In order to keep students in the light about crimes on their campus, the Jeanne Clery Act was initiated to keep a public record of crimes.

The Clery Act was signed into law by President George W. Bush in 1990 and was renamed from the Campus Safety Act in 1998.

"The Clery Act was developed to keep students, prospective students, staff, and the external community knowledgeable about crimes that occurred and address student concerns," said Lieutenant Kieron Barrett of the University Police Department.

This week, the statistics from crimes on campus during 2013 were sent to students via email, which includes information regarding crimes such as fire safety information about the campus. It also includes a list of crime prevention tips in places such as the emergency "blue lights" found around campus in case students need to quickly contact UPD.

Some of the numbers have increased and some have decreased from year to year. The following are some of the statistics from the 2013 Jeanne Clery Act report:

- Four forced rapes, five aggravated assaults, 46 burglaries, 98 liquor law violations, 46 drug abuse violations, and three instances of bias intimidation.
- Some of the categories that had no violations were weapon possessions, robbery, and motor vehicle theft.

Some students think the Clery Act is a positive thing, but think the report being published only once a year is not enough. "The Jeanne Clery Act is definitely a good thing; it makes everyone aware of what is going on," said student Osama Abgehazaleh.

"I would definitely work on updating it more often than once a year," said 2013 is almost over and they won't have [this year's statistics] until this time next year.

Yogi Berra crafts honorary exhibit

Jayne Gugliucci

With the spark of the ALS Ice Bucket Challenge this past summer, the technological world as a whole became more aware of the prevalence and lasting effects of amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, known commonly as Lou Gehrig’s Disease. However, restricted media coverage over aerial media failed to address one major point – those behind the scenes that sent cold water shivering down the spines of millions.

At Montclair State, the Yogi Berra Museum and Learning Center is looking to share the answer to the question of how Gehrig continues on Page 4.

“. . . there is no cure, but Gehrig’s remains the face of the disease and an inspiration and reminder to be thankful for what we all have.”

Economic Advice Comes in New Form

Community learns how to make it big in today’s society

In today’s modern society, it is not that unusual for business owners to think about ways to make the economic climate work in their favor, but expectations for students to think the same are a bit too bold.

For this reason, on Tuesday, Sept. 30, the Financial Center for Entrepreneurship hosted the Hou-Self-Economy Report. The two-hour panel was held on the 7th floor of University Hall and housed a variety of audience members including faculty from both Montclair State and a variety of other universities, students and local business owners and reporters.

The discussion was led by David Brancaccio, the host of NPR’s Marketplace Morning Report. The event was geared towards encouraging young entrepreneurs to begin their own business endeavors, whether it be starting their own business or launching a new product.

Many of the audience members were interested in the subject matter and joined in the conversation. In Issue #4, Jeff Issler from Fire Safety was incorrectly titled as “Jeff Isler.” In the same story, the phone number for UPD was listed as ex. 55552, when it should read ex. 5222. Also, the Chartwells photo on Page 4 was taken by Nicholas Kral. On the same page, the film photo was taken by Keyra Krauss.

It won’t be as recent or up- to-date as the other stories that they have something like that in. Additionally, some students were concerned that the story might get moved to the back page or even to the inside page.

Gehrig sliding into home in 1935.

With this being true, “the exhibit commemorates the 75th anniversary of Lou Gehrig’s legendary farewell,” shared Dave Kaplan, director of the Office of Student Development and Learning Center. “It’s a day that many students, faculty, and staff members remember as a special day. It’s a day that we commemorate in many different ways. It’s a day that we think about the history and traditions of our university.”

Gehrig died at the age of 37 from amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, also known as Lou Gehrig’s disease. The exhibit was curated by the Office of Student Development and Learning Center and features a variety of items related to Gehrig’s life and career. These items include a jersey, a bat, and a photograph of Gehrig in action.

The exhibit is part of a larger initiative to commemorate the 75th anniversary of Gehrig’s farewell speech. The university has planned a series of events and activities to honor Gehrig and his legacy, including a ceremony in his honor on the day of the exhibition’s opening.

While Gehrig is best known for his exceptional athletic career, he also had a significant impact on the Montclair State University community. The university has named a residence hall and a baseball field after him, and his legacy continues to be celebrated by students, faculty, and staff members.

The exhibit is open to the public and is located in the Campus Center. It will be on display through the end of the academic year.

Additionally, the Center for Student Involvement is responsible for encouraging students to participate in campus-wide events and activities. The center has planned several events to celebrate the 75th anniversary of Gehrig’s farewell, including a panel discussion, a lecture, and a screening of a documentary film about Gehrig’s life.

For more information about the exhibit or the events planned by the Center for Student Involvement, please visit the website of the university’s Office of Student Development and Learning Center.

As the weather gets colder, skirts and crop tops are slowly heading towards the back of the closet. If you’re a resident at MSU, you’re probably planning a trip home to swap wardrobes and pick up a few things for colder weather. Here’s a list I’ve compiled of the top fashion essentials for the coming months.

1. Sweaters
   Since we all started school in the hot summer weather, sweaters are probably something that aren’t currently hanging in your closet. If you’re taking a trip home or have some spare time, definitely dig them out of your attic. You’ll need them soon.

2. Knit cardigans
   Cardigans and sweaters are pretty much the epitome of fashion from October through February. Although neutral cardigans are great for any outfit, a thick, printed one is always a must. They tend to be as soft as a blanket. Who could say no to wearing a blanket to your 8:30 a.m. math class across campus?

3. Knee socks
   When it’s not snowing but not too sunny, knee socks are a lot more stylish than regular tights. They look awesome with pieces like dresses, skirts and even shorts. Soft, knit socks are super comfortable and perfect for keeping your legs warm.

4. Jackets
   Motorcycle jackets are great for this time of year. They are perfect over sweaters. Layering is the answer for dressing up during these months. You never know when Dickson’s heat will be pumped up full blast or when the heat will stop working in your friend’s dorm. The best solution is layering on tops to take on and off depending on the weather.

5. Joggers
   Joggers are the clothing piece between leggings and sweatpants. They are not skin-tight like leggings, but are also not super baggy and unflattering like most sweatpants. They are perfect for when you don’t feel like trying to look fashionable but still want to. They also come in a variety of colors and prints, but I suggest going with a heather grey. You can find them all over, so pick them up on your weekend home or next time you’re at the mall.

6. Sweater dresses
   If you’re like me, you’re not looking forward to saying goodbye to floral sundresses and skater skirts. Luckily, there are dresses appropriate for chillier weather: sweater dresses. Dresses with long sleeves are perfect for the next few months and are perfect for sporting graphic tights and leggings with. While it’s not freezing, opt for dresses like this cotton one with a plaid flannel tied around your waist, knee socks and sneakers.

7. Boots
   Boots are definitely a go-to shoe for fall and winter. There are so many comfortable pairs out there to change up your typical Converse or moccasin look. Try getting a pair that fold down to show off a cool pattern like these. The best part about combat boots as opposed to Uggs is that you can wear them in the rain or even snow (as long as you aren’t suede or nubuck). Style tip: Try folding one down but not the other.

8. Printed leggings
   Leggings don’t have to be a boring neutral color; there are an endless amount of different printed leggings. A cozy pair is perfect for chilly days. They look great with oversized slouchy sweaters for an instant outfit. Plenty of stores sell leggings with a fleece lining to keep your legs warm and make you feel like you’re wearing sweatpants.

9. Beanies
   Similar to a graphic tee, graphic beanies are a great way to make conversations. They are a great alternative to graphic toss since soon enough we’ll all be wearing sweaters instead. Find one with a funny message like this. They’re perfect for bad hair days, too!

10. Scarfs
    Scarves are a must-have winter accessory. They are another instant outfit accessory to throw over a plain top and run off to class. Of course, they’re also great for the snowball fights on the quad, too! Be sure to have one on hand for the cold weather.

Even though we’re still transitioning into fall, sweater weather will be in full swing soon enough. Don’t be the girl in shorts and tee because you forgot to grab the right clothes from home last weekend or take them out of your attic. I hope you figure out exactly what you’ll need to stay comfortable and fashionable in the coming months.
Fall In Love
5 of the Best Autumn Inspired Romance Ideas

Jasmine Thompson
Contributing Writer

1. Have a picnic
Going on a picnic with your significant other is a classic yet timeless way to get romantic. Nature and its magnificent autumn transformations are beautiful this time of year, not to mention that the crisp, cool air is perfect for cuddling on a blanket. Prepare some delicious dishes that are easy to pack up and take on the go such as sandwiches, fruit salad, and fresh-cut veggies. Web-up and take on the go such as sandwiches, fruit salad, and fresh-cut veggies. Nature and its magnificent autumn transformations are beautiful this time of year, not to mention that the crisp, cool air is perfect for cuddling on a blanket.

2. Cook together
Everyone knows the autumn is the season for the first image of the best delectable dishes on the face of the planet. The next time the two of you have the evening free and a kitchen to yourselves, get cooking. It doesn’t matter what level of chef either of you are. The fact that you are both coming together to create something is a fun, easy and surprisingly powerful way to connect. Make a plan with your partner to get dressed up, just as if the two of you had reservations at the finest restaurant in town. Place candles in your kitchen and dining room for ambience (try a mix of red, orange, and brown candles for a truly autumn feel) and make sure there is no faster than the back of your home. Bring food, snacks, wine (for those over 21), a speaker with Bluetooth or an aux input, sleeping bags, fuzzy blankets, the works. Plan activities such as stargazing, telling ghost stories and reading poetry to each other. The backyard setting takes the pressure off since you can simply go the bathroom with no restrictions. This solution relieves you of having to deal with wildlife and still allows you to take in the autumn air all night with the one you love.

3. Go camping
I know, the idea of sleeping in a tent in the middle of the woods with no plumbing, electricity or Netflix could be pretty scary for most of us. Instead of putting your survival skills to the test all in the name of romance, modify this timeless classic. Have a backyard camping trip. Pack as if you truly were going on an adventure into the wilderness, only travel no further than the back of your home. Bring food, snacks, wine (for those over 21), lamps, a speaker with Bluetooth or an aux input, sleeping bags, fuzzy blankets, the works. Plan activities such as stargazing, telling ghost stories and reading poetry to each other. The backyard setting takes the pressure off since you can simply go the bathroom with no restrictions. This solution relieves you of having to deal with wildlife and still allows you to take in the autumn air all night with the one you love.

4. Create a backyard movie theater
A movie night is a timeless if not cliché date idea. However, if you put a little twist to this classic it becomes magical under the autumn night sky for two. First, hang a white sheet from either wall of the house or between two trees. This will be your screen. Bring out a second sheet (to sit on), pillows and extra blankets in case the temperature drops and arrange them on the grass. Bring out a table or stand, place it behind you and place a movie projector and screen on top. Don’t have a projector? No problem. Place the table or stand in front of you instead. Now, bring out a TV screen or laptop and watch movies from home! While you are at it, why not time it with the autumn theme and have a lineup of Halloween-themed movies? These things not to forget about: extension cords, bug spray and popcorn.

5. Make jack-o-lanterns
No matter what age you are, you are never too old to carve a pumpkin. In fact, studies show that doing something you used to do as a child boosts your energy, increases creativity and promotes a feel good vibe. Doing such inspiring activity with a significant other also promotes connectedness and deepens the already existing bond. If that were the case, why wouldn’t you want to share this experience with the one you love? Head to your nearest pumpkin patch and get picking. Bring your treasures back home, pop in your favorite Halloween-themed movie and have a contest to see who can create the most hauntingly stunning masterpiece.

For those of you who would like to create your own original romantic rendezvous, just remember that you really don’t need to tell me how you do it. All it takes is imagination, creativity and time. Ladies, remember that romance isn’t just for you. Men want to feel special, too.

No matter how creative a person might be, the task of coming up with new, inventive date ideas is exhausting and difficult. Whether you just began dating someone or are in a long-term relationship, it is no small feat to keep things exciting and new. Feeling “comfortable” and getting into a routine with your partner is all too common and hard to avoid. In honor of the new season, here are five of the best-autumn-inspired date ideas to get you started on bringing romance back into your relationship and help reignite that spark.

Malinza Green is a junior here at Montclair State University and is currently studying TV production and law. She started her training to be a businesswoman at the young age of five. As she got older, she grew to love photography at events like Sweet Sixteens and weddings. It actually gave a lot further. OMG Photography is also a business that she is very successful at giving back. Green and her team raise money through donations and from outside like McDonald’s to give away scholarships to high school and college students. These are not need-based but are simply through applications.

In 2011, approximately 5 percent of Americans considered themselves to be vegetarians, according to PETA. This number is steadily growing. In honor of World Vegetarian Day, Oct. 1, here are some of the top reasons you may want to consider switching to a vegetarian eating pattern or at least reducing your intake of meat.

Meatless Mondays, anyone?

It may help you to eat healthier
Any type of eating pattern can easily go either way, either resulting in an unhealthy diet or a healthy one. Vegetarianism done right can definitely lead to a healthy diet full of lots of fruits, vegetables and lean sources of protein. Because vegetarianism cuts out meat, it can greatly reduce levels of cholesterol and saturated fats that are in most meat. The 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans said vegetarians tend to have lower body fat percentage and live longer thanks to their meat-free diet.

Eating meat almost always supports animal cruelty
Although there are ways to get more humane meat such as “grass-fed” beef, the majority of meat and poultry in this country is a result of CAFOs (Confined Animal Feeding Operations), also known as factory farming. Factory farming often includes cruel practices in crowded and dirty factories. By taking out meat, you can take away support of those types of operations. Another way to avoid this is to find a local farm that can tell you all about their grass-fed animals.

It helps the environment
The raising and production of livestock produces an enormous amount of greenhouse gases. These can have damaging affects on the environment. By eliminating or reducing your intake of meat, you are not contributing as much to this industry and the damage it is causing on the environment.

It may add variety to your food
The decision to cut meat out of just one meal a week leads to the discoveries of new ways to get protein such as tempeh or chickpeas that you may otherwise not have known about. Being vegetarian also tends to go hand-in-hand with higher consumption of fruits and vegetables. The Internet is a great source for you to find all new types of produce included in interesting vegetarian options.

Why You May Want to Consider Going Vegetarian, or Cutting Back on Meat

“I feel like college nowadays seems more about building their future, A lot of money gets invested in renovating the campus and bringing in more students, bringing in bigger freshman classes to pump up the numbers and therefore the revenue. It helps current students but it also helps the future.”

Marquesa Gutierrez

Psychology Senior

“I believe both based on the fact that current students are allowed to go to teachers if they need to, speak to advisors if they need to and go to tutoring if they need to. They have all the tools necessary to keep moving academically and for future students, there’s a great way to be integrated into the new world that everyone who is going to Montclair [State] is a great fit for anyone who wants to come here. It’s home for me. I have lived on campus for three years and I love it.”

Alicia Luecke-Daley

Psychology Major

“I certainly think Montclair is starting to think more about future students. We just got rid of the policy that you need a certain SAT score to get into the school. It’s not really sure if that’s totally helpful to future students or not, but I really think it can go either way, especially depending on if you were in an underprivileged major or if you’re changing your major from something you were previously major in. I was graphic design freshman year and now I’ve switched four times since then and they were a little bit overwhelming. It’s hard to explain. I really think it can go either way when it comes to that.”

William Baunshel

Commercial Real Estate Senior

“I think that this college spends most of its time on future students. We’ve been working on the amount of construction there is for future buildings such as the business building and the science building. The business building we have now is obviously not up to par with the buildings they are building next to it, which looks very good.”

Columnists Evaluate UN Campaign

MSU students comment on gender equality and the HeForShe movement

The UN Women's new campaign, called the HeforShe, is a movement to bring equality to the world. Emma Watson, the UN Goodwill Ambassador, has spearheaded the campaign, which aims to bring equality to the world. Emma encouraged that we "can do our bit to make the world a better place for everyone."

During HeforShe's special event at the United Nations, New York headquarters, Watson began her address by stating, "We are one of the first campaign of its kind in the UN." Watson said, "We want to try and galvanize as many men and boys as possible to be advocates for change.

In her speech, Watson urged men to start thinking about the gender gap, the "gaps in education, security, health," and how they can be closed. She emphasized that gender equality is crucial to solve the world's problems.

Watson continues by describing how women and men are not free from the confines of gender stereotyping and how gender stereotypes limit what we can do. She says, "I've been looking at girls' education and I see that we need to do more."

Watson encouraged the audience to think about what they can do to help and to "think big." She said, "I believe that the problem of gender inequality is one of the biggest challenges of our time."

Watson also emphasized the importance of education, saying, "We need to give girls the same opportunities as boys."

Watson concluded by saying, "This is not just a women's issue. This is a human rights issue."

I think the most essential goal with the HeforShe movement is to bring equality to the world. Emma Watson, who is a UN Goodwill Ambassador, has spearheaded the campaign, which aims to bring equality to the world. Emma encouraged that we "can do our bit to make the world a better place for everyone."

The HeforShe campaign seeks to galvanize men and women, but also men, in the fight to have women achieve equal standing in all aspects of life. Watson pointed out, "What I'm saying is that when we think about gender, we need to think about what we're doing to help women and girls."

Over the decades, the idea of feminism has changed with every generation. In the 1900s focused on achieving women's suffrage, feminism in the 1960s and 1970s focused on achieving equal rights and opportunities for women. In the 1990s, feminism focused on achieving equal rights and opportunities for all genders. Today, feminism focuses on achieving equal rights and opportunities for all people, regardless of gender.

Watson also emphasized the importance of education, saying, "We need to give girls the same opportunities as boys."

Watson concluded by saying, "This is not just a women's issue. This is a human rights issue."

Soccer star's domestic abuse case should deserve it.

When the game began its telecast, many significant memories and moments were shown. His uniform #2 was everywhere. It was in patch form on his teammates’ clothing. The #2 even replaced the Gatorade logo. It was the first time ever that the Gatorade symbol was utilized for a special occasion.

The raw emotion Derek Jeter faces showed it all. He stood at the plate in the ninth inning. The game had a bumpy start. Toward the end, the Orioles blew David Robertson’s save with three runs on two outs. Jeter had some amazing talents. He is the sixth-greatest batter in Major League Baseball, sitting pretentious above Honus Wagner and Mickey Mantle. He is the sixth-greatest shortstop in Cobblerville’s history.

Jeter leaves the game in the ninth inning. Jeter, who was 1 for 4 with an RBI double, inevitably drove the Yankees to victory. It was a quote that fit him perfectly. It was sad to watch him leave, but we know he will be a part of the Yankukn’s history. We will never forget our hero, our leader, our captain since 2003.

Jeter shouldn’t just be known for his on-field accompaniments. He should be known for his general love of baseball and his humble yet quiet personality. When he left the game, all of us wanted to do was play baseball. His coming straight out of high school to turn you in a huge deal and rarely happens. Jeter had that amazing talent and people are blessed to have him as their team’s catcher.

However, the best way to really get to know him is through the book and Instagram went crazy that evening. Jeter’s quotes and stories were worth a book. He left behind a legacy. Wonderful Humans

“Edge of the Night”

Established in 2011, Wonderful Humans is a duo comprised of the couple of Brian Cug and Amanda Carl. Wonderful Humans started as a writing project, but turned into a band when the two met graduation. This song will probably take you back to summer and all its endless nights.

Gotye

“Hearts a Mess”

Gotye is an Australian pop singer that started gaining popularity in the home country in 2009, then until 2011 that he became popular in the US when his song “Somebody That I Used to Know” duet with Kimbra was released. “Hearts a Mess” is similar with its use of a unique variety of instruments. This song is so upbeat; it really will make you want to shut up and dance. Take a break from your studies and have yourself a little dance party.

Broods

“Never Gonna Change”

Broods or made up of singer Georgia Nott and multi-instrumentalist older brother Caleb Nott. Growing up in New Zealand, the duo got famous through their hit “Bridges.” Their songs have a moody vibe with Georgia’s unique voice, which is comparable to Lorde. If you’re a fan of Lorde, you’ll probably really like Broods.

Pharrel Williams & Justin Timberlake

“Brand New”

Let’s start off by establishing this as the best song to get you ready in the morning. These two are a great pair; they’ve actually collaborated before in Game’s “ Ain’t No Doubt About It.” This song has Pharrell’s typical theme of songs that make you smile, which makes it great.

‘Sons of Anarchy’ Review

Joseph Lees

TUESDAYS @ 10 P.M. ON FX

In true Sons of Anarchy fashion, things are beginning to fall apart in Charming. Though carry- ing a nice amount of tension, the season’s remain- ing episodes haven’t really kicked started the season into gear. ‘Lo’ and behold, ‘Poor Little Lambs’ looks to be the first domino. This episode featured a lot of action and fine character beats, as I’m hoping this theme is maintained throughout the remainder of the season.

Not that the show has been lacking quality, but since the start of Season 5, it hasn’t really felt like the final season of a show like this. The increased run time of the episodes felt a bit fruitless, but with this episode I welcomed it. A lot went down and, again, it’s going to be very interesting down the road with SAMCRO.

It was nice that this epi- sode took a break from the monster unleashed in Jax and took time to focus on aspects of the other characters. Within SAMCRO, seeing Tig and Venus Van Dam together again was actually a good break from all the action. It isn’t treated with comic relief but rather with some nice development for Tig’s character. Walton Goggins’ portrayal of Venus is always such a terrific supplement to any episode he is featured in. Chibs is also set- ting up a little romance of his own with the Sheriff, which I imagine will grow with future episodes.

On the other side of Charming, Juice is begin- ning to deteriorate and it’s quite apparent that both Juice and Gemma are moving very cautiously. Juice has a major part to play this season, and I’m hoping more steps are made sooner rather than later for him to really step up.

For the first time this season, I’m genuinely look- ing forward to next Tues- day to see what happens next. The momentum is there; it just needs to keep going and rising in or- der to have the great last season that so many fans, including myself, are an- ticipating. The war has hit Charming, and now it’s about what SAMCRO is going to do next and when the truth is going to really unfold for the MC.

The Knocks (ft. Powers)

“Classic”

Here’s another pop song that will remind you about the summer that we just said goodbye to. The Knocks are a DJ duo, Ben Bittner and James Patterson, who re- mixed songs like “I Kissed A Girl” by Katy Perry and “Closer” by Tegan and Sarah. The Guardian has described The Knocks as “midway between David Guetta and Daft Punk.” If you’re a fan of those arti- sts, you should definitely check them out.

Big Eyes - official trailer #1
Perhaps the most shocking of movie announcement this year is the trailer for Tim Burton’s Big Eyes. This film tells the true story of painter Margaret Keane, whom gained success by having her husband market the paintings as his own. The film stars Amy Adams as Margaret Keane and Christoph Waltz as her husband, leaving viewers wondering en masse, “Where’s Helena? Where’s Johnny?!” However, if this film is a step back towards the days of Edward Scissorhands, perhaps working backwards is the right direction for Tim Burton.

Weekend Update: Pete Davidson Talks Business | Saturday Night Live
Saturday Night Live newcomer Pete Davidson might not be of age, but he certainly does not shy away from discussing adult topics. As the 20-year-old Staten Island native made his SNL debut this weekend, he wasn’t afraid to talk about what he would do for a million dollars. Another thing he was not afraid to reveal was that he was in high school just three years ago. If you’re ever feeling bad about the state of your life, just think about the fact that this young comedian is probably around your age or younger and is doing way cooler things than you are. It may make you feel worse, but watching some of his hilarious stand-up will cheer you up.

David Letterman: Stupid Human Tricks 9/26/14
On the Sept. 26 episode of the Late Show with David Letterman, “Stupid Human Tricks” was one of the featured bits. The segment introduced three individuals with, well, exactly what it says on the tin – stupidly weird but oddly awesome tricks. The first is a man who can play “Twinkle Twinkle Little Star” on the… razors. Yup, disposable shaving razors. The second act is a woman who can stick grapes up her nose using her tongue, which looks just as pleasant as it sounds. The final act (someone this writer actually had the pleasure of growing up with), which perhaps is the most impressive of all three, balances a step ladder off of his chin. The human race is truly an amazing specimen.

Brazil is Bringing Rock to Vegas

Jasmine Amjad
Staff Writer

Over the last decade, music festivals have become incredibly popular. Festivals such as Coachella and the Governors Ball have massive outreach and social impact, allowing talented musicians performing their latest hits. But there has been one extraordinary festival that just reached a milestone and is celebrating it in a unique way. The Brazilian music festival Rock in Rio is one of the biggest music festivals in the world. This year, it will be commemorating its 30-year anniversary. To celebrate, they will be partnering with Metallica and Cirque du Soleil to bring their iconic show to the United States for the first time in May 2019.

To give a preview as to what to come this spring, Rock in Rio organized a press conference in Times Square where, in addition to announcing the show, the legendary music festival also revealed their exciting lineup. Popular bands and artists who are set to headline include Metallica, Linkin Park, Taylor Swift, Def Leppard, John Legend, Katy Perry and No Doubt.

The fun doesn’t stop with the performances. There will be multiple stages set up in a giant arena capable of holding up to 80,000 people. A giant Ferris wheel, amusement park rides, street dancers and a 400-foot zip line that goes above the main stage will surely keep festival goers entertained when their favorite artist isn’t performing.

The press conference also unveiled a commercial featuring actor Donald Sutherland getting tickets for the festival. Pre-ordered tickets for general admission and VIP passes went live during the press conference as well. General passes as low as $92.99 and VIP passes available for $289 and daily VIP passes are available for $48. Those with VIP passes will be treated to a luxurious air conditioned tent with an amazing view of the main stage and an all-inclusive buffet.

Special guests also made an appearance at the press conference to kick off the event. No Doubt arrived and were presented with a special Rock in Rio guitar in honor of the announcement. Times Square was then turned into a temporary outdoor concert venue. The public was treated to a special performance by Brazilian/American metal group Sepultura with Les Tambours Du Bres, who gave an electrifying performance. However, the night’s best surprise came from John Mayer, who made a surprise appearance and played two of his hits, “No Such Thing” and “Gravity,” to the overenthused crowd.

The festival is sure to place high expectations for all music festivals in the future. This year’s festival will surely be memorable one. As the Vice President of Rock in Rio, Roberto Meloni told the press, “From the first Rock in Rio festival in Brazil in 1989 to next year’s anniversary and Las Vegas launch, it’s been an amazing journey with Rock in Rio fans and the artists that have taken part in the festival.”

The Rock in Rio festival will be held in Las Vegas on May 11, 12 and May 15 and 16. For more information and to purchase presale tickets, go to rockinrio.com/nasau.

Going into the second episode of Fox’s Gotham, Season 4, I have to admit I was nervous. If I were to have some issue with the writers if the new show could continue to build on the promising foundations they established with last week’s very impressive pilot. The answer is yes. I honestly can’t recall the last time that a major network show has gotten my attention so early in its run. If it keeps up at its excellent pace, then I’m definitely in for the ride that’s about to become incredibly interesting.

The episode opens with a man and a woman claiming to be members of the DEA, and they’re going for Bruce Wayne’s “James’ Homeless Outreach Program approaching a bunch of street kids and offering them food. The duo seems to be made up of a good-looking woman and a homely John and Gideon, yet are clever ruses, as most of the kids take the bait and are dragged and kidnapped as a result. The duo manage to become a homeless man who tries to intervene while Selina Kyle (Cameron Bierdena) and an other street kid manage to escape the abduction. The homeless man’s murder and the testimony of the street kid found by the GCPD prompts Detective Gordon to begin an investigation into the child-trafficking ring. His partner, Detective Harvey Bullock and GCPD Captain Seraf Radon (Zulayka Gue- varra) tell him to drop the case out of four of the exposed case, and its lack of publicity for the city. However, Gordon’s determined fiancee Barbara (Sophia Mosley) signs off in a fictitious newspaper about the story and the GCPD is forced to in- vestigate the case.

This week’s episode also has to continue with the additional storylines from where they left off last week’s episode. One involves Oswald Cobblepot’s dark side of Gotham, as he bitches a ride with two strangers. Another focuses on Fish Mooney’s desire to become Carmine Falcone (John Doman) to become the biggest crime lord in Gotham. The other storyline focuses on Bruce Wayne’s (David Ma- son) increasing desire to help the city of Gotham. I won’t go any further into what hap- pens, as I feel the story and the episode turns the page are better off being left for the viewer to wrap their heads around.

From beginning to end, the episode keeps the viewer engaged thanks to its great sense of pacing. There’s not a single moment of filler in the entire episode, as every scene in the episode serves the necessary purpose of focusing on story and character development. One character, in particular, Selina Kyle, gets the most de- velopment of any character in this week’s episode. Spanky without being obnoxious and likeable without feeling too constructed, the character of Kyle already seems primed to be a very entertaining piece of ensemble this season. The same goes with Oswald, whose de- scent from being a mere creep to a full-blown psychopath has me curious about how he will affect the city of Gotham when he makes his return.

The strong performances from every member of the ensemble, the engaging plot and the cracking dialogue all came together amazingly this week to produce a hugely entertaining episode. The script is full of fantastic interplay between all of the characters, especially between Detectives Gordon and Bullock. The witty script also contains some excellent moments of dark humor that serve as welcome relief from the dramatically heavy plot and give this show a legitimate feeling of fun. If I were to have some is- sue with the episode, I’d say that the editing can be choppy at certain points with certain scenes containing too many cuts in between shots, rather than letting certain shots breathe. Also, the Gotham City Police Department feels too corrupt for me to be con- vinced that this is a believable police department. Perhaps showing another character with the same good nature and intentions as Gordon would create a morally grey da- namic in the GCPD that could produce some really compel- ling drama on the show. Yet, those are small complaints to what was otherwise a strong second episode of a show that has already shown to have a lot of potential. If Gotham can pull a Hat trick by delivering another great episode next week, then I’ll be officially sold on Gotham being one of television’s finest new shows.
‘Tusk’: Protege of the Human Centipede

Nick Ferkolzola
Contributing Writer

Tusk, the latest work from writer/director Kevin Smith (Clerks, Chasing Amy, Red State), is a bizarre film. It’s worth a rental for that reason alone. You’ve never seen anything quite like it. Unfortunately, oddity doesn’t exactly equal quality.

Justin Long stars as Wallace Bryton, who co-hosts the mean-spirited “Not-See Party” podcast with his friend, Teddy Craft (Haley Joel Osment). In each episode, the two find embarrassing videos online and ridicule the people involved with them. The film opens with the two mocking the latest Internet celebrity, the Kill Bill Kid. Shortly after, Wallace travels to Canada to attempt to interview the viral star. Once he discovers that he can’t, he decides to stay in the country for an extra day to find another person to interview. He stumbles upon an ad at a bar posted by Howard Howe (Michael Parks) offering a free place to stay and interesting stories to hear. With his interests piqued, Wallace makes the trip up to Howard’s remote home. However, Wallace soon learns that Howard has more sinister plans in mind: he wants to transform Wallace into a walrus.

Back in the United States, Ally Leon (Genesis Rodriguez), Wallace’s girlfriend, grows increasingly worried as days go by without any contact with Wallace. Eventually, she and Teddy begin to devise a rescue mission. The two travel to Canada to recruit the Inspector Clouseau-inspired ex-cop Guy Lapointe (Johnny Depp) to help them track down Wallace. That may seem like a promising premise for a goofy horror-comedy, but these elements are implemented poorly. Good horror-comedies, such as Edgar Wright’s Shaun of the Dead and James Gunn’s Slither, manage to blend their horror and comedic elements seamlessly. Tusk, on the other hand, keeps them mostly separate. Alternating scenes switch between comedy and horror. There are a few genuinely haunting scenes and some funny moments, but the transitions between them seem especially jarring. Guy’s introduction is the perfect example of this. Immediately following one of the film’s most horrific moments, this introduction takes viewers to the complete opposite end of the spectrum for a lengthy, goofy introduction. While it does provide backstory for the character, it drags on for far too long and spoils the movie dead in its tracks. Transitions like those make Tusk feel constantly at odds with itself.

Smith’s problems with flashbacks are evident in other parts of the film as well. Like Guy’s introduction, they serve to provide viewers with more information about the characters. These scenes, however, seem like they would work better towards the beginning of the film before the tension ramps up. Peppering these flashbacks between tense moments only slows the film’s momentum. It’s a shame because in spite of these problems, Tusk manages to do several things very well. Smith has never seemed more confident behind the camera. Instead of utilizing the simple point-and-shoot style that marked his earlier works, he moves the camera to ratchet up the tension. He even manages to wring impressive performances out of Long and Rodriguez. Parks is as great as ever and delivers a harrowing performance that manages to make his character into more than just a cartoonish villain.

Nonetheless, Tusk shows that Smith is growing as a director. He is clearly pushing himself out of his raunchy, minimalist comfort zone into uncharted territory. All we can do is hope that he aligns the pieces better next time.

Field Hockey Keeps NJAC Pace

Win over Kean in NJAC Opener Sets Strong Pace

Mike Panepinto
Staff Writer

The MSU womens field hockey team went two games and lost one over the past two weekends. The Red Hawks are currently ranked #9 according to the National Field Hockey Coaches Association Division III poll. MSU also opened its season at #5 against Montclair State.

Montclair State played on Sept. 30 against the SUNY-Cortland Red Dragons in Cortland, N.Y. With about five minutes left in the half, sophomore forward Gianna Moglino found the net to give MSU the 1-0 lead going into intermission. After a score by Cortland to tie the game at one each, Moglino connected with senior defender and fellow captain Joelle Butrico, who tallied a goal for MSU and put them up 2-1. Cortland struck a minute later to tie the game. The contest would go into overtime.

The extra period, captain and senior defender Abby Erler hooked up with junior forward and fellow captain Mauri Johnston, who then netted the game-winning score to give Montclair State a 3-2 victory. MSU outshot SUNY-Cortland 17-8 during the match. The Red Hawks also had 10 penalty corners to the Red Dragons’ seven. Montclair State is the only team to give Cortland a home loss so far this season. The Red Hawks have won the past three games they played against the Red Dragons.

The following contest happened on Sept. 24 at home against the Kean University Cougars. This game marked the beginning of league play around the NJAC. Roughly 40:00 into the game, freshman forward Karilin Strauss notched a goal to give the Red Hawks a 1-0 advantage. A few minutes later, sophomore forward Danielle Butrico scored off a rebound from the goalkeeper, extending the margin to 2-0.

After Kean got on the board, Johnston stepped up and found the back of the net to restore Montclair State’s lead back to two goals. Less than two minutes into the second half, Johnston scored, putting MSU up 4-1. Moglino capped the onslaught with a tally of her own to give the Red Hawks a 5-1 win.

Montclair State attempted 11 more shots than the Cougars (21-10). Most of those 10 shots from Kean, didn’t come until the closing minutes of the contest. Despite back-to-back losses, MSU has a 4-0 record against Kean. The Red Hawks have conceded the Cougars 16-4 during those four contests. The Red Hawks’ final match of last week was against #5 ranked Middlebury College at the neutral site of Albany, N.Y. on Sept. 28. MSU got more than they bargained for and fell to the Panthers 9-1. Their loss goal came in the first half when Moglino got the assist on a goal converted by Johnston.

Starting junior goalkeeper Rebekah Brostole finished with eight saves for Montclair State during the match. The loss snapped a five-game winning streak for MSU. Middlebury out-shot the Red Hawks 26-8. Johnston was selected as the NJAC Offensive Player of the Week in the match. She had three goals for Montclair State last week during their two contests. She is tied for second place in the league in goals with four assists.

Montclair State’s next game is Oct. 1 in Hoboken against the Stevens Institute of Technology Ducks at 6 p.m. (Results were not available at press time). Montclair State will also write another chapter in a storied rivalry on Oct. 7 at 5 p.m. in Wayne versus the William Paterson Fleurs. Montclair State is currently tied for second place with the Rowan Profs at 1-0 in conference games. TCNJ continues their strong field hockey season with only one loss overall and 2-0 in the conference.

Red Hawk Round Up

Football
Montclair State's football team had their bye week last week as they will prepare to face off against William Paterson in Wayne, N.J. It will be Montclair State's first NJAC game of the season and will look to use the momentum they gained from their win against Division II Lincoln University on Sept. 20 at Sprague Field.

Montclair State is currently tied for second with William Paterson in the NJAC standings. Morrisville State played last week in their first NJAC game and defeated SUNY-Cortland. As the only teams to play an NJAC game to this point, they are in first and last, respectively.

Mens Soccer
The Red Hawks took on New Jersey City University at Sprague field on Sept. 24 and won 2-0 on goals from Maxx Wurzbürger and Jake Seaman to bounce back from their loss to Messiah College and improve their record to 5-3 overall, 1-0 in the NJAC and 2-2 at home.

The Red Hawks then traveled to Brooklyn to take on Brooklyn College. Montclair State cruised to an 8-1 victory. They will travel to William Paterson on Oct. 1 and play at MSU Soccer Park on Oct. 4 against TCNJ, both NJAC conference contests.

Ten years ago, the 2004 women's soccer team made a historical mark on the athletic program by capturing the first ever NJAC conference title and taking the team's first trip to the NCAA tournament. This year marks the 10th anniversary of that day. Montclair State's current women's soccer team celebrated the championship team in remembrance.

As the current women's soccer team in remembrance, the current team demanded their history for all to hear. The alumni from the '04 squad was not an easy one. The team behind Montclair State's talented men's soccer team have no longer come as a surprise. Montclair State has proved themselves to be one of the best in Division III women's soccer.

During the mid-2000s, the women's soccer team saw a series of mediocre seasons. The team held a losing or tying record in '05, '07, '09, and '10 and only saw one trip to the NCAA tournament in the seven-year span of 2005-2011. However, the group of athletes from 2004 made it, and they would always be remembered. The Red Hawks took on TCNJ in Ewing, N.J. on Nov. 6, 2004 for the NJAC conference championship game. They went into the game as underdogs. TCNJ had won every single NJAC championship since the tournament was established in 1999, including a 1-0 win over MSU the previous year. However, the Red Hawks would soon decide five straight wins in a row were too many for TCNJ.

Montclair State held TCNJ in scoreless regulation, forcing the teams to bring the game into overtime. After another 30 minutes of scoreless play, penalty kicks would ultimately decide the fate of the no. 1 (TCNJ) and no. 2 (MSU) seeded NJAC teams. TCNJ started off the first round of penalty kicks with a shot that reflected off the post, giving MSU a 1-0 lead after Red Hawk Shirah Oden netted her PK attempt. MSU goalkeeper Kristin Kublansky came up big in the second round of PKs by stopping the Lions next scoring attempt. Montclair State forward Kelly Dutko, capitalized off her teammate's save and put the ball away, giving MSU the 2-0 edge over the Lions.

TCNJ would finally find their way past Kublansky during the third round of penalty kicks, but it would not be for long. Montclair State's Jess Amendola scored MSU's third goal of PKs, leaving TCNJ's Dana Dihrami in charge of the Lions' fate. As As of out of a movie, Kublansky blocked Dihrami's shot attempted and Solidified Montclair's first NJAC title with a 3-1 shootout shutout over The College of New Jersey.

Along with on-field honors and recognition, the 2014 women's soccer team showed respect to their alumni by defeating Richard Stockton 3-0. The history-making 2004 women's soccer team has left mark on the program that will continue to live not only in the hearts of the athletes who played on the team, but throughout Montclair State athletics and the women's soccer program.

This year's women's soccer team has taken an seat at TCNJ on Saturday, Oct. 4, in Ewing, N.J.
