Cory in the House

Sen. Booker posed for pictures with students at his event on Friday night.

Montclair State University students had a conversation with Senator Cory Booker on political and social issues including the rising cost of college tuition, the legalization of recreational marijuana and the disproportionately high rates of minority in our prison system.

Sen. Booker came to Montclair State University wanting to hear student voices; he wanted to know what students had to say and answer any questions or concerns they had. He talked in detail about education and democracy and gave his own opinion on our country's biggest issues.

Booker hosted this discussion on Feb. 27 in MacHughes 8 at 8 p.m. The event lasted until 10:30 p.m. when pizzas, wings and other snacks were served. Even though the event was centered on the senator, Booker made sure to engage with the students and answer their questions while making sure to pass along the issues he is passionate about.

One of the issues that Booker and the students were both passionate about was the cost of education. "The issue that I want to talk about today is a horrible trend we have in this country that is undermining the very idea of our democracy. This country used to lead the globe in higher education. Now we're going to have to go through the town," server Melinda Alberto said. "But you be [open] the next day," server Anthony Tucci said. As a result, the city had to go through the town. The restaurant could make repairs. After the electrical and plumbing systems were fixed, they needed to pass multiple health and safety inspections.

"We thought it was going to be open the next day," server Anthony Tucci said. "You have to go through the town, and you can't do that. There are procedures that you have to follow." After the electrical and plumbing systems were fixed, they needed to pass multiple health and safety inspections. An event hosted by the organizations Students for Justice in Palestine extended an email invitation to other student organizations to join them at their event, The Activist and Palestine extended an email invitation to other student organizations to join them at their event, The Activist and organizers was to give students an understanding of how Zionism can cause oppression and apartheid.

MSU Hillel, the Jewish Student Union, was not happy with the event. In response to the upcoming event, the MSU Hillel E-board sent an email to all organizations at the university to voice their complaint. As a result, the city had to go through the town. Divas for Diversity Rock the Runway

LGBTQ Center welcomes Divas for Diversity to Montclair State campus.

Michael Klein
Editorial Writer

Celebrating the LGBTQ Community is not only important, it is a necessary part of advocacy and support for the LGBTQ Students on this campus. On Monday, March 2, the LGBTQ Center in conjunction with Student Development and Campus Life and the Center for Student Involvement were able to bring two very exciting and talented guests to the Montclair State University Campus– drag queen superstars Bebe Zahara Benet and Sharon Needles.

These two queens were featured on the first season of the reality TV show RuPaul’s Drag Race, where Benet came in first place. Sharon did not, but she did go on to a very successful run on the spin-off series RuPaul’s All Star Drag Race.

Over 100 students arrived at the seventh floor University Conference Room to see the drag queens perform a lip-sync routine as well as speak about their own life experiences and how they came to become drag performers. They spoke about their time on RuPaul’s Drag Race, and gave some insight to fans about the behind-the-scenes operations of the show. Students were then able to ask any questions they wanted in a Q&A setting, to which the queens happily answered questions ranging from drag and drag culture, to coming out, to their personal inspirations and favorite celebrities.

Ryan Levine, a long-time fan of the TV show and a senior film major at Montclair State, was first in line at the door and explained Boycott Magazine, the SCA Secretary for LGBTQ Affairs, as well as a Lavender Leader at the LGBTQ Center. “We’re living in a time of great progress for the queer community—more than ever before in history. But that doesn’t mean we can rest or let the gains we’ve made not erode the violence, discrimination, and hatred that LGBTQ individuals continue to endure. This only serves to emphasize the importance of extending this community as a whole, and uniqueness within it.”

Students participate in writing thank-you notes to alumni donors.

For the second year in a row, Montclair State participated in its own adaptation of Student Philanthropy Day, a national day of giving that is sponsored by the Council for Advancement and Support of Education’s Affiliated Student Development Program initiative to promote the understandings of philanthropy and increase student engagement on campuses.

Today’s day of thanks is to educate students about the importance of philanthropy and to say “thank you” to our alumni donors for their support,” said Stacy Albano, Assistant Director of Development and Alumni Relations. “It is a day to create awareness about how donations make a direct impact so they too will become engaged students across campus as part of the new building on the hill that will surround it; in other words, the new technical facility will remain intact during the construction period and act as a familiar entity to students who will stay long enough to see the finished product.

In essence, the new building connecting Montclair Hall and Life Hall will become the primary academic center for the School of Communication and Media as well as the College of the Arts. Altogether, the addition will consume 65,000 square feet of campus ground and will become home to all of the various majors within the schools themselves.

Though the bulk of the construction has not yet begun, there are high hopes for the future of the facility that will be sure to draw the attention of students across campus. As part of the plans for the space, the current television studios in Life Hall will be upgraded to fit with the rest of the building while the dance and acting studios are transformed into a film studio and a 4K television broadcasting studio, respectively.

“[Our facility] will be the only one in North America; not just college, but of anything,” said Gurskis. “The television networks won’t have this; other universities won’t have it; Montclair State will be the only one in North America that has this.” The 40,000-square-foot, two floor newsroom will feature walls of glass holding production spaces, a post-production editing studio, an audio studio and recording rooms for group collaboration; in addition, four control rooms will be created.

The addition will contain a 40,000 square foot, 4K newsroom.

“I was out of work for three days,” she said. “[Barattucci] even called me the day after, saying they were trying to fix it, but waiting for inspections.”

Tips for the Perfect Winter Outfit

Jessica Mahmoud
Staff Writer

Unfortunately, even as we head into March, the temperatures are still dropping, which may be making fashion a little more difficult to consider on your way to class. But even though we call it “spring” break, unless you’re going to a warmer state, you’ll probably still be wearing layers. It may be hard to stay fashionable when all you want to do is stay under the covers, but it certainly is possible. When one makes the often bold decision to wear a skirt, dress or even shorts in the low temperatures, there are a few things to decide on. In order to stay warm, in addition to adding a sweater, knee high socks are great. However, knee-high boots can keep you warm just as well. There are so many styles out there from heels to buckles or zippers on the outside. They are a great staple for this weather. Here are some ideas of how to look stylish and still be warm.

Add an accessory

Clothes: H&M
Boots: Macy’s
Necklace: Forever 21
Sunglasses and shoes: Topshop

Last week was Montclair State’s Body Acceptance Week as well as National Eating Disorder Awareness Week. What’s your favorite body positive quote?

“The best part of beauty is that which no picture can express.” — Francis Bacon

Small subtle accessories such as sunglasses, fun necklaces and unique earrings can really make a simple outfit a lot more fashionable and unique. Sunglasses are a fun piece to add, even though there’s still snow on the ground. The sun has been coming out these days, making your favorite sunglasses an acceptable addition. Wearing them indoors makes them act similarly to a necklace, plus it keeps them from breaking in your bag.

Borrowed from the boys

Dress, socks and plaid top around waist: H&M
Jacket: St. John’s Bay (brand)
Boots: Doc Martens

How do you feel about hashtags raising awareness? “I like them,” I think, a lot of people think they’re going out of style, but I still use them. They’re great for promoting things and starting trends. That’s how I found out about the Ice Bucket Challenge. You can even create your own tag. Although it does not say it in the caption, the jacket actually belongs to the model’s boyfriend. The trend of wearing men’s clothing, which includes coats, hats and even graphic tees is popular now. Even though the woman’s department has similar pieces, men’s clothing is always a little different. If possible, try borrowing a piece from your boyfriend, brother or just one of your guy friends. It’s sure to spice up any outfit.

Don’t sacrifice the skater skirt and crop top trend

Skirt: H&M
Cardigan and headband: Forever 21
Boots: Pacsun

Right:
Top: Cotton On
Skirt and cardigan: H&M
Boots: Macy’s

Favorite part of the spring semester?

Left: “How the weather will be nicer for longer.”
Right: “Definitely having more friends and getting into a friend group.”

Everyone knows this trend and it was very popular when the weather was nice, but don’t stop rocking it because the temperature had been single digits! Just do what these lovely ladies did and add a thick, warm cardigan, tights and boots. To stay extra warm, make the look more casual by adding a beanie. Finally, you can always opt for the well-known trick of layering thigh-high socks under your tights.

Thrift it

Sweater: thrifted
Leather jacket: Forever 21
Necklace: gift
Boots: Wet Seal

What’s your best tip for living a healthy lifestyle? “Love yourself and don’t give a f about what others think.”

Every once in a while while blogging, I meet someone who thrashed their clothes. It’s always nice to realize that someone’s thrashed piece looked like it came out of Forever 21, this is because it might have, although you don’t have full price. Thrifting pricer pieces such as sweaters are a great way to save money and find unique additions to your wardrobe. Next time you need something to do and you have a few hours, check out the nearby thrift store.

Go for a fun statement top

Clothes and shoes: Forever 21
How do you feel about hashtags raising awareness? “It’s a good way; when you click on them, you see a bunch of other posts.”

If you’re in the mood for a more casual day, try pairing a statement top with jeans or leggings. A top with a fun pattern, a sequin-like texture or unique cut is perfect. Pull on a cardigan and jacket for an instant outfit. Try finding a top that is warm enough so you don’t have to keep the cardigan on all day, especially if it has a fun back; for example, the top in this photo would have clashed with a cardigan on top because the sleeves are slightly different than the rest of it.

Stay warm with knee-high boots

Top: Macy’s
Skirt: Pacsun’s Closet
Tights: gift
Boots: TJ Maxx

What’s another national week you enjoy or wish existed and why?

“National banned book week: for the books that have been challenged or removed from libraries. It focuses on analyzing freedom of access to knowledge. I wish you wouldn’t have anyone telling you that you can’t. Last year, it was in September, so it’ll be then this year.”

Dr. Gilbert’s guest speaker inspires students

Who coined the terrible phrase, “no pain, no gain?” How about the equally negative statement usually ending with the question, “Even if it’s true, is that the right thing?”

A number of people who excessively exercises and/or plays through pain in sports practices and/or activities. In recent weeks, two professional local athletes have experienced the consequences of training and/or playing through the body’s warning signals of soreness and pain. The New York Knicks’ Carmelo Anthony played with a high resting heartbeat, continual being fatigued, and stiffness from overdoing it on the court for years. Anthony’s physical frame, has been a professional (e.g. feeling guilty if missing a compulsive need to exercise) and/or poor dietary habits. The chronic soreness is often the result of repetitive and excessive movement of a joint or body part (e.g. muscle, joint) as in swinging a bat, kicking a football, need to work out or doing the same weight training exercises each workout. Stop and see a health professional before continuing exercising or playing sports; a period of rest could be indicated.

Dr. Gilbert (center) smashing two concrete blocks on Jones's stomach (bottom center). The following year, Jones sought Dr. Gilbert to improve his physical condition. In 1990, at the age of 39, Jones found an interest in strength athletics. During a visit to his friends at the Jerseym Shore, Jones met two strongmen, a father and a son from California, who invited him to one of their performances to break his own stack of bricks. "Faith and fear cannot live in the same body at the same time," said Jones about what he thought while breaking the stack of bricks.

Over the years, I’ve spoken to Dr. Gilbert and have presented in his class. So, I thought I was due for another presentation. I went to his class to present to adults. That same year, Jones decided it was time to present to adults. That same year, Jones began writing his book Top Secrets of Success… 4 Kids, which was published in 1999. In 2007, Jones started a new way of training for “shapes deeper into the body, particularly in regards to body healing. This shifted his presentation to focus more on body healing.

Stress daily. Minor muscle and joint soreness and stiffness from overdoing it can lead to soreness and minimize gains. Inadequate amounts of anti-inflammatory water and water-based foods without taking a break.\n
Overcoming Overtraining Tips
• Rest the temptation that you can’t break through it entirely but it will clear the way for you.
• Jones and Dr. Gilbert’s relationship began when Jones was returning for his second bachelor’s degree in Education/Health. He was also one of Dr. Gilbert’s students at MBG.

Although Jones is physically in shape, during his youth, he often suffered from allergies and severe asthma. At the age of 21, Jones realized that he was in poor physical shape and decided to join a gym and improve his physical condition.

n Thursday, Feb. 26, the Class IV Student Government Association organization Students for Justice in Palestine extended an email invitation to other student organizations to join them at their event, The Activist and the Professor, which took place on Monday, March 2. The Class II organization Students for Justice in Palestine sent an email in response, expressing their concerns that the event, which allowed panelists to discuss non-mainstream perspectives on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, could possibly jeopardize Montclair State University’s collective initiative for interfaith peace and that the panel possibly discriminated against Jewish interests by not including the mainstream point-of-view. They also announced plans for a multi-organization coalition to prevent this kind of discrimination from occurring again.

For the next few days, SGA organizations and individual students were in debate over the two emails, considering whether SJP should hold the event and whether Hillel should have questioned their upcoming event. In the end, Hillel retracted many of their statements, claiming that they were speaking out of their concern for safety and maintaining interfaith connections across campus.

Hillel has announced that they may hold an event that presents the mainstream perspective in response to SJP’s event and could possibly hold a joint event with SJP to discuss the issue further at a later point in time. They also dropped the idea to start a coalition to prevent discrimination and have rethought the idea that SJP could have been discriminating against them by not including their perspective in their event.

This is a touchy issue for many people, as the Israeli-Palestinian conflict is an intensely personal and emotional issue, especially for these two groups. We believe that Hillel has effectively reasoned the situation and acted well by sending representatives to The Activist and the Professor, now eliminating any plans for a coalition against discrimination. They have taken the time to consider the situation from all sides and have revoked some of their previous concerns, which they now realize were largely unfounded.

With that being said, Hillel’s initial charge of discrimination is a rather serious accusation and thus should be treated seriously as part of a larger issue: whether SGA organizations should have political stances.

One of Hillel’s major concerns was that SJP was taking a strong political stance that conflicted with combined peace efforts at the university. Yet, SJP is not wrong to take a political stance, as several SGA organizations in the past, including Young Americans for Liberty, Students for a Democratic Society, and even current clubs such as Femvolution are all politically-based organizations who have had political events without meeting opposition, although obviously not everyone on campus agrees with their stances on current affairs and political issues. SJP, a non-religious organization, is likewise entitled to holding politically-based events, just as every SGA organization is, whether or not other organizations on campus agree with their political stances.

Student organizations have the right to hold politically-based events without all varying opinions on the matter being present. Groups across campus have the ability to exercise their freedom of speech and their freedom to cosponsor with whatever organizations they choose. Questioning these rights shows a fundamental misunderstanding of the American Bill of Rights and the SGA constitution.

Disagreeing with a political stance or feeling excluded from a political discussion that is open to the entire student body and staff is not grounds for acrimony. The American Bill of Rights shows a fundamental misunderstanding of the American Bill of Rights and the SGA constitution.

In order to have freedom of speech, you have to accept that this right is extended to everyone, including those with whom you disagree. In order to utilize your right, you must allow others to use it as well and if organizations of the SGA follow this principle, then future misunderstandings can likely be avoided.

We polled 61 students at random in the Student Center, asking them to weigh in on the question of the hour: What color is the dress?

This pay increase is really their workers’ wages as well. After the world’s largest retailer, Walmart, announced a raise for their employees, other companies followed. Walmart’s wage increase to $10 an hour for one-third of their employees has inspired T.J. Maxx to raise their workers’ wages as well.

Why we criticize Rancic’s comments yet laugh at offensive jokes

The controversial comments triggered a wide range of backlash towards Rancic across social media. Many celebrities came out to support Zendaya, including Kelly Osbourne and Rancic, showcases their opinions on celebrity fashions. During their Academy Awards special, Rancic commented on Zendaya’s dreadlocked hair: “I feel like she smells like patchouli oil...or hot oil for my hair.” Zendaya herself, would that people still find the comment offensive or do certain offensive comments be treated when is wrong, wrong? Should inappropriate. With this case, a comedian would get a pass, but someone whose job it is to comment on fashion or talk to people on the red carpet has no exceptions, the lines can easily be blurred and distasteful comments can easily be repeated while the commentator would never be held accountable. Additionally, when not held accountable, the comments would easily be repeated and change would be harder to attain.

As a result of the controversy, students here at Montclair State are sounding off with their complaints and share the same sentiment. “Rancic’s job is to comment on fashion; that’s all she should have done,” said Silas Kezengwa, a Television and Digital Media major, is in his first year as an Assistant Opinion Editor for The Montclarion. “It’s our job to spot our actions. It’s our job to stop this from happening, not the commentator. She should have done it.”

In the meantime, Rancic remains on “Fashion Police” while her co-panelist Kelly Osbourne has recently quit the show as a result of the controversy. The show remains in production as it continues to find its way after the death of its original host and noted comedian, Joan Rivers. The show is also in the process of replacing Osbourne, with likely reported candidates to include NeNe Leakes, Khléa Karashan and Zendaya herself.

They may be called Nobody Yet, but it’s best to take that name with a grain of salt. This Philadelphia alternative, pop-punk-influenced band has already made a name for itself by winning the Battle of the Bands competition, which allowed the band to perform at the final show at Hollis Woods Church in Queens to play Flannel Fest, a night of hardcore, pop-punk and acoustic music. We had a chance to sit down with the band after their set and learned from drummer Matt Zavorski, guitarist Nicholas Da Silva, bassist Matt and keyboardist Joe Humeas about their journey from Craigslist looking for members and how they became a band. JH: We started looking for guys on Facebook, asking if we were still looking for a drummer. They were like, “What are you doing, dude?” KS: We really liked them, but we didn’t want to be in our band anymore. “Sorry, you guys suck.” JH: Then, we met [Kevin] and you at a show in Jersey and then he thought his band sucked. KS: I messaged you on Facebook in much the same way, but he didn’t think my band was good. KS: Who are your biggest musical influences? JH: I’m everywhere, but my parents were Jewish immigrants from Iziaslav, Poland and began method acting. He followed in the footsteps of fellow actor Marlon Brando and began method acting. The torch to the new generation of actors who were taking on TV shows like The Sopranos and Friends in the late 1990s was passed in 1953, he spent part of his service with the Army Special Forces in Vietnam. He talent in just about every respect, and he was honored with an Emmy nomination for Nimoy. In 1987, Nimoy’s third and final Star Trek movie, Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home, was released. We need some confetti out there and how it was? KS: I think about doing that? JH: We were one of the tops on the day, like my sister. Eventually, they will likely return sometime in March and find out more information about shows on their Facebook, Instagram, Twitter or upcoming website. Nobody Yet is determined to become somebody soon, as their vibrant performances and colorful, energetic songs prove. You can listen to them on nobodyyet.bandcamp.com and find out more information about shows on their Facebook, Instagram, Twitter or upcoming website.

For those who don’t know, method acting is the process in which an actor stays completely in character during their involvement in a play, movie or television show. Even if they’re not actually working, method actors never break character, which is why it’s a rarity for actors to try this technique. Even when Nimoy had enlisted in the United States Army Reserve in 1953, he spent part of his service with the Army Special Forces in Vietnam. In the scene, Kirk is delivering a eulogy for his fallen ally Spock, who was killed in action during the battle of the Enterprise. Nimoy was cast as Spock, the half-human, half-Vulcan hybrid known for being driven by logic and a great-grandchild. Yet, time should not be spent lazing about. “Oddly, my friend can only say this: Of all the souls I have encountered in my travels, this was the most...human.” These words were spoken by William Shatner’s character James T. Kirk at the end of Star Trek II: The Wrath Of Khan. In the scene, Kirk is delivering a eulogy for his fallen ally Spock, who was killed in action during the battle of the Enterprise. This Sunday, another season with the Crawleys came to a close, as Masterpiece aired the Christmas Special of “Downton Abbey.” Though it came months after the winter holiday, the finale did not disappoint in ending season five with just enough resolution and suspense to keep viewers eager until the sixth and final season airs in 2015.

Although “Downton Abbey” stretches over the 1910s and ‘20s, it has always achieved the difficult task of remaining relevant to the current age despite its nature as a period piece and the fifth season has kept the tradition of cultural relevancy going strong. In the fourth season, writer Julian Fellowes tackled the ever-present issue of adapting to technological advances and loosening social codes, but also addressed both violent and date rape, abortion and race. In the most recent season, Fellowes kept with the times, even impressively addressing issues that occurred after the script was written and the show filmed, such as the stark increase of anti-Semitism in Europe, a problem for centuries which is now unfortunately rising in frequency.

The introductions of the first Jewish family—that of Lady Rose MacClare’s beast-turned-husband, Atticus Aldridge—show a currendiv at the stalwartly Protestant Crawley and MacClare families. Yet, Rose and Atticus and supporters from both religious backgrounds helped the young lovers join together in marriage, giving the message that if individuals from different beliefs can find understanding in the mid-1920s, then they ought to be able to do so in 2015.

Modern issues of feminism also duped season five. Lady Mary Crawley and her maid Anna Bates were champions of women’s rights. While Mary kindled a relationship with Lord Tony Gillingham and subsequently cut it off, after having his heart broken, Tony attempted to guile Mary into staying with him because he could not believe that the daughter of an earl would sleep with a man that she had no intention of marrying. Mary set the record straight with her continual rejection, making it clear that, as an independent woman of 1924, she would not stay in a doomed relationship because he could not believe that the daughter of an earl would sleep with a man that she had no intention of marrying.

CSI Organizes Trip to Broadway’s ‘Cabaret’

Alexandra Clark
Staff Writer

The Kit Kat Klub welcomed a group of Montclair State University students on Wednesday, Feb. 25 to see Cabaret in New York City. The trip was organized by the Center for Student Involvement (CSI) who gave students the opportunity to see the Broadway show in the city for a heavily discounted price.

Julie Fleming, the Assistant Director for Student Involvement, accompanied the group on the trip keeping everyone energized for the upcoming event. CSI designs activities targeted to the interests of all students whether they be in the form of entertainment, education or fine arts.

There is usually a show every month that the organization offers tickets to. The cost of tickets to Cabaret was only $30 for students, which included transportation.

The show itself was spectacular. The experience was even more amazing for students due to the fact that they got to see the revival before it closed on March 29. The show originally played in 2004, so the revival allows a whole new generation of people to witness it.

The show still features its main Master of Ceremonies, Alan Cumming, who reprised his role of Emcee for the 2014 revival. The role of Sally Bowles, however, has had many women grace the role since the start of its run in 2014.

Both Michelle Williams and Emma Stone have starred in this role; the CSI’s trip to see Cabaret featured Sienna Miller as Sally Bowles. Miller starred in American Sniper as well as Foxcatcher, both of which had their own set of nominations at the recent Academy Awards.

Dina Shimanovich, a freshman at Montclair State University, went on the trip and is an expert on Cabaret. “This is my third time,” Shimanovich recalled before the start of the show. “I wanted to see it because it’s a show that has such complexity that every time I see it, I find something new and beautiful that I’ve never seen before.”

Students were very pleased with how smoothly everything went during the excursion to New York City. The bus made great time which gave students a little time before the show to walk around or grab dinner.

“I find it so much better to go with CSI instead of on my own,” said Maria Brucato, a freshman Psychology major. This was her second time buying tickets to a show in the city organized by CSI. “The tickets are discounted and there’s a bus included in that cost, so I don’t have to worry about paying for a train ticket and figuring out times. Plus it’s always exciting to be with a larger group of theater lovers from MSU!”

Baseball

The opening to the Red Hawks season was postponed last weekend due to snow-covered fields. The team was supposed to travel to Virginia to take on Christopher Newport University and SUNY Cortland on Feb. 28 and March 1. The games have not been rescheduled, and the Red Hawks will now start their season by traveling to Florida over spring break. Here, they will compete in the Snow Bird Classic in Port Charlotte and play in a series of 7 games. They kick off the tournament on March 8 against Muskingum at 5:30 pm.

Indoor Track and Field

Both the men’s and women’s teams competed in the NJAC indoor track and field championships this weekend at the New Balance Track and Field Center in New York. Montclair state finished in fifth place overall while winning two individual titles and two group events. Jocelyn Anderson won the 60 meter hurdles and Rasheed Amilcar grabbed first place in the 400 meters. The men’s team grabbed two group titles in the 4x200 and the 4x400.

In a sport built around muscular, behemoth men battling it out, it is surprising for some people to hear that the most dominant fighter in the UFC is a 175-pound man who rarely ever touches the size of the majority of her peers. What is more shocking was that this past Saturday’s UFC 184 Championship drew more attention than more recent fights, with the main event being headlined by two-time Bantamweight bantam. The hype around the event was intense, as the card was main event of nothing short of exciting from beginning to end.

UFC 184 started off with a pair of unexpected first-round finishes getting things going as the Stephen Thompson vs. Los Angeles. The main card kicked off with the Lightweight bout between former Ultimate Fighter winner Tony Ferguson and MMA veteran Gleison Tibau. Ferguson connected with a right-hand punch early in the first round, knocking Tibau to the ground and putting him on his back. The lightweight capitalizing on it. Before his opponent could regain stability, the Los Angeles native Ferguson began working his way to a dominant ground game to submit Tibau with a rear-naked choke.

The Lightweight fight followed a similar pattern, as Alan Jouban wounded a previously Australian Richard Walsh. After each fighter came out unscathed, Walsh cracked Jacobs with a spinning kick, leaving Jouban dazed against the cage as he continued to unleash a series of strikes winning by knock out.

The action continued as the original member of the first Ultimate Fighter Show Jason Kesch returned to the octagon after two years to face 16th-ranked Jake Ellenberger in another Lightweight bout. Kesch started out strong, demonstrating his wrestling dominance which eventually took down, but was quickly slowed down after Ellenberger slipped Kesch with a powerful jab. After finding himself pinned against the cage for the third time in a row from the UFC vet’s take-downlish style, Ellenberger caught his opponent in a head lock and was able to win by submission in the second round.

While the first three fights had thrilling finishes that fans hoped to see, the Women’s Bantamweight bout between 14th-ranked Raquel Pennigton and undefeated 13th-ranked Holly Holm height-lighted the upper-echelon of MMA talent. Holm made the most of her UFC debut by dicing the pace of the first two fighters. After losing against the opponents with quick jabs and a believably powerful high kicks. When everything seemed to be in Holm’s favor, Pennigton was able to knock the rookie down in the third period before connecting with another powerful right hook. However, Holm was able to get back on her feet and finish out the fight with a split decision victory.

The main event of the night was the Women’s Bantamweight title fight between undefeated Ronda Rousey and undefeated contender Cat Zingano. While the first few rounds showed glimpses of the kind of fight fans were anxious to watch, Zingano’s aggressiveness momentarily left her exposed where Rousey applied an arm lock to submit her opponent in just 14 seconds, the faster submission every in a UFC Championship fight. The dominant and extremely solidified Rousey’s status as being the most dominant fighter in the UFC. In a time where males dominate the sports market, it is revolutionary to see a woman being billed as the post-fight athlete for the entire MMA

Move over New York Red Bulls and New York City Football Club, the new Major League Soccer expansion team. For the first time since the existence of the legendary team, the New York Cosmos from the 1970s and 80s, the City of New York will be home to a professional soccer team. After years of speculation, NYCFC will take the field at Yankee Stadium on March 11 to take on the New England Revolution. It would come as a surprise to most that Midtown city is heavily devoted to gridiron football, such as Columbus, Chicago, Ill. and Kansas City, Mo. are becoming homes to popular MLS franchises before the extraordinaire diverse, immigrant-heavy New York City.

The arrival of the club marks a turning point in the MLS’s attempt to become internationally relevant and competitive. The off-field issues such as a large fan base, big stadium and TV exposure are all re-set by the club’s location in New York.

However, the question remains; can they play? Having already signed some big name players and being owned by the New York Yankees and the reigning English Premier League champions Manchester City, NYCFC will have no problem attracting and paying for talent. The most recognizable name on the NYCFC roster is David Villa, former World Cup and Champions League winner with Spain and Barcelona, respectively. The veteran forward has scored over 350 career goals in league and international play and will look as both a scoring threat and leadership for the Hudson club. Midfielder David Diskerud, who is currently on the United States men’s national team and a former member of Rosenborg FC in the Norwegian league, will also be counted on to bring a high level of experience, skill and energy to the middle of the park. Thanks in large part to their partnership, NYCFC have managed to sign four 25-year-old defender Shay Foyce from Manchester City on loan. Just 22-years old a player has played on all levels of the English National team’s youth system and currently captains the team’s under-21 team. Foyce will look to take advantage of the playing time he will get from NYCFC, looking to either secure a permanent deal or a place on the Manchester City first team. Over the summer, they will look to secure the services of legendary Barcelona and Spain midfielder Cesc Fabregas and Hernández, who agreed to a preliminary deal with NYCFC, but was talked into returning for a final season at the Catbird’s

Despite the promising outlook for the new club, there is still a big shadow hanging over the name Fabregas and Hernandez. The revered English midfielder signed a provisional contract with NYCFC last year after his contract with Chelsea expired. Since the season did not start until March, Lampard, the fourth-facking one of the English Premier League’s illusive history, was turned out in August to Manchester City. After scoring a few goals as a substitute and proving he could still play at the highest level, Manchester City extended his loan through the rest of the season, causing him to miss the first three months of the MLS season. This caused outrage across MLS league member felt that Manchester City had taken advantage of their controlling interest in NYCFC and dropped interest in signing him permanently.

While the first ten seconds of the fight were exciting to watch, Zingano’s aggressiveness momentarily left her exposed where Rousey applied an arm lock to submit her opponent in just 14 seconds, the faster submission ever in a UFC Championship fight. The dominant and extremely solidified Rousey’s status as being the most dominant fighter in the UFC. In a time where males dominate the sports market, it is revolutionary to see a woman being billed as the post-fight athlete for the entire MMA
