Aiming to Prevent Food Waste at MSU

Signs at Sam’s Place inform students of the importance of finishing their meal.

Many students at Montclair State University believe that too much of the food in the on-campus eateries goes to waste and that some of this unnecessary disposal could be prevented if Chartwells, the food provider on campus, were more proactive in waste control and management. Although students have a general sense of what happens to food at the end of the night, many are not fully clear with the university’s food waste-disposal procedures and question whether waste products could be reused to perform different functions for the greater community.

Lindsey Anderson, the Marketing Manager of Food Services, cleaned up some of the misunderstandings over what actually happens to leftover food once the dining facilities close. She revealed that food that can be used again is often saved and recycled into a new dish the next day. “If there was leftover chicken from a day and it could be used in chicken noodle soup the next day, that is how we would use that leftover,” she explained.

Most other food ends up in the trash, Anderson remarked, as it expires by the end of the night and therefore cannot be preserved or donated.

In preparation for the event, Clever Road remained closed from 7 a.m. to 1 p.m. in both directions. To respond to the drill, approximately 200 first responders from the surrounding region arrived at the Montclair State University train station.

During this time, Montclair State Police advised using Carlisle Road to Normal Avenue to leave campus, to enter campus, both entrances from Valley Road remained open.

Montclair State students over the age of 18 were encouraged to participate in the drill by playing a victim. The event was held by Montclair State University Police, Fire Safety and EMS Staff in conjunction with the New Jersey Transit Police.

Red Hawk Dollars Extended Off-Campus

Off-campus sites once again accept Red Hawk Dollars.

After announcing in June 2014 that Red Hawk Dollars could no longer be used off-campus, MSU has brought back the program that allows students to use their ID cards at various vendors.

On Monday, March 2, the Red Hawk Dollar Office, Auxiliary Services and Student Development & Campus Life revived the program. According to Andrew Pignataro, Director of Auxiliary Services, the prior company that facilitated it, Off Campus Solutions, suddenly went out of business, causing the program to end on June 30, 2014.

It was never intended to go dormant,” said Pignataro. Un- til finding out that Off Campus Solutions went out of business, MSU had every intention of having the program run in the fall semester.

This sudden end to the program caused confusion for students who expected to swipe their ID cards at places like Applebee’s, Six Brothers Dinner or CA$H Delivery and had to pay with cash instead.

“I would go to Six Brothers and Cars and they had signs saying they weren’t using Red Hawk and I was mad,” said Jolene McCowan, a family and child studies major. She and many other students bought Red Hawk Dollars for the sole purpose of convenience-ly using them off campus. Not only did this change affect the students, but also the vendors, who were disappointed to see the program go.

“I kept in constant contact with the vendors and let them know that MSU was working hard to bring the program back,” Pignataro said. The new program, now facilitated by BbOne, whose parent company is Blackboard Transact – has 13 vendors with an additional 10 in the process of being set up and more being added each week, surpassing the previous amount of 22 in the old program. The goal for the program is to have students using them off campus. Not only did this change affect the students, but also the vendors, who were disappointed to see the program go.

MSU Adjunct Discusses Intolerance Overseas

Julie Migdal

A new adjunct professor in the School of Communication and Media seeks to continue a dialogue about intolerance and prejudice locally and overseas.

Elliott Pollack, who teaches public speaking, returned from a visit last month to the London Jewish Museum where he was asked to speak and run a work study program for teachers about Holocaust education and intolerance. “There were very positive reactions,” Pollack said.

“Educators are always looking for new ideas. I really believe that the textbook is okay, but what I like to try is to do is taking the student out of the textbook and show them things they may not be able to see,” Pollack said.

Pollack doesn’t like to spend too much time dwelling on the dates and intricacies of historical events. His unique approach to the subject is one in which the participants of the program are encouraged to not only intellectually think about the historical Correction: In the March 5 edition, student Mahnoor Waseem was misquoted in the article “Cory in the House.” The quote should have read as follows: “I think Senator Booker spoke about a lot of really important things. To accomplish [his] goals, he’s going to need support from both sides of the aisle… One thing he started doing, if you look at his Instagram, he’s doing a series called ‘Selfies with my Fellow Senators,’ and I think that’s a great thing because that humanizes him.”

Keynote speaker, Rabner, serves as chief justice of New Jersey Supreme Court.

Stuart Rabner Chosen as 2015 Commencement Speaker

With graduation approaching on May 20, the Student Government Association committee selected the eighth chief justice of the New Jersey Supreme Court, Stuart Rabner, as this year’s commencement speaker. Last semester, a committee of random students and faculty selected 20 commencement speaker nominations. The committee consisted of random students and administrators. Biographies were provided describing each of the nominations.

The committee then ranked the nominations and narrowed the numbers down, according to Rajohn White, the Vice President of the SGA. Once the five candidates were selected, committee chair Keith Barrick, the Chief of Staff to President Susan Cole, took the final decision to the board of trustees. The final selection resulted in Chief Justice Rabner.

Rabner grew up in Passaic, eventually graduating summa cum laude from the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs at Princeton University. He graduated cum laude from Harvard Law School in 1985. Governor Jon Corzine nominated Chief Justice Rabner to the Supreme Court and, on June 29, 2007, he was sworn in. Years later, he was nominated for tenure by Governor Chris Christie and was sworn in on June 24, 2014. He is expected to hold his position on the Supreme Court until he retires. Chief Justice Rabner and his wife, Deborah, have three children and reside in Caldwell. He is currently a member of the Board of Directors of the Institute of Judicial Administration at the New York University School of Law. He went on to serve as a member of the Board of Directors of the Conference of Chief Justices.

“I am curious to hear what [Chief Justice Rabner] has to say and I am eager to utilize his words of wisdom.” – Quasan Hunter, Senior

Stylish Spring Options

Jessica Mahmoud
Staff Writer

Now that we’re back from Spring Break, it’s time to dust off your textbooks and get back to class. This means getting out of your pajamas or sweats and looking a little more presentable for class. I hope these stylish students give you some inspiration to help you get back in a fashionable mindset. The middle of the semester is here. Along with getting back to hitting the books, it’s actually time to get ready for class. I hope this gives you some outfit ideas for this still-chilly weather.

Fun accessories like flower crowns are a great way to add a fun look. With the variety of tights and dress pairings, the possibilities are endless. Try colored tights that intentionally mismatch your dress. A great example shown here is mustard-colored tights and a neutrally-colored dress. Tights keep your legs warm and adding a cardigan over a sleeveless dress makes it more winter-appropriate. Combat boots are also a great choice to finish off this look.

For more fashion inspiration, check out @montclair_state_style!

Dress: Forever 21. Jacket: thrifting. Tights: Target. Sunglasses: Amazon. Headphones: Radio Shack. Headband: Claire’s. Shoes: Charlotte Russe. Red Hawk statue thoughts? “I think it’s a great way to inspire campus pride and I think it’s overblown. People don’t understand that the money has to go to that and it’s been saved up for, like, 10 years. People are upset that they’re not doing anything to improve, but they can’t use the money towards anything else.”

Here’s another example of a dress made winter appropriate with leggings and boots. Now that it’s March, Spring is upon us which means florals are also coming out. Denim jackets are a great choice to transition from cardigans, as a way of still using layers to stay warm. To match the dress, adding fun accessories like flower crowns and bows are a great way to add to the look. This outfit screams festival season, which is right around the corner.

Dress and tights: Forever 21. Shooes: Doc Martens. Last month, MSU held Body Acceptance Week as well as National Eating Disorder Awareness Week. How do you think the two compare? “I volunteer at the Drop-In Center. I think promoting a healthy image on the same week opens eyes to eating disorders. It’s a real thing and important to make sure people feel comfortable in their own skin.”

While a fashionable outfit is certainly attainable without wearing dresses, they are certainly not for everyone. People don’t underestimate the power of how being fashionable doesn’t mean you have to be in dresses and skirts all the time. Try opting for high-waisted jeans to mix it up and get noticed within a sea of skinnies. Go for a Spencer-Hastings preppy look with a fun blazer to dress up a plain top. This is a great example of how you don’t need to give up plain comfortable T-shirts and jeans to be fashionable. Top the look off with classic Doc Martens or combat boots.

T-Shirts: ThinkCass. Jeans and blazer: Forever 21. Boots: Doc Martens. Last month, MSU held Body Acceptance Week as well as National Eating Disorder Awareness Week. How do you think the two compare? “I think they are definitely different. The two compare in that they both give people the opportunity to be more comfortable in their own skin.”

Just because you’re trying to look fashionable doesn’t mean you have to be in dresses and skirts all the time. Try opting for high-waisted jeans to mix it up and get noticed within a sea of skinnies. With Spring also comes bright colors and color blocking. Pairing solid-colored pieces, such as dresses and cardigans, is a trendy way to color block. Adding a scarf makes the look even more appropriate for the weather. Don’t be afraid to opt for long dresses and skirts, even though shorter ones are typically worn. Not only does this make you stand out, but it also keeps you warmer. A necklace hanging between the scarf is a great look and boots are always best.

Tops: Garage. Skirt: Marshall’s. Boots: Rack Room Shoes. Red Hawk statue thoughts? “I volunteer at the Drop-In Center. I think promoting a healthy image on the same week opens eyes to eating disorders. It’s a real thing and important to make sure people feel comfortable in their own skin.”

Is Your Peanut Butter Healthy?
Exposing the misinformation of peanut power

Kimberly Alam
Staff Writer

Peanut butter is heavily marketed as something that is good for you and your health. This is usually the case, as peanuts are naturally high in the beneficial fats and serve as a good source of protein. The unsaturated fats in peanuts can help lower cholesterol and reduce your risk of heart disease, which might not be on your radar now but could be a major change in your life in years to come.

In just two tablespoons (one serving) of peanut butter, there are around seven grams of protein and 33 grams of unsaturated fats, plus a few grams of fiber. These nutrients will help keep you full, which is why the serving size may seem small.

Peanut butter also contains miarces, which can also help control your cholesterol levels and blood triglycerides. Peanut butter is hugely versatile and there are many different kinds out there, from the classic pea nut butter and jelly sandwich, or used in baking. But beware- peanut butter can be eaten in too much, and extra oil when the peanuts are processed can make the product unhealthy.

Along with the classic peanut butter and jelly sandwich, peanut butter can be eaten with fruit, added to smoothies or used in baking. But beware- there are many different kinds of peanut butter out there and not all of them are created equal.

Some of the ingredients are natural, some are not. What you should look for is one with only one or two ingredients. One with only “pea nuts” listed, but one with salt and peanuts is okay too.

“Natural” Peanut Butter
This one may sound healthy, and it can be. Some natural pea nut butters, such as Trader Joe’s brand or Smucker’s, only have either peanuts or peanut and salt as ingredients. However, this term is not regulated by the Food and Drug Administration, which means brands are free to put it on their packaging regardless of what is in their product. “Jif Creamy Natural Peanut Butter” sounds innocent enough, but contains peanuts, sugar, palm oil, salt and molasses. They are sneaking in a few grams of unnecessary sugar and extra oil when the peanuts provide plenty on their own. The easiest way to ensure pea nut butter is actually natural? Make your own. Blend peanuts in a high power blender and eventually they will turn into a peanut butter consistency.

Reduced Fat
Reduced fat peanut butter may appeal to someone who is counting calories, but don’t be fooled. The claim “reduced fat” simply means it has less fat than its original counterpart, but has nothing to do with calories or other nutrient content. In fact, reduced fat peanut butter tends to have the same or a similar amount of calories as the original. The fats in peanut butter are also the healthy kind, so there is no need to reduce them. To make their product taste better with less fat, companies add lots of other ingredients to make up for it, especially sugar. The first two ingredients to make up for it, in “Jif Reduced Fat Creamy Peanut Butter Spread” are actually sugar in the form of corn syrup solids and sugar.

It should immediately be a red flag when the first ingredient is a sugar that has been processed or refined. The product, like its reduced-fat friend, contains hydrogenated oils, giving it a dose of trans fat. A head’s up for vegetarians: this product includes anchovy gelatin. It may sound crazy for a “peanut butter spread.” Although by the time it leaves the factory, it may have lost some of its flavor, it is still mostly full of calories, and sardine oil, plus tilapia gelatin. It may sound crazy for a “peanut butter spread” to be in a jar, but it’s possible, because it is. This product carries more negative aspects than benefits, and you should be avoiding this product like the plague.

“Jif Creamy Peanut Butter with Omega-3 DHA & EPA” actually has the same amount of healthy fats and it does not have any more of those benefits. What it does have more of is ingredients. It is certainly far from natural and this product can still legally contain up to 0.5 grams, which is a significant amount of trans fat, something you should avoid completely. The first ingredient to the name of this product, it isn’t just peanut butter, but a “peanut butter spread.” Although a small change, this play on words should also make you aware that what you are eating is certainly far from natural and should be avoided.

Peanut Butter with Omega-3
Omega-3 fatty acids are some of the good ones, as it may seem easy to choose peanut butter claiming to have more of these. However, peanuts naturally have good fats and when you compare nutrition labels, “Jif Creamy Peanut Butter with Omega-3 DHA & EPA” actually has the same amount of healthy fats and it does not have any more of these benefits. What it does have more of is ingredients.

Reduced fat peanut butter usually has the same amount of healthy fats and it does not have any more of these benefits. What it does have more of is ingredients. Have your handy smartphone or a laptop? Google the song “The Best Things in Life Are Free” – words and music composed nearly 90 years ago in 1927 by B.G. DeSylva, Lew Brown and Ray Anderson. Then listen to the following lyrics sung by renowned singer and New Jersey native Frank Sijan (who would have turned age 100 this December) or other renditions performed by various other popular recording artists during the 1930s, ’40s, and ’50s – including The Ink Spots, Bing Crosby, John Stafford, Dean-Shore and Lena Horne.

Transits on fire, better use a snow day

DjinniAnn in: Djack Applies for a Job

This is the third time I've showed up and the guy is like, "oh, sorry, you're a fire hazard and can't work here!"

And I keep telling them, this is mythical djinni fire! Look, just touch it, it doesn't exist in this freaking plane of reality! Why are humans so dense?

Damn it! That's it. Ann, I'm suing for discrimination!

Guessing the interview didn't go well?
There are more than 1,000 suicides on college campuses each year and it is the third leading cause of death for young people between the ages of 15 and 24, according to an Emory University webpage about suicide. With these numbers, it's clear that suicide is a continual problem on college campuses, with many students struggling with depression, anxiety and other mental health issues while juggling school work, employment and personal difficulties. Attending college can be a lot for a student to deal with, but one popular social media outlet has plans for an initiative that may help individuals with suicidal thoughts.

Facebook announced on Feb. 25 that it was launching a suicide hotline. After they report the post, the original poster will receive a notification saying that a friend was concerned about their post. From there, they can choose to ignore the notification or to follow the links that Facebook provides to resources about suicide and depression and how to deal with these feelings or strike up a conversation with that friend or a suicide hotline.

Since suicide is a big issue on college campuses, particularly within veteran student populations, we think that Facebook’s attempt to reach out to its users who may be contemplating suicide could be really helpful, especially to younger people and students who are more likely to use Facebook frequently. With that being said, we think that a few issues have to be cleared up before we can wholeheartedly get behind this suicide prevention platform.

Some say that this new resource may involve user’s privacy, but it may actually prevent individuals from directly reporting a concerning post to the police, which could potentially help suicidal individuals, whose suicide risk often rises rather than falls after hospitalization, according to the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention. However, this initiative still runs the risk of reporting people who are not suicidal or who do not want friends to interfere with their personal or emotional lives. Individuals may get frustrated or embarrassed if a friend misunderstands a moody status or quoted song lyric as a cry for help and on the dark side of the misreporting issue, some cyberbullies or hooligan friends may relentlessly report a Facebook friend when there is no call for concern at all.

Misreporting as a joke or tactic for annoying an adversary raises the question of whether Facebook will intervene by contacting the authorities if someone’s post is reported several times or if many of their posts are reported. If a student reports 70 of another student’s Facebook posts, calling them potentially life-threatening, does Facebook have a responsibility to call the police and instigate a legal intervention? It’s a serious concern when someone’s life could be on the line. If this is the case, then Facebook’s intervention could lead to a lot of unwanted hospitalization, which can do more harm than good.

Preventing suicide is an extremely admirable and important goal that Facebook has taken on, but we are not convinced that this plan of action, as it exists now, is the most helpful toward Facebook users, whether they are college students, veterans or from any other walk of life. Facebook should specify if there are any limits on this type of reporting, whether a user can counter-report someone who is “trolling” them through this feature or disable the feature indefinitely to avoid harassment, and whether it will ever take it upon itself to intervene in situations where there may be a real threat.

Until these issues are resolved, this measure, which seems like a good idea, could actually be detrimental and harmful to users and less effective in the fight against suicide than Facebook originally planned.

He had used their common sense and reallocated the consequences of acting in such a reprehensible manner. This whole situation could have been avoided. He had to be thinking that this is more so a story of an individual rather than a reflection of American culture or higher education in general. The reason for this is more complicated and dismayingly close to the heart of racism stems beyond Sigma Alpha Epsilon. As the popular social media service, we can see an example of how social media is used to instigate change. In many ways, it is so fervent in this country. You have to consider that today’s society, racism and racial injustice are subtle subtexts which should be handled with sensitivity. The Enchanting Art of Japan

New exhibit hits the George Segal Gallery

Theadora Lecour
Entertainment Editor

The George Segal galley currently presents The Enchanting Art of Japan an impressive display of Japanese art originating from ancient traditions. Art of such media as woodblock prints, ivory sculptures, ink painting and photography are on display until April 18, 2015. The exhibit is called and features Ukiyo-e prints and pocket-size netsuke figures.

The collected pieces range from the late 18th century to the late 20th century and create a comprehensive exhibit that records the Japanese development of traditions initially adopted from China. A particularly beautiful piece displayed at the front of the gallery is PrinceGen-ji with Lady and Servants by a Bridge Overlooking a River, created by Utaga-wa Hiroshige and Gototei Kunisada. From the late 19th century, these woodblock prints portray the household Japanese tale of an exiled prince and his wom-anizing ways. The piece highlights the strengths of both Hiroshige and Kunisada—landscape and female figures. Utagawa Hiroshige has been studied by reknown Western artists such as Monet and Van Gogh.

What makes this exhibition especially interesting is its combination of both art on paper and sculpture.
Netsuke are small ivory sculptures that might represent gods, animals, dragons or common figures.
Their original purpose was to fasten the carrying cases of men onto their person.
Today, netsuke are less functional and more for decorative purposes. These figurines are quite charming as detail and precision are staples of Japanese artistic style.

Behind the Curtain:

‘Winter’s Tale’ Actor, Sean Pohle
speaks to The Montclarion

What was your overall experience like?
The environment was incredibly stressful, especially closer to opening night.
This was a big show and there were so many elements to be organized. A professional production like this required a lot of attention.

What would you say impacted your performance the most in Winter’s Tale?
I had to do a lot in the second act particularly. I had so many costume changes.
I went from playing servant to farmer to this satyr thing… all the time during rehearsal, my attachable phallus kept falling off. There was a performance night when my attachment fell off on stage! So then I knew we were going to have to find a better adhesive.

What’s your favorite memory from production?
Okay, so during tech rehearsal, the band was playing their music and absent-mindedly I started clapping along with the band. But the band was playing off-rhythm. This kept happening until finally they stopped and told me to stop clapping along… only after that did they catch the rhythm. I was teased forever after that.

Has this production
inspired you in any way?
Winter’s Tale has inspired me to invest more into what I’m doing in any given circumstance. Whether it’s Shakespeare or TV or film, learning about Shakepeare has informed my experience with other genres of work.
Aurora Mendez and Robert Radliff have created a duo with the purpose of performing a repertoire ranging from classical to pop for all kinds of audiences.

What is your biggest motivation?

Our biggest motivation is the joy we witness from our excited music listeners and appreciators; the enthusiasm they have when they recognize a favorite tune, the pep in their step they get when a couple starts to dance as we perform a tango in the New York subway and the twinkle in a new bride’s eye when she hears a song she had played at her wedding as she walks by, but then stops and remembers about her big day.

How has MSU fostered you as artists?

As current students of the John J. Cali School of Music, we have been given the technical training to hone our crafts and expand on our knowledge of music. We also perform in numerous ensembles learning different genres of music and are given direction by great faculty that has walked in our shoes before. Our teachers include musicians from The Metropolitan Opera and the Shanghai String Quartet to Broadway musical conductors and African drumming specialists.

Who are your biggest inspirations?

Our primary teachers and MSU violin faculty, Weigang Li of the Shanghai String Quartet and Mary Ann Mumm of the Metropolitan Opera Orchestra. They are our constant, unconditional source of inspiration and guidance.

What is your latest project?

We have just submitted a music and press packet for the Music Under New York artists association sponsored by the New York City Metropolitan Transit Authority, also referred to as “MUNY.” This association allows street performers a more limitless venue for displaying and performing as artists in the New York subway, parks and major traffic and transit areas of the city like New York’s Grand Central Station. As a MUNY artist, there are also occasions in which the City will call upon your talents for certain concerts and administrative functions. It is an ideal situation for us and VioliNYC, as it provides a platform that allows virtually all people and walks of life to be exposed to our music and to build an audience from around the world and from our local tri-state area listeners.

The second weekend of March brought us another exciting set of games in Major League Soccer. By far, the biggest headlines are coming from the soap opera-esque Real Madrid squad. The world’s most expensive player, Gareth Bale, looked like he was on a mission to silence his critics. His 20-yard, low, hard, precise shot knocked against a determined wall of defenders before cracking through. For the first time in years, a Madrid winger looked energetic and dangerous. The shot was the result of running his markers ragged. In the 44th minute, he showed us why he was worth £82 million, smashing home a volley with his weaker right foot from about 14 yards after a scrum in the Levante box. He celebrated his first goal in eight games by running to the corner with his newly minted gold medal around his neck and draping his dextrous a message. Later in the half, he showed great reactions to turn in a wayward Cristiano Ronaldo strike, putting Real Madrid up 2-0, which would be the final score of the game.

Manchester United continued their excellent start to open a dominating a a highly contested 1-1 draw. After attributes were cogs in his system that could be replaced at any time. That system allowed them to win games, not just Landry, Super Bowl victories, two Super Bowl appearances, five NFC Championship victories, two Super Bowl rings, countless accolades and a seat in the Pro Football Hall of Fame. Kelly believes in the same concept in football, especially his preference, his affinity towards special teams and his notion of “culture wins football.” In a one-on-one interview with corner back Walter Thrummond III, he explained this concept about Kelly when he took over as the head coach at Oregon. One of the things that Kelly implemented was ridding the team of “cancer” players, the type of people that cause problems in the locker room. This answers the questions behind the release of DeSean Jackson as well as the retention of players like DeMeco Ryans.

Unlike previous regimes of the head coach serving as the general manager, this doesn’t appear to be set up for failure. Like all great coaches, Bill Belichick, Johnson, Vince Lombardi, etc., you have to have a plan in place in order to succeed. Jimmie Johnson traded Herschel Walker to Minnesota for multiple draft picks; Bill Belichick cut Bernie Kosar during his tenure in Cleveland as a part of a painful rebuilding process and Lombardi crafted the power sweep to perfection. All of these formulas were tried and they needed to carry out their plans, even if it meant trading away fan-favorites for players they knew would win a championship. It’s exactly what Kelly is trying to do in Philadelphia.

guidelines that they wouldn’t cross if a bidding war were to occur over a specific player.

In an interview with WIP-FM, Todd Herremans, who started at goalie for 10 years with the franchise and had been cut prior to this agreement, said that Kelly believes in having an elite offensive line and an elite quarterback to succeed; they need a quarterback who can decipher defenses and make the right decisions quickly to succeed. With all this talk about Kelly’s system and plan for the Eagles, there is always a fistful of questions to go along with it, such as the type of secondary he prefers, his affinity toward the power sweep to perfection.” All of these formulas were tried and they needed to carry out their plans, even if it meant trading away fan-favorites for players they knew would win a championship. It’s exactly what Kelly is trying to do in Philadelphia.

The New York City Football Club kicked off its inaugural season in the MLS at the Red Bull Arena, falling 1-1 draw. The game started out as a chippy midfield battle, with Orlando City seeing most of the possession. Having already played in the United Soccer League, Orlando’s cohesion and experience were evident. NYCFC looked shabby in possession, but were relatively well-defended in defense. The action picked up in the 30th minute when Orlando’s star man, Kaká, used his pace to take the ball and give himself space to shoot, firing a good save from NYCFC keeper Jon Mackenzie. In the 40th minute, NYCFC was doubled on the scoreboard after a poorly handled corner. NYCFC then dropped a 3-0 performance against West Ham, with goals from Olivier Giroud, Aaron Ramsey and Mathieu Flamini. Barcelona beat Elche 2-0, moving eight points ahead of Atletico Madrid and one point above Real Madrid. Bayern Munich steamrolled Werder Bremen 4-0, extending its lead in the Bundesliga to 11 points.

Within the Kicker-Shady trade, Kelly and the Eagles organization used the extra money to fill in the hole at running back, signing former Dallas Cowboy DeMarco Murray and ex-San Diego Charger Ryan Mathews. For the price of McCoy, the Eagles were able to bring in two outstanding running backs, the first of whom led the league in rushing last season plus an inside linebacker with the same size, skillset and tendencies of Luke Kuechly. Some of theSmartness of the trade is that the Eagles have been skeptical of McCoy’s total control of the team. After the announcement that Jeremy Maclin would sign with the Kansas City Chiefs, the Eagles, who wanted his head just as much as they want a ring. Maclin simply signed a contract for what the Eagles were willing to pay; the Eagles were only willing to shell out $9 million per year versus Kansas City’s $11 mil. Kelly had addressed the issue during his press conference, but had agreed prior to that they

Chip Kelly: Mad Scientist or Evil Genius?

During the NFL’s free agency period, Philadelphia Eagles head coach Kelly traded away the one player who had lead the team to the Super Bowl. Along with wide receivers Alshon Jeffery and Nelson Agholor, Kelly traded away one wide receiver to leave via free agency and also traded away record-setting Nick Foles plus draft picks for the injury-prone sack leader. But Kelly has did this since and despite the rumors of trades and the question of what they, it is fair to say that the Philadelphia faithful and analysts alike can’t figure out the plans within the brain of Kelly, the man who just left the Eagles.

After having some time to breathe and take in what had just happened, several Eagles fans were already shed of the topic of what appeared to be another massive trade robbery. Contrary to popular opinion, many sports articles released were applauding the move by Kelly that sent LeSean McCoy to the Bills and condemning the release of_ki Aloe by Buffalo’s front office. From a statistical standpoint, this move screams a win for Philadelphia.

By releasing McCoy, the Eagles did not have to pay him more than $12 million salary and since the backfield was 27 years old by the start of next season, he is already on a downward spiral with competing ageing versus production in NFL running backs. In return, the Eagles gain the 2013 Defensive Rookie of the Year, who is recovering from an early ACL tear in 2014 and is currently be evaluated to return from less than $2 million per year.
