. Lizotte, executive director of the Consortium for Higher Education Campus Crime Research at the State University of New York at Albany told the newspaper. “You’re not as likely to be raped. If you get rid of sellers, you get rid of unsavory characters and keep students from being victimized.”

At NAU, the university police department cracked down on drug and alcohol abuse with the idea that “we would be able to reduce the likelihood of sexual assault,” Barnett said. The number of reported rapes at NAU dropped from six in 1994, to two per year in 1995 and 1996.

The Chronicle cautioned that the data collected from the reports may understate campus crime. Many universities do not include crimes that are reported to officials other than the police—such as deans or counselors—even though the law requires them to do so, the Chronicle said. Also, the reports only include crimes that occur on campuses, the newspaper said.

Health Fair emphasizes a new state of mind and body

BY VICTORIA TENGELICS
ASSISTANT CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

My blood pressure is 126/72 and I am in average shape for a woman my age. I found this out at the Health Fair, which kicked off Wellness Week on Wednesday. Information on everything from high blood pressure to drug abuse was offered at the booths set up in the Student Center Ballrooms.

The Department of Health Professions, Physical Education, Recreation and Leisure Studies held a fitness evaluation and being a health conscious person I decided to see how I rate. There were many other students getting their fitness levels evaluated too. First they took my blood pressure which was pretty good; high blood pressure is 140/90 or higher.

Flexibility was the next test I found out that I am pretty inflexible. To test for this you have to sit on the floor with your legs straight forward and reach as far forward as possible; I could barely reach beyond my toes.

Next they did the test that every woman dreads, they made me get on a scale. This was traumatic. Anyway I weigh... Not! That was not half as bad as when they checked my body fat ratio.

After that they conducted the exercise part of the evaluation, I had to sign a release to participate (in case you I was to pass out). They checked my heart rate and blood pressure again and then I got on an exercise bike while two people in white lab coats proceeded to take my blood pressure and heart rate while increasing the workload. At this point I felt like a lab rat.

At the conclusion of the test they went over the results with me and helped me design an exercise program. After I left there I decided to get my strength tested at the YMCA's table, all that working out is not paying off as much as it should be.

I also decided to take many of the quizzes that were offered such as the temper test, unfortunately for my friends and co-workers I have a bad temper. This could cause very bad health affects not to mention what it will do to my social status. I also found out that I am extremely stressed (a fact I already knew) so I picked up some pamphlets on breathing techniques and meditation. According to the Wellness Index, based on a questionnaire given out by the Center for The Health Services and Wellness Programs, I am not very well either.

A lot of information on AIDS was available; the health and wellness center is offering anonymous HIV testing on Friday between 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. (by appointment only). I also found lots of information about stress management and relaxation techniques (I really need this). There was also information on drug abuse, smoking and alcoholism and places to go to receive help here on campus along with private facilities and programs.

Information on other health problems such as depression, anorexia and overeating were also available. A warning on the date rape drug Rohypnol (Roofies) was handed out by the Wellspring Program. Misuse by people when using Roofies could cause death and incidents of the drug slipping into a woman's drink to have her not remember a sexual assault have also been reported.

Some of the health insurance companies had representatives attend, such as Aetna and HIP Health Plan. Hospice Care, a nonprofit organization designed to help care for the terminally ill, also had a table at the fair. Other organizations represented included the National Multiple Sclerosis Society and Mountainside Hospital.

Also, there will be a blood drive on Monday, April 7, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m., you don't need to register ahead of time, just stop in and donate.

I was very glad I attended the Health Fair, I received some important information on my health and how I can take better care of myself. There are many campus organizations that can help with any amount of problems that may occur in life. Diet and fitness are not the only important part of living healthy, state of mind has a direct impact on health and you may not even notice it.

How will the proposed tuition increase affect you?

“I have less money to spend on supplies for my art classes.”

“I’ll have to take out more loans. It’s hard on us.”

“My trip to Holland is going to be more difficult financially.”

“I don’t think it’s that bad, considering the cost of other schools.”

As the nation’s number one killer, heart disease takes the lives of 940,000 Americans each year—claiming one out of every two deaths. American men face a 42 percent chance of developing heart disease. However, heart disease is not just a male health problem. Half of all heart attack deaths occur in women; and more women die of heart disease than from any other cause.

Many factors contribute to the risk of developing heart disease. High blood pressure, diabetes, and too much cholesterol in the blood all can play a role. College students beware! Many of you probably have RIS (realize ignorance slowly) stamped across your foreheads. Consider the following point: In one minute it would take 45-50 beats of a well-conditioned heart to pump the same amount of blood as 70-75 beats of an inactive person’s heart. This would add up to over 36,000 more beats per day for an inactive heart. That adds up to more than 13 million more times per year!

Up to 40% of all deaths due to heart disease are directly attributable to smoking. A smoker has double a non-smoker’s risk of heart attack and is 70% likelier to die from it.

The truth is nothing changes a person’s lifestyle, more drastically, than a heart attack. A few weeks ago, my friend nearly lost her father. She had the experience of touching her father’s cold, lifeless body. To him the experience was something he “would never wish upon anyone.” He has since stopped smoking and claims he will be able to “Run a 100-yard dash faster than anyone of his daughter’s friends.”

We need a Features Editor for next year...come to the SC annex 113, Tuesday, April 8 @ 4 p.m. and get involved!!!!

Did you know?

Did you know that during its al most ninety-eight years of existence, Montclair State University has gone through seven presidents including the present Dr. Irvin Reid? Did you also know that beside Dr. Reid, there was another black American who contributed to the advancement of the University?

Dr. David W. D. Dickson, the fifth president, was born of hard-working Jamaican parents in 1919 in Portland. “I was fat, lazy, and did not walk or talk until I was eighteen months old,” said Dr. Dickson in his memoirs. At eighteen, he was considered an introvert with no real chance with the ladies. However, this born-introvert was later to enjoy four years of academic success at Bowdoin College as a debater, writer, and “winner of several speaking awards.”

After his years at Bowdoin, he was accepted on scholarship and fellowship at Harvard University in 1941. He enrolled in the English Literature doctoral program. There, his Jamaican American background did not improve his lot with either the faculty or some of the students, who questioned his presence there and the few other students like him. But that did not discourage him. “Harvard gave us a splendid education. If none of us grew to love the place, we all deeply appreciated its intellectual splendor,” he said. He graduated in 1948, after a brief interruption because of World War II.

After several posts as a professor at Michigan State University and Northern Michigan University, Dr. Dickson accepted the Presidency of Montclair State College in 1973. In his inaugural speech he delineated three conditions to honor a worthy college. The first was that an institution of higher education should have “an ultimate concern for truth” second, the institution should believe in “the wider human community” and third it should rejoice “in the abundant life of body, mind and spirit.”

Our seventh president, who was considered at the time of his appointment in 1989 by The Montclarion as “bubbly, exciting, educated, friendly, witty, and very cool,” seemed to share such a view. Montclair State, under his leadership has become a university and is ever increasingly opening its doors to students of all kinds, origins, and nationalities.

Life has a way of taking us in directions we never dreamed of. Look at 1993 Harvard Law School graduate Andrew Klein. He not only started the Spring Street Brewing Company, he also developed the first World Wide Web based stock market mechanism through which persons are able to trade shares without having to use brokers or pay commissions. Check out Klein’s business at http://plaza.interport.net/witbeer/ and his WitCapital Corporation at http://www.witcap.com/cap_1.htm.

I don’t know about you, but I’ve heard more than I care to about the Heavens Gate group. Early news reports mentioned that they created web sites about the tragic events labeled them as the Heaven’s Gate group. Early news reports heard more than I care to about the Heaven’s Gate group.

The Internet is no different than newspapers, magazines, TV, radio, etc., except that more people now have the opportunity to express their opinions publicly. Bomb recipes, terrorists, cults, and other weirdos all existed long before the rise of the net. This at least gives us a window through which to view them.

What about the news that doesn’t make Dan Rather’s list? A site called This Just In brings you the news you won’t find in the mainstream press at http://internet-plaza.net/zone/thisjustin/index.html. The stories are meant both to inform and to catalyze debate on topics that might never receive any press, e.g., the use of BGH (Bovine Growth Hormone) by chemical and agribusiness giants to increase production. BGH was being used on the University of Wisconsin’s own dairy herd. BGH-produced milk and dairy products were being served in the student union and university hospital, even though the FDA had not approved the drug for public use. Other topics covered by this site include Bosnia, Gay Rights, the environment, health care, and militias. See what you are missing!

It’s about time in the semester for a good laugh. Comics du Jour, http://internet-plaza.net/zone/comics/, brought a smile to my face. They include Cafe Angst, Fisher, USS Utopia, and my favorite, Ozone Patrol. You deserve a break!

Did you complete that income tax form yet? I know, you’d rather write a paper on the history of lint. Alas, it must be done! Get some help from a list of essential do-it-yourself sites for the savvy taxpayer (that’s you), http://www.zdnet.com/yil/content/profit/invest/tax_prep.html. Hopefully this will make it a little less painful. I don’t recommend visiting the IRS site, http://www.irs.treas.gov, unless you can do it early in the morning. We’re talking five a.m. - eight a.m. A couple weeks ago I tried to download a form only to get a message that said, “The IRS ftp server can handle 1200 requests simultaneously. If you are reading this message it means that more than 1200 people are attempting to access this server.” Early the next morning I was able to grab the form off the web in seconds. Timing is everything.

It is noted that last week the MSU Summer Session schedule was not yet available. I naturally checked the MSU home page - Summer Session link - ever the optimist that the info would be there. No such luck. Guess they are just not ready for that yet. By the time you are reading this the dead tree edition should be available. Scurse me while I go track it down! CU next week.

Dear Career Services... Q & A

Q I know the Career Fair is coming on April 5th. How can I get the most from it? I don’t want to waste this opportunity.

A The Career Fair has something to offer everyone, but what you gain and how you should prepare depends upon where you are in your education. If you are choosing a major and/or your career direction use the Fair to gather information. In this case, approach the employer, introduce yourself and explain that you are making academic and career decisions and would like to learn more about his/her organization and the opportunities available.

If you are job hunting, however, get prepared ahead of time. For starters, come to Career Services and watch our videotape on career fairs to learn how to present yourself effectively.

In addition: 1. Come to Career Services to pick up the list of employers who are coming to the Fair and learn the kinds of positions that are available. 2. Decide which employers you want to meet before the Fair. 3. Research those companies/organizations you are really excited about. Make sure your resume is ready. (If you have any questions regarding your resume, come to Career Services and have it critiqued before the Fair.)

At the Fair, Introduce yourself and ask questions such as: 1. How long before graduation should I send you a resume? 2. What kinds of skills and experience do you look for in the ideal candidate? 3. What kinds of jobs do liberal arts major s generally start out with? 4. How would you describe your organization’s culture? 5. Rehearse your introduction before the Fair so that you will speak with ease. 6. Feel free to ask for a business card after you have spoken to the recruiter. If you’ve hit it off and have spoken for some time, it would be smart to send a note, thanking the recruiter for his/her time and the information provided.

All sessions will be held in room 106 in the Student Center Annex.

Q I’ve heard that there are some computerized programs that I can use to help me figure out what career might be appropriate for me, but I don’t know anything about them. Does Career Services have anything like this?

A Absolutely! Career Services now has Focus, a computerized career and educational planning system that will help you assess your interests, work values, and academic strengths and explore occupations, educational programs and career paths which can satisfy your interests and needs.

Focus is comprised of six phases which take between 10 and 20 minutes to complete. Each phase is designed to tackle different career questions dealing with various stages of career development and you can begin your exploration at whichever phase is appropriate for you. Focus automatically prints out your results which you can then discuss with your career counselor.

Although Focus doesn’t have all the answers about your career future, it’s a great place to start. To take advantage of this excellent new resource, stop by soon!

The Real World by the students of the Cooperative Education Program

Since my senior year in high school, my life has been filled with dilemmas. At that time, I wasn’t sure what college or university I would attend. Once I chose to pursue my education at Montclair State University, I wasn’t sure what major I would enter. After I made the decision to major in Consumer Affairs, my next dilemma was what to do once I graduated. Since my major requires me to apply for Co-op, I thought this would be the perfect solution for my dilemma.

My first co-op position was at the NJ Division of Consumer Affairs, as the Special Aide to the Director. I assisted the director in handling monthly and fiscal year reports, assisted the Chief of Staff with the Elder Task Force, and attended many different board meetings.

Thanks to this experience, I was able to use my ability to network within my field.

My present co-op position, is at Rhyne Communications, as a Management Support Administrator. My duties at this company include handling telephone inquiries, customer service and light office duties.

Thanks to these two co-op experiences, I have gotten the chance to view two sides of the Consumer Affairs field; the governmental aspect of it (from the Division of Consumer Affairs) and the corporate aspect (from Rhyne Communications).

These two totally different views that have now created another dilemma in my life! Both the Division of Consumer Affairs and Rhyne Communications have offered me positions after I graduate. This is a dilemma, however, that I gladly welcome!

PIPPIN

call (201) 655-5112 for reservations
The magical musical Pippin opens in the Studio Theatre tonight, Thursday, April 3. This song and dance story of a young man’s quest for self-fulfillment is loosely based upon the life of the eldest son of Charlemagne, the emperor of the Holy Roman Empire in the eighth century.

Under the creative direction of guest artist and MSU faculty member, Jim Ligon, the show takes off with the high energy performances of the chorus in the opening number, led by Julianne Blake and James Tabeek in the roles of the Lead Players. Traditionally cast as one male Lead Player, Ligon puts his signature on this Tony Award-winning musical by double casting the Lead Player as a man and a woman team.

Ligon’s untraditional casting concept works well and compliments the show by making it visually and contextually stronger. However, because the musical numbers are written for a male voice, the adding of a female voice creates a vocal challenge for Blake.

Although forced to sing out of her range, Blake does a tremendous job of magically pulling off the challenge of Ligon’s concept and pairs up well with James Tabeek as the husband and wife team who run the show. Both Blake and Tabeek are talented dancers and all around terrific performers.

Michael J. Aquino does an “extraordinary” job in the title role of Pippin. Although his physical comedy was slightly contrived, his lyrical delivery in his musical numbers was first rate. In particular, “Corner of the Sky” and his duet with Alicia Williams as Catherine in “Love Song” were delivered with great lyrical emotion.

Alicia Williams is cast well in the role of Catherine as the widow with a son (played by local Maddie Garber) who “restores Pippin’s faith in life” and compliments Aquino with her beauty and fine singing voice.

Other fine performances are turned in by Victoria Elizabeth Cozzolino as Pippin’s mother, Fastrada and Tim Wright in the role of Charles, Pippin’s father. Wright has a terrific booming voice that commands the stage while Cozzolino is an all around professional in every aspect of her performance.

The chorus of players added great energy to the show with terrific improvisations and the outstanding choreography of John Henry Rew. Rew does a professional job of polishing the show with his innovative choreography.

MSU faculty member Eric Diamond does a fine job in his musical direction and highlights the show with his finely tuned musicians and terrific blending of the chorus in the song, “Morning Glow.”

The entire production glows with the beautiful lighting design of MSU student Shawn Robinson. Robinson illuminates the mood of each scene with subtle amber silhouettes and a variety of interspersed hues and shades.

MSU alumna Jennifer Larsen adds sensual texture to the production with her colorful costumes.

Pippin, a finely crafted production is a creative and magical night of entertainment worth seeing.

Performances run April 3-5, 10-12 at 8 p.m. with matinee shows, April 6 and 11 at 2 p.m. Additional shows have been added Saturday April 5 at 2 p.m. and Wednesday, April 9 at 8 p.m.

Ford and Pitt give Oscar winning performances

In Columbia Pictures’ The Devil’s Own, both Harrison Ford and Brad Pitt give stellar performances. Pitt plays Francis “Frankie” McGuire, who, after witnessing his father being shot to death because he was thought to be a Republican sympathizer, has taken up arms and has become one of the Irish Republican Army’s most lethal soldiers.

In his quest for victory over the British, “Frankie” is sent to America to acquire a shipment of Stinger missiles. He is taken as a boarder, under the alias of Rory Devaney, by Ford’s character, Tom O’Meara, a New York City policeman. Tom and his wife, Sheila (Margaret Colin) and his three daughters happily and lovingly accept Rory as part of their family.

This is a great conflict for Rory, as he never had the opportunity of being loved by a family since the death of his father. He does not want any harm to come to the O’Meara family, but has a mission to accomplish. One, he hopes, will enable him and his fellow soldiers to one day have families of their own in a British-free Ireland.

Ford’s character is burdened with a conflict of his own as his partner shoots and kills an unarmed thief. Knowing that his partner, Eddie Diaz (Ruben Blades) is three years from retirement and would surely face criminal charges, Tom covers for him.

Rory, who has fallen in love with the sister of one of his dead comrades, Megan (Natascha McElhone) has asked her to help along with another Irish friend, Sean (Paul Ronan) as the deal for the weapons goes awry. Billy Burke (Treat Williams), the businessman from whom Rory is purchasing the missiles, decides to force Rory to complete the transaction sooner than he is able.

It is at this time that Tom discovers Rory’s identity and plan. The action begins in earnest and doesn’t stop until the final scene, which is a great surprise. Both Ford and Pitt give Oscar-caliber performances and this film is one of the best from both actors. Pitt makes you like a character that you shouldn’t, to the point where you find yourself cheering for him. At the same time, you want Ford’s character to stop him and persuade Pitt’s character to turn himself in. As I watched the final scene, I couldn’t decide who would, or who should, live.

The Devil’s Own is easily one of the best movies this year, deserving four four leaf clovers!
Ewoks and X-Wings: a dangerous combination

BY CHRISTOPHER NAVETTA
STAFF WRITER

Death Stars must not come cheaply, but I guess the evil Galactic Empire is just loaded. By the opening of the third installment of the original Star Wars Trilogy, which was re-released March 14th, Darth Vader and his Imperial pals are more than half done with a brand spanking new station of destruction just ready to wreak havoc on the Rebel Alliance. Thankfully, the Rebels have a fine assortment of new ships, blasters, and a legion of furry new allies, as well as some truly stunning CGI effects with which to combat the new threat. The final act of the Star Wars Trilogy Special Edition follows in the footsteps of A New Hope (Star Wars) and The Empire Strikes Back with a impressive selection of new scenes, digital effects, and re-mastered sound, all ready to blow away the audience. Unfortunately, the new goodies have to take second place to the good first act of a play would. Even the plot leaves much to be desired, compared to the others, as it is just a variation on A New Hope: Find big space station, blow up big space station. Moreover, following the broadened appeal of the second movie, Lucas saw fit to try to expand the audience (and his paycheck) even further by aiming at a younger audience via the addition of the Ewoks, furry little half-Wookies that many fans consider the worst aspect of any incarnation in the Star Wars universe.

There are many good points to Jedi which, fortunately, help to balance out the plot holes and lack of character development. The new “Jedi Rocks” musical number in Jabba the Hutt’s palace, is incredibly realistic, even if cheesy in subject matter. Star Wars creator George Lucas’ technicians at Industrial Light and Magic (ILM) outdid themselves with this scene. It is one of the first times that a completely CGI character meshes properly with its background. The original Star Wars Special Edition’s Jabba just seemed too brightly lit for the surroundings he was supposed to be in.) Sy Snoodels and the rest of the Max Reebo band, however, work beautifully insofar as they really feel like a part of the scene, and don’t stick out like a Wampa in the Mos Eisley Cantina. The other great feature of Jedi is its revamped ending, which gives the audience glimpses of the celebration of the Empire’s downfall, albeit curiously premature in this writer’s opinion, over three planets: Tatooine, Bespin, and even the Imperial homeworld of Coruscant (which bears a striking resemblance to Batman’s Gotham City), all courtesy of the aforementioned ILM.

Finally, it must be said that even though Jedi doesn’t exactly stack up against the first two Star Wars installments, it is by no means a bad movie. It is still exceptional compared to most sci-fi flicks. The space battle at the end, now over 14 years old, still blows away most sfx shots today. It is only to say that it was hard to measure up to its big brothers. After all, it is Star Wars - even if it’s bad, it’s still pretty good!

Until the next installment, may the Force be with you.

Battle of the Bands

BY JODY KASTEL
ASS, ARTS EDITOR

Tonight at 7p.m. in the Ratt, Class One Concerts is sponsoring a Battle of the Bands. The winning band will open for Buffalo Tom and G Love & Special Sauce at the Outdoor Jam on April 13, in the amphitheater, also sponsored by Class One Concerts.

The bands will be judged on musical ability, crowd response, stage presence, originality, and compatibility. Each band is allowed two songs each, fifteen minutes per set. Second and third place bands will perform at the tuition increase walkout scheduled for April 15. Call x4478 for more information.
When We Were Kings soundtrack, a rousing review

by Jeff Ehrlich
Asst. Sports Editor

When Erin Perry, our Arts Editor, was going through her collection of unreviewed compact discs, I was sitting in a chair near her. She was asking people if they wanted to review anything and, since I am always eager to try anything, I listened to her. She named bands that nobody has heard of and music that I would have to be very drunk to enjoy. Until, that is, she mentioned the original motion picture soundtrack to When We Were Kings (Gramercy Pictures). I jumped at the opportunity to review the disc because I had been meaning to buy since its release on February 11. As a sports writer for the Montclarion, this is the perfect CD for me to review.

I am a huge sports fan and feel I know a lot about sports history. But, until I watched a special on television, I didn’t know about “The Rumble in the Jungle” and what it meant for the sporting world. After listening to the CD and reading the production notes, I have come to an even better understanding.

In 1974, Muhammad Ali fought George Foreman in Zaire, Africa. Africa was a place that few Americans knew anything about. In fact, Spike Lee, one of the film’s narrators, said, “There was a time when you’d call a black person ‘African,’ you’d better be ready to fight.” Muhammad Ali’s arrival in Zaire changed all that. Ali was brash, outspoken, and always said exactly what was on his mind.

Foreman, on the other hand, was quiet and few knew anything about him except that he destroyed Ken Norton and Joe Frazier in second round knockouts. Ali went into the fight as an underdog, and came out a true champion. During the six weeks that Ali was in Africa before the fight, black people all over the world felt a sense of pride that few have ever felt before. Ali was the man who served as the catalyst to this new ‘black pride.’ I do not want to get into the vision, I didn’t know about “The Rumble in the Jungle” and what it meant for the sporting world. After listening to the CD and reading the production notes, I have come to an even better understanding.

When We Were Kings soundtrack is a perfect mix of new tracks, recorded tracks from the three day music festival that preceded the fight, and Ali’s always-moving lips and African chants. It opens with the hip-hop number “Rumble in the Jungle” by The Fugees, featuring, A Tribe Called Quest, Busta Rhymes, and Forte. This is one of the best hip-hop songs I’ve ever heard. You will find yourself dancing to Q-Tip, Phife, Wyclef, and Busta Rhymes and swaying to the pleasant vocals of the lovely Lauryn Hill as she sings, “...From Brooklyn to Zaire / We need a ghetto messiah /...Send me an angel in the morning, baby / Send me an angel in the morning, darlin’ / Send me Muhammad in the morning / Send me an angel in the morning, darlin’.” The song is sure to remind one of Ali, the era, and the fight. It is, without a doubt, an inspiring song sung by the right people in the right groups.

The next 13 tracks are all taken from the three day music festival that preceded the fight. It includes the song by Bill Withers, “Ain’t No Sunshine” that reminds me of a cross between Bob Marley and Richie Havens. Then there is a wonderfully bluesy track by B.B. King called “Sweet Sixteen” that is straight Chicago blues, pure and simple. For a fan of the blues, such as myself, this song represents what the blues is all about, slide bar and all. Later in the disc another B.B. King number is heard that may be even better than the first. You will surely be thinking of the Mississippi Delta sound and the movie Crossroads when you hear this one.

Also included on the album is the James Brown classic, “Gonna Have a Funky Good Time” and two songs by the Spinners, “I’ll Be Around” and “I’m Coming Home.” Sandwiched in between these 13 songs are sayings and poems by Ali such as, “If you think the world was surprised when Nixon resigned, wait till I kick Foreman’s behind!” and “Only last week, I murdered a rock, injured a stone, hospitalized a brick. I’m so mean, I make medicine sick.” Other Ali classics included on the album are, “I’d like to tell the children of the world, quit eating so much candy. I have three rotten teeth, and they’re bad, I had to have one of them pulled. I can’t chew my food like I should. Eat natural foods because we must whip Mr. Tooth Decay.” Ali concluded, “Last night, I cut the light off in my bedroom; hit the switch and was in the bed before the room was dark.” These “Ali-isms” are, in my opinion, what makes this album so different, and so much better than any other.

This album is the perfect mix of sports and music. Even if you are not a sports fan and could care less about Ali, and the social consciousness of America, this soundtrack will inspire you to do so.

A message to Madam Ant:
Here's what black people would do

We are writing in response to Madam Ant’s last two articles. We suppose that she thinks her articles are supposed to conjure up sympathy for Irish Americans. Do not get us wrong, we are sympathetic to the plight of the Irish Americans. We are also sympathetic to the plight of Jewish Americans, Mexican Americans, Asian Americans, etc. Madam Ant seems to think that by making racial slurs, she is successful in getting her point across. How can she infer that by perpetuating racist ideas, that she will convince others to feel sorry for her?

Madam Ant stated that, “... what would black people say if Hallmark made cards showing black people smiling and saying Happy Martin Luther King Day?” She also asks what would black people say if we were referred to as niggers or portrayed as “watermelon eating” individuals. If Madam Ant would stop whining like a spoiled child and pay attention, she would know there are no “What ifs.” Black people have been called niggers in the past and are called niggers today. If Madam Ant checked old newspapers or films, she would see that black people were portrayed as docile, happy, watermelon eating people. Even today, some people probably think that black people do not speak properly and need ebonics to understand a word they say.

Madam Ant wonders what we would say (in response to ignorant stereotypes), as African Americans we would not waste our energy saying anything. We would prove those stupid misconceptions wrong. We would not disparage other races nor insult people with racist remarks to make our egos larger. We would, however, protest these stereotypes with action. We would not cry and sit on our behinds waiting for the ACLU to come to our rescue.

It also seems that Madam Ant has a vendetta against black people. In at least three articles whenever she has a problem, she loves to wonder: “What would black people do?”

We also would like to know what university Madam Ant attends. We would like to find out more about this school with the “plethora of courses dealing with Afrocentricity.”

A letter from the SGA president on the tuition increases and “Strike the Hike”

Guess what...tuition is going up again. MSU’s students continue to pay substantially more (28 percent since 1992) each academic year for an education that was once more alluring because of its affordability.

Most students don’t see a reflection of their increases in tuition in their own experience at MSU: making impossible to justify any increase much less that of 9.8 percent (expected for the academic year 1997-8).

Funding from the state isn’t equaling the percentage of revenue that it once did. This puts state and Board of Trustees and the president to meet the financial obligations of the institution regardless of state aid. We would be ecstatic to include the Board of Trustees and President Reid to join us in our quest to have the state prioritize affordable and quality education. However, if the Board and the President are so eager to close gaps in their budget with tuition increases, they become part of the problem and not the solution.

On Monday, March 31, 1997, I drafted a letter to President Reid asking him to continue his support for affordable education by pledging to the students that they will not receive a tuition increase beyond that of 4 percent.

On April 10, all students are invited to represent the student body as a whole to appear again as President Reid for his support in preventing such an unreasonable tuition increase. April 15 is the student’s and faculty’s opportunity to voice their concerns about higher education. If Reid pledges his 4 percent increase, he will be invited to stand with us as we send a message to the state. However, if he chooses not to and does not guarantee the 4 percent maximum increase, he and the Board of Trustees will become the focus of our attention.

Hopefully, by placing pressure on the President and Board of Trustees, this will remind them of their responsibility as administrators of this university to lobby for increased state aid and evaluate their own operating budgets, programs, and other financial obligations.

Students have sat back while the school has more readily used their money to support their own spending. President Reid asked the College Senate to back a tuition policy that would rely even more heavily on tuition as a means of revenue. The Senate voted this down. It’s the students time to take a stand. It’s our turn to let President Reid know that we can’t afford these increases anymore; that he and his committees need to start looking elsewhere for revenue. On both April 10 and 15, students will be asked to protest against tuition increases.

It is also important to consider the state message that affordable education must be a priority in the state of New Jersey as well as this county as a whole. If April 15 adopts and internal focus, Kean College on April 17, will be organized as a protest directed to state.

All state college students will be invited as well as faculty and administrators.

Regardless of one’s political affiliations, we all have the same concern; available affordable higher education. Someone needs to take the responsibility. If President Reid chooses to support us, by minimizing the tuition increase to that of 4 percent, he can join us on the state level to continue to address the education issues. No matter what the circumstances are, students need to unite and fight for the same objective; quality and affordable education.

Come out and show your support!

Take-A-Break, remember that company name, because there are a few MSU students who will never forget it. This story sounds like a bad 80s movie but, unfortunately, it is true.

Some MSU students decided to go to Bahamas for spring break and hooked up with the Take-A-Break company. As most of us know, there are plenty of these tour/package vacation deal-type companies on any college campuses across the country — and most of them are reputable businesses. Take-A-Break is not one of them.

First, the scheduled flight to the Bahamas for the girls was changed three times. The second time they were told that it was due to “bad weather in the Bahamas”. However, when one of the girls checked the paper on that day she found that the temperature in the Bahamas that day was 82 degrees.

After the ladies finally did arrive in Bahamas their problems only got worse. Some individuals had their luggage sent to other destinations, and all were worn out before the break even began. However, it also experienced the displeasure of staying at the Towne Hotel which, not to be outdone, was a horror show. The bathroom and windows were broken and there was construction going on across the street. Also, according to one of the survivors, “The pool was the size of a bathtub and you had to avoid debris on you.” And to add a final insult to injury, the hotel miscalculated the severity of the vacation and tried to kick the girls out two days early.

Last was the trip back home. The flight was delayed and, ultimately, canceled. Since the women had already checked out of their hotel they had nowhere to go and many of them were forced to buy their own tickets. Others returned to the hotel where they were given drinks but no food. After returned home to New Jersey, the girls found out two disturbing things.

First, one girl’s mother had called the plane in the morning and found out that the plane from the Bahamas had already been canceled. This leads the ladies to believe that they were purposely misled. Second, according to another travel agent, the reason there was so much trouble with the flight is that Take-A-Break’s plane had been grounded by the FAA because they had released.

This is no doubt that Take-A-Break takes advantage of these people and is a totally disreputable company. However, a simple background check, even on this campus, should have been done by the potential customers — and maybe this incident could have been avoided. And to that end, may the SGA can setup a better business bureau-type committee where students can report the good and bad companies they have dealt with, so other students will be warned.

In any case, one thing is certain: if Take-A-Break comes around again, be sure to tell them to Take-A-Hike.

NJCWW offers ways to fight water pollution

L ast week several articles were published in various newspapers informing the public that an estimated million gallons of raw sewage was discharged into a Passaic River tributary. Publicized incidents such as this raise concerns about water pollution in our urban rivers. This is not the only occasion that discharge has occurred and it does not just take place in Newark. Working in Paterson as an Americorps member with the New Jersey Community Water Watch, I am aware of much smaller raw sewage discharges into the Passaic River from an antiquated combined sewer outflow system that the city is working to fix. NJCWW works to improve and raise awareness about urban water quality issues by educating children and adults about water pollution, stream walking, and organizing river cleanups. There are many ways to get involved. Any concerned citizen may report an emergency pollution incident to the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection (NJDEP) Emergency Hotline at (609) 292-7172. As a group or individual, you may register with the NJDEP as a Water Watch group member and adopt a piece of the river to keep an eye on. You can also attend one of the cleanups organized by NJCWW. I urge you to get involved.

The Examined Life
by Jean-Marie Navetta

I’m becoming increasingly dis­grunted with a lot of people here. And it’s more than the “little things” like the fact that I can’t seem to get my AP English credit adjusted and as a senior I may not graduate due to some lack of an English Comp. class. It’s the bigger things that have gotten under my skin. Big things, like the fact that the students of MSU are supposed to strike in about two weeks, and aside from the fact that the SGA has planned a barbecue, sent a letter to President Reid telling him to not raise tuition more than 4 percent or else, and planned on inviting lots of TV people to tape our alleged protest, nothing has happened. Or at least nothing that amounts to much in the scheme of having a strike.

So let’s take this slowly. For any­one who isn’t totally clear, the definition of strike, according to Webster’s is “a work stoppage by a body of workers to enforce compliance with demands made on an employer.” OK. So students really aren’t workers, per se, but we can handle that. What I’m trying to point out is the fact that there are demands made on the employer. But that means more than just saying that we want no more than a 4 percent increase to be imposed on us. It means saying this and also providing ways to make it possible so our demands are not only sensible, but also ones which we can prove can be met.

And we’re in the position to do this. As the students who need to foot the tuition bill, we’re free to dictate what needs to happen on this campus. More importantly, we also are in the position to say what needs to be said: that more services need to be privatized, that contracts for services should be on a short­term basis to ensure that if a company isn’t doing its job, it can be removed from MSU quickly, and that unions should not protect antiquated positions. It’s costing the university efficiency and the students money to maintain people who can be replaced with automation and technology.

Students also need to get copies of the state and the university budgets and read them. As I’ve mentioned before, the state budget is on-line and easy to read. Copies of the university budget will be provided to you if you ask for them. But you have to ask. Despite all the great technology out there, paper­work still can’t get up and walk to you if you just think about it. And perhaps the SGA leadership should take this very unfortunate reality under advisement.

I met with President Reid this week and he answered several questions about the proposed increases that the SGA could not. While I don’t think that we both see entirely eye-to-eye on how things should be done, I learned a little more. And I also got a abbreviated copy of the FY ’97 budget for MSU. Perhaps this is something that all you ready­to-protest students out there should get a hold of. In it, you’ll see that the expenditures for “research” almost doubles in 1997. And that “support staff salaries” increase by about $2000. However, the amount of money allotted for “student services” decreases from $9,176 to $9,020. That’s a reduction in good­ies for students. And this is in a year in which a 10 percent hike is being proposed for those same students. This sure looks like something to protest. But this wasn’t something that I got from the SGA. I found it myself.

And before the SGA proposes to march off to Kean college on March 17th to protest the state, maybe it should look into some of the programs which the state is working on to help deal with the “education crisis” that the SGA is fond of crying about. There’s a lot out there that we should be lobbying the legislature to support. Things that (believe it or not) are even more effective than more money.

But as I said, no one has mentioned much about any of this. And I and my colleague Joe Patenoster have said this. But up until Wednesday evening, despite our offers to help, no one from the SGA leadership had contacted us. A few did this week. But I’d say that based on past experience, I won’t get my hopes up too much that they’ll take advantage of the non­SGA students who want to help make this protest successful. I really hope they do something soon, though. April 15th is getting awfully close.

For the first time ever, I really do hope that the SGA can prove me wrong.
Reflections of a first-year legislator: Misinformation, blocs, banter, and babies

The Nonconformist
by William J. Gibbs, Jr.

Many of us have been hearing all the hype about how the SGA wants to clean up their act. Well, I have been a legislator since February, and so far I have seen that the SGA is one hostile environment full of politics and rhetoric.

The first example of this is with “Strike the Hike”. As proven by my colleague, Jean-Marie Navetta, they are quite uninformed about the issues at hand. Even worse, the Executive Board members are prompting the legislators to post flyers and do the legwork. They’ve forgotten that the job of the legislators is to serve the students, not bash Governor Whitman. The SGA leadership, like every other authority at MSU is trying to mold our thinking.

Also, many veteran legislators like to abuse Parliamentary Procedure during meetings, which is very childish. For instance, a speaker will be speaking and they will keep requesting a “Point of Information” in an effort to make the speaker lose his or her train of thought. Unfortunately, this practice is heavily used.

Antics in the Forbidden Zone
by Madam Ant

It’s a funny ol’ life, innit? Just when I thought it was safe to come out after St. Patrick’s Day and address something else, POW! Something else reared it’s ugly head.

I was taking an alternate route home from work the other night and happened upon a bar still festooned in St. Pat’s regalia. By now, you all know how much I abhor the way the Irish and their holiday are portrayed, but I must admit, even I was unprepared for the sight I beheld. Hanging on the outside of this place was a promotional banner for Red Dog beer and the legend it bore convinced me to never lift a pint of that brand of amber nectar ever again. There he was, the “Red Dog,” scowling down at passersby everywhere...

No dignity please

We’re Irish (Part III)

I am or how I got there. That, little man, is not fun.

I was amused that Mr. Connolly perceives me as a good Catholic girl. You see, a significant portion of “Part One” was edited out, and that was the fact that there is no love lost between the Catholic church and me. I am not Catholic, nor have I ever been. I reject any institution that is inherently misogynistic, anti-gay, and anti-choice. I even went so far as to say that Christianity was the worst thing to ever befall Ireland. It has done nothing but violently divide her people everywhere, and that is my argument.

The behavior associated with this day is an insult to Irish everywhere...

I am not Catholic, nor have I ever been. I do not drink myself into befuddlement. I fail to see how much I abhor the way the Irish and their holiday are portrayed, but I must admit, even I was unprepared for the sight I beheld. Hanging on the outside of this place was a promotional banner for Red Dog beer and the legend it bore convinced me to never lift a pint of that brand of amber nectar ever again. I reject any institution that is inherently misogynistic, anti-gay, and anti-choice. I even went so far as to say that Christianity was the worst thing to ever befall Ireland. It has done nothing but violently divide her people everywhere, and for that reason, St. Patrick shouldn’t even be revered. But since he is the patron saint of Ireland, his holiday should be respected as a holy day, just as Passover and Ramadan are. Don’t paint me as a teetotaling, mass-going, parochial school-educated prude. That ain’t me, babe. I just think there’s more to life than puking my guts up in front of thousands of spectators on Fifth Avenue.

Commercialization of March 17th is not merely marketing, and how can one compare it to Easter or Valentine’s Day? Hippiest hippity, here comes Peter Cottontail with a pint of pink and purple beer in his hand instead of an Easter basket. Look, there’s Cupid, and he doesn’t have his bow and arrow...he has a mug of red beer! I also never heard of people exchanging gifts on St. Pat’s Day - that’s done on Christmas, right? I will agree with Mr. Connolly on one point though, people do do daft things on St.

The meeting in which all of these things took place occurred on Wednesday of what some groups of legislators sit together and share the same viewpoints in meetings. They do this almost like a bloc structure. But when put on the spot for it they say, “We are not a bloc.”

Additionally, like the president, many legislators try to find ways to keep certain organizations from getting appropriations. They will ask them questions like, “Do you keep minutes? Why do you need this money? Do you fundraise?” in an attempt to blemish the credibility of the organization. Then they will bash the organization and debate heavily to try and encourage a “no” vote.

A meeting like this should never happen. All of the legislators involved should be ashamed of themselves for the mockery they made of their SGA, an organization meant to serve the campus community, not turn them away when they are in need.

My message to all members of the SGA is that they should remember why they collected signatures on their petitions, and if they cannot live up to their job they should resign! I am not saying that all legislators are bad, there are some good ones. But what I am saying is that those of you who are taking 4 pm on Wednesdays as party time better wake up. You are supposed to be “students serving students...” not kids acting up! It is the bad legislators that are preventing the SGA from cleaning up their reputation.

I definitely want to be rich when I grow up. Then again, I don't really plan to grow up for a couple of years. Anyway, I try to think at least once a day. Sometimes that turns out to be a bit of a struggle, but I still try my best. My thoughts are rarely productive, like struggle, but I still try my best. My mind is not as clear as it should be. I have a few ideas that turn out to be a bit of a disappointment. Anyway, they have a patented invention with a philosophical motive, our plan is to raise your blood pressure to dangerous levels. It doesn't look like I found my "employee of the month." One of my neighbors is a wonderful person, and I am sure they will think that I am a wonderful person as well. With a little help from my fellow inventor John J. O'Sullivan, I plan to open a new market by selling Edible Urinal Mints™. It is my sincere belief that such an innovation would make the once frowned upon bar scene more attractive to a higher class of people. Men from the upper class would be encouraged to pop into the bathroom to purge his bloated bladder and then freshen his breath. It only seems logical, but after a little thought, you see that it would never work.

But it would work if we equipped women's rest rooms with Winterfresh Edible Toilet Paper™. Now both genders will have an equal opportunity to refresh themselves and feel sophisticated.

Keep in mind that, although these are excellent ideas, none of them even come close to my Crown Jewel. I possess the concept that will revolutionize the beverage industry as we know it. I will now submit to you my sales pitch for Cereal Milk™.

With the help of entrepreneur genius Joe Paternoster, I plan to drive around picking up only the finest specimens of raccoons and squirrels. Then I will add nuts, rich cream and amphetamines for an unparalleled taste that is almost instantly addictive. Furthermore, the rich content will allow me to charge a premium price.

the horo, the horo

Written this week by Robert the Bartender, a really annoyed man.

 Pisces (February 19 to March 20) You make me sick. Go to hell. I'm not giving you a fortune. Go away.
 Taurus (April 20 to May 20) And you, get your grubby hands off of the paper. Who the hell do you think you are? Holding this paper? It's not yours. Go away. I hate everyone.
 Gemini (May 21 to June 20) What was with those 39 people who ate the pudding? "Gee, let's go and eat some poison pudding, have some vodka, drift off into an alien land, visit E.T., smoke a bong with Mr. Spock, and make Nieten-nicks with some Klingons." Well it seems you grinning dumb-assed monkey men and ugly-haired women just made 39 dead fools of yourselves; the biggest group joke since American History. Ha. Ha. Ha.
 Cancer (June 21 to July 22) And you, with that smug Tinamou eating, Land Rover driving, John Tesh listening, Perrier drinking, Short Hills shopping, Internet surfing, late buy, dumb-assed face...jump off a rather high diff and save the world the misery that you people inflict upon this God-forsaken world. Your lucky numbers are 35, 6, 1, and 455.
 Leo (July 23 to August 22) Hey you, don't laugh. You have nothing to laugh about. Look at your face. Now that's funny. Ha.
 Virgo (August 23 to September 22) That take I.D. of yours is terrible. Get rid of it. It sucks. You have seen better fakes created by kindergartners with crayons. You do not look like a seven foot red haired man named Bubba. You are dumb.
 Libra (September 23 to October 22) By the way, did I mention that I hate everyone? Oh I did. I just wanted to make sure everyone knew that. Bite me.
 Scorpio (October 23 to November 21) If you rob my bar, I will hit you in the head with Jack Daniels.
 Sagittarius (November 22 to December 21) The stars say that you suck. Well, that's at least what I say. Ha-ha.

Dorks on the Scene

by John J. O'Sullivan

The Earth, a relatively boring blue-green sphere hovering somewhere within the Milky Way Galaxy, was floating around, minding its own business, doing little planet things. It spun around, traveled around the sun, created some volcanoes, made some killer mudslides, etcetera ad infinitum. The inhabitants, a couple billion or so, didn’t care very much for the mudslides or the volcanoes, but were pretty happy there. It was alone, and it was.

And then something went horribly wrong. Dork invaders from the planet Zygothian X-15 felt that this relatively boring blue-green sphere would make an excellent addition to their collection of other relatively boring planets.

They dressed up in their best pocket protectors, jumped in their Annoy-O-Matic 357 Attackships™, and ran over to Earth. Their leader, the most zyglastic Edgar Boobsby (Zyglastic (adj.) - Zygorthian word, meaning “someone who can hold his breath underwater for long periods of time”) was in the scout ship, got turned down by Perin Erey, got his lame alien ass kicked by Perin Erey, and still felt that Perin Erey liked him. He then called a few more (184) Annoy-O-Matic 357 ships over to win Perin over...and to take over the planet.

They finally got there, they all talked about Star Trek™—it’s unsure how they got such good reception from their planets, and decided to get to work. They aimed their annoy-planet (s), and decided to get to a couple billion or so, relatively boring planets.

Perin Erey, got his lame alien ass scout ship, got turned down by Freen Taretta, another regular, was about to stop breathing. Peek-Freen Taretta, also a regular, wasMulti-million dollar prostitution sting. “She has a nice butt,” said Edward Flannery IV, some pervert from Montclair State University. “But I like mine better. It has less hair.”

Dorothy B. Bluepaw, another regular, was blasted on beer, and fell off of her stool, trying to reenact a Trowelsville Republican Club fight with the Trowelsville Liberal Coalition. Rodi Mastel, professional wrestler, was already on the ground, drunk as a skunk. Robert multi-million dollar prostitution sting. “She has a nice butt,” said Edward Flannery IV, some pervert from Montclair State University. “But I like mine better. It has less hair.”

Hideo Nomo, he may be more than just a Dodger

BY JEFF EHRICH
ASS'T. SPORTS EDITOR

An article in the March 24, 1997 issue of Time titled "Plenty More After Nomo" prompted me to think about a momentous occurrence in Major League Baseball 50 years ago. The article, written by Steve Wulf, was about the influx of Japanese baseball players to the majors. In the 1995 season, Hideo Nomo played his rookie season for the Los Angeles Dodgers, in 1996 Chan Ho Park made his debut for the Dodgers, and now, there are at least four Japanese players vying for a spot on a major league roster. Such names as Shigetoshi Hasegawa, Katsuhiro Maeda, Hideki Irabu, and Takashi Kashiwada may become household names by September much like Greg Maddux, Roger Clemens, and David Cone are now.

50 years ago Jackie Robinson played his first game for the Brooklyn Dodgers as a first-baseman. Robinson, known as a second-baseman, played first base in his rookie season (Eddie Stanky played second and Gil Hodges didn't start at first until the 1948 season). Robinson was the first African-American to play Major League Baseball and, prior to Robinson's entry into the majors, African-Americans had to play in the Negro Leagues because baseball was, until 1947, segregated.

Think about what Robinson accomplished for African-Americans and for American society. All sports are now integrated and both white and black fans cheer for their favorite player, regardless of the color of his or her skin. Some people might even say sports is the glue that holds white and black America together.

What if 50 years from now, Americans will be thinking of Nomo as the man who closed the gap between Major League Baseball and Japanese baseball? Already, American baseball players are realizing that maybe their talents are not as superior to the Japanese as they had thought. Irabu is the most coveted Japanese ball-player this spring. Bobby Valentine, the New York Mets manager who managed the Chiba Lotte Marines, the Japanese baseball team where Irabu played, said, "(Irabu) throws the ball as well as anyone in the world. Once he gets acclimated and learns hitters, he'll remove the fallacy that American baseball is better than Japanese baseball."

That is lofty praise considering the pitching that the Atlanta Braves have, and it remains to be seen whether his praise is justified. But regardless of whether it is justified or not, Japanese baseball, with the success of Nomo, is gaining credibility among American baseball players and fans.

Wulf writes, "But another reason for the Japanization of American baseball is, simply, the Americanization of Japanese baseball. Players in Japan are watching more major league baseball and realizing there's not that much difference. Young players there are also aware of the greater independence, and rewards, enjoyed by their counterparts in the U.S."

Tetsuo Ikeda, editor of the Japanese baseball magazineShukan Baseball says, "To play in the major leagues is still the stuff dreams are made of." This used to apply only to American youths, but now the dream includes Japanese youths too.

Nomo can be considered a Jackie Robinson among Japanese ball-players, he serves as a mentor to many Japanese players just as Robinson did for African-American players 50 years ago. The Negro Leagues are gone now. Maybe 50 years down the road the Japanese baseball leagues will be gone too. Or maybe Major League Baseball will merge with the Japanese leagues to form one global league, making the World Series truly a world series.

If Nomo is the present day Robinson, then Irabu is the present day Roy Campanella. Maeda would be the new Willie Mays and Kashiwada would be the new Ernie Banks, Don Newcombe, or Satchel Paige.

Believe me, it's possible. In life, what goes around, comes around. And life is indeed, a lot like baseball.
Who will win the World Series and why? Who will they beat?

Ralph Kolbusz
Senior, sociology
Seattle over Atlanta. Because the Mariners' lineup is strong and they have dominant pitching.

Stacy Smith
Sophomore, undeclared
I think the Yankees will win, because that's the team I like.

Jacob Dillard

White Sox over Atlanta. Albert Belle and Frank Thomas back-to-back!

Ihor Andruch
Sophomore, communications
White Sox over the Mets. The White Sox are a powerhouse with Belle and Thomas. They started off strong Tuesday night.

Yankees undoubtedly. Because they have very good team unity and cohesion.

The Red Hawks could not overcome the deficit and, in fact, the Red Dragons scored two more runs in the top of the ninth. Brennan picked up the loss, his first of the season, and the Red Hawks record stood at 6-9 after Saturday's loss. They had plenty of time to prepare for their next game on Wednesday, April 2, however, mother nature did not cooperate.

Following the freak snowstorm on Monday and Monday night, the Red Hawks game scheduled for Wednesday was postponed due to the poor condition of Pittser Field. It will be made up sometime later in the season. However, after two days of sunshine the field should be good enough for the Red Hawks to play their first inter-conference game on Thursday, April 3, at 3:30 p.m. They will take on the Rutgers-Newark Raiders at Pittser Field.

Strong slugging leads to 4-1 week for Softball

After a 2-0 start at the MSU/Kean Classic Tournament, the Red Hawks fell to Salisbury in the championship round this past weekend.

In the first game versus Ithaca on Friday, MSU squeaked out a 1-0 win in a low hit game.

Junior lefty Sharon Ormsbee (North Plainfield) gave up just two hits while striking out a whopping 11 batters for her seventh win of the season.

The game was scoreless until the bottom of the fourth inning. Senior centerfielder and two-time 1st Team All-American Jennifer Citarella (Belleville) led off with a single, then successfully stole second. She advanced to third on freshman second baseman Tara Wisz’s (Pompton Plains) sacrifice hit.

With a count of one and three, senior shortstop and team captain Rosalie Guzzi (Long Branch) drove in Citarella with a single up the middle.

The Red Hawks held on to win, 1-0.

MSU next faced Felician College in the second game and scored 13 runs off of 13 hits. The Red Hawks had a slugfest against Felician, as nearly all MSU batters had hits in the game. Citarella was three for four with a triple in the fourth inning, and had two stolen bases. Wisz was two for two, one hit being a double in the second, as was junior catcher Jerrilyn Acevedo (Long Branch) who also had two RBIs. Wisz had two stolen bases as well. Guzzi and senior first baseman Cheryl Lopez (Highland Park) were both two for three, with Guzzi having two RBIs and a stolen base. Junior rightfielder Wendy Saladino (Mountainside) and freshman leftfielder Makeda Breedy (Franklin) each had a hit and a stolen base.

Right handed senior Denise Warnock (Keans) had two strikeouts and let up only two hits and MSU won easily, 13-3.

On Saturday, the Red Hawks led Salisbury 1-0 for six innings, until senior right-hander Peggyann Coker gave up a momentum turning homerun.

After appearing to be on the winning track after three consecutive victories, the baseball team has lost two back-to-back games. The losses were an 11-2 defeat by the Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute Engineers and a 7-3 loss to the Red Dragons of Cortland State. Both these losses were at Pittser Field.

Dave Lohrman, the RPI starter pitcher, was virtually unhittable on Friday afternoon as he went the distance, giving up just four hits and only one earned run. He recorded 15 strike outs and walked only five Red Hawks. He is 3-0 this season with an earned run average of 0.75.

For MSU, the nearly non-existent offense did, however, produce two runs. With two outs in the bottom of the first, rightfielder Mike Mullane (Bayonne) reached on an error by the RPI third baseman. Clean-up hitter, first-baseman Shawn McCorkle (Newton) then doubled in Mullane from first. Center-fielder Fransisco Ortiz (Newark) then struck out for the third out of the inning. After one inning the score was 2-1, RPI.

The Red Hawks second, and last run of the game, came in the eighth inning when RPI had a lead of 8-1. Freshman pinch-hitter Brian Seelinger and second, sophomore third-baseman Lou Finamore (Franklin) singled, driving in Seelinger with two outs. Junior second baseman Corey Gleichenhaus (Clarkstown, NY) grounded out for the third out of the inning.

Senior right-hander Kevin O’Shaughnessy (Ramsey) was the starting pitcher. He gave up seven earned runs and 10 hits in three innings. He picked up his first loss of the season as RPI pounded out 20 hits, scored twice in the first inning, five times in the fourth inning, and three in the ninth for an 11-2 final.

The Red Hawks did not have much time to think about their loss because on the next day, Cortland State was ready to take the field against MSU. Both Cortland and MSU were coming off losses the day before. Cortland lost to William Paterson on Friday and MSU, as aforementioned, lost to RPI. Obviously both teams were looking for the win, Cortland State, however, found it. They won 7-3, and handed the Red Hawks their ninth loss of the season.

MSU had a 3-0 lead through seven innings and appeared on their way to their seventh victory of the season. But sloppy fielding and poor pitching caused the 7-3 loss as the Red Dragons scored five unearned runs in the final two innings.

Freshman left-hander A.J. Economou (Howell) started and gave up no earned runs, no walks, and struck out four through seven innings. He came out to pitch the eighth and after giving up a single, a double-play ground ball to Gleichenhaus was booted for an error.

With men on first and second and no outs, junior left-
