Lady Red Hawks Turn 16

Not only did the Red Hawks have to hit the road for the tournament, but they hit hard. MSU is two wins in a row and currently preparing for their Sweet 16 matchup against the 29-2 Captains of Christopher Newport University. What makes their current run even more impressive is that not only are they 26-0 and in hot pursuit of “The Perfect Season,” but they won their first two games by a combined 60 points.

Starting their campaign on March 1 with a 49-point rout of Roger College, they quickly turned their sights to the Lebanon Valley Dutchmen. What had the potential to be a close game quickly turned on its side and became an easy win for the Red Hawks when they troughed. The driver was gone. Everyone else looked around and filed off the shuttle.

As the students made their way to safety, smoke continued to billow from the rear of the bus, where the engine is located. After all the students were off the shuttle, Dicken recalled, “a loud bang and more smoke coming out of the shuttle.”

According to Dr. Timothy Carey, Associate Vice President of Facilities Services, “MSU shuttle drivers are trained professionals. They receive extensive training on safety regulations. MSU follows all state and federal requirements for the safe operation of the fleet. The shuttle continued on Page 5.

Kelly Potts

There are many different volunteer service projects offered to students at Montclair State University. Each year during this coming spring break, including those sponsored by Habitat for Humanity and Sandy Relief.

Habitat for Humanity

Habitat for Humanity will be partnering with Montclair State University’s Volunteer Resource Center to do community service projects.

The projects, known as a Red Hawk “stay-cation,” will be taking place over three days during spring break in which student volunteers are able to provide their services in things like park and bike path cleanups and installing rain gardens.

The community service projects will consist of different services in various areas on each day. Students are able to sign up for one or more of these services.

The first project for Habitat for Humanity will take place on March 12 at 146 North 1st Street in Paterson, taking place from 9:45 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The second project on March 13 will be trail blazing and park cleanup at the Morris Canal Greenway. This project will begin at Little Falls Morris Canal with a bike path cleanup from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m., and will then move to Clifton Morris Canal for a park cleanup from 12 p.m. to 4 p.m.

The third and final project will be on March 14, when volunteers will be installing rain gardens. This project will be taking place at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Park on Union Avenue in Paterson, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Lynka Tanaka, a freshman, said, “I’m very grateful to have enjoyed their time at MSU and I think Red Hawk Night was a step in the right direction for people who won.”

In between rounds, there were several different activities in other areas of the Student Center. These included games like mini bowling and corn hole, as well as snacks like popcorn and cotton candy. There was also a free Rita’s Italian ice.

Students were able to play Apples to Apples for raffle tickets in order to win prizes.

Big Tickets Mean Big Prizes for Red Hawks

Last Friday, Student Life at Montclair hosted “Red Hawk Night,” which culminated the end of the Student Government Administration’s “Winter Week.”

There were an estimated 150 students in attendance ready to play Apples to Apples, the focal point of the evening’s festivities.

“I’m very grateful to have won,” said Johnston. “I got involved with tons of events on campus, from Apples to Bingo to The Price is Right and Trivia Bowl. I got very lucky. This is the second free TV I’ve won at a campus event. I always tell people to participate when they hear about fun on campus. You never know what you might win.”

Spring break is finally upon us. Some of us are taking exotic trips to far-away island paradises. Others are looking forward to well-deserved quality time with our pillows. There are those of us who will be counting down the seconds until it is acceptable to begin partying on St. Patrick’s Day.

Let’s face it: The real issue on all of our minds is how to look incredible for any of our plans. Though the March weather may still be a little too cold for our taste, it’s time to start dressing for spring. To be chic this upcoming season, these three fashion must-haves are the key.

Because we can’t afford to buy these trends right off the runway, the key to rocking these signature looks is to add your own personal flair. Big jewelry is in, so put that collared necklace to good use and pair it with your favorite fluorescent scoop-neck tee. Pair your super slimming pencil skirt with a bright handbag to spice things up a bit, or try piecing your striped Bermuda shorts with a cute pair of neutral wedges. Either way you play it, the fashion loving world will take notice as you walk your fine self all over town this spring break.

Pencil Skirts

The first spring break fashion necessity is a pencil skirt. This oldie-but-goodie has been making a serious comeback on runways recently with the likes of designer royalty Burberry, Erdem and Christopher Kane, styling the simple trademark look.

I know what you’re thinking: Who wants to dress so work-savvy on spring break? The key to pulling this look off is all in originality. Play it up with a vibrant cropped top, or keep it sophisticated with a soft button-down. In addition, always pay attention to the heel — your footwear can do wonders for this look when paired with a pop of color this spring.

Neon

The next requirement is something in neon. This season, we can all channel our inner Barbie dolls — the brighter, the better. Oscar de La Renta stole our hearts the second he débuted his spring line chock-full of neon shades. Your fluorescents can be minimal paired with high-waisted shorts. If you’re feeling gutsy, you can amp it up with a matching pair of neon strappy sandals. Embrace your inner highlighter.

Stripes

Stripes aren’t just for your pajamas anymore. Marc Jacobs’ black and white candy-striped trench coat is on point for this spring, giving the classic look a twist with its bold lines. If the head-to-toe striped look has got you feeling iffy, try a set of stripes on a casual sweater. If this is accompanied by a pair of slacks or even blue jeans, you can pull off the trend without feeling too barred.

Rashard Bradshaw may not be a name that's familiar to you, but his widely known career as Cakes Da Killa just might be. Bradshaw, currently in his last semester at Montclair, has made quite a name for himself both on and off campus. With Europe in his plans after graduation, it's safe to say he'll be more than just another graduate.

Bradshaw chose Fashion Studies as his major since it was his first real dream. "I thought I was destined to be a menswear designer," he said. That dream however was crushed when he was rejected from the Fashion Institute of Technology. Bradshaw found a home at MSU, but when he realized they did not have a fashion design concentration, that dream came tumbling down. "I stuck it out because I did like learning about other aspects of the fashion industry and the business of it all."

"Being Cakes Da Killa has opened doors for me that wouldn't necessarily be possibilities for just Rashard Bradshaw."

Bradshaw soon went into the arts, namely the Arts and Entertainment section of The Montclarion. He expanded his love for words and journalism through books and late-night television. He involved himself with The Montclarion to build his resume and gain experience. He started as a staff writer and worked towards his current position as A&E editor. He plans to continue writing post-graduation. "I want to become a journalist because I like using my words to give a voice to artists and trends not familiar, or accepted, in mainstream culture."

As for his career as Cakes Da Killa, Bradshaw hit success around his junior year when he had the opportunity to be featured on a mixtape compilation called Downtown Mayhem. "I was really nervous about it," he said, "but the feedback was great."

Shortly after, he released his first solo project, Easy Bake Oven, followed by his first album, The Eulogy, which was released a month ago and received a Pitchfork rating of 7.5.

"An accomplishment for someone as young. Bradshaw does all of his own bookings, press kits and whatever else comes his way. ‘It’s kind of a double-edged sword,’ he says.

Despite that the work can get tedious and frustrating, not many rappers have seen the opportunities he has. It’s a freeing and independent experience that allows him to not ‘feel like a puppet.’ Bradshaw frequents New York City and is no stranger to the stage.

Many reviews have likened Bradshaw to Frank Ocean, known for breaking into the industry flying on the tails of being gay and a rapper. Bradshaw’s comment? “Frank Ocean is not a rapper. He is a singer, so that comparison is just lazy journalism. To express the feelings he did in the music industry was courageous, but I came out in the third grade and no one was trying to put me on the cover of any magazines.”

Despite his success, Bradshaw is skeptical of the scene here. "I don’t see myself making it big in the music industry because with the current state of music, it’s best to be an independent artist," says Bradshaw. "I would much rather establish myself first, make money overseas, become an underground sensation, start my own label and work with a label for distribution."

After graduation, Bradshaw is headed to Europe. "I just signed a contract with my agency based in Berlin, so I will travel there a little after graduation. I plan on recording a new project and making more connections and just living." With such success and promise, Bradshaw should have no problem finding exactly what he’s looking for.
The Milky Way
Everything you need to know about choosing the right milk for you

Dana Baardsen
Staff Writer

The days of opening up your front door to find glass bottles of milk are long gone. Now that the milk industry is so large and competitive, there are several different options when deciding on which milk to purchase.

My recommendation is to switch it up. When you hear nutritionists suggest consuming everything in moderation, they mean everything. Milk is something we should consume on a daily basis, and in doing that, unconsciously, you are ingesting all of the potential negative and positive health benefits.

Be aware of what you’re shopping for and don’t be afraid to try different types or brands of milk. By changing up your carton brand every time you need milk, you’re doing your body and the environment a greater service than you may realize.

Cow’s Milk:
This is the milk everyone is trained to love from an early age. Variations in fat content from skim to whole milk are the first differences that consumers notice. In less-scientific terms, the fat in skim milk is sucked out of the product and the fat-soluble vitamin A is put back into the milk product. All cow’s milk is fortified with vitamin D. There are even versions of skim milk, which include additional vitamins, minerals and much higher protein content. However, cow’s milk can potentially be pumped with harmful hormones. It’s really important to look into where your milk is actually coming from. Get to know the cows supplying it and you may rearrange your shopping habits.

Almond Milk:
Rich, creamy and nutritious, almond milk has been gaining popularity and is being stocked on grocery shelves nationwide. It’s high in calcium, protein, natural healthy fats, vitamins and minerals. It’s also great for the skin, hair and nails.

Coconut Milk:
Coconut milk is also great for the skin, hair and nails. Coconut milk is raw milk which contains healthy fats, nutrients, vitamins and antibacterial properties. Coconut milk contains iron and increases the good cholesterol in the body while lowering the bad. Piña Coladas, anyone?

Soy Milk:
Higher in fiber and lower in cholesterol, soy milk is a great alternative to dairy milk. Though an acquired taste, soy milk provides vitamins A and D, protein and higher contents of vitamin B-12. Several studies suggest that soy milk can actually benefit girls if regular consumption begins at a young age. However, if soy milk consumption starts in the late teens, there is a higher risk of developing breast cancer due to higher phytosterogen content in the milk.

Stress-Free Guide to Staying Fit

Alexis Fissinger
Staff Writer

Spring break is finally here. Let’s be honest: The last thing that anyone wants to worry about is counting calories. However, there is no denying that what you choose to eat on vacation still has a significant impact on how you look and feel. Follow these simple tips to keep those pounds low, your energy high and your mind off your diet plan. You do not have to deprive yourself on vacation to stay healthy. Focus on healthy snacking, moderation and physical activity to keep the guilt at bay.

Plan your snacks:
Unfortunately, when you relax in the poolside or on the beach, you will quickly find yourself out of money and full of empty calories. Spend some time the night before your trip making your own trail mix and packing it in serving-sized baggies for your pool bag.

When you get to your destination,chop up some carrots, celery and colorful bell peppers for easy snacking. These small, crisp vegetables will hit the spot after spending a few hours in the sun and will also help you to hydrate.

Bring along some single-serve hummus containers for dipping in order to boost the nutritional content without worrying about spoilage. In addition to trail mix, whole grain crackers and cereals, unsalted nuts, granola bars and whole pieces of fruit, like apples and oranges, are a great source of nonrefrigerated, healthy energy.

Split the bill:
Let’s face it, meals prepared outside of the home are often much higher in calories, fat and sodium—all of which can make you look and feel bloated. When you are on vacation, most, if not all of your meals are spent eating out. You can still indulge in the culture. Mind your portion sizes by sharing a plate with a friend. In this case, you can both enjoy an appetizer and an entree by splitting the size and the calories.

Let loose:
Dance. Explore the sights on foot and take advantage of gym facilities and the swimming pool at your hotel. Choosing tourist activities that make you work for your reward, like hiking and lake tours, will help you burn extra calories. There are so many ways to get active while on vacation, no matter where you are!

Coconut Oil
Tips for Multiple Uses

Monika Bugas
Opinion Editor

Coconut oil is almost like lard or coconut oil, on the other cause of their strong tastes. For cooking certain things be- uses for coconut oil is its use er great health benefits. but it also provides some oth- people to believe it was ar- of the worst cooking products Up until recently, co- oconut oil was regarded as one of the worst cooking products to ever exist. The healthy texture led people to believe it was artery-clogging and full of fat, but it turns out that not only is coconut oil heart-healthy, but it also provides some oth- er great health benefits. One of the biggest uses for coconut oil is its use as cooking oil. Other oils such as vegetable oil, canola oil and olive oil cannot be used for cooking certain things be- cause of their strong tastes. Coconut oil, on the other hand, is almost like lard or butter in the sense that you can use it for just about any type of cooking. From baking to frying, using coconut oil is not only a healthier way to cook, but it is also virtually tasteless. People may have their doubts about cooking with coconut oil be- cause of its strong smell, but coconut oil has almost no taste whatsoever.

Like many cooking oils, coconut oil has cholesterol-s low. Coconut oil has a saturated fat called lauric acid which increases the good HDL cho- lesterol in blood and improves overall cholesterol ratio levels, which is something most oils cannot do. Coconut oil can also help with digestion by produc- ing anti-bacterial properties to help control indigestion and irritable bowel syndrome. The fat in this oil also helps the body absorb more vitamins and minerals. In addition, it stimulates your metabolism, improves thyroid function, keeps energy levels high, con- trols cravings and helps keep blood sugar levels stable in those who have diabetes. It also helps promote overall weight loss.

Coconut oil has many other uses as well. A recent study reported that coconut oil is good for your teeth. Coconut oil will probably become one of 10destined choices for fighting tooth decay. It was found that coconut oil, once in-gested, should be able to stop most Streptococcus bacteria, the type of bacteria that causes cavities by producing tooth- damaging acid. It sounds like it might be time to throw away the toothpaste and time to mix some coconut oil and baking soda.

With Montclair’s strong winds, skin easily gets dried out and lips chapped. Coconut oil is an awesome moisturizer and I personally love smelling like a piece of Almond Joy. It’s great for an instant makeup remover. It also makes for a good de-frizzing hair gel and leaves-in conditioner. Coconut oil can do non-culinary tasks such as remove- ing gum from your hair and polishing furniture, but on a greater scale, it’s a cheap way to do so much more.

Add your own umbrella:
A tell-tale sign of a high calorie beverage is the colorful umbrella. Fruity, alcoholic drinks are often very high in sugar and other flavouring agents which can provide 200-400 calories per glass. If you are going to drink, wake and light beers are the best choices at about 100 calories per serving.

Drinking excessively does more than just add a large number of empty cal- ories from alcohol. It also lowers your inhibition and increases your appetite—causing you to snack on junk food throughout the night. It is never recom- mended to skip meals in order to save calories for alcoholic beverages. In fact, eating a well-balanced meal before a night out and drink- ing a glass of water before ordering another alcoholic drink has been shown to pre- vent individuals from reach- ing for those high-salt, high- calorie snacks and will save in a more even absorption of alcohol.

Stay hydrated:
If you are unsure about the safety of your vacation spot’s tap water, take a trip to the local store and invest in some water bottles. Dehydration is common for college students who vacation in tropical areas. The combination of all that sun, the need and lack of available water often leads to de- hydration, which can make you feel hungry, fatigued, weak or even cause you to pass out.

Spring Break Insider
In today's world, technology has played a major part in scientific advancement and research. We sometimes forget to give credit to the people who have been researching long before technology was an "MVP.

People like Dr. Eric J. Simon, who has been working in the field of brain research for over 40 years at New York University, are the real reasons for the progress we've made in the field of science. Now his foundation, the Irene & Eric Simon Brain Research Foundation (IES Brain Research Foundation), can play an even bigger part in the future of scientific discovery.

The IES Brain Research Foundation was founded by Dr. Simon's daughter, Faye Simon Harac, in honor of all of her father's hard work and the passion that surrounds his research. She was inspired by some of the groundbreaking discoveries her father was making and wanted to assist in furthering that research and education.

The foundation strives to play a larger role in the community of young scientists and to encourage them to focus their attention on an area of research that is often overlooked. The foundation's website describes its goal more thoroughly: "The mission of the foundation is to help advance research and education in brain research that will help find answers to addiction, pain and other diseases and conditions of the human brain, such as Alzheimer's disease, schizophrenia and aging."

Dr. Simon is the vice president of the foundation and a professor of Psychiatry and Pharmacology at NYU. Among his many accomplishments and awards in the field, he is responsible for discovering opiate receptors in the brain and creating the word "endorphin" to describe morphine-like molecules in the nervous system. Along with the board of directors and over 20 other honorary members who have experience and a real interest in brain research, the foundation is headed in a good direction.

Since the creation of the IES Brain Research Foundation, President Harac has been able to gain support from a variety of different outlets. The foundation has used its support to create a summer fellowship program and several fundraising events, such as their "Endor- phin 5K or 2K Run" taking place this September and their "Golf Outing and Dinner" taking place on June 3.

The 2013 IES Brain Research Foundation Student Summer Fellowship Program in Neuroscience is a program for undergraduate juniors and seniors who are interested in a career in neuroscience. It is a great opportunity for the foundation to encourage and involve young scientists and for students to learn and train with professional researchers in the field. This is the foundation’s major contribution to the education of future neuroscientists and it helps keep Dr. Simon’s passion alive for future generations.

What’s the proper etiquette for St. Patrick’s Day partying?

HE SAID

Saint Patrick’s Day is one of those cherished events that can definitely end your life — or being the responsible older that I am — I think it would be appropriate to share some of the more basic rules to having a successful Saint Patty’s Day.

For one, you should never, ever drink past your limit (this rule obviously only applies to the readers of legal drinking age). There exists a long debate over whether or not mixing dark and light is appropriate. For this debate, all I have to say is, “YOLO” Just make sure you have a drinking partner to watch your back.

Think of your partner as a wriggling, thing that should always be aware of the quickest route to the bedroom and a hair brush for the ladies — because pubes in your hair is not the cutest way to leave a nightclub.

Also, make sure you are well-rooted for the night’s festivities. You don’t want to end up being that guy or girl passed out at the Port Authority Bus Terminal. I mean, we’ve all been there, but let’s try to do better!

Apparently, there is a whole lot of pinching going on during this holiday. A word of advice: Don’t participate in any pinching antics. There will be a bit of drunk people floating around and a light pinch may be the right catalyst to ignite a bar brawl, or worse, a punch-off!

It would be best to respect everyone’s personal space unless you have that type of relationship where a pinch or two is not inappropriate.

Don’t eat anything that has been turned green thanks to the magic of food coloring. Unless you want to be that weirdo sitting on the train with a green tongue and matching teeth, avoid all emerald-colored treats at all costs. Your cool factor depends on it.

Keep in mind that if you refuse to wear green, you’re going to get pinched.

Going back to that superstition about wearing something green bringing you luck, many people in America have morphed that into, “He isn’t wearing green. I must pinch him to remind him that he is not the true Irish spirt-it.”

Don’t be surprised if it happens, especially once that keg is more than halfway gone. Draw a green shamrock on your hand and call it a day.

On the same note, don’t be that person going around pinching people. Nothing ruins the moment more than when you’re hitting on a guy and someone suddenly pinch-es you in a place that makes you jump, spilling your drink all over a cute boy, leaving you cursing the person walking away laughing.

Another point of etiquette to remember: Avoid using the stereotypical Irish phrases that someone with a green tongue will instinctively spew out. “Check out these shenanigans” is not an acceptable form of flirting at a party.

Most importantly, if you are drinking on this St. Patrick’s Day, be safe about partying.

Although I am not extremely knowledgeable about the whole drinking and partying scene, I think everybody has a little bit of experience when it comes to good ol’ St. Patty’s Day.

Mines comes strictly from being an attendee of the Seaside Heights St. Patrick’s Day parade since I was old enough to sport a “Kiss Me, I’m Irish” T-shirt.

There are many things that people should keep in mind to make it come to etiquette whether you are attending one of the many Jersey parades or are simply hanging around drinking a beer in your buddy’s basement.

Lastly, don’t wear green! You will end up looking like the dolly Green Giant and that’s not a great look.

While I do not have a lot of experience with drinking, I have had a drink or two with some of my friends. I can say that it is not a good idea to get too drunk and do things you may regret later on.

Although it’s really entertaining to see the cops arguing to see the cops arguing to see the cops arguing to see the cops arguing to see the cops arguing to see the cops arguing with a person who is totally plastered and yelling about the floats at 1 p.m. during the parade, it’s not fun when you’re the one getting a ticket or being arrested.

Do wear green, go to a parade, have fun and crack open a nice cold beer with your buds. Don’t get in a fight or get thrown behind bars. Nothing’s worse than nursing that hangover while you make your one phone call.

Bad Shuttles

Midterms

University’s website and search under the Jeanne Clery Act, there is a description about the University Police Department and their duties. Under their services and duties there is a small section about Shuttle Services in which they don’t state any real information. There should be something about Shuttle Services posted under the Jeanne Clery Act. The Police Department’s sole duty is to respond to immediate danger and the police should have been contacted about this situation.

Of course, there is always the “no harm, no foul” mentality, but who is to say that there wasn’t a good chance this shuttle could have caught on fire as well. The complete lack of professionalism shown by this driver is disgraceful.

As much as shuttle services can try to protect this driver, they should realize he was at fault. There isn’t much we can do about predicting the lifespan of a shuttle besides proper inspections and care, but the university’s staff really should learn to be more composed and concerned for student safety.

We commend the staff who responded to the fire last year, but this situation could have been handled better. Fortunately, this was just a smoking bus, but what if the situation had escalated?

The driver’s response isn’t reassuring in the slightest. The shuttle is out of service right now, but it was only one part of the bus that failed and the shuttle will be up and running in a week.

The Obama administration is increasing the scope and frequency of drone strikes and has defended their effectiveness against terrorism.

Last month, President Obama announced that a new drone base has opened in Niger’s Capitale city, Niamey, opening yet another front in the ever- expanding war. This base will provide support for the French-led mission against Islamic militants in Mali.

The collateral damage from drone strikes has been disastrous for American authorities. Information on the drone program is notoriously difficult to find, and Pentagon’s lack of transparency is the matter.

Despite this, an extensive study on the effectiveness of drone strikes were the report’s findings on how the strikes impact the daily lives of civilians in the tribal region.

The constant military of an impairing strike has disrupted every aspect of civilian life in the tribal region, even down to funeral rituals. Drones have mistakenly targeted funerals so much that now few people attend funerals in tribal areas, causing a breakdown in community and social support.

The Stanford and NYU study reports that people have become so afraid of drone strikes that they no longer participate in community activities and even hesitate to invite guests to their homes.

Every civilian death from a drone strike may cause a friend or relative of the deceased to join the Taliban or an extremist group, reported the New York Times. The front lines of this war are in the hearts and minds of men and women who may be tempted to join terrorist organizations in the wake of a strike against the United States. How can U.S. officials claim that missile-armed drones are helping America fight a war?

Drones are only President Obama’s mnemonics in an endless and global game of war: the drones’ killing of civilians, which are not helping to eliminate terrorism. Third, the report concludes that drone strikes have made America safer."
The band's name was chosen from Caracas, Venezuela who were nominated for a Grammy Award under the Best Latin Pop, Rock or Urban Album category.

The fact that these boys were nominated meant serious business. Their hard work was clearly paying off and their acceptance into the Latin music world could not have come better.

Currently, La Vida Bohème is preparing for their second studio album. Now, to be released this year in April. Judging by the love and support their fans have been giving them and their recognition on an international basis, La Vida Bohême is here to stay.

On the weekend of Feb. 28, Players put on one of the best shows to curtain this year. Reefer Madness was the musical of choice for this go-round and it did not disappoint.

Written by Kevin Murphy and Dan Studney, Reefer Madness was packed with high-paced and witty humor along with a poignant political message, the Commuter Lounge could not even accommodate everyone who wanted to see the show. Players’ most recent musical was an undeniable hit.

A parody of the 1937 public service announcement warning of the dangers of marijuana, Reefer Madness was the brain-child of Murphy and Studney, amplifying the ridiculous attempts to control people through fear. A satirical musical piece, the show made many outrageous claims of the effects of marijuana—sanity, domestic violence and cannibalism included.

The student audience of Montclair State University responded favorably. Filling Rocky’s Nest with uproarious laughter, the show was gratifying for kids and adults alike. Freshman theatre major AJ Primavera said the show was “extremely tech-heavy. With multiple scene and costume changes, the show was ‘an excellent example of what Players could accomplish.’”

Needless to say, the audience loved what it saw. Brendan Clare played the hysterical role of Jimmy. Lured into the demonic world of weed, Clare plays a character that stoops to stealing cars and killing old men. Jimmy even turns away from Jesus Christ, who makes a personal appearance to steer the young man right in a number called, “Listen to Jesus, Jimmy.” The actor, who is actually a sports marketing major, said the piece was “challenging, but just as fulfilling to work on, especially with directors Allison Andresini, Ryan Yannalfo and Nicole Boureau.”

Overall, Reefer Madness was a fun ride that would have definitely sold out had tickets not been free. Facetious and edgy, the musical was “chronically hilarious.”

Among the mass hoard of Harlem shake remakes and horrible lyric videos on YouTube is a web series that really stands out: The Mis-Adventures of Awkward Black Girl (or simply known as “Awkward Black Girl”).

Created by Issa Rae, a producer/director/writer/actress based in Los Angeles, the series follows the misadventures of Rae’s socially-awkward protagonist J. She is awkward and black, a combination that proves to be the bane of her existence. While ABG may seem like just another comedy series, Rae deftly uses humor to address more serious issues and themes that covers today’s sugar-coated racism and the tension between team light-skin versus dark-skin.

Some of the best moments of the series are when J allows us to see exactly what she’s thinking and how she would change events to play out in her favor.

Who doesn’t want to slap a co-worker for overstepping boundaries or break into a job you’re applying for because they haven’t confirmed whether or not you’re getting the position? Through J, we can live out all our fantasies, laugh about our shortcomings and realize that being awkward doesn’t mean you can’t have your own version of happiness.
