Five percent tuition increase approved

By Justin Vellucci
Opinion Page Editor

The proposed five percent tuition increase for Fiscal Year 2000 was approved in a vote by the Board of Trustees. The BOT voted unanimously in support of the increase at their April 8 meeting.

Undergraduate New Jersey resident students will pay $4.78, or five percent, more per credit hour for the fall, spring, and summer semesters. Undergraduate nonresidents will pay $9.50, or 6.5 percent, more per credit hour for the summer semester and $10.45, or 6.8 percent, more in fall and spring.

The tuition rates for graduate students will also increase in the next fiscal year. Graduate New Jersey residents will experience a 7.2 percent increase, $14.50 per credit and fall in the spring and $13.85 in the summer. Graduate nonresidents will experience a 12.7 percent increase, $32.65 in the fall and spring and $30.77 in the spring.

Rate increases have also been approved for student fees. All students will experience a 5.1 percent increase for the Student Union Building fee, a 14.3 percent increase for the facilities fee, and a 3.3 percent increase for the computer technology fee.

In addition, undergraduate students will experience a 5.8 percent increase for the athletic fee. The General Service fee, parking fee, and undergraduate Student Government Association fees will remain the same.

Doctor blind to good treatment

(AP) - A Santa Ana doc­tor will pay a blind 2-year-old girl $6.9 million for failing to make sure she received a key eye examina­tion months before doctors tried unsuccessfully to save her sight, a jury has ruled.

Madison Scott was born Aug. 15, 1996, about three months premature at St. Joseph Hospital in Orange. She had retinopathy of prematurity, an eye disease common in many premature babies.

The girl's family sued Dr. Robert Hillyard, the medical direc­tor of St. Joseph Hospital.

Indonesian press proposes peace

(CNN) — The president of Indonesia on Tuesday called for a cease-fire in troubled East Timor, and proposed a human rights com­mission to help re-establish peace in the former Portuguese colony.

President B.J. Habibie's pro­posals followed days of mounting violence between Timorese sepa­ratists and anti-independence mi­litiamen.

The commission, which Alatas said would be charged with finding out "how it really happen­ping in East Timor," will be made up of the “various elements in the territory.

"Especially representatives of the groups that are in conflict now, so that peace can be achieved," Alatas said.

Infernator fire investigated

The National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health was in Newark yesterday to investi­gate the December incident in which the Hastings, Minnesota, power plant was hit.

The federal agency, which is the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta, will interview the firefighters who responded to the fire that sent 48 people, including 37 firefighters, to the hospital for injuries.

Security search for missing in Colombia

(CNN) — Colombia's secu­rity forces have launched a mas­sive search for 46 people who dis­appeared Monday after suspected leftist rebels hijacked a commer­cial flight and forced it to fly to a remote airstrip.

Military planes and helicop­ters flew over the area where the plane was forced to land to track down the hijackers and their cap­tives but had no success.

Troops also poured into the region's jungles to join the hunt.

NATO increases warplane use

(CNN) — NATO tripled the number of planes flying bombing missions over Yugoslavia on Sun­day as airstrikes concentrated on cutting off the flow of fuel to the Yugoslav army in Kosovo.

The new warplanes will bring the number of NATO aircraft in the operation to nearly 1,000.

The allied air war against Yugoslavia is aimed at forcing Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic to accept a peace agreement for the Serbian province.
Illegal parking crackdown increases tickets and towing

FLYING BY: A car drives by the Clove Road Apartments where towing and tickets have increased to stop the rash of illegal parking.

Campus police are cracking down on parking violations through ticketing and towing due to an increase in illegal parking at the Clove Road apartments.

Although residents are aware of the strict enforcement, some still choose to take the risk of being fined or possibly towed.

“I parked my car in front of my apartment for about two minutes and when I came out, there was a ticket on my car,” said Nicole Medolla, 20, political science major.

Lt. Paul Cell of campus safety and security said ticketing alone was just not working.

“The illegal parking was just becoming a hazard. Ticketing and towing is really being done for the students’ safety,” said Cell.

Although the average on-campus ticket fines students about $15, many parking violators are finding an increase in the fines this year.

“After being parked illegally for about ten minutes, I came back to my car to find a $30 ticket on my windshield and my car about to be towed,” said Heather Pignatello, 21, physical education major.

Although the ticketing and towing is all being done in the students’ good interest, residents of the apartments only see the hassle involved.

“When I told the officer who gave me the ticket I was just loading up my car to go home for the weekend, he told me that he needed a note from campus security saying I was leaving the residence for the weekend,” Cell said.

Pignatello, 21, physical education major.

“Towing is done for the students’ good interest,” said Cell.

No students spoke when the BOT voted on the state of New Jersey’s Plan for Higher Education 1999 Update, “...the state should provide 2/3 of educational operating costs, while students and their families provide 1/3,” said Becker.

“The state treasury is not living up to its obligation,” Becker said.

“Students should be able to accomplish school in four years without big loans.”

A recent article featured in The Montclarion’s Following the Money Trail explained that there was a distributed approx. $23,000 per prisoner as opposed to about $2,000 per student.

The university board of trustees approved a 5% tuition increase for the 1999-2000 school year April 8.

“Why is the state making it harder for us to get an education?” said MSU student Anthony Hodge. “This is sick.”

Funds for centers for the disabled and elderly have also been short-changed in the last decade from a decrease in lottery funds, according to The Gloucester Times.

The lottery was allowed after New Jersey residents voted on its acceptance, but voters are unaware that this money is supporting prisons. Most voted on allowing it to conduct business if the taxes from the casinos would be for social benefit, said Becker.

“The Gloucester Times has started a petition to keep money going to educational institutions instead of going towards correctional institutions.

Prisons secretly receiving state lottery proceeds

State lottery funds intended to support state schools are reportedly being redirected towards prison maintenance and construction.

Prisons received $1.8 billion in the past decade while education received $1 billion, according to The Gloucester Times.

According to New Jersey’s Plan for Higher Education 1999 Update, “...the state should provide 2/3 of educational operating costs, while students and their families provide one-third.” Students are receiving 55 to 58 percent, Dr. Katherine Becker, AFT-local 1904 president said.

“The state treasury is not living up to its obligation,” Becker said. “Students should be able to accomplish school in four years without big loans.”

Government Association fee will not be increased in Fiscal Year 2000.

“Two years ago, we raised it [tuition] 9.3 percent. Last year, we raised it 7.3 percent,” said Vitaly Satonovsky, BOT student representative. “Although we have to raise tuition, we hope that they [New Jersey] increase funding.”

We need to get behind this and we need to lobby [for better funding],” said Satonovsky. “Education is still not seen [by the state of New Jersey] as that important.”

In her Jan. 23 Budget Message, Governor Christine Todd Whitman stated that all public institutions of higher learning would receive a 2.5 percent increase in general appropriations and a 1 percent increase if the institutions met certain academic benchmarks.

The tuition increase is another step in making public education less accessible to students, said Dr. Catherine Becker, President of AFT Local 1904, in a prepared statement before the board.

The formula where the state provides funding for 2/3 of every student's education and the student provides 1/3 is “witnessing steady erosion,” said Becker.

“We have to make our dollars work smarter, not harder,” said Ned T. Gross, Jr., at the March 30 Board of Trustees Tuition Hearing.

No students spoke when the BOT voted on the tuition and fees increase.
Emergency repairs to fix leaking Clove Road roof

By Justin Velucci
Opinion Page Editor

Emergency roof repairs on the 300-section of the Clove Road Apartments will begin at the end of this month, said Kiki Williams, Director of the physical plant. The Office of the Physical Plant received a string of student complaints about the leaking ceilings during the fall semester, said Williams.

Though a purchase order was issued by the physical plant in January, the roof repairs could not be performed during the winter. By Williams’ recommendation, and under MSU Purchasing Policies and Procedures, Dr. Patricia Hewitt, the Vice President of Business and Finance, declared the repair of the roof an emergency project. She began authorizing purchases without public bidding to ensure immediate repair.

The Office of Business and Finance declined comment on the cost of emergency repairs, but Williams said the total cost for the emergency repairs of the 300-section is $56,000. Williams said that the total cost of repairs to all sections of the roof is estimated at $287,000.

A water heater flooded room 308b of the Clove Road Apartments, Tuesday, resulting in moderate flooding and water damage. Around 2 p.m., Catherine Martinez, resident of apartment 308a, noticed water dripping from the ceiling of her living room, which is directly below the room in which the eruption occurred.

“When I saw the drip, I went upstairs to see what was going on. When I came back down, the water was gushing out,” said Martinez.

The water entered the living room, kitchen, and closet, and came from the sprinklers and other small openings all at once, said Cathy Martinez, Stacey Farraccone, and Sherri Square.

The three residents scrambled for buckets and pots to catch the leaking water. They had to empty two water-filled wastebaskets several times.

“The only permanent damage may be to the apartment itself, not our stuff,” said Stacy Fantacome, another resident of room 308a. Residents felt it was too early to tell if any of their personal belongings were permanently damaged.

Fantacome said their electricity had to be shut off for the night. Wet items were a stereo, lamp, and rug.

Maintenance arrived within five minutes, 308a residents said. A new 40 gallon water heater was installed in room 308b, while maintenance vacuumed the wet rug.

“We came to finish the job,” said maintenance repairman Tom Perry. “The day shift took the old heater out and the night shift put in the new one.”

“The inside lining cracks because they get old. They last a good two to three years,” Perry said.

“I was sitting on the couch, talking on the phone. I heard something with a lot of pressure. The next thing I did was I went to the roof of the building where the water was and saw water coming out of the corner,” said room 308b resident Amparo Garcia.

Garcia said that she ran upstairs to call the Clove Road office to report the incident. When she returned, she saw water coming out of the sp. Debris also needs to be replaced,” said Williams. “There are still problems in the 200s and 300s.”

that I was allowed to park there for those few short minutes,” said Medolla.

Despite what residents think, Lt. Cell is assured that students would appreciate the efforts of campus safety and security if an emergency arises.

“Although I understand why campus police are taking higher measures against illegal parking, I also know that the students have enough expenses to worry about and towing just adds to those expenses,” said Elizabeth Anglim, 18, music education major.

Campus Police uses Sam’s Garage on Watchung Ave. in Upper Montclair as their primary towing company. “Towing companies are selected through a bidding system and bids are based on location, cost, and availability to the students,” said Cell.

All ticketing and towing is done by campus police and students being towed can expect to pay a minimum of $35-$45. Extra fees are added for storage and service fees when applicable.

Campus community puts ability back in disability

By Lisa Gribbin
Assistant Feature Editor

The week of April 5 marked the first annual Disabilities Awareness Week. During the week a variety of activities and lectures were held to promote student and faculty awareness of the disabilities people may suffer from. The week hopefully gave a clearer picture to the many kinds of disabilities that people are diagnosed with and conquered every day.

On Monday, April 5, a New Jersey Wheelchair All-Stars vs. MSU basketball game was held in the Panzer Gym. Fraternity members, faculty, students and members of the MSU basketball team played against the All-Star team. The game proved challenging to the participants of MSU, who displayed some difficulty keeping up with the visiting team. After the game went overtime, the MSU team proved victorious over the MSU team.

Kenny Fries, author of Staring Back: The Disability Experience from Inside Out, visited the students on Tuesday, April 6 in Dickson Hall. Fries, an activist in disability and AIDS movements as well as an author of poetry and personal experience, spoke to the MSU community about disabilities from a personal viewpoint.

On Wednesday, April 7 in the Student Center Lobby, MSU junior Gilma Vargas, an account representative, spoke to the MSU community about disabilities from a personal viewpoint. Vargas, who is in a wheelchair, stated that the comic "used a positive spin on the use of humor as part of being healthy and whole person." She also commented that he successfully used a mix of comedy and disability humor to entertain the audience.

Disabilities Awareness Week proved to be an informative and insightful look into the many disabilities that people young and old are faced with. The term disabled includes all kinds of disabilities: learning, emotional and physical. The faculty and students successfully worked together to give the university community an understanding of how the disabled overcome the challenges of daily life by continually looking forward to each new day.

The week would not have been possible without the dedication of Dr. Elaine Fine, chair of the MSU Senate Committee on the Services of Persons with Learning Disabilities, Linda Smith, the coordinator of Services for Students with Disabilities and the committee of students who assisted with the awareness week. Ellson stated that the work of Fine and Smith "brought the committee together and helped everyone become advocates for disability services." If you would like to learn more about any type of disability or belong to an organization that would like to sponsor an activity for a disability, you can contact Dr. Elaine Fine at x7361 and Linda Smith at x5431. You can also go to the Sprague Library to check out the exhibit on books with a disability theme on display until April 30.

Warning Signs of a Learning Disability

If you suspect you have a learning disability, you may be experiencing one or more of the following symptoms. They include:

- Weak grasp of explanation
- Poor written expression
- Failure to elaborate
- Trouble summarizing
- Trouble taking tests
- Mental fatigue
- Weak cumulative memory
- Loss of motor skills

These symptoms are not a diagnosis but guidelines to follow if you are seeking assessment for a possible learning disability. All information taken from "Learning Disorders and the Flow of Expectations" by Melvin D. Levine, M.D.

Dial - 7 opens for Vanilla Ice at Tramps

By Lynette Surie

West coast band Dial-7 invents their own style with the mix of reggae, jazz, rock, hip-hop, and punk. It is that sound which livened the crowd last Thursday at Tramps in NYC. To break it down, Dial-7 consists of multi-racial, musically-mixed and undefinable guys. Their idea of unity and harmony between all people, and that is one of the most refreshing things about them. As most of the hip-hop artists today sing about hate and revenge, Dial-7 open their voices to peace.

Dial-7 started in the mid '90s with vocalists and rappers Michael Lord, Steven Lord and Shauny B. The band moved in together in California's Laguna Canyon off of highway 133. They began to realize what they had in their hands, and named themselves Dial-7 because of the symbolism that the number seven has.

One of the founding members and brother of Michael Lord, Steven Lord was killed as a passenger in a drunk-driving accident. Powered by the death of Stephen Lord (known by fans of the band as Kid Bone), Dial-7 now thrives as a five-piece. An eponymous tribute to Kid Bone opens Never Enough Time.

Dial-7 has played on the same bill as Run DMC, De La Soul, The Pharcyde, KORN, Sugar Ray, Buck O Nine, Foo Fighters, Orgy and many others because of their widespread appeal. Their NYC performance was something out of the ordinary. Their loud and growling melodies captured their east coast audience into a frenzy of jumping and flailing kids. Even though it was hard to understand their lyrics through their unyielding screams, the audience could not care less.

Last Thursday they shared the stage with Queens local Skarhead, and headliner Vanilla Ice. To their credit, the crowd pulsed with their vibe though many had never heard of the band before. Dial-7 should really be given their fair shot on the east coast. Unlike rap, their music cannot be defined by coastlines. The CD is better listened to, as for being able to hear the lyrics, but the enthusiasm of Dial-7 live is unsurpassable. Pick up their album, Never Enough Time, and give it a listen, or if they come around again, run, do not walk, to catch them in action. You will not be disappointed.

Imagine the possibilities, they said, about eight or so years ago, sixteen-year-old Nasty Nas - an incredible lyricist from Queensbridge will become one of the best. Well, here he is with his third album entitled "I Am...The Autobiography." The hip-hop scriptures have been written and recorded.

"Nas Is Like," the first single off the new album "I Am..." uncovers traces of the lyricist we used to call nasty. Not since Nas and Large Professor’s collaboration on "It Ain’t Hard To Tell" have we heard the kinds of poetic sounds that give goose bumps at first listen. With production by DJ Premier the album is tight. In fact, with offerings like "Money Is My Bitch," though near-genius in its metaphor, and "Favor For A Favor," which features the captivating vocals of Scarface, Nas Escobar has hit the world with another classic.

"Hate Me Now," the second single featuring Puff Daddy hit the airwaves with the rendition that "Escobar season has returned!" as Puffy says. His duet with DMX on "Life Is What You Make It" just adds to the flame of the diverse way he rhymes and the adversity he has gone through to get to where he is. He also hit the album off with a R&B duet with Aaliyah on the track entitled "You Won’t See Me Tonight" Nas gives his indictment of the government on "C.I.A." And the 1999 version of "One Love," in which he dedicats the track to another classic.

"Money Is My Bitch," though near-genius in its metaphor, and "Favor For A Favor," which features the captivating vocals of Scarface, Nas Escobar has hit the world with another classic.

The hip-hop Autobiography, is a struggle between two sides of Nas and in the end who will win?

The 1999 SGA Elections: Caring for Students Who Don’t Care

Early reports this week indicated that voter turn-out was high, that MSU students were becoming more active and vocal, that the goal to increase student involvement in the SGA proposed by the 1998-99 executive board had been accomplished.

The early reports, of course, were wrong. What is the SGA to do? 783 students turned out during the four days of voting to speak their minds about who should run next year’s executive board of the Student Government Association, Inc. So, what did the second-lowest voter turnout in MSU history have to say?

John Griffin, unopposed, won the Presidency. Nidara Rourk beat William Guardino for Secretary, surprising many who saw Guardino as an extremely active and experienced member of the SGA. Shariff Elhagin edged out Latasha Casterlow for Treasurer by a mere 26 votes, one of the closest margins in recent memory. Ned Gross Jr. beat Thomas J. Esposito to be next year’s BOT Student Alternate. SGA Attorney General Lauren Jacoby said that the fact that the Presidency and Vice-Presidency were uncontested possibly could have caused less students to vote. Last year, with a contested Presidency but several other positions running unopposed, 775 students voted. Is this a reflection of poor election policy or a general reflection on the SGA’s place in the mind of the MSU student population? What does it all mean?

The SGA cannot be blamed entirely for the fact that many MSU students are disinterested, lethargic, uninvolved and — here comes the one that everyone is waiting for — apathetic. The present e-board, led by President Anton Wheeler, set out last spring, after the elections, on an ambitious and almost-impossible mission: Get students more involved in the SGA. How can you gauge the growth of something that massive? Do the 783 votes stand against last year’s even-more-pitiful 775 as the completion of the SGA’s goal to get more students involved?

To affect students, and not just students who are involved in organizations of the SGA, student government needs to address the concerns and needs of all students. And that is beyond difficult. Yes, there are issues of publicity, of attempts on the part of SGA officers to make valuable changes known to the entire campus. But there are also much bigger factors: actually forcing change to occur on campus and beyond through real legislation and initiative. The SGA has the power to do this... will they?

While not all of the candidates endorsed by The Montclarion won in the executive board elections, we still firmly believe that those elected are more than capable of the jobs to which they have been chosen to take. Though the campaigning has ended the promises cannot fade away.

So, to the recently-elected e-board members: congratulations. We hope that, in the coming year, you affect the campus and the students to whom it belongs as you have promised. Though only a small percentage of students voted, you still represent us all and we hope that our faith in your abilities is not proven wrong. And, until changes begin and become noticed, and students become more active and engaged in the SGA (though this sounds like more of an ideal than a tangible goal), we are left with questions to which we hope that the recently-elected e-board might provide the answers.

Examining Feminist Ideals Within Christian Scripture and Faith

I said something to a friend of mine that was rather impulsive. I apologized quickly, sincerely, and achted for what I had said. "If you insult a woman, you're insulting one of God's creations," she said. That brings to mind something that few take into consideration: the idea that the Bible and Christianity do not contradict femininity. It is a fact that many have explained women in numerous and terrible ways, claiming that they have no value, as they misidentify the scriptures to suit their needs. These men were opposing Christian principles and steps should be taken to correct them.

In the light of the current conflict between the Serbs and Kosovar Albanians, and as the Serbian President Milosevic is attempting to salvage his legacy through taking strong, decisive military action, it is solely because of him that Operation Allied Force is taking place.

There is an unapposed candidate for the SGA student committee. They could rate candidates issues important to the student body. There were three separate times yesterday, the first two in the Rathskellar, and the third time in the Ratakeller, as I walked a friend home.

Perhaps the answer is to give students some initiative to show up and vote. First, any candidate caught crowding around the building where the voting is taking place should face disqualification. Each candidate should be allowed to print information about themselves in one page handout with a head shot. These should be piled next to the voting booths for interested parties.

I on the other hand was and is of the opinion that God was supporting them as they misquote the scriptures...
Kosovo was an epicenter of social unrest long before NATO bombings

The problems in Kosovo did not start when NATO began bombing. Kosovo was, after all, the best of all possible places for a Serb person to live at that time. The Serbs, especially the Kosovars, had been under the control of the Bosnian Serb government of Slobodan Milosevic. In April 1999, NATO began bombing Yugoslavia, and the Serbs, under Milosevic, retaliated by bombing Kosovo.

According to the Spring 1999 Enrollment Report, there is a total enrollment of 12,174 graduate and undergraduate students at the University of Mississippi. The total number of Latinos enrolled at MSU is 610 graduate and undergraduate students.

The U.S. government is not the only power that makes decisions about what happens in the world. When we talk about the role of the U.S. in the Gulf War, we must consider the role of the other countries involved. The war was not just a U.S. war; it was a war that involved many countries, including the U.S.

The issue of immigration is a complex one. It involves not only the U.S., but also other countries that have similar issues. It is important to consider the role of the U.S. in the global economy and how it affects other countries.

The Voices Told Me to Write This

By Chris Finegan
His girlfriend draws pictures.

We’re approaching crunch time here at Montclair State University. The thousands of students who populate our classes and fill our halls are starting to grow weary of working unreasonable hours in their valiant attempts to absorb as much knowledge as possible. Their dream is to make their college education truly the best it could be, and surely, studies are high on this list of dedicated.

Okay, I can’t go on anymore. It’s crap. It’s all crap. It has been since the beginning. It’s a beautiful day out there and I’m shut up in this little room with no windows. It’s 5:00 PM here, my deadline was yesterday, and I’m still working on my section right now. I’m under a considerable bit of stress. It’s a wonder I haven’t grabbed a 12-gauge and blown away someone who comes in and asks me, “I know your deadline was two days ago and the paper goes to press in three hours, but can I still put in an ad?” NO! Maybe you sit on a pitchfork and grab a hot stove for support. I think I’ll listen to her because:

A) It can’t hurt.
B) I’m normally happy and this is REALLY annoying.
And, C) As my dad told me long ago, “Always listen to the hot blonde.”

Wheel of Fortune: An adjunct professor here at Montclair State earns $450 per credit hour. Vanessa White gets hundreds of thousands of dollars a year plus a free wardrobe to touch lights. That right there should tell you something. But what really bothers me about this show is the fact that they seem to be solely responsible for the dumbing down of America. At least The Price is Right has the only women incognitos, in disguise, as they are on my chest. I scream out in one of those retarded dog raincoats and kitty sweaters. All that runs through their pea-sized minds a few delicate parts. My overactive imagination could just picture it.

So I don’t need a college education so long as I know how to play a game that I used to play in boring middle school classes. Speckles point to a much in favor of higher education as the World Wrestling Federation. At least in the WWF, they hit each other with pitchfork and grab a hot stove for support. All that runs through their pea-sized minds a few delicate parts. My overactive imagination could just picture it.

The Muffin man is dead!

The word for the night was intrigue...

Deception, the all-male club, was where my roommate, Sherry, and I were trying to get into so we could spy on her boyfriend. I swallowed the hot-to-trot masquerade manner and clinched to Sherry’s sleeve. She immediately punched me in the boobs/padded chest and hissed something unintelligible.

So this is what my life had come to. Masquerading as a man for kicks. I had my breath taken by the six-foot bouncer who was wreaked in shadows and looked like he bench pressed a few gazillion tons, and could probably - with a mere flick of his pinky - send me flying into another layer of ozone, regarded my I.D. and perused my family physically speaking. You see, it is nice to see that Morgan Fairchild can develop not only a paunch but breasts! After all, many men need bras,” or, “Don’t mind them, we have a lot of problems in my family physically speaking. You see, it’s freaks—

Sherry nudged me hard. The bouncer was waving us with a flashlight. I let out my breath in a rush as a few people gave Sherry and I knowing looks. They thought Sherry was the “aggressor” in the relationship, which was true. Only, we weren’t male and we weren’t a gay couple. I shrugged. If we could just make it through this night without getting into too much trouble...

Walking into the club, I was slightly overwhelmed. I had this Tokyo-like feeling of massive overpopulation. To get by someone you practically had to sit in their laps, which involved smelling a horse load a’ B.O. It was hot, I felt claustrophobic, and I thought I would disgust my male image by swaying to the beat. On the other hand, we were the only women in the joint. Correction, we were the only women who were strippers and that did not really count - at least to the men. All they were looking at was what was visible, and naturally that was just about every fruit in the bowl, or every lemon on the tree, if you get my meaning.

Walking to the bar, I pondered over the dilemma of what to drink. Should I pick beer or perhaps a Long Island Iced Tea.

By the way, I was not a female though, so if you prayed to God at least once or twice a minute that your friends wouldn’t see you, “All right, we’ve had enough. Get in the corner!” Lo and behold, off in the corner the bouncer begins to frisk me with his mighty paws/hands. Suddenly his hands still as he is on my chest. I scream out in one of those retarded dog raincoats and kitty sweaters. All that runs through their pea-sized minds a few delicate parts. My overactive imagination could just picture it.

Those Old Navy Commercials: Do I really need to explain this one? If I see that anything old goes, I’m gone. Get in again, I might just have another one of my “episodes.” Last time, I woke up with a hump of meat in my head. On the bright side, it is nice to see that Morgan Fairchild can still find work.

Stupid Corporate Jargon: For example, “Thinking outside the box.” What? The box? Am I in the box right now? How did I get in here in the first place? Am I in trouble? That might make sense. I’m picturing a meeting full of suits sitting around a conference table. Someone makes a stupid and/or obvious point and rambles on for half an hour. I.D. and perused my family physically speaking. You see, it’s nice to see that Morgan Fairchild can still find work.

A Linguistic Dilemma

By John Fruscante
He has a tremendous singing voice.

I can’t stand the word “actress.” “Actor” itself is a unisexual term, why do people feel the need to take a unisexual suffix (-or) and make it feminine? Well, here’s what happened when I got to the bottom of this aggravating misuse of language. The first person I went to was my doctoress, whom I knew was the authoress of a new book on the subject. She said that there was a study being planned by her board of directresses, that their offices were across town, and that I could find more information there.

So I sought to seek them out. On the way I accidentally wandered into the wrong room, the janitress’ closet. I heard the doress slam shut behind me, and when I tried to go home instructions: “Never give up. And put on a shirt, will you?”

So I raced across town in hopes of catching these wise people who supposedly held the answer. When I approached them with my burning question, I learned that no such investigation into the matter was planned. They decided not to go through with it because they really didn’t care. It seemed that I’d been lied to, led astray. The woman who told me there was going to be a study done, and thus led me on this wild goose chase, turned out to be a traitress.

Well, I don’t want to belabor the point. Nobody was able to properly answer my question as to why so many people senselessly go against the grain of the English language.

So it’s up to you and I. The next time you hear someone referred to as an actress, correct the linguistic offender by saying, “Excuse me, that’s ‘actor’ or, at the very least, ‘female actor’. And don’t forget it lest language.

is no “L,” there is a “ML.” And an “AM.” Also an “AT.” And a “MEAT.” There’s no 1 in TEAM, but ME AM AT MEAT. This sounds to me like either my dog’s thought process, Bill Clinton’s thought process, or a new advertising slogan for a restaurant chain. “Welcome to Wendy’s! ME AM AT MEAT!” I recommend that the next time someone tells you that there’s no 1 in TEAM, you smash them upside the head, rip off your clothing and bite them in the neck. Yell at the top of your lungs, “ME AM AT MEAT!”

Parking: It was one of John J.’s favorite topics, so I guess I’ll bitch and moan about it as well. I can’t count the number of times I’ve ventured into the remote wilderness of the MSU parking lots and around going, “Where the hell did I park?” I’m getting really sick of it, but things have to get worse before they get better. Still, the problem seems to be that there just isn’t enough space to accommodate all 50,000 students at our campus. For this, though, I have a solution! Build an extension up from Bohn Hall’s top floor. Move every one from the fifth floor down into the extension and turn the lower levels into a garage. Sure, the building could tip the hell over, but maintenance would NEVER in a million years let that happen. And this way, when people started chanting late at night, riot students could grab their keys, mow those feets over, and go back to sleep.

Of course, faculty would be required to park in the Close Road lot and suffer the indignity of the shuttle bus.

Well, there you have it. I feel better. I am now sufficiently able to carry on my duties as a editor of this fine publication. My girlfriend was right. I may or may not have the best sense of Humor!, but I am funny as hell when I’m drunk. I’m an editor! Time for a beer.

Intramural Basketball

By Ed Flannery
Staff Writer

It’s all over. All the games have been played. All the scores have been tallied. Of the fourteen starry-eyed teams that set out for Intramural glory, only one team remains.

The season, which stretched from the middle of February until last night, was filled with exciting basketball. There were some upsets, some blowouts and more highlight reel dunks than you could imagine (thanks, Omar).

Feel Deeze won it all in less than dramatic fashion as they easily handled ONN with a final score of 78-50. Feel Deeze was not challenged much at all this season, which was little surprise to anybody who followed the league. Their only loss, a disqualification early on, was the only blemish on their 15-1 record.

Throughout the play-offs, Feel Deeze ended the season for the Syntschaholics and The Swarm before defeating ONN. ONN (15-1) defeated the Theta Xi Underdawgs and Team Undecided on their road to the Championship game.

The Pirate Eyes (8-6) won their regular season game to secure the sixth spot in the playoffs. Their championship dreams were shut-down by one of the best in the league, The Swarm (11-4).

Team Undecided (9-6) managed the only upset in the tournament as the bumbed off Fast Break in the Quarterfinals.

The Tournament started on Sunday night with the Syntschaholics beating the Underdawgs. Later in the evening, Theta Xi (7-8) finished off the Blanton Bearcats (6-7).

The four day tournament went according to plan without alterations or incidents. The season had a less than happy ending for OTD. Because they forfeited their last game to Fast Break (9-4-1), they were ejected from the league to join Pi Kappa Alpha and Delta Chi as the three teams to receive such a dubious distinction.

Another result of the forfeit was the fact that wins were rewarded to the Social Drinkers (5-8) and the Underdawgs (3-10).
Inconsistency in baseball may lead to disappointing season

Montclair State Baseball played a double header on Saturday April 10th against New Jersey City University. MSU split the two games, winning the first one 8-1 and losing the second 7-5.

In the first game, Chris Keelin pitched a flawless game for MSU. MSU hitting was also on fire as MSU absolutely riddled New Jersey City University. The second game was a little different. New Jersey City jumped out to a 7-0 lead as MSU tried to mount a late rally. The pitching was non existent for MSU as it allowed seven runs. Although MSU tried to mount a rally, their rally fell short as Frank Francia hit a two run home run.

With these two games, MSU fell to 12-11 and 3-4 in the NJAC. It is the first time this year that MSU is playing below .500.

MSU Baseball. MSU seems to have the same problems of inconsistency. In one game, MSU seemed to look great not at all playing as their record suggests and in the next, they play very much indicative of their record. MSU will have to solve their problems of inconsistent play. One would however argue that MSU's problem isn't inconsistency but pitching. Can the pitching pitch on high levels consistently and can the hitting stay consistent? This is the question that will have to be answered throughout the season.

All the ingredients are there for a great team. Will MSU respond with the heart and dedication that they have shown in previous championship runs? MSU also played Kean University Tuesday because of two consecutive rain outs. This time the Red Hawks showed their consistency and depth as they eliminated Kean 8-5. Greg Belson and Chris Keelin proved too much for Kean as they pitching proved too much for Kean hitters.

The Red Hawk hitting excelled under Francia, Brian Kermizian and Mark Houser. The Red Hawks looked sharp as the Kean outfield looked sloppy dropping many fly balls much to the delight of the MSU fans and hecklers.

The Ramapo game this Friday will reveal a lot about the Red Hawks character and determination and it will show whether the Red Hawks are truly the team which they say they are?

If they do, then one certain ingredient to that effort will have to include Francia. Known as the "hitman" by his fellow teammates, Francia is probably the strongest hitter not to mention purest hitter in the Red Hawks roster. It's guys like him who make pitchers shudder with fright. In the third inning, Francia showed the MSU fans his pure power when he launched a power shot into right field. It would have been a homer but the ball went foul.

Francia is certainly not alone in his power hitting class. Houser and Kermizian help Francia with the power hitting. In my eyes, MSU has improved its overall play. I cannot say if they are playoff bound just quite yet but they certainly look better than when they started the season.

Senior catcher/infield Jamie Lascik reached base seven times with five RBI's this past Tuesday in a doubleheader played at MSU's Quarry Field. For the season, Lascik is now batting .571 with an on-base percentage of .689.

The senior forward paced Feel Deeze to the Intramural Championship. His prophetic wisdom not only intimidated opponents, but it also served as a catalyst for his team's success. All season, Griffith showed the ability to play all over the court, ultimately recording a double-double (16 points, 11 rebounds) in the championship game.
Montclair stays hot with winning streak at eleven

Montclair State University’s women softball team was command- ing this past week, sweeping both Salisbury State (MD), and William Paterson University in doubleheaders played at MSU’s Quarry Field.

With the victories, the Red Hawks improved their record to 24-3, NJACC 2-0.

Senior Sue McCarville pitched two more complete games and improved her rate to 17-1, while teammate Jamie Lascik reached base seven times with five runs batted in.

William Paterson struck first scoring a run in the top of the first, but after that it was all Montclair. The Hawks scored four runs, taking a 4-1 lead in the bottom of the first inning after sophomore Evelyn Mottuzzi hit a two-run single for a 3-1 lead. The fourth run was a result of a throwing error.

Lascik recorded her second home run of the season in the second half, giving MSU a 7-1 lead.

The final score was 9-1 in favor of Montclair.

For MSU, Lascik was 2-2 with four RBI’s, a home run and a double, two runs scored and a walk, while Kim Caruso also went 2-2 with one run batted in. McCarville was phenomen­al once again, allowing no walks, giving up only four hits, and striking out one batter.

In the second game of the doubleheader, Montclair also over­powered WFU with a 5-4 victory.

The Red Hawks trailed early in this game also by the score of 4-1 after the first inning, but scored two runs in the third and an additional two in the fifth. Junior Lisa Czamecki recorded the winning run, smacks­ ing a double to left center with two out and two on.

Her double scored two runs which made the final score 5-4.

For the Hawks, Alex Lamont was 2-4 with an RBI, while Lascik was 2-2 with an RBI and two runs scored.

Feel Deeze Fullfills Prophecy

"By defeating ONN by a score of 78-50, Feel Deeze won the Intra­mural Basketball Championships on Wednesday night in Panzer Gymnasium.

Feel Deeze proved too strong early on, as they ran out of the gates to a 13-2 lead before ONN used a time-out to try and stop the bleeding. The run was led by Omar Booth who shot 3 for three in the early minutes to get Feel Deeze fired up.

Feel Deeze was led by MSU Varsity Basketball legend and captain Rohan Sutherland and his 23 points and 4 rebounds. Sutherland also performed a magnificent 5 for 5 from the free throw line in pacing his squad.

Omar Booth also led Feel Deeze in scoring with 24 points. Although Booth is sometimes criticized for his outside shooting, he poured in 4 three pointers.

However, not all of his points came from outside the key. Booth electrified the crowd with four spectacular second half dunks.

The always outspoken Kyle "The Prophet" Griffin chimed in by saying, "I told you. I told the whole world. They Felt Deeze!"

"I told you. I told the whole world. They Felt Deeze!"
