State Senator Barbara Buono brought some celebrity flair to her campaign when she attended Attorney General Cory Booker’s alma mater, Montclair State University for one of her political rallies on Sunday. With the gubernatorial elections only eight weeks away, this rally was key in garnering support for the progressive platform that Buono and running mate, Milli Silver, who also was Wash-

MSU To Visit Obama

Barack Obama has been coming to Montclair State University since his inauguration. He has noticed that many social change movements are on college campuses. Encouraging individual students and organizations to be a part of this campaign, he began the Interfaith and Community Action Campus Challenge as an annual conference to promote the ideal of people of all faiths working togeter to better the community. These organizas in those on campus are taking a trip to Washington, D.C. for this conference. Specific delegates from each of those interfaith organizaas on campus alongside different faculty members were chosen to attend. This trip is a unique opportunity to interact with experts and officials who are committed to community service within interfaith organizations.

The event is designed to aid both campuses trying to get interfaith organizations started and those with longstanding organizations. The event is designed to celebrate the work current-lly occurring on campuses as well as providing students with opportunities to develop an understanding interfaith cooperation and commu-ity service that will carry on throughout their lives.

The participants will be able to tell stories about what they are doing on their campuses, learn about how to run their organizations more smoothly and celebrate ongoing work so they will be ready to return to campus, inspired to take the president’s Interfaith and Community Service Campus Challenge to a higher level. Additionally, attendees will be able to interact with the Muslim Students Association, and I am really excited and just don’t know how to get all the words into a page. On that con-part that I was ever going to be choosen to attend this event,

- Montclair art advocate Joan Finn died on Friday, Sept. 6, at the age of 82. Finn was an editor at The Montclair Times, where she produced a weekly column on the art scene of Montclair. She had played an influential part in bringing the artistic community together during her work. Her death came one week after her retirement.
- AshBritt Inc., a disaster recovery contractor, is set to repay $300,000 in overcharges to the state of New Jersey it had charged for the cleanup of superstorm Sandy. The company had been chosen by the Christie Administration for cleanup purposes.
- Rahway mayor Rick Proctor resigned on Tuesday, Sept. 10. Proctor had been found guilty in municipal court for soliciting a parking lot donation from a Birdsall engineering representative. City council president Samson Steinman will be sworn in as a temporary mayor until the city council chooses a new permanent mayor.
- Senator Robert Menendez has asked the Federal Department of Justice to award the city of Newark funds to allow the city to hire more police after 10 people were killed during a 10-day period.
- Police confirmed on Tuesday that the infant remains found in a garage of a Toledo, Ohio home were the remains of Elaina Steinfurth. The 18-month old had not been seen since June 2.
- Centre College, a liberal arts school that was to receive a $225 million endorsement to set up a scholarship program, ended discussions regarding the program. The money has been withdrawn.
- An Amtrak train struck a tractor-trailer in Mississippi on Tuesday. Six people were injured.
- Amir Hekmati, a 29-year-old former U.S marine who has been jailed in Iran since 2011, sent a letter to Secretary of State John Kerry saying that his confession was made under duress. Hekmati claims he has been subjected to prolonged periods of solitary confinement and miserable prison conditions.
- A couple put a new spin on the phrase “taking the plunge.” A Montana woman faced charges of second-degree murder in court on Monday. She pushed her husband off a cliff in July.
- President Obama addressed the nation on Tuesday, stating that the White House will delay a vote in Congress that would allow the United States to use military force against Syria in response to the discovery that chemical weapons have been used against Syrian citizens. Obama states that the government would pursue diplomacy while keeping a military response as an option.
- The four men in India accused of raping a 23-year-old woman were convicted of all charges on Tuesday. The woman died two weeks after the incident. It remains to be seen whether or not any of the men will receive the death penalty. Family members of the victim have called for the death penalty.
- North Korea and South Korea are set to open the jointly held Kaesong industrial zone next week. The two governments agreed to reopen the industrial park, which serves as a symbol of cooperation between the North and South five months after it had been shut down due to tension between the two countries.
- A new Vincent van Gogh painting has been discovered and will be presented at the Van Gogh Museum in Amsterdam. The painting, titled “Sunset at Montmaur,” has been confirmed after extensive research.
The first issue of The Montclarion, then named The Pelican, was published on Nov. 28, 1928.

in the classroom, on campus, in the residence halls and in the work place,” as stated in the letter from Pennington. As another cohort, freshmen will no longer be able to pledge a fraternity or sorority during their first semester, allowing them more time to transition into the college atmosphere. They will still be allowed to attend recruitment events during their first semester, but will not be able to accept a bid or pledge a fraternity or sorority until their second semester here at Montclair.

Michael Yin, president of national fraternity Theta Xi, believes that this movement on Greek life has its advantages and disadvantages, but one change that he believes hurls the Greek community is the ban on tailgating. The forbiddance of tailgating, Greek organizations having their letters displayed on the table is one example on campus is now in place because the Greek community usually felt unwelcome in these places and felt as though Greek organizations took over these areas, especially those on the Residential Campus.

Kim Safara, a junior with a lot to do in many Greeks that they keep their traditions and I don’t think it’s fair that they should be changed.

“Since I’ve become part of Greek Life at MSU, table was the Student Center were one of the largest ways to introduce, interact and create a bond with brothers and sisters in and outside our organization,” said Yin.

Oliveira explained the secretary of Sigma Delta Tau, her views. “As a member and executive board, I really want to see first hand the changes and reasons for them, and although many people are upset about various aspects of the changes, I believe that overall it is going to benefit all Greek Life.”

As stated in Pennington’s letter, fraternities and sororities will have the chance to sign up for a table in the Student Center during the last week of recruitment, each semester to show their interest in hosting events and giving information about their organization. Yin stated that although it is hard to see Greek Life change as drastically, he is “confident that we will solidify as a community and move Montclair State a better place.”

Students were ultimate- ly gesture that the act was over a prank to begin with. “This so-called prank isn’t a prank at all. It’s the kind of middle-school excuse you use when you get caught throwing someone’s shoes on the roof,” said Alden Bell, a senior English major.

Burrett assures this is an isolated incident and that police are ever vigilant when it comes to the safety of anyone on campus, especially near the residential facilities.

He offers a piece of ad- vice for those who think that these types of pranks are fun and excite them, “we strongly urge anyone who thinks that jeopardizing the victims discernment in the matter: disregarding the victim directly to turn in the prank and report the incident immediately.”

To contact the police on campus, call 973-655-5222 in case of an emergency. Look for the red phone boxes with the blue light above them that are scattered around campus that phone goes straight to the police department for your convenience.

Girls Who Love Football?

Samantha Shane
CONTRIBUTING WRITER

It’s that time again—football season! Although football is typically perceived as a male sport, there are many women who also love football season. According to IBISWorld, 41 percent of women make up the National Football League audience.

But while some women are happy football is finally here after waiting months for its return, others simply drool over the sport. Women have either learned to inherit their team loyalty from their families or are significant others. Some women just pretend to like the sport for their man and hope that they never notice.

Whatever you feel about the sport, the season is here. A few lovely ladies around campus shared how they love football was here. Nicole Couto, a sophomore, grew up loving football from her family. Her influence stemmed from her brothers.

“I truly believe that my passion for football—and sports in general—can be attributed to my two older brothers. I grew up always following them around, wishing to be like them. I learned so much about the sport and loved it, even at a young age. It is amazing how influential family can truly be.”

Other lovely ladies from their lives of football because of their boyfriends, including Kaelyn Gushlow, a sophomore.

“If it wasn’t for my boyfriend, then I wouldn’t watch it for any reason other than the Super Bowl, as well as knowing what is going on in the games,” said Lenahan.

Football is most definitely a bonding experience for Lena and her boyfriend and for other ladies like her. Other sit next to their man every time their favorite team is playing and it always seems like the longest four hours of their life. Those girls who pretend to like football for their boyfriend have a long road of football games ahead of them.

“I pretend to like football for my boyfriend only because I love seeing him so happy,” said Lenahan.

Come September, most people are welcoming fall with open arms as the crisp breeze signals the beginning of everyone’s favorite season: football season. Of course, with all good football games comes good food, and lots of it. However, the food that tastes good doesn’t mean it’s all good for you.

Avoid Tailgate Traps:

Where I come from, football fans are just as serious about their tailgating as they are about the game. In fact, the 2013 Weber Grill Watch survey revealed that at least 57 percent of Americans have attended a tailgate party in the past 12 months without even going into the game. Unfortunately, tailgate food is usually pretty standard: burgers, dogs, chili, chips and dips. As you can imagine, healthy alternatives are not easily accepted. So how do you find that happy medium that satisfies both the traditional flavor of tailgate food and the health content of a guilt-free meal?

Burgers and dogs: Try lean meats and vegetarian options like turkey, veggie or spicy black bean burgers and turkey hot dogs.

Chili: Make meatless chili or try the new “white chili” trend, which uses chunks of white meat chicken instead of ground beef.

Dips: Choose guacamole and salsa more often than cheesy and fatty dairy-based dips. For creamy and seven-layer dip fans, replace sour cream with fat-free Greek yogurt for less fat and more protein. The taste is identical.

Safety: Do not leave cooked or cold foods out of the refrigerator for more than two hours and always remember the thermometer! Burgers and dogs should be cooked to at least 160°F (71°C).

Finger Food Frenzy:

For those of us who prefer football parties and the warmth of watching a game in front of the TV, we know that the savory dishes and finger foods are half of the fun.

Chicken wings: There is no reason to nix them altogether. Just bake them instead of frying them in oil.

Try a turkey taco bar. It’s a fun, grill-free way to host a game day party with the limited resources of a college dorm or apartment.

Kebabs: These are my favorite go-to for just about anything that requires fun finger foods. There are so many different ways to make these healthy snacks on a stick, all while impressing your guests. The old saying is true: we eat with our eyes first.

1. Load lots of vegetables onto your sticks with a few chunks of chicken or shrimp and pop them on the grill. If you are adventurous, experiment with different spices and herbs.
2. A great miniature kabob can include mini mozzarella balls, grape tomatoes and fresh basil leaves. Not your typical game day food, but delicious and satisfying nonetheless.
3. Try fruit kabobs as a fun way to incorporate fruit into an afternoon of snacking.

General tips and tricks for game day:

- Before you head out, be sure to have a pre-game/tailgate snack. A healthy mix of protein and fiber will prevent you from overeating at the main event, likely saving you hundreds of calories for the day.
- Change up the old chips-and-dip routine with vegetables and hummus. Vegetables such as bell peppers, carrots and celery provide that crunch you crave and will fill you up with less fat, calories and sodium and more vitamins, minerals and fiber.
- Remember your lower-fat snacks like pretzels, baked chips and low-fat popcorn. Better yet, make your own pita chips and impress your company with a snack they’ve never had before! This one is all your own. All you need is some whole-wheat pita bread that can be found in any grocery store, a little bit of olive oil and any herbs and spices that you like.
- Prepare a plate instead of mindlessly munching from bowls of snacks or buffet items. With your mind on the game or the company of others, eating becomes automatic instead of intentional.

AMERICAN DEMOCRACY PROJECT

The law establishing the holiday was created in 2004 with the passage of an amendment by the late Senator Robert Byrd to the Omnibus spending bill of 2004. Before this law was enacted, the holiday was known as “Citizenship Day.” In addition to renaming the holiday “Constitution Day and Citizenship Day,” the act mandates that all publicly funded educational institutions provide educational programming on the history of the American Constitution on that day. In May 2005, the United States Department of Education announced the enactment of this law and that it would apply to any school receiving federal funds of any kind.

The co-sponsors of Constitution Day 2013 are the Office of the Provost, Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs Willard Gingerich, and the American Democracy Project (ADP) which is a multi-campus initiative focused on higher education’s role in preparing the next generation of informed, engaged citizens for our democracy. HE SAID

Once again, the National Football League and NCAA Division I FBS have overtaken everything else I am interested in, especially when it comes to sports media coverage. George Carlin had a memorable act where he compared the press to baseball, citing football as an overvalued, barbaric spectacle. It kind of is. After all, NFL games are played in almost any form of inclement weather. Each player is almost superhuman from their strength and there’s an injury in every game.

Lately, there have been reports about women showing a growing appreciation for the gridiron. The NFL, which is a billion-dollar organization, began a more aggressive marketing campaign for the practically non-existent feminine side of football. One would think women would stay away from a sport that would involve them at all. That’s never been the case as long as I have been watching. Those two reasons could be why there’s a perceived stereotype of women who watch football unfavorably.

I seriously think the difference lies between male and female footboll fans is indistinguishable. Women probably enjoy watching football because of the aforementioned velocities of the sport. Maybe it could also be the large variety of ripped, strong men on the team. Maybe some think the often loose-built quarterback is a cutie. Maybe they just like to see guys beat the snot out of each other. In reality, I’m pretty sure the loyalty of women to have football is comparable to any male-oriented sport they’ve a fan or two of. In fact, I think NFL fans of both genders are more intimidat- ing than even the most uncoordinated fan.

Besides all of the NFL merchandising, I think a contribut- ing factor to the rise of female fanaticism in football is fantasy leagues. There are some women who vaguously understand the sport and join a fantasy league more from the recommen- dation of a friend or fellow fan. Maybe some think the often loose-built quarterback is a cutie. Maybe they just like to see guys beat the snot out of each other. In reality, I’m pretty sure the loyalty of women to have football is comparable to any male-oriented sport they’ve a fan or two of. Every college student knows that education is ex- ceased in today’s society. In fact, we’re all striving for the same thing: success. As a lifelong sports fan, it is really annoying to see the rise of female sports fans. Now before all the female readers develop a major ax to grind and start going on about women partaking in and loving sports, I am completely opposed to the notion that women are “sports fans” that put on a jersey like they put on makeup and act like a horse of Justin Bieber fans just to prove to their boyfriends that they like “Tom Hardy. I mean, Brady.” For his arm and not his chi- mney. Out of all of my female friends, only one is a legit- mate “fan.” I can talk to her about almost any sport and she will have her own argument based on her own views. Sadly, I’ve also had plenty of fe- male friends ask, “What does he do?” while we are watching a hockey game. Ladies, I’m not here to offend or upset. I’m here to offer advice. If you’re a parent who believes that is a big sports fan, learn the basics of the sport. It really isn’t that hard. Watch ESPN for a whole minute or so at dinner and just watch “Basics of (Sport Sport Here)” Us men can spot a fake sports fan from a mile away. The only people you’re feeling you would wear your Yanks jer- sey game is yourself. Nobody is going to be jealous of how cut the team is of you are. Everything else on the team the fan hates.

This concept seems so unfa- ir. Just think of that one actor or actress, that one musician or real- ity star who has it all. This concept seems so unfair. Just think of that one actor or actress, that one musician or real- ity star who has it all. Do you ever ever just sit back and wonder, “Why?” It’s perfectly okay if you have be- cause they probably do back the talent behind their million-dollar salary. A huge factor in becoming successful could be networking, and it could make all the differ- ence in landing that dream job. Most people have heard of Stanley Milgram’s “Six Degrees of Separation” theory the idea that everyone in the world is separated from everyone else by six links. More than likely, sometime you meet along the way can help you advance your path to success. If they can’t, then they probably know somebody, who can. A word of advice. Don’t ever take down notes, take down numbers.

Don’t be afraid to tell people, they might be able to help you. It is my duty as a sports fan and human being to support and help people learn to support and help. Football may not be everything else on the world of sports. It is my duty as a sports fan and human being to support and help people learn to support and help. Football may not be

Everyone needs a break from their usual routine and this is a good time to try something new. If you have a day off, you might spend it doing something you like. Buy some new clothes or maybe go see a film. Any little change can turn out to be for the better.

Taurus April 20 - May 20
Life is full of making decisions. We can either choose to find something to enjoy or something to resent. Although sometimes we hate the way we feel about certain decisions we’ve made, remember that more than one choice exists for every decision. You have the power to determine which one is best for you.

Gemini May 21 - June 20
Someone or something will confront you with what appears to be an awkward truth. If such were to happen, it would be wise to keep your cool. Reality bites but it does open up a door to new opportunities.

Cancer June 21 - July 22
Sometimes being good natured and tolerant can be mistaken for being a total pushover. This may be, considering your problems haven’t gotten solved and your circumstances haven’t improved, because you have accepted what you possibly should have rejected.

Leo July 23 - August 22
We often make biased decisions because we live in such a competitive world. For example, we may think that the more expensive item or the person with a privileged background is more superior. Be cautious and really consider the questionable decisions you’ve made.

Virgo August 23 - September 22
Although suits, uniforms and outfits are designed to represent one’s “image,” you will learn that there are certain dress codes that represent the person you’ve become. It is certainly something to keep in mind when questioning who you are as a person.

Libra September 23 - October 22
Doubt often represents a time to wait and find out whether this concern is based on anything solid. Such uncertainty is likely to be more relevant if it occurs to someone who rarely encounters such doubts. As you weigh your options, remember there is nothing wrong with being a little audacious.

Scorpio October 23 - November 21
We elect lawmakers whether we vote them in or out of power. To do so, we rely on our own knowledge and instincts. Sadly, the same thing does not apply to latest fads, as we cannot determine who says what is in and what is out in terms of the latest fashion and technology. Ignore the trends and stick to your best judgment.

Sagittarius November 22 - December 21
We may hate upsetting others, but we surely don’t like the fact that we have to let things slide from time to time. Some of us question whether tolerance is key to maintaining a good character or whether we should be more like those who don’t care and brazenly carry an obnoxious attitude.

Capricorn December 22 - January 19
As your social life booms, your professional and academic one busts. Do not let friends, family or romantic partners come in the way of your own personal matters; even if this means passing up a party, a dinner or a date. Finding the right balance of work and play can be difficult but it is possible.

Aquarius January 20 - February 18
The pace will quicken and your ability to multi-task will become more of a necessity. Although it is a good time for enjoying studies and learning, you may feel a little lazy when it comes to serious topics or tasks that require a lot of brainpower.

Pisces February 19 - March 20
Others might question you since you have been getting noticed for what you have and haven’t done. Stay positive and express your intentions in order to give them the full and accurate picture to show that you are not taking credit for the actions of others.

Opinion

An Assault To Comedy

The art of the practical joke is an art that has never died since the beginning of time. Many of us have participated in our fair share of pranking. Some of us have taken a joke too far once or twice, but attempted robbery is on a completely different level. On Saturday evening, many spectators witnessed a supposed “prank gone wrong,” when two freshmen males grabbed hold of and patted down a fellow student only to then claim that it was a “joke.” It could be said that Montclair State University is starting off on an exceptionally well note. A prank can be defined as something found humorous by others. Some classic examples include putting a whoopee cushion under someone’s chair or suspending a bucket of water over a door. A prank is usually something that was planned and hopefully delivered some sort of comical effect for spectators. These two freshmen males wouldn’t “joking” or “punking” this student. They had attempted to rob him, plain and simple. Thinking that they could get away with claiming it was a joke, someone would have to be dense enough to believe that story. To be fair, the students did turn themselves in and probably avoided a huge lawsuit by the student, but what was their motive in the first place? Clearly comedy isn’t their strong suit if that’s what they were aiming for. Ironically, robbery is another thing these students are terrible at. Honestly, do you think you could get away with assaulting a student in front of the Recreation Center? Also, both students were identifiable and could have been reported right on the spot. Thinking this “robbery” was going to go over well is like thinking the parking situation will improve on campus. It was a moment of false hope.

However, this is one of the most comical stories we’ve ever heard of. It’s impossible to grasp the sheer thoughtlessness of these two young men and their motives. I do give credit where credit is due. If it was through fear or a realization of what they’ve done wrong, the robbers did turn themselves in and will probably not receive too harsh a punishment.

With this one situation, should our opinion of the freshmen class change? Should our hope for these new college students lessen? We were taught that we shouldn’t let the foolishness of one identify and justify the thoughts of many. Although many of you will be scowling and muttering about these irresponsible freshmen, it is important to remember that these are only two freshmen, the ones who shouldn’t have the honor of representing the entire freshman class. We can still hope for better things from these college students, that they will make good future students at MSU and will be the future voices of our class. We as upper classmen pass down our legacy to these people. Of course, passing any sort of responsibility to those two jokesters is out of the question, but we can’t hold this one incident over the entire freshman class. There shouldn’t be any bias over one incident on campus. Although a ridiculous story, there can always be some comedy found in stupidity. We also hope that the victim of the assault is alright. Who knows?

Maybe we can all find this situation comical.

Question of the Week

What do you think about videos of pranks posted on the Internet?

Nicole Chaves
Psychology Junior

“As long as it’s not malicious, I think it’s okay if it’s good fun for everyone. If it’s fearful to someone, then I think it’s not cool.”

Megan Catananzaro
Sociology/Communications Senior

“I think they’re funny, but I feel like everyone should be in on it after they post it, so it’s not a shock because it can be super embarrassing and not fair to that person. But, if we, everyone, are in on it, and it’s all fun and games, I think that’s okay.”

Luke Brzunik
Justice Studies Sophomore

“I honestly think Internet pranks are hilarious, and every time I see one, it’s something different. I also think it’s funny when people try to re-make them and try to make them more original than the first one. They’ve always a good time to watch and it’s always a good laugh, especially on Vines.”

Dana Samko
Student Affairs Graduate Student

“I think pranks that are posted on the Internet can hurt others, but they can also be very aggressive and demeaning, so I think it depends on the prank and the people involved. If somebody has a really open personality and they get pranked, I think it’s a lot better than if you’re pranking somebody who’s more closed-off.”

Nick Weber
Business Senior

“I think Internet pranks can be awesome. I like to joke all the time, my self. I think if you can pull it off and make it believable, more power to you.”

Nesma Yousef
Biology Freshman

“Yes, it’s funny, but it has an advantage and disadvantage. It isn’t a joke when we use it in the correct way, so it’s gonna help us, but if we use it in a bad way, it goes against us. I really think Internet pranks have an advantage and disadvantage.”

Should the United States stick its nose into the Syrian War?

The Montclarion • September 12, 2013 • PAGE 17

S o m e h o w , i n s o m e w a y , t h e U n i t e d S t a t e s is n o w f u l l y e m b r o i l e d in the Syrian civil war. Bashar al-Assad, the collusive dictator of Syria who inherited the presidency from his father in 2000, operates the country in the equivalent of a mafia don operating his assembly of criminals. Assad leads the Baath Party, a socialist movement, which penetrates almost every facet of public existence in Syria and flaunts its anti-capitalist facet of public existence— which penetrates almost every facet of Syrian civil war. Many allies of Russia, including Japan and, of course, Russia. Assad, who has not purchased a 3DS would probably be interested in getting a 3DS in its place. One good thing about the 2DS is that it has all the same functions as the 3DS, with the exception of a 3D screen. It is still possible to surf the internet as well as there are 2DS games. The 2DS is also going to be less expensive than the 3DS, so for those who do not have a 3DS and don’t care to spend the money on one, the 2DS should fill that void. Considering Phobos X and Y will be released soon along with the new Super Smash Bros, game sometime in 2014, this system will be a good opportunity for people to play games other than those while saving less money on a 3DS system. Also, think about the target-ed audience. The promotional trailer for the 2DS shows a child playing Mario Kart 7 on its new 2DS. The design was originally created for children, so the 3DS feature was removed for younger children due to its health risks, including vision problems and nausea. Although you can have the option to turn off the 3DS on a regular 3DS, it is in its own system with the 3DS removed so that parents won’t have to worry about this potentiality damage their eyes. The design is more like a tablet, but a lot bulkier than any iPad. The bigger and thicker 2DS is ideal for children because it stands a better chance against damages than a regular 3DS. Also, considering the re-lease date for the 2DS is the same as the 3DS, it poses Y and F games, there is no doubt that Nintendo had wanted to target this product towards children.

I personally enjoy the design especially for the younger generation. It almost gives me a sense of nostalgia because it reminds me of the original Game Boy, with the exception of the two screens.

Let’s face it: those things were like Nokia phones, practically unattainable. There is even a original Game Boy that survived the Gulf War displayed on display at Never World in New York. I think that the 2DS is about to start a whole new paradigm for the 3DS but an upgrade from the once great Game Boy.

THE PAINS OF BEING PURE AT HEART

When indie pop meets rock, you get Vampire Weekend, a band that has been building a cult following with their unique sound. Their latest album, Modern Vampires of the City, has been under heavy scrutiny and is already making waves in the music industry.

MODERN VAMPIRES OF THE CITY

Vampire Weekend's latest album is a fusion of indie pop and rock, with a strong influence from African and Caribbean music. The result is a fresh and innovative sound that is sure to please fans of the band.

LYRICS

“Careless Creatures”

The opening track, “Careless Creatures,” sets the tone for the album, with its upbeat and catchy rhythm. The lyrics are a blend of surreal imagery and emotional storytelling, typical of the band's style.

MUSIC

The album features a variety of instrumentals, including electric guitars, drums, and horns. The songwriting is outstanding, with each track having its own unique sound.

RECOMMENDATION

If you're a fan of indie pop and rock, or just looking for something new and different, Modern Vampires of the City is a must-listen.

NEKO CASE

Neko Case, known for her distinct vocals and songwriting, has released a new album that is sure to please fans of her previous work. Sizing Up Your Heartbreak is a collection of thoughtful and introspective songs that have been described as “genius.”

SONGS TO LISTEN FOR

1. “Let Me Go”
2. “The Last of the Great Pretenders”
3. “Don’t Want You Here”

RECOMMENDATION

If you're looking for music that is both beautiful and thought-provoking, Neko Case's Sizing Up Your Heartbreak is a must-listen.

PASSIONER

Passenger is the perfect Sullivan singer-songwriter who can make you smile in hours. With tracks like “Let Her Go” and “Marry Me Today,” you will fall deeply in love with this British soulful singer. His career is young, but he is definitely one to watch.

SONGS TO LISTEN FOR

1. “Let Her Go”
2. “Marry Me Today”

“SUPERCUT OF WALTER WHITE YELLING AT JESSE PINKMAN”

We all know that on Breaking Bad, Walter White yells at Jesse Pinkman a bit. But it really takes the watching of this video to be overwhelmed by the comedic effect it truly has on the show. The title pretty much sums it up, but the viewer is startled (in a good way) at how much of Walter and Jesse’s relationship is captured in the not-so-moments when they argue with each other. A little sentimental now that the end is so near, this video takes Breaking Bad fans back a bit into the nostalgia-filled early days of what is now a certified AMC hit.

“CAT TEST CRASH”

In 54 seconds of nail-biting suspense, the viewers of “Cat Test Crash” are thrown into the harrowing effects of cute kittens and the climax of an action-thriller. A world where one gets genuinely confused about whether to feel scared or fuzzy, “Cat Test Crash” is worth the time. There is no dialogue, only cuts to Russian title screens. I don’t think any animals were genuinely scared, but it’s a good start.

“AIDAN DWEYER: BETTER SOLAR DESIGNS”

If you don’t feel unaccomplished for your age already, then I invite you to look up Aidan Dwyer on YouTube. The 13-year-old has designed a more efficient model for solar panels by studying the natural formation most effective at absorbing sunlight, Dwyer is now giving lectures to grown adults. His ideas for the future of solar energy are pretty impressive and will definitely give you a little more faith in the pre-teens of our day. Swallow a little pride and watch this teenager teach you about science.
The Drama of the Emmy Awards
Handicapping the Drama Category Favorites For This Year’s Emmys

Kenneth Marr
Staff Writer

Best Drama Series

The nominees:

- Breaking Bad (AMC)
- Downton Abbey (PBS)
- Game of Thrones (HBO)
- Homeland (Showtime)
- House of Cards (Netflix)
- Mad Men (AMC)

The fact that Breaking Bad has never won an Emmy for Best Drama Series thus far over its four-season span makes it a clear frontunner for the win. The only thing I could foresee preventing a Breaking Bad win is if voters decide to wait until next year after the second part of its final season finishes airing. Homeland won this award last year.

Mad Men is a four-time winner in this category, but both shows had subpar seasons, therefore I can’t see a repeat with either. One freshman show to watch in this category is House of Cards, which airs on Netflix. The fact that this show is as good as it is without airing on television, coupled with the fact that it’s based on a tense political context, may intrigue voters.

The Favorites:
- Breaking Bad
- House of Cards

Best Supporting Actor in a Drama Series

The nominees:

- Mandy Patinkin, Breaking Bad
- Peter Dinklage, Boardwalk Empire
- Jim Carter, Downton Abbey
- Aaron Paul, Breaking Bad
- Bobby Cannavale, Boardwalk Empire
- Christina Hendricks, Mad Men

This category is a tough one to predict, as there are three strong nominees who could each take home the Emmy. There is no doubt in my mind that Peter Dinklage will come up short and Bobby Cannavale should be lucky he is representing a severely slumping Boardwalk Empire this year. Jim Carter is nominated again for Downton Abbey. Don’t ask me why. It is a show dominated by strong, female-driven characters, so Carter’s nomination came as a surprise. The favorites (and deserving) are last year’s winner Aaron Paul and newcomer Jonathan Banks. In my view, they equally deserve the award, with no slight personal advantage going to Banks. Although these two may split votes since they both represent Breaking Bad. The other contender is Mandy Patinkin, who was shockingly left out of the Homeland-dominated Emmys last year, and even though the show wasn’t as strong this time around, some Emmy voters may want to make up for last year’s underserved omission.

The Favorites:
- Aaron Paul, Breaking Bad
- Mandy Patinkin, Homeland

Best Supporting Actress in a Drama Series

The nominees:

- Anna Gunn, Breaking Bad
- Maggie Smith, Downton Abbey
- Emilia Clarke, Game of Thrones
- Christina Buzanaki, The Good Wife
- Christine Baranski, Downton Abbey
- Christina Hendricks, Mad Men

There are two first-time nominees in this category, Vera Farmiga and Boardwalk Empire. The fact that the show airs on A&E and went under the radar in every other category hurts her chances. Last year’s winner, Claire Danes, is still the slight favorite, but like Damian Lewis, I feel she will lose some votes due to Homeland’s slight decline since season one. Kerry Washington is the one to watch, because even through Scandal didn’t light up the critics’ radar on ABC, her performance carried the show the entire season.

The Favorites:
- Kerry Washington, Scandal
- Claire Danes, Homeland

The previous winner, Damian Lewis, will have a tough time repeating due to his show’s lackluster year. I see this as a two-horse race between Bryan Cranston and Kevin Spacey.

The nominees:

- Bryan Cranston, Breaking Bad
- Kevin Spacey, House of Cards
- Jon Hamm, Mad Men
- Jeff Daniels, The Newsroom

Cranston is the safe bet, being a three-time winner in this category already and also due to the fact that Breaking Bad is the most critically acclaimed show on the air right now. How- ever, Oscar-winner Kevin Spacey in a showy role as a corrupt politician could provide Cranston with some stiff competition.

The Favorites:
- Bryan Cranston, Breaking Bad
- Kevin Spacey, House of Cards

The Nominees:

- Vera Farmiga, Bates Motel
- Michelle Dockery, Downton Abbey
- Claire Danes, Homeland
- Robin Wright, House of Cards
- Elisabeth Moss, Mad Men
- Connie Britton, Nashville
- Kerry Washington, Scandal
- Christina Hendricks, Mad Men

Christina Buzanaki and Morena Baccarin have no shot at winning whatsoever. I say if they by some miracle do win, they should simply do so away with the Emmys altogether. Christina Hendricks was much stronger on Mad Men last year and didn’t win when she was favored, so this year, she is a long shot, unless of course they want to make it up to her as they may with Mandy Patinkin. It’s nice to finally see Emily Clarke in this category for her portrayal as Daenerys Targaryen on Game of Thrones, but she won’t be stepping up to the microphone. The favorites are clearly Anna Gunn and Maggie Smith. Smith won last year, but if Anna Gunn shows the Emmy voters the Breaking Bad episode ‘Fifty-One,’ which sees Gunn in one of the strongest female roles all year in any medium, she is sure to hear her name called.

The Favorites:
- Anna Gunn, Breaking Bad
- Maggie Smith, Downton Abbey

The Primetime Emmys will be live Sept. 22 at 8 p.m. on CBS.

Nobody dreams of having multiple sclerosis.

Some dreams are unfulfilled, like the team that got the World Series with a deficit hero in the bottom of the ninth inning. Losing that game is something that you have few, if any, regrets about.

Multiple sclerosis is a devastating disease of the central nervous system where the body’s immune system attacks the myelin sheath, leaving the nerve fibers in the path of the disease, changing their form forever.

Seven minutes and 55 seconds—that’s all it took for Aaron Sorkin to completely hook an audience and engulf us with his impeccable writing and cinematography on the HBO masterpiece, The Newsroom. The show is led by an all-star cast who are each individually brilliant for their roles.

The cast consists of Emily Mortimer, Dev Patel, Sam Waterston, Olivia Munn, Alixson Pill, John Gallagher Jr., Thomas Sadoski and Jeff Daniels. This remarkable show is set inside the New York news studio of Atlantis Cable News, a fictional network focusing on breaking world news. Season two is well underway and is jam-packed with suspense. Missing one episode this season is as big a “no” as it was during Lost’s final season. Every episode has a new problem and a new scandal.

The main point this season up for discussion is how the team at ACN is facing a high profile lawsuit due to two factions that took place during this season. The majority of this season so far has been seen through flashbacks and cuts to the present during meetings with ACN’s lawyers.

Sarin gas is the topic of one controversy this season, which is the result of one of the network’s producers, Jerry Dantana. Dantana lied about an interview he conducted with a U.S. soldier and manipulated his words into admitting the U.S. used sarin gas when the soldier said the complete opposite in reality. Not only is Dantana's job on the line, but also the integrity of the show is up in the air and the nation’s trust in “News Night with Will McAvoy” is gone.

The other controversy this season was the casualty during the trip to Africa. During a trip to Africa, Maggie Jordan and Gary Cooper were documenting a small village when a group of radicals bombarded the village and shot an innocent child. The episode featured a distraught and mentally unstable Jordan explaining her side of the story to the lawyers while going in and out of flashbacks through the horrific shooting sequence. The show not only features political drama but also world news and a dark twisted sense of humor, much like all of Sorkin’s projects. Sorkin also created The West Wing, along with writing the screenplays for the films The Social Network and Moneyball. It seems everything Sorkin touches turns to gold, or should I say “Oscar” or “Emmy.” Sorkin is one of the most brilliant writers in the business and the fact that he writes the scripts for The Newsroom is the reason they are the impeccable works they are.

Overall, this season of The Newsroom has been interesting. It’s incredible to see the characters go on such an emotional journey, and to see the toll it takes on them is incredible. To me, The Newsroom is, hands down, one of the strongest shows on television. It not only has phenomenal actors who can portray an emotion the scene requires with ease, but the writing is just plain brilliant. The cinematography is beautiful and, overall, the show just flows very, very well. The Newsroom just got renewed for a third season, and I am sure this will not be its last renewal.
Could the most glorified franchise in all of baseball potentially taking a back seat to their city rival in the up- coming future?

As for the New York Mets, David Wright seems to be the only true offensive player for some time now. Some people can argue that second base- man Daniel Murphy, who ranks just short of being in the top ten in National League hits, has also solidified a long- term spot on this team. The Mets are also banking on their highly-touted catcher Travis d’Arnaud to prove that acquiring him for last year’s Cy Young award winner R.A. Dickey will pay off big divi- dends for them in the long run. Aside from these three players, their lineup will need some serious runproductions this offseason.

“We’ve got some money to spend,” said general manager Sandy Alderson in Mike Fran- cossa on WFAN. “I wasn’t plan- ning on spending a lot of it on starting pitcher because of the depth that we currently have as the major league level and in the minor league sys- tem.”

Alderson has already gone on record that the team would bring in key free agents. It remains to be seen whether the Wilpons will end up putting their money where their mouth is.

As most of us know, they don’t need to add as much as two as well as the corner outfield positions. Consider- ing Johan Santana and that regrettable signing of Jason Bay are finally off the books, maybe they could sign guys like Stephen Drew and out- fields Hunter Pence and Nelson Cruz to help bolster that lineup.

It’s also important to men- tion that the new face of New York pitching phenom Matt Harvey, gave this team the type of news that they haven’t already, is giving Mets fans some serious nightmares.

He has partially torn his ul- nar collateral ligament (UCL) in his throwing arm and it remains to be seen whether or not Harvey will have to go under the scope and opt for Tommy John surgery. This could mean the Mets’ lack of competitiveness might result in another season to flush in Flushing. To end on a brighter note, pitching studs Rafael Monteros and the 6’6 hard-throwing Noah Synder- gauzd have both turned up the minors and could both play a major role in this team’s rot- ation.

Don’t forget Zack Wheeler, who’s continued to show strong- growth after each outing since his call up in the majors in mid- June.

As for the New York Yan- kees, there’s no question that this team has been the trade- mark of baseball for almost 20 seasons. However, the 2013 season has riddled the Yan- kees with injuries upon injur- ies. Derek Jeter has made his presence felt since his return on August 11th, how gingerly he’s been watched while running the bases and has constantly looked himself on the disabled list.

The aforementioned injuries paired with the hoop- la on Alex Rodriguez, manager Joe Girardi has somehow been able to hold down the fort and prevent this team from not only plummeting out of compe- tition but also has kept them alive in the standings to fight for that last wild card spot.

The first thing the organi- zation needs to do is ensure that Robinson Cano gets his long-term contract—since Chris Stewart just signed with the Dodgers could be a real possi- bility.

Secondly, general man- ager Brian Cashman needs to address the catching posi- tion since Chris Stewart just doesn’t cut it. Look for the team to strongly consider sign- ing Brian McCann, considering that the Atlanta Braves may look towards saving money by going with the Yankees’ third- best prospect, who happens to be a catcher expecting to be called up to the big leagues sometime next season.

If the Yankees do sign Mc- Cann, expect that to be the team’s only big splash this offseason. Even since George Steinbrenner has passed away, his sons Hal and Hank have endorsed that the Yankees or- ganization are making it a pri- ority to lower down their pay- roll each and every year.

That’s not to say manage- ment doesn’t care about win- ning because they did bring back Alfonso Soriano, who’s helped this team a great deal. However, they are no lon- ger bidding on the high-priced free agents they’ve enticed up previously. Unlike the Mets, the Yankees have a sub- par farm system at best.

Also, with the likes of Hi- roki Kuroda and Andy Pettitte departing, the Yankees pitch- ing staff leaves much to be de- sired, especially with the sud- den decline of CC Sabathia. Having said all that, it’s time for you to decide whether the power of wearing the pin- stripes will still triumph over a Mets team that claims to be ready to spend big bucks while also potentially having the makings of a lethal pitching rotation.

Red Hawks Continue Hot Streak

Montclair State has started this field hockey season where they left off last season—by winning. MSU won two more games last week to bring their win total and streak to 4-0.

What made the first Red Hawks’ victory of the week even sweeter was that Montclair College was Montclair State’s only regular-season loss last year. Senior defender and captain Sierra Rauchbach explained their game plan for their only loss last season.

“There was no change in game plan going into the Montclair game,” said Rauchbach. “We just had so much energy and desire to go out there and show them what Montclair State field hockey is all about, and I think we did exactly that.”

On Sept. 4, MSU welcomed the Mules of Muhlenberg College to Sprague Field. The Red Hawks took command early and won decisively by a final score of 6-1.

Less than five minutes into the game, Montclair State received a goal from senior midfielder Jennifer Tafro, who netted her career day, tying the MSU single game record with four goals in the span of two games. Her performance included a four-goal effort against Alvernia University.

This week, freshman midfielder/forward Gianna Moglino was named the NJAC Rookie of the Week after scoring five goals in the span of two games. Her performance include a four-goal effort against Alvernia University. Moglino is tied for first in the NJAC with five goals.

The Red Hawks were recently named the top team in the NFHCA Division III Coaches’ Poll. Montclair State has started this field hockey season where they left off last season—by winning. MSU won two more games last week to bring their win total and streak to 4-0.

Montclair State hosted the Montclair State field hockey team as they took on the Alvernia University Cougars in Dallas, Penn. on Sept. 14, at 5 p.m., MSU takes on the Misericordia University Cougars in Dallas, Penn.

On Sept. 11, Montclair State played against the Hawks of New Paltz University. On Sept. 14, at 5 p.m., MSU takes on the Montclair State field hockey team as they took on the Alvernia University Cougars in Dallas, Penn.

On Sept. 7, Montclair State took on the Alvernia University Crusaders in an afternoon game and won handily by a final score of 5-1. The Red Hawks got one more goal from Johnston in the 44th minute of the contest to make the final score 6-1.

Coach Beth Gottung discussed if there was a revenge factor going into the game. “We have 22 girls on the team and each one of them could be considered a threat.”

MSU does have some motivation on their side, as they made it to last year’s NCAA Division III Championship Game before falling just short and finishing as National-Runner-up. Nobody knows that motivation better than Coach Gottung, who is in her 12th season.

“The final definitely helps us to stay focused on our goals,” said Gottung. “It was also a great learning experience and realizing what it takes to win big games late in the season. The preparation for that starts now. We are getting better every day in practice and incorporating the lessons we’ve learned from the prior week.”
