University Police Arrested Suspicious Person

The Montclair State University Police Department arrested a man on Tuesday night for harassing a woman in one of a string of incidents which occurred on campus over the past week.

Steve Medina, a 25-year-old man who is not a student and has no permanent address, was charged with a disorderly persons offense.

A female student reported that, while walking up the ramp to Sam’s Place around midnight last Thursday, a man approached her. When she refused to engage him in conversation, he “reached out his arms toward her,” according to the email sent to the campus community. Medina was arrested on campus police on Tuesday night in the Student Center Mall. He was released due to the nature of the offense.

“However, Medina is no longer on campus and does not belong to him/her, a bystander is not ac-saw or knew about [unaccept- able interpersonal behavior or violence] and did not will or seek to intervene in appropriate way.

With this being true, the launch of the Bystander Inter-vention Program on behalf of the Division of Student Develop-ment and Campus Life could not come at a better time. Ini- tially introduced towards the end of the spring semester, peer facilitators were selected to help raise awareness of bystander intervention among other stu- dents.

According to Gary, it is his hope that this program will become a student-to-student driven campaign. “We hope to reach out to student organi- zations, such as these black athletic teams and residence halls. The more we get [the word] out, the more we hope that [students] will spread the word and begin to step in and do things that will help their fellow Red Hawks out that, when they see something going in the wrong direction or something going awry, that they’re not just going to stand and watch, but they’re actually going to stand and do something.”

This is one of the goals of the program, those same peer facilitators worked to introduce the campaign to other campus leaders during this summer’s training. Listening to an infor- mational presentation given by Gary, the students left with a better understanding of the role a bystander plays in the Mont- clair State community and how to act in situations, should they arise before their eyes.

Rebecca Belmer, a senior Psychology major who at- tended Gary’s session as part of her training, mentioned that the event helped her recognize the importance of bystander inter- vention on campus. “It is not enough to just watch a crime, thinking that someone will take action and do something.”

“This lesson about the col- lective responsibility citizens have to protect their community is an extremely difficult one to teach,” said Cole. “Such help in reinforcing the idea that we all share a responsibility to each other and to the university will be appreciated.”

“...The mission of the program is to engage students actively in recognizing those situations that have the potential to injure their fellow students physically or psychologically, or damage the University...”

Students Express Themselves on Bisexuality Day

The LGBTQ Center and Campus Recreation hosted Tie Dye Celebrate Bisexuality Day on Wednesday, Sept. 23 to rec- ognize the bisexual community and bring attention to bisexual history, community and cul- ture. Montclair State University has recently been recognized as one of the most LGBTQ friend- ly universities in the country and for good reason. Montclair State has presented a safe en- vironment for students to feel comfortable in whichever way they choose to identify.

The energy at the event was “extremely positive” according to sophomore participant Syd- ney Caladine. Sophomore Josh McPherson, member of the LG- QT Center, felt that the event "spreads the word and grows more coverage to a specific iden- tity." This event has been taking place for three years at Mont- clair State, resonating the key message of acceptance through- out campus. Shirts are dyed in the colors of the bisexual flag: pink, purple and blue. All stu- dents were encouraged to join in.

When asked why this event is an important part of Mont- clair State life, LGBTQ Center coordinator Brian Edwards made it clear that despite MSU being recognized country-wide, “there is still a lot of work to do. Confronting bisexual stereo- types and bringing to light the issues facing the bisexual com- munity” is an important process. “As in any other challenges we hope to focus on through this program and many more throughout the year.”

"The safety program at Montclair State University is a community effort for the general benefit of students, faculty, staff and visitors. We are partner- ing with an extremely important and safe program, HawkSync, and certainly a role on which the Montclair State community should be more informed.

"This lesson about the col- lective responsibility citizens have to protect their community is an extremely difficult one to teach," said Cole. "Such help in reinforcing the idea that we all share a responsibility to each other and to the university will be appreciated."

Police: Harassment Incident Led to Arrest

The second of three alleged incidents of harassment occurred in front of Sam’s Plaza last Thursday night.

At 10:40 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 25 at Carle Park Drive, a woman reported that a black man driving a black two-door sedan attempted engaging her in conversation while using ha-rassment language.

According to the victim, the incident was the sec- ond of three “suspicious per- son” reports at Montclair State over the course of the past week. In her speech, Cole went on to mention that “one of the things that our really excellent university police and student affairs professionals will [say] is that it is almost always the case that innocent bystanders will face further prosecution if permitted on University prop- erty as a visitor or guest and will face further prosecution if he violates that directive,” according to Lieutenant Kieran Barrett of the Montclair State University Police Department. Many students have been reporting assault towards Barrett, prior to his trial at the Little Falls Mu- nicipal Court.

Royalty Talent Show Kicks Off Homecoming Week

Contributing Writer

Presented by S.L.A.M., the Homecoming Royalty Talent Show kicked off Montclair State University’s Homecoming week this past Monday. Each Royal candidate showcased his or her talent to a crowd of more than 750 people in Memorial Auditorium.

The majority of the talents that were showcased before the audience were dance numbers. Carolina Focella from Sigma Sigma Sigma started the show with a message to audience members. She went on to explain how she felt most talent shows are only accessible to individuals who can sing and dance, then urged all to consider running for Homecoming Royalty someday.

Following her articulate and motivating words, she presented her talent. The box she brought on stage contained baked goods that she had made. She picked two lucky individuals from the crowd to sample her pumpkin bread and Oreo truffles. It’s safe to say the rest of the crowd was jealous.

Then, she answered the three questions every contestant after her was also asked: “What charity of your choice would you donate your quarter wars funds to, and why?”, “Why should you be a Homecoming Royal?” and “Which decade is your favorite?”

One of the other contestants who did not use a choreographed dance for his performance was Michael Ladines from Theta Xi, who performed an acoustic, remixed version of “Again” by Fetty Wap. Following was Nick Tsinkelis, who performed a guitar solo on his electric guitar and then a cover of “679.” Both performances had the audience singing and clapping along several times.

Theta Kappa Chi’s Aashana Jairiwala put on a presentation of her henna tattoo skills. The electric dance performances of the night were from Phi Sigma Sigma’s Sam Osso, Sigma Delta Tau’s Samantha Napoliello and Sigma Delta Phi’s Ariana Locascio.

The show ended with Sigma Pi’s Grant Verity riling up the crowd with four separate dances to “Bye Bye Bye” and “Pop” by *NSYNC, Aaron Carter’s version of “I Want Candy” and then “Wanna Be” by The Spice Girls. When asked what makes him excited about Homecoming, Verity said, “Being with all the other orgs. I have a family here.” This theme of unity was expressed in many of the contestants’ answers to the questions.

The only two candidates from an organization that was not affiliated with Greek Life were Adrianna Strout, President of Players, and Danison Fronda, the Membership Chair of Rec Board.

Kaye Ferguson, a sister of Alpha Iota Chi and attendee, included her thoughts on the Talent Show. “It was good to see everyone. Everybody had a good time.”

Also commenting on the success of the event was Assistant Director of the Center for Student Involvement, Julie Flemming. Throughout her 12 years of experience putting together the talent shows, Flemming says her favorite part is always “seeing how creative the students are and what they come up with. I see them every day in conversations about running their organizations but being able to see them perform is new and it’s awesome. I love it.”

When each candidate was asked why he or she should be Homecoming Royalty, many contestants mentioned that the university and their respective organizations helped them get involved on campus and become a part of Montclair State’s campus.

The 2015 Homecoming Royalty will be crowned after the football game against William Paterson University on Saturday.

Milk is the classic drink from our childhood that is now available in countless different forms, but is it still as important as our parents made it out to be? Sort of. Which kind is the best to drink? That depends on many different factors.

Milk is not necessary for adults, but it can be a way to get protein and calcium if you like to drink it. Remember that milk has calories and nutrients and therefore should be treated as a type of food, not a drink you have with anything like water.

With so many varieties and options, it is beneficial to know whether or not you should drink milk and what kind is best for you. We start drinking milk as children to replace breast milk and get a good source of protein, calcium, and, thanks to fortification, vitamin D. Those are all things that are still good for us now too, but may not be in every “milk” you see.

The only true milk is one that comes from an animal, such as cow’s milk. When looking at cow’s milk, your basic options are 1 percent, 2 percent, skim or whole. These names refer solely to the fat content, which has an effect on calorie content as well. Skim milk has no fat and sits at about 80 calories per cup. Whole milk is on the other end of the spectrum at around 150 calories per 8 grams of fat. Although fat is completely necessary in a well-balanced diet, milk does not provide the good kind, but instead has a lot of saturated fat. This is okay to have some of, but should be less than 10 percent of your total calories for the day, meaning you should try to keep your intake as low as possible. The proteins and calcium content stays the same no matter what the fat content is, with each cup of milk giving you 8 grams of protein and about 30 percent of your daily calcium requirements (based on a 2,000 calorie diet). Because of good parts do not change regardless of the fat, go for the skim or 1 percent milk when choosing cow’s milk.

Other types of “milk” such as soy milk simply share the same name, but are not actually milk. They are a drink designed to resemble milk nutritionally, through taste or through ways it can be used. Soy milk can be a good complete nutritional option for someone watching their animal product intake, but it becomes important to look at ingredient lists to determine which kinds are full of additives and which are mostly soy.

The other nutrients found in soy milk that are comparable to cow’s milk, such as calcium or vitamin D, come from fortification. This means adding something to a food that was not there originally. Plain, original soy has 8 grams of protein per cup, just like cow’s milk, and is also similar calorie-wise with 110 calories per cup.

Some soy milks are fortified with even more calcium than regular milk, along with other micronutrients (nutrients you need in small amounts) such as riboflavin, vitamin B-12 and phosphorous. If you are vegan, look for soy milk that is fortified with vitamin B-12 to make up for the lack of B-12 vitamin from your food sources. Unflavored, original soy milks tend to be the lowest in ingredients and added sugars, making them a good alternative to cow’s milk.

If you have a sweet tooth and want your milk exactly as you had it when you were young, you may enjoy chocolate milk. The best. If you are adding in syrups yourself, watch out for too many additives such as artificial coloring and flavoring. Adding cocoa powder on its own can give you an authentic chocolate taste without the added chemicals. If you are looking for a brand of chocolate milk, sugar becomes your biggest concern. Try to find one with around 10 grams, which is comparable to regular milk and means that no extra sugar was added. If you have a type of chocolate milk that you know is full of sugar, treat it as an occasional desert instead of a everyday drink.

Nutritionally, almond milk is much less comparable to cow’s milk than soy. Like soy milk, original flavors tend to be the lowest in ingredients and sugar. Find an unsweetened option and the calories will be reduced even more. One cup of unsweetened almond milk has only 30 calories, but also only has 1 gram of protein. Due to the low calorie content along with a low nutrient content, almond milk is probably your best bet when baking, as it is a good way to lower the calories without affecting anything else, like texture. If you are looking for something to drink, stick to skim cow’s milk or soy milk to give you the important nutrients you need.

If you are adding in syrups yourself, watch out for too many additives such as artificial coloring and flavoring. Adding cocoa powder on its own can give you an authentic chocolate taste without the added chemicals. If you are looking for a brand of chocolate milk, sugar becomes your biggest concern. This coming Saturday is the Homecoming Showcase at 12 p.m. at the Amphitheater on campus, weather permitting. If it rains, the show will be located in Memorial Auditorium. Roy- als will be announced immediately following the Montclair State University football game that starts promptly at 3 p.m. The Greek community is hop- ing for a real “Blitz to the Past” with another win for the Greek Community this year.

The sound of jazz music and issues with students and staff at the Photography program, about his craft. As the director loves engaging with students or is one of an individual who has a strict character, but his demeanor is less so. The darkroom is an example of how much more space is needed for the Fine Arts department. “A much bigger building will be essential for the Fine Arts department,” said Schnitzer as he looked around the studio that encompasses the wooded darkroom, “but by the time that happens, I’ll most likely be retired.”

The darkroom can be essential for the Fine Arts department, but Schnitzer has worked as a solution for much of his time. Schnitzer teaches Photo I, Photo III, Commercial Photography, and 19th Century Photography. The last two courses are taught once a year and every few years, respectively.

These are only Schnitzer’s classes. This list doesn’t take into account other photography professors. Thus, every semester, the photo lab tends to be occupied.

In the next two weeks, Schnitzer’s students from Photo I will get their first darkroom experience. The darkroom only has 10 enlargers – part of the equipment needed to produce photographs – but his class usually reaches a capacity of 16 students, which means that students initially have to pair up. However, eventually students branch off into developing film or printing, an outcome that has worked as a solution for Schnitzer.

In addition, Schnitzer teaches a class on the history of photography in the 20th Century. The last two courses are taught once a year and every few years, respectively.

The darkroom is an example of how much more space is needed for the photography program. According to Schnitzer, the darkroom within the studio was created in 1975 and has become a concern for him. Although Schnitzer enjoys working closely with them, the mentoring for students has become a concern for him.

Craig Peters, a sophomore, has a sign-up list and 24-hour access to the photo lab. “Last semester, I remember there were 10 people on the list,” said Peters. “They were just sitting and waiting for other students to finish their projects.”

Still, Brianna Dougherty, a student he has last year, recalls some of the reasoning as to why it’s more frantic in the photo lab towards the end of the semester. “To be fair, people tend to leave their work to the last second and then everyone comes in here at the same time at the end of the semester,” said Dougherty.

Whether it’s helpful or problematic, Schnitzer says the temporary darkroom has overcome its purpose over these decades. The incessant presence of students and light space of the photo lab are signs that a bigger facility is needed for students of the Photography program, but also to accommodate all students majoring in Fine Arts.

Student shares passion for juggling

Montclair State University is known for allowing students to showcase what makes them stand out from everyone else and Ted Paz is no exception. Paz, a 19 year old student currently majoring in Biology, spends his free time outside of class teaching students around campus how to juggle. A member of the Jersey Jugglers club located in Parsippany, N.J., Paz loves to teach other students how to juggle. A fall Homecoming Weekend slowly creeps closer, students have begun to get excited for the scheduled festivities that will be taking place on campus, like the carnival, Homecoming showcase and, especially, the big football game. However, there is one festivity that no current Montclair State students will be taking part in: drinking.

Since the beginning of the fall semester in 1984, Montclair State University has claimed to be a “dry campus,” meaning that there would be absolutely no alcohol on the main campus and residence halls. As a consequence, students, for the past 30 years, have been unable to consume alcohol on main campus and in most residence halls. Those who dared to go against the rules have faced harsh disciplinary measures. For some students, disciplinary measures have been as devastating as expulsion.

No one would agree that expulsion is a fair response to adults legally drinking, as anyone over the age of 21 has the legal right to drink alcohol.

Yet, in order to be a student at Montclair State, young adults are forced to sign those rights away while on campus. It clearly does not seem to be a fair trade, as many other nearby universities have never required their students to do the same.

Montclair State says it has based its alcohol policy on two principles. The first is “the laws of the State of New Jersey” and the second is that “any consumption must occur within a social framework wherein behaviors are not the focus of the event.” These principles have allowed for a large amount of wiggle room. Montclair State’s “dry campus” rule, like with many others, has exceptions. For example, the Montclair State University: Alcohol Policy and Resource Guide states that “Alcohol is permitted only where all residents are of legal drinking age and where there are no guests who are not of legal drinking age and only inside the [Village at Little Falls Apartments].”

Another exception will take place just this weekend during which students will act as elders when alumni, who were students just months ago, throw some back at the Beer Garden event featured during the Homecoming Weekend.

With various exceptions, it is clear that Montclair State cannot be called a fully dry campus and their policies cannot be truly taken to heart. It is evident that Montclair State may just be a damp campus.

Quite honestly, the university’s alcohol policy is a bit much. Although the principles the policy is based on are made in good conscience, they are excessive. Of course it is important to enforce the law for anyone underage drinking, but people who are over 21 are not subject to the same alcohol laws as those who are under 21 and need to be treated fairly. All students cannot be placed in the same group based on their living arrangements. The Village Apartments cannot house every student over the age of 21 who lives on campus. With that in mind, it is not fair to restrict the alcohol use of some students because there was no room for them at The Village Apartments.

Montclair State needs to grow up and learn to treat adults like adults. Students need to be able to make their own choices and learn from their mistakes without the school administration breathing down their necks. Montclair State University will probably never be the next big party school, but there is no reason to keep it as a self-proclaimed “dry campus” for students who can legally drink. Montclair State may not be a “dry campus,” but the university should make it official that it is a damp campus.

Question of the Week:

Do you think that Montclair State University should be a dry campus?

- YES. I think it keeps our campus from being an unsafe community. We have one of the safest campuses in the state and I think it has to do with being a dry campus.
  - Gia Zadra, Biochemistry, Junior

- I believe it is better to have a dry campus because school and alcohol really don’t mix well. I do like the idea of The Village Apartments because they are [for students] 21 and older and most of them are going to graduate soon, but I think, on campus, it should stay dry.
  - Cassy Comer, Fashion Studies, Sophomore

- I agree with [its status], but I do think there are people who are 21 and older should be allowed to do as they please with their alcohol, as long as they’re already at an age where they can decide what they want to do.
  - Jocelynn Degreove, Animation/ Illustration, Freshman

- Yes, because there are a lot of young students here and I don’t think they would be able to handle it.
  - Dana Smith, Communications, Senior
CJ Pearson is drawing a lot of attention from the political scene. The 13-year-old has become known for his conservative views on YouTube. Pearson has appeared on Fox News numerous times and, on Sept. 8, Texas Senator Ted Cruz met with the young boy.

Age and Date are Only Numbers

Not everyone is made to play in college

W hen I was a teenager, I have been in a relationship for four years, I was part of a group of mixed races. There’s a mix of “Ah, cute race!” or “Damn, I could never do that. I’d never want to play the field!” and the classic “I saw what you did and thought I’d do the same.”

But, I’m not bored. I haven’t been bored in a long time. Four years. And, if I was 10 years older, I’d never get that question.

Speaker of the House’s announcement leaves some overjoyed and others upset

While his colleagues want something big, a far-right agenda, no matter how impractical, they are more concerned about building consensus and trying to come up with something both parties could swallow.

When you factor that last sentence in good faith, as Boehner provided over two of the most unpredictable, tumultuous sessions of Congress in history. He had to be to the president in 2014. He’s not shy to skewering Republicans on occasion. Yet, this same John Boehner has been heralded as a great consensus builder by almost all of his colleagues that they themselves knew was to the ridicule and name-calling of students who spend a long portion of students that attend classes from the previous one, the facility contains a mock trade floor along with 35-43 prints. The Flash ended season one with a giant singularity engulfing Central City and the Flash entering the singularity to stop it. Based on early details of season two, the writers are going to be dealing even deeper into the Flash’s unverse and cast of characters. As the promise continue to boast Earth-2’s Flash into Central City, things will get increasingly complicated.

The people of Central City are faced with a new threat, according to Garrick, with villains of the parallel universe coming through the singularity that nearly engulfed the city after Eobard Thawne was stopped in season one. There’s a lot to be excited for in the second season of The Flash, according to Garrick, with villains from the Multiverse, something that can be completely used throughout the season. That nearly engulfed the city after Eobard Thawne was erased from existence. That was after Eddie Thawne shot himself to ensure that Eobard would never exist. Are you confused yet?

Fetty Wap has had his fair share of success. Though generic, the theme of love, the track “I’m Straight” sounds more like the typical rap song in which Fetty does nothing but throw flowers at himself by mentioning his money, his cars and his sneakers, to which the best verse in this song alludes. “You should see my sneakers they like Damn Baby.”

With his chain of consecutive hit singles, Fetty Wap has returned to his straight-talking, unapologetic, but honest style and has picked up on the mistakes that were made in season three. Though his new album, ‘The Flash’ was released last Friday, it seems like it will fix some of the problems it had last season. The third season of arrow was not able to capitalize on the things that went right in season two. Instead, it had a jumbled mess that just didn’t mesh well with the parallel of the show. The villain, Ra’s al Ghul, which was grown by Matt Nable, but didn’t have the menace or personal connection that Slade Wilson had in season two.

This season, however, the producers have been hinting at a new show, with Oliver Queen now referred to as the Green Arrow. With villains that has a long-standing rivalry with the now-deceased Ra’s al Ghul, season three may tie into the events of season four.

With Sara Lance’s resurrection aided by Con sequencing revived from NBC’s failed series, Malcolm Merlyn is the new Ra’s al Ghul and the repercussions of Thora Thora’s trip to the Lazarus Pit, season four promises to change the tone of the show and pick up on the mistakes that were made in season three.

Hotel Transylvania 2: Animated Sequel is a True Monstrosity

It isn’t too shocking that Hotel Transylvania 2 had the top opening weekend of all September films, overtaking its predecessor in the process. It isn’t too shocking that the film was too predictable, which is not uncomical. However, after her performance this past weekend, I will definitely make them better. Without much humorous appeal, I found myself becoming bored very quickly and, in turn, I grew disinterested in the film. In addition to the jokes, the story is more child-friendly as opposed to being suitable for adult viewers. The basic message of the film is that all children should be accepted for who they are. Though this is an adult concept and a direct opposite of the message I’ve seen it. It is very interesting or deep enough to hold our attention for long. The message may resonate with young viewers, but they are not expected to take much away from it. Hotel Transylvania 2 did the exact opposite: Each role had minimal, fittingly suited for adults as well. The basic message of the film is that all children should be accepted for who they are. Homecoming Concert A Smash Hit “arly morning to the summer single that put OMI on the dancehalls. He also performed his new song, “Hula Hoop.” This song contained the familiar sound to the summer sensation sung live by OMI. He performed four songs. The first performer on deck was Adam Sandler, so I expected more comedically from him. Sandler, Kevin James, David Spade, Steve Buscemi and Andy Samberg led an impressive cast of voice actors, who were all not properly used. If a film has big time comedians, you would expect to have a good and funny film. Each role had minimal, fittingly suited for adults as well. Hotel Transylvania 2 is a direct opposite of the film. It is a well-crafted film with well-acted characters, and the message is not deep or meaningful. The film could be made for less and given the same way to0.

Another reason for my disappointment is that the trailers and commercials for Hotel Transylvania 2 had a big setup. I had some high hopes for Hotel Transylvania 2 because the trailers were so entertaining. However, this film was disappointing. All of the best parts were shown through pre-released, marketing campaigns. The trailers wound up overshadowing too much of the film. Overall, I was dissatisfied as I sat watching the film in the theater. In addition, the entire storyline was too predictable, which is not uncommon in animated features. If you have seen the trailers and commercials for Hotel Transylvania 2 already, then I suggest waiting until it’s released to promote the film were full of trailers and commercials that Sony released since the beginning of August, which beat the previous $42.5 million haul by Hotel Transylvania in the process. Despite their 2-1 loss to D.C. United on Nov. 8, the New York Red Bulls have advanced to the Eastern Conference Finals. Midfielder Péguy Luyindula netted the only Red Bulls’ goal. Luyindula, who scored once in the Red Bulls’ 2-0 win against D.C. United in the first leg of the conference semifinals, sent this side to the conference finals on a 3-2 goal aggregate.

Inside the six-yard box, Luyindula slotted a cross from captain Thierry Henry into the bottom right corner of United’s goal in the 57th minute. D.C. United’s first goal came late in the first half when midfielder Nick Deleon headed a cross from Taylor Words.

Field Hockey
Montclair State continued their winning ways against Vassar College and Gwynedd Mercy University to push their home record to 4-0 and their overall record to 8-1. They returned to action on Sept. 30 against Stevens Institute of Technology and will face Ramapo College on Oct. 2 and Kean University on Oct. 6.

Cross Country
After a week off, the Red Hawks will return to action at the NJIT Challenge in Newark, N.J. on Oct. 3.

Volleyball
Despite going 1-2 at the Hunter Invitational Tournament, Montclair State rebounded with a conference win over Ramapo College. They will return to action on Oct. 6 to face Rutgers-Camden in an NJAC contest. The 9-6 Red Hawks have fared well in the conference thus far, starting the season 2-1.

Football Continues to Struggle
Red Hawks drop to 0-3 in the 2015 season

While it was slightly chilly on Saturday, Sept. 26, a change of scenery did not help the Montclair State Red Hawks as they collapsed to a 0-3 record against Rowan University.

Montclair State quarterback Ryan Davies threw for 127-yards and was 17-for-36 passes with two interceptions while running backs Denzel Nieves and John DiStefano had 16 carries for 36 yards and seven attempts for 64 yards, respectively. DiStefano scored the Red Hawks’ only touchdown during the game and wide receiver Aaron Williams caught six passes for 56 yards.

On the defensive side of the ball, defensive back Billy Shimko and linebacker Michael Tenpenny each racked up 11 tackles. Shimko’s career tackle total now stands at 203. He has become the 23rd player in Montclair State history to accomplish such a feat. Tenpenny had 2 TFLs for a total of 2 yards and defensive lineman Joe Falato accounted for 7 tackles that included 3.5 for loss at 13 yards.

Rowan quarterback Dante Pinckney hit wideout Russ Forchion for a 92-yard touchdown pass early in the fourth quarter, while kicker Tyler Knighton completed two field goals (24-yard and 21-yard) before and after the lone Rowan touchdown to defeat MSU 13-7. Pinckney finished the game 7-for-12 with 149 yards, zero interceptions and a touchdown. Forchion’s receptions were low with 3, but yardage remained high with 104 total yards. Running back Withler Marcil also prospered by recording 28 touches for 94 yards.

The next game for the Red Hawks will be their Homecoming faceoff against William Paterson University at Sprague Field at 3 p.m. on Saturday, Oct. 3.

One Giant Win
New York Giants secure a crucial win against the Washington Redskins

Daniel Wattenfeld
Staff Writer

Time management seems like it has been the biggest flaw for the New York Giants so far in this 2015-2016 season. The Giants were coming off two poor losses and were hoping they could pull off a much-needed win to keep their playoff chances alive. Their game was held this past Thursday night at MetLife stadium against their rival, the Washington Redskins. To open up the season 0-3 would hardly eliminate their playoff chances, as there have been 45 teams who have started 0-3 since 2009 and only two have made the playoffs. Starting off wireless for the first three games would give the Giants a 4 percent chance to make the playoffs this season.

In the first two games of the season, the Giants lost within the last two minutes of the game in competitive situations. However, this week they came in with new motivation and a new mindset to win, which paid off in the end with a much-needed victory.

Late last month the coaches of the Giants have made some play selections and called upon the wrong players at critical situations. The team looked inconsistent and didn’t communicate. In that span, Griffith averaged 5.64 assists and 3.14 digs. However, they look to improve their season in the fourth quarter. In addition, their defense creates turnovers, but constantly gets injured in the process. Sometimes their defense just looks clueless against opposing offenses, but they have a new defensive coordinator with some new defensive talent. This combination may take a couple of games to finally click.

It seems like nearly the entire team is injured or not performing at their full potential due to their current health. Health has been a concern and serious problem circulating within the Giants clubhouse since last season, but this year it has been escalating to a new level. Hopefully, they can heal quickly so that their season doesn’t slip away. If they don’t heal from their injuries, then their season will be in jeopardy and the playoffs will be out of the question. The Giants have made poor plays and are holding workout sessions for wide receivers such as Super Bowl Champion and veteran Wes Welker, in addition to former New York Giant Hakeem Nicks and second Chris Cooley.

No one knows if they will be signed to a deal or if they will make the roster, but the purpose is to provide a different showrooming on the practice field. The general manager wants to see if these offensive veterans are still valuable assets or if their careers have hit their downfalls.

Tom Coughlin enjoys seeing change and establishing competition on the field for his starters to duel it out. This might be what the Giants were looking for because they want to add depth to their wide receiver spots with Victor Cruz, who is reported to be making his debut this upcoming week.

This week, the Giants will be playing a tough contender in Buffalo, N.Y. against the Buffalo Bills. This game will set the tone for both teams in their divisions due to their records. The Bills have been playing incredibly well up to this point with a fantastically defensive defense that forces many turnovers. Additionally, they have Terrell Owens in the quarterback position who scrambles and gets big gains. It’s a match made in heaven.

McCoy has the backfield and Rex Ryan leading the way, this will be a tight and intense game. Overall, this will be a great matchup that you do not want to miss.
