Berra throws first pitch

Rain did not keep fans from Thursday's conference opener between MSU and William Paterson University, where New York Yankee's great Yogi Berra threw the first pitch.

The game marked the first New Jersey Athletic Conference baseball game played at Yogi Berra Stadium, and the 143rd meeting by the two schools, said the Office of Sports Relations.

"I don't care if its college or professional," Yogi Berra said before he made his way onto the tarp covered mound.

A special day including MSU giveaways, trivia contests, and live radio coverage by WGHT Radio (1500 AM) added to the intensity of the day, said WPU head coach Norm Schoenig.

"This is the kind of attention and support college events need in order to be successful," Albies said.

The rivalry alone had coaches and players excited about the game, but Berra's presence added much more to the day.

"It allows for one of the finest gentlemen in baseball to be present in the game," said MSU head coach Norm Schoenig.

After a 25-minute rain delay, Berra, wearing a MSU cap, walked out onto the tarp covered mound and threw the first pitch to MSU catcher Alex Bosch, and the crowd cheered in appreciation for Yogi as he stepped off the field.

He put a lot into this and was nice enough to give a stadium to the university. We hope to play our best and give him a win today," said Red Hawk shortstop Dave Wurst.

The Red Hawks trailed WPU through seven innings, but a triple by MSU center fielder Dan Wydner drove in one run to tie the score at 5-5. Despite an eighth inning rally, the Red Hawks, fell to the Pioneers 6 to 5, failing to win one for Berra.

STRIKE ONE: The former catcher who normally received most pitches, threw the first ball at Thursday's game vs. William Patterson.

U.S. forces in Kosovo debated at quad forum

By Jim Davison

Students held an open forum in the Student Center on Tuesday about the US and NATO air strikes against Serbia.

Hundreds attended the event, and both faculty members and students voiced a myriad of viewpoints on the topic, ranging from strong advocacy to fierce admonishment of US involvement in the Kosovo conflict.

Professor Elliot Graff, English professor and organizer of the event, began the discussion by urging all in attendance to state their views.

After Graff, Grover Furr of the English department spoke of the United State's imperialist interests in Yugoslavia.

Many students and faculty spoke on different sides, such as "Pro Axis," "Pro Saddam," and "Pro Yogi." Everyone moved to tears when speaking about two cousins who had died. Another student stated that our actions were not unjust.

"Milesovic chose war," the student stated.

A student of Music Education characterized our actions in Serbia as a "moral nightmare."

Professor Tim Watson of the English department questioned what had happened to the peace dividend, the money that was supposed to be made available from a decreased defense budget, which was spoken about by politicians a few years back.

"I think this is great, that 200 people have come out for this," Watson said, after the discussion. The rest of the list of speakers includes Ellis Garcia, a member of the New Jersey Socialist's Campaign, a Sister of Charity, a professor from the Spanish and Italian department, and a former student.

Albanian student's family broken

The phone has been ringing off the hook at MSU junior Basim Bruncaj's house in Bloomingdale over the past two weeks. He and his Albanian family receives invitations and donations about Kosovo.

Bruncaj said his family was sure of his uncles' safety.

"The TV is switched from CNN to MSNBC, trying to get the latest news or even a glimpse of Aunt Ayosha," he said.

Bruncaj answered one of many calls regarding rally invitations and donations about Kosovo.

"I don't know where she is but I don't give up on her," Bruncaj said. "I hope she is somewhere safe and not dead."

Bruncaj said his family was separated from her son who ran off when a rocket went through their roof, Bruncaj said.

"She told us they killed everything, even the cows and the chickens," Bruncaj said.

Static cling car decals dipped into the university's advertising campaign fund on March 5, when Dr. Susan Cole, MSU president, mailed the decals and a memo to the faculty. Dr. Gregory Waters, Vice President of Institutional Advancement, said that the decals were a spin-off of the current advertising campaign.

Waters estimated that the decals cost approximately five cents a piece. He said that the university's entire operating budget was approximately $122 million, and the board of trustees allocated $500,000 to support advertising, less than one percent.

Waters jokingly answered "a lot" upon inquiry of the total number of decals produced.

Cole said it was more cost effective to make the decals, keep them, and use them for different occasions.

"When a university increases opportunities for support, the legislature is more willing to provide funding," Cole said.

Cole said that the decal's purpose was to promote school pride.

"MSU really offers an extraordinary higher education program, but people don't think of it first," Cole said. "You can have a higher education program, but people don't promote school pride.

"MSU has students go to the mall, they go to the store, but show what the community has to offer," said a Serbian student named Nebojsa, "I think that they should not only do this, but show what the community has to offer."

"My cousin went to a secret school in an old building, taught by Albanian teachers who were earlier fired by the Serbs," Bruncaj said.

Albanians set up a shadow government as the Serbs slowly lost rights to their culture, Bruncaj said.

Goals

When I came to MSU three years ago, I knew I wanted to be president of the SGA. Well the time is here and I have done what I feel I needed to do to be ready for the challenge that awaits me. I was a legislator since my first semester freshman year, also serving as President Pro-Tempore my sophomore year. I received the honor of “Legislator of the Year” during that time. I then moved on to become Vice-President of the SGA, which I am proud to say was a learning experience. Then my junior year I served as President Pro-Tempore for my third year at Montclair State University. My decision to run for the office of Vice President of the SGA came with much thought and consideration. Having been a legislator for three years, I am familiar with the duties and responsibilities of the office. I am confident that my ability and my dedication to the SGA qualify me for the position. However, I intend to do more than merely fulfill the duties of the position of Vice President. I would like to continue the drive for quality programming on campus during the week and especially on the weekends. My goal is that students will no longer only go to classes, but get involved in their campus community. There are a number of other issues facing our campus such as safety, the ability to use the library on a 24 hour basis, the quality of the living accommodations on campus, the quality of food service, the image of Greek Life, and the promotion of student accomplishments not only within our community but also outside the university. I have chosen to run on a ticket with John Griffin for President, Latasha Casterlow for Treasurer, and Nidara Rourk for Secretary, knowing that this TEAM will serve the Students of Montclair with vision and determination. Therefore leading Montclair into the new millennium with the motivation that we can achieve whatever we put our minds to.

NEEDLES AND MUSCLES DO NOT MIX: THE DANGERS OF STEROID USE

By Lisa Gribbin

Worried about how you will look in a bathing suit this summer? How about those shorts that seemed to fit last year, but now are too tight? Many may be trying to watch diets and exercise to prepare for the warm weather that is quickly approaching.

Unfortunately, people will turn to the wrong methods for losing weight in order to drop pounds quickly or become more toned. Some may exercise compulsively or rigidly count fat grams while others may use diet pills or laxatives.

In the 1970's, steroid use had spread to Olympic athletes. In 1983, 19 athletes were disqualified from the Olympics for the use of steroids. Statistics compiled by the Center of Substance Abuse Research show that there are as many as one million steroid users in the United States today. Most of these users are 25 years old and younger.

Although steroids can be used by men and women, studies show that male use of steroids is generally more common. While steroid use typically was associated with athletes wanting to increase their strength, studies from the Center for Substance Abuse Research at the University of Maryland show otherwise. Many of today's steroid abusers are non-athletic and are simply trying to improve their appearance.

The Center for Substance Abuse Research at the University of Maryland defines anabolic steroids as substances that promote the building of muscle tissue or the accumulation of nitrogen in muscle protein. Altering the male sex hormone testosterone creates the steroids.

An anabolic activity such as exercise results in an increase of muscle mass. Similar results, however, are achieved by the use of anabolic steroids. A person's muscle tissue will increase when they take the chemically manufactured steroids. Many people combine rigorous exercise with steroid use to achieve their desired results.

As the person focuses on what they think is a stronger, better body, they face many imminent health dangers. When the male begins using anabolic steroids, his body stops producing testosterone naturally. When the male body stops producing testosterone, the production of sperm stops as well. It has been determined that many steroid users will have fertility problems in the future.

The use of anabolic steroids has been shown, in some studies, to cause an enlargement of the heart. The muscle cells in the heart grow faster than the blood vessel supply can keep up with. This occurs and creates an area of heart tissue with poor circulation and leads to the death of new cells, which can cause a heart attack. Steroid use affects the immune system by increasing the activity of cells that normally attack infection and bacteria. The cells become so overactive that they can attack the tissues of the body leading to the development of autoimmune diseases.

Liver damage can also result depending on the type of steroids used, how much you are using and how long you have been using them. Certain chemicals in the bloodstream increase when damaged. These chemicals signify possible liver damage. According to studies, anabolic steroid users have up to twice the level of these chemicals in their bloodstream compared to those who are not users.

Males can develop a condition known as “gynecomastia,” which changes the anabolic steroids into the female sex hormone estrogen. Breast development results from this process. Although there have been no studies conducted that suggest permanent damage to brain tissue, users of anabolic steroids do show a change in their emotional behavior and users tend to become more aggressive.

The use of anabolic steroids can result in many dangerous consequences that can be permanent and fatal. You may develop a heart or liver condition, suffer from extreme changes in behavior and attitudes and experience bouts with infertility.

If you or someone you know is using steroids, you should seek help for this type of drug abuse. Talk to a friend or medical professional. If you would like more information about steroid use and its effects, you can contact the Center for Substance Abuse Research at the University of Maryland at www.cesar.umd.edu.

MINDOVERMATTER

By Dr. Susan Herman

Stress Management part one of a part two series

Imagine yourself in a stressful situation. When you are feeling anxious, what do you typically experience? Check all that apply:

1. My heart beats faster.
2. I find it difficult to concentrate because of distracting thoughts.
3. I worry too much about things that don't really matter.
4. I feel jittery.
5. I imagine terrifying scenes.
6. I get diarrhea.
7. I can't keep anxiety producing pictures and images out of my mind.
8. My stomach gets tense.
9. I pace up and down nervously.
10. I am bothered by unimportant thoughts running through my mind.
11. I become immobilized.
12. I feel like I am losing out on things because I can't make decisions fast enough.

Stress is simply a response to mental wear and tear.

WHAT CAN YOU DO TO MANAGE STRESS?

Not all people react the same way to stress. A corollary is that not all therapies suit all personalities. Take the test below to find your best form of relaxation.

STRESS STYLE

1. I perspire.
2. I can't stop thinking about things that worry me.

STRESS TYPES

• Physical Stressors feel tension in the body: jitters, butterflies, racing heart, sweats.
• Mental Stressors experience stress in the mind-worries, obsessive thoughts.
• Mixed Type Stressors react with both responses in about equal measure.

Scoring:

If you answered yes to the following questions: 2,3,5,6,7,10,14 give yourself a MIND point for each answer.

If you answered yes to the following questions: 1,4,5,6,9,11,13 give yourself a BODY point for each. If you have more MIND than BODY points consider yourself a mental stress type. If you have more BODY than MIND points, you stress style is physical. If you have about the same number of each you are a MIXED reactor.

TUNE INTO NEXT WEEK'S EDITION FOR WAYS TO HANDLE YOUR STRESS!
Many people falsely believe that Greeks do nothing but party and drink. The Greek community, however, is out to disprove that and make an example for others to follow. They have set a goal to accomplish one philanthropic event a month in order to help out the local community and finally verify that they truly do more than just party.

On Monday, March 29, Phi Sigma Sigma, in conjunction with the Greek Council, sponsored a step show in the Student Center. According to Jillinda Briggs, who helped coordinate the program, proceeds from the event were donated to a local woman's shelter in honor of Women's History Month.

Numerous groups participated in last week's step show including: Groove Phi Groove, Swing Phi Swing, Iota Phi Theta, Alpha Kappa Alpha, Phi Beta Sigma, Lambda Theta Phi and Sigma Gamma Rho, as well as others.

The step show, however, almost did not happen. At the last minute, the show was cancelled for unknown reasons. After the decision was made to reinstall the show, some organizations were given 72 hours or less to prepare. Due to the short notice, many groups felt that the show was lacking and could have been better with more organization.

"Basically, the event would have been better if the organizations which participated were given notice more in advance," Wilel Fanfan, brother of Groove Phi Groove social fellowship incorporated.

"The event was not well advertised. I flyers went up at the last minute. I think there would have been a better outcome if the program was coordinated better," said a member of one of the participating organizations.

Others felt that the event was a success and are looking forward to upcoming philanthropies.

Jeanette Mammaro, a sister of Phi Sigma Sigma stated, "I am really glad our sorority sponsored the step show. I have never attended one before and I found it to be a very enjoyable experience."

Briggs explained that the purpose of such charitable events is to unify the community of Greeks while pointing out to others the positive things they do.

The step show was certainly not the first philanthropy accomplished by the Greeks. Just last month, for example, a date auction was held. The money collected from it benefited Hale House, a facility specializing in the nurture and care of babies born addicted to drugs and alcohol, as well as babies born with the HIV virus.

There are also several things tentatively planned for the future. Throughout Greek week a Read-a-thon will be conducted, the winner of which will receive 40 points towards winning overall Greek week. Additional proposed community service endeavors include either a softball game or handing out food to the homeless in Penn Station.

ALL ARE WELCOME!
Looking into technology

By Abigail Burford
Special to The Montclarion

If you grew up in a large extended family, you know what an amazing feat it is to organize a successful family gathering. To bring different generations and distant cousins together for a special occasion takes planning and imagination. The same applies to campus events for disparate groups in a university community.

The Technology Expo presented by the College of Humanities and Social Sciences, in collaboration with Information Technology, was just such a special occasion. On March 25 in Cohen Lounge, Dickson Hall, faculty members from many different disciplines, networking and computer services personnel, student assistants and other members of the MSU community participated in an afternoon of stimulating discussion and education of technology.

As Dr. Rachel Fordyce, Dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences, put it, “what I liked best was the turnout: faculty, staff, and IT all working together.” Dr. Jim Nash, Professor of English, also noted the heterogeneous nature of the happy crowd. “It was great that so many people cooperated to make it happen and that so many people not normally involved with technology attended.”

One of the presenters at the Technology Expo was Mr. Eliot Graff, Instructor of English. He presented course materials he had designed with WebCT. “I was most impressed with my colleagues’ eagerness to embrace the new technology coupled with a healthy dose of skepticism regarding that technology’s ‘efficacy’ in the classroom. I was constantly buffeted with comments like, ‘Wow! That is amazing! But from a pedagogical perspective, will it help, or is it an MTV-style approach to making the classroom more exciting?’ Rather than embracing the technology as a new tool non-improvement, our faculty is deliberating about the advantages: easier to experiment; wary to be romanced.”

Another presenter was Ms. Cindy Menezes, MSU Web Manager. “I was very pleased with the input I received on the website. People told me what they want the site to be, but I also discovered some popularity of audio streaming and video streaming are.”

Dr. Susana Sotillo, Associate Professor of Linguistics, who gave a presentation on PowerPoint, also enjoyed learning about WebCT and RealNetworks. “They had a chance to see state-of-the-art software and hardware. Our colleagues in CHSS and IT were extremely helpful.”

There she is...Mr. America?

By Carolyn Velehik and Lisa Gribbin

When thinking of beauty pageants, most recall Miss America strutting down the runway in a bathing suit or evening wear. But what if it was Mr. America? The sisters of Delta Phi Epsilon presented this event in the form of Deepher Dude held on Monday, March 29 in the Student Center ballrooms.

For $15, anyone could sponsor a male model to compete. The five that walked the runway were David Pizzi, sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha; Matthew Kane, Director of Blanton Hall, sponsored by Sig Ep; Matt Mayemick, a Po-duchord member to compete. The five that walked the runway were David Pizzi, sponsored by Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, sponsored by Delta Phi Epsilon; Patrick Tumillo, sponsored by Theta Kappa Chi sorority, sponsored by James Day; and Tatum Palmieri, who received a 2 month membership to the Powerhouse Gym. Runner-up Haitham Omar was awarded a free pie from Pizza 46 and movie passes. Patrick Tumillo placed third and received tanning sessions.

The main objective of the pageant was to raise money for cystic fibrosis, Delta Phi Epsilon’s national philanthropy. The fund-raiser collected over $300 that was donated to help in the fight against the disease. The fraternity and sororities of MSU participated in the event by sponsoring one of their members. Greek members were charged $15 to sponsor each selected participant. Each attendee of the pageant was charged $3 at the door, and was given a ticket to be eligible to win door prizes that included gift certificates to restaurants, movie tickets and gym memberships. Additional tickets could also be purchased for $1, or $3 for an annual membership.

Deeper Dude, has not been held in 3 years, but its resurrection proved to be a great success. Amy Countryman, the coordinator of the event, commented “It was a great turnout for not having Deeper Dude for such a long time. I would like to thank everyone who participated.”

The question is, what is the “Matrix”?

By Andrew Ruiz
Staff Writer

seems in the last few days the question on everyone’s lips is: “What is The Matrix?” Unfortunately the answer is a piece of formula sci-fi that, while predictable, may be just quirky enough to stand out from the crowd. Maybe.

The Matrix is the latest for the Wachowski brothers, Andy and Larry. Featuring Laurence Fishburne and Carrie-Anne Moss, The Matrix is typical science fiction, with just enough thought put into it to give the illusion of intellectualism. The strongest aspects of the film are the power house performances of Fishburne and virtual unknown Carrie-Anne Moss, along with a genuinely good bit of cinematography with the scene in the incubator. You’ll know it when you see it.

The basic premise of this action adventure piece is reminiscent of a William Gibson novel. Based on the notion of a hacker. He is obsessed, for reasons left vague to the audience, with finding out what the “Matrix” is. He believes he is close to a universal truth when he is approached by a leader thought to embody him known as Trinity (Moss). She tells him that he’s in danger then suddenly disappears. Neo, pleased at first, has run in with some MIB, CIA, FBI, whatever you want to call them, they’re the bad guys, wearing black Armans.

Laurence Fishburne as Morpheus, the leader of the resistance of The Matrix, gets his memory scanned by secret agents. Now convinced, he follows Trinity to a meeting with a man named Morpheus, excellently portrayed by Fishburne. Morpheus offers young Neo a choice, the kind that make or break an action flick. Then the film begins to pick up momentum, as all of Neo’s illusions are shattered, or perhaps “obliterated” is a better word. Anyway, go on would be to spoil the plot, so I’ll stop here.

Suffice it to say, at the end of the movie, you will know what the “matrix” is, and you will wonder why you ever cared. The surrealistic view that the Wachowski brothers built so carefully in the first act is destroyed by the closing action sequences. imagery that was impressive the first time it was shown is questionable on the second iteration.

By the end of the film, the audience has seen the same effects so many times that they seem tame, if not downright corny.

To sum up the film in one word, adequate. It is not a waste of time to go see it, and some of the early action sequences are quite enjoyable. However, it is not the intellectual piece that many are claiming. Feel free to beat anyone about the head who comes out of the theatre saying, “Makes you think.” It doesn’t. The writers dropped any possible intelligent statement midway through the movie. In fact, the only question I had in my mind as I descended the soda machine was “How is the last picture going to look?”

GARTH LEAVES PADRES: (REUTERS) After six weeks in spring training, Garth Brooks officially left the San Diego Padres organization last Thursday to devote more of his time to charity work. Garth left the team on a high-note with his first RBI (run-batted-in) against the Seattle Mariners. Garth has fond memories to take with him of his time in spring training, but he told the San Diego Union Tribune that the “single best thing that happened” to him while with the Padres was when a woman handed him a check for the Touch ‘Em All Foundation and didn’t ask for anything in return.

Garth said, “All she did was hand it to me, and if I can find her I’ll do whatever she wants to do.” Over 70 major league players have signed up to participate in the Touch ‘Em All Foundation. The foundation concentrates on bringing together professional athletes, music and entertainment industry professionals as well as corporate sponsors to reach children in need.

NAS CELEBRATES RELEASE OF THIRD ALBUM: (AOL ENTERTAINMENT) Platinum-plated rapper Nas (Nasier Jones) has stormed back onto the music scene with his third album, Nas I Am, which was in stores yesterday. The album, which features collaborations with Scarface, Puffy, Aaliyah and DMX, is one of the most eagerly anticipated sets in the hip-hop industry.

The first single, “Nas Is Like,” is the centerpiece of the album and is blowing up on radio airwaves. During a recent interview, Nas spoke about what Nas I Am signifies for him: “It means life to me. You don’t understand how beautiful life is, rich or poor. Life is good. And a lot of people don’t respect life. So you know, I want people to realize that life is good. You live once, and you should make history here. That’s what made me make the album like that.”

ALANIS TO OPEN FOR DAVE MATTHEWS BAND: Alanis Morissette will be a featured guest on the Dave Matthews Band tour when it rolls into Denver on July 20. Morissette, who is currently on a world tour, will open for the Dave Matthews Band in Denver’s Mile High Stadium. Big Head Todd & The Monsters will also open on that date. Morissette appears on the Dave Matthews Band album Before These Crowded Streets. She sings on “Don’t Drink The Water” and “Spoon.” Matthews tells us how he got Morissette to be on the album: “Initially she was just a haunting voice in the background of a couple of things and then we thought well... It was a thought of mine... Actually it was Steve Harris, he’s the engineer, he said, have suggested it. He thought, ‘Why not give her a verse?’ She had to learn it very quickly, but I thought she actually sung it quite beautifully.”

WOMAN FINED FOR WEARING MANSON T-SHIRT IN KENTUCKY: In a troubling legal decision this past Thursday, a Louisville, Kentucky judge ruled that a conviction against a twenty-nine year old woman for wearing a “profane” Marilyn Manson T-shirt was justified. In May of 1998 Venus “Star” Morgan donned a T-shirt bearing the phrase “I am the god of fk” for which she was arrested and fined. This past Thursday, the court ruled to uphold the fine of $250 plus court, despite legal defense by the ACLU. He plans another appeal on the basis of First Amendment rights to freedom of speech. Morgan told the Associate Press, “I think it means being your own god, being who you want to be, unlike this community who is trying to force God down your throat.”

OZZFEST ANNOUNCES DATES: (REUTERS) This year’s OzzFest tour has been subtitled “That Last Sunnyday with Black Sabbath." As previously reported, the tour will begin May 27 in the Coral Sky Amphitheater in West Palm Beach and it will also include: Rob Zombie, Slayer, Deftones, Primus, Godsmack, System Of A Down, Judas Priest, Drain STH, Static-X, Heddge, Pushmonkun, Slipknot, Puya, Flashpoint and Apartment 26.

BACKSTREET’S BACK ALL RIGHT: The Backstreet Boys will release their second U.S. album, Millennium, on May 18. It is the follow-up to their self-titled debut album, which just received the prestigious Diamond Award from the Recording Industry Association of America (R.I.A.A.), signifying sales of over ten million copies in the United States alone. To kick off the release of their new album, the Backstreet Boys will perform in an hour-long Disney Channel special titled, appropriately enough, “Backstreet Boys In Concert.” The concert will be taped in New York City in front of 1,800 fans on May 11 at the New Amsterdam Theater. The Amsterdam is currently the home of the Broadway production of Disney’s “The Lion King.” The special will world premiere on July 10 at 7:00 p.m. EDT. The Boys will also release their first single from Millennium titled, “I Want It That Way” on April 12, and the band has just completed a video for the song, directed by Wayne Isham. The single is already the most requested song at New York City Top 40 radio outlets. An official rock listing for the album has not yet been confirmed, but “I Want It That Way,” “Perfict Fan” and “I Need You Tonight” are three of the tracks from the upcoming album. The Backstreet Boys plan on launching an extensive world tour this summer in support of Millennium.
Family fun at MSU

MSU presented the Cleveland Signstage Theater company in their production of “Peter Rab­bit” on April 2. It was a lively children’s show based upon Beatrix Potter’s classic tale.

As MSU children’s shows are usually interactive, children were able to make their own rabbit ears for Easter and other Easter related crafts before the production started. Although it got off to a rocky start with technical delays, those who chose to stay for the performance were able to see the fun and enjoy the show. For some of the parts such as Peter Rabbit and his sisters, the vocals came from offstage as the actors signed their lines. The use of sign language added a nice touch to the play, allowing children who couldn’t hear the chance to see what was being said and better understand the story.

For those not familiar with the tale, it is the story of the mischievous Peter Rabbit who ignores the warnings of his mother and his sisters, Flopsy, Mopsy and Cottontail, and sneaks into old McGregor’s garden. He gets lost in the garden after eating too many vegetables and gets chased by Mr. McGregor. He finally does get free of the garden and realizes that his mother was right after all. Upon his return his mother decides that he has been through a lot and forgoes punishing him.

The children loved this play, becoming very excited as Peter is being chased by Mr. McGregor. Even the adults found the show amusing. As usual, MSU hosted a delightful family program.

Musical theater joins students

Here can one hear “Something conclusive, something repul­sive,” from the song Comedy Tonight?

Thursday and Friday evening in the McEachern Recital Hall at 8 p.m., are Broadway Night, featuring various songs from Broadway musicals performed by students of the music and theater depart­ments.

The two-act show includes songs from the musicals “Las Misibles,” “A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the For­um,” “Chess,” “Phantom of the Opera,” “Civil War,” “Cabinet,” and more.

The purpose of the show is to “bridge the gap between the music and theater de­partments, and incorporate awareness and acceptance of musical theater in art and academic pursuits,” said cast member, Alex Kubic.

According to Pete Bush, “Musical theater has become like a dirty word,” in Montclair’s theater and music department.

The goal of Bush’s project is to make MSU add Musical Theater as a major. Bush, who had his own theater company in Tom’s River, is not only directing the show but also starring in it. He has invested a lot of time, money, and effort into this project but to him it is worth it.

“I think each department could use a little help from each other,” said Bush.

According to theater minor and cast member, Beth Waysek, having the two de­partments work together would open up more doors for the theater and music ma­jors, and make both parties lives easier.

“The art behind musical theater is the incorporation of vocal talent with persua­sive acting... It is about doing the whole thing, not just one thing, well.

Indeed, the idea of musical theater as a major would particularly help singers and actors because they could develop more than one talent.

In a college that is closely connected to the city where Broadway is located, many do find it strange that musical theater is not an option in those departments. Perhaps, Broadway Night will not merely provide entertainment and open eyes and ears, but hearts as well, for that is what music and theater are about: heart and commitment.

Re-Birth of a Nation

As the dust of the Civil War finally settles, a small group of former slaves creates a new community in the farm country of Indiana. With them they bring their hopes for a new start, not just for themselves but for America itself. But the past never lets anyone go free without a battle.

Crossroads Theatre Company, in association with AT&T: OnStage®, presents LOST CREEK TOWNSHIP, the world premiere of a new play by Charlotte A. Gibson. Set in 1880, it’s the powerful story of a nation on the verge and a people on the brink, as both discover the importance of family and freedom.

Over the past decade, AT&T: OnStage® has sponsored more than 50 world premieres of new plays or musicals in the United States, Canada and the United Kingdom. AT&T is proud of our association with the Crossroads Theatre Company, and joins with them in promoting the art of communication in the communities we serve.

How do you feel about the five percent tuition increase proposed for Fiscal Year 2000? I think that, if they raise it five percent in 2000, they'll raise it again and again until we all do something.

Jordan Vano, Marketing

Although I have a tuition and fees waiver and I am not directly affected by the hike, I am still concerned for other students who are not as fortunate. If, however, there is one thing that can lessen the pain caused by the proposed hike, it's the fact that MSU is still the best educational value in New Jersey.

Joan Kanner, Psychology/Spanish

This happens every year. Education should be the primary focus of the state. It should be the primary focus of society — it's the future.

Sabauin Skenderi, Political Science

I feel that they always just rush into an increase. It doesn't seem like they really go over the options...at least, they don't tell us about the options. They do all of this in Trenton without ever going to MSU or looking at students who need to struggle to pay tuition.

Rob Blauvelt, Political Science/French

Although I'm against the increase, it seems that the school is forced to do this because of cutbacks from the state. The problem lies with Whitman and the legislature in Trenton.

Besim Bruncaj, Geography

I believe that the administration should fund-raise or get corporate sponsors to get the money to avoid raising tuition.

Taking Action Against Injustice: The Role of College Students In Affecting Change

"A foolish consistency is the hobgoblin of little minds...With consistancy a great soul has simply nothing to do." — Ralph Waldo Emerson

The End of One Student's Years at MSU

It is a difficult truth that everything in life must come to an end, and as I write these words, an aspect of my life plays out its end. One year with The Montclarion. In coming to terms with this reality and the fact that, as a part of the class of '99, a world filled with technological, scientific and social challenges is before us. From the new frontier of medicine, computer technology, artificial intelligence and other areas, it incites the will to be prepared.

I reflect on the past three years here at MSU, the experience of having excellent professors, good friends, and a chance to grow has renewed and strengthened my commitment to be progressive in every aspect of my life. But I think for each of us we can never cease to grow, and a chance to grow has renewed and strengthened my commitment to be progressive in every aspect of my life.

I think that we, the students, have grown to see the impact it can have as change. When we "talk with" one another as opposed to "talk at" one another, a lot can be achieved. I think Justin Velucci's impressive work, Following the Money Trail, demonstrates the kind of critical engagement and assessment that needs to continue. Do not think that college students can not only get the best education, but understand the means by which they are educated.

The recent policy changes and fostering awareness of differences is also a critical part of each individual's development, and I think MSU as a community has done much to foster such an environment, but the process of renewing and having thoughts and attitudes to continue.

It would allow each of us to understand the consequences of the ideas from the past and new ideas designed to meet the new problems we confront.

I think that right now, there is a man somewhere looking around his hovel of a home as he starves out of existence. He dies, outside the United States who is suffering the same.

We, the masses of this country, say nothing. While grades are talked of peace with Milosovic, but with the recourse to violence as his alternative to complying with our demands. As a result, we are pursuing a war in Kosovo, in the attempt to save lives, have lost ten.

Neither the U.S. or Milosovic does not back down, the only peace we will see come because there is no one left to fight.

Looking to the real victims in Kosovo

This is in response to Kara Richardson’s 4/1 article which explored the Kosovo crisis through the eyes of a Serbian national. Although Richardson’s article is objective in its portrayal of a certain human element in this political crisis, her lack of knowledge about the conflict allows her to unintentionally commit an injustice, as she likens aggressors to victims and fails to discuss the plight of the majority of the casualties.

Richardson neglects to present the actualities of the conflict as she fails to demonstrate the nature of the conflict. Serbian aggression has brought to bear upon the more than 425,000 Albanian refugees who have been forcibly uprooted and driven from their homes by Serbian brutality. How can one portray the hardships of the aggressive battle in a conflict which completely否定了the truly victimized party is beyond comprehending?

Assuming that Richardson’s failure to discuss the pain and suffering of the victims in this conflict stems from ignorance, I would like to start from where she left off by briefly analyzing the victimization and genocide of Kosovo’s Albanians.

In order to understand the current quandary in Kosovo, one must familiarize oneself with the potential of fascism and its exclusivist tendencies. I will say that fascism as practiced by the Serbs is the same fascism advocated by the Nazis as they hauled ‘inferiors’ to their death in the 1940’s. The recent attacks on Serbia are not aiming for a innocent Serbian, as depicted in the article, rather they are an attempt to minimize the Serbian government’s insatiable lust for innocent Albanian blood.

The Kosovo Albanians, who happened to be the main victims in this conflict, initiated this crisis because of their unwillingness to have their rights continually trampled upon. Anyone harboring doubts regarding Serbian bloodlust is asked to observe the wasteland Serbian butchery created in Bosnia where close to 85,000 innocent Muslims were murdered in cold blood for their apparent refusal to accept a sub-human status of servility in their own country.

In light of the history of the region and the trying circumstances facing the Kosovo Albanians, one must begin to appreciate their stubborn insistence on attaining independence. As the history of their neighbors in Bosnia proves, the Albanians of Kosovo can either pursue freedom or continue to be killed en masse.

Despite outright massacres, the Albanians have held to their aspirations, acquiring independence.

Just as Patrick Henry declared, “Give me liberty or give me death,” the Kosovo Albanians are turning to the world, shouting “Freedom or death!”

Such a demand cannot continue to be ignored much longer. Although unintentional, Richardson has followed a course analogous to that of the Serbs in that both have denied the existence of the ethnic Albanians. While the denial of the former, is hare-brained and undertaken with the pen, the denial of the latter is dangerous and undertaken with the result of death.

Richardson gives her readers the impression that the Albanians do not exist, and, in doing so, exposes any attacks against Serbia as unjust.

Although the suffering of innocent Albanians should be recognized, it should be done without the compromising the existence and rights of the Albanians who are truly the party in need of sympathy.

Response to Following the Money Trail: Getting involved is essential

Dear Mr. Vellucci:

Congratulations on your excellent coverage of “A Silent Crisis in the Making” (from Following the Money Trail). I was especially impressed with your “opinion page” remarks: “If the Board of Trustees really wanted to foster a more complete educational environment, they would lobby, instead, for better teacher salaries.”

As your colleague, Mr. Davison, aptly put it, our beloved Governor, the Ayn Rand of New Jersey, as well as the State Legislature, spent $21,524.06 on each of its 28,096 members. As the history of their neighbors in Serbia proves, the Albanians of Kosovo can either pursue freedom or continue to be killed en masse.

Despite outright massacres, the Albanians have held to their aspirations, acquiring independence.

Just as Patrick Henry declared, “Give me liberty or give me death,” the Kosovo Albanians are turning to the world, shouting “Freedom or death!”

Such a demand cannot continue to be ignored much longer. Although unintentional, Richardson has followed a course analogous to that of the Serbs in that both have denied the existence of the ethnic Albanians. While the denial of the former, is hare-brained and undertaken with the pen, the denial of the latter is dangerous and undertaken with the result of death.

Richardson gives her readers the impression that the Albanians do not exist, and, in doing so, exposes any attacks against Serbia as unjust.

Although the suffering of innocent Albanians should be recognized, it should be done without the compromising the existence and rights of the Albanians who are truly the party in need of sympathy.

Who is hurt by NATO bombings?

I am writing in reference to the article written last week about Melniko Beric and his family in Novi Sad. I have one question. What about the 500,000 displaced Kosovar people and the thousands who have lost their lives? Why was that not the headline in your newspaper last week? I, as well as others, was shocked to see that The Montclarion was showing sympathy to the aggressors and not the victims.

The Serbians are getting a bit of what the Kosovar people are going through every day with the bombings from NATO.

The refugees are forced to live in horrible conditions. No bathrooms, no medical attention, and worst of all, no food.

A little over a year ago, the Serbian Army killed close to 100 people, a small village in Kosovo. The Kosovar Liberation Army, better known as the KLA, was then formed. Its members consisted of the people who had lost everything due to the unexpected attack by the Serbians. It was not enough killing and forcing the people out of their homes. The cowardly Serbians burned down homes so that the Kosovars had nothing to turn to.

This is not the first place this has happened. These tactics were also used against Slovenia, Croatia, and Bosnia.

In Pristina, the Serbian army forcefully enters homes and holds people at gunpoint, telling them to leave, face death, or sometimes be burned alive in their homes.

I have a first hand view of these atrocities because I have many relatives in Kosovo. My four aunts, two uncles, and their families are in Pristina and Prizren.

About one week ago, the Serbian army found their way into two of my aunt’s homes. They said, “Leave now or risk being killed.” My aunts tried to offer them money that we had sent her in order for them not to hurt her family. The Serbians saw that it was American money and replied that “It’s not enough that they [the US and NATO] are bombing us, you are even trying to help them.”

Another aunt’s son was held at gunpoint and told to leave immediately. They quickly left and arrived in Macedonia. The other aunt that was forced to leave, we have not heard from for about a week.

Melniko said that he was worried about his family in Novi Sad. That city is far away from the fighting. Melniko’s family has the comfort of knowing armed strangers will not uproot them from their home. My family has absolutely no way of reaching them. Whenever the phone rings in my house, everyone runs and says they’re okay. This is happening in countless other homes. If this is not ethnic cleansing, what is?

The main aggressor is the president of Serbia, Slobodan Milosevic. He conveniently drove out the Western press and now controls what his people see in Belgrade. That is why the Serbian population is against the bombings. They don’t know any better.

They only see what Milosevic allows the press to run. He is brainwashing his own people, and that is what The Montclarion should do too to keep their true story. Instead of interviewing the center of the basketball team, which was the easy thing to do, The Montclarion should have dug deeper and found the true cause to the Kosovo problem.

The Serbians were not the victims here, but, instead, the vicious murderers.

The importance of public service in publishing the MSU payroll

Dear Mr. Vellucci:

A belated congratulations for your special issue listing all of the MSU salaries. It’s a significant public service to bring budgetary figures into the light of day, so students and others can see that what one tax payer is beginning to get spent.

I know it was hard for you to obtain this information.

I can’t remember the last time that The Montclarion did this! Ever for good!

And The Montclarion endorses...

President

John Griffin

John Griffin will bring to the position of president a wealth of experience with the SGA, as a representative of the student body, a legislator, President Pro Tempore, and Vice President. His goals are clearly-stated and feasible: extended hours at Sprague Library, the opening of an on-campus video store or one-screen movie theater, a blue light system ensuring stronger campus safety, a wealth of on-campus events and stronger publicity to inform students as to what’s going on at MSU. He has the experience to know how to get things done within student government and a genuine interest in improving the quality of campus life for MSU students, ensuring that his plans and decisions will be developed, informed, and enforced as a result of student concerns.

Vice-President

Mike Kazimir

As a legislator for the last three years, Mike Kazimir has learned how to get things done within the SGA. As part of the Griffin/Kazimir/Rourk/Casterlow ticket, he plans to focus his energies if elected on improving the quality of life in MSU residence halls, working to better campus Food Services, and acknowledging the accomplishments of MSU students outside of the boundaries of campus. He supports the proposal for extended hours at Sprague Library and the installation of the campus blue light system. He has also served as Vice President of Pi Kappa Alpha, and hopes to establish stronger lines of communication between the SGA and Greek organizations.

Secretary

William Guardino

The one thing that spoke loudest for Guardino’s dedication to serving students through the SGA was the fact that, whether he is elected or not, he promises to stay active within student government. The SGA’s current President Pro Tempore, Guardino has served as a legislator and chairperson on several committees. Guardino’s key focus seems to be on informing students about the operations and procedures of the SGA and activities on campus through stronger publicity and increased attempts to cater to student needs. Guardino has been the author of many bills within the SGA this year, as well as assisting in several campus projects (such as the recent parking survey), and will be hard-working, dedicated addition to the E-board if elected.

Treasurer

Latasha Casterlow

When David Pizzi resigned from the SGA E-board position of Secretary, Latasha Casterlow was there to step up to the challenge. A strong-willed, determined and well-spoken individual, Casterlow summarized what she feels makes a dedicated SGA representative in one word: FACTS (Flexibility, Accountability, Credibility, Tenacity, Stability). Casterlow, who is running on the same ticket as Griffin, Kazimir, and Rourk, supports the idea of extended hours at Sprague Library (described by Casterlow as an attempt to keep commuters, constituting the majority of the student population, on campus), the initiation of the blue light safety system, and the fostering of a stronger line of communication between the Student Government and all Class I, II, III, and IV organizations.

BOT Alternate

Ned T. Gross Jr.

The position of BOT Alternate is a sensitive one - one with roles and parameters differing slightly from the rest of the SGA E-board. Gross has a wealth of ideas on how to work within the infrastructure of MSU’s Board of Trustees while keeping student interests at the top of his, and the board’s, agenda. He supports the establishment of an office for the BOT student representative in the Student Center Annex, an e-mail address where students can directly send their questions and concerns, and a monthly column in The Montclarion, titled “The BOT Corner,” where students will always be kept up to date on happenings at board meetings. Gross is a highly informed and vocal individual, exactly the type of person that students at this university would want to represent them on a highly-important, decision-making entity such as the board of trustees.

I fiddled idly with the sleeves of my Armani suit as the limousine drove Sherry and me to our destination: Deceptions. That was the name of the club where we, ironically enough, were to attempt a major deception of trying to appear as males when we were so obviously not. Sherry was practically a triple D in bra size; otherwise if size F existed she was there. Her boobs seemed to come out of her ears. It isn’t like I stood there and watched her “friends”, as she called them, but every word she said was emphasized by her chest. Lesbian or not—it actually a triple D in bra size; otherwise if size F existed she was there. Her boobs seemed to come out of her ears. I was well—single. I could make my way through the sunny New York City streets to the PATH station. On the way home a man tries to hijack the PATH train, but gives it up when he realizes there are only about a dozen places he can take it to.

As I walk up the stairs onto the Hoboken sidewalk, I cast a gaze toward Manhattan, and recall to myself the afternoon I’d just spent, as well as all the other wonderful days and nights I’ve spent in New York City. In my whimsy I cross River Street and get hit by a car.

I awake to find I owe the Texas-Arizona bar and grill money for seven rounds of drinks, and that I’ve just made a roomful of new friends.

I’ve taken a job as a waiter to pay off my extensive tab. One of my fellow waiters is a guy who works as an actor in off-Broadway shows. I don’t want to ask him for the time.

I move to say that I was too short to be a man and that the best I could pass for was a male midget. But she waved off my feeble protests and said that she would we just could not pull it off because there was no place to hide the inside of my shoes and what I lacked for in height I could make up for in arrogance. I gritted my teeth. What could I do for revenge? Not that I believed in that anymore, but when she was sleeping...

The whole discussion of what I was to wear and me trying to convince her how pathetic we would be as males took place only after she had relentlessly badgered me. (Following me into my bedroom and the bathroom, screaming guilt trips that would put my Italian grandmother to shame.) Nagging me, pestering me, drifting me into the every determined lawman to shame. She stole my hairbrush and she put shampoo on my toothbrushs.) Then she tried to bide me with dates. (Like I’m stupid enough to go on a blind date that would probably “blind” me for life and leave permanent scars.) She tried everything including blackmail until she finally forced me into it. Sherry was lethal when she got an idea into her head. When taking it seriously, I had considered leaving my life behind— or at least attaching fake chest hair to my body. I also considered gaining more weight like Nick Nolte—we all know how serious he takes his mustaches but still and all...

The conclusion of my disguise was a fake goatee... I bound certain parts of my anatomy, which in my case weren’t too difficult, darkened my skin and roughened my hands with sand. I also padded my self to look more muscular. I just hoped no one would find out the truth.

“Sherry,” I begged again to her as she lay back on the plush seats panning for air, glad for once that I wasn’t so developed, “what if they arrest us for our fake ids, or we get caught up for being female, or worse...” Sherry laughed. “All in all, it sounds like a very promising evening doesn’t it? Never a dull moment, I promise you that!”

If my parents could see me now...

I was just trying to be a good editor and stuff.

But it was wrong of me to do so. I am deeply sorry.

I should have known better. I should be beaten mercilessly.

I'm shut up in this little room with no windows and an average temperature of 300 degrees. The voices in my head told me it would be a hoot, and I listened.

I don't know who I am half the time. I have pasta in my underwear. And who keeps frying baloney?
The Horoscope Never Lies

Aries (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19): The weekend presents you with a dilemma. How many people can you hook up with while bopped out of your mind? The answer is zero, but it's more if you have no dignity.

Taurus (Apr. 20 to May 20): A visit to a maximum security prison is just what the doctor ordered. You need your real wages. And you let known the prison guards you were planning to steal on the black market.

Gemini (May 21 to Jun. 21): Much work awaits Gemini under stress. Free your mind of it. You are THE SLEEPING QUEEN. Your friends take a picture and laugh at you, but they can always be beaten.

Cancer (Jun. 22 to Jul. 22): Gemini has a lot of excitement because last week settled. You find bored to your deep despair no expectations permit for 200 pounds of TNT. You blew up Mirage and Penn. Mirage's owner ignores it completely.

Leo (Jul. 23 to Aug. 22): You have remarkable gas mileage for a sport utility vehicle of your class. But you tip over at every corner, killing passengers and pedestrians alike. Your mother is VERY disappointed in you.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sep. 22): This weekend presents Virgo with a challenge. How many people can you hook up with while bopped out of your mind? The answer is zero, but it's more if you have no dignity.

Libra (Sep. 23 to Oct. 22): Visit to a maximum security prison is just what the doctor ordered! You mend your evil ways. And you let known the prison guards you were planning to steal on the black market.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): That wasn't vodka. It was liquid hair growth potion. You don't get hair on your head, but you grow a killer beard. To look like the gals from ZZ Top. Rock on!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): Your mom isn't around and you have so much fun! Too don't look both ways before crossing. Too make a face and it doesn't stop like that. Too ugly with your food. And you jump on the bed. Take that mom! I'll show you!

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19): Richard Simmons shows up at your door unexpected. He barges in and hypnotizes you. You WILL sweat to the oldies! You WILL shake your bootie. You WILL kick his scrawny ass!

Aquarius (Jan. 20 to Feb. 18): The classes you registered for got cancelled. Take new ones. You sign up for "Ristorante of Ename", "Naming the Residents since Toman", "Opies for kids", and "It's 8am, let's shake The River In Oed."

Pisces (Feb. 19 to Mar. 20): Everything goes wrong this week. You spend 18 dollars in a thrift store and walk out with a blog cord and soil and platforms. Go to a club and do the Ridon dance until you are thrown out forcibly.

This is your brain on drugs.

This is Finz getting beaten up by tray-wielding manics.

All right, ONE LAST TIME...

*Teams ejected from the league for too many forfeits
#Teams disqualified from the playoffs for a forfeiture during the regular season

By Ed Flannery

Staff Writer

As the Intramural Basketball season comes to a close, most of the playoff matchups have been decided. Playoff action starts this Sunday, April 10. Games in the single-elimination will go from Sunday until the championship game on Wednesday at 8:15 p.m.

One of the two games remaining to be played Thursday night have major playoff implications. If the Pirate Eyes (7-5) defeat the Underdogs (2-10), they will secure the number six spot in the playoffs and a first round bid. If the Underdogs manage the upset, the Eyes take the seventh seed and play the Underdogs again Sunday night in the first round, and the Syntschabolics (7-5-1) will take on the number three team, The Swarm (10-3). The winner of the game against the Underdogs will be faced with the ominous challenge of Feel Deeze (12-1), whose sole loss came on a disqualification.

Elsewhere, the undefeated Regular Season Champions, ONN (13-0), will await the winner of a Sunday night match-up between the Theta Xi Underdawgs (6-7) and the Blanton Bearcats (6-7). Although both teams have the same record, Theta Xi took the higher seed by beating the Bearcats 44-21 earlier in the regular season.

In another tight pairing, number four Fast Break (8-3-1) faces number five Team Undecided (8-5). Fast Break won the regular season game against the Riddlers, but this is the playoffs, and anything can happen.

MSU softball too hot to handle; cruising along with winning record of 18-3

Montclair State University’s softball team had another excellent week sweeping both Drew University and Richard Stockton College, improving their record to 18-3.

In the first game against Richard Stockton, Montclair State came out strong scoring the first two runs of the game. The Red Hawks first run was scored by senior infielder Jamie Lascik. This hit advanced sophomore outfielder Alex Lamont to third, and she subsequently scored when sophomore Kim Caruso smacked an RBI single to second base. MSU would go on to have four single-run innings, making the score 6-1 in their favor.

For MSU, Wisz was 2-3 with an RBI, and Lascik was 3-4 with two runs batted in. The winning pitcher was Sue McCarville who gave up five hits, one run, two walks, and striking out five, improving her record to 13-1.

The second game of the doubleheader against Richard Stockton proved to be as fruitful in runs as the first. Although Montclair came up empty in the first two innings, they produced multiple-run innings thereafter.

For the Red Hawks, Lamont was 4-5 with four RBI’s, junior infielder Lisa Czarnecki was 2-4 with one run batted in, and sophomore Evelyn Morozzi was a perfect 3-3 with four RBI’s. Sophomore pitcher Caruso won the game on the mound, pitching five innings with five strikeouts, one walk, and four hits. With this win, Caruso improved her record to 5-1 on the season.

Montclair State University women’s softball will next be in action today at Rutgers-Newark in a conference game starting at 3:30 p.m.

Baseball still searching for solid ground

Montclair State’s baseball team went 2-3 this past week, losing to William Paterson University, Ramapo College, splitting with Rowan University, and defeating Division II Adelphi University. Their record now stands even at 10-10, NJAC 1-3.

In the game against Adelphi University played at MSU’s Yogi Berra Stadium on Tuesday afternoon, junior Frank Francia hit a two-run single, while senior Dan Wydner smacked a three-run triple which were all the runs Montclair would need for the victory. The Red Hawks were behind 1-0 at the beginning of the third inning, when Francia drove in runners from second and third with a two-out, two-run single which made it a 2-1 lead for MSU. Wydner cleared the bases in the next inning with a triple down the right field line making it a 5-1 lead.

The Panthers retaliated, however, scoring in the fifth inning making the score 5-2. However, with great defensive plays by the Red Hawks, Adelphi failed to put the score past 5-4 in favor of Montclair.

For the Red Hawks, senior lefty Mike Orth had the victory, giving up one run and two hits in three innings of play. He improved his record to 2-0 on the season. Senior outfielder Brian Kermizian was 3-4.

In a conference doubleheader against Rowan University at the Yogi Berra Stadium on the campus of Montclair State, the Red Hawks managed to split the games with the Profs. In game one, MSU was defeated and fell to 8-10, 0-3. They were down early by the score of 3-0 in the top of the first after junior centerfielder Mike Dickson
