Police have narrowed down a description of the vehicle which struck Montclair State student Anna Semioli last Friday, leaving her critically injured and fighting for her life.

Residents of Montclair and the surrounding areas have been asked to be on the lookout for a “dark-colored pick-up truck,” possibly a Ford F-150 with recent damage on the front bumper, according to a press release issued by Clifton Police Department on Wednesday.

Local businesses were urged to check their security camera footage from 11:40 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 9 into the early hours of Friday, Oct. 10 when Semioli, a Senior Accounting major due to graduate in the spring, was hit and left on the side of the road.

Semioli’s family renewed their plan for anyone with information on the person responsible to come forward, offering a $10,000 reward for any information leading to an arrest.

Gina Semioli, sister of the victim, said to The Montclarion on Tuesday night, “I find it very unlikely that no one on campus saw her that night.”

“We need someone to come forward. We need help. She’s fighting for her life.”

Students Speak Out on Power Outage

The power outage occurred due to electricity leaking from a cable outside of the new Student Center ramp.

Montclair State University suffered a major power outage early Tuesday morning, leaving students in the dark in nearly every building on the main campus.

Shawn Connolly, Assistant Vice President of Facilities, said that the outage was caused by a fault in one of the two feeders which supply power to Blanton Hall. He explained that a fault in the system results in the loss of power to the affected area.

“As soon as possible. We know time is of the essence and Campus Life and Student Center have requested, if anyone has information, please contact them,” said Gina Semioli, sister of the victim.

Semioli remains hospitalized at St. Joseph’s Regional Medical Center in Paterson, where her family surrounds her and hopes for a miracle.

“I feel like there could be something suspicious from this,” said childhood friend Gianna Martino to CBS New York. “It could really be just foul play.” In response to the suspicions expressed by Martino, Gina Semioli responded, “It’s just speculation at this point. We really don’t know anything.”

Dr. Karen Pennington, Vice President of Student Development and Campus Life, said in a statement to The Montclarion, “We were very saddened to learn of this tragic accident involving Anna Semioli and our thoughts are with her and her family during this very difficult time. As our Police Department has requested, if anyone has information, please contact them as soon as possible. We know that events such as this one can affect friends and classmates.

This weekend, hundreds of people participated in a march at Montclair State University to raise awareness of the prevalence of sexual assault in our society. At the end of the walk, the participants were met by a dogs and pet dog. The dogs were adorable from Therapy Dogs International (TDI), a non-profit, volunteer-based organization that trains dogs and handlers to visit places where they can be of service. All the dogs were friendly and loved attention, instantly becoming the center of attention and bringing smiles to everyone in the crowd.

“This study is meant to learn about how to make disclosure of sexual assault easier for survivors and how to help siblings support one another.”

- Veronica Barrios, Doctoral Research Assistant

Michael J. Feeney, a former New York Daily News reporter and the president of the New York Association of Black Journalists, visited Montclair State University on October 14. Feeney, a New Jersey native from Teaneck, began by saying he never realized he was a good writer until one of his teachers told him so in his senior year of high school. From there, he went onto Delaware State University.

Feeney said the best way in the door to any kind of journalism is through internships. He travelled 11 hours in his mom’s car to Kentucky for his first internship. He also interned at the Associated Press in Baltimore. Feeney said they treated him like a regular reporter in all of his internships. After graduating, he moved to Detroit to work for the Associated Press. After about a year, he received an opportunity to work at the Bergen Record. He reported at the New York Daily News for five years.

Feeney spoke about his previous stories, where he covered cop beats, murders and “ever a hundred… not really… but a lot of fires.” Perhaps the most striking was a story he wrote in first person about the fire that burned his house in Teaneck down the day before Thanksgiving. That year, a year later, he and his family had a lot to be thankful for.

Feeney flashed pictures of himself with big celebrities such as Jay-Z, J. Cole and Drake from previous stories.

He said the way you get big celebrities like that is through contacts. He said as long as you are nice to everyone, they will usually be nice back. He also does not have to give a brush call asking how they are every once in a while.

Feeney finished with a warm smile by saying he loves journalism and just wants to get out there and tell everyone a good story.

The Family and Child Stud- ios Department is conducting a research project aimed to study the relationships between sexual assault and sibling relationships. In order for the participant in the study, students must be survivors of sexual assault and have a sibling of any age or as long as they are 18 or older.

Participants will be asked ques- tions about how they discussed their assault with their siblings; whether or not they had felt comforted by their siblings, how it felt to share their story, what ad- vice they would offer to other survivors and more.

"My [goal for the research project] are to provide an op-portunity for survivors to share their story, to help understand how the relationships between siblings and their relationship and to better understand how the affects of the sexual assaul- tors during disclosures,” said Bar- rios. "In five college students has survived sexual assault and four in five have a sibling. Yet there is little research about how the rela- tionship between siblings is af- fected. This study was created to shed more light on the topic and help siblings support each other."

The dogs were all from Thera- active Minds, along with Car- olina Mendez, who is also a Psychology major with a minor in justice and Family Studies. According to Mendez, “I would be here whether or not I helped coordinate the event. We have to stop being afraid of the unknown and keep moving forward.”

his twin brother, Scott Kelly, is “now spending a year aboard the space station. [It is] the first time we have ever sent somebody into space for a year.” Mark Kelly also said that, from space, one could make how thin the atmosphere is and mentioned how important environmental studies are in combatting this issue.

At the ribbon-cutting ceremony, President Susan A. Cole welcomed the crowd filling the brand new lecture hall and spoke about the building. She began with thanks to Donald Dvalos, CEO of Terminal Construction, and Greg Bressler, Vice President of Facilities Management, for the two new buildings on campus. She said that “neither new buildings on campus. She said that “neither newly completed buildings on campus are turning that around.”

She concluded her speech by stating that, with more classrooms to satisfy students’ interests in science studies, “almost 3,000 students are studying in the science disciplines.”

Robert Prezant, Dean of College of Sciences and Mathematics, then informed the audience of various research projects that will be taking place within CELS, such as studies on parasitic diseases and work with the Passaic River Institute. After this, Prezant introduced Mark Kelly and Robert Hariri, chairman, founder and chief scientific officer for Celgene Cellular Therapeutics, to the crowd. The Montclarion • October 15, 2015 • PAGE 5

Prezant was the moderator for the panel and one of the first topics brought up was the study being done on Mark Kelly and his identical twin brother, Scott Kelly. Mark Kelly told the crowd that due to their identical anatomy and respective times spent in space, they are the subjects of NASA’s twin study. They are studying the effects that brutal conditions of space will have on Scott Kelly after his year-long visit to the international space station.

Mark Kelly was able to give us some insight into the rigors of our atmosphere and you go into orbit, you deal with physiological issues. You lose bone mass, [your bones] decalcify, your immune system gets depressed [and] if you close your eyes at night in space, you see little lightning strikes, [which are] gamma rays. Prezant then posed the question to Kelly and Hariri of how the scientific community should urge people to be more environmentally proactive when the media is partially skeptical of scientists. Kelly said in regard to the media skepticism, “I think there are a subset of them that have major issues with accepting scientific fact, because some of those things are no longer up for debate.”

Hanri responded to Prezant’s questions on the topic of government funding scientific research, stating, “This is a fact. Some of the best investments in Cooking food with a microwave has been a growing trend among college-aged individuals. Tiffany Saez

When you live on campus it is easy to come up with lots of excuses as to why you cannot eat healthy. A popular excuse is that, without having a full kitchen in your room, you can only buy premade foods and snacks to have on-hand. This can lead to overprocessed foods high in sugar and fat.

Although having a full kitchen would make things easier, a microwave is a great way to prepare lots of healthy foods. Most students living in residence halls have at least that and a fridge, which gives them many ways to prepare food on their own.

Although some things may not come to mind immediately, with a little planning and thinking it is easy to utilize a microwave to help you eat healthfully. Though it may not be how you have seen it done at home, a lot of vegetables can easily be prepared in a microwave. Anything that can be steamed on top of the stove can be cooked in the microwave.

Asparagus or broccoli, for example, are two great options for you to put in a microwaveable bowl with just enough water to cover the bottom of the dish. A little water is important, but too much may lead to the water taking away some nutrients when you drain the dish. The microwave tends to cook things a lot faster than if they were steamed on a stove, so put it any minutes-and-a-half to check each individual vegetable for readiness.

Another easy and healthy option is a potato. All potatoes have beneficial complex carbohydrates and vitamins, but sweet potatoes do have a lot more vitamins A, if you would like the most nutritious option. Wash a potato, rubbing the skin for any dirt, and then cut a few slices on the stop with a knife. You do not need to cut all the way through, just enough that you clearly see a few lines and cut marks into the potato. If you carve a “hashtag” sign into the top of the potato, you will be good to go. Put it on a plate without any water this time and cook for a few minutes. Again, the time will vary depending on the size and microwave so check often for readiness.

From here you can simply eat it like any baked potato, with or without the skin. If you want something to put on top, use salt, or throw a spoonful of Greek yogurt on the potato. In addition to producing, a microwave can be used to make a “mug” cake or a single-serving of a baked dessert. There are tons of recipes for this online; here is one example for a quick, healthy version of a cookie dough-flavored cake. Combine two table spoonfuls of 100 percent whole wheat flour, two table spoons of quick oats, one quart teaspoon of baking powder, two teaspoons of sweetener, one quarter cup of milk and one egg while in a microwaveable mug. Use a fork to whisk in the egg.

The sweetener used can be any type of sweetener such as honey or brown sugar. The milk can also be of any variety, including almond milk, which is low in calories. The egg can also be a flax “egg,” which is one tablespoon of ground flax seed and three table spoonfuls of water mixed together. Add one table spoon of your favorite mix-ins such as dark chocolate chips or raisins. This recipe only uses whole, basic ingredients and is a great way to watch your portion size if you love dessert, but have trouble sticking to one serving. All of these ingredients are easy to store if you just have a fridge and this does not require many cooking utensils, making it easy to do if you do not have a full kitchen.

Look online for other variations of a mug cake. Try to find ones that use whole wheat flour and only have one or two teaspoons of added sugar.

Sexual assault has become a topic that is not often spoken about on college campuses. It has become so much of a taboo conversation that even victims of sexual assault are afraid to discuss it in fear of ridicule and embarrassment. With the “It’s On Us Campaign,” Montclair State University Greek Life is looking to put an end to this fear of speaking out against sexual assault.

Montclair State University’s Office of Greek Life has partnered with Greek Life’s Interfraternity Council (IFC), The Student Government Association (SGA), the LGBTQ Center, Counseling and Psychological Services (CALS), Associate Dean of Students Dean Gary, Donna Barry in Health Services and the University Police Department to put an end to this fear of speaking up and call everyone out at this year’s Hazing Grounds. The week of events would be a “Call to Action - It’s On Us” week. Amanda Rielj

The Montclarion

The week will begin on Monday, Oct. 19 and will end on Friday, Oct. 23. The week will consist of a showing of the documentary “The Hunting Ground” on Monday at 8:30 p.m. in University Hall 1030 and on Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. in the Student Center, 411-414. On Tuesday, Oct. 20, there will be a Bystander Intervention/Title IX Training with Dean Gary and Donna Barry at 1:00 p.m. in the Student Center, 417.

On Wednesday, Oct. 21, there will be a Self Defense Workshop with the University Police Department, with the location to be determined. Ending the night events for the week on Thursday, Oct. 22 will be a workshop about sexual assault sponsored by the LGBTQ Center at 8:30 p.m. in University Hall 1070.

When asked what the aim of the week’s events would be, Cordero said, “I want the campus to be educated and aware of the causes of sexual assault and how conversations on the matter to understand the culture of consent and be a part of the solution.” Cordero and those sponsoring the event strongly encourage all campus students to attend the week of events and sign the pledge to end sexual assault on college campuses all week from 12:00 p.m. to 3:00 p.m. in the Student Center Main Lobby. Sitting in her living room, Hyemin Park is surrounded by clothing as she cuts and sews her latest dance costume into shape. “It’s literally a full time job,” Park said as she held her bright purple robe against her chest in front of mirror.

Park, 22, a senior at Montclair State University, is a traditional Korean dancer. Raised by a single mother, she was put into dance classes as a form of discipline.

“It’s not that I was a wild child,” Park said, “but my mom thought it would be best to learn how to act and control myself in a professional setting.”

Park said the discipline and respect instilled in her by her mom helped her understand the importance of practice and proper behavior.

When she was a child, Park was always moving around and being taken away by how much she loved dance. “It started to take a toll on her,” she admitted. “As much as she hated to admit it, the lure of dance was becoming too stressful. Between school and dance, I literally had no time for myself.”

By the following summer, Park was ready to dance again. “My teacher and I had a long conversation,” Park said, “and I told her that, as much as I love dancing, I need some ‘me’ time.”

She understood and said that she needed me back because we were great together as a team.

As for the foreseeable future, Park will continue to dance. “It’s a hobby I just can’t seem to shake,” Park said. “As long as I love dancing and don’t see it as a burden, I’ll continue to dance.”

Tradition and Passion: Montclair State Student Dances through Life

Park not only creates her own costumes but assists other students and her teacher as an apprentice in the art of traditional Korean dancing. The dyeing, cutting, and sewing of costumes is a full time job for her.

“I always wanted to keep the two separate,” Park said. “They’re both escapes for me in different regards. If I danced on campus, my entire life would become dance and I never wanted that.”

In January 2014, Park took a brief hiatus from her apprenticeship to focus on school. “Leaving the company was one of the hardest decisions I ever had to make,” Park said. “I felt like I had a responsibility to my teacher and students to be there for them, but it was becoming too stressful. Between school and dance, I literally had no time for myself.”

As a senior majoring in Family and Child Studies with a concentration in Family Services, she also wants to be able to help children. She had a troubled childhood, but Dias said she used this as motivation to help children without a voice of their own. “In my country, the dynamic of parent [and] child is very different. Children just do what the parents tell them [and] they don’t have their own voice. I’m not saying they can do whatever they want, but they should be able to have an opinion on things.”

Jonathan Caspi, Director of Family Child Studies at Montclair State University, describes Dias as a passionate student that “contributed to the classroom environment with a sense of humor.”

When talking to Dias, she maintains an aura of controlled energy that her friend Jose Cortez describes perfectly; “Here’s somebody that doesn’t take no for an answer. She may seem like a shy person at first, but, if you put her in a room, she is fully capable to work a crowd.”

As vice president of the organization Femvolution, Dias has helped in the process to change Montclair State University’s sexual assault policy. The decision came after hearing about Columbia University student Emma Sulkowicz, who carried a mattress around her campus to protest the college’s inaction in her case. With the support of the New Jersey United Students, Femvolution collected signatures from campus to update the sexual assault policy. Dias said Montclair State’s “policy wasn’t specific about who is excluded” and, that with the update, they wanted “to change the wording so everyone, [including] transgender, gay and undocumented students, knows they can go and be helped.”

After delivering the letter to the president’s office last semester, Femvolution received a response within a day: “The fact that [we] met with them and other members of the organization was good,” Dias said. But, they have not had the second meeting school officials had promised. She said Femvolution will be writing to the Dean of Students next and will keep pushing for the change to be official.

The change in the document is important because it will also be changing the definition for sexual assault to include harassment. “I want people to be able to speak up. If you don’t like the way your teacher is looking at you, for example, you should be able to say that.”

When talking about the future, Dias sits a bit straighter and changes her conversational tone to a more serious one. At 23 years old, she has a five-year plan and a 10-year plan. In the next five years, she plans on going to graduate school and networking with people that could help her with her biggest life goal. “I want to build a school in the Dominican Republic with a special needs section. It would be inclusive, bilingual and for underprivileged kids.”

In ten years, she expects to have three of these schools around the country fully functioning. “I’d like to have people from there to work on it so it can also create jobs and include teachers from the country as well.”

Everyone that she has told about the project has expressed interest and offered words of encouragement, which really mean a lot to her. Professor Caspi says she is someone that “makes things happen.”

Dress: H&M
Bracelet and cardigan: Mandee
Shoes: Payless

Sometimes mid-October really isn’t that cold and long sleeves will do it. Sweater dresses that are off-the-shoulder are the perfect mix between a casual, summer look and a warm, fall one. If they are more neutral, try throwing over a fun printed cardigan or vest, like one that is longer than the dress. Finish the casual look with flats or booties.

Dress and sunglasses: Urban Outfitters
Jacket: Zara
Shoes: H&M

Here’s another monochromatic black look, just a little fancier. Instead of knee socks, stay warmer with a pair of opaque black tights under a body con dress. Now is the perfect time to take out those heeled booties for fall outfits. The leather jacket makes the look more edgy while the sunglasses make it a little more casual.

Dress: Atlantic City
Cardigan: thrifted
Boots: Zulily

Oftentimes, those fun summer dresses can stick around for a bit with the help of warm cardigans. Try opting for a patterned dress with a cardigan of a contrasting color. Long dresses tend to keep you warmer, so if it’s cool outside, go for one that’s knee-length or longer. This time, skip the tights and opt for knee-high boots. If you want to, wear knee socks underneath for a unique and slightly warmer look.

Top: Express
Flannel: Carhartt
Jeans: Pacsun
Shoes: Bulldog
Bag: gift

Rather than turn summer pieces to fall, just jump ahead to fall fashion. Many people enjoy cozy cardigans and flannels and, if it’s cool outside, go for it. This cream and tan look is perfect for fall. The simple top makes the flannel stand out and the pants match perfectly, but not in a silly way. Finish the look off with sneakers and you’re out the door.

Top: Charlotte Russe
Skirt and cardigan: H&M
Socks: Forever 21
Shoes: Dr. Martens

When in doubt, add knee socks. If your legs tend to get chilly, knee socks are the perfect mix between tight and bare legs. When it’s not too cold, skip the tights and opt for knee socks. Try this monochromatic black look of the classic crop top and skater skirt layered with a cardigan. Finish the look with matching combat boots. Don’t forget to take a selfie.

Rather than turn summer pieces to fall, just jump ahead to fall fashion. Many people enjoy cozy cardigans and flannels and, if it’s cool outside, go for it. This cream and tan look is perfect for fall. The simple top makes the flannel stand out and the pants match perfectly, but not in a silly way. Finish the look off with sneakers and you’re out the door.

Top: Charlotte Russe
Skirt and cardigan: H&M
Socks: Forever 21
Shoes: Dr. Martens

When in doubt, add knee socks. If your legs tend to get chilly, knee socks are the perfect mix between tight and bare legs. When it’s not too cold, skip the tights and opt for knee socks. Try this monochromatic black look of the classic crop top and skater skirt layered with a cardigan. Finish the look with matching combat boots. Don’t forget to take a selfie.

Dress and sunglasses: Urban Outfitters
Jacket: Zara
Shoes: H&M

Here’s another monochromatic black look, just a little fancier. Instead of knee socks, stay warmer with a pair of opaque black tights under a body con dress. Now is the perfect time to take out those heeled booties for fall outfits. The leather jacket makes the look more edgy while the sunglasses make it a little more casual.

Romper: H&M
Cardigan: Red Dress Boutique
Shoes: Vans

Rompers are by far one of the quickest and most comfortable pieces of the summer. As we transition into fall, these can stick around by layering warmer pieces over. Try a fuzzy cardigan like this one and knee socks if needed. Not only is this warmer than a strapless romper, it is just as comfortable. Alternately, go for an edgy look with distressed tights, a leather jacket and combat boots. The possibilities are endless.

Top: Express
Flannel: Carhartt
Jeans: Pacsun

Oftentimes, those fun summer dresses can stick around for a bit with the help of warm cardigans. Try opting for a patterned dress with a cardigan of a contrasting color. Long dresses tend to keep you warmer, so if it’s cool outside, go for one that’s knee-length or longer. This time, skip the tights and opt for knee-high boots. If you want to, wear knee socks underneath for a unique and slightly warmer look.

Aries
21 March—20 April
This week is all about communication. Talking with people is a great way to strengthen relationships. Reach out to old friends or even family members. It might work out in your favor. Communication with romantic partners is key. This week is also great for applying for a job or going for a promotion. Studying also will pay off this week.

Taurus
21 April—20 May
This week is going to be busy. Romantic relationships, while at an all-time high, could interfere with other things (job, school, etc.). There may be an awesome opportunity coming up for you, but if you let the stress of the week get to you, you might miss it. Keep your eyes open.

Gemini
21 May—20 June
This week is all about love and acceptance. Positivity is flying around your heart. Stay open-minded this week. That special someone is swooning over you. Be creative and plan a date. It might spark some fire in your relationship.

Cancer
22 June—23 July
This week is all about confidence. You have the ability to show off your best assets this week. Venus and Mars are looking out for you and are looking to empower you to remember how beautiful and amazing you are. Remember to treat yourself to something nice this week.

Leo
20 July—23 August
This week is all about control. Be careful when it comes to finances this week to avoid stressful situations. Try not to give into monetary impulses. On a positive aspect, romantic relationships are about to soar and further in the upcoming future. Look out for a new starting flame or a spark in an already burning one. Either way, love is in the air this week.

Virgo
22 September—22 October
This week is all about appearance and professionalism. You have the ability to show off your strong points this week. There may be an opportunity at hand in school or at work to do a task that puts you on top. Just be careful to not allow stress to get to you. Opportunities like this can cause a great deal of anxiety. Hard work will most certainly pay off this week.

Libra
22 September—22 October

Just be careful to not allow stress to get to you. Opportunities like this can cause a great deal of anxiety. Hard work will most certainly pay off this week.

Scorpio
23 October—22 November
This week is all about appreciation. Good behavior will be noticed, which may work out in your favor. Remember, the simplest act of kindness can go a long way. Your good actions will result in opening opportunities for you. Relationships of all kinds will strengthen this week.

Sagittarius
22 November—21 December
This week is all about education. The week ahead shows to be beneficial to your school work. You must still remember to study and do your work, but the stars show that when you do work hard this week, it will most likely work out in your favor. Don’t cut corners this week and remember that slow and steady wins the race.

Capricorn
22 December—19 January
This week is all about decisions. Sometimes it can be hard to see what path to choose. What is right and what is wrong? Life can become stressful when large decisions are facing you dead in the eye. Remember to take time to yourself and keep yourself grounded this week. Listen to your heart and your head. Sometimes, a little peace and quiet can help you come to a realization.

Aquarius
20 January—18 February
This week is all about self-management, especially for athletes. Make sure you keep your priorities straight this week. There is a lot on your plate causing a whirlwind of both positive and negative. Several opportunities may be arising this week. Be careful how you pick and choose. Keep your mind set on priorities first.

Pisces
18 February—20 March
This week is all about romantic growth. While the week may seem cool, calm and collected, make sure to look out for signs that lead to relationships strengthening. It is also a time to show that special someone that you still care as much as you always have. Simple acts, such as a sweet good morning text message, can go a long way when it comes to love. Don’t ever forget to show that you care.

Putting an End to “Things Happen”

S

Sometimes, things happen and no one gets this better than the students of Montclair State University. In recent years, facility problems, such as spotty or weak wireless Internet, the inexcusable conditions in some residence halls as well as the electrical outage that occurred Tuesday morning, have plagued nearly every part of Montclair State. Time after time, students have sought change. However, their concerns have commonly been met with this “things happen” attitude. As students’ troubles are continually shrugged off, they have become more aggravated, as those problems remain a part of their daily lives. Clearly, Montclair State needs to address all the problems that pop up and the quicker the better.

Since the beginning of the year, no student has gone untouched by the problems that face Montclair State.

During the 2015 spring semester, some resident students were only able to take lukewarm showers as their rooms were often incapable of producing hot water. Of course, many students successfully contacted Montclair State staff in hopes of correcting the problem, but informing the right people did not help the residents, since it took nearly the entire semester for anything to change. It is obvious that students who pay increasingly high room and board costs should never have to deal with a hot water problem for an entire semester, when it could likely have been easily fixed.

But, regardless of how long it would have taken to fix, students should have been updated on the situation to know that their voices were heard and that steps were being taken to address the situation. By giving updates, people would have been able to be more understanding of how long it would take to correct the issue. With a lack of updates, students eventually grew extremely impatient and unhappy.

Just this week, Montclair students faced another problem: a power outage. Once the power went out, the Montclair State community was notified. At 6:15 a.m., students received an alert text announcing the problem on campus and that PSE&G was already on campus working to address it. PSE&G was already on campus and that neither the students of Montclair State nor the faculty, administration, or even student services were informed promptly of the outage. Campus-wide, the inexcusable conditions experienced on Tuesday morning have been common for years, facility problems, such as the terrible Wi-Fi connection on campus, Montclair State will utilize a system that works. In the future, hopefully Montclair State will utilize a method that will keep everyone in the loop and just a little bit happier because “Things Happen” does not need to be our school motto.

Within the next half-hour, students received another text with an update stating that the power on Clove Road had been restored and, soon afterward, another text was sent stating that all power had been restored to campus. The ordeal was over by 8:20 a.m., just two hours after the initial report.

Tuesday’s electrical outage should serve as a future model to all large-scale problems on campus. Everyone who is a part of the campus community was notified promptly of the situation and were updated in a timely manner. Not to mention, the electrical outage was addressed and solved in an extremely quick fashion.

Montclair State needs to use this example more often to address the general concerns of the community. Campus-wide notifications have proven to be a great way to distribute information on problems to the entire campus community effectively. Students would be much more understanding of any new obstacle if properly informed. With the latest crisis being the terrible Wi-Fi connection on campus, Montclair State should work to recognize the concerns of the students and give out information about how they are working to solve it.

It is evident that Montclair State has found a system that works. In the future, hopefully Montclair State will utilize a method that will keep everyone in the loop and just a little bit happier because “Things Happen” does not need to be our new school motto.

Question of the Week:

What advice would you give on studying for midterms?

“I need some advice. I guess I would say do not cram and that you should ask your professors for help if you need it, because they really do help.”

-Muna Obeid
Senior,
Linguistics

“Make sure you study ahead of time and do not cram. Also, make sure you know when your midterm is by paying attention to the syllabus. Overall, don’t stress. It’s not the end of the world.”

-Bunmi Toyosi

Biology

“Don’t leave studying for the last minute. It also helps to make a study group.”

-Keyla Nunez
Junior,
Biology

“Make outlines of the readings.”

McCarthy’s Exit Spells Doom for Republicans

It is just one problem after another for the GOP as Election Day approaches. With the recent Ryan-Biden debate, it seems that the more things change, the more they stay the same. A spate of negative news has helped to cement the Republicans as the party of fear and division. The GOP is facing a uphill battle with the electorate, who have grown increasingly disillusioned with the party’s policies and leadership.

Ben Carson’s Pro-Gun Argument Blasted

Comments about Holocaust made by presidential hopeful demonstrate disrespect and a lack of understanding of the events that occurred during that time. The ADL, a civil rights organization, responded to Carson’s comments by saying they were “incredibly tone-deaf.” The ADL emphasized that the Holocaust was a tragedy that should not be used as a political tool.

Camaguey is the third largest city in central Cuba. Sprinkled with narrow streets are home to approximately 300,000 inhabitants. Inside this little Vega less known Santana Perez and Diana Rosa Perez Legon, who have developed an exhibition, development and research center of new media exchange event.

Santana and Diana Legon have come all the way to Montclair State University to share what they have created. This includes the founding of a cultural center (CEDINM), and the international Video Art Festival of Camaguey (FIVAC), which has existed from March 31 to April 4 this year, in a fascinating trip, Montclair State's own faculty Beverly Petersen and Roberta Friedman flew to Cuba to attend this festival to share their projects and discover the artistic life of this international event.

The cultural center, CEDINM, is a space unlike anything in Camaguey. There are very few like them and most are within the city of Havana. Its focus is art created with modern technology as opposed to more classical art forms like paint or non-media. Its goal is to increase the development of local and national contemporary media art in Cuba and to foster international communication. The center hosts multiple socio-cultural projects and FIVAC is the largest. Importantly, all of their programming is free. In their own words, CEDINM is aimed at “humanizing technology.”

Peterson and Friedman worked in for a treat when they actually arrived at CEDINM. “Within days of arriving in Cuba, we knew we had to share this unique experience with our students. It became wonderful to see how the Montclair State community embraced our guests when Levine and Callepas created a vital event that helped bring our guests to an even broader university audience.”

In addition to visiting a handful of projects and institutions, Santana, Legon and translator Raul Gallope, gave an extended interview for the Film Forum on Tuesday, Oct. 14. About 70 students and faculty members gathered in Cohen Lounge to watch pieces assembled by Santana and other collaborative artists as well as footage taken at CEDINM. Santana Spanish major Damon Delgado was one of the students deeply affected by their presentation for the Department of Spanish and Italian. Delgado said, “I think the presentation showed the reality of Cuba as it exists right now. I am Cuban and from the very place that their center is located. I definitely feel connected to them. I put myself in their shoes. You definitely see that they want to show the world what they can do.” Sophomore Spanish major Matthew Kelly said, “I don’t know very much about Cuba. In the presentation, helped me put the country in context a little bit. I know little about Cuba is what I know about Che Guevara, who I find interesting.”

“An art educator, it was fantastic to see my students so inspired by Legon and Santana’s visits to our class,” said Peterson. “It is exciting that the Global Education programs here at [Montclair State] is playing an important role in this historic opening dialog between two countries.”

When Petersen says “historic,” she may be referring to the geopolitical expansion of art-centered communications between the United States and Cuba. For almost 60 years now, the United States has enforced a commercial, economic and financial embargo against the country, making communication and travel more difficult for both Cubans and American citizens.

Only in 2009 did President Barack Obama begin to ease restrictions. In January of 2013, policy had become the most lenient it had ever been, allowing open travel to Cuba for Cubans-Americans and selective visas for students and missionaries. Santana and Legon are only two of the seven artists allowed “artist visas” that last five years. After their presentation in Cohen Lounge, Santana, Legon and Gallope sat with the Montclarion to discuss what they’re working on. Santana is an artist and the President of FIVAC. Lego is the producer of FIVAC and CEDINM.

“[P]eter Pan” Fails to Fly High

Julie Siegel

Live-action remakes of beloved animated classics are the latest Hollywood trend but many are surprised that another attempt to re- create the classic of classic, Peter Pan failed to take flight. The movie flew through theaters this weekend, this time titled Pan.

Like the original, the story of Peter Pan have been made before, most famously Fandor and Finding Neverland. Both these films could be considered sequels to the original, whereas Pan is arguably the first original Pan.

There were two ways this film could have turned out, as its own independent story, or as a reimagining of a specific Disney film. Unfortunately, Pan was the latter.

The potential for the film to be great started with the story which I liked the concept of. The main story follows a 13-year-old boy, a take with a new story as a reimagining of the children’s story of Peter Pan. Many people want to see Pan fly higher, but this Pan was not able to soar. It was trapped in the multiple storylines, which do not mash well and constantly get in each other’s way. Pan would have been present in a few scenes, then disappear for half an hour, then reappear in a disjointed sequence. This made the film harder to follow because it was not straightforward. It is as if the filmmakers wanted to hide the story, leading to two completely independent storylines being forced to coexist. Along with the dualing storylines, Pan also failed to be a true original film by including too many references to the original, Peter Pan. Every possible reference was made such as the pirates wearing crosses, the boy’s name, James Hook using a hook to dangle and darker. The worst was the end - up of the entire film.

Many people like the concept of the film, especially with acting and acting is a difficult. She started acting at 7 and has been performing for over 20 years, mostly as a friend and actress in her friends’ productions. In her performance, in great detail, she brings her character into the story. She even switched the switch to teaching and directing.

When asked what she expects from her actors, Kerner said that it’s all part of putting different aspects of acting being forced out of a four-year program. The stage adaptation is relatively new. Most people haven’t been on stage. Kerner explained. It was first performed in London in 2013 and has only been staged a couple of times in the United States. Most people who are in this production for the first time.

Susan Kerner has recently directed successful productions of Big Meal and Cypher Park. Some of the challenges Kerner faces as a director are with undergraduate students, specifically crew members. “They have very protective of their own design,” she says. “And then you come as a director and say ‘I don’t like this. I want to use it this way.” It’s teaching them to collaborate and sometimes it’s hard.”

Christina Argioli, a fifth-year BFA Production major who has worked with Kerner on several productions in the past, including Big Meal, finds that Kerner knows what she wants. “This is wise and, as a director, she really knows what she wants.”

The Department of Theater and Dance will be presenting the stage adaptation of Pride and Prejudice from Originally scheduled for release on May 5, Hallucinogen has already been the subject of much acclaim following its postponed release last week. In spite of the highly esteemed remarks that Hallucinogen has drawn, there is nothing really monumental or unique about this particular disc.

The overall sound of the six-track EP gives listeners the impression that Kelela is trying too hard to replicate the very same, slow-paced, avant-garde melodies of FKA Twigs. The fact that Kelela released her EP two months after that of Twigs does not seem to help her image either. While her lyrics are lit the least like those of Twigs in terms of obscurity, they do in fact tell a story. Hallucinogen is simply one's reliving of a breakup I’ve loved. I’m still very excellently reflects its different stages through Hallucinogen opens up with “Message,” a track that Kelela speaks out to her very distant partner, telling him “I should have known better / So I’m gonna let your body go for sure.” Its term of its pace and vocals, the way this particular track is com- posed makes it rather similar to FKA Twigs’ Ultraviolet.

Following the emotional decrees of Kelela’s “Message” is the begging and pleading that accompany the bargaining stage of a breakup. Such as found in “Concept,” Kelela got us so far in addition to meaning sorry in Japa- nese, expresses the great grief that will take to avoid accepting that the relationship is over. What makes “Commassaia” stand out from other tracks that almost seem more breakup’s perspective rather than the recipient’s. In performing the act of breaking up, Kelela is harsh and even tells her ex, “You’re my bitch tonight / But tomorrow you won’t admit it.”

With its heavy bass line and synths, “Rewind” is not only more fast-paced but also more upbeat than the other tracks on Hallucinogen. Be- sides sounding like the kind of dance song that one would hear at a basement rave, “Rewind” is nostalgic for the recipients. In performing the act of break up for good, Hallucinogen closes with “The High,” a track that captures the emotions of temptation and regret that normally come after a one-side breakup.

I would like to believe that Kelela’s star is on the rise to something greater, but only time can tell.

As far as my projects, I draw inspiration from everyone and everything, so it really depends on the project. My last project was very inspired by the movie The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas. It was the film and, I can say with confidence, this is going to be the best film I’ve made yet. It’s a very personal work that one would hear at a basement rave, “Rewind” is nostalgic for the recipients. In performing the act of break up for good, Hallucinogen closes with “The High,” a track that captures the emotions of temptation and regret that normally come after a one-side breakup.

With its heavy bass line and synths, “Rewind” is not only more fast-paced but also more upbeat than the other tracks on Hallucinogen. Be-sides sounding like the kind of dance song that one would hear at a basement rave, “Rewind” is nostalgic for the recipients. In performing the act of break up for good, Hallucinogen closes with “The High,” a track that captures the emotions of temptation and regret that normally come after a one-side breakup.

As far as my projects, I draw inspiration from everyone and everything, so it really depends on the project. My last project was very inspired by the movie The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas. It was the film and, I can say with confidence, this is going to be the best film I’ve made yet. It’s a very personal work that one would hear at a basement rave, “Rewind” is nostalgic for the recipients. In performing the act of break up for good, Hallucinogen closes with “The High,” a track that captures the emotions of temptation and regret that normally come after a one-side breakup.

For one night, Ivan Arevalo took on the persona of Lady Rae Pavilion as he participated in the LGBTQ Center’s Drag Extravaganza show.

Ivan Arevalo is a Montclair State University student with a Public Relations major. He participated in his first drag show, organized by the LGBTQ Center, on Friday, Oct. 9 as Lady Rae Pavilion in front of a major crowd at University Hall. Arevalo’s look was inspired by Jennifer Lopez and he also performed to a remix by her, bringing Latin dance moves to the diverse group of performers. His journey to the stage started at 5:56 p.m. with a search for stockings. His unexpected crew of three helped him achieve his look for the night.

The New York Giants made an incredible comeback victory against the San Francisco 49ers on Sunday night to continue their winning streak and improve to 3-2 this season. The past couple of weeks have been looking up for the Giants, especially in the NFC division.

While it’s always competitive in their division playing against the Dallas Cowboys, Philadelphia Eagles and the Washington Redskins, the Giants have survived and are leading the division in wins. The Giants have also been pushing themselves to their fullest potential and are more aggressive than we’ve seen in awhile. Everything has been going in the right direction, they just have to continue to be consistent and strive to be the best.

Clearly, the Giants have had their struggles this season, but they always seem to overcome them. First, it was time management. Then, it was play calling, injuries, turnovers and lastly penalties. Nevertheless, head coach Tom Coughlin has tried to rally his team and work on improving these flaws at practice. It is important for NFL coaches to work on the little mistakes because, later in the season, those little issues will add up and majorly affect the team.

Last week was an entertaining matchup until the very end of the game. The Giants were looking to win their third consecutive game against the 49ers on Sunday night in MetLife Stadium. In a tight game from beginning to end, the Giants were on top for most of the game until the 4th quarter. Colin Kaepernick had a game-saving touchdown pass with 11 minutes left in the game to make the score 20-23.

Eli Manning and the Giants will face the Eagles on Monday, Oct. 19

The Giants had a poor play selection and nearly turned the ball over before punting it back to the 49ers. Under pressure, the Giants’ defense gave up a go-ahead touchdown to Carlos Hyde to give the 49ers a 27-23 lead. When Manning and the offense had the ball with under two minutes left, it was the G-men who needed to score or go home with the loss. Manning made a deep pass to Odell Beckham Jr. in the end zone that drew a pass interference penalty.

With 21 seconds left, Manning dropped back under pressure and threw a strike down into the end zone to Larry Donnell to score the game-winning touchdown.

The Giants’ defense stepped up and forced bad passes to come up with the major victory this past week.

Both teams have been waiting to face one another in the game that will decide a major part of the season. If the Eagles win, they have a chance to claim the right to first place. If they lose, then they will have a difficult time catching up in the division from such a loss. However, the Eagles are in a similar situation and must win. If they lose, they fall a little in the division, but, with a win, they have potential to take a major leap ahead of their competition in the NFC East.

It’s a must-see duel between the Eagles and Giants on Monday night in Philadelphia, Pa. This is looking to be a close and hard-fought game that you’re not going to want to leave your seat for.
Rick Giancola Continues His Incredible Career

Football coach is in the midst of his 33rd year at Montclair State

The Red Hawks’ Sept. 5 game against Delaware Valley College marked the beginning of another football season, but also the beginning of another season of a remarkable career for longtime head coach Rick Giancola.

Holly Gera, Athletic Director at Montclair State, said that Giancola, or “Coach G,” as players refer to him “is a great coach and a great person. He has led the Montclair State football program for over 30 years with class, integrity, and professionalism. He truly cares about the young men on his team. He is a role model and mentor for the student athletes who participate. His win-loss record is truly amazing, but more important are all the lives he has touched in a positive way during his tenure.”

Alumni look back fondly to their years playing for Coach G and to the overall experience of being an Montclair State football player, whether an Indian or a Red Hawk. “I have known Rick for my 27 years here and I am proud to call him a colleague and friend,” said Gera.

Giancola, 69, is currently in his 33rd season as head coach. He has led the Montclair State football program for over 30 years, with an assistant coach and became the head coach in 1983. “I've been here a long time,” Giancola said. “I started out as an assistant coach and became the head coach in 1983. I've been involved in the game for a long time and continue to be involved. [I like] the coaching part of it, dealing with the people, the coaches, the players, the administration. I enjoy [the whole thing]. I enjoy the competition and enjoy doing the work.”

In 1989, when Montclair State defeated Ramapo College for Giancola’s 53rd win, he became the winningest head coach in Red Hawks history, surpassing his predecessor Fred Hill in his seventh season. He then achieved the milestone of 100 wins in 1997 when Montclair defeated Wilkes University on Homecoming Day.

“To play under him,” Denzel Nieves, senior and co-captain, said. “He knows a lot about football. He’s been here for over [30] years. I like to pick his brain a bit and see how he diagnoses the game. It’s great to see how his philosophy worked all this time. It just shows you how unique it is and how great it is at the same time.”

Giancola picked up his 150th career win in 2004, making him the second collegiate coach in New Jersey to accomplish this milestone.

Then, he would pick up his 200th career win when the Red Hawks defeated William Patterson University in the 2010 season finale, making him the sixth head coach in Montclair State athletics history to achieve that accomplishment.

“When you’re in the game for a long time, it’s a continuous learning experience. You learn from assistant coaches. You learn from the players. When you get into a mindset that you think you know it all, it’s probably time to leave, because there’s no one who knows it all and [new] experiences happen every day, every season,” Giancola said. “[The players] teach you something new every season or they remind you of something from the past that you need to revisit and think about all over again.”

Giancola is the winningest active head coach in Division III history, a title that he has held since the retirement of University of Mount Union head coach Larry Kehres in 2013.

Giancola, who graduated from Glassboro State College (now Rowan University) in 1968, currently lives in Cedar Grove, N.J., with his wife Judy. They have two daughters, Gina and Diana and two granddaughters, Gianna and Ardnia.

Late into the second quarter, defensive back Billy Shimko took one to the house off a Shawon Holloway 29-yard pick six to tie the score at 21-0 with 3:42 left in the half. Kicker Frank Schneeberger kicked one through the uprights, topping off the score at 24-0 as both teams headed into the locker room at halftime. In the first play of the first quarter, Shimko once again picked off the SVU Knights, which eventually turned into an offensive, seven-play, 60-yard drive that was completed with a 24-yard Prince touchdown pass during a key third-down situation that brought the Red Hawks down to their own 42-yard line. Seven plays later, Davies took a score to a 42-yard Prince touchdown pass off of a botched shotgun snap, bringing the score to 38-0 with 5:24 left on the clock. Freshman tackle Willie Barr won the NJAC Rookie of the Week for his performance in the Red Hawks’ final scoring drive of the game, in which he racked up 46 of the total 64 offensive yards before finishing with his one-yard touchdown run.

The Red Hawks accounted for 491 yards of offense with 308 coming through the air. Davies was 17-for-24 while Prince and Williams each tallied five catches for 114 yards and 39 yards, respectively. Petrizio had three receptions for 72 yards, Barr racked up 78-yards off of 14 carries and both Nieves and Defeliceo equaled out at 43-yards each.

On the other side of the ball, senior linebacker Michael Tenpenny registered six tackles that included his 100th of his career. Defensive back Michael Petrizzo contributed a goal to the previous, as the team needed two overtimes to settle the contest with their NJAC opponent. The women were able to record three shots in the first three minutes of the game, but neither team could convert those into goals. Finlayson stopped two shots and ultimately helped the Red Hawks to a 0-0 tie. Finlayson recorded her ninth shutout and has yet to give up a goal this season.

The Red Hawks are now 2-1-2 in conference play and are ranked fourth in the conference. They have five games remaining on their schedule, with four of those being against conference opponents. The team will have to come up with crucial victories down the stretch to ensure a high seed in the conference tournament.
