Fashion Week Comes to NYC

New York Fashion Week in NYC.

New York Fashion Week, which showcased the best of the industry’s most talented designers Spring/Summer 2015 collections, drew as we typically experienced, two to three times more interest than any other event.

For some, fashion in any way shape or form is not their cup of tea. For those who do care, last year’s fashion week featured a diversity of styles found in the ocean of styles.

But, even those who denounce paying close attention to fashion fail to see the far-reaching effects it has on even those who aren’t interested. As Miranda Priestly so sharply explained to the fashionably indifferent, “The Devil Wears

New York Fashion Week has influenced you. For those of us who "do" care, last year’s fashion week seemed to have a style for every-everyone. The overarching trends among designers were a juxtaposition between femin-ity and toughness with almost every nuance in between. This included yellow, as a big color, stripes going lengthwise in almost every width, even to the short dresses, ruffles, military styles and big floral prints.

Students volunteer at the National Day of Service.

The MSU Volunteer Resource Center honored the annual September 11th National Day of Service and the Montclair Resource Center ensured students eager to sign up to receive even more information, make their own decisions and ask deeper questions about Safe Space Training. Consistently trying to create a "visible network of allies and supporters of the LGBTQ commu-ity," the overwhelming participation of students in the day itself was humbly accepted.

Gathering the support of the university, the Center proudly presented a letter from President Barack Obama encouraging their efforts on behalf of the national itself.

"Enduring change begins in our communities. It stirs with us and it takes hold when we arrive to meet the needs of our neighbors. Over time, everyday acts of compassion and generosity can build momentum for change that rises up and create a more just, more hopeful tomorrow," wrote Obama.

Although the Center’s Awareness Day proved a success within the campus community, members have not stopped their efforts there. Collaborating with various organizations on campus, the Center strives to promote a more inclusive campus climate through all types of events and initiatives.

As one of its big initiatives on campus, the Center is currently promoting Prenumex Matter. An interactive experience, students are given the opportunity to learn about pronouns and the means by which they correspond to individuals across the board. Allowing students to “not only raise awareness about correct pronoun use,” the activity has granted each student the chance to express their gender.

With dozens of rainbow balloons and huge flags hanging from the tables, the day served to bring to the attention the LGBTQ Center as a whole including indi-dividualized services it constantly supplies the campus community with.

“We are a safe place for students, faculty or staff to freely express your gender, sexuality and personality with acceptance,” said Hoffman.

With such an important role to fulfill, the Center has encouraged students to educate both themselves and others on the various aspects of LGBTQ rights and equality. Through a program known as Safe Space Training, students and faculty alike are given the opportunity to become certified within the LGBTQ community.

With the sun rising high above, the LGBTQ Center could not have asked for a more beautiful setting to promote this annual Aware-“Change takes a lot of time and it can start with something as simple as Awareness Day,” shared Joanne Hoffman, the Pride Board Director for the LGBTQ Center.

With a booth set up in the Student Center Quad throughout the day, mem-which “signifies the display-er’s willingness to support the LGBTQ people.” From that point on, the sym- bol shows the person is one who values “nontraditional understanding and truerelv-ey should never need help, advice, or conversation.”

Our priority, working in the center, is to offer a sense of community and that’s something that we’ve heard from our IceSpace program really helps with creating a visible work of support on campus,” said Beayewat Magnussen, junior FIns major and mem- ber of the LGBTQ Center. “For LGBTQ high school stu-dents who are touring our campus, we see our space upon stickers on doors of profes-sor’s doors. By wearing a visible space trained buttons,” to see our events and activities,”: “I love bei- ling boards out in the open, as unapologetic as any other project on campus. Some kids really need that.”

In the end, “any student can participate, be and share their experiences with others and the power of our voices is what’s really important,” said John Hoffman. “That’s why LGBTQ Center Awareness Day was the most impactful day of the year.”

When you see the Feature section of The Montclarion, the fashion section is usually aimed at giving girls ideas on what to wear. This time, we’re trying something new. Don’t flip this page, men; this is for you! Choosing what to wear can be a struggle for guys and girls alike. When looking for fashion inspiration, it’s best to go by the occasion. Here’s some advice from a girl on what a guy should wear.

1. Going to class
The easiest place you can find students is in class. Try something simple yet trendy. The red jeans show you want to stand out while the white tee doesn’t give the appearance that you’re trying too hard. A denim jacket is a fashion staple for guys and girls and the Converse shoes finish off the look.

2. Study Group
This year is hopefully bringing you good luck and you’ve met a girl to be your study partner. In this case, meeting her outside of class gives you another chance to express your style. For a studious but not desperate look, opt for a varsity-style jacket and acid wash jeans. Layer it over a sweater and top the look off with a beanie hat and boots.

3. Party
We all know that parties are a great place to meet new people, especially this time of year. The easiest way to do that is to start a conversation and what you wear you can definitely help. Compliments are obvious, but graphic t-shirts are also great conversation starters. This Hey Arnold! t-shirt is sure to bring up childhood memories. Pop the yellow in Arnold’s hair by taking a risk and wearing yellow jeans; you’re sure to be noticed, especially by all of Montclair’s fashionistas. Go for Converse shoes to stay traditional and comfortable.

4. Concert
Another great way to bond with someone is through the music they like; you can automatically find these people by going out to a concert. Concerts are always fun, and tend to have friendly people. Try going with distressed jeans rather than just blue ones. As for on top, layer a muscle tank under a polo. Then slip on a pair of Converse. Your relaxed look will radiate good vibes, making you look approachable and, of course, fashionable.

5. Dating
It’s only the most important part. Once you’ve found your girl and you’ve asked her out, it’s time to pick the perfect outfit. Obviously, it depends where you two go, but we’ll go with dinner. When you take her out you want to wear something between fancy like a suit and casual like sweats. Go for pants that aren’t jeans and a classic polo. Layer over a jacket and add dress shoes.

To my surprise, it’s not only girls that care about fashion; guys also want to look nice and dress the right way for the right occasion because we are, unfortunately, judged by how we look. I guess guys realize girls like fashionable guys, and that’s the truth. I hope I’ve helped you out and inspired you to try out these looks.

Recycled Boots for Your Carbon Footprints

Over the last few years, Montclair State has had over 750 participants in the Disney College Program from a variety of majors and programs. The Disney College Program gives college students the opportunity to work in the Walt Disney Parks and Resorts in both Orlando, Fla. and Anaheim, Calif. It is a paid job, as students are able to work in fields such as attractions, custodial, transportation and housekeeping. Housing is provided for participants, but rent is taken weekly from participants’ paychecks.

Students from any major or degree program can apply and applications for the Spring 2015 semester are currently open. Disney provides a wide array of classes to college program participants. These classes are included in the program and can either be taken for credit or for no credit, as long as they fit into a student’s degree plan.

Dr. Jack Samuels, the Disney College Program advisor for MSU, has observed that the students who participate in the DCP go on to great successes not just with the Walt Disney Company, but with other companies as well. He believes this is because of Disney’s excellent reputation for training its employees. Samuels is always willing to speak with students about the Disney College Program and can be reached at samuelsj@mail.montclair.edu.

According to Samuels, some of the students have gone on from the DCP to do amazing things. One student, whose major was leisure and tourism, became a top executive for Disney. Another student taught DCP classes for a time and then went on to start a consulting company in California using her Disney credentials. Another student is a catering and events manager with Disney.

Students are also thankful for their experience with the DCP. Sarah Wolfe, a Communications and Media Major, participated in the Spring 2014 program in the quick service food and beverage in Animal Kingdom, then transferred to Magic Kingdom. "My advice for people interested in applying is to be passionate about something and your interviewer will almost always pick up on that," said Wolfe. "If you get accepted, be ready to have an unforgettable experience and make the most of your time there because it will fly by.”

Jason Balinskas, a Public Relations major, was also able to work at Lights Motors Action: Extreme Stunt Show at Disney’s Hollywood Studios. "I took Disney's Marketing You and Disney's Creativity and Innovation classes, as well as Disney's Marketing Exploration Series 'Marketing You' was very similar to the Career Management class Communication majors take and helped me master résumé writing and being confident.”

If you are interested in an internship, the Disney College Program offers a wonderful work experience in the happiest place on earth!
Packing a Healthy Lunchbox: The College Edition

Kimberly Asman  Contributing Writer

The College Edition

The idea of a lunchbox may instantly remind you of your elementary school days when your parents packed your lunch every day, but they may still be very useful on a college campus. With schedules packed full of classes, work and any other activities, it can become essential to pack yourself food for the day, making sure you have enough energy to last through the day. Try to fill any meal with a lean source of protein and whole grains; also, try to make at least half of the meal fruits and veggies. Here are some easy ideas that can help you plan your meals for the week.

Spring 2015 was no exception. This time around, his focus was on the classic 70’s power woman, outift. It looked both sexy and in-charge at once, with a focus on chunky platform heels and lots of dresses tailored to fit the body like a glove. Carolina Herrera was one of many designers who took yellow and ran with it and had many models strut down the catwalk in yellow-patterned, feminine dresses. They were long, flowy and supremely elegant rather than bohemian.

Even though we recognize that there are many, many more important things going on in the world today, the self-expression and reinvention fashion encourages with each changing season is still a meaningful art form to at least give a passing glance just in case it happens to show up in your closet next year.

Build a better sandwich: Sandwiches are a go-to for a lot of people thanks to how easy they are to make and grab on the go. Just make sure that yours is full of healthy ingredients. Start with 100 percent whole-wheat or multigrain bread as a base; on top of that, add turkey breast or chicken breast, as it is a great lean source of protein. For the vegetarian, you may want to have some part-skim mozzarella cheese or hummus topped with vegetables. Any vegetables can go great on a Mexican-inspired salad: Start with any base of leafy greens such as baby spinach or romaine lettuce and pile on the toppings: queso blanco, olives, black beans, chicken, green peppers, red onions and crumbled queso blanco tortilla chips. For some extra healthy fats, mix or cut up half an avocado. No need for dressing; the Mexican flavors will be enough to add some spice to your meal.

Whole-wheat pasta: Everyone loves pasta; a great way to enjoy it is by making it whole wheat. This will add more fiber and protein to the dish plus a unique flavor. Start with a pasta base, add cooked vegetables such as broccoli, green beans and sautéed onions. Top this with chicken or roasted chickpeas and pack some Parmesan cheese in a sandwich bag to add right before you eat. (To roast the chickpeas, mix them with a spoonful of olive oil and bake in the oven until crunchy.)

Make your burger better: Hamburgers are not the healthiest option but there are plenty of variations of them that can be. Turkey burgers serve as a great base for toppings such as arugula. Veggie burgers based with beans are also a great way to pack in vegetables and protein. Start with mashed kidney or black beans as a base, throw in any chopped veggies that you want and mix together with an egg or another liquid binder to make delicious burgers. To top the whole grains, try mixing in some cooked quinoa as well. These all can go great on a whole-wheat bun, eaten alone or even chopped up and put on a salad.

Smart sides: If your entry is not enough to fill you up until your next class, bring some fruit with you. Peaches, apples, bananas and oranges are really easy to grab and go.

Question of the Week

How important is campus safety when choosing a college to attend?

Alexander Torres

"College safety is important because you don’t want to be somewhere where you are going to spend a lot of your time and feel it’s unsafe. You don’t want to be walking around campus knowing that something can happen to you at any moment."

Samantha Castron

NFL Not A “Ray” of Sunshine
Sources expose the NFL letting crimes slide, leading to tighter punishments

The Montclarion - September 18, 2014 - The Montclair State University student newspaper

With every little step, the NFL comes closer to returning to the time when their stars were more notorious for what they did on the field than off it.

MU Students Live for the Weekend

T he NFL, a football league that has been one of the nation’s most popular sports for decades, is a business. It is a business that is not above the law. It’s another step for the NFL in terms of enforcing more serious policies of conduct against NFL athletes who think they can do whatever they want.

NFL has no name to blame, but themselves in the situation. What Ray Rice did was horrific and he deserved punishment of the highest degree from the NFL. If the NFL is telling the truth and they didn’t see the footage of Ray Rice hitting Palmer, then they did a poor job investigating the case and ensuring that justice was delivered. If NFL officials lied about not seeing the footage and still gave Rice a lenient punishment, they should be held accountable for themselves and be charged with obstruction of justice.

The NFL was sending a terrible message to their athletes and the world in regards to the original punishment, which was that if you abuse your girlfriend/husband/wife, you’ll merely get a slap on the wrist. Yet, it seems like they’re trying to rectify this mistake with the new punishment.

The NFL has now enforced a new policy on domestic violence which would ensure a one-game suspension for pay as a first strike for players who commit domestic violence. Further acts of domestic violence will result in increased severity of punishment. Kevin Faulk, former NFL player, said that this is “a baby step for the NFL in terms of being above the law. It’s another step it. They did on the field than off it.”

Going A Long Way With Patience
Finding a connection with parents can be difficult, but rewarding

A young adult, perhaps one of the most pertinent relationships we've had our entire lives are with our parents. I realized that some people have parent figures in their lives that might not necessarily be a biological parent; all in all I mean the term “parent” to umbrella those care-taker figures that have influenced us the most.

If we each look back at our relationship with those people or that individual, we would all be saying something different. Some might say that their relationship to parents was to never give up. My relationship with my parents is to never give up. My relationship with them has revealed a side of me that I don’t like to explore. They are probably the only ones that could ever bring that out of me.

I can count how many times in my childhood I've cried over a disagreement with my parents. These disagreements continued into young adulthood, including now as I am about to complete college. Along with the tears came fury as powerful as I ever felt. I swear that whole town could feel it. Those kinds of emotions are not foreign to me when it comes to dealing with my parents. Although we have had our disagreements and gut-wrenching quarrels, I can proudly say that I feel as though I am one of the luckier daughters on the face of the Earth.

My parents are both immigrants who came to the United States in their early 20s. They came from the country of South Korea and have made a life for themselves here. The cultural barrier I had and still am overcoming with my parents is what frustrates me.

Since I was born here in New York City; I grew up American. I went to school and was educated as an American. The town that I grew up in is full of Mexican and Russian people, a very non-diverse town.

I did not have a chance to explore or make friends with people of the same race as me. I grew up feeling very different because I was unaware of my culture besides what my parents had shown me. Communication was the toughest aspect of our whole relationship and still is to this day. My mom speaks decent English while my dad still speaks behind and has trouble with it. They did not understand things like the American school system and social pressures that the typical American student had to face in school.

I had almost lost hope that my parents would ever understand me because of cultural barriers. I always felt like I had to explain myself and explain what was what down to the very last word.

The whole key to building my relationship with my parents was to never give up. My relationship with them now has calmed down a lot. In matters like this, both parties need to realize that it is equal- ly as frustrating for the other side as it is for them.

Empathy also plays a big role in settling disputes and looking beyond your own self. I have almost lost hope that my parents would ever understand me. The whole key to building my relationship with my parents was to never give up. My relationship with them now has calmed down a lot. In matters like this, both parties need to realize that it is equally as frustrating for the other side as it is for them.

Foster the People’s new electronic music producer from Sydney, Australia. His Stumblound hosts remixes of other artists’ songs like Flight Facilities’ “Stand Still” ft. Micky Green and Cosmic Gate’s “Sahara.” This is another producer that makes great songs even better. It’s a totally upbeat song that will be sure to put you in a great mood!

Girls/Boys
-Wave Racer 50 Words

Ellie Goulding’s music tends to be a mix of electronic to slow love songs. The lyrics in her songs are always great because they can be interpreted in different ways; for example, in this song the lyrics go from “I’m there in the water” to “I’m dead in the water.” It’s a very relaxing song to play in the background of your math homework so you can still concentrate.

Relaxing song
-”Brain” Banks

Jillian Banks started singing when she was just a teenager as a way to deal with loneliness. Now 25, Banks is known for songs that express a variety of her emotions. This is another producer that makes songs even better. It’s a totally upbeat song that will be sure to put you in a great mood!

Relaxing song
-”Vagabond” Misterwives

If you pay close enough attention, you may find awesome songs on some of your favorite television shows. This song is the theme song of MTV’s Finding Carter. Misterwvies band was formed in 2012, made up of 3 musicians and one singer. After just their first song, “Reflections,” the band made it big. This is not your typical love song, and I think a lot of people appreciate that.

Relaxing song
-”Never Wanna Know” MØ

This song is between a love and a breakup song. The lyrics don’t complain and moan an ex lover, but it’s not a typical mushy love song. The Guardian describes singer Karen Marie Ørsted is the new Grimes and claims her music is unscientifically sung electronics. Everyone likes music that they can relate to, and I think these lyrics are relatable to most people our age. Next time you’re in a crummy mood and you just want to relax, try hitting “play” on this track.

Without divulging into too many details, I’m excited to see where this season goes week-by-week. With that Hoevel interview, I don’t think there’s a happy ending in store for SAMCRO and the rest of the residents of Charming; regardless, it’ll be an exciting adventure until the end.
I Fell in Love With John Green...
...slowly, and then all at once

Shereen Reynolds
Contributing Writer

Chances are you’ve heard of, seen or cried over the movie The Fault in Our Stars. It made over $30 million in the box office in its opening weekend alone, destroying every other movie that also opened that weekend. Since its premiere on June 6, it has made $214,749,171 in the United States and $284,971,171 worldwide. That’s an incredible amount of ticket sales and tears shed. Lucky for us, the movie is being released on DVD this week as of Tuesday, Sept. 16, which means we no longer have to pay $15 at the theater every time we want to voluntarily get our hearts ripped out of our chests.

Now chances are you’ve also probably heard the name John Green in correlation to The Fault in Our Stars and also thought, “who the eff is John Green?” He is the #1 New York Times bestselling author of The Fault in Our Stars. Luckily for us, John Green is also a YouTuber, personality, part-leader of the Nerdfighters community (we’ll get to more of that later) and a philanthropist.

It seems like John Green has suddenly taken the entertainment world by storm, but little do most people know that Green has had his foot in the door since 2007. Flashback to Jan., 2007 when brothers John and Hank Green started a project on YouTube called BroForce 1.0 under the username vlogbrothers. Brotherhood 2.0 was a year-long video project in which John and Hank would only communicate to each other through the videos they posted online. After that project, star-studded and perhaps even unknown thousands of people were tuning in to join their conversation. Even after the year ended, their audience only continued to grow with new videos such as Crash Course, SciShow and Smarterananews. Vlogbrothers’ videos cover a number of topics from “How to Become An Adult” to “Vesicle Scripters.” However, they all have one thing in common; they are must-see viewing for the nerd of people. This is where Nerdfighters come in.

The Nerdfighters are a community of people developed around the Vlogbrothers and their videos known as “Nerdfigh-toria.” A Nerdfighter is basically a fan of John and Hank’s content but also a person who stands for the ideas and values that are “nerdy” stereotypes such as the love of knowledge, enthusiasm and Harry Potter. With the Vlogbrothers, the Nerdfighters community has raised hundreds of thousands of dollars for various charities through the annual Project for Awesome created by John and Hank.

Finally, philanthropy comes into play. The Project for Awesome is an annual YouTube event where members of Nerdfighteria donate money to The Foundation to Decrease Worldkonk (a non-profit organization created by John and Hank). Along with raising money, Nerdfighters make videos telling the community which charities need support and then John and Hank (along with Nerdfighteria) choose which charities to donate to.

Not only has John Green spent time raising money for charities, but he also recently traveled to Ethiopia with Bill Gates to learn about the medical facilities there and the issues that need to be addressed in order to keep a sustainable community, among other things. He donates his time and uses his fame to bring awareness to important topics while making us laugh, teaching us to appreciate and never let our forget to be awesome.

Not only is Green an amazing author, but he is also an all-around rad guy. You never letting us forget to be awesome.

THE FOUNDATION FOR A BETTER LIFE

The Montclair State field hockey team won both their games this past week, extending their overall record to 5-1.

That would be all the scoring Montclair State needed as they won the game 1-0. Over-all, the Red Hawks held the advantage in shots taken, 25-1. There was also an extraordinary amount of fouls during this match. The two teams totaled 72 fouls (37 for New Paltz to 35 for MSU). Over the past four years, Montclair State is 4-0 versus the Hawks in field hockey.

The Red Hawks welcomed the Misericordia University Cougars to Sprague Field on Sept. 13. The Cougars flipped the script on MSU and took a 1-0 lead just 1:19 into the game. However, Montclair State roared back at the 18:43 point thanks to a reverse shot and goal by Johnston. Minutes later, senior captain and defender Abby Erier notched a score of her own to put the Red Hawks up 2-1.

Approximately five minutes into the second half, Struss struck and recorded a goal, giving MSU a 3-1 lead. During the 61st minute, sophomore midfielder Megan Roeloffs scored her first goal of the season, which gave Montclair State a 4-1 advantage. About four minutes later, sophomore forward Gianna Moglino found the net thanks to an assist from Johnston. The Red Hawks won the game by a final tally of 5-1. MSU outshot the Cougars 34-4 throughout the contest.

“We are getting great leadership from our experienced athletes and we keep raising the bar each day in practice and games,” said head coach Beth Gottung about her team’s progress. “It’s our goal to improve weekly during the season.”

This week, Montclair State has only one game scheduled. On Saturday, Sept. 20, the Red Hawks travel to Cortland, N.Y. to match up with the SUNY Cortland Red Dragons. This is MSU’s final game before they start league play in the NJAC.

“With only one game this week, we can slow things down in practice, allowing us to focus on details rather than trying to cover big concepts needed to prepare for two games,” said Gottung.
Mens Soccer

was finally wiped clean after junior Lucas Terci scored off of a penalty kick. Finally, after a high scoring, back-and-forth first half, the two teams entered the second half with a clean slate of 3-3.

In the fashion of the game, it only took six minutes for a scoring play to occur in the second half. Montclair State defenders found themselves in miscommunication and allowed the ball to remain unattained in the middle of the penalty box. This is when Wheaton’s Noah Anthony swept in and nailed the ball past Gonzalez and into the net. Wheaton continued to control the second half of the game, restraining the Red Hawks to only one shot that period and putting another goal away at the 86 minute mark. Although the Red Hawks continued to battle, the game would end in a 5-3 victory by Wheaton. Wheaton outshot MSU 18-9 in the contest and the loss surely made a mark on the Red Hawks.

“Two straight losses made us realize we need to pick up our game and work harder,” said senior forward Jesse Shea. Previously, Montclair State suffered a 1-0 loss from SUNY Cortland on Sept. 10 but bounced back on Sept. 15 by defeating The City College of New York, 6-0. However, a huge contest lies ahead for Men’s Soccer. On Saturday, Sept. 20, they take on #1-seeded Messiah at home. MSU lost to Messiah last season, 3-1.

Work 2 in the NFL saw some ridiculous things. There were injuries to stars such as Jamal Charles, A.J. Green, DeSean Jackson and Robert Griffin III, and some extremely bizarre upsets. The Cleveland Browns beat the Saints and Seattle fell to the San Diego Chargers. Also worth mentioning is the Jets giving Green Bay a huge scare by scoring a game-winning touchdown that was called back due to a timeout call as the play was starting. Starting today, Sports Editor Thomas Formoso and Assistant Sports Editor Jenna Bussiere will be making weekly NFL predictions.

The Montclair State football team recorded their first win this weekend by bringing down the Salve Regina Seahawks 7-6.

A fumble made by the Red Hawks at the Seahawks’ 26 would give Salve Regina their scoring opportunity. Seahawks quarterback Steve Wilken threw a 17-yard pass to receiver Matt Traynor for Salve’s only touchdown.

However, the Seahawks’ extra point was blocked by Montclair’s Kevin Bias, who also recorded a block in MSU’s first game against Delware Valley College.

The Red Hawks got on the board when quarterback Ryan Davies found receiver Devon Levesque for a 31-yard touchdown in the third quarter.

Montclair will face the Division II Lincoln University on Sept. 20.

Womens Soccer
For the first time since 2011, the womens soccer team traveled to Hoboken to face Stevens Institute of Technology on Sept. 12.

In 2011, the Red Hawks beat Stevens in an overtime battle, 2-1. This year, the Red Hawks lit up the scoreboard 10 seconds into the game and walked away with a 3-0 victory.

After Montclair’s Kerry Glynn was fouled in the midfield, junior Janae Geonnetti took a free kick. This is when she found Tina Laudeka, who headed the ball into the goal and gave Montclair a 1-0 lead.

Melissa Koster and Jennie Horstma added to the scoreboard in the second half and gave MSU its 3-0 score.

Montclair State takes on New Jersey City University on Sept. 20.
Farmingdale State. The 25-17 win over Albertus Magnus brought the Lady Red Hawks winning record to 4-0 and increased their winning streak to five straight matches. The weekend started with a decisive 3-0 win over Farmingdale State on Saturday, but still came out with another straight-set victory. The sets finished at 25-17, 25-15, 25-14.
