Advisers Placed Under Re-Evaluation

For any freshman who plans on graduating in four years or the upperclassman who plans on graduating in the very near future, the advising process can be dreadful. It is the responsibility of students, in partnership with their advisers, to ensure that the student understands that the proper classes must be taken to earn their degree within four years. For senior Brittany Ruben-chuk, the advising process is in dire need of enhanced communication. Although she knows exactly who her adviser is, she was forced to research and plan her own schedule throughout her classes.

False Reports Become a Trend Across Campus

Reporting false graffiti is a copy cat trend that is appearing all over campus. Last week's arrest of student Andrew Siwczak, accused of filling a false police report, has caused a stir in the campus community regarding a recent trend in false reports. As this arrest follows disturbing occurrences of bias-related crimes, students are responding with immediate distrust. "I think it's ridiculous that people have nothing better to do with their time than to make up police reports," said freshman Katey Carey. "What's the point? Your 15 minutes of fame that comes with saying you were assaulted isn't worth getting arrested over." Siwczak was found to have fabricated a story regarding an assault by an unknown male by Diggsdi Field on Feb. 21. He was arrested on Feb. 28. This event follows the arrests of students Olivia McCrae and Tanasia Linton for disorderly conduct regarding false bias graffiti in the Heights.

Montclair Professor Named One of "Jersey's Biggest Brains"

The hard work of Montclair State University professor Julian Keenan has finally paid off, earning him a title as one of The Star-Ledger's 20 Biggest Brains of New Jersey.

Keenan is a psychologist and the founder and director of the Cognitive Neuroimaging Laboratory here at MSU. According to Amy Ellis Nutt of The Star-Ledger, “His research focuses on topics in which experimentation has been typically difficult, including deception, self-awareness and the overlap between sense of self and sense of others. In trying to discover which neural networks are responsible for these traits, Keenan uses creative techniques on volunteer subjects including noninvasive Transcranial Magnetic Stimulation to inhibit or activate specific brain areas.”

Keenan is listed alongside engineers, biologists, inventors and mathematicians, including professors from Rutgers, Seton Hall and Princeton. However, this great honor came as a shock to Keenan, who was unaware of any nomination or the existence of this contest. "I got an email from a student saying I was in The Star-Ledger. It was a complete surprise. I was confused because I thought the student was asking me about Neanderthal's brains to compare my brain to the size of theirs. Little did I know that the student was actually telling me about this award."

Although Keenan has done great work for MSU, he is not taking all of the credit for this award. Keenan praised his students, saying that his lab would be nothing if it weren't for the great students and their "awesome" research ability. However, Keenan was most excited about the praise that will come for the school. “I’m glad that Montclair gets some attention. Hopefully, it will let everyone know that this is a good place to get an education. That is my hope from all of this.”

The list of Jersey's Biggest Brains can be found on The Star-Ledger's website: http://www.nj.com/

Online dating has become increasingly popular. Markeddata Enterprises Inc. says over the years, in the United States, there are more than 1,000 online dating sites comprising for singles of all genders, races and religions. Sites like Zoosk, Datemyera, Okcupid and PlentyOffish are all free websites that target young 20-something singles in college. Still the question remains: with a growing number of people trying their hand at courtship through the Internet, how does one find a suitable match? The Montclarion talked to Ms. Fleming about her a-ha moment.

After turning down offers to be on a new up-and-coming reality show, The Real Housewives of New Jersey, independent filmmaker Geraldine Winters has agreed to appear on a new up-and-coming Bravo reality show called I Do Then I Don’t. The show will be in the Diamond District neighborhood of New York City. This frequently visited area is home to the world’s largest shopping area where people from all around come to buy all of the finest jewels and diamonds.

The New Jersey native turned down an opportunity to be a cast member on The Real Housewives of New Jersey for a number of reasons. “I just don’t fit in to a group of petty, gossiping, uneducated, Jersey women,” said Winters. “I have three degrees and when I socialize I have to make a difference.

“It would have been very difficult for a number of years and has gained credibility.” Winters commented. “I admire the work he did with my script for Candy’s Room. Soleil Noir and signed on as executive producer for that production.”

Along with writing Doofinish Five, Winters is also in the process of finishing her fifth independent film, Bongo Killer Clown. With all of her current projects going on, it looks like there is no slowing down for Geraldine Winters. Be sure to check your local listings for more of Geraldine Winters and I Do Then I Don’t.

Clownstrophobia was a big success and established my reputation as a credible filmmaker to some degree,” said Winters. The award winning filmmaker is currently writing a script with director Allan A. Goldstein for Doofinish Five. This will be the second film that the two have worked on together. “[Goldstein] was an associate of Marc Vandlen, [director of] Shoegirls Too,” said Winters. “[Allen] admired the work he did with my script for Candy’s Room. Soleil Noir and signed on as executive producer for that production.”

With the opening of the annual Vagina Monologues on campus this week, a noticeable shift occurs: everyone is talking about vaginas. Eve Ensler created a movement that allows young women to articulate the “v’s” between their legs with a sense of pride — even if just for a night. Ensler isn’t the first filmmaker to work towards reclaiming terms that either make their user feel uncomfortable or demeaned. Coming to terms with terms is a form of linguistic activism.

Reclaiming the darker aspects of the female experience is a long-standing tradition among feminists. The first-wave feminist movement concerned itself with gaining the right to vote and was attacked for it. Newspapers belittled feminists. The first-wave feminist term didn’t detract from its power. For males, gaining the right to vote and was attacked for it. Newspapers belittled feminists. The first-wave feminist term didn’t detract from its power. For males, gaining the right to vote and was attacked for it. Newspapers belittled feminists. The first-wave feminist term didn’t detract from its power. For males, gaining the right to vote and was attacked for it. Newspapers belittled feminists. The first-wave feminist term didn’t detract from its power.

At first, activists fought sternly against the term, wanting to be respected as simply activists, rather than female activists; however, it became clear that fighting against the term didn’t detract from its power to dismantle their cause, and the prominent Pankhursts even named their magazine The Suffragette as a means of reclaiming the term with an infusion of positivity. Take Back the Night is an event that occurs every year on most campuses, stemming from the 1976 “Reclaim the Night” in Belgium. It has since become a global phenomenon for women to march in solidarity to “take back” the right to feel safe in the dark, in a world of sexual violence and rape.

The third-wave feminist movement has similar ambitions. With a focus on reappropriating sexuality as female-friendly, feminists have disrupted traditional notions of pin-up, burlesque, sex work and sex stones to create a more empowering atmosphere. Rather than censoring words or actions that previous generations found offensive or degrading, they work to reclaim them.

In the 1990s, riot grrrls took back the word “girl” with an almost ironic dose of feminism. A word that came to symbolize subservience, delicacy and cuteness received a jolt of sarge with an extra two Rs. Riot grrrls and kinderwhores both satirized the emphasized innocence of traditional Girlhood by creating provocatively short and intimate dresses or knitsy shirts and aggressively smearing their lipstick. The image of Courtney Love, the ex-frontwoman of Hole, is a startlingly punk rendition of Neko’s Lolita. They tore apart the notion of silent or timid femininity by writing blunt songs about abuse, rape, incest, racism and patriarchy and thus forcing their listeners to confront these intimate issues. Some early riot grrrl bands would halt or finish their set to pass a microphone through the audience to create an impromptu discussion group. Bikini Kill singer Kathleen Hanna famously (though certainly not the first or only performance artist to do so) sobbed “Shut” and “Incest” on her flesh for performances and interviews.

The summer is fast approaching as a number of us will be flying back home, to a vacation destination or to study abroad. We all know it is hard to make healthy, or at least healthier, food choices while traveling. Between check-in lines, security checkpoints, lost luggage and all that fun stuff, the last thing you want to worry about is scouring the airport for a whole-wheat muffin. Do not despair just yet, since there are other ways to help you stay on track with your eating. It is best if your first line of defense starts at home. This way you will be in the right mindset before the junk-food assault at the airport. Tosca Reno, a columnist for Clean Eating magazine, packs her own snacks when traveling by plane. Her homemade goodie bag includes natural peanut butter, whole-wheat crackers, dark chocolate, fresh or dried fruit and nut mix. Although these foods are excellent sources of complex carbohydrates, antioxidants and essential fatty acids, you do want to pace yourself. Mod- eration is the key and the secret to a healthy diet.

For the morning flight, the columnist recommends filling a small bag with oatmeal shakers with a scoop of protein powder. Throwing a handful of dried fruit (preferably no sugar added) to the mix will give your brain a much-needed boost in the early morning hours. You can always ask for a cup of hot water at the terminal or on the plane free of charge.

Almost any solid food will work here as long as it is not perishable (unless you are planning on eating it within the next two hours), processed or refined. The more ingredients listed on the label the more processed the product. As often as you can, try to go for minimally processed foods. Although certain foods are artificial- ly enriched or fortified, anything re- fined, like white bread, pasta or rice is low in fiber, protein, vitamins and minerals.

If making your own lunch box is not your usual M.O., these tips should help you prepare for your next flight:

- Check with the airline if a meal will be served or sold on board. Airlines will serve more than one meal on long flights. On most in- ternational flights, where travelling time is more than five hours, meals are included.
- If you have any special di- etary needs, advise the airline of your food preferences at least three to four days before your scheduled flight.
- If you request a vegetarian meal, you could be served an egg or fish dish. Eggs and fish fall under the vegetarian category for many airlines.
- If you do not like airline cui- sines, try to buy something minimally processed and refined from the air- port restaurants or shops and bring it onboard.
- Most of all, stay hydrated! Avoid sugary drinks or coffee. Drink water. Coffee and tea have de- hydrating effects on the body. Soda and fruit juices, including all-natural juice, are packed with sugar.

Whatever you do, enjoy yourself and remember this is only tempo- rary. You can always return to your healthier eating routine or start a new one once you get to your final destination.

Nobody dreams of having multiple sclerosis.

Some dreams are universal: hitting a ball over the Green Monster, winning the World Series with a Grand Slam in the bottom of the ninth inning, finding out that you have MS is not one of them.

Multiple sclerosis is a devastating disease of the central nervous system where the body’s immune system attacks the insulation surrounding the nerves. It strikes in the prime of life — and changes lives forever.

The National MS Society funds more research and provides more services for people with MS than any MS organization in the world. But we can’t do it alone.

To help make the dream of ending MS come true, visit us online at nationalmssociety.org, or call 1-800-FIGHT MS.

The Sound of Sound Advice

With every hero’s journey, there is always that one archetypal character who is there to give him or her that necessary little push to get them across the threshold. Their job as a seasoned traveler of the world is to be responsible for the hero’s training, equipment or providing guidance that will help on the journey.

These people appear in all different walks of life; be they the stalwart mentor that has raised a billionaire orphan since birth, the aged wizard whose world knowledge is only surpassed by his compassion for little hairy-footed creatures or the wizened professor who challenges their students to better themselves through constant rejection and seeming indifference.

Now, at Montclair State University, a new survey program for evaluating our advisers is being put into motion that will set apart the strong from the weak, the attendant from the dismissive and the helpful from the well-meaning.

So how will this new standardized adviser-eating system reflect on our University’s faculty mentors?

With over 18,000 students wandering campus like mindless, lost sheep, the University’s faculty mentors?

“It could be better. They could have longer hours or more advisers because a lot of times they don’t have any openings or space.”

“I actually work for the advising office and we are trying to expand our services. We are there to help but not enough people come to us to help them.”

“On a personal level, my adviser has done a really good job helping me. I’m in a smaller major and I know, generally speaking, that the broadcast department goes a good job advising.”

Kony Video Incites Empathy Across Facebook

Thousands unite behind computer screens against children’s militia

The world has been very hectic for most of us. But as I’m sitting at my desk at the end of the month, I have a lot on my mind. I have a 10-year-old cousin in Uganda and I’ve been following the news about the conflict there. There is a group called the Lord’s Resistance Army (L.R.A) that is a militia in Uganda that has been causing a lot of trouble. They kidnap children and train them in firearms, and Kony is basically recruiting an army of children who are forced to kill for people. So far, his army has grown to over 30,000 children.

For those children that try to escape or don’t comply, death is the punishment. These children constantly live in fear and are forced to live in horrible conditions.

Jason Russell has been in Uganda for over 10 years. When he first started filming, he met a boy named Jacob. Jacob told Jason about everything that has happened to him, and then he spoke of hopelessness.

He witnessed his brother’s death for trying to run and speak of how death was better then what he faced. Then he began to cry, and Jason gave him a promise that Kony will be defeated.

With the help of Jason, Jacob is free to come to the states and talk to schools and encourage people to help. The Kony 2012 campaign is the beginning of this and it is something that needs to be shared with the world. This is one of those things that I have to say thank you to Zuckerberg for Facebook. This shouldn’t only be the U.S. and the world’s responsibility. I hope that this message spreads throughout other countries’ governments so that we may work together to capture such a horrible man.

This is what we’ve been waiting for – a sign of compassion in this world. This is the opportunity to make a difference in this world. I have my own aspirations in life and the world is moving the same way Jason is through his film, so I hope the dedication he puts into this cause.

He even brings his son Gavin on camera and explains to him the struggle going on in Uganda. If a child can comprehend this, then everyone in the world should be able to do the same.

If you want to show support or learn more about it, here’s the link to the video: http://vimeo.com/3719731. The description links to all the other sites as well such as the pledge and show your support if you believe it is true.

This is the time to make a difference in the world and get united behind this fight.

Saskia Hamilton is the author of three books of poetry and the recipient of many fellowships, awards, and grants. She directs the Women Poets Series at Barnard College where she teaches creative writing. She is the subject of a song by Ben Folds and Nick Hornby. Yet, on Feb 23, all that mattered was Hamilton’s connection to a standing-room-only crowd of over 100 students in Cohen Lounge in Dickson Hall. Hamilton, who was the ninth visiting poet sponsored by the Marie Frazee-Baldassarre Chair of English, read from her published works as well as provided rare insight by sharing a poem she wrote the very morning of her appearance at MSU. “It’s a great honor to have Saskia Hamilton here today,” said Dr. Lucy McDiarmid, Marie Frazee-Baldassarre professor of English. “I think my students must be excited — I certainly am — because we’ve been studying her poetry for the last three classes and having very good discussions about it. It’s almost amazing to have in the room with us the author of the words we’ve been devoting so much attention to.”

McDiarmid called Hamilton’s poetry “powerful and mysterious,” adding that the poems make the reader or listener feel “that something intense has happened.”

Hamilton, the first non-Irish scholar to appear in the series, is half Dutch, nonetheless, she noted, “I’m in love with Saskia Hamilton!”

The next ten poems Hamilton chose to read were from her volume Divided Thieves. She explained her series of poems with the recurring title “Year One” by stating, “Certain things, whether revolutionary, dramatic, traumatic or exciting, happen to a person or a place and something has happened.”

Introducing the poem “Then,” she told the audience about the “pattern and habit of saying things to oneself,” adding that the poems make the reader or listener feel “that something intense has happened.”

Hamilton fielded questions about how she found her creative voice and how she views poetry beyond the non-academic setting. She shared a creative tip, urging aspiring poets to meet for coffee with a friend, open any book, pick out six words at random, write for twenty minutes and then read the creations out loud. “I’m always incredibly bored by what I write and incredibly interested in what my friend writes and vice versa.”

She sees poetry as “very alive” in music, poetry slams, rap and all performances that use “instruments, tone of voice and gesture.” Although Hamilton herself is incorporated in a song with the lyrics “I’ve only seen her name on a spine, but that’s enough…”, she sees poetry as “very alive” in music, poetry slams, rap and all performances that use “instruments, tone of voice and gesture.”

Hamilton’s reading was word of mouth. They expect a pretty big crowd tonight. We usually get about 100 at the other events, and we’re definitely expecting more than that,” Bailey said, to publicize the event, the main form of advertisement was word of mouth. They also used a Facebook event, mass messaging and flyers on campus.

The Grand Slam consisted of three rounds of slam poetry. After the second round one contestant was eliminated, and after the third round the top five were announced. Poem topics consisted of family, disease, religion, reflection, poetry itself, slavery, love, dreams, nightmares, sin, school and friends. The winners of the event, granting them a place on the MSU team, were Timothy DuWhite, Tyler Bailey, Imari Shaw, Lamar Washington, Elle Muxau, Sherlita McCann, Christopher Rodriguez and Liz Hammonds. Congratulations to the MSU slam poetry team, and best of luck at CUPSI!

The Red Hawks were stunned by yet another second half collapse in a 15-8 loss at 13th ranked Dickinson College on Saturday. They are still in search of their first victory, falling to 0-3 going into this week’s home contest against St. Lawrence University.

The Red Hawks opened the scoring in the first quarter with a goal from senior Tyler Meth. Kenneth Bogert followed with a tiebreaking goal halfway through the first quarter, giving the Red Hawks a 2-1 lead. Dickinson then finished the first quarter rallying off three goals to make the score 4-2 at the end of one.

They would add another goal at the beginning of the second quarter to increase their lead to three. However, the Red Hawks would storm back to tie the game with three consecutive goals, courtesy of Jack Skeels, Kenneth Bogert and Joel Van Der Wal. Dickinson would finish the first half with a go-ahead goal to go into halftime with a 6-5 lead.

Freshman Michael Schreck got the first tally of the second half to pull the Red Hawks within one, but that was as close as they would get. Dickin

The Red Hawks had seven man-up opportunities in the fourth quarter, but were only able to capitalize on one. This marks the third consecutive game in which the Red Hawks were not able to play a full 60 minutes, letting the opponent run away with the victory in the second half.

The Red Hawks are currently 0-3 and have been outscored 34-17. They will be back in action when they host St. Lawrence University on Saturday, March. 10 in a showdown with 7th ranked Stevens Institute of Technology awaits them in three weeks.

The Red Hawks return to Montclair for their second home game of the season this Saturday, when they take on the St. Lawrence University Saints at 1 p.m. at Sprague Field.
The baseball team showed a lot of potential for this season after a successful outing at the Piedmont Spring Break Tournament in Demorest, Ga. last weekend.

The Red Hawks got off to a good start by defeating Millisaps College 14-7. The Red Hawk offense exploded early on as the Montclair State took an early 11-0 lead after the first two innings. Millisaps College plated their first run in the third and fourth innings but a three-run eighth inning killed any momentum that Millisaps was gaining.

Senior pitcher Sean Hille picked up the win with one strikeout, three walks and one earned run. Junior outfielder Anthony Bo- wens lead the Red Hawks with four RBIs thanks to a three-run home run in the top of the fifth inning. Chesterman and Moreno contributed once again with a combined four RBIs.

Ian Oates was given the win with one strikeout, three walks and one earned run. Over the next week, the baseball team will be in Fort Char- lotte, Fla. for the Snowbird Classic. The first game of the Classic will be this Saturday when they face-off against Baldwin-Wallace College.

The Red Hawks will start their regular season on March 23 when they travel to New Conchord, Ohio to go up against Muskingum College.

Brett Favre is maliciously tackled during the 2009-10 NFC Championship Game. The game was one of the more obvious examples of how Williams' players went out of their way to harm their opponents and against his new approach. Maybe Williams doesn't realize all of the pain and suffering through which retired football players are going, or maybe he doesn't care because he's not the one who's going to get hit.

Frankly, he probably still doesn't care that his actions are going to have a detrimental effect on the organizations he left behind. Saints owner Tom Benson risks be- ing fined, head coach Sean Payton and general manager Mickey Loomis.

The loss helped kick the Red Hawks back into shape as MSU would defeat Piedmont College 10-8 on Monday. Junior infielder Anthony Bowens lead the Red Hawks with four RBIs.

Men’s Lacrosse off to disappointing start

Ian O’Connor Discusses Book with Journalism Class

As assistant sports editor Nick Verhagen reported earlier, critical acclaim author and reporter Ian O’Connor visited Montclair State University to discuss his book, The Journey of Derek Jeter. O’Connor visited with the Romance and Reporting of Baseball class, taught by Harvey Araton, a sports columnist for the New York Times and Dave Kaplan, the director of the Yogi Berra Museum & Learning Center.

O’Connor discussed his inspiration behind the book on Feb. 28, along with the process he went through to write it. Growing up as a Dallas Cowboys fan, O’Connor was originally going to write the book about the famous Cowboys coach Tom Landry. O’Connor said that everything changed when he was down in Florida for Yankees spring training. With Jeter approaching the end of his contract and on the verge of 3,000 hits, O’Connor had an epiphany and knew that he had to write his book about Jeter.

“The idea needs to be in your blood,” said O’Connor “Crawling into the project, you need to feel it.” O’Connor definitely felt it. The process started with a small rough patch, when O’Connor was told that another author was looking to write a book on Jeter. After learning that the other author had dropped the idea, O’Connor had a deal signed a few days later and was ready to start writing.

One of the things O’Connor had to be careful about while writing the book was Jeter’s sensitivity to criticism. Jeter has also been known to hold a grudge for quite some time. O’Connor said, “You can write 99 articles about what Jeter did right and how well he did, but if that 100th article criticizes Jeter, he will remember that one the most.”

One of the reasons O’Connor feels this way is that he believes that Jeter, to an extent, is afraid to disappointing start

Chris Kivlen looks to help lead Red Hawks to Skyline dominance

This 2012 spring season marks the first with Chris Kivlen as head coach for the Montclair State University men’s lacrosse team. Kivlen was hired for the position after the tragic death of previous head coach John Cocca, who suffered a heart attack in November 2010. The new coach brings experience from on the field and the sidelines as he looks to continue the Red Hawks’ success. As a defenseman, Kivlen played for the University at Albany, where he contributed to its Division I success, winning three America East conference championships and entering two NCAA tournaments, turning one of the more lower-ranked Divi- sion I teams into one ranked 11 nationally. In his senior year, he was named captain of the UAlbany squad.

“I think any time you’re named captain, there’s a little more emphasis on the leadership role. It just gives you that opportunity to voice your opinion and kind of just get the guys going,” Kivlen said about his connection to coaching college.

Kivlen was interested in coaching when he landed an assis- tant coaching job at UAlbany. During the six years with the Great Danes, Kivlen found himself with a “new group to digest. This young team has and because of this, he emphasizes the potential opportunity for exposure and looks forward to reaching out to in- terest future Montclair players. It’s not surprising that a new head coach has had a great im- pression on returning players. Senior attack and captain Tyler Meth says that Kivlen is “so dedi- cated” and that his addition “was a necessity for our program to grow and to this team to the next level.”

On the other hand, Meth explains that Kivlen created a very intense, but positive atmos- phere that the “uppersclassmen were not typically used to.” Just as the players needed time adjusting to their new coach, Kivlen found himself with a “new group to digest. I’m sure it’s been tough for them,” said Meth, “but they’ve been resilient and they really haven’t been flustered by it at all.”

He gives the seniors “a lot of credit” for their leader- ship and motivation throughout. “It’s been a great group to work with. I’ve really been pleased.” Opening games with three losses, Kivlen knows the importance of staying positive and is confident that his team will be able to bounce back. He emphasizes the potential this young team has and because of that, Kivlen is not worrying so much about their rocky start. “I just want to stress how proud of these guys I am already. It’s just a great group to be around. We know we’ll be successful.”

Montclair looks for its first win this Saturday as the Red Hawks host St. Lawrence University at Sprague Field at 1:00 p.m.
