In order to keep students in the light about crimes on their campus, the Jeanne Clery Act was instated to keep a public record of crimes. The Clery Act was signed into law by President George W. Bush in 1990 and was renamed from the Campus Safety Act in 1998. “The Clery Act was developed to keep students, prospective students, staff and the external community knowledgeable about crimes that occur and affect students to campus,” said Lieutenant Kieron Barrett of the University Police Department. This week, the statistics from crimes on campus during 2013 was sent to students via email, which includes information regarding crimes as well as fire safety information about the campus. It also includes a list of crime prevention topics in places such as the emergency “blue lights” found around campus or in case students need to quickly contact UPD. Some of the numbers have increased and some have decreased from year to year. The following are some of the statistics from the 2013 Jeanne Clery Act report: four forced rapes, five aggravated assaults, 46 burglaries, 98 liquor law violations, 10 robbery, 12 serious assault, 20 harassment, 36 larceny theft and 28 theft.

“The Clery Act was a positive thing, but think the reporting published once a year is not enough.” The Jeanne Clery Act is definitely a good thing; it makes everyone aware of what’s going on,” said student Ossama Alghazalah. “I would definitely want more work on updating it more often than once a year. Since January 2014 is almost over and they won’t have [this year’s statistics] until this time next year, I think this is a problem.”

Economic Advice Comes in New Form

Community learns how to make it big in today’s society

Monika Bujas
Managing Editor

In today’s modern society, it is not that unusual for business owners to think about ways to make the economic climate work in their favor, but expectations for students to think the same way is a bit of a holdover.

For this reason, on Tuesday, Sept. 30, the Faculty Center for Entrepreneurship hosted the DiBi-Yourself Economy.

The two-hour panel was held on the 7th floor of University Hall and housed a variety of students members including faculty from both Montclair State and a variety of other universities, students and local business owners and reporters.

The discussion was led by David Brancaccio, the host of NPR’s Marketplace and Morning Report.

Marketplace Morning Report is the most popular business program in the United States and implores members of the business realm, across the country. With this being true, it is no wonder so many took interest to the event by hearing Branc-

It wouldn’t be as recent or up-to-date as some of the other information they have that something like this has happened.

Additionally, some students were quite unhappy at the information that they were sent, which varies from student to student.

“On a scale of one to ten, with ten being the highest level of satisfaction, I’m very disappointed,” said junior J.决策部署. “I was only partially informed about the situation.”

Evelyn Oppenheim, the president of the Montclair State University Students for Social and Environmental Justice, said that the information was not clear on how to contact the police or what to do in the case of such an attack.

In some cases, students were also concerned about whether or not the crime was being investigated by the police.

“Some students expressed that there is always more room for improvement when it comes to handling crime reports on campus,” said Oppenheim. “Additionally, the numbers are often reported via email to the police, which is not as effective as it should be.”

Mr. de Vinck, the business professor, said that in order for students to prevent themselves from becoming victims of crime, they need to be aware of their surroundings and be cautious of who they interact with.

“Personal safety is very important and students need to be aware of their environment,” Mr. de Vinck said. “It is important to be mindful of your surroundings and to be alert to any suspicious activity.”

While addressing the sit- uation, Mr. de Vinck said that he lends the presentation on crime to his students. He stressed the importance of a good professor’s role in teaching and presenting their ideas.

Winter is Coming!

As the weather gets colder, skirts and crop tops are slowly heading towards the back of the closet. If you’re a resident at MSU, you’re probably planning a trip home to swap wardrobes and pick up a few things for colder weather. Here’s a list I’ve compiled of the top fashion essentials for the coming months.

1. Sweaters
Since we all started school in the hot summer weather, sweaters are probably something that aren’t currently hanging in your closet. If you’re taking a trip home or have some spare time, definitely dig them out of your attic. You’ll need them soon.

2. Knit cardigans
Cardigans and sweaters are pretty much the epitome of fashion from October through February. Although neutral cardigans are great for any outfit, a thick, printed one is always a must. They tend to be as soft as a blanket. Who could say no to wearing a blanket to your 9:30 a.m. math class across campus?

3. Knee socks
When it’s not snowing but not too sunny, knee socks are a lot more stylish than regular tights. They look awesome with pieces like dresses, skirts and even shorts. Soft, knit socks are super comfortable and perfect for keeping your legs warm.

4. Jackets
Motorcycle jackets are great for this time of year. They are perfect over sweaters. Layering is the answer for dressing up during these months. You never know when Dickson’s heat will be pumped up full blast or when the heat will stop working in your friend’s dorm. The best solution is layering on tops to take on and off depending on the weather.

5. Joggers
Joggers are the clothing piece between leggings and sweatpants. They are not skin-tight like leggings, but are also not super baggy and unflattering like most sweatpants. They are perfect for when you don’t feel like trying to look fashionable but still want to. They also come in a variety of colors and prints, but I suggest going with a heather grey. You can find them all over, so pick them up on your weekend home or next time you’re at the mall.

6. Sweater dresses
If you’re like me, you’re not looking forward to saying goodbye to floral sundresses and skater skirts. Luckily, there are dresses appropriate for chillier weather: sweater dresses. Dresses with long sleeves are perfect for the next few months and are perfect for sporting graphic tights and leggings with. While it’s not freezing, opt for dresses like this cotton one with a plaid flannel tied around your waist, knee socks and sneakers.

7. Boots
Boots are definitely a go-to shoe for fall and winter. There are so many comfortable pairs out there to change up your typical Converse or moc-casins look. Try getting a pair that fold down to show off a cool pattern like these. The best part about combat boots as opposed to Uggs is that you can wear them in the rain or even snow (as long as they aren’t suede or nubuck). Style tip: Try folding one down but not the other.

8. Printed leggings
Leggings don’t have to be a boring neutral color; there are an endless amount of different printed leggings. A cozy pair is perfect for chilly days. They look great with oversized slouchy sweaters for an instant outfit. Plenty of stores sell leggings with a fleece lining to keep your legs warm and make you feel like you’re wearing sweatpants.

9. Beanies
Similar to a graphic tee, graphic beanies are a great way to make conversations. They are a great alternative to graphic tosa since soon enough we’ll all be wearing sweaters instead. Find one with a funny message like this. They’re perfect for bad hair days, too!

10. Scarfs
Scarves are a must-have winter accessory. They are another instant outfit accessory to throw over a plain top and run off to class. Of course, they’re also great for the snowball fights on the quad, too! Be sure to have one on hand for the cold weather.

Even though we’re still transitioning into fall, sweater weather will be in full swing soon enough. Don’t be the girl in shorts and tee because you forgot to grab the right clothes from home last weekend or take them out of your attic. I hope you figure out exactly what you’ll need to stay comfortable and fashionable in the coming months.
Fall In Love
5 of the Best Autumn Inspired Romance Ideas

Jasmine Thompson
Contributing Writer

1. Have a picnic
Going on a picnic with your significant other is a classic yet timeless way to get romantic. Nature and its magnificent autumn transformations are beautiful this time of year, not to mention that the crisp, cool autumn air is perfect for cuddling on a blanket. Pack your favorite fall picnic favorites are Garret Mountain, Rifle Camp Park and Bear Mountain. Don’t forget the blanket!

2. Cook together
Everyone knows the autumn is the season for some of the most delectable dishes on the face of the planet. The next time the two of you have the evening free and a kitchen to yourselves, get cooking. It doesn’t matter what level of chef either of you are. The fact that you are both coming together to create something is a fun, easy and surprisingly powerful way to connect. Make a plan with your partner to get dressed up, just as if the two of you had reservations at the finest restaurant in town. Place candles in your kitchen and dining room, wear your fanciest clothes (try a mix of red, orange, and brown colors for a truly autumn feel) and make sure there is a nice, romantic mix of music in the background (think less loud, upbeat pop and more quiet, slow music). Work together to cook up an autumn-inspired meal that might include butternut squash soup, roasted pork with apple and the all-American classic: apple pie.

3. Go camping
I know, the idea of sleeping in a tent in the middle of the woods with no plumbing, electricity or Netflix could be pretty scary for most of us. Instead of putting your survival skills to the test all in the name of romance, modify this timeless classic. Have a backyard camping trip. Pack up and take on the go such as sandwiches, fruit salad, fresh bread, crackers, dip and fresh-cut veggies. Prepare some quick, delicious dishes that are easy to pack for a perfect camping meal. Bring the autumn weather and have a lineup of Halloween-themed movies?

4. Create a backyard movie theater
A movie night is a timeless if not cliché date idea. However, if you put a little twist to this classic it becomes way more special. The season is perfect for watching the autumn sky, and it’s cold enough to avoid sweating for two. First, hang a clean, white sheet from either the wall of the house or between two trees. This will be your screen. Bring out a second sheet (to sit on), pillows and extra blankets in case the temperature drops and arrange them on the grass. Bring out a table or stand, place behind you and place your movie projector and screen on top. Don’t have a projector? No problem. Place the table or stand in front of you instead. Now, bring out a TV screen or laptop and watch movies from the comfort of your own backyard campsite. For those of you who would like to create your own original romantic rendezvous, just remember that you really don’t need me to tell you how. All it takes is imagination, creativity and time. Ladies, remember that romance isn’t just for us. Men want to feel special, too.

5. Make jack-o-lanterns
No matter what age you are, you are never too old to carve a pumpkin. In fact, studies show that doing something you used to adore as a child boosts your energy, increases creativity and promotes an all-around feel good vibes. Doing such inspiring activity with a significant other also promotes connectedness and deepens the already existing bond. If that were the case, why wouldn’t you want to share this experience with the one you love? Head to your nearest pumpkin patch and get picking. Bring your treasures back home, pop in your favorite Halloween-themed movie and have a contest to see who can create the most hauntingly stunning masterpiece.

Student Spotlight: Scholarships, Prom and More!

Malkeba Green is a junior here at Montclair State University. As a young age of five, she graduated from studying TV production and law. She started her training to be a businesswoman at the young age of five. As she got older, she grew to love photography. At 13 years old, her parents were confident and proud when she announced she wanted to start her very own business, OMG Photography. Business is a lot more than just photography at events, like Sweet Sixteens and weddings. It actually grows a lot further. OMG Photography is also a business that does a lot of giving back. Green and her team raise money through donations and from outside like McDonald’s to give away scholarships to high school and college students. These are not need-based but are simply through applications. Their goal this year is to give out $10,000 in scholarship money. The scholarships are given out at events called OMG Scholarship Gala, where students are awarded and recognized for their hard work and dedication.

Inspired by her unfortunate experience of not being able to go to prom, her business also holds prom giveaways. Here, OMG Photography offers the newest, unused or donated dresses to lower the expenses of a costly but fun night. It makes it possible for students to go to prom so they can have the experience that Green was not able to have. She feels that if she could have the experience of not being able to have it give back yet not also wanting to give up her interest in photography, so she combined the two.

In honor of the new popular and even had the chance to be interviewed by News 12 Brick City Live. To much surprise, her success has not stopped there. Green has been a keynote speaker at conferences, including the Youth Stellar Awards Ceremony and the YES Conference. Addition to that, Green will be releasing two books: Successful Women’s Book of New Jersey and Successful Men’s Book of New Jersey. They will be released on April 17, 2015. She has become extremely successful and really just wants students on campus to know that if you are persistent and don’t let people put you down, you can too.

There’s no time like the present, even as a college student, to start your career. You don’t always need to have a degree to follow your dreams. Green is very happy with her success and plans to continue it for years to come.
In 2011, approximately 5 percent of Americans considered themselves to be vegetarians, according to PETA. This number is steadily growing. In honor of World Vegetarian Day, Oct. 1, here are some of the top reasons you may want to consider switching to a vegetarian eating pattern or at least reducing your intake of meat.

Meatless Mondays, anyone?

It may help you to eat healthier

Any type of eating pattern can easily go either way, either resulting in an unhealthy diet or a healthy one. Vegetarianism done right can definitely lead to a healthy diet full of lots of fruits, vegetables and lean sources of protein. Because vegetarianism cuts out meat, it can greatly reduce levels of cholesterol and saturated fats that are in most meat. The 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans said vegetarians tend to have lower body fat percentage and live longer thanks to their meat-free diet.

It helps the environment

The raising and production of livestock produces an enormous amount of greenhouse gases. These can have damaging effects on the environment. By eliminating or reducing your intake of meat, you are not contributing as much to this industry and the damage it is causing on the environment.

Eating meat almost always supports animal cruelty

Although there are ways to get more-humane meat such as "grass fed" beef, the majority of meat and poultry in this country is a result of CAFOs (Confined Animal Feeding Operations), also known as factory farming. Factory farming often includes cruel practices in crowded and dirty factories. By taking out meat, you can take away support of those types of operations. Another way to avoid this is to find a local farm that can tell you all about their grass-fed animals.

It can add variety to your food

The decision to cut meat out of just one meal a week leads to the discoveries of new ways to get protein such as tempeh or chickpeas that you may otherwise not have known about. Being vegetarian also tends to go hand-in-hand with higher consumption of fruits and vegetables. The Internet is a great source for you to find all new types of produce included in interesting vegetarian options.

Do you think colleges spend more time helping current students or building a better college for prospective students?

Christopher Thompson Audio and Sound Design Junior

“I feel like colleges spend more time on building their future. A lot of money gets invested in expanding the campus and bringing in more students, bringing in bigger freshman classes to give the campus numbers and to give it a better reputation. It helps current students but it also helps to build the future.”

Margaux Gutierrez Psychology Junior

“I believe both based on the fact that current students are allowed to go to teachers if they need to, speak to advisors if they need to and go to tutoring if they need to. They also have all the tools necessary to keep moving academically and for future students. It’s a great way to be integrated into the new world that everyone is going to. Montclair [State] is a great fit for anyone who wants to come here. It’s home for me. I’ve lived on campus for three years and I love it.”

Alicia Lurcke-Daley Psychology Major Senior

“I certainly think Montclair is starting to think more about future students. We just got rid of the policy that you need a certain SAT score to get into the school. I’m not really sure if that’s totally helpful to future students or not, but it really think it can go either way, especially depending on if you come in with an underdeveloped major or if you’re changing your major from something you were freshmen year. I was graphic design freshman year and now I’ve switched four times since then and they were a little bit unhelpful. It’s hard to explain. I really think it can go either way when it comes to that.”

W il li am Baunsc hel Commercial Real Estate Senior

“I think that this college spends most of its time on future students because it’s based on the amount of construction there is for future buildings such as the business building and the science building. The business building we have now is obviously not up to par with the building they are building next to it, which looks very good.”

Renee Callahan Undeclared Freshman

“I think they spend more time helping current students because they’re very helpful with the amount of money and the people here helping each student deal with what they need to succeed.”

Columnists Evaluate UN Campaign

The launch of UN Women’s new campaign, “HeForShe,” has sparked a thoughtful response from the public and possibly continues to make its rounds through social media. Upon watching newly-appointed UN Women Global Goodwill Ambassador and actress Emma Watson deliver her powerful impassioned speech, it is clear to me that the fight for gender equality is coming to evolve into a movement of gender equalization for both sexes.

Upon watching her speech, I became surprised to realize that the term “feminism” itself is not even acknowledged as a term. “Feminism by definition is the belief that men and women should have equal rights and opportunities, politically and economically.” It is sad to say that no country has achieved this goal yet.

Emma encouraged us that look at the issue from all genders. She also stressed that the issue cannot be changed if only women are respected or feel welcomed to participate in the movement.

During HeForShe’s special event at the United Nations New York headquarters, Watson began her address by addressing the boys in the world, asking them to join the movement for gender equality.

“Can we afford to change the world,” she asked, “What is the first campaign of its kind in the UN.” Watson said, “We want to try and galvanize men and boys as possible to be advocates for change.”

In her speech, Watson passed on the message of gender stereotyping and how it affects women and men. She underlines that it is a movement for gender inequality.

Watson continues by describing how men are not free from the confines of gender stereotyping. She states, “You and I, both women and men, are systematically oppressed. Where we come from, the way we are, the way we act is dictated by what we are supposed to be.”

Over the decades, the idea of feminism has carried with it this anger and so often men are the targets. I think the most essential goal with the HeForShe movement is the push for solidarity between men and women. Watson touches on feminism and stereotypes, how they can sometimes bring connotations of “man-hating” or “women-hating” practices. This is something that we have to do as women and men to come into the movement.

When you look at these issues, I believe this rings true today. The HeForShe campaign is worthy of our attention and support. It only takes a small way is to simply stop fining each other by what we do, how we think, what we call others. How many times have we stopped to ask ourselves about their feelings, where they are nurtured in a forceful, uncomplimented way, and in no way am I trying to diminish the significance of the women’s right outrage of the women’s rights movement too. It is not a movement by women that supports only women’s rights. It is not a movement by women that seeks to bring about a “real man should?”

Only when this fact is realized, when the fight for equality is the fight for gender equality; only then, when Watson states, “we stop defining gender equality only for the United Nation’s tacit agreement of “what constitutes male success.” Only then, when Watson says, “Men don’t have the benefits of an equal society.”

Wonderful Humans "Edge of the Night"

Established in 2011, Wonderful Humans is a duo comprised of the couple of Brian Craig and Amanda Cefal. Wonderful Humans started as a writing project, but turned into a band when the two met producer Dylan Scott. This song will probably take you back to summer and all its endless nights.

Gotye "Heart’s a Mess"

Gotye is an Australian pop singer that started gaining popularity in his home country in 2006, until 2011 when he released "Somebody That I Used to Know". This song is similar with its use of a unique voice, which is comparable to Gotye’s own with the Sheriff. "Heart’s a Mess" is a great song that make you smile, which makes it great.

Broods "Never Gonna Change"

Broods is made up of singer Georgia Nott and multi-instrumentalist older brother Caleb Nott. Growing up in New Zealand, the duo got famous through their hit "Bridge". Their songs have a moody vibe with Georgia’s unique voice, which is comparable to Lorde. If you’re a fan of Lorde, you’ll probably really like Broods.

Pharrel Williams & Justin Timberlake "Brand New"

Let’s start off by establishing this as the best song to get you ready in the morning. These two are a great pair; they’ve actually collaborated before in Gotye’s "Somebody That I Used to Know". This song has Pharrell’s typical theme of songs that make you smile, which makes it great.

"The Great Gatsby"

Here’s another pop song that will remind you about the summer that we just said goodbye to. The Knocks are a DJ duo, Ben Bitterman and James Patterson, who remixed songs like “I Kissed A Girl” by Katy Perry and “Closer” by Tegan and Sarah. The Guardian has described The Knocks as “sleekly between David Guetta and Daft Punk”. If you’re a fan of those artists, you should definitely check them out.

‘Sons of Anarchy’ Review

Joseph Lees
Staff Writer

In true Sons of Anarchy fashion, things are beginning to fall apart in Charming. Though carrying a nice amount of tension, the season’s remaining episodes haven’t really kicked started the season into gear. Lo’ and behold, “Poor Little Lamb” looks to be the first domino. This episode featured a lot of action and fine character beats, as I’m hoping this theme is maintained throughout the remainder of the season.

Not that the show has been lacking quality, but since the start of Season 5, it hasn’t really felt like the final season of a show like this. The increased run time of the episodes felt a bit fruitless, but with this episode I welcomed it. A lot went down and, again, it’s going to be very interesting down the road with SAMCRO. It was nice that this epi-sode took a break from the monster unleashed in Jax and took time to focus on aspects of the other characters. Within SAMCRO, seeing Tig and Venus Van Dam together again was actually a good break from all the action. It isn’t treated with comic relief but rather with some nice development for Tig’s character. Walton Goggins’ portrayal of Venus is always such a terrific supplement to any episode he is featured in. Chibs is also set-ing up a little romance of his own with the Sheriff, which I imagine will grow with future episodes.

On the other side of Charming, Juice is beginning to deteriorate and it’s quite apparent that both Juice and Gemma are moving very cautiously. Juice has a major part to play this season, and I’m hoping more steps are made sooner rather than later for him to really step up.

For the first time this season, I’m genuinely looking forward to next Tuesday to see what happens next. The momentum is there; it just needs to keep going and rising in order to have the great last season that so many fans, including myself, are anticipating. The war has hit Charming, and now it’s all about what SAMCRO is going to do next and when the truth is going to really unfold for the MC.

Walk the Moon "Shut Up and Dance"

This song sounds a lot like The Killers; if you’re a fan of them, you’ll sure to like this one. Walk the Moon was established all right and is made up of four members from Ohio. According to MTV, before every performance they “attack, det and smear their faces in paint.” This song is catchy; it really will make you want to shut up and dance. Take a break from your studies and have yourself a little dance party.

The Knocks (ft. Powers) "Classic"

The Guardian has described The Knocks as “sleekly between David Guetta and Daft Punk”. If you’re a fan of those artists, you should definitely check them out.
Perhaps the most shocking of movie announcements this year is the trailer for Tim Burton’s Big Eyes. This film tells the true story of painter Margaret Keane, whom gained success by having her husband market the paintings as his own. The film stars Amy Adams as Margaret Keane and Christoph Waltz as her husband, leaving viewers wondering en masse, “Where’s Helena? Where’s Johnny?!” However, if this film is a step back towards the days of Edward Scissorhands, perhaps working backwards is the right direction for Tim Burton.

Weekend Update: Pete Davidson Talks Business | Saturday Night Live

Saturday Night Live newcomer Pete Davidson might not be of age, but he certainly does not shy away from discussing adult topics. As the 20-year-old Staten Island native made his SNL debut this weekend, he wasn’t afraid to talk about what he would do for a million dollars. Another thing he was not afraid to reveal was that he was in high school just three years ago. If you’re ever feeling bad about the state of your life, just think about the fact that this young comedian is probably around your age or younger and is doing way cooler things than you are. It may make you feel worse, but watching some of his hilarious stand-up will cheer you up.

David Letterman: Stupid Human Tricks 9/26/14

On the Sept. 26 episode of the Late Show with David Letterman, “Stupid Human Tricks” was one of the featured bits. The segment introduced three individuals with, well, exactly what it says on the tin — stupidly weird but oddly awesome tricks. The first is a man who can play “Twinkle Twinkle Little Star” on the… razors. Yup, disposable shaving razors. The second act is a woman who can stick grapes up her nose using her tongue, which looks just as pleasant as it sounds. The final act (someone this writer actually had the pleasure of growing up with), which perhaps is the most impressive of all three, balances a step ladder off of his chin. The human race is truly an amazing specimen.

Big Eyes - official trailer #1

Perhaps the most shocking announcement this year is the trailer for Tim Burton’s Big Eyes. This film tells the true story of painter Margaret Keane, whom gained success by having her husband market the paintings as his own. The film stars Amy Adams as Margaret Keane and Christoph Waltz as her husband, leaving viewers wondering en masse, “Where’s Helena? Over the last decade, music festivals have become popular events. Such festivals as Coachella and the Governors Ball have massive crowds and social interaction. Many bands have retired to make way for new and upcoming talent. Music festivals like Coachella and Lollapalooza have featured many big names including Taylor Swift, Taylor Swift, Taylor Swift, and Taylor Swift. The festival’s lineup is usually announced towards the end of January and is celebrated in April. The first Rock in Rio was held in 1985 and is celebrating its 30th anniversary. To commemorate this milestone, the festival that just reached a milestone is bringing music to the masses. The fun doesn’t stop with the performances. There will be multiple stages set up in a giant arena capable of holding up to 80,000 people. A giant Ferris wheel, amusement park rides, street vendors and a 400-foot zip line that goes above the main stage will surely keep festival-goers entertained when their favorite artist isn’t performing.

The press conference also unveiled a commercial featuring actor Donald Sutherland getting tickets for the festival. Pre-ordered tickets for general admission and VIP passes went live on October 2, 2014. The Montclarion newspaper published the first press release for the music festival.

‘Gotham’: Best Hour of the Knight

Nicholas Da Silva
Staff Writer

Going into the second episode of Fox’s Gotham, I won’t lie, I was a little concerned. I didn’t know how they were going to reach Program approaching a certain sense of pacing. However, there’s not a moment of filler in the entire episode. The script is full of fantastic interplay between all of the characters, especially between Detecitves Gordon and Bullock. The witty, filled script also contains some excellent moments of dark comedy that serve as welcome relief from the dramatically heavy plot and give this show a legitimate feeling of fun. “Mondays Are Going to Kick Ass!”

‘Tusk’: Protege of the Human Centipede

Nick Felezola
Contributing Writer

Tusk, the latest work from writer/director Kevin Smith (Clerks, Chasing Amy, Red State), is a bizarre film. It’s worth a rental for that reason alone. You’ve never seen anything quite like it. Unfortunately, oddity doesn’t exactly equal quality.

Justin Long stars as Wallace Bryton, who co-hosts the mean-spirited “Not-See Party” podcast with his friend, Teddy Craft (Haley Joel Osment). In each episode, the two find embarrassing videos online and ridicule the people involved with them. The film opens with the two mocking the latest Internet celebrity, the Kill Bill Kid. Shortly after, Wallace travels to Canada to attempt to interview the viral star. Once he discovers that he can’t, he decides to stay in the country for an extra day to find another person to interview. He stumbles upon an ad at a bar posted by Howard Howe (Michael Parks) offering a free place to stay and interesting stories to hear. With his interests piqued, Wallace makes the trip up to Howard’s remote home. However, Wallace soon learns that Howard has more sinister plans in mind: he wants to transform Wallace into a walrus.

Back in the United States, Ally Leon (Genesis Rodriguez), Wallace’s girlfriend, grows increasingly worried as days go by without any contact with Wallace. Eventually, she and Teddy begin to devise a rescue mission. The two travel to Canada recruit the Inspector Clouseau-inspired ex-cop Guy Lapointe (Johnny Depp) to help them track down Wallace.

It’s a shame because in spite of these problems, Tusk manages to do several things very well. Smith has never seemed more confident behind the camera. Instead of utilizing the simple point-and-shoot style that marked his earlier works, he moves the camera to ratchet up the tension. He even manages to wring impressive performances out of Long and Rodriguez. Parks is as great as ever and delivers a harrowing performance that manages to make his character into more than just a cartoonish villain.

If nothing else, Tusk shows that Smith is growing as a director. He is clearly pushing himself out of his raunchy, minimalist comfort zone into uncharted territory. All we can do is hope that he aligns the pieces better next time.

MSU also opened the National Field Hockey Coaches Association Division III poll. The Red Hawks are 9-6-2 this season and lost one over the past two contests.

MSU’s next game is Oct. 1 in Hoboken against the Stevens Institute of Technology Ducks at 6 p.m. (Results were not available at press time). Montclair State will also write another chapter in a storied rivalry on Oct. 3 at 7 p.m. in Wayne versus the William Paterson Florinators. Montclair State is currently tied for second place with the Rowan Profs at 1-0 in conference games. TCNJ continues their strong field hockey season with one loss overall and 2-0 in the conference.

Week Four saw a wide variety of action ranging from the Giants dismantling the Washington Redskins on Thursday to Kansas City's unexpected victory over the Patriots. On Sunday night, the Dallas Cowboys made a huge statement with strong offensive play against the New Orleans Saints. Tonight like the 49ers and Packers may have earned the season with their respective wins as well. The Buccaneers also pulled off a huge upset against the Steelers in Pittsburgh.

The Red Hawks dropped the four-set affair at the Bradley Center. The Red Hawks currently lead in six matches and 2-0 in conference matches. Richard Stockton continues to dominate with an overall record of 18-3 and 4-0 in the NJAC as they look for yet another conference title. Rowan set in second place with an overall record of 16.4-3.3 and Kenton set in third with a 1-10 overall record. Their conference record, which ultimately is the deciding factor, is 2-1. William Paterson is fourth with a 12-2 (2-2) record. Rutgers-Newark rounds out the teams in fifth place with a 10-5 (2-2) record. The Red Hawks will have a little bit more time in between matches with only two up coming weeks compared to the five they took part in this past week. They will face Hunter College on Thursday, Oct. 2 at home.

Montclair State State's final match of last week was against #5 ranked Middlebury College at the neutral site of Albany, N.Y. on Sept. 28. MSU put more than they bargained for and fell to the Panthers 9-1. Their loss goal came in the first half when Moglino got the assist on a goal converted by Johnston.

Starting junior goalkeeper Roberta Brezale finished with eight saves for Montclair State during the match. The loss snapped a five-game winning streak for MSU. Middlebury outscored the Red Hawks 26-7.

Johnston was selected as the NJAC Offensive Player of the Week on Monday. She had three goals for Montclair State last week during their two games. Johnston is sixth in the conference in game-winning scores with one overall and 2-0 in the conference.

Montclair State's lead back to 2-0.

After Kean got on the board, Johnston stepped up and found the back of the net to restore Montclair State's lead back to two goals. Less than two minutes into the second half, Johnston scored, putting MSU up 4-1. Moglino capped the onslaught with a tally of her own to give the Red Hawks a 5-1 win.

Montclair State attempted 11 more shots than the Cougars (21-10). Most of those 10 shots (7) came in the second half.

Red Hawk Round Up

Football
Montclair State’s football team had their bye week last week as they will prepare to face off against William Paterson in Wayne, N.J. It will be Montclair State’s first NJAC game of the season and will look to use the momentum they gained from their win against Division II Lincoln University on Sept. 20 at Sprague Field.

Montclair State is currently tied for second with William Paterson in the NJAC standings. Morrisville State played last week in their first NJAC game and defeated SUNY-Cortland. As the only teams to play an NJAC game to this point, they are in first and last, respectively.

Mens Soccer
The Red Hawks took on New Jersey City University at Sprague Field on Sept. 24 and won 2-0 on goals from Maxx Wurzbinder and Jake Seaman to bounce back from their loss to Messiah College and improve their record to 5-3 overall, 1-0 in the NJAC and 2-2 at home.

The Red Hawks then traveled to Brooklyn to take on Brooklyn College. Montclair State cruised to an 8-1 victory. They will travel to William Paterson on Oct. 1 and play at MSU Soccer Park on Oct. 4 against TCNJ, both NJAC conference contests.

Ten years ago, the 2004 womens soccer team took on Richard Stockton at MSU Soccer Park on Sept. 27, 11 players from the 2004 team made their way to the middle of the field for a half-time ceremony. The alumni athletes received recognition as the local speaker called each one of their names. They clapped and cheered each other on as they lined up for a typical pregame announcement.

The current womens soccer team took on Richard Stockton at MSU Soccer Park on Sept. 27, 11 players from the 2004 team made their way to the middle of the field for a half-time ceremony. The alumni athletes received recognition as the local speaker called each one of their names. They clapped and cheered each other on as they lined up for a typical pregame announcement.

Although the current talent behind Montclair State's womens soccer team no longer comes as a surprise, Montclair State has proved themselves to be one of the best in Divi- sion III womens soccer.

During the mid-2000s, the womens soccer team saw a series of mediocre seasons. The team had a losing or tying record in ’05, ’10, ’15 and ’20 and only saw one trip to the NCAA tournament in the seven-year span of 2005-2011. However, the group of athletes from 2004 made it so they would always be remembered.

The Red Hawks took on TCNJ in Ewing, N.J. on Nov. 6, 2004 for the NJAC conference championship game. They went into the game as underdogs. TCNJ had won every single NJAC championship since the tournament was established in 1999, including a 1-0 win over MSU the previous year. However, the Red Hawks would soon decide five straight wins in a row were too much for TCNJ.

Montclair State held TCNJ to a scoreless regulation time before going into overtime. After another 30 minutes of scoreless play, penalty kicks would ultimately decide the fate of the no. 1 TCNJ and no. 2 (MSU) seeded NJAC teams.

TCNJ started off the first round of penalty kicks with a shot that reflected off the post, giving MSU a 1-0 lead after Red Hawk Shirah Oden netted her PK attempt. MSU goalkeeper Kristin Kublansky came up big in the second round of PKs by stop- ping the Lions next soaring attempt. Montclair State for- ward Kelly Dutko, capitalized off her teammates’ saves and put the ball away, giving MSU the 2-0 edge over the Lions.

TCNJ would finally find their way past Kublansky during the third round of penalty kicks, but it would not be for long. Montclair State’s Jessica Amendola scored MSU’s third goal of PKs, learning TCNJ’s Dana Diermus in charge of the Lions’ fate. As of out of a movie, Kublansky blocked Di- ermus’ shot attempt and of- filiated Montclair’s first NJAC title with a 3-1 shootout over The College of New Jersey.

Along with on-field honors and recognition, the 2014 womens soccer team has left behind the 2004 womens soccer team has left behind MSU Sports.

Volleyball Fights Hard Over Weekend

The Lady Red Hawks traveled to Williamsport, P.A. to participate in the Lycoming Tip-Off Classic at Lycoming College. They were fresh off their first New Jersey Ath- letic Conference win against Rowan and improved their conference record to 1-1.

The first match took place on Friday, Sept. 26 at 4 p.m. against the hosts. The Red Hawks, in what was offi- cially a road match rather than a neutral venue match, dropped three sets and only won one. Despite Montclair State winning the first set 25-17, Lycoming rallied off sets of 25-22, 25-19 and 25- 23 to improve to 11-7. Montclair State fell to 12-4 with the loss despite a strong effort from Courtney Matlock. Mat- lock posted 36 kills, four aces, and three blocks while Hayley Merrill posted 30 kills and two blocks. With the loss, Mont- clar State fell to 2-3 in road matches for the season.

The Red Hawks came right back and played their second match about two hours later against Penn College. Mont- clar State won in straight sets of 25-14, 26-24 and 28-26. Courtney Matlock put togeth- er another very strong match with 16 kills and one block. Kimberley Matlock and Ange- lina Campo combined for 36 as- sists with the former earning 21 of them. Lily Scannell and Reais Ginger combining for 30 digs with the former also earning 21 of them. This win put the Red Hawks neutral venue record at 7-0 for this season.

Montclair State opened Sunday’s action with a match against St. Mary’s of Mary- land. The Red Hawks dropped the first set 25-15, but came back and won the second set 25-20. St. Mary’s closed out the match with sets of 25-14 and 25-18 to take the match. St. Mary’s improved to 7-0 with the win while Montclair State dropped to 13-5. Court- ney Matlock led the team once again in the kills-Assists-Blocks category with 12-2-1 while Courtney LePore posted an 8-0-0 effort. Angela Campo earned 30 of the team’s 37 digs with the former also earn-
