Red Hawks Place Third in Final Four

The Red Hawks finished third in the country after traveling to Grand Rapids, Mich. for the Division III Women’s Final Four.

“arly this spring, the women’s volleyball team finished third in the nation by winning the national title after defeating Grand Valley State University in the championship game. The Red Hawks have been a dominant force in the Mid-Atlantic Conference and have been a consistent contender for the national championship. Their impressive performance this season has earned them a well-deserved third place finish, which is a testament to their hard work and dedication. The team has shown great resilience and has proven that they are among the best in the country. This achievement is a credit to the players, coaches, and support staff who have worked tirelessly to bring this success to the Red Hawks’ program. Congratulations to the Red Hawks on their impressive showing in the national championships.”

Class I Organizations Hold Week of Activities

Throughout the week, Class I organizations of the Student Government Association conducted various events in an effort to attract new members. The meetings were open to all students, and they were held in the Student Center Commons. The goal of these events was to promote community involvement and to introduce students to the organizations that are available on campus.

Election Time

Election time is around: being allowed students, who may not be informed about who the candidates are and what they stand for. I tied [Hawkeyes] better [than last year’s voting system]

Elections this year were allowed students, who may not be informed about who the candidates are and what they stand for. This year, the SGA election process has gone through reforms, and candidates have noted that the election process has gone more smoothly in years past.

Chris Christie Speaks at Town Hall Meeting

On March 24, Governor Chris Christie held his 12th Town Hall Meeting at the Hanover Township Civic Center in Whippany. Christie walked out ready to address a crowd of about 350 people. Amongst the audience were Montclair State University President Susan Cole and about 20 MSU students.

Christie brought reforms to the meeting as he was joined by his wife, first lady Mary Pat. This was her fifth appearance to the meeting. She started off by talking about the work that he and his wife have been able to accomplish together, especially in the developmentally disabled community.

“The one of the real focuses for us over the last last five years has been the developmentally disabled community in the state and with a particular focus on those families who have family members with autism, and she’s helped to start things across the country that has been great in terms of bringing greater awareness to it," said Christie.

After his opening remarks, Christie took questions from the audience, including one about one's freedom and liberty, as well as the differences between senior citizens and government grants. One question came from Vincent Stevens, a senior student born in Montclair. He asked Christie how he could help the Republican Party. Christie's response was that the focus in those elections should be on the individuals versus the entire party.

After the meeting, Stevens said, "He really taught me a lesson about that. Politics in New Jersey has to come back to [being] more focused on the person running for office rather than the party they are running under. He did answer my question.

Other MSU students were excited about being able to attend this town hall meeting and hear Christie himself. "It was exciting when Kristen Bunk, the SGA President, said ‘I feel the transparency; him being able to talk to use and tell us exactly how the budget is looking and where the money is going to be spent. [Just helps] as people because we could never make you could educate decisions and be an effective citizen.”

Although Christie was asked whether or not he was running for president, no big announcement was made. He told students that he’s never running again, and that the EOF Program itself and give those involved the opportunity to do the things in education that will help them later on in life.

As we say goodbye to the first half of the spring semester, the sun is finally shining. Bright florals and fun dresses are starting to be worn and fashion is starting to be something people are considering rather than throwing on the warmest thing in their closet. Now that Spring is here, people are starting to get back to wearing fun outfits, rather than just sweats and a t-shirt. It’s great to look around on campus and see all the diverse looks and styles being flaunted. I hope this helps you out with something people are considering rather than throwing on the warmest thing in their closet. Now that Spring is here, people are starting to wear fun outfits.

T-shirt dresses are possibly the most comfortable and trendy piece out there. They’re great because there are so many different variations. A great place to look is at thrift stores or in the men’s sections of any clothing store. Pairing them with thick high socks is a way to make it a little more appropriate and a way to stay warm. T-shirt dresses can really have an edgy look, so combat boots finish off the look perfectly.

Believe or not, we’re halfway through the spring semester. What’s your favorite memory from the first half of the semester?

Top and sockie: Urban Outfitters  Sh处在: Doc Martens  Backpack: Gypsy Warrior  Spring break in one word? Chill, because I didn’t really do anything.

Cotton dresses are often as soft as nightgowns, making them perfect to throw on before class. Now that the sun is coming out and the breeze is making, bright colors are becoming more acceptable and popular. If your dress is a solid color, try adding a fun necklace or even a scarf for a fun contrast. Since we haven’t reached high temperatures just yet, a cardigan and tights is best to pair with a dress. Finally, flats can be added to the mix if it’s a sunny day.

Rutgers Master of Accountancy in Financial Accounting
On-campus & Online Program

Earn your Masters in Financial Accounting in 12 months for less than $25K.*

The program requires 30 credits, 15 are earned during the summer session, when students are enrolled on campus on a full-time basis. The remaining 15 credits are electives taken on a part-time basis online in the Fall and Spring semesters. The program provides flexibility for students and firms. Accounting graduates admitted into the program in the summer can complete 50% of the degree requirement prior to joining a firm.

*The Board of Governors reviews the tuition and fees on an annual basis and sets new tuition and fee rates at its July board meeting.

Online Audit Analytics Certificate

As an alternative to the masters program, non-matriculated students may complete four online courses to receive a certificate in Audit Analytics. The certificate program consists of four courses such as Audit Analytics and Information Risk Management.

MSDO stands for the Montclair State Dietetic Organization, a Class III organization of the SGA. This is a fantastic organization that is not only for nutrition majors but for the benefit of everyone. All MSDO meetings and events are open to the entire campus community and offer great tips and information on leading a healthy lifestyle and eating better, plus a lot of free food. Whether it’s through a meeting, an event or online, you can find some aspect of MSDO that will help you learn more about eating better.

Meetings: MSDO meets every Wednesday in University 2046 at 3 p.m. These meetings are great, especially for nutrition majors. They have lots of guest speakers who work in the nutrition field who talk about their job and how they got to where they are, perfect for anyone graduating soon or who is interested in joining the nutrition program. Meetings also include letting people know about opportunities to volunteer in the nutrition field, which is an excellent resume builder.

Events: MSDO hosts many events each semester, from healthy bake sales in Dickson to sample giveaways. On March 31, there will be a healthy chef competition in Machuga Heights. On April 9, there will be a DIY Trail Mix bar in the Rathskeller. On Wednesday, April 22, there will be a mini-farmer’s market in Room 2046 in University Hall from 3-4 p.m. On March 26, there will be a spinach table in the Student Center giving away information and free samples. Eggs are Egg-cellent for You

James Carpentier
Staff Writer

With Easter Sunday on April 5 and Passover begins the night of April 3, eggs have suddenly exploded in popularity. Eggs are a centerpiece on holiday tables for both Jews and Christians. A hard-boiled egg is traditionally dipped in salt water at the start of the Passover Seder meal to commemorate the offering brought in the days of the Holy Temple. For Christians, hard-boiled colored eggs on Easter are often used to symbolize fertility, rebirth and the resurrection of Jesus from the tomb, as the egg represents the shape of a stone tomb. Below are various ways to appreciate this symbolic and nourishing food not only during Easter and Passover, but year-round.

Eggs are a basic part of cuisines worldwide. Italians call omelets “frittatas”–mixing eggs with vegetables or meat, for example. Fresh pasta also contains egg yolks. In France, egg yolks and egg whites are main ingredients in crepes, soufflés, omelets and oeufs a la neige. Mexicans serve huevos rancheros. Chinese restaurants list egg drop soup and an omelet called egg foo young on menus. Germans make thick noodles called spaetzle and also place a fried egg atop Wiener Schnitzel. In Egypt and India consumers fried eggs for breakfast.

How many ways can eggs be prepared? Scrambled, fried, soft-boiled, hard-boiled, poached, omelet-style, deviled; common variations of eggs are often served at your favorite Jersey diner.

Eggs are a versatile addition to a wide variety of foods, including bacon, peppers, sausage, steak, ham, pancakes, waffles and potatoes. Bodybuilders and other athletes rely on eggs for an inexpensive yet primary protein source for helping maintain and build muscle following weight training sessions.

For chefs and bakers, eggs are a daily necessity in the preparation of many entrees (meat and fish coatings, noodles, pastas) and desserts (puddings, custards, cakes).

Eggs are quick and portable snack. Make hard-boiled eggs in advance, refrigerate and use as a convenient and portable snack accompanied with fruit, vegetables, nuts or whole-grain bread. You can also chop hard-boiled eggs in a salad for a nutritious meal.

Eggs are not only a great protein source; they also contain vitamins B and D, as well as minerals iodine, selenium and iron. The antioxidants lutein and zeaxanthin in egg yolks promote eye health. Kelly Potts is a senior and member of the Sigma Delta Tau sorority at Montclair State University. She started off her sophomore year by creating a new outlet for her writing skills to flourish and the results have been remarkable.

Potts’ website, kaptivatingthoughts.wordpress.com (previously “College Thrive”) has taken off within the campus community and has gotten over 18,500 views since she began the website a year and a half ago. Potts had always known she wanted to go into journalism even from a young age and has had the support of friends and family to help her blog reach thousands of views.

Potts’ highest viewed post was “The Six Friends to Keep Forever,” which received over 6,500 views alone and 2,100 views the initial day she posted it.

Last February, one of Potts’ sorority sisters and close friends, stated, “When I see a post that relates to me, I read it through more thoroughly. This was one of my favorite posts she’s ever written.”

This post was only the beginning for Potts, leading her to receive a coveted internship at Women’s Day magazine at the Hearst Tower in New York.

Potts is a native to Hamilton, N.J. and began her career at Montclair State University as an English major looking to go into the journalism route, a field she had always born in love with. Throughout her college career, which will be bittersweet ending in the spring, she has been filled with countless, once-in-a-lifetime opportunities. From starting her own personal lifestyle blog and then graduating to a sought-after internship with Women’s Day, Potts has had amazing opportunities to grow through college and to thrive as well.

“Any post of Kelly’s that I read I find extremely enjoyable,” said Victoria Pignataro, a sorority sister who has inspired Potts. “She always wanted to prove people wrong.”

Potts finally knew she had made it as a lifestyle blogger when her post titled “The Six Friends to Keep Forever” had gotten over 3,000 views alone and said “As the day went on, the views kept getting higher and higher and it was being viewed not only in the United States but from other countries.” To this day, Potts is very proud of this particular post because it was her most well-received post and is still being shared on social media.

Potts was inspired by the movie, 13 Going on 30, featuring Jennifer Garner, who gets her wish as a young 13-year-old to be 30 years old and scores a job at a popular women’s magazine. The most famous line from the movie, “Thirty, flirty and thriving,” is what inspired the original title of her blog, “College Thrive.”

Potts worked for Women’s Day during her Fall 2014 semester and was introduced to the world of magazines and focused on the online portion of the text. She had the opportunity to interview Paula Ueen, a former Food Network star who lost her job due to inappropriate comments, and learned the importance of how to get the information needed for a story without bringing up sensitive subjects. “I learned a lot from doing that article,” said Potts. “I realized you have to be super prepared in order to know how to ask and confidently talk and get the information you want.”

Potts recently changed the title of her blog from “College Thrive” to “Kaptivating Thoughts” to reflect the new chapter in her life and her moving on from college. Since Potts will be graduating in May, she thought it was appropriate to change the title of her blog to fit her change in lifestyle. “The ‘Kap’ in ‘Kaptivating’ are actually my initials and I loved the way the title sounded, so I decided to change it twice, in a few months, I won’t be a college student anymore,” said Potts.

She hopes to follow her dreams of working at Cosmopolitan or Seventeen and to continue updating her blog as she adjusts and changes with it. “Go for what you want to write and don’t worry about how others will judge it,” she said. “I still to this day feel weird making posts, wondering what others will think, but I’ve learned to be proud of my work and to better myself as a writer because of it.”

Not the Bash We Expected

Each year, incoming freshmen are bombarded with essential lessons in campus safety, but unfortunately, these lessons were entirely disregarded when students rushed to obtain Spring Bash tickets.

Unlike previous years, the Student Government Association strictly enforced their policy for students seeking Spring Bash tickets. Although the SGA's call for students to line up after 7 a.m. had an emergency taken place during the Spring Bash ticket sales, people would have had difficulty exiting the building. Had an emergency taken place during the Spring Bash ticket sales, people would have had difficulty exiting the building and the proper emergency personnel would have been unable to enter, especially if someone in the packed crowd had been injured or had a panic attack. With that many people crammed into the Student Center, any form of emergency would have become that much more of a disaster and a Spring Bash ticket is not worth being put into that kind of danger.

Each student's safety should be held to a high regard and the Student Government Association and everyone else involved with this year's Spring Bash ticket distribution process uneniorly dropped the ball. Although the SGA's call for students to line up after 7 a.m. could work next year if there are more precautions in place, it does not seem likely that a 7 a.m. line-up is a viable option.

For the future, students have expressed a need for an online system for Spring Bash ticket distribution. Students could apply online to receive tickets and a raffle could decide who receives tickets. This would definitely ensure that this year's safety fiasco would never occur again. Students would not be required to stand on a line for hours without the guarantee of receiving tickets. Also, people cutting the line would not longer be a concern like it has been in past years. This distribution method seems to be a fast and easy way for student to obtain Spring Bash tickets.

Spring Bash is a perfect way for students to relieve stress and have a great time, but it is not great enough for someone to put their safety at risk. The outcome of this year's Spring Bash ticket distribution was a poor showing for Montclair State University and its community of students.

Due to the problems that occurred this year, one can only hope that student safety will be at the forefront of the Spring Bash organizers' minds as next year's Spring Bash is planned.

Question of the Week:
Do you believe a college should force students to attend assemblies and impose fines on those who do not attend?

“I believe that college should not force students to attend assemblies. As a commuter, it is hard to come to campus on days I do not have class and imposing a fine on top of that is a little harsh.”
- Stephanie Laeie
Junior,
Communication

“I do not think assemblies should be mandatory. You should be encouraged to go to the assembly, but you should not be charged for if you decide not to go. If you go, great, if you do not go, it should be the student’s choice to attend any assembly or not.”

How to apply Lewinsky’s words on cyberbullying to our everyday lives

Internet Explorer’s Death Brings Little Grief

Microsoft develops a more reputable browser to stay in the competition

If you were to ask people to name some of the most famous web browsers, you might hear names like Safari, Chrome, Firefox and Internet Explorer.

Now these people are going to have to cross Internet Explorer off of that list, as this past week, Microsoft revealed that they were officially putting an end to this long-standing web browser.

The motive behind Microsoft ending Internet Explorer was to then plan to install a new browser on their computers currently named Project Spartan, which is planned to be released with Windows 10.

This was officially announced by Microsoft marketing chief Chris Capossela at the Microsoft Convergence Conference in Atlanta. Internet Explorer will not be added on completely with Windows 10, however, as some versions will maintain the web browser in order to work with older programs.

After Windows 10, Internet Explorer will be gone completely, fading away into the books of cyber history.

There are many who argue that one of the most significant and utilized web browsers out there has also been the victim of ridicule due to slow speed, with many joking that it would be your grandmother’s favorite browser. Some even go so far as to say that it would be an improvement for Microsoft.

In fact, the very reason that Microsoft is replacing Internet Explorer’s current version with Spartan is in order to upgrade their browser to a fast and reliable web browser.

When you’re one of the biggest companies in the consumer electronics company in the world, it is always going to entail poorly on the company’s part when their web browser is less than great. Project Spartan shows for its poor performance.

Microsoft has often shown awareness of the public’s displeasure with Internet Explorer as public opinion has likely had some degree of influence on Microsoft’s decision.

Yet, was public opinion the only reason behind the change? Another possible reason might be due to the fact that our web browser is a tool that focuses so much on our personal lives. It is the Internet rather than more public spaces where we see cyberbullying at its worst.

Microsoft has also been proven that Internet Explorer has declined in terms of popularity, especially given the fact that Google Chrome now had the overwhelming majority of 62.5 percent while Firefox ranked second with a distant 22.9 percent. Opera, which had shares of 3.9 percent and 1.5 percent.

Yet, this near 13-year span shows how drastically Internet Explorer has declined in terms of popularity, especially given the fact that Google Chrome now had the overwhelming majority of 62.5 percent while Firefox ranked second with a distant 22.9 percent. Opera, which had shares of 3.9 percent and 1.5 percent.

If Microsoft’s motives for changing their web browser was because of public opinion, then they are merely following in the footsteps of the company’s co-founder Bill Gates, who once said, “We all need people who will give us feedback, that is how we improve.” The desire to improve and evolve fuels most of us in our struggle to stay in check with the times, so it comes to me as no surprise that a major company like Microsoft is improving and evolving as well.

With internet rivals coming from every corner and some such as Google and Yahoo now beating them in the race, Microsoft needs something like Project Spartan to show that they are an army that is ready for battle and will not go down without a fight.

They’re called The Vagina Monologues, and although they do talk a lot about vaginas, there are many layers beneath this product’s surface that deserve to be explored, both on V-Day and every day throughout the year.

At first a skeptical palette to The Vagina Monologues, I came in with no idea what the perform- ance would be like, but luckily enough, the Vagina Warriors explain what exactly the monologues are and where they came from early on in the show. The monologues were written by Eve Ensler, who based each monologue on interviews with women of different ages and backgrounds about their vaginas. 2015 marks Montclair State University’s 14th year of perform- ing the series.

One of the most excit- ing things about The Vagina Monologues is how different each woman’s story about her vagina and, by extension, her sexuality and life is. Ensler includes observations from a six- year-old child, a septuagenarian, straight women, lesbians, a sex worker, women who have been sexually assaulted and a transgender woman.

In many of the monologues, there were moments of speech that brought with sadness and pain, showing that one woman and her vagina can undergo a lot in a lifetime, and that a woman’s vagina—like her heart—can hold many mysteries about who she is and where she has been.

A few of the monolo-FIG navos actually stuck out, although all were won- dervyly evocative and unshakably powerful. "The Flood" tells the story of a sterile older woman who refers to her body as a "machine" which she keeps largely boarded up after an em- barrassing moment in her youth. This monologue was charming and hilari- ously at some moments, but poignant at others, partic- ularly when she describes her hysterectomy and her repressed sexuality.

Another monol-FIG ovue that mixed comedy with tears was "The Little Coochi Snooper That Could," a story of a young homeless woman who was sex- ually assaulted at a young age, but later underwent a process of sexual healing after mak- ing love with an older woman. The actress who performed this monologue actually had an emotional breakdown on stage while explaining her character’s sexual assault, which deeply af- fected members of the audience and cast.

Her performance was amazing to watch. I found myself watching on a journey of heart- break, joy, and healing and happiness and liberated sexu- ality. Another powerful monol-FIG ogue about sexual assault was "My Vagina Was My Village," in which women discussed be- ing raped as a tactic of war. Their perceptions of their va- ginas as a place of passion, life, beauty and fertility were de- stroyed when they were viciously violently violated by invaders, who removed both their vaginal peace and their peace of mind. The performance of this monol-FIG ogue was also deeply moving and touched on crimes against women throughout the world.

Another unexpected but nonetheless powerful addi- tion was the entrance of men toward the very end of the monologue. The feminist move- ment aims for sexual equality, making all those who believe in equal rights for all genders responsible for creating change. It was great to see men stand- ing behind women and supporting their mission to discuss their plights and joys as Vagina War- riors and at the same time bringing up issues of gen- der inequality and sexism against men.

The evening closed with another chill- ing tale of sexual assault, the personal story of Cierra Kaler-Jones, Miss New Jersey for 2014. Kal- er-Jones challenges sur- vivors of abuse to come forward with their stories in order to empower oth- ers. She was a very talent- ed and touching speaker and her focus on sexual assault on college campuses should be an important concern for us all as college students.

There are only a few aspects of female empower- ment and representation that I feel could be represented a little better in The Vagina Monologues. One issue I noticed was that the male Vagina Warriors used the old, "You love your mom, therefore you should love all women and treat them with respect, you wouldn't want to see your mom hurt." There is a lot of sentiment isn't what Ensler wants to promote. Overall, The Vagina Monologues is a powerful and evocative piece of theater that challenges us to think about our vaginas and therefore our- selves, and how our power to live and love on our own terms is often jeop- ardized. Until next year, Viva La Vulva!
‘Empire’ Season Finale

If you’ve been following the plot-twist-filled craziness that is Empire, you know that the finale was too intense for most of us to handle. There was something captivating about this last two hour special, perhaps it was the murder, incest or maybe even the surprise pregnancy. Better yet, maybe it was the long-anticipated hair-pulling madness between Cookie and her beloved “Booboo Kitty” Anika. Could it have been that Lucious Lyon managed to make us hate him even more by not having ALS? Unfortunately it was just MG (myasthenia gravis), which is highly treatable. However, non died, or how Cookie and Anika non died, or how Cookie and Anika managed to actually put their hate for each other in favour of destroying Lucious that influenced this decision.

Jamal, the gay son who everyone swore Lucious hated, ended up inheriting the company from his father, making his two brothers highly jealous and angry. He now swears up and down that his father loves all of his children. But perchance it was how abruptly Vernon died, or how Cookie and Anika got out of jail. That’s right, Lucious is in jail. That’s right, Lucious gets out of jail. That’s right, Lucious is in the big house.

Stay tuned people; the next season will be juicier than the first.

Despite their 2-1 loss to D.C. United on Nov. 8, the New York Red Bulls have advanced to the Eastern Conference Finals.

Midfielder Péguy Luyindula netted the only Red Bulls’ goal. Luyindula, who scored once in the Red Bulls’ 2-0 win against D.C. United in the first leg of the conference semifinals, sent his side to the conference finals on a 3-2 goal aggregate.

Inside the six-yard box, Luyindula slotted a cross from captain Thierry Henry into the bottom right corner of United’s goal in the 57th minute.

D.C. United’s first goal came late in the first half when midfielder Nick DeLeon headed a cross from Taylor WomensLacrosse.

Some of these players truly need help, but giving them a hefty paycheck for playing as a means to watch films endlessly while people around the world were violence and the NFL was soon able to be found during the time accused Ray Rice knocking out his fiancé Holmes and Ritchie Incog-
Before the start of the season, the women’s basketball team set their sights on reaching the Final Four. A 12-0 start forward six months and the Red Hawks earned a historic season with a 56-48 victory over Tufts University to secure third place in the NCAA Division III Women’s Basketball Tournament.

This marks an end to Janitza Aquino and Melissa Tobie’s stellar basketball career and is also an experience to build on for the nine underclassmen on the team. Whether it’s an end to a career or the first steps as a new member of the team, this journey to the Final Four is one that the players and coaches will remember for a long time. “It’s been the best experience,” said Katie Sire, a freshman who started for the first time on Saturday. “I mean, being a freshman and being able to play in the NCAA Tournament makes it all so crazy. It’s not something a lot of people get to experience.

Montclair State celebrates their third place win.

Montclair State basketball player Blake Thomas.

Montclair State women’s basketball team made school history by reaching the Final Four, but were defeated by George Fox University by a score of 70-58 on March 20.

The Red Hawks made their way through the NCAA Division III tournament, finishing out their home games with a 21-7 record and a trip to the NCAA Division III tournament in the Elite Eight. They started their season by scoring in the first half, Montclair State looked like the best team in the country this season.

Tobie, was one of two freshmen on the team and will be a fantastic building block going forward.

The coaches, as well as the players, have enjoyed the opportunity. “I think the players and coaches have all enjoyed this experience,” said coach Karin Harvey. “They’re fun on the court and I love watching them play basketball. I love how smart they are. We do it together. It’s a partnership.”

Harvey added, “I’m really happy for [the team] that we got to experience our season out on the court and close out our season playing against a great basketball team. This season is one that will stay in the minds of everyone involved with the team and will be a fantastic building block going forward.

The Red Hawks would eventually take the lead by one point, giving the Red Hawks the lead for the first time in the season. George Fox took over the game and played the way they needed to play in the first half. The lead forced multiple turnovers and was able to find some consistency on offense with none of their players in foul trouble.

Montclair State had a 33-21 lead over George Fox after five minutes of the second half. However, Melissa Tobie picked up her third personal foul. Head coach Karin Harvey elected to take Tobie out of the game, but the struggles they had in the first half began to reappear in the second half.

Aquino hit a corner three that brought the score within six. With 4:23 left to play, Janitza Aquino hit a corner three that brought the score within six. The team and crowd once again had life in them for the first time since the first portion of the second half. The Red Hawks were unable to build on their momentum. They continued trading baskets with George Fox from that point forward and were unable to put the game within striking distance. Montclair State turned the ball over 21 times, which was ultimately its undoing. The Red Hawks would go on to lose the game by the final score of 75-58.

Instead, the Red Hawks had to suffer. On Saturday, the offense was smooth and fluid.

After the game, Tobie and Aquino were much more satisfied with how their careers ended. Coach Karin Harvey continued to praise her team’s mental toughness following such a disappointing loss and managed to finish the season on a high note.

Montclair State will return to New Jersey and will be able to proudly say they won the third best team in the country this season. Melissa and Katie Tobie will be able to share great memories from the Final Four and this young team can take this experience and elevate their game even more for next season.

Tobie was put back into the game, but both teams were trading baskets without one team taking the lead.
