Second SGA Member to Face Disciplinary Hearing
Committees Choose to Vote on Possible Impeachment of Two SGA Members

By Inbal Kahanov
Production Editor

A legislator joined the treasurer at the last meeting, saying "unbecoming of a legislator," saying the hearing is final, while in Elhagin's case, the hearing decides only whether to impeach or not, and must be returned to the legislature for a three-fourths vote for removal.

Originally, only the committee for Elhagin's hearing was intended to be selected at the meeting, but midweek, Cabrera made a final decision to accuse Hudnut after receiving completed memos from both the Director of the Welfare and Internal Committee, Matt Avrach, and legislator, Amanda Guidelines for SGA, Lambda, or the second hearing of Treasurer Sharron Hagan.

Hudnut is being accused by SGA President Pro Tempore, Orlando Cabrera, for allegedly disrespecting legislators and acting in a self-serving manner that does not benefit the students he represents, all of which Cabrera says are "unbecoming of a legislator according to the SGA statutes."

Elhagin's hearing also include the six committee members selected for their case, the accused, the accused and Dean of Students, Helen Matos-Ayer.

Elhagin's hearing will also involve SGA Justices, Bill Guarino and Carrie Jepson, SGA Legislative, Jacob V. Hudnut, and the final shift from 11 p.m. to 3 a.m.

The Montclarion
Volume 81, Number 19
February 14, 2002

n the student voice of Montclair State University since 1928

 Shuttle Bus Reliability, Part I
By Lillian M. Aleman
News Editor

Waking up late and missing a class is one thing, but missing a class because the shuttle bus is behind schedule is another.
The reliability of the 24-hour, seven-days-a-week shuttle service has caused concern for many of its 13,850 undergraduate students.

This problem was brought to public attention during the time shuttle services that was completed last November.
The report listed the various problems such as the timeliness of the buses and drivers' manner.

In that report, approximately 20 buses were timed at the Ten main stops on campus, including Blanton Hall, the Quarry and Claver Road. During the random testing, it was concluded that most of the buses were between 10-15 minutes late.

Kiri Williams, Director of Physical Plant, stated that traffic flow and construction on campus have an effect on the timeliness of the shuttle services, making the buses run off schedule.

MSU has a total of seven shuttle buses, which are used throughout the day in the three daily shifts. Five buses are used for the day-time shifts, which is from 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m, four buses for the second shift, which runs from 3 p.m. until 11 p.m, and the final shift from 11 p.m. until 7 a.m.

"There are more than 13,000 students on campus and most of us use the shuttle," said junior English major Kathy Morgan.

"It seems like there aren't enough buses running especially when I have to park so far from campus and have to wait in the cold while waiting for them."

Some students reported that they have had problems with lack of communication between drivers.

"I have seen drivers just close the doors in people's faces because they didn't speak English well enough and had trouble saying they aren't running anymore," said Dayna Wieszewski, a senior at Claver Road.

Since the inquiry last semester, there have been changes to the shuttle bus service. Buses are now equipped with schedules on board, and a shuttle bus coordinator has been hired. Stay tuned for next week's report on MSU shuttle bus services.

Reporting done by Chantel Paul
Feature class last semester

New Policies Reviewed for Sponsored Events

By Valarie Harper
Assistant News Editor

The Dean of Students is currently reviewing a new set of policies that would affect the way organization sponsored events are run.

"We are hoping to get it approved by the next event so that we can put it into implementation," said Director of Student Activities, Fatima DeCarvalho, noting that the next party is scheduled for February 22.

Currently, events operate according to the Interim Event Policy that was established last year after a fight broke out in a Student Center party sponsored by the United Greek Coalition.

The interim policy did not specify how organizations could continue hosting parties, until a new event policy was developed.

A committee formed by the SGA submitted the new proposal to Dean of Students, Helen Matos-Ayer. Meeting in a private office of the Dean of Students, the committee reviewed the proposal, but the final decision has to be made by Ayer.

Currently, the maximum number of students permitted at a party is 400, which includes students, workers, and their guests.

Students are permitted one outside guest, and all attendees must be college students.

The new policy would go up to the total of 420, not including student workers, and students would be permitted three guests.

The stipulation that all attendees be college students would make the decision to vote in the judicial disciplinary hearing of Treasurer Sharron Hagan.

SGA President Pro Tempore, Orlando Cabrera, is accusing Hudnut of acting in a self-serving manner that does not benefit the students he represents.
Weather

Thursday mostly sunny 35
Friday mostly cloudy 40
Saturday cloudy 41
Sunday partly cloudy 35
Monday partly cloudy 36
Tuesday partly cloudy 34
Wednesday rain 35

Coming Soon...

in The Montclarion

New Policies for On-Campus Parties
Learn How To Clean Up The Clutter
Review of Joice Carol Oats' Zombie

The Montclarion

www.themontclarion.com

John Walker Lindh, the 21-year-old Californian captured in Afghanistan while fighting for the Taliban, denied charges brought against him by the U.S. government yesterday. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing inside a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Two abandoned buildings that residents of a neighborhood in Newark's South Ward say they have complained about to city officials were destroyed in a two-alarm fire yesterday that damaged a Lutheran church and a three-story apartment building. The cause of the fire is under investigation, but neighborhood residents said they believe it started in one of the two vacant buildings.

Compiled from The Star Ledger by Lillian M. Aleman

A New York man wanted by authorities for beating his girlfriend and her teenage son to death with a table leg was found dead hanging inside an empty Newark public housing development Monday. Authorities believe Kil Nam Kang, 39, committed suicide. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing in a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Four of the seven members of the Livingstone Township Council have been subpoenaed by the FBI to testify before a federal grand jury next week as part of the bureau's ongoing investigation of municipal corruption. It is not known whether Mayor Sara Dash, who is under investigation by the FBI, was aware of the subpoenas. The mayor is out of town, attending a three-week course at Harvard University.

John Walker Lindh, the 21-year-old Californian captured in Afghanistan while fighting for the Taliban, denied charges brought against him by the U.S. government yesterday. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing inside a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Two abandoned buildings that residents of a neighborhood in Newark's South Ward say they have complained about to city officials were destroyed in a two-alarm fire yesterday that damaged a Lutheran church and a three-story apartment building. The cause of the fire is under investigation, but neighborhood residents said they believe it started in one of the two vacant buildings.

Compiled from The Star Ledger by Lillian M. Aleman

A New York man wanted by authorities for beating his girlfriend and her teenage son to death with a table leg was found dead hanging inside an empty Newark public housing development Monday. Authorities believe Kil Nam Kang, 39, committed suicide. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing in a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Four of the seven members of the Livingstone Township Council have been subpoenaed by the FBI to testify before a federal grand jury next week as part of the bureau's ongoing investigation of municipal corruption. It is not known whether Mayor Sara Dash, who is under investigation by the FBI, was aware of the subpoenas. The mayor is out of town, attending a three-week course at Harvard University.

John Walker Lindh, the 21-year-old Californian captured in Afghanistan while fighting for the Taliban, denied charges brought against him by the U.S. government yesterday. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing inside a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Two abandoned buildings that residents of a neighborhood in Newark's South Ward say they have complained about to city officials were destroyed in a two-alarm fire yesterday that damaged a Lutheran church and a three-story apartment building. The cause of the fire is under investigation, but neighborhood residents said they believe it started in one of the two vacant buildings.

Compiled from The Star Ledger by Lillian M. Aleman

A New York man wanted by authorities for beating his girlfriend and her teenage son to death with a table leg was found dead hanging inside an empty Newark public housing development Monday. Authorities believe Kil Nam Kang, 39, committed suicide. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing in a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Four of the seven members of the Livingstone Township Council have been subpoenaed by the FBI to testify before a federal grand jury next week as part of the bureau's ongoing investigation of municipal corruption. It is not known whether Mayor Sara Dash, who is under investigation by the FBI, was aware of the subpoenas. The mayor is out of town, attending a three-week course at Harvard University.

John Walker Lindh, the 21-year-old Californian captured in Afghanistan while fighting for the Taliban, denied charges brought against him by the U.S. government yesterday. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing inside a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Two abandoned buildings that residents of a neighborhood in Newark's South Ward say they have complained about to city officials were destroyed in a two-alarm fire yesterday that damaged a Lutheran church and a three-story apartment building. The cause of the fire is under investigation, but neighborhood residents said they believe it started in one of the two vacant buildings.

Compiled from The Star Ledger by Lillian M. Aleman

A New York man wanted by authorities for beating his girlfriend and her teenage son to death with a table leg was found dead hanging inside an empty Newark public housing development Monday. Authorities believe Kil Nam Kang, 39, committed suicide. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing in a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Four of the seven members of the Livingstone Township Council have been subpoenaed by the FBI to testify before a federal grand jury next week as part of the bureau's ongoing investigation of municipal corruption. It is not known whether Mayor Sara Dash, who is under investigation by the FBI, was aware of the subpoenas. The mayor is out of town, attending a three-week course at Harvard University.

John Walker Lindh, the 21-year-old Californian captured in Afghanistan while fighting for the Taliban, denied charges brought against him by the U.S. government yesterday. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing inside a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Two abandoned buildings that residents of a neighborhood in Newark's South Ward say they have complained about to city officials were destroyed in a two-alarm fire yesterday that damaged a Lutheran church and a three-story apartment building. The cause of the fire is under investigation, but neighborhood residents said they believe it started in one of the two vacant buildings.

Compiled from The Star Ledger by Lillian M. Aleman

A New York man wanted by authorities for beating his girlfriend and her teenage son to death with a table leg was found dead hanging inside an empty Newark public housing development Monday. Authorities believe Kil Nam Kang, 39, committed suicide. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing in a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Four of the seven members of the Livingstone Township Council have been subpoenaed by the FBI to testify before a federal grand jury next week as part of the bureau's ongoing investigation of municipal corruption. It is not known whether Mayor Sara Dash, who is under investigation by the FBI, was aware of the subpoenas. The mayor is out of town, attending a three-week course at Harvard University.

John Walker Lindh, the 21-year-old Californian captured in Afghanistan while fighting for the Taliban, denied charges brought against him by the U.S. government yesterday. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing inside a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Two abandoned buildings that residents of a neighborhood in Newark's South Ward say they have complained about to city officials were destroyed in a two-alarm fire yesterday that damaged a Lutheran church and a three-story apartment building. The cause of the fire is under investigation, but neighborhood residents said they believe it started in one of the two vacant buildings.

Compiled from The Star Ledger by Lillian M. Aleman

A New York man wanted by authorities for beating his girlfriend and her teenage son to death with a table leg was found dead hanging inside an empty Newark public housing development Monday. Authorities believe Kil Nam Kang, 39, committed suicide. He was found hanging Monday from a dog leash attached to a railing in a stairwell at the Stella Wright Homes on Prince Street.

Four of the seven members of the Livingstone Township Council have been subpoenaed by the FBI to testify before a federal grand jury next week as part of the bureau's ongoing investigation of municipal corruption. It is not known whether Mayor Sara Dash, who is under investigation by the FBI, was aware of the subpoenas. The mayor is out of town, attending a three-week course at Harvard University.
By Elizabeth Wilkins
 Courtesy of KRT Campus

But many colleges resembled roadrunners after Sept. 11, scrambling to make courses on terrorism, Islam and related subjects available for the spring semester.

Professors also spent winter break tearing apart existing syllabi to make them relevant to the post-Septem­ber landscape. And departments added extra sections of courses that once struggled to attract students.

A week after the terrorist attacks, Ursinus College biology professor Robert Dawley started gathering data on bioterrorism. Then the anthrax scare hit. Dawley suggested to colleague Anthony Lobo that they offer a new course on bioterrorism.

"My initial reason was a gut-level sense that America's treatment of terrorism was screwed up," Dawley said. "... What could I do to help?"

"I hope the students get an idea of the complex challenge of planning against bioterrorism," Dawley said. He also said he hoped the course might spark students to devote their careers to the issue.

"Lawful Responses to Terrorism After Sept. 11: A Human Rights Perspective." After reviewing international law, Marks expects students to research whether America's treatment of captured Taliban prisoners has been acceptable under international law and whether the law would allow for continued American military activity in the war on terrorism.

"Faculty told me that Princeton students are quite inward-looking for lack of interest, has both sections oversubscribed this term. Princeton University's Woodrow Wilson School has three new courses related to Sept. 11. Visiting lecturer Jonathan Marks, a British barrister, will teach "Lawful Responses to Terrorism After Sept. 11: A Human Rights Perspective."

"I've gotten a sense of relief," Marks said. "It's just a few organisms, and even these have real disadvantages."

Instead of inventing new courses, some professors made existing courses more relevant after the terror attacks. "It's a superior story, looking at how people reacted," Gilman said. "Given the uncertainty that students lived through last fall, there's a lot of comparability."

Gilman expects that students will get a better perspective on their experience when they consider how the London plague killed thousands, and survivors fell behind burying the dead, while the anthrax scare killed a handful and still heightened American anxiety.

Like Gilman, Alon Tari, a Rutgers-Camden professor, updated a constitutional law course to examine President Bush's executive order making military tribunals available to try those captured in the terrorism war.

Students will study how President Abraham Lincoln suspended habeas corpus during the Civil War, and how, after the war, the Supreme Court called his action unconstitutional. In contrast, a later Supreme Court ruling upheld President Franklin D. Roosevelt's use of a military tribunal to try German saboteurs during World War II.

"Students will analyze the implications of these cases for Bush's order," Tari said. "This is an opportunity for them to realize that our Constitution has real-life significance."

Interest in terrorism affords some professors a chance to use material they gathered for years. After the 1993 World Trade Center bombing, sociology professor John Bridges prepared a course on terrorism. But the Maryland community college he worked for did not think it would attract students.

In 1995, after Timothy McVeigh's Oklahoma City bombing, Bridge again thought the college would want a terrorism course, Nope.

Undaunted, he collected material through the 1998 bombing of U.S. Embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. Last fall, he was hired by Gwynedd-Mercy College, and when he sug­gested a terrorism course for criminal justice students, the college told him to open it to any student.

The new courses are not aimed only at enrolled students. Camden County College professor Jack Pesda switched the focus of his spring course for teachers from Franklin Delano Roosevelt to "America in Crisis: Democracy Fights Terrorism."
Neither Avrach or Gildersleeve would comment on the matter.

According to Cabrera, two specific instances will be brought to question during Hudnut's hearing.

The first instance took place at a Welfare and Internal Committee meeting, during which Hudnut was allegedly disruptive to the speakers and attempted to take over authorship of a bill.

"On the issue of the comments in the Committee meeting, if someone didn't like the format of my idea, they could have called me on it and brought it to debate then. They didn't," said Hudnut.

The second instance involves Hudnut's attempt to pass a bill that enhances the power of the SGA chief justice, a position which, rumors say, he intends to run for.

"Everyone knows the negative vibes in the SGA; that it may come not to exist, the financial problems, and the actions of the treasurer," said Hudnut.

"I honestly think that to avoid that, actions need to be taken for a stronger judicial branch. Apparently the SGA would prefer I sit on my hands rather than aggressively fight for the things I believe in," Cabrera said the problem lies mostly in the way Hudnut conducts his business.

"Other legislators have voiced many complaints about how [Hudnut's] actions and acts are disrespectful as a legislator," said Cabrera.

"I've seen other legislators exceed and not face these problems. We're not looking to impeach him, but if it's up to the committee to decide what action should be taken."

Hudnut plans to plead not guilty on the charges and says that he believes it is not a matter that requires a disciplinary hearing, but rather a difference in opinion over the manner in which he conducts his business.

Both the selection of Elhagin's and Hudnut's disciplinary hearing committees have caused confusion and debate among the legislators, some of who say they were not made aware that the committees were being set up, others saying they did not know why they were set up, while others claim they are being randomly pinpointed.

Regarding Elhagin's hearing, legislator Evangeline Williams said, "I did not know that the issue with Shariff Elhagin had been discussed and that it was still being taken care of."

In an open forum at the SGA meeting, one legislator Al Fatale III called Hudnut's situation a "witchhunt of free thought," and said, "I do not know how anyone could abuse or benefit from this job (as a legislator). It is a thankless job, but one I and we all do gratefully."

Following Fatale's words, some legislators who were not made aware of the problems at hand asked what the comments were in reference to and were answered by Fitzpatrick that they would be informed later on.

SGA President, Jeanette Mammoro, said she does not think the disciplinary hearings and problems within the SGA are affecting its performance.

"I think the legislature is stronger this year than ever," said Mammoro.
"Each legislator might have their own opinion, but it's not affecting their actions for the SGA as a whole. If anything, everyone is just passionate, devoted and enthusiastic."

Neither Cabrera or Long think this should have a negative effect on the SGA or on the referendum if it is trying to pass to increase student fees.

"The SGA is going through a tune-up," said Cabrera.
"I see it as a positive thing and I think the students should see it the same way. The SGA has issues to fix...like every other organization I know. We're making sure we fix those problems."

Both hearings will be closed to the public and will take place in at least to weeks to legally allow the accused to prepare a proper defense.

According to Long, the hearings may occur as late as the week following Spring Break due to scheduling conflicts.
Policies

Continued from pg. 1

Many of the admissions and security procedures would remain the same under the new policy, with a few minor adjustments.

For example, the Normal Avenue entrance would continue to be the only entrance open from the start of the event and identification would still be required to get onto campus and into the event.

All non-MSU students would still have to sign in. However, under the new policy, both MSU students and their guests would receive wristbands at the door that must be worn at all times while at the party.

All attendees would also be required to leave their identification at the door of the event.

Police and security officers would still monitor the number of attendees and be required to turn people away once the party has reached capacity. However, members of the sponsoring organization would also be required to patrol the inside of the event and have walkie-talkies to stay in contact with at least one MSU police officer.

According to the proposal, "student workers will not interfere with any situation that arrives within the party, yet radio a MSU Police Officer for assistance."

Director of Evening and Weekend Programming, Greg Brown, said the Office of Student Activities is also developing a system to improve the planning of events.

“We are currently looking at ways to make the weekend party system more functional,” he said.

Currently, each organization is included in a lottery at the end of the year that is used to select the organizations that will be allowed to sponsor a party the following semester.

“We would like to send out a letter in March to all the organizations to find out which ones are interested in having a party next semester,” Brown said.

“That way we only put the organizations that are interested in having a party into the lottery.”

The lottery would then be done like a sports lottery. The dates for the party would be pre-selected and the organizations could choose from the dates based on when the organization is drawn from the lottery.

“We would like the lottery done this way at the end of this year,” Brown said.

“That way, the party dates for next semester are already set.”

LENTE RETREAT FOR BUSY PEOPLE

FEBRUARY 24 – FEBRUARY 28

Second Week of Lent

Beginning at the 6:30 p.m. Mass

February 24

Newman Catholic Center

The Catholic Campus Center is offering a directed prayer retreat for busy students, faculty, staff and administrators February 24-28. This is an “at home” retreat, made within the busyness of your everyday lives. This retreat asks you for a commitment of one hour a day for five days, and promises you a deeper relationship with God in your life. There is a limited number of spiritual directors available. They will meet with the individual retreatants ½ hour each day at a convenient time to the retreatants. The retreatant is expected to devote ½ hour a day to personal prayer. The retreat begins with the 6:30 p.m. Sunday Mass on February 24. Plan to make this retreat, give God an hour a day, and give yourself the gift of spiritual strength and peace in your busy lives.

FIRST COME, FIRST SERVED since there is a limited number of openings. Please RSVP by calling x7240 (on campus) 746-2323.

This retreat is open to the MSU community, students, staff, faculty and administration.
The Man Who Did It All
Poet, Playwright, Fictionalist, Activist...Baraka is an Inspiration

By Cristin Curry
Assistant Feature Editor

In honor of African-American Heritage Month the O.S.A.U is holding many events in celebration of the American culture and history. One of the guest speakers who appeared this week was the renowned essayist, social critic, poet, and playwright, also known as the father of the black arts movement, Amiri Baraka.

Baraka shared with the audience some teachings and knowledge of other great African-American leaders and writers such as W.E.B Dubois, Fredrick Douglass, Martin Luther King Jr., and Malcolm X. These with others influenced many of Baraka's own ideas.

The first poem that Baraka read was "The Mind of the President," a work of John Coletrane's which he reads with Interlent to the ancient Chinese form of poetry known as Haiku. The poem is read by interludes of baraka huming a beat of John Coltrane's equinox between phrases of questions of "how we Americans," referring to how African Americans can be considered Americans when they really are not treated as Americans.

When asked why Baraka's work is so political he usually answers "Because we come here at the bottom of a boat." One of his most influential phrases that sparked his own ideas and theories was a line by W.E.B Dubois he quotes, "many suffered as waka is; but none were sold as real estate." After reading that line it was then that Baraka truly realized what his ancestors had gone through.

Baraka has written many works throughout his lifetime, one including "Blues People," a book of musical criticism. In 1965 he helped to found the Black Arts Repertory Theatre/School. In addition he was the founder of the Congress of African People and the National Black Political Assembly, while also being a member of the African Liberation Support Committee.

Baraka's views are of a fair and equal democracy for our country, since he describes us as "having a counterfeit president for a fake democracy." He related African's and the underprivileged. He believes that the main enemy of the world is imperialism, and "as long as there is private funds in elections, rich people will run the country," keeping the poor poor and revolving in a vicious circle without any hope for change. The way of governmental views and work.

Said Baraka, "We will still live in a primitive world until everyone has a PH.D.... the right to higher education is the only way the world can change." 99

Female Role Model
Setting the Standards for Future Women Doctors of America

By Simona Kogan
Feature Editor

When she died on March 7, 1918, Dr. Susan McKinney Steward had her eulogy given by W.E.B. DuBois. She was born of mixed European, African, and Senecocock Indian ancestry. She was married twice. She had two brothers die during the Civil War.

She was noted as being read by her constant traveling. When traveling, McKinney delivered papers titled, "Colored American Woman" and "Women in Medicine," which she presented to the National Association of Colored Women's Clubs in Ohio.

Steward took a post graduate course at Long Island College Hospital where she was the only female in her class. She specialized in childhood diseases and presented two important medical papers, one of which was on the childhood disease "Morasmus."

She maintained a successful practice at the Brooklyn Woman's Homeopathic Hospital and Dispensary. She was active in the community. Steward was married twice to William G. McKinney and the reverend Gould Steward respectively. She had two children by McKinney, but none with Gould because of their constant traveling.

Steward was the first recognizable African-American woman doctor in the United States. Dr. Susan McKinney Steward was born in Brooklyn, NY in 1847. She was the seventh of ten children to Sylvanus and Ann Smith.

Steward had her eulogy at Susan McKinney Steward's death. She was active in the medical profession. She had two schools in the New York City. She had two schools in the Metropolitan area had their medical practice and became famous by the "K" Dr. Susan McKinney Steward was recognized as the most famous female doctor in the New York Practionary Association. She had her medical school named after her. Steward died on March 7, 1918, and was buried at Brooklyn's Greenwood Cemetery. She had two schools in the New York City named after her and her memory was honored when African-American female doctors in the New York City area had their medical society named after her.

Steward was the first African-American woman to practice medicine in New York State and the third in all of the United States. She was active in the medical profession. She had two schools in the New York City area named after her. Steward was the first recognized African-American female doctor in the United States. She was active in the medical profession. She had two schools in the New York City area named after her.

Steward took a post graduate course at Long Island College Hospital where she was the only female in her class. She specialized in childhood diseases and presented two important medical papers, one of which was on the childhood disease "Morasmus."

She maintained a successful practice at the Brooklyn Woman's Homeopathic Hospital and Dispensary. She was active in the community. Steward was married twice to William G. McKinney and the reverend Gould Steward respectively. She had two children by McKinney, but none with Gould because of their constant traveling.

While traveling, McKinney delivered papers titled, "Colored American Woman" and "Women in Medicine," which she presented to the National Association of Colored Women's Clubs in Ohio. Steward died on March 7, 1918, and was buried at Brooklyn's Greenwood Cemetery. She had two schools in the New York City. She had two schools in the Metropolitan area had their medical practice and became famous by the "K" Dr. Susan McKinney Steward was recognized as the most famous female doctor in the New York Practionary Association. She had her medical school named after her. Steward died on March 7, 1918, and was buried at Brooklyn's Greenwood Cemetery. She had two schools in the New York City area named after her. Steward was the first recognized African-American female doctor in the United States. She was active in the medical profession. She had two schools in the New York City area named after her. Steward was the first recognized African-American female doctor in the United States. She was active in the medical profession. She had two schools in the New York City area named after her. Steward was the first recognized African-American female doctor in the United States. She was active in the medical profession. She had two schools in the New York City area named after her.

Dr. Susan McKinney Steward (left) set the precedent for the African-American female doctors by becoming the first doctor in the state of New York, the third in the nation, and the most recognizable female doctor of her time. She set up a successful medical practice and became known as an "all around" woman because of her various other tasks including: the task of being a manager of a home and training to routine in business.
Cultural Pressure Tough for Hispanic Girls

By Tanya Cavaco
Staff Writer

Unfortunately, it's becoming a typical story: young Hispanic girls, age 21, got pregnant in 10th grade, dropped out of school, and has a six-year-old daughter or son to nurture. For the past decade, the nation's drop-out rate between the ages of 14-18 remained unchanged at five percent, according to new data from the U.S. Education Department (ED).

According to the latest census bureau figures, the nation's drop-out rate increased 25 percent among Hispanic women. Hispanic women are the fastest growing female minority population, while Hispanics as a whole will account for 25 percent of the nation's school population in 2030. This growing population means that more education administrators will come cara-a-cara (face to face) with this problem.

According to the national council of La Raza (the Race), an umbrella organization for Hispanic groups, only 10 percent of Hispanic women complete four or more years of college, compared with 13.9 percent of African Americans, and 22 percent of whites. Hispanic women are enriched by their strong identity. It's the food, music, and celebrations that feed our soul. But when the culture's traditions clash with career pursuits and whether or not to finish school, Hispanic women can experience a meltdown. How do we take the best of both worlds?

There is now a sense of urgency in that question. A report by the American Association of University Women (AAUW) Educational Foundation, "Sil Se Puede! Yes, We Can: Latinas in School," says there is no question that schools are not meeting the educational needs of Hispanic women. Cultural differences in students is rarely taken into account, nor are their disparate resources and family situations.

Authors, Angela Ginorio, Ph.D. and Michelle Hudson say, "Latinas may be alienated by teachers and counselors who do not give as high aspirations for them as they do for other students. Low expectations create low performances. Girls need to be told they have potential. It is not what you see on T.V., that depict what a Hispanic women should be like. If one tuned into a Hispanic talk show, the girl would think she was experiencing an epidemic of low self-esteem among Hispanic girls.

Cultural and social pressures also shortchange Hispanic girls. At home, there is a double standard in the way many families raise daughters and sons. Duties like taking care of younger siblings for young girls than boys, cutting into their time for schoolwork. There is an expectation and perhaps rather than competition, obedience rather than outspokenness.

There is no typical Hispanic family or community. Therefore, the experiences of Hispanic girls vary depending on factors such as income, education of the parents, whether the family immigrated from city or country and where they live now. Hispanic women have to set a way to make a truce between Latin traditions and American mainstream that would allow a Hispanic woman to thrive without abandoning the culture she treasures.

In the end, this is one battle that is worth fighting for: for the girls we once were, for the girls we are now, and for the girls who will be our daughters and our future. There has never been a better time or place. We have options.

Cultural Pressure Tough for Hispanic Girls

By Tanya Cavaco
Staff Writer

Unfortunately, it's becoming a typical story: young Hispanic girls, age 21, got pregnant in 10th grade, dropped out of school, and has a six-year-old daughter or son to nurture. For the past decade, the nation's drop-out rate between the ages of 14-18 remained unchanged at five percent, according to new data from the U.S. Education Department (ED).

According to the latest census bureau figures, the nation's drop-out rate increased 25 percent among Hispanic women. Hispanic women are the fastest growing female minority population, while Hispanics as a whole will account for 25 percent of the nation's school population in 2030. This growing population means that more education administrators will come cara-a-cara (face to face) with this problem.

According to the national council of La Raza (the Race), an umbrella organization for Hispanic groups, only 10 percent of Hispanic women complete four or more years of college, compared with 13.9 percent of African Americans, and 22 percent of whites. Hispanic women are enriched by their strong identity. It's the food, music, and celebrations that feed our soul. But when the culture's traditions clash with career pursuits and whether or not to finish school, Hispanic women can experience a meltdown. How do we take the best of both worlds?

There is now a sense of urgency in that question. A report by the American Association of University Women (AAUW) Educational Foundation, "Sil Se Puede! Yes, We Can: Latinas in School," says there is no question that schools are not meeting the educational needs of Hispanic women. Cultural differences in students is rarely taken into account, nor are their disparate resources and family situations.

Authors, Angela Ginorio, Ph.D. and Michelle Hudson say, "Latinas may be alienated by teachers and counselors who do not give as high aspirations for them as they do for other students. Low expectations create low performances. Girls need to be told they have potential. It is not what you see on T.V., that depict what a Hispanic women should be like. If one tuned into a Hispanic talk show, the girl would think she was experiencing an epidemic of low self-esteem among Hispanic girls.

Cultural and social pressures also shortchange Hispanic girls. At home, there is a double standard in the way many families raise daughters and sons. Duties like taking care of younger siblings for young girls than boys, cutting into their time for schoolwork. There is an expectation and perhaps rather than competition, obedience rather than outspokenness.

There is no typical Hispanic family or community. Therefore, the experiences of Hispanic girls vary depending on factors such as income, education of the parents, whether the family immigrated from city or country and where they live now. Hispanic women have to set a way to make a truce between Latin traditions and American mainstream that would allow a Hispanic woman to thrive without abandoning the culture she treasures.

In the end, this is one battle that is worth fighting for: for the girls we once were, for the girls we are now, and for the girls who will be our daughters and our future. There has never been a better time or place. We have options.
Date: March 8th — March 17th, 2002

Spring Break 2002

The Office of Residence Life is presenting Spring Break 2002. This fun-filled trip includes the cost of roundtrip transportation to South Beach Miami, as well as hotel accommodations for 7 nights. Contact Us For More Info...

Cost of Trip — $400
Final Payment must be received by Friday, March 1st at 4:00pm.

Contact person:
Latasha Casterlow

Montclair State University
Office of Residence Life
Bohn Hall, 4th Floor

Phone: 973-655-5248
Fax: 973-655-5400
Email: Casterlow11@mail.montclair.edu
The Vagina Speaks At McEachern Hall

By Kathleen Savino
Staff Writer

Vagina Monologues
McEachern Recital Hall
February 13 at 8 p.m.; 14 at 7:30 p.m.; 16 at 8 p.m.

Why are we so afraid of a word, and more importantly, what does the word mean to us?

The Vagina Monologues, brainchild of playwright Eve Ensler, is more than a play. It is testament, poem, story, manifesto, and much more. It has birthed an illustrious movement known as V-Day. This day resurrects Valentine’s Day from its commercialism, and created a global movement of women and men who vow to fight the violence against women and girls.

MSU’s Women’s Center has sponsored various V-Day events including The Vagina Monologues. The Vagina Monologues has been a collective endeavor of The Women’s Center and the people who work with them. Many people have worked behind the scenes organizing, like Kristy Daly and Jen Fisher, not to mention Esilda Abreu and Heather Ferraro. The Women’s Center’s director and assistant director, respectively. The show is deceptively simple: no real props, no scenery, just a woman dressed in black, a chair, and a microphone.

It is the rawness that partially creates the play’s tenacious appeal. The flow and color that normally exist in a play’s sets, manifest themselves instead in language and performances. These performances are directed superbly by Kalle Renn. Each woman fully embodied her role. This is so important because the women’s voices are the play. These voices are those of women who Ensler interviewed. Ensler says, “Some of the monologues are close to verbatim interviews, and with some I just began with the seed of an interview and had a good time.” MSU students (and some performers from the Montclair area) took on these women and their stories: they made them their own.

These voices are sometimes solitary, sometimes not. In between the monologues there are three or four women whose voices interlop a chorus for Ensler’s more poetry-like monologs. These voices include performers: Jessica Laviera, Besley Newberry, Cherl Brazalits, Brooke Campbell, Stacy Rumaker, Liz Gray, Juliana Geco, Bonnie Brown, Aliegra Cohen speaks of finding her vagina’s “true name” in The Vagina Monologues.

Allana Haselstein, Michaela Timble, Shannan Murray, Elizabeth Coen, and Susan Skalsky.

The first monologue, “Hair” is performed by Alexa Pereira. It deals specifically with hair, but not the kind found on the head. Pereira performed her monologue with the necessary humor and dignity of a woman who refuses to shave her vagina, much to the dismay of her philandering husband. “The Vagina Club” is about naming the importance of naming the vagina. The glowing and energetic Aliegra Cohen tells the audience about finding her vagina’s true name.

The second monologue, “The Vulva Club” is performed by Eyal Tulsky. Eyal tells just one of the stories from women of previous generations, to whom the vagina was an unspoken biological fact. In the next monologue, Kate Daly becomes a woman who has never seen her vagina, but discovers it at last in a workshop setting. Daly, like her fellow performers, is so immersed in her role that we, the audience, forget she is an actress. We just listen to her story.

"MONOLOGUES" on p.12

This Week in Entertainment

T.V.
- “Felicity,” the WB’s college drama starring Keri Russell, with Eddie Cibrian as the would-be husband of its main character, is up for renewal. The WB decided to end the four-year-old drama that helped launch the network on the map due to the collapse of its storyline coming to an end for most of the characters. Ratings for the show have already steadily dropped over the past four years and rumors of it’s demise have been circulating for months.

- MTV, will be having another one of its town forums this Valentine’s Day, this one focusing on the current war with Secretary of State Colin Powell. The show will be broadcast across the globe on MTV’s world affiliates. The 60-minute forum will have kids from around the world pose tough questions for Powell who will be answering in a Washington studio.

Movies
- Coinciding with the Academy Award, The Razzie awards release their nominees for the worst movies of 2001. Leading the list, Freddy Got Fingered with 8 “razzies”. Including worst actor, movie director, and screenplay. Other nominees include Driven, the Stallone flop. Glitter which also managed to get a worst on screen couple for Mariah Carey’s cleavage, and Pearl Harbor. The winners will be announced on March 23, the day before the Academy has their awards.

Music
- Ben Folds will be touring the US this February Dubbed “Ben Folds and a Piano.” The tour will have Folds dumping his touring band from his first tour for his solo debut Rocking the Suburbs and going it alone on stage.

Compiled from cnn.com by James Topoleski
Oscar nominations had their share of anomalies, surprises and mysteries. Lynch and Ryder Scott (Black Hawk Down) were both nominated for best director, but their films were not nominated. Australia’s Baz Luhrmann and Todd Field were not nominated, but the films they directed – Moulin Rouge and in the Bedroom – were.

Gene Hackman, who won a Golden Globe for his performance as the wayward patriarch in The Royal Tenenbaums, failed to get a nomination, which would make Russell Crowe, who won the best-actor prize last year, the favorite to repeat.

And, though Miramax lobbied hard for a best-actress nomination for Kidman in the supernatural thriller The Others, she was instead nominated for the musical Moulin Rouge.

Moulin Rouge is the longest shot in the best-picture category; the last musical to win a best-picture Oscar was Oliver! in 1968. And, while The Lord of the Rings won the most nominations, Oscar voters do not traditionally reward fantasy epics with best-picture awards. None of the Star Wars films has won best-picture Oscars, while Steven Spielberg’s classic E.T.: The Extra-Terrestrial was defeated for the 1982 best-picture Oscar by Gandhi. If there are any front runners at this stage of the game besides Spacey, they would be Jennifer Connelly, who plays the supportive wife of Crowe’s schizophrenic genius in A Beautiful Mind, for supporting actress, and veteran maverick director Altman for Gosford Park. Altman’s primary competition will be Ron Howard (A Beautiful Mind), despite having directed the Oscar-nominated Apollo 13, which is Howard’s first best-director nomination.
The Montclarion's Official Guide to the In's, the Out's, the Up's, & the Down's this V-Day.
Did You Know This About Valentine's Day?

By Allison Nazimek
Staff Writer

Throughout the centuries on Valentine's Day, cards, flowers, and candy are given in surplus to couples around the world. February 14 has been dedicated to a man named St. Valentine. However there are actually three saints named Valentine recognized by the Catholic Church, all of whom were persecuted.

One Saint Valentine defied the Emperor Claudius II by performing forbidden marriages to young couples. Another story of Saint Valentine states that he helped Christians escape harsh Roman prisons. Sending our loved ones Valentine cards is a time honored tradition, but how many know the origin of sending them? There are two versions of who sent the first Valentine.

The Duke of Orleans is credited to have made the first Valentine card to his wife while he was imprisoned in the Tower of London in 1415. Another legend links the first Valentine to one of the saints named Valentine. While in prison, Valentine is believed to have fallen in love with the jailer's daughter who used to visit him daily. Before his death, it is supposed that Valentine wrote the girl a letter signed "From your Valentine." There are also numerous odd things people used to do for Valentine's Day. In the 17th century, a maiden would eat a hard-boiled egg and would pin five bay leaves to her pillow before going to sleep on Valentine's eve. It was believed that the maid would then dream of her future husband.

Some believed that if a woman saw a certain bird flying on Valentine's Day, that would determine who she would marry. A robin meant that she would marry a sailor, a sparrow signaled a poor husband, but she would be happy, and seeing a goldfinch would mean that she was to marry a millionaire.

Another trick was to think of names of five or six possible matches for yourself, then twist the stem of an apple while repeating the names you chose. Whatever name you say as the stem twists off, that is the person you are meant to marry. In Wales, wooden spoons were given at gifts on Valentine's Day with the images of keys, hearts, and keyholes as decorations meaning, "You unlock my heart!" The phrase "wearing your heart on your sleeve" is said to originate from the Roman festival Lupercalia, also considered the beginnings of Valentine's Day. Roman men would wear the names of the girls who were their partners for the Lupercalia pinned to their sleeves. How sweet!

Montclairion Personals

- SWF in search of dumb male with elongated manhood-knowledge of Rama Suzuki a plus.
- GDP seeks TMX for hours of adult entertainment.
- Self-absorbed A&E Editor seeks shallow former PE 4 amusement.
- Lil Lil in the market for anyone, I said anyone. If you're reading this that means you. Call for apt.
- JWPE seeks kind yound gentleman. Oh wait. This is MSU. Better luck next time.
- Aes GDE looking for a good time. That's all.
- She's not asking for too much. Token staff blonde in search of Brunette to balance out the hair color.
- MC not in search of anything. Why are you asking? Move on.
- Mascot in search of companion to share deep thoughts with.
- MTA PE seeks CP. See his office for application details.
- SE seeks SE. Apply now to inflatables.
- FE seeks club-dweller for groovy time.

Valentine's Day...a Day of Love, Sweets, and Murder??

By Simona Kogan
Feature Editor

When you think of Valentine's Day, you think of chocolate, flowers, and being with the one you love. You don't think of murder, bullets, and bloodshed.

But Al "Scarface" Capone and George "Bugs" Moran are exactly the two names that can be associated with the St. Valentine's Day Massacre of February 1929, a day in our history that will be remembered by many as being one of the most unforgettable crimes ever to take place.

Valentine's Day, normally a romantic, idyllic 24 hours, was the perfect mask for such a perfect crime.

During the '20s, gangster rivalry was nothing new, especially to Capone and Moran or to the police officers who heard about their escalating "misdemeanors" all over Chicago.

But this could have just possibly been the worst of them all. This murder mystery had officers questioning just how it had been carried off so easily.

According to later re-enactments of the crime, police officers suspected that two mobsters dressed as policemen had entered S.M.C. Carriage Co. garage in North Chicago where they had shot seven well-dressed men whose backs had faced their executioners.

These two men pretended they were police on a routine investigation. The seventh men, Moran's cohort, had shot seven well-dressed men whose backs had faced their executioners.

Upon the occurrence of such a horrible crime, eyewitnesses noticed the two policemen leaving the scene. Apparently, Capone's plan was to murder those who worked for him, leaving him without protection. Still, when police questioned Capone, he came up with a reasonable alibi. He claimed to be in Florida at the time.

Still, "Bugs" Moran was not among the men killed.

Apparently, Capone's plan was to murder "Bugs" Moran, but when that didn't work, he decided to do the next best thing and murder those who worked for him, leaving him without protection. Still, when police questioned Capone, he came up with a reasonable alibi. He claimed to be in Florida at the time.

This St. Valentine's Massacre of February 1929 was the most publicized a crime had ever received at the time. As Capone turned into a crime czar, his crimes turned into crime legends.

How's that for a heartwarming, lovey-dovey Valentine's Day gift?
Jealousy

Jealousy, in a romantic relationship, this feeling, which is an array of excruciating pain, anger, driven rage, and depressing sadness as a result on the part of one who has a relationship, could be the one thing that destroys it all. Although some tend to think jealousy is only prevalent in females, studies have shown both sexes do suffer from it. They just express it in different ways and different things set off this painful emotion for each sex.

Despite this fact, it is true that many women express their emotions more openly than many men do, so it would make sense that jealousy seems more prevalent in females. Because many women in today's society feel that their relationships play a large part in who they are, when the threat of losing emotional commitment from their partner or the threat of someone new taking their partner away occurs, it can be a horridly painful feeling.

Female jealousy usually comes out in frantic emotions and depression. However, these feelings are normal; for when there is something or someone threatening to take the one you love away, it makes total sense to feel hurt and angry.

Then again, there is a difference between the occasional jealousy and what is termed "crazy jealousy." This kind of jealousy has turned people to murder their partner and/or the person who took their partner away from them, or to commit suicide themselves. Someone who is constantly suspicious that their lover is so unfaithful to the point where they try to break their email passwords, check their drawers, and drive by their house at unsuspicious hours to see if they are home like they said they would be, should look more deeply into why they are so unforgiving of their partner's actions.

If you are "the jealous type," there are many ways of coping with this feeling, and once understood and dealt with in the proper manner, it can actually be used positively to improve your relationship. According to psychologist Dr. Ayala Pines, jealousy is the "shadow of love" that can stem from insecurity in one's self, or from past experiences with relationships; with one's own or with one's parents' relationship, and the current lover cannot be blamed for this.

The first question asked should be why do you feel so distrusting of your partner. Truly try to see if your partner has done anything that really could be looked at as unfaithful. Most of the time, there is nothing to be so worried about. After you've analyzed your own jealousy, sit down and talk to your partner about your feelings and what really worries you so that the two of you can list things he/she should do to make you feel better, particularly when it comes to the opposite sex and their interactions with them.

When you start feeling that pang of anxiety or jealousy, acknowledge it rationally and try to relax. Talk it out in your head and calm yourself down before exploding into a fit of rage or sadness. Then, discuss it calmly with your partner and try to overcome it together with humor, understanding, and reassignment of one another's faultfulness and love.

66 THE MOST IMPORTANT THING TO DO IS MAKE SURE YOU ACHIEVE SECURITY AND ACCEPTANCE WITHIN YOURSELF, 99

The re-examinations of you and your partner's actions will truly help you figure out if these irrational jealous thoughts are just in your own head or if your partner is really being unfair and unfaithful to you.

The most important thing to do is make sure you achieve security and acceptance within yourself, then make sure you have this with your partner. Realize that you deserve to have someone who is going to respect you and be faithful, but if jealousy is forming in your own mind, you must overcome it by focusing on controlling your own life and your own feelings.

Finally, know that you need to give yourself time to learn how to trust and accept your feelings. Learn how to deal with them, and then if need be, to change them. Try to control the jealousy by replacing it with healthier and more rational thoughts. Jealousy can be a cruel destroyer in a relationship, but when you really care for someone and they truly care for you, your heart will find the way to unload jealousy from your life and you will be able to grow stronger, healthier, and more beautiful, both with your partner and most importantly, with yourself.

For better or worse, it's a love-hate relationship.

Mass commercials, greeting cards, and even those little candy hearts, all focused on the first part, the "for better" part. Yet anyone who has been in a relationship knows that there is more to it than that.

Mixed in with wonderful kisses and the initial "switchover-ation" (as experienced by Bambie, Thumper, and Flower), comes the reality of really getting to know one another.

So the question is, what exactly are those little things that try your nerves, despite how much you care about the other person?

Asking around, there were some interesting things to be found out. Students replied with answers like eating pizza with a fork, holding in sneezes, mood swings, and talking in baby voices.

"I realized that I could never make John laugh. His ears used to get clogged, and I'd make these weird noises to unclog them. It would be really bad when his eyes started to bug out!"

"He's so honest! Sometimes he just doesn't know when I don't want to hear."

Other common annoyances were calling too much, acting immature, and giving cheap gifts.

There were however, some very unusual answers. One guy complained that his girlfriend wouldn't use the bathroom because she was afraid someone would hear her.

Another girl informed me that her ex-boyfriend actually brought his own on their dates!

And what about dropping hints after hints without the other as much as blinking?

Tom Haskins shook his head and smiled, "There's this one thing. She can't wait. If I have to tell her something, she has to know that very moment. So I just ignore her."

Apparent, that's one way to handle the problem. Others just sigh and consider it all part of the process of love.

Yet in the end, it is the little things. It's the nice little characteristics, but maybe even more so the strange quirks, that really make your Valentine uniquely your one and only differences from all the rest. In fact, maybe, just maybe, the bad things are the best things of all. (Yes dear, I don't even mind as much when you always try to help me cross the street.)

So this year, when he or she does "that" thing, just remember—is it good wouldn't be the same without it.
Vanessa Alvarez
Staff Writer

Women, are you tired of your significant other flipping through your Victoria's Secret catalog, or pointing to women on T.V. wearing a sexy outfit? Then stop arguing and feel unsexy and spice things up a little this Valentine’s Day. There are many ways to make this year’s special day fun and sexy, too. Here is one way to have your man melting in the palm of your hand:

Sexy Lingerie; whether it be out of a Frederick’s of Hollywood or Victoria’s Secret catalog, search for something appealing and sexy yet leave some room for the imagination. There is no need to go out and purchase crotch-less panties to turn him on. A nice baby-doll, silky chemise, or garter belt set can do the trick. If you are completely unsure about what he might like, ask him to look at the catalog with you and pick out a couple of things that he likes. This way you have a couple of options to choose from and he’ll be surprised as well.

Some men like sexy boy shorts, some like bikini bottoms, others love thongs; whatever the case may be, make sure you are comfortable in what you are wearing. Confidence makes a woman sexy, and if you feel attractive in what you are wearing, then he will find you irresistible as well.

On the other hand, if this Valentine’s Day is meant to be a little less expensive, and the lingerie from Victoria’s Secret is out of your budget, there are other ways to turn him on. Some men love it when their girls wear one of their button-down shirts with nothing else on. You can also just wear a simple matching bra and thong set to get him going.

I conducted a survey with seven questions to see what men really like about women. 15 men were asked the same seven questions and here are the results: When asked if they were in a relationship, five answered yes, and 10 said no. When asked if they wished their significant other would wear sexy lingerie, 14 said yes, one said no. When asked if they liked Victoria’s Secret magazines, 14 said yes, one said no. When asked if they would be impressed if their partner surprised them in sexy lingerie for V-day, all of them said yes. When they were asked if they found it sexy for a girl to wear a man’s button-down shirt, 10 said yes, and five said no. When asked about what they prefer out of thongs, boy shorts, or crotch-less panties, nine said thongs, four said boy shorts, and two said crotch-less panties. Finally, when asked what was sexiest to them out of looks/nice body, confidence, or intelligence, eight said looks/ nice body; seven said confidence, and none of them said intelligence.

These surveys were conducted on-campus, names were kept optional and the average male was in the 19-20 year old age range. All in all, the males agree that they like sexy lingerie and they wish their significant other would wear sexy little outfits more often. It seems as if men prefer thongs and they find it sexy for a woman to wear their button-down shirts, too.

This Valentine’s Day though, isn’t only meant to be for the men. Ladies, do you want a special day as well? I thought so. Well men, it’s time to start being a little more romantic this year. Why not surprise her with some flowers and a nice card, or take her out to her favorite restaurant? Sometimes it’s the smallest things that can make a girl smile. Yet, while we are on the topic of sexy lingerie; guys can dress in their own sexy way, too. A nice pair of silk boxers, boxer briefs, or if you’re into wearing thongs, go for it! These can all make a man feel and look sexy for his woman on Valentine’s Day. A man can also look sexy in one of his own button-down shirts, but be creative and have fun, too. Valentine’s Day isn’t all about spending money, it’s about showing your special someone just how much they really mean to you. A simple card that says “I love you” can be all she wants sometimes.

Whatever you choose to do this Valentine’s Day, have a good time. Remember that confidence is sexy and no matter what, your significant other will appreciate the effort and thoughtfulness that went into pleasing him or her. Feeling sexy equals being sexy, so make sure you are happy and they will be too. Enjoy and have a great Valentine’s Day!
Every Rose has its thorn — 14 Things To Do When You Are Single On Valentine’s Day

Rachel Wurbsausch Staff Writer

It’s that time of the year and there goes Cupid with his bow and arrow, and he has missed me once again. For all of us single people, Valentine’s Day can be a soul-painful shot through the heart when you’re alone. It’s my life story. As soon as Super Bowl Sunday is over and all the sports fans finally recover from their hangovers, the next topic of conversation for most people is that “lovey, dovey, want to hug my hunny” holiday with your significant other. All over the country, flowers, and cards are ordered, purchased and sent from one lover to the next. But hey, what about the rest of us? Those of us lonely, abandoned, and ready to lock ourselves in our house so we don’t have to watch anyone else celebrate this ridiculous day. It is crazy that a day is supposed to be especially sweet, understanding, and caring to your significant other. It is even on Valentine’s Day. Your heart may be broken, and you are ready to be there for the right person to come around by not settling for anything but the best.

1. Pull out the box you might have saved your most precious memories in. Remember, every woman has one of those. Surprisingly, even some men do too. It was when you kept to movie and album memories you movies you saw together, and the first love note ever written. Find the box. Take it apart. Throw it away. Laugh at how many times you cried, without crying. If you can’t bring yourself to do that then just reminiscence on what good times you had, but do not — I repeat — Do not feel sorry for yourself. Just accept the facts and move on. It was his or her loss and you can and will carry on better.

2. Get Out of Town! It’s not that you running away from your fear of being alone. Instead, you are going somewhere that the majority of people are single even on Valentine’s Day. Plan a trip to Houston, Texas. Be prepared to be taking down numbers while having some Southern fun loving. Bring your bathing suit, it gets hot! The Houston Chronicle reported in early Sept. the city of Houston “having the highest percentage of singles in the country, with nearly two million, half of Houston’s population.” So, with that in mind don’t hesitate. Get your stuff packed and go down to Houston for a little Southern hospitality.

3. Pamper Yourself. Get yourself a massage, pedicure, manicure, or a hair cut. If you’re a guy, heck, go crazy, chop it all off. Do something drastic. Go wild. Do something everyone will notice. If you’re a girl, heck, go crazy, chop it all off. Do something drastic. Go wild. Do something everyone will notice.

4. Make a list of all the good qualities and make a list of all the qualities you need to work on (for you, not because your ex told you to). List them in order of importance. Analyze them. Understand them. Accept them. Little by little, work specifically on the ones that need improvement. Do not lose sight of the good qualities that make you who you are. Go talking yourself why you do the things you do and why you love the way you are, even if he doesn’t anymore. Dr. Karen Gail Lewis, a family therapist in Washington, DC, author of WITH OR WITHOUT A MAN: SINGLE WOMEN TAKING CONTROL OF THEIR LIVES, said in her book, “Single men desperately want to be with a partner, but they don’t carry self-blame. With single women, there’s an enormous amount of self-blame.”

5. Sleep. Who can eat for anything more? There is never anytime to catch up on lost sleep, well here is the perfect time. Curl up on the sofa with a good book, a warm blanket, or a pen and pad. If you would like to exhaust yourself a little there write a letter to an ex-lover letting all your emotions run free. State everything you are feeling, but whatever you don’t do send the letter to the person. After this you will need a nap, so let yourself drift to the land we call Sleepy Hollow.

6. Be the lover that you are. Send yourself a dozen red roses. For ladies only...”Forever” on them. Then you won’t feel left out anymore, but you’ll see how silly you look. Face it, doing those gestures are just silly in general. But, giving will make you feel good. “Usually giving gifts to loved ones feels just as good as receiving, but not better!” said MSU student, Jessica Dubig, 22.

7. Go skiing solo.” said 22-year-old MSU student Kristen Winkley. Take a day trip to the mountains and breathe in the fresh cool air. Settle down in the ski lodge for some hot chocolate. Take in the scenery and the opportunity. Scope out all the other singles in the area. See you are not alone. On your next run invite one of the single men or a snow bunny to ride with you on the ski lift. Maybe then by the time you get down you won’t be riding solo anymore. Then you two can indulge in some hot chocolate together and get all warm inside.

8. Be lovely. Be loved. Send yourself a dozen red roses. For ladies only...”Make sure you have the roses sign the card ‘Love, Cruise’.” When the deliverer comes with the roses make a huge deal, and a big conclusion that they are from Tom Cruise, that what he said was true and will be piquing him up in his private jet and taking you to dinner and dancing. Have a little fun with it. Who cares if he thinks your crazy? Hey, maybe the delivery guy will be crazy, invite him in for some wine, coffee, or popcorn. If you are lucky maybe he will quit his job, propose to you, and escort you then hide away alone with your imagination. You might be walking wild.

9. Go see a funny movie, go bowling, shopping or out to eat (not to your ex’s favorite restaurant). Make fun of cupid and all the crazy ways couples try to prove their love on Valentine’s Day. Remember it could be worse. You could have a date with an egotistical, cocky, thick-headed excuse for a human being. So we will part today, wholeheartedly with this quote, said in Karen Gail Lewis’ book, “MEJOR SOL ES QUE NADA MALA,” it translates “Better alone than in bad company!”

Hit a bar. Go anywhere that serves alcohol. There will be lots of single people there. Unfortunately, most of the single men will be trying to forget past partners and Valentine’s Day brings forth. Be careful that you don’t come “rebound” territory, or find some one innocent to become your “rebound” for the night. Just have a few drinks, flirt with the cute bartender, or the girl or guy across the bar. No need to get drunk so that you end up puking all night or better yet calling your ex instead of a cab.

1. The #1 thing to do on Valentine’s Day if you are single is gather up all your single friends and pig out sometime. Do something funny, go movie, go bowling, shopping or out to eat (not to your ex’s favorite restaurant). Make fun of cupid and all the crazy ways couples try to prove their love on Valentine’s Day. Remember it could be worse. You could have a date with an egotistical, cocky, thick-headed excuse for a human being. So we will part today, wholeheartedly with this quote, said in Karen Gail Lewis’ book, “MEJOR SOL ES QUE NADA MALA,” it translates “Better alone than in bad company!”

For many, safer sex has become a chore—something that you do so you don’t suffer the consequences. The portrayal of safer sex in the media is often sterile, almost medical. We are bombarded with images and advice about safer sex. Condom companies market their products on television. AIDS activists make us fear for our lives (and rightly so...) and news stories tell us about the ever-increasing number of unwanted pregnancies. The fact that many of us have to change our behavior is quite clear; sex can be dangerous in certain ways with certain people. But wait a minute... sex is supposed to be fun, to be a means of expressing love, and of sharing in one another. Well, sex can still be fun, it just has to be practiced in a newfangled way.

Foreplay

Women: Many women experience orgasm and/or highly pleasurable sensations through intentional stimulation of the clitoris or G-spot (the G-spot is often located on the forward wall of the vagina, approximately one inch inside, just beyond the pubic bone) more easily than they would experience it through ordinary vaginal penetration by a penis or dildo. Ordinary “thrusting” sex, if that is desired, is often much more enjoyable for women after arousal or orgasm. G-spot stimulation is usually easiest to accomplish with a (possibly gloved) hand, and clitoral stimulation is usually easiest to accomplish with either a (possibly gloved) hand, a vibrator, or a tongue (possibly with an oral barrier). Many women find that consistent, reliable, protracted clitoral stimulation best assists in achieving clitoral orgasms; as is also the case with G-spot stimulation, paying attention to your partner’s body language and listening to her feedback will help more than anything else.

Men: Stimulation of the prostate gland can often cause an increase in the pleasure caused by penile stimulation, or can feel good even without penile stimulation. Prostate stimulation is usually easiest to accomplish with a gloved hand, exerting mild pressure against the forward wall of the anus. The prostate gland is typically more palpable than the G-spot, and often feels like a gentle dome. As is the case with the G-spot, one should listen to the feedback of one’s partner when finding the prostate gland; its location can vary from person to person. For additional pleasure for the recipient, one may stimulate the prostate gland at the same time one is massaging the penis. In general, most men prefer a firmer touch on their genitals than many women assume would be comfortable, and many enjoy firm tugging on the scrotum.

Condoms

Rubber. Condom. Jimmy-hat. It has fifty names, but only one purpose: to create a safe sexual barrier between you and the one you love— or the one you just met.

More than 100 brands of condoms are available in the United States today. Condoms are available in a wide variety of shapes, sizes, colors, and thicknesses, and well as with or without lubricants or spermicides, and with or without reservoir tip or nipple ends. Condoms can be straight-sided or lipped toward the closed end, textured (e.g., ribbed) or smooth, solid-colored or nearly transparent, and odourless or scented or flavoured.

Experiment with the length, thickness, and features of the condom. Some condoms come with ribbing or ridges that act to increase stimulation for the receiving partner. A few manufacturers of condoms also make ultra-thin varieties or extra-sensitive ones. There are also slight differences between the various brands and styles within brands.

Some condoms come with flavoring and fun colors as a pleasant alternative. Most erotic boutiques have a variety of condoms which will please even the most discriminating tastes. You may even like the taste of flavored latex more than the real thing!

Some New Tricks

Shop Around - Try a variety of different condoms. Buy a bunch of different kinds (you can find them in adult stores and pharmacies) and try them all until you find the ones that feel just right. The trying on is almost as fun as the finding!

Dress Your Condom Up For Pleasure - Just before you put on the condom, spread some water-based lubricant (also found at most drug stores) on the head of your penis. The glass is then gently massaged by the lubricant as intercourse takes place.

Add Your Own Toppings To The Latex - One word of caution is that you should make sure that the food products do not contain any oil which will act to break down the condom. You may want to try some whipped cream, chocolate syrup, or anything else that sounds tasty to you.

Spend More Time On Foreplay - Most foreplay is perfectly safe, and is often as pleasurable as sex itself. Safer sex couples who want to get the most out of every bit of lovemaking will stretch foreplay until both are near or approaching climax. Sex after lasting foreplay will make you forget the condom is even there.

PC Muscle Contraction - Contraction of a special muscle called the PC (Pubococcygeus) muscle can increase sexual pleasure. The PC muscle can be excercised by contracting it repeatedly and rhythmically (3 sets of 10 reps per day for instance). When toned, it can be used during sex by contracting it to simply grip your partner or when approaching orgasm.

Deep Breathing - Breathing rhythmically and deeply before and during sex can increase one’s pleasure.

Maintain A Positive Attitude - Experiment with which partner puts the condom on. Try to incorporate the activity into your sexual ‘routine’. Be creative with the before and after, and always make it fun! Lastly, although when you wear a condom your sensitivity is decreased, it also translates into longer sex marathons. The decreased sensitivity allows you to be creative and intimate with your partner. Use your imagination and take advantage of the situation.

Information courtesy of the Coalition for Positive Sexuality, Sexualitics, and the Sexual Health InfoCenter

---

safe sex
The Ultimate Valentine's Day Mix Tape: 20 Songs to Win Your Valentine Over

1. “Baby Got Back”: Sir Mix-a-Lot
2. “I Touch Myself”: The Divinyls
3. “Humping Around”: Bobby Brown
4. “Get Your Freak On”: Missy Elliot
5. “I Wanna Sex You Up”: Color Me Badd
6. “Me So Horny”
7. “I Wanna Fk You Like an Animal”: Nine Inch Nails
8. “Zoom Zoom Boom Boom”: Wrecks N’ Effect
10. “Like a Virgin”: Madonna

The Real Love Songs of V-Day

1. “My Funny Valentine”- Frank Sinatra
2. “You are So Beautiful”- Joe Cocker
3. “Can’t Help Falling in Love w/ You”- Elvis Presley
4. “Everything I Do (I Do It For You)”- Bryan Adams
5. “Wonderful Tonight”- Eric Clapton
6. “Unforgettable”- Nat King Cole
7. “Right Here Waiting”- Richard Marx
8. “Baby, I Love Your Way”- Peter Frampton
9. “I Could Fall in Love”- Selena

Honorable Mentions

“Baby Love”-The Supremes
“Strangers in the Night”-Frank Sinatra
“I Don’t Want to Miss a Thing”- Aerosmith
“When a Man Loves a Woman”-Percy Sledge
“Again”-Janet Jackson
“Amazed”-Lonestar
“Unchained Melody”-The Righteous Brothers
“Endless Love”-Lionel Ritchie
“Something”-The Beatles
“I’ll Be”-Edwin McCain
“I Got You Babe”-Sonny and Cher
“And I Love Her”-The Beatles
“The Power of Love”-Celine Dion
“Wind Beneath My Wings”-Bette Midler

Movies

LOVE STORY
WHEN HARRY MET SALLY
CASABLANCA
TERMS OF ENDEARMENT
SLEEPLESS IN SEATTLE
PRETTY WOMAN
GONE WITH THE WIND
ROMEO & JULIET
TITANIC
SHAKESPEARE IN LOVE
DIRTY DANCING
MY BEST FRIEND’S WEDDING
GHOST
LEGENDS OF THE FALL
KATE & LEOPOLD
THE BEST YEARS OF OUR LIVES
BRAVEHEART
SWEET NOVEMBER
PEARL HARBOR
FOREVER YOUNG
THE WAY WE WERE
SAVE THE LAST DANCE
YOU’VE GOT MAIL
DON JUAN DEMARCO
LIKE WATER FOR CHOCOLATE
THE WEDDING SINGER
MOULIN ROUGE
PRINCESS BRIDE
THE RUNAWAY BRIDE
THE BODYGUARD
BEAUTY AND THE BEAST
SIMPLY IRRESISTIBLE
THE AMERICAN PRESIDENT
THE ENGLISH PATIENT
MESSAGE IN A BOTTLE
LAST OF THE MOHICANS
A WALK IN THE CLOUDS
OTHHELLO
A MIDSUMMER NIGHT’S DREAM
THE QUIET MAN
“Love is the only game not called on account of darkness.”
- ANONYMOUS

Immature love says: “I love you because I need you.” Mature love says: “I need you because I love you.”
- ERICH FROMM

We who is in love is wise and is becoming wiser, sees new fullytive he looks at the object beloved, drawing from it with her eyes and his mind those virtues which possesses.
- ralph waldo emerson

Hearts are not as a gift, but hearts are earned.
- William Butler Yeats

The great tragedy of life is not that men perish but that they cease to love.
- W. Somerset Maugham

Love is merely a madness...
- William Shakespeare

You, love. The greatest refreshment of life.
- Pablo Picasso

You love the things we love, the you are.
- Robert Frost

The giving of love is an education in itself.
- Eleanor Roosevelt

If you loved somebody, tell them.
- Bob McKinn

“Love begets love. The torment is my joy.”
- THEODORE ROETHKE
Cyberlife Shows It's All About the Love...

By James Topoleski
Arts and Entertainment Editor

Cyberlife is feeling a bit morbid this Valentine's Day. Maybe it is from our lack of dates this year, or maybe the plethora of red and pink is just getting to us. From the death of stick figures, to our own untimely demise, we have sites that while a bit morbid, at least counter the "lovey dovey" nature Valentines Day brings. Enjoy.

StickDeath www.stickdeath.com

Death is not usually a funny thing to laugh at, but for some reason whenever it involves cartoon characters, it always seems better. The demise of Kenny every week has become a fixture on South Park. The same could be said for "Itchy and Scratchy" on "The Simpsons." While they where human, it would be hilarious. They try to ride the ramp like Tony Hawk, or summon the undead to laugh at, but for some reason they are cartoons and their constant demise in every episode kills me. From the death of the stick figures to our own untimely demise, we have sites that while a bit morbid, at least counter the "lovey dovey" nature Valentines Day brings. Enjoy.

Daily Confession www.dailyconfession.com

Sometimes people want to confess something to the entire world. Maybe it is about how that "special someone" really makes them feel. On the other hand, it could be about how much they hate pizza. However, sometimes, it could be something even more sacred and deeper.

Daily Confession can be both a hilarious site, with confessions so funny; you cannot believe that they can be true, and some so sad, you wished that they were not true. On Daily Confession, you have confessions people are making, some just to get it off their chest, some asking for advice, or some just because they can.

People then have the option to comment on your confession and help you out. If that is not a help, there is an extensive list of resources locally and nationally that can help you out as well.

Death Clock www.deathclock.com

You got your whole life planned, your getting that good job, marrying the special other, nothing could be better. Then you die. All that work for nothing. Do not let death ruin your plans, plan everything around your death thanks to the Death Clock. Thanks to Death Clock, you can plan around that untimely demise and get everything you ever wanted to do done ahead of time. Not to mention, know what won’t get you killed. Never fear going skydiving again, or pollute your body with cigarettes.

You can also find out when your favorite celebrity will die. Get started on your memorials to their celebrities now before they kick the bucket. Thanks to Death Clock, you will never have to fear death again.

(* We are just kidding you know. No one knows when you’re going to die, certainly not a website.)

Spend a year of your life serving your community while you:

* Earn a living allowance of up to $9,300, full health benefits and child care
* Earn an educational award of up to $4,725 to pay for school or student loans
* Learn about child care and adult education
* PT placements available, tutoring kids and helping tenants’ resolve housing complaints
* Become a team player and leader

For an application contact Lena at (201) 653-3888, ext14 or at Lbuiies@ini.org

AmeriCorps National Service
Monologues

Continued from p.9

A great appeal of the Monologues is that they tell stories that are cross-generational, as well as cross-cultural. A very witty, but realistic, contemporary story is candidly performed by Wendy Ryder, when a boyfriend of hers helps her to find love for her vagina.

Following Ryder, is Lisa G., who has an intense presence as a performer. Her potency was channelled powerfully into the aptly titled, "My Angry Vagina," which makes smart comments about everything from thigh underwear to the gynecologist visits.

It takes a certain amount of courage and style also to tell orgasms on stage. Both Jennifer Marocy and Jessica Richardson do so. "The Woman Who Loved to Make Vaginas Happy," is a guaranteed crowd-pleaser. Richardson, donning her fur coat, portrays a sex worker who will only employ herself to women, because she enjoys making them moan. Marocy playfully acts out "Reclaiming cunt." Jaime McMahon is indignant in, My Short Skirt," another re-claiming, this time of the freedom to express oneself without fear.

And the Monologues do talk about fear. They give voice to women who have experienced terror. "The Vagina Was My Village," is the voice of a woman brutally raped and abused in Bosnia. Especially effective is the duality of the voice in this piece. Jessica Custer is the voice of the woman before her village was ravaged by war and she was heinously abused. Custer’s voice has an elated, musical quality. The monologues moves back and forth between her and Lisa Kramer-Burghardt’s. Burghardt’s performance is profound, fraught with the terror of constantly reliving the rape and abuse. Her lines are of the most unspeakable acts of violence: "Not since I heard the skin tear and made lemon screeching sounds, not since a piece of my vagina came off in my hand...."

Another (very different) story of rape, sexuality, and eventually, discovery, "The Little Couch Sniper That Could," spans a black woman’s life. Kadijah Basir and Yvette Hall play dual voices of this woman. Basir is the woman, because she enjoys making women, and Hall both evoke the feelings of loss and new found sensuality with graceful style. The last monologue, fittingly, is that of a birth. "The Birth of Enser’s granddaughter. It seems appropriate that the Vagina Monologues ends with a birth.

The monologues has been nominated for a Grammy for this album. Although, it’s a shame it took a cover album to put her back into mainstream pop it’s nice to see Ker get the recognition she deserves. This is a fantastic album with a lot of diversity. Good for every dog and bubble bath. Two thumbs up.

Strange Little Girls is Tor Angy’s sixth album. On this album she does nothing but cover songs by Emmen to Neil Young. She has been nominated for a Grammy for this album. Although, it’s a shame it took a cover album to put her back into mainstream pop it’s nice to see Ker get the recognition she deserves. This is a fantastic album with a lot of diversity. Good for every dog and bubble bath. Two thumbs up.

Candy Pandora Fridays @ 7:30 to 10:00 A.M.
Leadership!

Resident Manager Selection Schedule 2002-2003

Applications available in the Office of Residence Life & All Residence Halls

Tuesday, February 12, 2002

Information sessions:
- Monday, February 18, 2002 in Student Center Room 416 @ 7:30 p.m.
- Wednesday, February 20, 2002 in Kops Lounge (Russ Hall) @ 4:45 p.m.

Applications due in the Office of Residence Life
Monday, February 25, 2002 by 4:00 p.m.

All applicants must sign up for one Individual Interview and Group Process session:

- ½ hour Individual Interviews
  - Friday, March 1, 2002 & Thursday, March 7, 2002
  - 9:00 a.m. – 4:00 p.m.

- Select one group process
  - Sunday, March 17, 2002 @ 4:00 – 8:00 p.m. in Kops Lounge (Russ Hall)
  - Monday, March 18, 2002 @ 5:00 – 9:00 p.m. in Student Center Room 419
  - Tuesday, March 19, 2002 @ 6:00 – 10:00 p.m. in Student Center Room 419

Selection decisions posted in Office of Residence Life and mailed to applicants
Friday, March 22, 2002

Contracts due in the Office of Residence Life
Wednesday, March 27, 2002

Minimum requirements:
Graduate students 3.0 GPA and Undergraduates students with earned credits and 3.0 GPA

Office of Residence Life
4th Floor Bohn Hall
(973)655-5188
An Impeachment Trend?

We took a vote. We don’t want to play with you anymore.

They start so young...

Pointing fingers and impending impeachment processes seem to have become trends among the SGA. A breach of the ethical code first sparked the prospect of impeachment while the possible impeachment of yet another SGA member has now arisen, this time with less clear justification.

Last week, SGA Treasurer, Shariff Elhagin, was brought up on charges of breaking the SGA’s code of ethics. A disciplinary committee was selected last night to vote on possibly impeaching Elhagin. But, it seems that the impeachment processes won’t stop there. Jacob V. Hudnut, legislator for the SGA, has now been accused of actions unbecoming of a legislator. A disciplinary committee for Hudnut was also selected at last night’s SGA meeting, which brings the possibility of a second impeachment lurking in the foreseeable future.

As they attempt (or at least are supposed to attempt) to work as a whole, representing the students as a solitary unit, the SGA has recently begun a slew of accusations and allegations towards its own governing members. If elected local and national American politicians made accusations of one another as regularly as the SGA seems to, America would be an atrocity.

Nevertheless, let us not idealize American government. While we hold no illusions of the ethics of politics in America, politicians’ selfish practices seem to be kept in line, at least to the point that a fair amount of order is maintained among our governing units. In fact, the image of the power-hungry and self-serving politician has become somewhat commonplace among American culture.

So, why should the SGA be any different? But instead of checking their pettiness at the door in order to conduct business, the SGA has chosen to point out the imprudence of its fellow members, resulting in a chaotic whirlwind of blame shifting.

According to the SGA, the recent disciplinary hearings are an attempt to improve the SGA, thus saving face in the process. But in doing so, isn’t the SGA only cutting off their nose to spite their own face? With all the accusations flying, the SGA certainly does not seem concerned about the repercussions that may arise from their mutiny. They expect the students and the administration to take them seriously, and yet, they seem determined to portray themselves as bratty adolescents, unwilling to even attempt cohesion.

While we suffer the SGA’s sad state of affairs currently in the works, we have to wonder, who among the remaining SGA officials will be next in line for impeachment? Where will the finger point next?

Montclarion Question Of the Week:
Rate the Shuttle Bus Drivers.

Log on to: www.themontclarion.com to voice your opinion.

Last Week’s Poll Results
Delving the Impeachment Proceedings: Right or Wrong?

Right - 43%
Wrong - 57%
Unsure - 0%
I Do Not Know What the Impeachment Proceedings Are - 0%
Egos and Enron and Wars, Oh My!
Already, It Has Been Quite a Year

For starters, less than two months into 2002, N.J. has had four governors. On February 1, Acting Governor Donald DiFrancesco had to step down a week before the special election. Governor McGreevey was to be sworn in. We couldn’t get more confused with two Acting Governors, no? No, something might actually get everyone’s attention. The status of the interim Governor to the State Senate President. However, due to last year’s election, the State Senate is split equally between Democrats and Republicans, so we have two State Senate Presidents. So, instead of simply being mature about everything going on and moving forward, the Democratic State Senate President was our interim Governor for three and a half days. During this time, the Republican State Senate President was interim Governor for the other three and a half days. Confusing? It gets worse. Both of these petty little men have separate, official stationaries and pens printed, with “Governor of the State of New Jersey” written underneath. So, men both had parties at Drumthwacket to celebrate their three-and-a-half-day-ship. If you are wondering who footed the bill for all this, the answer is U.S. Meanwhile, McGreevey has asked all public universities to cut back on spending for beauty. I suppose it is too much to ask that our tax dollars be used for public education. Not, much better for it to be spent stroking the egos of our leaders with official stationaries and lavish parties. How long is it until the next Election Day?

Down in the Beltway, there’s the whole Enron mess, which boil down to the following: Enron’s big wigs knew it was going down, yet took as much money for themselves as they could, while their employees lost their life savings, and the company eventually went in the red. I care little to see anyone examine the possibility that he might be in Saudi Arabia. After all, Saudi Arabia is home to his family (although they have officially disowned him), as well as a majority of the September 11 hijackers, currently bin Laden is on dialysis, it seems unlikely he would be living underground, Afghanistan rubble, or hidden away somewhere in Pakistan, but hey, what do I know? The last time I saw his name in the paper, the story was about a new strain of heroin named after him, heroin that comes in bags illustrated with little picture of planes crashing into skyscrapers. Pretty tacky, though not as tacky as Bush rediscovers profits from the sale of equipment to the U.S. military, which he does as a representative of the Carlyle Group (a group which, until very recently, the bin Laden family had been a part of as well). So, a former President is profiting off a war that was illegally declared by his son, and yet we still find space in newspapers to wonder whether Nicole Kidman will get an Oscar nomination for Moulin Rouge or The Others. A few months ago, pundits were saying that an outcome of last year’s momentous events would be an end to frivolity, but I guess abandoning that would be letting the terrorists win, huh?

Speaking of “the War.” What’s it called, again? Operation Second Term?, Bush, in his State of the Union address, Iraq and North Korea, calling them “axes of evil,” I suppose they should be scarred, though when’s the last time anyone ever cared about Iran? Plus, Daddy couldn’t get rid of Saddam, so what makes Junior so sure he can do it? Finally, North Korea? Haven’t we tried that already, and come away with nothing but a whole bunch of body bags and M*A*S*H? Why don’t we just declare war on Vietnam again? Maybe we’ll win this time, Meanwhile, some of the President’s men have been down playing the need for our troops to be close to starting a war before September 11, it seems布什is trying to create some kind of media frenzy in suggesting the ongoing act, seeing how many wars he can declare going on at one time. After all, Nixon was elected (and then re-elected) by staging peace in Central Asia, so why can’t Bush do it? Ah, it’s not that simple. At least now, Bush is trying (successfully, as of yet) to repeat the mistakes of Nixon, Reagan, and Daddy.

Yikes. 99

Across the globe, Osama bin Laden is still missing. There’s a rumor going around that he has been killed, and that the government is conspiring to keep it a secret to maintain interest in this war will not flag. I don’t buy it. It’s hard for me to believe that Baby Bush wouldn’t be parading bin Laden’s head around on a stick, yelling “Yeehaw!” while the press snaps pictures. No, he’s probably alive, although I rarely see anyone examine the possibility that he might be in Saudi Arabia. After all, Saudi Arabia is home to his family (although they have officially disowned him), as well as a majority of the September 11 hijackers, currently bin Laden is on dialysis, it seems unlikely he would be living underground, Afghanistan rubble, or hidden away somewhere in Pakistan, but hey, what do I know? The last time I saw his name in the paper, the story was about a new strain of heroin named after him, heroin that comes in bags illustrated with little picture of planes crashing into skyscrapers. Pretty tacky, though not as tacky as Bush rediscovers profits from the sale of equipment to the U.S. military, which he does as a representative of the Carlyle Group (a group which, until very recently, the bin Laden family had been a part of as well). So, a former President is profiting off a war that was illegally declared by his son, and yet we still

Mary O’Rourke
Biology Major

Mary O’Rourke
Biology Major

Sheila Griffin
Unemployment

Sheila Griffin
Unemployment

Viewpoint

Egos and Enron and Wars, Oh My!
Already, It Has Been Quite a Year

For starters, less than two months into 2002, N.J. has had four governors. On February 1, Acting Governor Donald DiFrancesco had to step down a week before the special election. Governor McGreevey was to be sworn in. We couldn’t get more confused with two Acting Governors, no? No, something might actually get everyone’s attention. The status of the interim Governor to the State Senate President. However, due to last year’s election, the State Senate is split equally between Democrats and Republicans, so we have two State Senate Presidents. So, instead of simply being mature about everything going on and moving forward, the Democratic State Senate President was our interim Governor for three and a half days. During this time, the Republican State Senate President was interim Governor for the other three and a half days. Confusing? It gets worse. Both of these petty little men have separate, official stationaries and pens printed, with “Governor of the State of New Jersey” written underneath. So, men both had parties at Drumthwacket to celebrate their three-and-a-half-day-ship. If you are wondering who footed the bill for all this, the answer is U.S. Meanwhile, McGreevey has asked all public universities to cut back on spending for beauty. I suppose it is too much to ask that our tax dollars be used for public education. Not, much better for it to be spent stroking the egos of our leaders with official stationaries and lavish parties. How long is it until the next Election Day?

Down in the Beltway, there’s the whole Enron mess, which boil down to the following: Enron’s big wigs knew it was going down, yet took as much money for themselves as they could, while their employees lost their life savings, and the company eventually went in the red. I care little to see anyone examine the possibility that he might be in Saudi Arabia. After all, Saudi Arabia is home to his family (although they have officially disowned him), as well as a majority of the September 11 hijackers, currently bin Laden is on dialysis, it seems unlikely he would be living underground, Afghanistan rubble, or hidden away somewhere in Pakistan, but hey, what do I know? The last time I saw his name in the paper, the story was about a new strain of heroin named after him, heroin that comes in bags illustrated with little picture of planes crashing into skyscrapers. Pretty tacky, though not as tacky as Bush rediscovers profits from the sale of equipment to the U.S. military, which he does as a representative of the Carlyle Group (a group which, until very recently, the bin Laden family had been a part of as well). So, a former President is profiting off a war that was illegally declared by his son, and yet we still

Mary O’Rourke
Biology Major

Mary O’Rourke
Biology Major

Sheila Griffin
Unemployment

Sheila Griffin
Unemployment

A Welcome Return

MSU is eclectic. I have been away from the campus life for almost 30 years. During that time, period in my life I have experienced life as a member of the work force. I have been happily married and happily divorced. Yes, that's correct, when it is for the good, a divorce can be a happy event. I am a mother who knows the pain of losing a child, my son. The horrible tragedy of losing a child stays with you for life. I suffered many other deaths, my mother and father eleven months apart. My family crumbled, and I was no longer employed. I decided I was going to put my life back together and be an example for my two daughters and others to reinvent my life. That’s why I came back to school. MSU campus is exciting full of life, culture, and diversity. I am now enshrined with a new family and my life has taken a fresh start. A vibrant future, I am constantly being exposed to new technology.
Fun and Freaky Valentine Ideas For All

NAME: Darla Davenger
HOMETOWN: Crazytown, PA
HOBBIES: Writing poetry, cooking, dancing, watching romantic movies, tearing out the hearts of former loved one and sacrificing them to the Roman war god Mars.
TURN ONS: "I like a woman who reminds me of mother, she was one hot cookie, and DAMN what a kisser!"
LOOKING FOR: Anyone but his cousin Layla. "Been there and done that!"

NAME: Jimmy "The Scarecrow"
HOMETOWN: Marlboro, NJ
HOBBIES: Farming, sheep shearing, feeding the sheep, sleeping in the shed with the sheep, having romantic interludes with the sheep, quite frankly doing the sheep, and standing in his fields dressed like a scarecrow, because some damn frat kid stole his real one.
TURN ONS: "Well I reckon that I like one with a full coat and has matured stolen his real one.
LOOKING FOR: "Well gee...a real woman would sure be nice."

NAME: Billy Bob Daniels
HOMETOWN: Hicksville, NJ
HOBBIES: Growing abnormally sized fruits and vegetables, filling the gap in his teeth will all sorts of different assorted objects, watching the paint dry.
TURN ONS: "I like a woman who reminds me of mother, she was one hot cookie, and DAMN what a kisser!"
LOOKING FOR: "Anyone but his cousin Layla. "Been there and done that!"

NAME: The Solutions
HOMETOWN: Upper Montclair, NJ
HOBBIES: Helping cheaters get all the answers for the crossword puzzle.
TURN ONS: "People who capitalize hours and names in the crossword puzzle."
LOOKING FOR: "Nothing, just as long as I can be found in the Humour Section, I don’t give a damn what I go!

For those of us that aren’t going to spend quality time with that loved one, and will most likely be passing by the time sitting in your room staring at the ceiling, there are other options. Instead of a wallowing in your own misery, get naked in front of the mirror and take a long and hard look at yourself. If you were the opposite sex would you really want to date yourself? If your a guy, you call that big? We’ve seen a bigger one on Papa Smurf when he used to pop a semi every time Smurfette walked by in her little dress. If you are a girl, do you call those love handles? Why you could dock a boat on them damn things. Now that you have lowered your self esteem, try and think of all the other crazy people that took my advice and are standing in front of their mirrors nude. Don’t get upset, there are plenty of fish in the ocean, and all of them just want to score!

For all those who aren’t in the mood to contribute to the commercialized atmosphere of Valentine’s day and don’t want to throw away your hard earned cash so that Hallmark can make an easy buck writing some crappy card with a catchy phrase, try making your own card. Something simple and sweet often does the job, however avoid using phrases like, “You better love me or else.” “If you break up with me, I am going to shoot your dog,” or the ever popular, “I love you.”

Switch household chores with your loved one. Guys, pick up the house, wash your dishes, do some laundry, and cook some pot roast. Women, mow the lawn, and start big household projects, that will take up half the space in your living room and then over the next six months stop all work on it and put it off until the man is screaming at you do so something or put the tools away.
child care wanted

Babysitter for 18-month-old girl, P/T flexible hours, own transportation, no smoking, Roseland area, 973-868-3904.

CHILD CARE WANTED: Montclair family with 3 young daughters (newborn to 3 1/2 years of age) seeking loving and reliable part-time childcare. Please call 973-744-8205.

egg donors wanted

Healthy, non-drug-user, age 21-32 of Chinese descent. Compensation $7,000 for egg donation. Confidentiality guaranteed. Call Judy at 973-761-5600 10 a.m.-3 p.m., M-F for more information.

for sale

help wanted

EARN $1000 FOR YOUR GROUP! Work on campus to raise money for your student group or organization. Make your own schedule and earn $5 per application. Please call 1-800-906-7450.

Fraternities * Sororities * Clubs * Student Groups. Earn $1,000-$2,000 with easy Campusfundraiser.com three-hour fundraising event. Does not involve credit card applications. Fundraising dates are filling quickly, so call today! Contact Campusfundraiser.com at 888-923-3238, or visit www.campusfundraiser.com.

Assistant needed to maintain web site and databases. Requires excellent computer, typing and spelling skills. Will train about web site. Hours flexible. Call Dawn 973-746-8726 (9 a.m. and 7 p.m).

spring break

#1 SPRING BREAK operator! The lowest prices, greatest parties, awesome meal deals, and reliable service to all your favorite places. Check it out at WWW.VAGABONDOPERATIONS.COM or call us at 1-888-VAGABOND.

join us

You. Yeah, you. If you're reading this add, apparently you're not too busy. Why not take the time you usually spend on reading pointless adds like this one, to write something instead? Get your voice heard by the population here at MSU, and you too can be a somebody. All you have to do is join The Montclarion. It's that simple. So, come on down to the SC Annex, rm. 113 or call 973-655-5241 and talk to the editor of your choice to find out how you can be part of that section. Or, be a part of more than one section. It's up to you. So, copy-edit, write, layout, or brainstorm ideas. We want you! So, join us today!

Nicole Rodriguez was killed by a drunk driver while walking next door to play with her friend.

What should you do to stop a friend from driving drunk? Whatever you have to. Friends don't let friends drive drunk.

---

EASTERN SCHOOL OF ACUPUNCTURE AND TRADITIONAL MEDICINE

New Jersey's First Acupuncture School

LIMITED SCHOLARSHIPS AND FINANCIAL AID AVAILABLE FOR QUALIFIED APPLICANTS

Call for an application and catalog

973-746-8717

Visit our Website at www.easternschool.com

Candidacy granted by ACAOM

Approved by the New Jersey Department of Education

COMING DOWN THE HIGHWAY FEBRUARY 15TH.
Men's Basketball

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Team</th>
<th>NJAC Overall</th>
<th>Overall</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>MSU</td>
<td>11-5</td>
<td>17-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ramapo</td>
<td>11-5</td>
<td>17-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Richard Stockton</td>
<td>10-6</td>
<td>16-7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NJCU</td>
<td>10-6</td>
<td>15-8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WPU</td>
<td>8-8</td>
<td>14-9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rowan</td>
<td>7-9</td>
<td>13-9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rutgers-Camden</td>
<td>8-8</td>
<td>14-9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TCNJ</td>
<td>6-10</td>
<td>11-12</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kean</td>
<td>4-12</td>
<td>9-14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rutgers-Newark</td>
<td>3-13</td>
<td>7-16</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Women's Basketball

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Team</th>
<th>NJAC Overall</th>
<th>Overall</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kean</td>
<td>12-4</td>
<td>16-7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TCNJ</td>
<td>12-4</td>
<td>16-7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Richard Stockton</td>
<td>12-4</td>
<td>16-7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rutgers-Camden</td>
<td>11-5</td>
<td>16-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rowan</td>
<td>11-5</td>
<td>12-10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MSU</td>
<td>8-8</td>
<td>12-11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ramapo</td>
<td>7-9</td>
<td>13-9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>NJCU</td>
<td>4-12</td>
<td>9-14</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WPU</td>
<td>2-14</td>
<td>4-19</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rutgers-Newark</td>
<td>1-15</td>
<td>4-17</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Women's Swimming

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Team</th>
<th>NJAC Overall</th>
<th>Overall</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>TCNJ</td>
<td>4-0</td>
<td>8-2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rowan</td>
<td>3-1</td>
<td>6-4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>MSU</td>
<td>2-2</td>
<td>5-9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>WPU</td>
<td>1-3</td>
<td>5-3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kean</td>
<td>0-4</td>
<td>5-6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Interested in a Career Dealing with Sports?

Come join The Montclarion's Sports Section and cover some of Division III's best teams and rivals.

- Develop writing, communication, and editing skills.
- See how it feels to be a real beat reporter at a major paper by sitting at the sidelines and doing post-game interviews.
- If sports is your life, why not make a living off of it? Call 512-241 and ask for Mike Sanchez or Eli Gelman for more information.

---

Men's Basketball Results

- RSU at MRU
- WPU at NJC

No Pic Available

Women's Basketball Results

- Kean at TCNJ
- MSU at Rutgers-Camden
- Rowan at Richard Stockton

No Pic Available

Wrestling Results

- RSU at WPU
- Kean at TCNJ
- MSU at Rowan

No Pic Available

---

Player of the Week

JASMINE BATT

STANDINGS

THIS WEEK'S HAWK ACTION

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Sat. 16 vs. TCNJ* 4 p.m.

Final Regular Season Home Game. First 250 people will receive free tee-shirts. Shooting contests with free give aways also!

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Sat. 16 vs. TCNJ* 2 p.m.

WRESTLING

Sun. 17

Metropolitan Champs. @ York College

TRACK AND FIELD

Sat. 16 @ Ohio State (Columbus, OH) 9 a.m.

honorable mention

- Ben Martinez
  Senior Guard
  Carteret, NJ
  Martinez helped MSU continue its road to the top of the NJAC with 21 and 16 point performances over the week. He had 11 rebounds, 8 assists and 5 steals combined for both games.

- Darryl Louis
  Junior Sprinter
  Trenton, NJ
  Louis broke his own school record by winning the Men's 200 Meter Dash in a time of 21.75 seconds. He also won the Men's 400 Meter Dash in a time of 48.47.

- Shirah Odeh
  Freshman Guard
  Pompton Lakes, NJ
  Odeh was named NJAC Rookie of the Week for her performances in the three games last week when she averaged 10 points per game.

- John Shipley
  Senior
  High Point, NJ
  Shipley won his final home match last Wednesday as he helped the 23rd Ranked Red Hawks defeat #6 Springfield.

---

Junior Center

Carteret, NJ

Batts was named NJAC Player of the Week for her performances of 31 points, 19 rebounds and 15 points, 9 rebound nights to help MSU win three straight.
Hockey's Fall from Grace
Red Hawks' Hockey Club Drop from First Place After Embarrassment

By Mike Hooper
Staff Writer

Understanding the Red Hawks' hockey club has not been easy this year. It got a lot harder this past weekend, when the team showed their best and their absolute worst. Against Rider Friday night, the Red Hawks won, 5-2, by playing classic MSU come-from-behind hockey. Saturday afternoon, against the UPenn Quakers, with the M-ACHA's top spot on the line, the club played the most embarrassing game of its four-year history, losing 8-0.

A few bad calls by the referees, who were terrible the night before, put everything into perspective during the weekend. The Red Hawks woke up. In the three-point, 61-58 win over the Great Danes, who have already beaten the Red Hawks in the first round of the Super East playoffs on Saturday afternoon, the Red Hawks dropped into penalty after penalty.

After Embarrassment
The Red Hawks' hockey club has not fared well this season, and the team is looking for its first place spot on the line. The club played its worst game of the season Saturday night against the UPenn Quakers, and the closest to a cohesive unit they have been since the start of the season. Unable to pull together as a team, they lost, 8-0.

Hockey's Fall from Grace
By John Montesano
Staff Writer

Montclair tallied the win against Kean behind Ben Martinez, who had 16 points and eight rebounds, Michael Gluck, who contributed 11 points, and Omar Booth, who added another double-double to his personal acco­ lades with 15 points and 11 rebounds.

Hockey's Fall from Grace

In a game where the Red Hawks looked out in front in the second period, penalty kills made them look worse than they played in a high school rink. Co-Captain Frank Barone, sitting out after a penalty at the end of the first period, put it in perspective in the second period:

"If this was Madison Square Garden and we were playing the Rangers, there'd be gun­ fire."

Tender Robbie Martinez, who was phenomenal for a goalie can only make a single goal; the Red Hawks woke up. Against UPenn, he wasn't at fault for a single goal; a goalie can only make a few mistakes. Co-Captain Anthony Rossillo, who scored all three goals the night before, was seething. Both players were watching their team be thoroughly lambasted by an inferior team in the last home game of their careers.

Despite all their best efforts at motivating the team during the second interval, the Red Hawks still finished without a solitary goal. They hardly even threatened for a tying goal. Embarrassed and disappointed, Head Coach Matthew Mancinico made a decision he had been struggling with for several weeks. During the second intermis­ sion, after listening with tears in his eyes to his seniors try to pump some life into the team, Mancinico announced that he would be leaving the team after the season. Unable to pull together as a cohesive unit for any amount of time this season, he was never able to fully implement his system.

The season continues tomorrow, when the Red Hawks take on Albany State in the first round of the Super East playoffs. If they can defeat the Great Danes, who have already beaten the Red Hawks twice this season, they face a rested #1-ranked NYU squad Saturday afternoon.

The Red Hawks dropped into second place in the M-ACHA, one point behind UPenn, despite scoring nearly 30 more goals over the season. They will face Rider in the M-ACHA playoffs on Saturday, Feb. 23. They could run the table or the Broncos could send them home with a win.

As with every other game this season, it all depends on which team decides to show up.

Running at Top Speed

Track and Field: This past weekend the track team won the CTC Championship, finishing first out of 25 schools. The runner-up was 26 points behind MSU, who finished with 98 points. Below are the first place winners:

- Darryl Louis - 1st - Men's 200 Meter Dash (21.75 seconds)*
- Darryl Louis - 1st - Men's 400 Meter Dash (48.47)
- Enrique Llanos - 1st - Men's 55 Meter High Hurdle (7.55)
- Ernest Tymes - 1st - Men's Long Jump (6.78 Meters)
- Nick Gregorio - 1st - Shotput (15.93)*
- Tierra Hicks - 1st - Women's 400 Meter Dash (56.30)*

* Broke own school record
 Broke own school record
First time in Division I this year

Three in a Row

Women's Basketball: The Red Hawks have won three in a row behind Jasmine Batts, Stephanie Crolley, and Sha Oden. The Red Hawks winning streak included a win over sixth ranked Springfield at Panzer.

Wrestling: The wrestling team finished its home season with a win over sixth ranked Springfield at Panzer.

Westlers Chris Knopp, John Shipley, Gary Mikolay and Dave Bubnowski all won their matches with pins.

Senior Shipley, Bubnowski, L.B. DeAngelis, and Bethy Montanex were honored before the match as outgoing seniors.

Set to Competition Up This Week
See Page 23