SGA Resolves IRS Violations
Part II: Alumini Job Hunting

During this past summer, junior Michael Rusiniak saved an 18-year-old Clifton resident from drowning in the Terrace Pond located in Wawayanda State Park in West Milford. Rusiniak and two of his friends were around the pond cooling off after doing some hiking when they noticed another person struggling in the water. ‘The boy had blood-shot eyes, he was gasping for air and had trouble keeping himself afloat,’ Rusiniak said.

When they got to the boy, he said that he had not informed his parents about his swimming in the pond for the missing brother, who was 17-years-old, had drowned. Rusiniak and his two friends, 20-year-old John Spaulding and 18-year-old Kevin Biglin saw nothing and decided to bring the boys to shore before going back and searching for his brother.

‘They told me I should talk with my parents and find out what had happened. They then searched for me and I just needed some pamphlets on abortion and the stigma that comes with them,’ Rusiniak said. ‘They were unable to find his body and informed them of a ticket they had gotten for illegal swimming when he rescued an 18-year-old Clifton Resident from drowning in Terrace Pond.’ Later that month, Rusiniak and his friends each received a phone call thanking them for their heroic actions, but also informing them of a ticket for violating the Wawayanda State Park rules. Since the boys all jumped in the water, they included a non-swimming policy and received a $71 dollar summons.

According to Preciado, ‘At the moment we are trying to fight all the tickets and we are still waiting for our papers from the court.’

SGA President

The Student Government Association resolved their IRS violations by having a 1977 amendment overturned. The amendment needed a majority vote to have the amendment be overridden. Jon Preciado, president of the SGA, explained this was the only option at the time.

‘An election was carried out online for 80 days. This election yielded a turnout of over one mere 1,000 students, nowhere near the required amount. According to Preciado, the SGA Resolved IRS Violations Continued on Page 6

The group's goal was to communicate its message to children. It was founded by students in different schools and was then taken over by the National Peace Secretariat, a group that played an active role in disarming and de-mining machines.

Very early in life he went through many traumatizing experiences. From a young age, Clinton has been involved in the civil war and its consequences. The Voice of the Future worked to provide food assistance and basic health services to the people in Liberia. It also aimed to educate the people in the country.

At the age of 12, Clinton joined the Peace Secretariat and also traveled with UNICEF, the United Nations agency dedicated to protecting children. The Voice of the Future, a local child organization, Project for the New Liberia, and the United Nations have condemned the war. Clinton also attended several international meetings as an ambassador of Liberia to request the support of the international community to bring an end to the war.

The start of his political career was marked by the start of the civil war in Liberia. In 1995, Liberia found itself in a situation that was in the midst of a bloody war that would last 14 years. By the age of seven, Clinton was a young man in a country that was in the midst of a civil war.

The project is currently fighting corruption in Liberia. The Liberian situation, because other politicians along with political parties engage and look at the Liberian society and see what are the issues they need to address.

Clinton hopes to the people of Liberia to experience the society first hand. With the collaboration of the United Nations, Clinton hopes to lead a MSU student delegation similar to Nicaragua in 2010, to Liberia, in either 2010 or 2011, for others to see how things operate in that part of the world. Clinton also hopes to cooperate with different campus and student organizations to set up drives for ordinary things we take for granted that are lacking in Liberia, such as pens, notebooks and even used computers.

The universitites are far below the standard, there's no books for the students. A lot of them stand in classrooms on their feet and can hardly hear the professor. We intend to work with institutions in America, have them provide some of the basic things they don't want; there are people that have books here, he stages Dr. and the new technical school. These things are very useful in Africa.

Clinton has already started to connect with the MSU State Community, by speaking to the administration.

“I intend to meet with MSU administration to see how we can part- ner with various tech schools, and in what way they can help the universities. I discussed with the staff in the past the possibility in having a conference in Liberia and Montclair State University. I believe it's going to be the first of its kind. We could have the president of Liberia and other politicians along with political parties engage and look at the Liberian society and see what are the issues they need to address.

We can find a solution to the problems in Liberia.

Discussion Focused on College Education and Job Market

John King, anchor of CNN's State of the Union and his wife, CNN senior congressional correspondent answer questions about broadcasting and media ethics.

Producer Stuart Schwartz. Bash and casting professor and ABC news professor and Bash is the daughter of MSU broadcasting students at the Dumont TV Center last Monday.

"We try to keep each other balanced," Bash said of her husband and fellow CNN correspondent, King. "Sometimes it's tough." Bash is the daughter of MSU broadcasting professor and ABC news professor and Bash is the daughter of MSU broadcasting students at the Dumont TV Center last Monday.

"It's kind of cool to have their perspective on things besides professors you see every day ... We're all trying to get jobs like [King and Bash], so it's good to hear what they're saying," said Timothy Feeley, a senior broadcasting student in the "Media Ethics" course.

King and Bash shared tips with the students on how to make the most out of their college education and be successful in the future job market. Both suggested that internships are valuable learning tools.

"The business is changing in ways that being curious and having good writing skills are just as important as having technological skills in the field of broadcasting says King.

"It's all about being relevant to your audience," King said. "With the fireswals of your own standards.

The event was King's first visit to the MSU campus and he says he enjoys learning from students. After the class period ended, he spent 30 additional minutes talking to five broadcasting students about the future of the news industry.

Last month, CNN announced that John King would host a new show that will air during the time slot formerly occupied by anchor Lou Dobbs. King's new show is expected to debut in early 2010.

The question to be asked is how many students know about healthcare?" I never knew the importance or the cost of health insurance when I was in college. For a couple years, we are really going to feel it because we will pay. Cost rates are not reimbursing the costs for patients and doctors and that is the reason why most people don't think about it." Zilbergeld said.

"The discussion was held in Richardson Hall hosted by Dr. Lisa Lieberman from the department of health and nutrition and Dr. George Zilbergeld from the Department of Political science.

Zilbergeld said.

Throughout the seminar, there was an understandable contrast between Canada's free healthcare for all, regardless of income status and the United States' capitalist society that does not offer healthcare to all.

"But there is nothing more silly than talking about the cost when it comes to healthcare," Zilbergeld said.

The seminar was ended with one simple "no.

"It's important to have your own views on the bill," Zilbergeld said.

"I think Obama's healthcare plan is wonderful because it provides low income families with healthcare," Freshman Shashan Ward said.

One important statement made by Dr. Lieberman during the discussion was, "The system can only work on the basis of the fact that everyone is in the system, even the healthy." Mike Shirman, student government association vice president, asked "What if I was to get extremely sick, can the public option drop my insurance plan?" The response to his question was a simple "no.

Students, faculty, staff and family members arrive at a H1N1 clinic at Blanton Hall yesterday. Barry said leftover doses will be shipped to other centers who are low on the H1N1 vaccine.

The number of cases of flu on campus have decreased significantly in the past two weeks, according to the director of the University Health Center, Donna Barry.

"The clinic was a huge success with many students and family members attending," she said.

At yesterday's H1N1 clinic, the health center vaccinated approximately 275 people in a three hour period. These students will be followed through their everyday lives on campus where viewers will witness situations caused by stigma and where the students will gain insight into how various situations might be handled.

The University has administered over 2,000 doses of vaccine on campus, and the number of flu cases have decreased significantly in the past two weeks, according to the director of the University Health Center, Donna Barry.

Barry said leftover doses will be shipped to other centers who are low on the H1N1 vaccine.

when he and his administration took office, they felt that getting a two thirds vote from the student body was not going to be effective. Instead, the Executive Board did research.

"The Executive Board spent hours piling through minutes from 1976 and 1994 Legislative meetings. We found that back in 1977, the SGA’s Board of Trustees failed to obtain a 2/3 vote when these changes were made. The articles were also amended in 1994, without obtaining a 2/3 vote of the undergraduate student body," explained Preciado.

The SGA presented their discoveries in the Superior Court of New Jersey. The amendments of 1977 and 1994 were rescinded through the NJ Division of Revenue.

Preciado’s administration was able to resolve the issues of both amendments in a successful manner. Preciado concluded, “At present, the SGA’s Certificate of Incorporation is in alignment with the tax codes of the State of New Jersey and the IRS. No further action needs to be taken, and none of the SGA’s assets will be lost for this issue.”

Open Letter to Doris Lim (General Manager of Dining Services)

Hello, my name is AuCo La. I’m a sophomore here at MSU and I am writing in regards to Chef Alex Diaz from Freeman Dining Hall at MSU.

I just wanted to thank you and anyone else who was involved in hiring him. Ever since his arrival, the quality of the food and service here in Freeman has risen exponentially. He really cares about us students and genuinely feels that we deserve the best quality of food that he can provide and for that, many of us are extremely grateful.

With Alex as part of the staff, the entire experience of eating in our dining hall has become rather enjoyable. He works incredibly hard to please us. He checks the quality and availability of the food in the ball frequently and often asks our opinion about the food. He constantly seeks out any suggestions on how to make it more palatable for us students. He takes all comments and suggestions we make into immediate consideration and he even goes out of his way to individually help students with specific dietary needs. He does his best to accommodate all of us, including those of us who have irritatingly rare and non-life-threatening allergies. We felt that he does all this simply because we all can leave saying that we honestly had the best possible dining experience.

When he walks out of the kitchen and into the dining hall, his presence is immediately felt by the rise in excitement and joy in the room. People know right away that something good is about to happen.

The food is always better, the vegetables are steamed properly, food is less greasy and the ingredients as well as the complexity of flavors are astounding. The soup stock is made with leftover vegetable cuttings from the food prep instead of powdered mixes which is noticeable by us students. The food just tastes and looks so much better which shows throughout the day.

He is such an amazing and treasured addition to the already great staff and we couldn’t thank you enough for bringing him to us.

Yours truly,
AuCo La

“I needed to talk to someone who would understand that having a child would be so hard on me and my family and I was exhausting the center to have someone think that, but they didn’t.”

After four months of training, all the aches and sweat were worth it for four MSU students who participated in the Hills of Harvest Run on Sunday Nov. 15, in Berkeley Heights, NJ. Connoll Corporate Park, early Sunday morning, was not full of business men and women making their way into the office. It was full of sugar and motivated runners ready to run a 5K or 15K race that supports The Leukemia and Lymphoma Society. Along with the numerous participants, there were runners for the Team in Training University, students from Montclair State University and Rutgers University. Both teams raised over $6,000 dollars to help support the cause. The proceeds benefited the society’s mission to cure Leukemia, Lymphoma, Hodgkin’s Disease and Myeloma, and to help improve the quality of life for pa- tients and their families. The four runners representing Montclair State University were Christina Lashouwer, Kella Fernandez, Catherine Hardy and Martha Garcia. Along with her support her teammates was Ronnie Ray-Eaker-Kelly, the director of the Campus Recreation Center at Montclair State. The Team in Training runners were all sporting navy blue T-shirts that said, “New Jer- sey. Only the Strong Survive.” When these four outstanding leaders started training for the 15K Run, they all were hesitant about completing the 9.3 mile run. The training started at Brookdale Park on Sept. 17, where Glenn Bachman, a volunteer for the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society, was assigned to train the Montclair State team. After a weekend of torrential rain, the weather was mild and dry, and in the runners favor. While the runners were waiting to take off, various vendors were set up in the parking lot such as water, snacks and food for the runners. A DJ was playing motivational and upbeat songs to help the runners get warmed up. Twenty-year old Marta- the Garcia was running her first 15K run while also representing the Mont- clair State’s Team in Training University. The first training with Bachman began a week later at Brookdale Park with 16 students in attendance. “I had a few words of encouragement. He started training with the girls in September, along with 16 other Montclair Stu- dents at Brookdale Park. At the first meeting, Bachman taught stretching techniques and they all ran a mile to- gether. “Treat it like a regular race. Do not do anything you wouldn’t do on any other day.” Before the race began, Bachman, the training coach, gave the girls some words of encouragement. He started training with the girls in September, of the Campus Recreation Center. The following day, the Recreation Cen- ter held an information session about Team in Training and the Hills of Harvest Run. There were 25 students, mainly from the Campus Recreation Staff and three additional professional staff mem- bers. Exploring Bloomfield Avenue: Cambridge Bagels

Sick of (or from) the food on campus? Take a short ride with me to explore the culinary diversity along the historic thoroughfare that is Bloomfield Avenue—on a college student’s budget, of course.

Ok. So, for purposes of full-disclosure I have to admit that Cambridge Bagels was a staple of my adolescence. This popular breakfast nook is a staple of Bloomfield Avenue as well, having resided in the same location since 1985. I doubt I’m alone when I say I wax sentimental about a place from my youth where many early mornings were spent with close friends enjoying the simple pleasures of breakfast amidst good-natured jeering and desultory conversation. For me, this place is Cambridge Bagels. “The Bagel Shop,” as it is affectionately referred to by regular patrons, is a place frozen in time. It houses the same blue-collared appeal it had when I first stepped foot inside the place as a pre-teen. Not a menu board, not a napkin holder, not a stool has been replaced or altered. A drop ceiling and a tile floor speak to the pragmatic philosophy of the place. Hard working (my friends and I are sometimes the exception) men and women move in unison to the trial cadence to the block from campus, Cambridge Bagels has to offer. There is no better diversity that Bloomfield Avenue has to offer. For those who truly want to explore the culinary diversity along the historic thoroughfare you have to visit Cambridge Bagels. 3) Keep it moving.
1) Education is important.
Networking is very important for being successful. Keep in touch with your professors and desires to make ties for the future. Greene firmly believes that networking with people is also important. If you’re not understood when you talk, you’ll never get anywhere in life. So, keeping contact with your past will help you in the future.

Her last point was to always believe in yourself. No matter how hard the road, if you lose faith in yourself, all hope is lost. Randi Greene says, “If you have faith in your abilities and give me the chance to work for my consequences, they’ll bring you down. You shouldn’t let yourself be brought down by people who are only jealous. Look beyond them to find what’s really important to you. When it comes down to it, you are the only person who controls your future. Greene firmly believes that she was “destined to become whatever she heart desires.” Do you believe in yourself?"

Burton Brings His Nightmare to the MOMA
Tim Burton’s Creative Work Comes to NYC

Richard Gladis
Staff Writer

Opening last weekend at the Museum of Modern Art was the Tim Burton Retrospective. This exhibit explores the full range of Burton’s creative work, from his earliest paintings and clay models to the films based on them, and is the most comprehensive survey of his career to date. Burton is one of the most influential filmmaker/artist/designers working in the industry today. His work ranges from the whimsical to the macabre, with visual themes that range from early child- hood drawings through his ma- ture work in film. It brings together over seven hundred or never before seen draw- ings, paintings, photographs, move- ing image works, sto- ryboards, puppets, con- cepts, artworks, and short films. It is a testament to what his talent as an artist, illustrator, photographer and writer can accomplish.

Burton’s work can be de- scribed as Pop Surrealism. Drawing from his surround- ings, Burton is able to grasp our social identities, manipu- late them and produce minis- ter, daunting works of art that still manage to yield posi- tive reactions from his fans. Let’s face it, he is a master of his craft. Who else could produce a character such as Jack Skel- lington, whose haunting charac- teristics and un- wallet presence makes him hard to adore and win over the hearts of millions of adult movie goers? It is in the theatre that he thrives. He has been a most not- chered, beloved proponent for his strik- ing visuals and dis- creet point of view in many of his films. The MOMA showcases this aspect of his career, with a complete retrospective of Burton’s features and shorts. Many will find themselves most- ly familiarized with his costumes from mer- ters such as Edward Scis- sorshands, The Addams Family and Howl’s Moving Castle.

The film makes an apparition of all the wondering and imagin- ing of the last half century of unanswered questions, paranoia and suspicion have been hopped atop an unsolvable crime. Zodiac is less about a killer than it is a feuilleton for incompre- hensible answers, truly the most dangerous game of all.

Walle (2008): Walle is one of the greatest animated films of all time. This synapses fable’s field is also one of the few, real action science fiction movies made this decade. It’s a love story, a cau- tionary tale, practically a silent movie, golddust sentimental, grippedingly emotional, beautiful to look at, heencentrically and extremecite.

Perhaps its most mind-blowing achievement is its pitch-perfect recreation of Chaplinesque physi- icality and wondrous surrealism.

As you peel back the many in- trellary layers, you discover that at its heart, Walle is a very sim- ple story. The thematic premise is almost neutral in nature. Its composition pulsates rhythmically, its melody flows expressively and then and the instrumentation… if there were any more those would be diminished. Walle is the story of a hope- lessly romantic robot left to clean an earth devastated by piles and piles of garbage. He has a single companion, a cute earth销毁 which he can crush, he discov- ers a single plant in the desola- tion, Wall-e and Eve meet after a garb a single companion, a ener’s life. When it comes to cult classics, few have as much of a fanatic following as Kevin Smith's breakthrough hit, Clerks. Released on Oct. 19, 1994, Clerks was Smith's first full-length feature, which skyrocketed his career by leaps and bounds. Clerks was filmed almost completely in Leonardo, N.J., not far from Smith's home town of Red Bank, with a budget of roughly $27,000 and financed mostly by maxed-out credit cards, money from his parents, and even an insurance settlement from Smith's car, which was destroyed in a flood. It would seem that Smith came out on top, considering the total domestic gross for the film is $3,151,130, according to distributor Miramax. The film also marks the beginning of Smith's saga of returning characters, Jay and Silent Bob, where Smith, himself, plays Silent Bob.

Clerks

The film opens with Dante, a convenience store clerk at the local Quick Stop, being rudely awakened by his boss asking him to come in to work on his day off. A montage then plays, showing him preparing for the day and also foreshadowing just how bad his day will be. As he goes to open the shutters, he notices that someone has jammed gum in the locks. He goes inside as a customer buys coffee, yet the customer turns out to be a representative of a gum company who tries to convince cigarette smoking customers that Dante is a "death merchant." It also does not help that Randal, Dante's best friend who works at the video store next to the Quick Stop, is almost an hour late opening the store and customers keep coming up to Dante and harassing him about it. The sketchy drug dealers, Jay and Silent Bob, show up on the scene to hassle the customers and steal the occasional Twinkie. And the worst part is, he is not even supposed to be at work today. Do not underestimate how bad his situation becomes over the course of the film and how weird the situations can be. The love of his life is engaged to an Asian design major, his rooftop hockey game is halted when their only ball flies off into a drain and Randal accidentally sells cigarettes to a four year old, resulting in a $500 fine for Dante. The best part is that most people who grew up in New Jersey can appreciate the everyday antics of hanging out at the local convenience store and working for a little bit of money to spend.

The visual style, to be honest, is extremely plain. The very basic style causes you to focus more on the sarcastic and extremely messed up dialog. This movie is not for people who are easily offended — Clerks definitely spares no expense while attempting to make everyone cringe. Smith's writing is strangely intelligent and witty, while maintaining its subject matter's shock value. The beginning of each scene is titled with a word or phrase that sums up the basic idea of the scene. Clerks is a fun and addictive indie comedy that will have you quoting with your friends forever, guaranteed.

A&E The Montclarion • December 3, 2009
We’ve got the perfect vehicle to accelerate your degree program.

Earn up to 4 credits in 4 weeks during Winter Session at Montclair State University.

Winter Session at Montclair State can keep you on the road to graduation or put you in the fast lane toward your degree goals. You can earn up to 4 credits in just 4 weeks in a variety of courses, offered either fully online or in a hybrid (online and in person) format. It’s the perfect time to get ahead — or to stay on track for graduation.

View our winter course schedule online today. Registration for current Montclair State students begins November 9, and registration for visiting students begins November 18. All registration closes on December 15. Classes run from December 21, 2009 through January 15, 2010.

Interested in Summer Sessions? You’ll find our summer schedule posted online in December at montclair.edu/summer.

Week or not you were aware, the ongoing Student Government Association saga with the IRS has come to a screeching halt.

For over a year, our SGA has been involved in serious legal proceedings with the IRS, involving millions of dollars in corporate taxes.

The ordeal began last fall when former SGA President Ron Preciado came across a 1977-1978 amendment that affected the organization’s non-profit status.

Had the organization been found in violation of non-profit laws, they would have been involved in serious legal proceedings with the IRS, involving millions of dollars in corporate taxes.

Essentially, the amendment stated that if the organization were ever to disband, the remaining assets would be distributed to all members, or in this case, every current Montclair State student.

Technically, as students, we are all considered members of the SGA.

Considering it was an important issue that determined the future existence of the SGA, well the organization would make more of an attempt to publicize it.

Last spring, current president Jon Preciado said that the SGA would make every attempt to get the word out on the vote.

Out of the 12,143 students eligible to vote, 1,316 students voted. This was not the two-thirds majority needed to override amendment.

The editorial is not about the lack of student participation in campus events, however. That, unfortunately, is nothing new.

In this case, The Montclarion feels that the SGA bears the greatest responsibility for the low voter turnout.

There were half-hearted attempts at publicizing the vote. Signs and plywood placed with the amendment title were posted around campus, but they offered little or no explanation as to what the vote was about and what the implications were.

For an issue that directly involved the students and had the potential of recreating the SGA, it was kept pretty quiet.

Had students voted “Yes” on the amendment, it would have been overturned and the SGA would carry on just as existentially as before.

Had students voted “No,” the SGA would have been disbanded and the money would have gone towards recreating the organization. New rules and contracts would have been instituted. It would also have given the administration the opportunity to have a written contract with the SGA, as opposed to the verbal one that has existed for decades.

But the importance of this vote was largely kept from students. Had enough voted “No,” it would have meant changing the established system.

The vote gave the students the biggest chance they had in decades to recoup their student government.

Instead of making more attempts to get student votes, the SGA used the opportunity to get student votes, the SGA used a revamp their student government.

Consider the fact that the group has over a million dollars of our money at their disposal.

The decision of what to do with your money is in the hands of very few people. Not to mention, a majority of student slide on campus are financially dependent on the SGA.

When students do have the chance to vote on something that could determine the future of the SGA, the democratic realities are quickly gotten out of the way and the real decisions are made with lawyers behind closed doors.

It seems at Montclair State that doesn’t make the decisions that determine their life on campus. We assume that is in the hands of the administration.

But, well like to think that at least the Student Government Association wants to give the illusion of democracy and student participation.

The following was submitted to The Montclarion on Nov. 22.

To the Editor:

Governor Corzine has cut Higher Education and a great many other worthy programs in the name of “balancing the budget.”

Governor-elect Crist is preparing to do even more of the same. He is even talking of a “fiscal emergency.”

We should recognize that this is all a smokescreen.

The New Jersey budget, like that of New York, California and all other states, can only operate through a progressive income tax. That is what should be done.

Among these people who have some understanding of what is going on, we are opposed to doing this. Two groups: business and wealthy individuals (these two groups are often interrelated).

Wealthy individuals do not have to make use of the publicly-funded facilities like public schools and colleges and social welfare programs.

Wealthy individuals do not have to make use of the publicly-funded facilities like public schools and colleges and social welfare programs. They have plenty of private schools, private colleges and private welfare programs.

For the rest of us, we ought to be paying for the services that we use - income tax, and an increase in taxes so as to balance the budget, while (b) maintain- ing and (c) increasing programs that benefit the majority of the population. This works.

Propaganda for business interests will say: “You will drive business out of New Jersey.” Nonsense. It is flatly not true.

But it is true, then what? Don’t tax businesses at all? In that case, a progressively income tax on individuals would be even more necessary.

It is clear that a progressive income tax and sharply higher taxes are going to fund social programs that serve the vast majority of the public.

This is the case in all social-welfare industrial states: Canada, Western Europe, Australia, New Zealand and all the other major industrial societies. There, high and progressive income taxes fund programs that, while far from what is really needed, look like paradise in comparison to what we Americans have.

Let’s demand a progressive income tax in New Jersey.

That’s the alternative. We are living in a country whose elected representatives are not democratic countries. We live in a plural society. There, high and progressive income taxes fund programs that, while far from what is really needed, look like paradise in comparison to what we Americans have.

The Red Hawks ran at a Division III National Championship ended in Allensville, Ohio, on Saturday, as they fell to the top-seeded team in the country, Mount Union, by a score of 62-14. Saturday’s matchup was clearly tilted towards the home team, who has appeared in every Division III championship this decade, with the exception of 2004, and has won ten of the last 16 championships in total. In contrast, the Red Hawks’ closest claim to a national championship was a win in the now defunct Knute Rockne III National Championship ended in 2003.

The conference title and secure a spot in the NCAA Tournament. In that span, the team averaged just under 26 points per game and gave up about 12.5 points per game along the way. The team, known as the NJAC Offense, Defensive and Special Teams Players of the Week, had a 17-3-1 record and was runner-up to the team’s 17-2-1 overall mark.

But for a team that was picked to finish third in the conference at the beginning of the season, some might say a moral victory and a game against a strong program is good for MSU football. And, as head coach Steve Vaisey said, the season has no moral victory. We lost. Bottom line is you can’t take anything away from them.”

It doesn’t matter that it was Mt. Union or it was Notre Dame,” said Giancola. “If you can go out and play and do your best and you can and take it game by game, season by season.”

“arre’s team was arguably the best MSU team this decade. The Red Hawks will look to continue this year’s narrowest season as they look to defend their NJAC title.

Along with his nine NJAC COTY awards, he holds a 19-87-2 record all time and is 121-40 in the NJAC. He has reached the NCAA’s eight times and has won the conference nine times in his career. Along the way came NJAC championships, and times where we were consistently winning conference championships, and times where we have lost,” said Giancola. “We preach to the kids to win the NJAC and get into the playoffs and we have done that this season. This year, we took the second round, after defeating Miami (Ohio) in the first round, 38-22, MSU’s first NCAA Tournament game since 2003. However, the season came to an end in the next round, as MSU lost to defending champion and D-3 powerhouse Mount Union 62-14. No matter the opponent, Giancola always expects a win for MSU at the end.

Berkeley 80-39

It was pick-your-poison all night for Berkeley College as they stepped onto the hardwood at Montclair State only to be the victims of an 80-38 thrashing by the Red Hawks, which started the season 3-2. The Hawks played near- ly flawless for the entire 40 minutes with their confusing defense, which allowed for easy shots on the offensive end. No matter who was on the floor for MSU, the communication amongst the players and active rotations made it seem as if they have playing together for a lot longer than four years.

The defensive side of the ball is where the Red Hawks stamped their mark on the chests of the Berkeley Bulldogs, both literally and figuratively. Their main defense consisted of active rotations amongst every player on the court. The issue that MSU ran forced Berkeley into taking shots that the entire gym knew they did not want to take, shooting a measly 26 percent from the field, with Berkeley guard Jarrel Young scoring 18 of their 36 points, making seven out of 15 shots.

Senior forward Daniel McRae shut down the inside for MSU with his 13-point, 15-rebound game. He also scoored nine points on four of eight shots. The Red Hawks were not shy, spreading the ball around to a plethora of players, as they shot 48 percent for the entire game. The offensive dominance was led by junior guard Tom Byrne with five points.

Senior Daniel McRae dunks over a Berkeley defender in the Red Hawks’ 80-39 victory over the Bulldogs at Panzer Athletic Center last Tuesday.

“On the court last night, when asked about any further improvements for the offense going into conference play, Coach Fiore stated, ‘We need to execute better on offense. It was tough tonight to get a feel for the offense coming into tonight.’

In the Red Hawks’ signed performance, the Head Coach did have an insightful view on the situation saying, ‘We got a lot of new players on this team so what we’re hoping is that as we continue to play, we guys will emerge … so that’s what we’re watching for, trying to see who the guys are that will consistently step up.’

Junior center Sean Young (10), sophomore guard Rod Johnson (12) and senior guard Ken Dudley (10) were the other players to score in double figures. Others including sophomore guard Rodney Freeney (12) and junior center Sean Young (10) also contributed to what was a well-rounded team performance.

Senior guard Ken Dudley showed his generosity with the orange by dishing out eight assists. Bonard was one of four players to score in double figures, where including sophomore guard Ali Mix (10), junior guard Rodney Freeney (12) and junior center Sean Young (10).

Coach Ted Fiore commented on the evolution of their all-around attack. He said, ‘This is one of our deepest teams and you gear your game to your personnel. We have a lot of quick players to score in double figures, others including sophomore center Robert Jackson with six points and six rebounds as well as senior guard David Byrne with five points.

Over the Thanksgiving weekend, the Red Hawks played in the Allegheny Holiday Tournament in Meadville, Pennsylvania. The Red Hawks fell short in both games, falling to the host Allegheny 90-68 on Saturday and then, losing to Case Western Reserve 67-63, on Sunday.

The Red Hawks struggled against Allegheny as they stumbled to their first loss of the season, 90-68. However, time would run out on Montclair, as they fell in 3-2.

The men return home on Dec. 5, where they begin conference play against Kean University, ranked second in the NJAC South Division.
