Students at Montclair State University have been stopping to begin a process called “reversal construction.”

Karen Ladd, Pennington announced to the student body via Skype Tuesday that the university has made the decision to “immediately stop all current construction and immediately begin to reverse all construction that has taken place over the past year.”

This came as a surprise to the many students who had to trudge through dirty patches of sidewalk and roads to get to their classes. A source close to Pennington revealed that the SGA had paid a fraudulent $27,000 to book Nicki Minaj to perform at homecoming this April.

After nearly a year of campus-wide construction, and with the end in sight, all campus renovations have been stopped to begin a process called “reversal construction.”

Reports say that all of the shuttle services have changed. They now be all-campus, sources say.

This new rule took effect immediately. The other letters have been removed from the buses. Every shuttle conspicuously displays the letter A on the side, Their LED signs, which used to say, almost mockingly, “It’s warm in here!” now read, “Let’s go everywhere!”

Students have responded in eerie nonchalance. Reports say that all of the shuttle complaints coming from students have ceased, halting a 33-year-long streak when complaints were reported almost every day. Officials declare that students are more docile now that the all-shuttle service, or ASS, ordinance came into effect.

 Glouce Points: 5

After the Nicki Minaj announcement, more students realized that the only shuttle that will ever come is an all-campus shuttle.

“The students have been more docile now that everyone has to fire English professor Grover Furr,” Palin has also stated that some of her main concerns will be to help create classes that support “traditional values.”

On Fox News ended, the former governor and vice presidential hopeful seemed to be at a dead end. However, after realizing what she says is an opportunity to make a real difference in the lives of students, Palin began aExternally obscure campaign that has led to her latest electoral victory.

To all of this, other students are unexcited for what they believe will be an exciting change of pace. “others are uncertain about Palin’s legitimacy within the elections.”

Sarah Palin, ex-Governor of Alaska, has been elected as president of MSU’s Student Government Association. Students and faculty have questioned the legitimacy of Palin’s election despite the fact that the former governor beat her two opponents by a margin of over 30 percent.

Voting took place online March 23 until March 27. While there were several positions being voted on, the most important was the presidency. The Student Government Association is a nonprofit organization that includes executive, legislative and judicial branches. Its leaders represent the students of MSU and make important decisions such as those that affect student organizations.

The staff and students of Montclair State University have recently been informed of the $1.5 million golden statue being built in Presi- dent Susan Cofal's honor. Un- til recently, no one was aware of the funds or reasoning for this enormous project, but the shocking truth has finally been discovered.

Cofal was asked by Ste- phen Spielberg to play the role of MSU President back in May 2004. She took on this coveted position the following semester in September 2007. She has been acting as our president for years, keeping her a secret from everyone.

George Julian, current president of the Student Gov- ernment Association, stated, "I was shocked when I found out that President Cofal was acting. She's always been so good at accomplishing things as an University President."

The reason that Cofal and Spielberg kept this big secret was for the sake of cinema. The movie is about the life of a college president and is currently in theatres. The film, No College, also features many famous actors, including Zac Efron, Liam Hem-sworth, Emma Roberts and Selena Gomez.

Spielberg was trying to go for the most natural ap- proach and didn't want staff and students to feel uncom- fortable if they knew their president was really just act- ing. He also wanted to give full effect of a college experi- ence portrayed in the produc- tion, so he felt this was the best way to accomplish it.

Spielberg immediately knew that Cofal would be a great fit for this role and had no trouble getting her on board with the movie. MSU was the chosen college be- cause Spielberg had a feeling the staff and student body would not be the least bit suspicious, hoping they'd re- main gullible and oblivious.

Cofal found all of us, in- cluding Dr. Pennington, who said, "Cofal played the part so well that I never would have guessed she wasn't the real President! She deserves a life-size statue for that performance!"

The Academy of Motion Picture, Arts and Sciences is recognizing Cofal with not only an Oscar for her performance, but also a life-size golden statue of herself that will be on display on campus within the week.

The statute, made out of 18 karat gold and diamonds, will be placed in University Hall, and is expected to be finished by the end of the spring semes- ter since everyone involved is so excited to see it disposable.

Cofal says, "I was so happy to get the job on a shuttle in this movie, and honored to have the statue built. I was fooled everyone at Mont- cliff.

As Cofal was informed of her honorary statue at the Oscar award ceremony this past February. She was relieved to finally reveal her secret.

This is an improvement."

"My one concern is that, wouldn't that take longer to get all the shuttles around campus? Wouldn't that cause students to be late?" said Chantal Fredricks, a sophomore film and television-hugs enthusiast. Stu- dents like Fredricks are not expected to be late.

After the long discussion with the Campus Security Grand Chancellor about the procedure of campus shuttles, "the tram compartment of the statue [shuttle] was in exploded. Since the flames had spread up to the two seat- ing rows, the driver got up, turned around, grinned and proceeded to run off the bus. Meanwhile, flames threat- ened to engulf everyone on the bus, so I had to stop. I'm a Helen/ folk said the Chancellor.

The decision was made quickly. The Montclair State University Advisory Council voted unanimously in favor of all shuttles becoming all- electric shuttles. They be- lieved the shuttle service on campus didn't have much mobility, catering to those living in Sinatra, The Village and those in the area.

"Gosh darn, damn it! If I want to go to Rutgers and they only allow one shuttle per building."

nington said that the deci- sion came after a meeting of the Board of Trustees and other university officials, and that a "lazy river" would be the ideal way for students to get from one class to another. A private research firm found in a study conducted for Mont- clair State that lazy river transportation shows an increase in time needed in between classes. Additionally, the survey found that students were 2 percent happier when they provided with the alternate source of transportation.

It makes this lazy river special to Montclair State is the fact that Cole wished for the river to move. Despite being called a "lazy river," this river will have anything but that, moving at speeds comparable to white water rapids.

After installation of the lazy river is complete, students will have approximately 5 minutes to get from one class to another.

In response to the lazy river announcement, newly re-elected SGA President George Juzdan said, "I can't wait. Most students love the summer, so this is the perfect solution to make the campus feel like summertime all the year round."

Students interested in traveling this way from class to class can register with the university to receive a new credit needed for graduation by utilizing the river system.

Pulling up the pipes that were laid for the CRCB plant across from The Village. A slide from the third floor of the Transit Deck provides easy access to the river system.

After the initial installation around the main campus sources say the lazy river could eventually replace shuttles in transporting stu- dents from residence halls to their classes. Additionally, the river will provide adequate main- tenance, staff and inflatable tubes (or ice skates for the winter) for students wishing to take part in this exciting water based activity.

"I am so happy that they are finally getting recognized for this," said Mark Lusce, head of the SGA who is frequently featured in The Montclarion. "They always spell every name correctly and get all of their facts and spelling correct. I have never been misspelled in this paper ever."

In honor of this, the Montclarion staff would like to welcome the entire student body, all 18,000 of students on campus, to celebrate in their office in the SC Annex on April 5, 2013. The celebration will be kicked off by Je- orge Columbus, SGA President. The SGA are honoring The Montclarion by presenting them with a golden diction- ary," said Jundis. "We figured we didn't need to give them an actual dictionary since they never make mistakes, so we just made a golden one."

Aside from students and the SGA, President Susan Cole and Barack Obama will also be in attendance to award the staff. Cole is an ex- citement for this achievement because she promised that a "lazy river" would be the possible source of transportation from residence halls to their classes.

"It's been eighty fiv years and we never make mistakes, so we didn't need to give them a dictionary since they are an actual dictionary since they never make mistakes, so we just made a golden one."

The Montclarion staff thanks the student body for their patronage to the paper and would like to inform them that since it has been eighty 5 years since it has had the correct- ion of the paper the will no longer be printed.

Taylor also leaves these words of wisdom for those as- piring copy editors and those who want to go eighty 5 years without making a mistake.

On this, "Twee煤炭 the student body as news spread of the scam and students were offered a replacement ticket to see Fabulous, which senior Ryan Fisher said, is "not the same."

Dr. Susan Cole was look- ing for a way to head mankind away from the Red Hawk com- munity. "I understand that all of the continuous mistakes of verities, bomb scares, hate crimes come from students upset."

After seeing limited enthu- siasm when Moek Mill was announced to perform at this year’s Montclarion, she assumed students were going to go through the perfor- mance. "Moe as Mill is really cool, but I guess no one will feel better until there's a Taylor Momsen show, she says."

Sure, the newest runway fashion is great and all, but you westerners believe in cold feet metaphorically or physically? We do? Walk the terrain with the wind is not predicted, über-cold Montclair where conditions, especially in guarantee flip-flop-friendly temperatures by no means ASAP. But the cool spring got to assimilate to this ter of weeks and you've be warming up in a mat of the hottest couture for find an indefinite supply of the trusty yoga pants. No buttoning, zipping or even stretching to fit into, the yoga pant will be both a comfortable and classless look. You can pair them with running shoes when you're ready to get your sweat ses into, the yoga pant will be. But hey, for some of us, jean shorts just aren't it. Front pockets, back pockets, that confusing zipper and button cumble in the front, it can get to be an inconveni- nence all too quickly. So, de- signed with you in mind, is the trusty yoga pant. Thus, I give you the perfect stylish solution: cut-off shorts and flip-flops. This com- bination is classic, but you can say no to a pair of jean shorts? Whatever, frayed or tie-dye, daisy-dukes or cargo, you'll be looking sportyng fine while bearing your long, lovely legs. Rocking your favorite trusty footwear will literally never feel better as you prove you're eternally between seasons. No chis! Women’s Fashion

Spring 2013. Complimenting these groundbreaking designs are long, sexyth short shorts that aren't quite short but aren't too long. These shorts are this era's "man-shorts," allow- ing modesty, because God for- bid if anything above the knee is shown.

To compliment these two staple pieces, men should look into flip-flops and hi-top Nikes sneakers with colors that are so bright that the late Ray Charles would have put on a second pair of sunglasses. Flip- flops and large gaudy labels are in high demand as well as the 80's style of running shoes when you're running or even stretching to fit into, the yoga pant. As for your hair, it's time to go big. Bring back the 80s by pulling your crimpers and curling iron from the moth balls. Say yes to Aesop oil and rock the effortless bee-hive bun look. The higher up on your head, the bet- ter. Sure, you may block that guy behind you from seeing the whiteboard in your night class, but at least you'll have added four inches to your height. Score.

As always, make these fashion tips your own by adding your own flair such as bandanas, tem- porary tattoos and funny packs. They're all in this season. Until next time, stay fabulous!
Emoticons on Resumés
Tricks to Make Your Resumé Stand Out

Dana Baardsen
Staff Writer

With constant battling in the competitive job market, it’s more important now than ever to stay on top of building the perfect resumé. Now, it’s easier than ever to connect with potential employers by sending electronic resumés or personal website links via e-mail.

There’s a lot that goes into building an online resumé. There seems to be a lot of confusion as to what is appropriate to include and what is not. Should it be colorful? Should a personal photo be included?

Now, the most recently appraised addition to the electronic resumé is the insertion of appropriate emoticons, those little personality-packed smiley faces.

While it may not be appropriate to include emoticons on a resumé when applying for a finance job, emoticons are being used prominently in resumés sent out to jobs relating to the fields of human resources, psychology, art, graphic design, broadcasting, journalism and teaching.

Emoticons are not for everyone and they are not to be used irresponsibly. When emoticons are used properly and executed with creative taste, it is actually a preferred method of resumé writing.

If you’re ready to explore this new trend of inserting emoticons into your professional electronic resumé, please visit our Career Service Center on campus.

Inappropriate use:
Montclair State University Psychology
Prospective graduation: May 2013

Inserting a graduation emoticon is absolutely inappropriate. The potential employer already has a mental picture of graduation, so there is no need to add an unnecessary emoticon here.

Adding excessive and unneeded emoticons which do not display or further enhance your personality can not only be ineffective, but can also backfire.

Appropriate use:
Skills: Telemarketing, communication, marketing, public relations

This works well, because before the potential employer even reads what section of the resumé you are presenting, you are already creating a picture that can be associated with telephones and communication, which are the bulk of your skills.

This says a lot more than just an emoticon with a smiley face. An artist, for example, would include the emoticon with a color palette over their listing of artistic skills. Make sense?

Gone are the days when this was inappropriate.

The journalist who served as an integral part of the kind-faced professor with a key involvement with the British rock band, The Who, known Steve Johnson as a pipe dream. When the tour was reaching its end with September 1964, a rumor started to spread. All major tabloids and radio stations reported that a widely-known American band would join the band for the remainder of their tour in Europe. A man dedicated to his studies and to his vision for the growth of the media, Johnson declined the offer. However, when asked about exactly what his touring experience was like, with the rock band, Johnson could only comment: “What happens on tour, stays on tour.”
High Fructose Corn Syrup
Health-Benefits You Were Never Told

Alexis Fissinger
Staff Writer

Despite all of the negative press surrounding high fructose corn syrup (HFCS), the truth is that this sweetener is simply composed of the naturally sweet juices that are inside a kernel of corn. You may have seen one of those oh-so-pleasant commercials of mothers at a children’s party or the boyfriend and girlfriend sharing a snack. In each instance, one of the actors is proclaiming their enjoyment of foods with high fructose corn syrup because it makes things taste good, it is natural, and it provides the same nutritional content as sugar. Well folks, you heard it from the best source available: Everyone knows that you cannot put anything on the television that is not true. Just in case you are still not convinced, here are some reasons why this controversial ingredient is actually an important part of a happy and healthy lifestyle.

Just Like Eating Fruits and Vegetables
The benefits are obvious by just looking at the name. High fructose corn syrup actually comes right from corn, a vegetable, making it healthier than any other type of sweetener in the country. While the term “sugar” is often associated with health consequences like diabetes and obesity, high fructose corn syrup actually acts to fight diabetes.

Since it is derived from a vegetable, this product is an excellent source of fiber, which studies have shown assists in weight management and decreases the risk for diabetes, cardiovascular disease and high blood pressure. Therefore, the benefits of HFCS even exceed those claimed by the “all natural, zero-calorie product” that everyone loves.

In an attempt to increase nutrient intake from fruits and vegetables, the government made sure that high fructose corn syrup was included in just about every food with health consequences. During the swelling of the corn kernel to produce HFCS, the cavity-forming compounds are destroyed, making this a miracle sweetener.

Increases Dental Health
When mothers hear the word sugar, they not only think of obesity and diabetes, but they also think of cavities! Luckily, high fructose corn syrup is the sweet exception to this negative stereotype. During the swelling of the corn kernel to produce HFCS, the cavity-forming compounds are destroyed, making this a miracle sweetener.

Safety First
Forget boring mint toothpaste. Many brands of toothpaste list high fructose corn syrup as an ingredient, especially in children’s toothpastes, as there must be a good reason for it. In fact, your child may already be breaking their teeth with high fructose corn syrup. Many brands of toothpaste list high fructose corn syrup as an ingredient, especially in children's toothpastes, as there must be a good reason for it.

Don’t fall into the Truvia trap.

Ignore the myths of “bad” breakfast cereals.

Fun & Games

HOROSCOPES

By Madame Carley

Aries March 21 - April 19
You find your weekly routine to be repetitive and frustrating. This week, though, you will encounter something new and unexpected that will break you out of this monotonous cycle.

Taurus April 20 - May 20
You will notice that you have more free time than usual. However, just because you do not tend to be as busy this week, doesn’t mean that it’s time to lie around on the couch. Use your free time wisely to have fun and get things done.

Gemini May 21 - June 20
Before you become angry and yell at someone you believe is upset with you, put yourself in their shoes, as you may discover that this “crisis” isn’t such a big deal after all.

Cancer June 21 - July 22
You are officially overworked, but congrats because you have officially earned yourself some time to rest. Take a short break from your busy life to get your energy back. Once you do, you will feel better than ever!

Leo July 23 - August 22
Yelling and fighting with your close ones is never the best way to get what you want. Speak in a calm and mature manner to get your point across.

Virgo August 23 - September 22
Lately, people have been taking advantage of your good will. It is time to put your foot down and think about your own needs rather than the enmity of others.

Libra September 23 - October 22
You are going to wish that this week would never end, for it seems to be full of positive and fun energy. Enjoy it to the max!

Scorpio October 23 - November 21
You will have a lot of fun and a great time in general this week. Before getting too comfortable though, set some time aside to get your work and priorities done. Having fun does not mean slack off.

Sagittarius November 22 - December 21
This is one of those lazy weeks where you feel like staying in and doing things for yourself. Although you normally enjoy going out and seeing others, you will feel more laid-back this week.

Capricorn December 22 - January 19
Even though certain deadlines for assignments seem far away, they are really not. Problems always emerge when you wait until the last minute to get things done.

Aquarius January 20 - February 18
You will be receiving a positive answer regarding something that you have suspected to be true for quite some time. It will be pretty intense, so prepare yourself. Just remember to always remain calm and not make a scene.

Pisces February 19 - March 20
This is an unlucky week when it comes to friendship. Perhaps you won’t be able to keep these plans you’ve made or maybe you’ve just gotten into a fight with a friend. Whatever the case may be, be cautious when informing friends about anything that you don’t feel comfortable with.

Signs all around campus greet visitors with a “please excuse our appearance.” Who said we ever minded it, MSU? We as students have come to embrace the construction that’s been going on around campus. The scenic views of the trunks, gravel and debris really complement the view of the New York City skyline. For every article we’ve written in the past, we’d like to sincerely apologize. We’re now seen the benefits of construction. Sure, getting to classes and parking has become a harder task, but honestly, we are students. It’s not like we have a say in the matter. We are more children still transitioning into adulthood. Even if we do pay to attend school and live on campus, we shouldn’t have control over what work gets done on our campus. We should fully trust the board and their decision to continuously pile on construction projects. We’ve learned to embrace the benefits of construction on campus, for example: no need for alarm clocks. If your window is fortunate enough to be near a construction site, you won’t need to spend money on a clock nor would you have to set your cell phone. The sound of the construction sites will croon their merry tune, making your morning spectacular. It is one of the greatest privileges this school has to offer a morning alert system courtesy of Montclair State University.

Who needs the convenience of open meadows? With construction detours, students will have more enjoyment finding their way to class. We ran admirers MSU’s once scenic campus and in its place admire cranes and dump trucks. Hearing the birds chirping is no cliché. Instead, MSU has the heaping of trucks backed up and drills tearing away at gravel. It is a campus unlike any other. The unique sound of tools clashing together naturally compose itself into an angelic melody. It’s a soothing walk through campus and is very exciting walk for any newcomers. You never know which roads will be closed off and which alternate routes you will need to take. The best part about construction has been the lack of wildlife on campus. We all hate the geese, chipmunks and groundhogs scurrying around our campus. We are humans, the most advanced species on this planet. We should not let mere animals trample on our campus. With the depletion of the geese population, campus has been a lot cleaner. Eventually, we will no longer feel the need to assert our dominance over these creatures. We will have campus all to ourselves.

We at Montclairian support the construction efforts in their entirety. Actually, we hope that after the installment of the lazy river, the school will consider expanding other construction projects.

Besides the construction of the new Environmental Science building, we hope that there will be an expansion for the School of Communication and possibly an expansion of the campus.

Who knows what we can create with a campus expansion? Maybe we can add a culinary school. With construction, what will Montclair State University be? We would lose our individuality.

We would lose that aspect that makes us MSU. Construction should be a continuous effort for our university, not only for the sake of expansion, but so that we may continue to be the MSU everybody knows and loves.

The original videos, which were released earlier last month, have surfaced on YouTube with stories of how U.S. forces attacked North Korea citizens and how the U.S. forces were being defeated in battles. An estimated 400,000 North Koreans circled the Earth five times or so in order to parachute into the middle of the Gulf of Mexico. (I’m just describing what I’ve heard from North Korean citizens, while the U.S. forces were being defeated in battles.)

The images and graphics used in these videos were supposedly recycled from the first movie of the Oscar-nominated Broken Dance Day, Deep Impression, Architecton and Men in Black – all apocalyptic-themed movies created in the mid-1990s, which North Korea has just now acquired via copyright piracy.

North Korea obtains all of their information and supplies from the outside world by using carrier pigeons, which is how they have been able to remain in touch with North Korea (that’s positive, correct?').

In order to return to the Korea War, the movie has added to the tension that already exists between the two countries. The United States, only further increasing retaliation for its involvement in the Korean War.

Forrest Gump II has been released yet again in outer space. His famous candy quote may now be used in these videos. As a long-time fan of the film, I am still quite concerned as to the intention of these videos. North Korea are advocating currently for more United States, only further...

Known best for her award-winning vocal talent, Rebecca Black garnered attention through her hit song “Friday,” which, by the end of March 2011, received over 42 million hits on YouTube. Blasted on the radio, in arenas during major sporting events and praised globally for its snarky, intense, complex lyrics, “Friday” was Black’s golden ticket to stardom.

For first-timers, the only highly recommended track is “Friday,” although if you haven’t heard it by now, it’s quite a shame. You’re seriously missing out on the ears of the century.

In 2010, the young, humble teenager of Irvine, California was introduced to ARK Music Factory, an infamous and well-reputable Los Angeles label through a music video client. Realizing that Black had a talent that could surpass any other, the label did not charge her any fees and welcomed her to come back to produce more singles whenever the teen felt like it.

The music video was uploaded to Fox’s YouTube on Feb. 10, 2011 and received about 1,000 views during the first month. The video went viral on March 11, 2011 with millions of views in a matter of days with many no thumb down or negative comments. Black was invited and appeared on The Tonight Show with Jay Leno on March 22, 2011, during which she performed her song and received the amazingly positive feedback.

At the show, Black could sit down. Everyone was cheering and singing backings in the legend’s voice. Day Lane told himself that he never had such a genuinely talented artist in his show before. Later that year, MTV selected Black to host the “Video Music Awards Fan Army Part” in April, the channel’s first online awards show.

Pop singer such as Katy Perry took particular interest in Black and asked her to participate in her music video for “Friday Night (T.G.I.F.)” as a homage to “Friday.” Katy Perry stated in an interview with MTV that the music video would not be complete without Black’s presence because Black was her new inspiration. As a part of her “Dent Tour,” Perry even routinely performed “Last Friday Night” and even brought Rebecca with her on tour to sing a duet.

Black even caught the attention of pop sensation Justin Bieber, as he stated in a press conference that he would love more than anything to perform a duet with her. Flattered, Black did not accept because her style was just beyond Bieber’s level.

Starting her own label, RB Records, Black released a self-produced single, “My Moment,” depicting the difference between her life before and after her fame. Her worldwide fans were overwhelmed with joy, causing the video to reach millions of views, landing her tune on top charts internationally.

Her official debut album was planned to be released around Oct. 31, 2012, which would include a wide variety of genres and would have spoken of, much more lessons in love, such as your ABCs. The goal of the album was to be appropriate and clean, to speak to a generation of young adults and inform them to be better people in the world of today. The album, however, was never released, and to this day, there is no word of an official release.

Lil’ Cupcak3$ is an American artist whose life is turned upside-down when she’s found for stealing a pair of hockey skates. She, however, isn’t just any hockey skates. These skates belong to the university’s star player, Buck Greensly. Greensly had just donated the skates to his hockey school for at-risk youths. But Robert didn’t want to take the skates — he doesn’t even know how to play hockey. The skates just seemed to fall out of the sky and into his lap.

After recovering from seriousanj injuries, Trebor finds himself doing hard time at the county jail. On the eve of his release, he is invited and appeared on The Tonight Show with Jay Leno in preparation for the release of his new mixtape. Jay-Z Goes Country

From a Lambo, to a John Deere

Rap, hip-hop and R&B are genres of music that Jay-Z can be identified with, but after a press conference on March 24, the 17-time Grammy winner will be adding a new genre to his repertoire: country. Jay announced to a crowd of hundreds of reporters on Sunday that he was “branching out and trying something new.” The “99 Problems” singer is best known for his deep, truthful lyrics and A-list collaborators.

Not all musicians have success crossing over to other genres of music to another. Examples include singers like Lil Wayne who made the transition from rap to rock, or Taylor Swift, from pop to country. Bieber himself has done a duet in his YouTube channel containing a video on his Behr fever is sweeping across them to do a duet?

While Taylor Swift’s life has become a punch line of jokes from, poor Justin Bieber had to deal with not having a “Bieb-tastic” birthday, being booted off stage after arriving late to a concert by his “Beliebers” and being told that he should check himself into rehab. Now you might have expected the: “I Know You Were Troubled” singer and the “Beauty and a Beat” singer to release their own songs vocalizing their thoughts and feelings, but did you ever expect them to do that?

You can keep the jokes and the YouTube channel containing a video on his behalf, uploaded a video on his YouTube channel containing a rap track entitled, “Hatarade Is our Gatorade.”

Bieber cannot be broken down by anyone. Bieber took the lead in the first verse in which he paid homage to the late Amy Winehouse, when he rapped, “I just smoked a little, what damage could it really do? Everyone knows I’m going through, and there to get them through / But now they say I’m wild, and I don’t get to checking myself into rehab! Now I might still be young, but here’s what I know. They say I should go to rehab, but I’m sayin’ no, no, no.”

Can everyone remember the public outrage when images of the teen pop star smoking marijuana surfaced on the internet. Then you threw in the incident on his birthday, the times he’s arrived late to the stage and the fact that he passed out before a concert by his “Bieber Fever” birthday, the times he’s arrived late to the stage and the fact that he passed out before a concert.

Bieber and Swift, leaving behind a “Trail of Tears”

The “99 Problems” singer is best known for his deep, truthful lyrics and A-list collaborators. Not many artists have succeeded in crossing over to another genre of music to another. Examples include singers like Lil Wayne who made the transition from rap to rock, or Taylor Swift, from pop to country. Bieber himself has done a duet in his YouTube channel containing a video on his behalf, uploaded a video on his behalf, uploaded a video on his behalf, uploaded a video on his behalf.

The track was fierce and it definitely sent out the message that for “Taylor Swift and Justin Bieber cannot be broken down by anyone.

Bieber had nothing but success in rap. I feel that all of his past successes will translate over to his next career move into country music.

Jay-Z is one of the most talented musicians alive. His lyrics are brutal and beautiful. Every time he takes the stage, he goes out all. He has worked with some of the most talented artists and has cut records with the likes of Juan Timberlake, Alicia Keys, Kanye West and Beyoncé. He is an incredibly savvy business man and has a net worth of nearly $500 million. Even though the transition from rap to country is a bit shocking to some, Jay will bring in the album sales. He has a loyal following that will support him no matter what the record sounds like.

This next album will show a whole new side to Jay, a side that most of his fans have yet to see and are truly anxious to hear from. I think Jay’s new album will be incredible and is something that no one will ever forget. Like says in his hit single, “Public Service Announcement” “Allow me to reintroduce myself, my name is HOV.” Even though he is still the same rapper so many people fell in love with, he is reintroducing himself as a talented, passionate and driven country artist.

While Taylor Swift’s life has become a punch line of jokes from, poor Justin Bieber had to deal with not having a “Bieb-tastic” birthday, being booted off stage after arriving late to a concert by his “Beliebers” and being told that he should check himself into rehab. Now you might have expected the: “I Know You Were Troubled” singer and the “Beauty and a Beat” singer to release their own songs vocalizing their thoughts and feelings, but did you ever expect them to do that?

Although the Academy Awards have passed us by last month, rumors are already swirling about next year’s nominations. Granted, there is always speculation around the fantastic pictures and dedicated actors but there is overwhelming support surrounding one multifaceted team. The cast of Jersey Shore goes to undeniable lengths to provide authenticity to their roles portraying trashy guidos and guidettes on this reality show. Here, their efforts have not gone unnoticed. Their fan following is cult-ish: those who tune in week after week are made speechless by the raw emotion oozing from what some would call, “tanned babes.”

The Academy Awards are typically a celebration of movies. However, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has altered the rules starting in 2014. Councilmember Joe Schmo says, “This has been the topic of controversy for quite some time, yet we have felt that some shows are more deserving than an Emmy Award. They deserve more prestige.”

There will always be mixed feelings about who deserves what, and this nomination will be no different. Many are upset that the Academy Awards have decided to allow television shows to be a part of the ceremony, especially when they already have one all their own. The controversy peaked when the public learned of the reason this change was being made: Jersey Shore.

"Jersey Shore? Really? Okay, now I know it’s the end of the world," says Academy Awards fan Stephanie Lopez. Plenty others share her sentiment threatening that if the Academy Awards continue this disrespect, they will lose millions of viewers from tuning in next year. Yet, there are those who are delighted to see their favorite stars finally being honored for this show, despite book deals, spin off shows, clothing lines and endorsements. The Jersey Shore is finally getting the respect that they deserve and will begin to be taken seriously as an art form. Loyal fan Danielle Johnson says, “They work so hard for everything they have achieved. The haters are just jealous. ‘GTL’ for life.”

Others think the controversy is too extreme. "Honestly, I don’t see the big deal," says Mike Fern, a self-proclaimed fan of the show. “They’re just having fun, and if you don’t like them, don’t watch the show.”

But some moments from Jersey Shore cannot be denied. It took sheer courage when Mike “The Situation” Sorrentino slammed his head into a wall to scare off his opponent Ronnie back in season four. In season three, Nicole “Snooki” Polizzi was arrested for public intoxication in the middle of the day. She took her role to the next level, invoking the emotion of viewers across the country and internationally. Whether you love or hate the cast of Jersey Shore, you cannot argue the fact that they are pure entertainment, down to the bar fights, drunk-  en escapades and idiotic banter. Whether you think they deserve an Oscar or a stint in boot camp to clean up their act, either way, they’ve got your attention.

We will just have to stay tuned in and see if the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will keep their mentality and lose faithful fans or if they are committing the greatest pop culture prank of all time. The Jersey Shore cast is infamous and will remain so even if the Academy Awards retract their statement, allowing the cast to be considered. Only time will tell.

Believe it or not, the women's basketball team is not as perfect as we were driven to believe they are. According to extensive research, the NCAA has come up with evidence that Montclair State University cheated in every single one of their games during the 2012-2013 season. What began as a simple experiment to see if a slippery slope of scientific discovery and deception that would make Space Jam look puny.

It all started when, ironically, the team was doing their pregame ritual of watching Space Jam while performing black magic and several types of extremely questionable science experiments.

The team was feeding relativivity down before their first game but, just as Bill Murray walked onto the court in glorious fashion, green smoke filled the locker room and the team disappeared. It was all that was heard above the groans of their confused fans.

Congratulations to the Red Hawks celebrating one of their many "wins" from the 2012-2013 season. Montclair State University now awaits what will be a heavy suit from center field.

We're not sure if it would work but we figured we'd give it a shot," said Tobie. "We never did get used to being carried away as we did."

The Montclair State University softball team has just received news from the NCAA that all of their wins over the last three seasons are being revoked. It was reported that the team has been accused of academic fraud and its athletic department is being investigated by the NCAA.

The team was 21-18 over the past three seasons, the Red Hawks had a 44-10 record in the past three seasons, the Red Hawks had a 44-10 record and will be for the next few seasons. This is as if the Red Hawks never played a game. For the players and coaches, this is a devastating blow for all their hard work and time they put into the last three seasons to make the program and team better.

The Montclair State University Red Hawks have built a name for themselves throughout the state as a top team. Now they are embarrassed and ashamed after the news of this scandal broke.

Teams that come to play the Red Hawks at Montclair State University always seem to come out on top and lose. The Red Hawks have had a 4-10 record when playing at home.

The news created a buzz on campus, as many of the better intramural cornhole players are looking forward to trying out and earning a spot on the new men's and women's cornhole teams. Many student-athletes who indicated their interest to try out wished to remain anonymous, so as not to give their competitors a leg up on their plans.

The news came as a shock to the team. Now they are embarrassed and ashamed after the news of this scandal broke. The team will have to start over.

Who’s Hot

Susan Cole
President — MSU
Cole had a phenomenal outing last week. Cole filed a record 43 forms in under five minutes. More impressively, she did it while her foot was asleep.

Jessica Czarnogursky
Feature Editor — The Montclarion
Czarnogursky broke the land-speed record for driving up to the roof of Car Parc Diem with a time of 50.34 seconds. She also made three straight garbage bin jump shots.

Who’s Hot

Rocky Red Hawk
Mascot — MSU
Rocky attended every sporting event last week and recorded 15 cartwheels, five back hand-springs, one somersault and three jumping splits.

Rashard Bradshaw
Arts Editor — The Montclarion
Bradshaw wrote two 1000-word essays in the span of two hours and managed to get an A on both. Bradshaw followed them up by stacking six quarters on their sides.

Bring pride and power to all.

If none of those come to mind, you clearly have not experienced the fundamental basics of our fine university’s heart and soul.

I’m not talking about the Red Hawk Dining, the Rathskeller or the secret clubhouse behind the amphitheater. I’m talking about the Monty Hawkins.

“Red Nick, who is that?” Well, I’ll tell you right after I ask a question of my own. How do you not know of Monty Hawkins, MSU’s number-one super fan?

I am here, today, to share with you the tale of Monty Hawkins, the man behind not only the Red Hawk, but also the school’s motto of “Carpe Diem.”

Monty Hawkins was born Sir Isaac Montresor Monty Hawkins, older brother to Foo Fighters drummer Taylor Hawkins. Yes, he was born a knight.

On an expedition to Las Vegas, a nomadic fortune teller shared with the Queen, the prophecy of a man that would transcend of simple humankind and the gods wanted him to attend.

Knowing he was meant to attend Harvard, Michigan, Oxford, Smithington State, he decided to fall into a deep existential state where he would meditate and find where fate and the gods wanted him to attend.

Upon waking from his 120-hour slumber, Hawkins packed his things and began the physically taxing journey towards his goal. After completing the 1,974-hour trek in only 14 days, Hawkins set his eyes on the majestic peak that is Montclair State. Due to his presence, the school’s motto of “Carpe Diem.”

Hawkins made several attempts at multiple majors, but to his surprise, he found them all unappealing.

Some students claim to have seen Hawkins wearing a red hawk mask and black and red clothing to hide his identity.

One day, while walking back to his dorm, he stumbled upon the school rugby team practicing in the quad. In that moment, he was hit by a shocking revelation. He was destined to be the greatest fan of all time.

On that day, Hawkins changed his name to Monty and vowed that he would rule Montclair State and make them the collegiate equivalent of the Mongol Empire, with him being their Genghis Khan.

The next day, he stormed into Steen Cole’s office, demanded a high five and then there explained to her that he was chosen by Montclairathletics.com to be the Red Hawk in honor of the school’s new mascot would be MSU’s motto to act as a constant reminder to students that Montclair State will continue to grow to new heights.

Shock by the confidence and poise of Hawkins, Cole immediately declared that the school’s new mascot would be the Red Hawk in honor of Hawkins and the red-hot flare he brought with him being their Genghis Khan.

Hawkins and the red-hot flare have a 42 percent win rate.

Since 1989, Hawk has attended every single game and, when he is not in attendance, MSU sports teams have a 44 percent win rate.

Some believe he is a superior being to lead this school to greatness. Others believe he is more of a Minnie Pearl-type character.

Everyone seems to agree he is the most interesting man alive. His presence has attended every single game and, when he is not in attendance, MSU sports teams have a 44 percent win rate. He is a silent figure in the crowd, a watchful protector, a red knight.
