SCM chooses theme for upcoming academic year

Michael Klein
Staff Writer

The School of Communication and Media has de- cided this year to create an academic and inspirational theme for its students.

The theme will be an overarching topic for the students’ projects and a way for SCM majors to come to- gether so that not only potential- ly do better in school, but also bring up conversations about a topic that has real political and social weight: inequality.

“We decided on the theme of inequality after a faculty vote,” explained Prof. Steve Johnson. “Some classes will be working with the New Jersey Food bank. Other prof- essors and students visited them last week to discuss ways we can work together. Other classes might just do a story about a specific aspect of inequality.”

This theme will create a driving force behind a num- ber of programs and projects that will be produced by the school. “I think inequality is a topic that has a lot of po- tential because there are

TV in the classroom was on and my friends were being picked on by ‘school.’”

By simply asking the question, each and every one of us is able to easily scripted we have been rethinking for at least 13 years – one that we will continue to share. This year school fourth because it is able to recall the day despite the exclusion of a few major details, we have become a part of history, left our mark on the past and promised hope to all those following in our footsteps.

“Tonight, I ask for your prayers for all those who grieve, for the children whose worlds have been shattered, for all those whose sense of safety and security has been threatened,” said President George W. Bush.

Even in our most vulner- able state, Bush called for new hope for the future – a future that would not have been possible with- out the perseverance of a nearly defeated country.

On this day, over a decade later, we still do the same.

Looking high into the sky where the beloved Twin Towers once stood, another world trade has been built high into the New York City skyline.

Standing tall for the en- tire world to see, the Freed- dom Tower has become the new hope for the future – prosperity, even in the face of adversity.

With today being the 13th anniversary of the im- famous day, Montclair State is taking its own steps to re- member the those who lost their lives.

At the times at which the planes crashed into the World Trade Center on the morning of 9/11, the College Hall carillon played “Amer- ica the Beautiful” as well as “Good Bless America.”

In addition to this su- dden commemoration, the Department of Campus Recreation led students on a Remembrance Hike. End- ing at the 911 memorial site overlooking New York City, it served to recall the value of such a tragic day.

Finally, the Sixth Annual National Day of Service and Remembrance on Saturday, Sept. 13 will be a collabo- ration of students, faculty, and staff in honor- ing the heroes of 9/11.

Though Sept. 11 will be a day that lives forever in our hearts, we hope we carry for the future the same attributes of our country that will always come out on top.

New network considered as link between students and university

At the beginning of last semester, the shuttle services on campus saw a major upgrade in their appearance as well as efficiency for students. Though seemingly impossibly small, these small buses of for more options to students as the semester passes by, as this fall is no exception to the tradition.

With NJ Transit trains on the Montclair-Boulevard stop, the weekend, residetnt students often find themselves without the bus service, an adventure for the weekend ahead.

In the past few weeks, Transportation Services has designed as well as implemented a test run of a new shuttle course designed to counteract this exact problem. A new shuttle route to the Bay Street station in downtown Montclair, the terminus of the Montclair-Boulevard line on weekdays.

“Running a shuttle to Bay Street was the best solution we could formulate,” explained William Fitzpatrick, Executive Director of Facili- ties/Logistic Support.

Dakin taking students to and from this station, the shuttle allows students to either head into the city for the day or find another means of reaching home before Mon- day morning. Though “ridership was light,” the first time the shut- tle ran as intended by Ben Omuya, Director of Parking Services, “expect [the new service] to be successful” based on previous successes of the department.

Their most recent off-cam- pus success was the Saturday Shuttle Shopper to Clifton Commons. Since its intro- duction three years ago, the Shopper Shuttle has been at high demand.

“Once people know [about the service], we expect we will have very robust rider- ship,” claimed Fitzpatrick.

For a complete list of shut- tle routes for the Bay Street station, visit montclair.edu/ facilities/logistic-support/ shuttle-services.

is such a hot-button issue. If during the conversations we find that they can’t fit in, we would welcome a conversa-

“When looking at it through the lens of the campus, visitors can always count on a spot to be open in the decks then. “We didn’t want visitors to have an empty corner,” said Ben Omuya, Director of Parking Services. “We wanted [the decks] to be open.”

Though the new regula- tion has invited more people on behalf of residential stu- dents, there is a condition in their favor.

School’s Back, Sweaters are Coming

With summer break being over, it’s time to get ready for the fall fashion transition. It can be tricky to figure out how to wear your summer pieces as the sunny weather is coming to an end. I hope this article can help you transition your summer pieces into autumn.

Skater Skirt

Skirts are easy to transition into fall weather clothing. Skater skirts are perfect for school. They are comfortable and quick to throw on. Usually, skater skirts are worn with crop tops for the warmer summer weather. They look best with cropped pieces since skater skirts are often high-waist. For fall, swap the crop top for a cropped sweater. To finish off the look, go for Converse shoes. For jewelry, simply add a pair of Converse shoes. For jewelry, simply add a pair of.

Denim Short Overall

Overall shorts were definitely a trend this past summer. Even though they are one piece, they can be made suitable for autumn. Simply swap a light short-sleeve or no-sleeve crop top for a long sleeve one. Then, to stay even warmer, put on a long cardigan. If needed, wear warm leggings or high knee socks to keep your legs warm. For shoes, to keep the "boho" look of the cardigan, try fringe booties. For accessories, add a headband and stud earrings.

Bustier/Crop Tops

You’d think that since summer break is over, bustiers and crop tops are a thing of the past. Think again! By simply layering a long-sleeve chiffon or mesh top over a crop top, they instantly become more fall-appropriate. In the pairing below, the bright floral top shown through the chiffon. Therefore, you don’t have to lose your favorite crop top in the fall months. This top would also work since the sleeves aren’t translucent, as they keep you warm when the weather gets cooler. Pair this with colored jeans, black flats and floral earrings to match the top and you’ll have the perfect back-to-school outfit.

Summer Dress

The beginning of fall is typically the season between summer and sweater dresses. Modifications like jackets, socks, and leggings are the easiest ways to make summer dresses fall appropriate, as previously stated with the summer skirt. However, it’s best to go with a solid color rather than a bright floral and a maxi rather than a short dress if possible. This maxi dress would go perfectly with a jean jacket and Converse shoes. To finish the look, opt for a statement necklace and a flower crown.
Finca Pashapa is a single origin coffee because it all comes from a single farm, which is the namesake Finca Pashapa. The upside? Finca Pashapa is truly magical and fun to say. The downside? Finca Pashapa is seasonal - but whom am I kidding? That’s not a downside at all for the sake of sustainability. What it means for you, the reader, is that you will only be able to enjoy the majesty of Finca Pashapa through my poor words; I managed to cop a bag right before it went out of season. Luckily for you, Finca Pashapa gets better every year, as it is the product of one of Counter Culture’s longest-running partnerships.

Where do I even start with this? I bought a new coffee grinder just so that I could really enjoy single origin coffees this summer. I dropped about $150 on a new Baratza Encore burr grinder, which I gush about regularly on Twitter. Emboldened by this purchase, I wanted to go for broke on the coffee I would make with it, so I hounded to Counter Culture’s website to peruse the summer offerings. Finca Pashapa caught my eye immediately with its unique flavor profile: stone fruit, syrup and cane juice. It seems simple, but also utterly confounding: fruitiness, juiciness and rich, varied sweetness in a coffee? Well, I assure you, it is all there.

My defining experience with Finca Pashapa was a little unorthodox. I like to use a moka pot, which some people call a stovetop espresso maker. Don’t listen to those people. Espresso is a different beast for a myriad of technical and aesthetic reasons that simply can’t be covered here. The first sip of hot Finca Pashapa was smooth and full-bodied, with no hint of bitterness or over-extraction. As I took time to process the cup’s flavors, it occurred to me that Finca Pashapa’s “stone fruit” flavor descriptor was purposefully and beautifully vague. Flavor notes within the lightly syrupy and textured sips ranged from peach to cherry to plum in neat crescendos tempered by the rich sweetness of cane sugar. I was pleased to find a nice undertone of maple syrup lingering beneath the brilliant, juicy fruitiness of the cup’s body. It’s nothing like the tooth-rotting sweetness of a bargain brand. It instead notes of something deeply and distinctly maple without being overpowering.

Despite its pleasant and surprising nuances, Finca Pashapa is a carefully balanced cup of coffee. Nothing about it is erratic, sharp or out of proportion, which is a testament to its painstaking and truly organic growing process. Not every coffee can earn a 12-year partnership with Counter Culture and this alone speaks for Finca Pashapa’s quality in volumes. However, I would say your best bet is to let Finca Pashapa speak for itself.
Eating locally grown and sourced food has been getting a lot of attention lately. There are many reasons to buy food found in your town’s local farmers’ market, including benefits to you, the local farmers and the environment. Although these types of markets are generally associated with summer, now is a great time to shop locally, as most farmers’ markets continue well into the fall. We are lucky to be surrounded by many options to help us shop locally here in the town of Montclair. The Montclair Farmers’ Market is located on Walnut Street at the NJ Transit Train Station, and runs Saturdays from 8 a.m.-2 p.m., continuing until Thanksgiving. Another option is the Bloomfield Farmers Market, which is located on Bloomfield Ave close to 9 State Street (plug that address into your GPS). This runs on Thursdays from 1 p.m.-7 p.m. continuing until Oct. 30. Here are some reasons as to why you may want to check out these farmers’ markets and start to eat locally grown food:

Farmers’ markets will help you to eat seasonally. Eating seasonally means eating fruits and vegetables that are currently in their prime growing season; that means that this produce is very fresh and does not require any preservatives to be added to it. This will also help to keep your diet diverse, giving you a variety of nutrients. Because farmers’ markets are full of fresh-picked items you can be sure that you will find a great variety of options that will change as the year goes on, making each trip to the market unique and exciting. As September continues on, farmers’ markets will likely be full of delicious apples, crisp arugula and beets, all foods that are in season during the fall.

By supporting local farmers, you will be helping to protect the environment. Local farmers often use fewer chemicals than large-scale companies, which can help reduce the impact those crops are having on the environment. Because the food is locally grown, farmers also do not have to transport their food hundreds of miles before it gets to you. This reduction on travel time leads to much less of an impact on the environment as well.

You can get to know your food. One of the best parts of a farmers’ market happens to be the farmers themselves. The people standing behind each booth are very enthusiastic about their produce and eager to talk to interested buyers. They can tell you exactly how their food was grown and where it came from. They are great to learn from, and may have lots of tips on how to best prepare and eat their produce. Farmers’ markets are a fun experience full of music, vendors and more, and they help you to enjoy your produce and feel good about what you are eating.

Eating seasonally and locally can help you save money. Have you ever noticed how fruits and vegetables at the supermarket can be very expensive when they are not on sale? This is because they are probably not currently in season, and more money has to go into the travel cost and preservation of the food. As mentioned earlier, farmers’ markets showcase whatever is currently in season, and the food does not have to travel very far. This helps to lead to very reasonable prices on produce, giving those who do not want to spend a lot of money on unhealthy foods a great opportunity.

Question of the Week

What is one thing you would change about parking?

Nicole Howele
Graduate Student
Organizational Psychology

I have a parking pass to Red Hawk Deck and sometimes the Deck is closed. Therefore, it doesn’t matter that I have a pass. Then I have to go park illegally somewhere else, so I’m always terrified of getting a ticket. That would be the one thing I would change making sure the Deck is always open.

Caleb Podgurski
Senior
Psychology

I would increase the amount of parking spaces available so you don’t have to get up at 7 a.m. in the morning to get to school.

Alexandra Campeho
Sophomore
Biology

I would reevaluate the idea of more buildings and get more parking spaces in because we have students that come from far away places, coming at five in the morning to park. It’s not fair.

Ligeyth Menê
Junior
English

“More parking spaces.”

Johnathan Nevon
Freshman
Business

I would change the number of parking spaces. It took me 20 minutes just to get one parking spot today so I was late to class.

Shanna Hanrath
Senior
Nutrition/Dietetics

It should definitely be cheaper. It’s $300 for a parking pass. There should also be more free parking in general because there’s not any designated visitor lot currently.

Madeline Encarnacion

Nutrition/Dietetics

I would change the little sign that identifies the type of parking it is so that I don’t drive into a wall while trying to park.

Opinion

The Montclarion • September 11, 2014 • PAGE 12

The new school year has brought both new adventures and challenges to life at Montclair State University, especially since both the incoming freshman class and the sophomore class of 2017 are significantly larger than other entering classes in years past. While this influx of students provides opportunities for student-led innovations and campus developments, it also presents the difficulty of adapting our campus life to accommodate more students than ever before.

Residents and commuters alike have experienced issues with long waits at campus hot-spots like dining locations and the bookstore, the speed and reliability of MSU Wi-Fi, and, of course, the ever-present vexation that is transportation and parking at Montclair.

If parking in past years has been bad, then in the 2014-2015 year, it’s nothing short of horrendous. With the transition of Red Hawk Deck from a commuter-student-friendly parking deck to one only open for faculty and visitors on Monday through Thursday, students and residents find parking on campus even larger parking challenge than ever before.

Commuter students are piling into the few lots designated for them on main campus or making the long trek from the NJ Transit Deck and Lot 60, both for the main campus and the heart of academic and social life. For residents, the parking locations are also slim-pickings, leaving most who own a car on campus to park in the lots behind residence halls on Clove Road. Residents who live as far away as Freeman and Russ Halls must walk to Hawk Crossings and the Village Halls just to leave campus. Not only is parking limited, but the price of parking passes is slowly increasing, leading most students to pay even more for less parking availability.

While we understand that Parking Services is doing its best to accommodate the varied parties that need to park on campus, we still wish that the parking situation would be better in the Fall 2014 semester and not worse than ever before, according to upperclassmen who have been parking on campus for years. We know that Parking Services does try to organize parking on campus reasonably, but we also believe that as an institution of higher education, the accessibility of education should be one of MSU’s main priorities.

If students are hindered from attending class on time because of parking situations or if parking makes students even more stressed than they already are due to their academic, extracurricular activities, work and personal lives, then considerations should be made regarding alternative parking situations.

What are the changes we are hoping for? For starters, reopening the Red Hawk Deck as an option for commuter and resident students would definitely relieve some of the parking burden. Additionally, opening some of faculty and staff-only lots for commuters and making parking an equal opportunity for all those who drive to campus would be ideal. If we do not have enough land to build more parking garages, then have some reforms to parking that could be made to improve the situation of transportation at Montclair.

We don’t have quibbles about everything concerning transit on campus. Beginning this semester, a shuttle will be available on the weekend to bring resident students to the Bay Street station in downtown Montclair so that residential students can finally travel to New York City on the weekend.

This is the kind of cooperation and regulation that we are looking for. Although the train does not stop on campus on the weekends, at least now there is an option to travel more easily than before. If the same kind of thought and compromise can be applied to the parking situation on campus, then travelling at MSU will hopefully become a much more convenient and stress-free action.

Major to Minor: “Girls Just Want To Have Fun” by Chase Holfelder

Music theory is fascinating in the sense that a simple key change can alter the entire meaning of a song, as demonstrated in Chase Holfelder’s video series “Major to Minor.” In this series, Holfelder transposes a popular song from a major key to a minor key with the most recent addition being a haunting rendition of Cyndi Lauper’s “Girls Just Want To Have Fun.” By dropping the song to minor key, a tone which is commonly associated to melancholy moods, suddenly this upbeat girl’s anthem sounds ironic and disturbing. Fans of dark re-imaginings of cheerful songs should definitely give the Major to Minor series a watch.

Teens react to Nintendo (NES) by TheFineBros

If the pressure of growing up is stressful enough, TheFineBros’s recent video of teenagers reacting to the revolutionary Nintendo Entertainment System is not for the faint of heart. In this video, a group of teenagers ranging from 16 to 19 react to not only the console itself, but also many popular games that came out on the NES, like Super Mario Bros., The Legend of Zelda and Metroid. The worst part is when a majority of these kids have no idea what the interviewer is talking about. Guest star Maisie Williams, who stars as Arya Stark on the HBO show Game of Thrones, is also flustered. But let’s give her the benefit of the doubt - maybe the NES hasn’t been released in Westeros yet.

Steam Roulette! by Inside Gaming

There are many excellent video games out in the world. Of course, there are also the not-so-great ones. Inside Gaming’s video series Steam Roulette brings many of these unsung heroes to light by spinning a wheel and downloading and playing the result, no matter how terrible it is. In the most recent video, the Inside Gaming guys hit the jackpot with several games, including Scania Truck Driving Simulator and Defence Alliance 2, which both sound like winners right off the bat. These games certainly provide for a source of entertainment but probably not in the way the developers were expecting.

Chvrches’ songs are usually upbeat alone, but this remix takes it up a notch. KDA music is a playlist found on Soundcloud and YouTube. This music is a great addition to your workout playlist.

“Chvrches Gun” KDA remix

Formed in 2012, Milky Chance is a duo of two German men whom became a sensation with this song via YouTube. This upbeat song is fun and rejuvenating; it’d be great to blast during your morning routine getting ready for your 8 a.m. math class.

“SUMMER” CALVIN HARRIS

This was all over the radio this summer to the point where some might call it a summer anthem. A lot of girls love it because it had that love-song-by-a-guy quality to it. Calvin Harris is a very popular DJ, but it’s quite rare that it is his voice singing behind his beats.

“FOREVER” HAIM

Started in 2005, Haim is a rock band comprised of three sisters with the last name “Haim.” This song of theirs has an 80s vibe to it. If you’re a fan of Madonna, you’ll be sure to love it.

“EAST OF EDEN” ZELLA DAY

This young singer has gotten popular through her cover of the White Stripes song “Seven Nation Army.” According to theguardian.com, Zella Day is a “happier Lana Del Rey.” Fans of Lana should definitely check out Zella Day for a slightly more upbeat entry in the alternative genre.

“TEENAGE CRIME” ADRIAN LUX

DJ Adrian Lux released this song, but the artist is a Swedish-born singer named Eli-die. Summer memories will definitely come back to you when you hear this tune; it’s all about making the most of your youth and living your life to the fullest.

“STOLEN DANCE” MILKY CHANCE

Based in Sweden but raised in the United States, Zella Day was born in 1994 to a father who is a guitarist and a mother who is a vocal coach. As a child, Zella was exposed to music at an early age and began singing and playing the piano at the age of three.

How does scarcity define the course of our lives and make us into the person we ultimately become? That is the question Sou希尔 Mullainathan and Eldar Sharif try to clear up in their 2013 book, Scarcity: Why Having Too Little Means So Much. I will say that the results found in this book reward Mullainathan and Sharif’s ambitious approach to forming a valid opinion on how scarcity affects us all. Yet, after the first several chapters, the book starts to contradict itself through its scarcity of variety and freshness.

You know when someone tells you a really good joke or when you hear the joke for the first time? You say to yourself, “Wow! That was a well thought-out, clever and funny joke!” Then, the person decides to tell you the same joke again, only this time he changes the names of the characters that are involved in the joke.

At this point, you say to yourself, “Yeah, that’s still a funny joke, but I heard that one already. You put anything new for me?” Unfortunately, the person has nothing to offer you after that but slight variations of the same joke. They run it into the ground to the point where you become tired of the joke. That’s what Scarcity felt like for me. It’s a well thought-out idea that’s fascinating at first, but loses steam by simply doing variations of the same concept over and over again. I feel like this book couldn’t have been significantly improved if it had been condensed into a series of vignettes using only five of the most vital studies the writers used to formulate their thesis. Through that, you would have had a nice, simple book a little over 100 pages that keeps things short and to the point. I don’t want to get repetitive myself, so I’ll venture onto what things I really appreciated about this book.

I feel that the one thing this book absolutely nails is the psychology of scarcity and how it impacts a person’s way of thinking. As the book demonstrates, having to do things on a time limit, the scarcity of time seems further and further from the back of our minds and slides comfortingly into the forefront.

Whenever the dead line to get my daily duties done draws closer, I find that my mind becomes more and more focused on getting that particular duty or assignment done. However, the book doesn’t condemn scarcity as this negative mindset that we should ignore. Instead, the book intelligently defines scarcity as both a daunting mentality and an efficacious motivator to get the task at hand done.

Another admirable aspect of the book is the obvious amount of time and effort these guys went into writing it. The fact that there are 40 pages worth of resource citation at the book’s end really demonstrates that Mullainathan and Sharif performed an abundance of research to support the thesis of their book.

In spite of the fact that the book is at times flabby and monotonous, I can at least admit that every single example Mullainathan and Sharif use hold water. It’s a valuable supporting detail to his or her viewpoint on the concept of scarcity.

In particular, I absolutely love how they use the modernization of the Benihana restaurant chain enterprise as an example of resolving scarcity. For many readers, it will be eye opening to see how restaurant owners control their businesses. No matter how you feel about this book, you can at least give it credit for presenting an argument in painstakingly and intelligent fashion.

If you were to put the pros and cons on two ends of a balance scale, I honestly believe that it would end up being just about even. An interesting idea presented in bloated and overlong fashion is definitely better than a succinctly written book where no effort is put into it at all.

If I were to give this book a “final verdict,” I’d lean towards giving it a read or at least a read of the first few chapters of the book. It all depends on whether you’re scarce of patience for insightful repetition or not.

Red Hawks take positives from first loss of the season

Jenna Bussiere
Assistant Sports Editor

Last season, the Montclair State women’s soccer team finished with a perfect regular season and an overall record of 20-1. But when they took the field for the first time as a new squad in 2014, they would be stunned by a 0-1 start.

 Ranked eighth in the nation, the Red Hawks traveled to Maryland on Aug. 28 to face sixth-seeded John Hopkins for their season opener. Hopkins, a team equipped with three All-American players, prevailed with a 2-1 victory over Montclair.

However, the game provided a much-needed learning experience for the team and ultimately proved the team’s talent and perseverance.

“Hopkins was excellent, so it was good for us,” said head coach Patrick Naughter. Naughter explained that he purposely scheduled Hopkins to find out how strong his 2014 squad would be right off the bat. “We want to measure ourselves with the best teams in America,” he said. “We picked that fight; it wasn’t by mistake.”

A loss is something an undefeated team is not used to and it may not always be taken lightly. This could be especially true when Martina Landeka, a junior forward for Montclair State, scored a gam-tying goal with six minutes remaining, only for it to be taken back due to a foul.

“I was obviously upset like any athlete would be,” Landeka said, “but it also pumped me up because, after that, I scored a goal in the next two games.”

Landeka described the loss as a “reality check” for a team coming off an undefeated season. “We needed something to remind us that not every season needs to be perfect,” she said.

The girls were able to process the unlucky loss in record speed, as they had their second game directly the next morning. They responded with a 2-0 shutout against St. Mary’s, capturing their first win of the season.

“Thats something I was really proud of with the kids,” said Naughter. “Thats as tough a loss as you can have and they turned around 24 hours later and put together a great performance and really stepped it up.”

Naughter also explained that a recurring theme for this year’s team is “We don’t lose two in a row” and he’s confident that it will not happen with this group.

The team travels to Hoboken to play Stevens Institute of Technology on Friday, Sept. 12. This will be the first time the Red Hawks will see Stevens since hosting them in overtime in 2011, when the squad’s seniors were freshmen. The team is excited and extremely confident to be successful.

“Im really proud of my teammates,” Landeka explained. “We have a really good group of girls this season and I’m pumped for this year.”

Montclair State opened up the season at Sprague Field to take on the Delaware Valley Aggies on Saturday, Sept. 6. Despite a third quarter resurgence, the Red Hawks ultimately came up short to start their season with a loss. Montclair State’s all-time season-opening record has now decreased to 45-34-5.

The Aggies came into this season with a new head coach with plenty of experience within Delaware Valley’s coaching staff: Duke Green had spent several years as both an assistant coach and head coach with plenty of experience within Delaware Valley’s coaching staff. Duke Green had spent several years as both an assistant coach and head coach with plenty of experience within Delaware Valley’s coaching staff.

In the second, the Aggies came into the game with a 13-0 lead. The Red Hawks tied the game with a magnificent 5-yard touchdown pass from Red Hawks quarterback Aaron Wilmer to tight end Stephen Greco. That quarter was finished off with a 54-yard field goal and a 52-yard touchdown pass in the first half. Montclair State finished the game with 361 total yards. The defense finished as they allowed 487 total yards. Montclair State will be back in action next week in New York, N.Y. to take on Salve Regina University at 12 p.m. Salve Regina is coming off of a win in their first game against Bridgewater State. The 33-27 final was played in Bridgewater, Mass.

The NAAC as a whole did not have a good week as only two teams came out with wins. William Paterson defeated Maritime College 36-20 in Throggs Neck, N.Y. while Morrisville State crushed Al Ferraro with a 69-17 win in Morrisville, N.Y.

Red Hawks Rebound From First Loss
Field Hockey nets seven goals against Drew to improve to 3-1

Mike Pecorino
Staff Writer

Montclair State's field hockey team suffered their first loss of the season just this past week. Their first game of the season was against St. Lawrence, a team that Montclair State has been unable to defeat in the past three years. The game was held on Sept. 21, and it resulted in a 1-0 loss for the Red Hawks. Montclair State was unable to score a single goal against St. Lawrence, although they had numerous opportunities to do so. The Red Hawks' offense struggled throughout the game, and they were unable to capitalize on their chances. They were outshot 27-15 by the Saints, and they were unable to find the back of the net. The loss was a setback for the Red Hawks, but they were able to rebound in their next game against Drew University. Montclair State was able to score seven goals against Drew, and they went on to win the game 7-0. The Red Hawks' defense was solid, and they were able to keep Drew's offense in check. The Red Hawks' offense was also strong, and they were able to find the back of the net multiple times. The win was a much-needed boost for the Red Hawks, and it was a reminder that they are a competitive team. They will continue to work hard and improve their game, and they will be looking to have even more success in the future. They will be playing in the National Women's Hockey League next season, and they will be competing against some of the top teams in the country. The Red Hawks are excited to be part of this league, and they are looking forward to the opportunity to compete against the best.
