Council Votes Against Greene Bill to Reappoint Greek Advisor Fails Again

The annual bill to appoint an advisor to the Greek Council failed for the second time, last week. The bill was first called to order at last week’s meeting where it failed to pass. Ongoing issues with the bill leave the Greek Council without an advisor, a responsibility that Hayden Greene has held for the past three years.

After announcing that “Hayden is out,” with 14 organizations for the bill, and nine against, Lauren Parisi, president of the Greek Council, informed the legislators that the following week’s meeting would be held as an emergency meeting. As previously said by Parisi, the council is unable to hold meetings unless the president declares it to be an emergency.

According to Parisi, “there is definitely someone out there to fill (Greene’s) position.”

New Dean Brings CHSS Changes

New educational technology and improvements to academic advising are underway, according to Dr. Mary A. Papazian, the newly hired Dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences.

“I am in the enviable position of coming to a college that has had a number of years of fine leadership and strong faculty and staff,” Papazian said.

Nevertheless, as with any organization, there is always room for improvement in some areas and opportunities for new initiatives and change,” Papazian said.

According to the CHSS website, faculty in the college are “leaders in the use of technology education in the classes as well as computer-aided instruction and innovative software.

Some students, however, have expressed a problem in the system concerning the execution of the CHSS statement and in the money put towards it.

There is much lacking in training of professors with the new technology. It takes away from the privilege of having technology in the class when students are faced with helping the professor figure out how to work the machine,” said sophomore political science major Daniel Diaz.

Online resources for MSU faculty understanding of technology are located on the MSU website; they include extensive breakdowns of computer jargon as well as programs and essays on technology-enhanced, pedagogical strategies.

According to Papazian, recognizing faculty training needs improvement and plans to support faculty to maximize benefits of technological tools, but stressed that technology does not “replace real student learning and courses content.”

According to Papazian, her responsibilities include equipping students and faculty with the necessary tools to succeed in their respective roles. She must manage the college’s budget and assist the hiring of new employees. She works with the departments on various issues of curriculum design and revision, assessment of students learning and new program development.

I have found that academic, Montclair is on par with TCNJ,” said Adam Brunner, a junior English transfer. “But as far as caring about the students, MSU lags far behind. Here, I feel like I am nothing more than the sum digits of my social security number.”

[I] has always been a challenge for institutions to provide the individual attention students need at a moderate to large university...there is no perfect system; we must be willing to make the necessary changes,” Papazian said.

Papazian received a Ph.D. in English from the University of California, Los Angeles. For the past five years she has worked as Associate Dean in the College of Arts and Sciences at Oakland University of Rochester, MI.

IT Loses Landlines Extensions Exchanged For Cells

Information Technology is in the process of making technological changes that will affect resident and commuter students. It has proposed two policies that will keep the campus community connected and provide heightened security.

IT and Student Development and Campus Life staff are developing a plan to equip all resident students with cell phones instead of landline phones and IT is pushing to have proxy security cards, already present in some buildings, issued to everyone on campus.

A survey conducted by RAVE Wireless found that 85 percent of MSU students have a cell phone plan. As a result, IT and Student Development and Campus Services have been trying to think of ways to meet students’ communication needs.

It has been negotiating with several well-known cell phone vendors on a pilot program for MSU.

IT will introduce the pilot program within the next few weeks and the participating students will be selected by IT and Student Development and Campus Life staff.

At first, the cell phones will only be administered to resident students.

If the pilot program is successful, the University hopes to provide a cell phone to every student.

According to Ed Chapel, Associate Vice President for IT, the cell phones will provide several convenient features.

Chapel states, “The cell phones are much more expensive than conventional landlines but they do also add a great deal of additional features and functions than landlines.”

These features include the ability for faculty and administration to send a mass text message to students about class cancellations, school emergencies, building problems, and shuttle bus arrival times. Students will also be able to text messages fellow students and faculty and thus keep in contact with the campus community.

Once the pilot program proves a success the cell phone plan will be proposed to the University’s Executive Council and will be implemented as soon as fall 2005.

The pilot program will be free of charge but after the trial period, MSU will offer the highest technologically advanced phones at a competitive rate.

Presently, IT is discussing the program with many well-known vendors and discussing specifications like price and terms of agreement.

To ensure that service is available at all areas on campus, RAVE Wireless will survey areas on campus for unsatisfactory service and

The annual bill to appoint the Greek Council advisor failed for the second time, last week’s meeting where the council decided that Hayden Greene would not be reappointed to his position as advisor to the council.

In response to the vacant position, Jacob Hudnut, SGA President, said that the SGA “fully supports the council’s decision” and that, when the council selects a new advisor, he is willing to submit a bill to the SGA Legislature in order to compensate that individual. As described in the Statutes of the Greek Council at Montclair State University, a Greek Advisor

NEWARK - Federal security screeners at Newark Liberty International Airport missed one of four fake bombs or weapons that prevent inspectors attempted to sneak past check-points during weekly tests from June to September.

The vast majority of failures resulted from screeners' inability to detect plastic explosive devices hidden in carry-on bags sent through X-ray machines. Screeners also missed some guns in carry-on luggage sent through X-ray units or concealed under the clothing of passengers who used walk-through metal detectors.

ORANGE - At about 11 p.m., Friday, a nearly 400-pound, four-year-old man weighing more than 600 pounds, jumped and landed on an Air Force plane that was taking off.

ROCKY'S - In a 12-point truce to end violence against each other.

MONTCLAIR - Staff and faculty of Montclair High School arrested 122 parking tickets issued around the high school.

Residents in the surrounding area have complained about the illegally parked cars in front of their homes.

Concordia parties, including police, students, and principals, are to meet next week to work out a solution to the long-standing parking problem around the school.

TACOMA, WA - A 5-week-old baby left alone by his grandmother after being mailed by the family dog. Jose Diaz was on a bed Tuesday when the dog jumped up and attacked him. Police believe a 7-year-old mutt hurt the boy, though officers also found two other dogs in the house.

The baby had bites on his face and head when his parents, both 19, brought him to a fire station after the attack. He was taken by helicopter to Shands Jacksonville hospital, where he later died.

HONOLULU, HI - Police charged a man who set his neighbor on fire in Paia on Tuesday.

Keith Yamamoto doused his wife with gasoline, but also attacked with a spear gun, according to court documents. The victim also had a restraining order against the man who allegedly attacked him.

MODESTO, CA - A Modesto man has been accused of killing his quadruplet wife, Sarah Cothran, 26, after her husband, Joshua Cothran, 30, left her home alone after a fight late Friday night. "Jocky told adult services that this was going to happen and she was going to be killed by Joshua," said family friend Debbie Southern.

Cothran is currently on probation for abusing another woman.

BOULDER, CO - A University of Colorado freshman was found dead at a fraternity house last month due to acute alcohol poisoning, according to the coroner.

Lynn "Gordie" Bailey, 18, died with a blood alcohol level of 0.328 percent. Bailey's death had been ruled accidental. No other drugs were found in his system.

BAGHDAD, IRAQ - For the seventh day on Tuesday, explosions rocked Gaza as Israeli Kurdish fighters from the Islamic Jihad movement killed 4 people and wounded 30 people.

Palestinian officials say Palestinian militants fired at least 50 Qassam rockets into Israel during September. The Israelis said that no official negotiations were underway, and the Palestinians sources described the meetings as preliminary.

MULSAN, PAKISTAN - A car bomb exploded early Thursday during a celebration of Islamic militants in the central Pakistani city of Multan, killing at least 35 people and bringing down a local police station. Police inspector general Talat Mahmood reported that it appears that the car bomb was detonated by a remote control.

The blast occurred at about 4:30 a.m. and caused a nearby school to evacuate, sending people thinking that two bombs had gone off.

TUNIS, TUNISIA - At least 28 North African migrants attempting to sail to Italy drowned when their boat sank off the coast of Tunisia and 36 other passengers were missing.

The boat had 75 illegal migrants, 70 Moroccans and 5 Tunisians, when it broke into pieces off the town of Chott, Meriem, 100 miles southeast of Tunis.

"We recovered 28 bodies so far, seven of them early on Tuesday and 21 later on Sunday and Monday. We recorded 11 people are still missing," a senior official told Reuters.

implement antennae and repeaters to guarantee cellular coverage.

According to Chapel, most landline phones will be eliminated in the residence hall rooms but for health and safety reasons a number of landline phones will be placed in strategic locations throughout campus. At this time the resident students do not have to pay for using the landline phones to call across campus. However, records show that many use their cell phones more than their landline phones.

The cell plan will inform resident and commuter students about class cancellations and other school issues. Some students had skeptical reactions to the plan and had many questions about specific issues such as if they would be reimbursed for cancelling their present cell plan contracts.

"I think the money could go towards something else," said Gwen Swanson, a resident of the Village. "There are more important issues on campus that need to be solved."

In addition to a wireless campus, IT is pushing to have proxy security cards, issued to everyone on campus. Proxy security cards are already used in a few buildings on campus to open locked doors. The first phase of the program will entail equipping approximately 180 special purpose rooms that have sensitive equipment, hazardous material, sensitive information, or expensive equipment with security card access only. The card will be able to prevent security hazards by only permitting access during specified times of the day or night.

According to Chapel, areas that require heightened security will have a two-staged entry process, where a security card must be used in addition to a key pad with a PIN number. If a card is stolen or lost the computer can easily disable access and issue a new card immediately.

"I'm all for security but I don't think having cards or a PIN code is going to matter, if someone wants to get in they will," said Amy Mastroseni, a sophomore anthropology major.

"The cards will just cause more trouble to get into the buildings," Mastroseni said. At the moment, old machinery and faulty doors have caused the cards to not work properly.

IT is in the process of developing and constructing a replacement plan to stop this security hazard.

"The hardware, software, and card technology will be of the latest variety and the actual doorways will be in working order from a construction and mechanical point of view," Chapel said.

The plan will also involve using a single system, campus-wide, instead of a multi-system used presently.

The first phase of the project will serve as a stepping-stone for a greater plan of a "campus card" system, said Chapel. The card will eventually offer many features and functions. Not only will it unlock doors but it will serve as an ID card, allow students to borrow books from the library, serve as access to computer systems, run vending machines, and replace the Red Hawk Dollars card.
is a "non-voting member of the Greek Council who is paid by MSU administration and the SGA."

In his current position, advisor to the Greek and Social Fellowships, Greene is expected to "assist Fraternity and Sororities in meeting their goals and objectives while helping them to comply with SGA and University policies," as written in his job description.

"I hate to say conspiracy, but there’s a lot more to this situation than what’s being said... at this meeting."

Ralph Andre
Member of Phi Beta Sigma

The job description also states that Greene is responsible for "serving as advisor to student organizations and Greek Council."

Some members of the Greek community were reportedly dissatisfied with the quality of Greene’s work in advising the SGA. According to Heather May, member of Greece Phi Groove, Greene had not been fulfilling his role as an advisor.

"I feel as though [Greene] does favor certain organizations over others and he should give equality to all 31 of us," May said before Greene was dismissed.

While some members said that Greene showed favoritism, others, such as Jonathan Scott, of Phi Beta Sigma, said that, "favoritism is a big misconception. [The council] should vote him out for a reason other than that."

Following the voting of the bill, Parisi opened the floor to legislators who wanted to express themselves in an open forum.

"Greek organizations] need to make sure [they] move on and put down the desire to make each other look foolish," said SGA Vice President and Theta Xi member Ron Botelho. "[SGA Council] will not be considered a viable body if we are having emergency meetings for the next eight or so weeks."

Siding with Botelho, Lorraine Nwako, member of Zeta Phi Beta, said that "[Greek organizations] are being perceived as negative and that [members] should work together to show the community that [they] are positive people."

Parisi said, "We need to look like the cool kids."

Although Greene has been removed as advisor to the Greek Council, he still holds his position of advisor to Greek and Social Fellowships, causing some to worry about possible retaliation.

According to Vice President of Greek Council and Theta Kappa Chi member, Kyle McCarty says she has "already spoken with Dean Harris and if there is any retaliation against specific organizations, it would raise a red flag as something that would need to be looked into."

"I hate to say conspiracy, but there’s a lot more to this situation than what’s being said right now at this meeting," said Ralph Andre, member of Phi Beta Sigma.

"Hayden should look into the job description and beyond, and in his role as advisor," said Andre.

According to Arian Bryan, Residence Hall Director, and Phi Beta Sigma alum, "it isn’t clear to [him] what [the organization] were dissatisfied about."

The nine organizations present at the Greek Council meeting, who voted against the bill, declined to comment.

Bryan questioned whether the other had been any conversations between the concerned organizations and Greene in order to voice their frustrations.

"This was a very important decision, and a serious matter, because it has ramifications that have removed someone from their position. I hope that the decision was grounded in facts," Bryan said.

Rock the Skirts Campaign

Student Vote Confirms, It’s All About the Minis, Baby!

I love the pleated mini skirts!” says general humanities senior Sabrely Braden. "I have one that last time I wore it, I went to Wal-Mart. Since it comes in so many different fabrics, from 100 percent cotton to denim to tweed, the skirt can take you from morning class to the hottest club at night, or even to, that’s right, Wal-Mart. Some may think the skirt is too short, especially when it is worn on the wrong person.

Senior Andrea Robinson, a biomedical major, read an article in Seventeen Magazine where a 17-year-old girl was upset because a man videotaped underneath her pleated skirt at the mall.

Of course it was the man’s crime, but some people went so far as to say that she might have brought the incident upon herself by wearing the skirt so short.

"Put some stockings on,” freshman Adasha Lockhart, a chemistry major advises. “You’ll be alright."

The pleats in the skirt allowed for more movement and, let’s face it, just look better than straight skirts between back flips, and being tossed in the air by teammates."

"Take care of your body and beware of dry, itchy legs before you put on the skirt and head out the door. Never wear tennis shoes, especially with the skirt, unless you plan on looking like a cheerleader."

If you don’t already own one of these classic skirts, it may be too late, since the summer months have come to an end and fall is on the way. The latest fashion magazines are proposing more tweed and pencil skirts for the cold weather.

Minds Collide at Spelling Challenge

The Spelling Challenge: Not Just For Nerds and Geeks Anymore!

As a college student, knowing how to spell ‘phenylclidine’ should be so easy - Shouldn’t it?

As you haven’t seen it yet, you’ve been quite sheltered. The pleated mini skirt is the hottest fashion trend that began last spring and continues to remain prominent on store shelves. American Eagle, Abercrombie & Fitch, Hot Topic, and many other stores have featured this important closet necessity, but haven’t you ever wondered how it got so popular?

The pleated skirt first came out in the 1950s. It joined the pencil skirt and the pencil skirt as the three fashion must-haves of the 1950s. It joined the poodle skirt and the pencil skirt as the three fashion must-haves during the 50s never wore pants except for the most casual of activities, so they needed a little more variation in the types of skirts they wore.

However, the pleated skirt from the 50’s was much, much longer than the variation worn today. Headlines were right at the knee, or below it.

The least modest version of the skirt brings us to the miniskirt style of the 1960s. Surprisingly, the miniskirt was not widely known until the very late 60’s, and yet it is one of the most well-known fashion icons of the decade. The pleated miniskirt is a 20th century phenomenon that spin on the best styles of those two decades, and one that is befuddling men everywhere.

Is It Him, or Isn’t It?
Couples’ Rough Times Strain Relationships

Dear G.M.,
I’ve been going through some really hard times lately. I’ve been dealing with some serious health issues and family problems, and my boyfriend hasn’t been all that supportive. Every time I try talking to him about what’s going on in my life, he kind of blows it off and tries to talk about other stuff. It really hurts me. What can I do about this?
—LL—

Life is full of unexpected obstacles, and in the span of one’s lifetime, many difficult things will come up that will test our strength and the way we cope with what’s going on around us.

It’s certainly not an easy time for you right now, and you definitely need all the support you can get. Everyone has a different kind of support system. Some of us turn to family or friends; others really depend on their significant other.

Your situation is difficult because you probably don’t want to rely on your family if you’re having problems with them, and your boyfriend certainly doesn’t seem like the guy to turn to in this situation.

There are multiple reasons for involving yourself in a relationship with someone, but probably one of the most important components in any relationship is the security of knowing that if something terrible comes up, that person will always be there for you.

Frankly, it seems that your boyfriend wants nothing to do with fulfilling that role. I understand that we don’t always have the answers, and that it may be really uncomfortable to talk about things that we are not knowledgeable or experienced in, but one can always listen. For your boyfriend to blow off your needs just because he doesn’t know how to deal with them is disrespectful and selfish. He may not be able to solve your problems, but he certainly can hold you and be there for you, if just to listen. Behavior like that is irreparable, and truly, you don’t deserve it.

You can try talking to him about how his reactions make you feel. Tell him how much you need him and how bad he hurts you when he is so inconsiderate about the way you feel.

If he responds to that and really tries to be there for you, then just give him time to develop as a supportive boyfriend, but if he continues to conduct his selfish behavior, then you can’t stay with someone who’s only a fair-weather boyfriend. It’s important that when bad times present themselves, you can count on having someone in your corner.

Dear G.M.,
I seem to have a recurring problem. Every time I have intercourse with my boyfriend, I can’t seem to reach orgasm. When we do other stuff, I am completely satisfied, but the act of sex is just not fulfilling. What can I do to change this?
—E.D.—

You certainly are not alone. In fact, most women can’t achieve orgasm with just the act of penetration during intercourse. Roughly 70 percent of women need some kind of clitoral stimulation during the act of intercourse to reach orgasm.

The reason for this is that only about 1/3 of the vaginal canal has nerve endings that cause sexual stimulation, which doesn’t prove to be enough for most women. In contrast, the clitoris is a mass of nerve endings; it is extremely sensitive, and when stimulated, can produce much more powerful orgasms and ones that are easier to reach for a woman than just mere penetration.

Have you ever heard about alleged “simple ways to enhance your health?” on the news or in tabloid magazines? If you have, then you will be shocked to know that there are simple ways to improve your general well-being without taking a large chunk out of your wallet.

Music Beats The Blues

Depressed or upset after a bad grade or a poor performance on the athletic field? Get out your discman or Ipod, pronto! According to the Nov 25, 2003 issue of Health And Fitness News Service, researchers at Pennsylvania State University report that all kinds of music – whether it’s jazz, rock, country, blues, rap, classical or heavy metal – may improve moods.

Nearly 50 students (mostly music majors) were asked how they felt before and after listening to music every day during a two-week period. The researchers found that if the students were already in a positive mood, the music increased those emotions. If the students were depressed or upset, the music increased their positive feelings.

Preventing Chapped Lips

You’re a at Montclair State University football game on a cold, windy day, or you’re out jogging and the next day your lips are dry and cracking. Generally a source of seasonal discomfort, occurring during dry, hot or cold windy conditions, chapped lips can be prevented by following these guidelines, according to KRT Health News Service:

- Apply lip balm before you go to bed to maintain moisture on the lips that becomes depleted overnight. If you sleep in a heated room during winter months, you might want to purchase a humidifier.
- Caffeine May Minimize Skin Cancer Risk

The Associated Press reported that Rutgers University researchers found a connection between caffeine, the chemical stimulant in tea and coffee, and a decrease in skin cancer in studies with laboratory mice.

Dr. Allan Conney, a Rutgers professor of cancer and leukemia research, mentioned that between 50 percent and 70 percent of tumor formation was inhibited in the mice, which were treated with caffeine or a chemical compound found in green tea. The caffeine and EGCG-treated mice also had fewer non-malignant, sunlight-related tumors, according to Conney.

Although the study was done with only mice, Dr. Darreb Rigel, a New York University professor of dermatology and a leading spokesperson for the American Academy of Dermatology, lauded Conney’s research because skin cancer is a major problem.

Natural Pain Blockers

While up late cramming for an exam, you develop a headache and go to the medicine cabinet. And how about your aching back a few weeks ago after improperly lifting weights in the gym? You reached back for another handy pain-busting capsule. Instead of relying on pills, which usually provide short-term relief with possible side effects, try these safer natural pain killers, which appeared in the Jan-Feb. 2003 issue of Natural Health magazine:

- Headaches: Using the thumb and forefinger of your right hand, pinch the muscle mass between your left thumb and forefinger, near the bottom knuckle of your left forefinger. Pinch hard, applying deep pressure for 15-30 seconds. Slowly release and repeat on right hand.
- Back Pain: Lie on your back on a comfortable surface (rug or mat) with knees bent, feet flat on the floor. Make two fists and place them, knuckles up, beneath your back just above the waistline and about an inch from each side of your spine. Breathing deeply, let your knuckles apply gentle, sustained pressure for five seconds as you inhale and for five seconds while exhaling. Continue for three minutes.

As a college student, there are limits to the amount of money that you spend. These easy-to-use, cost free tips can help you take care of the most important aspects of your life.
Self Defense Workshop Trains MSU Students

For right, Michael Hornbostel demonstrates effective kicking techniques to ward off an attacker. This was a self-defense class that took place last Tuesday, October 5 in Webster Hall. The event was sponsored by the Women’s Center and Residence Life. The University Police Department volunteered to teach students how to defend themselves against attackers that could take them by surprise, especially during a late night walk to the parking lot or anywhere else on or off campus. Students arrived at the workshop with a sense of uncertainty in their ability to protect themselves. After a few hours of training, however, they left with the notion that they could defend themselves in the face of danger.

was, and then had to spell it if they were correct.

For the ninth word, team #21 chose the category Crayola again, getting ‘burnt sienna’ as the final word of the first round. They did not earn the points for the third word in the Medicine category, which was ‘gynecomastia’, an abnormal enlargement of the breast in a male, by only one letter.

The final word of the first round was ‘rhombencephalon’, referring to the hindbrain. Schlomann and Mannine came very close, but had somewhat difficulty hearing exactly how the word was pronounced, so they spelled it ‘r-h-a-b-e-n-c-e-p-h-a-l-o’.

The second round began at 9:30 p.m. Macon said, “This one’s going to be our round.” He picked the second word of the round, under the category drugs. This earned him the word ‘benzodiazepine’, a drug used in veterinary pharmacological effects, used as antianxiety agents, muscle relaxants, sedatives, hypnotics, and sometimes as anticonvulsants.

He easily missed it by one letter. By the final word, Mason and Scarcella stopped really trying. From the category pot luck, the last word was ‘quixotic’, which they spelled ‘q-u-i-c-k-s-a-b-a-t-h’.

The fourth word of the round was ‘phencyclidine’, a drug used in veterinary medicine as an anaesthetic, and illegally as a hallucinogen: PCP. Out of some stroke of genius, Burke and Jessica spelled it correctly, earning 500 points for this word in the second round.

Unfortunately, they missed the eighth word ‘thescapul’, by changing the “s” to a “d” at the last second. Nevertheless, Burke was still excited by winning a basket of Ghiradelli chocolate in a toss-up round by correctly spelling ‘unctuous’.

For the eleventh word of the second round, Schlomann selected Pot Luck. The word was ‘exaspeditian’, meaning a long word. Expecting a trick, her team decided to place a “d” before the “p,” and got the word incorrect. After the first two rounds were over, the top ten teams moved on to the first round.

However, she sat back enjoying her chocolate as the final round was played.

For the final round, each team wagered some of their 2000 points and then attempted to spell the word. None of the three teams spelled ‘vociferous’ correctly, but the winning team wagered no points in comparison to 500 for the other teams.

Haydn Greene, Proctoring, Sorority, and Social Fellowship Advisor, and his partner, Aasha Vasegar, won the top prize of two $50 gift certificates to the Willowbrook Mall. “I feel pretty good. This was a good way to end the day,” Greene said.

Guggenheim Exhibit Paints Picture of Vasily Kandinsky’s Artistic Evolution

Lacey Smith - Chief Copy Editor

The Montclarion • October 7, 2004

In a place like New York, and a time like now, with the heated election buzz and an ongoing war, we seek out those rare moments of tranquility, where we are separated from humanity and yet connected to it in a greater sense. It is these moments when we transistor the physical into the metaphysical, only then when we are released from the material world are we able to experience something higher. And it is this instant from the material world are we able to experience something higher. And it is this instant when we are released from the material world are we able to experience something higher.

Vasily Kandinsky, born in Tsarist Russia in 1866 and survivor of both world wars, was one such artist. With a love for music and spirituality as a direction to lose, his works grab the viewer in a way that is nearly inexpressible.

Many of his pieces held the expression of a great piece of music, the release of meditation, and the visual pleasure of art. A special exhibition at the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum honoring Kandinsky that opened late September will remain open for two years.

The exhibition traces Kandinsky’s development through his life - from his early works in Moscow and Munich, to his years teaching at the Bauhaus and his development when exile to Paris. Kandinsky is often, in addition to being one of the most influential artists of the 20th century, given the place of founder of pure abstract expressionism, an art style which claims to be non-figurative and has in fact been the dominant school of art since WWII.

Hand developed slowly over his career, beginning with still life and growing less and less depictional of the subject at hand, till it was barely evident, “till it was not at all.

In 1896 he moved from his birthplace of Moscow to Munich to study at the Academy of Fine Arts and stayed there for four years. His pieces during and after this are similar to other artists in their beginning years: they are full of talent but lack the absolute confidence and flavor that only comes with experience.

In 1909 he visited Paris and was deeply impressed by the height colors of the Fauvist movement and afterwards his works begin to lose the structured and more intensely colored. "Blue Mountains," of that year, as an example, begins to reveal his true personality. It is in line with other Expressionists, a German art movement, and holds an important element: the horse and rider, which are for Kandinsky, a symbol of Apocolypse (of the two schools of Expressionism, he would be part of the Der Blaue Reiter, "the blue rider").

Kandinsky theorized about art, in addition to creating and publishing several important documents, the first in 1912, "Concerning the Spiritual in Art." He showed his distances for the values of the time and hoped for a better future through the influence of art. This important piece if literature introduced his theories on abstraction and made him well known throughout Europe.

He also painted "Improvisation 28" in this year. The canvas is one of his better known, and with good reason. It is a near abstraction with elements of the concrete, portraying Apocolypse. "A n i d i s a k y described cataclysmic events on one side of the canvas and the paradise of spiritual salvation on the other. For instance, images of a boat and waves in a great flood, a serpent, and perhaps, canons emerge on the left, while an embracing couple, shining sun, and celebratory candles appear on the right. The images are strong and captivating, the longer one stands before it, the more one sees and understands his message.

The titles of his canvases are often "Composition" or "Improvisation," each relaying to the musical influence on his work. His pieces are a painted musical composition.

He was fascinated by the emotional power that music holds on a person; it allowed freedom of imagination, interpretation and emotional response that often painting could not because it held a responsibility to the visual world. It was this that led Kandinsky to be completely abstract, the most effective way to do for an artist to express and a viewer to perceive subjective realities and freedom to access the metaphysical.

From 1922 to 1933, Kandinsky taught at the Bauhaus, a famous art school in Germany, later to be declared a producer of "degenerate art" by Hitler and shut down. Of Kandinsky’s own works were confiscated by the Nazis in a national purge of artwork, claimed by Nazis, to be the product of the mentally insane.

However contrary to the belief s of the regime, his years before and after the Bauhaus developed his style into what is most recognizable as "Kandinsky" and what makes him so globally admired.

He leaves his more fluid style and adopts a more sharp angles and clear geometric shapes, now completely abstract. Some of his best-known works are from this period. Composition III - probably the single most recognizable work - dynamically interrelates colors, lines, and shapes into what he believed could be a universal language promoting a better future.

"The circle," claimed Kandinsky, "is the synthesis of the greatest oppositions. It contains the concentric and the eccentric in a single form and in equilibrium. Of the three primary forms, it points most clearly to the fourth dimension."

Kweli Tries New Musical Style

Jennifer Laster - Staff Writer

Tahb Kwefc, one of Brooklyn’s headlining "concoction" emcees, has returned on his fifth in-studio album, The Beautiful Struggle. Before the buyer has a chance to unravel the CD, the cover boasts production from power producers Kanye West, Just Blaze and The Neptunes, which made me question what type of listener he’s gearing this project to. Has Kweli abandoned underground hip-hop loyalists for a more mainstream fan base? It’s hard not to question his intent, but knowing his work, he always aims to please.

The public was first introduced to this prolific rapper on his debut album with Rawkus Records, the first in 1998, "Struggle," which featured a host of others. After his appearance on the Beat. These two 80’s anthems should

So how does The Beautiful Struggle measure up to his previous work? Well, Kweli remains focused by articulating well thought lyrics and never falls short in delivering punch lines that will make you rewind your CD to catch the meaning, that’s the beautiful side. The struggle comes with tracks that are poorly produced. A leading example is "We Got the Beat" featuring R&B artist Lea. This song is a fusion of Afrika Bambaata’s "Planet Rock" and the Go-Go’s original title "We Got the Beat."

These two 80’s anthems should never come together on one record; surely, there were good intentions to revive the classics, but something went terribly wrong. Unfortunately, another weak link prevents itself with “Around My Way.” The song is a little too slow, almost boring, though its narrative is insanely thought provoking.

But, never fail. The track “We’re Out” redeems Kweli from his musical sins. Hit_Tek, one-time member of Reflection Eternal, puts together a pulsing beat as Kweli instructs his audience. He says that instead of taking a violent route to solve conflict, they should, as the title suggests, work it out. He states, “men who so insecure they think they women cheating on them and women who think the proof that they love them is they being on them keep sleeping on them so they partner sleeping on them committing crimes of passion they in battle mother weeping on them.” These lyrics are staggering proof that he has not lost the message embedded in his music.

The song “ Broken Glass” is about a young woman seduced by the lures of city life who ends up a drug user in an attempt to follow a fast-paced lifestyle. With the help of rapper Jean Grae, the two come together to explain the trials of black women in America and abroad on “Black Girl Pain,” one of the most important songs on this album. The hook says, “My name and life would be this hard Growing up days as a black girl scathed in every way though you’ve come so far but they just know the name they don’t know the game the pain so please hold your head up high don’t be ashamed of yourself know it will carry you forth till the day I die just know the name they don’t know the pain Black girl.”

“I Try” the album’s lead single featuring Mary J. Blige, flows powerfully over piano cords and heavy drum kicks. Kweli again recognizes the injustices in America faced by blacks, but also acknowledges that one can change the circumstances they’ve been dealt to make a difference. The album’s title track “Beautiful Struggle,” is an empowering inspiration to daily life which states “you looking for the remedy but you can’t see that’s hurting you the revolution is here, the revolution is personal.” The Beautiful Struggle does not only critique society and personal change, Kweli won’t let listeners forget why he’s rapping in the first place: “Yo I speak in schools to making a positive change; and combining the arts (as the title suggests, work it out. He states, “men who so insecure they think they women cheating on them and women who think the proof that they love them is they being on them keep sleeping on them so they partner sleeping on them committing crimes of passion they in battle mother weeping on them.” These lyrics are staggering proof that he has not lost the message embedded in his music.

At the Very Least We, As Americans and Soldiers, Deserve the Truth

The immediate effect was success, and this is not the "shock and awe" campaign was as successful as they would have us think. The rest of Iraq suffers from daily attacks and kidnappings.

...this is an extremely ambitious [idea] that may be difficult to execute...

...as a result of the President's policies, Americans are more in danger now than ever before.

The Iraqis too, deserve more. Their lives under Saddam were harsh - as a result of his policies they suffered harsh economic sanctions. Saddam tortured those that dared to challenge his government's authority, very brutally and with no remorse. Then America comes to save the day.

Today I want to talk about the current President of the United States of America. Yes, I'm afraid that the frequency of poor decisions made by our leader has reached its limit. Elections are coming up and Oct. 4 was the last day to register; I hope all of you reading this are ready to vote this unqualified person out of office before he has even supposed to get in the first place.

Let's talk about the President's most recent attempt to install democracy in a foreign land: The country of Iraq is situated south of Turkey between Iraq and Iran to the east, Syria to the west and of course our little brother Israel to the southwest. Iraq was once ruled by Saddam Hussein and was in charge of everything in the country. Saddam made a big mistake of invading a smaller, weaker country - (does that sound familiar?) - Kuwait, a mistake that hammers him to this day. Anyway, the international community comes to Kuwait's aid and Iraq is set straight for now. Certain ties and privileges that Iraq had in the fields of trade, commerce and foreign relations have been severed and severed. However, the country continued to survive.

An important point to realise is that there is no proof that Saddam was a threat to the United States - I mean none whatsoever, natch! In any case, Iraq is invaded and Saddam is caught in a hole... literally. The country however is still in chaos turmoil. Insurgents (as the media calls them) everywhere and democracy can't be installed easily. It will take a few years for now to fade when Iraq will be stable again; thanks to this invasion another country has been destabilised.

Now wouldn't it have been better to leave Iraq alone? Well I can't see a meaningful reason of sending American soldiers, whose primary task is to defend America, to a country which we don't even have foreign relations. If Iraq had attacked the US (it must be completely imprudent to do that) and waged a full out offensive, then all of this would've been utterly justified.

Then there is Iran. The Iranians have relentlessly defended our order to build their nuclear weapons and aren't shying about that; they stood up and said, "No, we are going to continue with upgrading our defenses and that's the end of that." Iran, by the way, has a милл of 20 million strong and spends $43 billion on the military per year.

Why would you tell another country to stop building technologies to defend itself? This is one thing I don't get about American politics: we are vying for new defense technologies, but we don't want others doing the same so we bully them into stopping their attempts. We order them, we threaten them, and finally, we bomb them.

I was recently watching the movie 23 Days, about the Cuban missile crisis during the Cold War and during John F. Kennedy's administration. The Russians were secretly deploying nuclear missiles in Cuba and were continuously denying it. An immediate bombing strike was dismissed early on, as was a potentially time-consuming appeal to the United Nations. The choice was reduced to either a nuclear blockade and an ultimatum, or full-scale invasion. A blockade was finally chosen, although there were a number of senior military personnel kept at bay by the prospect of tougher action. An emergency meeting of the UN Security Council was held on Sep 26 and the case was conclusively proven, during which US ambassador Adlai Stevenson showed photographs of Russian Thea missiles in Cuba, just after Soviet ambassador V. A. Zorin denied their existence. After Security Council's meeting, the Soviets removed their missiles from Cuba as part of a deal with the US. If this same incident would have happened today, then we would definitely be in nuclear armageddon.

Bombing pharmaceutical factories and people's homes in a sovereign, independent nation, knowing that they are helpless and defenceless... that's a choice against you if your completely absurb. The US spends $870 billion annually on the military, and has bailed out the banks, and it's completely absurd. The US should not even attempt to protect itself, not to mention all the latest high-end and totally unimaginable military technology. No country can compete with that, at least not in our lifetime.

WENDY DE STEFANO COLUMNIST

Politics of Students Misunderstanding: Influence of Conservatives Like Bill O'Reilly Existent On Campus

Did you know that Montclair State University helped Bill O'Reilly establish his present popularity among young people? The O'Reilly Factor For Kids: A Survivor's Guide is a guide young people could use to constructively deal with problems at school and home. O'Reilly said that he wrote the book for his two nieces because parents and teachers were demanding a children's book from him.

"What Say You" is a daily with country music singer Travis Tritt and the legendary John Mellencamp. The song's writers Frank J. Myers and Michael Bradford said that they based the song on Bill O'Reilly's political tendencies on O'Reilly's catchphrases "What say you?" The song is currently a climbing Top 40 hit on both the country music singles charts for Billboard and Radio Records.

The song should find success among the young, optimistic, traditionalist, and patriotic country music audience. The young audience includes MSU college students.

My research about Bill O'Reilly's popularity among college students indicated the following:

Even though college students were watching The O'Reilly Factor (also called The O'Reilly Report from 1996-1998), O'Reilly's popularity among college students didn't blossom until 1998.

In 1988/1999, O'Reilly's popularity among college students developed in some western, southern, and Midwestern states. But the most development took place in colleges and universities spanning from Connecticut to Virginia - including MSU. MSU has been contributing to the continuing explosions in the number of university student newspaper articles containing references to O'Reilly and university libraries acquiring his books since he beat Larry King in the monthly ratings of Oct. 2000.

Simultaneously, other colleges and universities have been making significant contributions to O'Reilly's popularity among college students - including the University of Connecticut and Lynn University.

In a 2003 special election, the then 21-year-old University of Connecticut Republican student Sean Williams became the youngest person ever elected into the Connecticut State Assembly.

Before he was elected, Williams wrote columns for his university's student newspaper, praising his idol Bill O'Reilly, The Daily Campus. The staff nicknamed him "The younger O'Reilly." Williams cred­ its O'Reilly for his election victory since he claims he learned his tough debating tactics from O'Reilly.

But if O'Reilly's popularity among college students is not obvious to the majority of the university community, then why is a univer­ sity conducting a survey about his show?

The majority of college students don't recognize O'Reilly's popularity among college students due to the media's lack of accurate recording interests among college students. A.C. Nielsen hasn't been measuring TV ratings in college campuses or breaking down its 18-34 and 18-49 demographics into "college students" and "non-college students." Only the stations installed People Meters on college campuses, according to Television Week.

Research has found that current college bookstores and college and university libraries in its book sale figures. Bestseller lists of brick-and-mortar and online college bookstores only measure the sales among college students at their institutions.

Bestseller lists also underreport sales depending on the methods used to construct the lists. For example, in the fall 2003, The Chronicles of Higher Education compiled a monthly bestseller list of "college students." Their list was called "Looking Out For You" with data from selected stores in the Follet College Bookstore chain.

The list said that O'Reilly's book Whatcha Looking Out For Yinz? didn't make the list. Yet, according to the bestseller list with all of the Follet College Bookstores' data, O'Reilly's book was number nine. Because of customer shield laws and the anonymity of the buying books, book retailers can't tabulate the exact number of college students buying O'Reilly's books.

Like the A.C. Nielsen and Arbitron rat­ ings, the situation forces book retailers to lump O'Reilly's college audience in "the gen­ eral public audience."

As a result, the media has been creating a false perception about our generation since we were adolescents. For example, I and some of our peers have been watching The O'Reilly Factor/The O'Reilly Report since our adolescent and high-school years.

Because the news industry doesn't con­ sider the 11 to 17-year-old demographic as important to its advertisers, the media hasn't been counting our generation as O'Reilly's audience.

Our generation's O'Reilly fans have been attending colleges and universities. Still, "The younger O'Reilly." Williams cred­ its O'Reilly for his election victory since he claims he learned his tough debating tactics from O'Reilly.

Our generation's O'Reilly fans have been attending colleges and universities. Still, the majority of young O'Reilly's audiences are students.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20)
Sign up to help a worthy cause. Ask your friends to come along. You have a big heart and helping people comes natural to you. For your good deeds you will receive an unexpected but most appreciated reward.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20)
Get together and plan a road trip with your friends. Go somewhere unexpected and party hard! It's always fun to explore new places and it'll make for good stories to tell to everyone else who missed out.

CANCER (June 21 - July 20)
Plan a romantic getaway for you and your flame. Be creative and make this event memorable. It'll take some time, but it'll be worth it. Shower them with gifts and compliments, and don't forget the kisses.

LEO (July 21 - August 20)
Your workload is becoming quite the burden. Cut back on work and go out with some friends. Dancing, movies, and playing sports are all activities that you should look into.

VIRGO (August 21 - September 20)
Get out and exercise those dancing feet. You never know just who you'll meet out there on the dance floor - perhaps an old flame, a new love interest, or maybe both. Either way, you'll have a great time.

LIBRA (September 22 - October 20)
Many good changes will fall before you. New adventures and new friendships await your arrival. This journey will bring about new goals and aspirations; rejoice in your newfound position, it will open many doors.

SCORPIO (October 21 - November 20)
Many good changes will fall before you. New adventures and new friendships await your arrival. This journey will bring about new goals and aspirations; rejoice in your newfound position, it will open many doors.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 - December 20)
You're lazy! It's early in the semester and already your workload is piling up. You're only making things harder for yourself in the long run - so stop holding off on completing your assignments. Get to work.

CAPRICORN (December 21 - January 19)
Get your resume ready. New job opportunities will be available very soon. Be first in line to hand it in. Become familiar with your new surroundings. Try befriending the workers; they may give some helpful tips.

AQUARIUS (January 20 - February 18)
Time to hit the gym. Your recent weight gain will be a problem if you don't control it. Make this a fun activity by asking a friend to join along with you. Try a little of everything and see what suits you best.

PISCES (February 19 - March 20)
Invest more time into your hobbies. It helps to alleviate stress and keep your mind at ease. Who knows? In the future your hobby may turn into a money maker if you play your cards right.

ARIES (March 20 - April 19)
You spend too much time sitting in front of the television when you should be picking up a book and reading instead. Check out your local bookstore or ask a friend to recommend something worth reading.

The Sports Guy

Controversy is His Middle Name

Who is the best men's soccer team in all the New Jersey Athletic Conference? The Sports Guy will give you a hint. They sit in our classrooms; their colors are displayed up and down hallways across campus, and oh yeah - they've got nine wins and just one loss.

You guessed it sportlings! Coming off of a heartbreaking loss to Kean, MSU moved Ramapo into Springfield Field last Saturday night. The Road Runners hadn't allowed a goal, or a loss all season long, but as Coach Bruce Sentoski put so eloquently to The Sports Guy himself, "They're good, but we're better."

Ramapo left Springfield Field with their first loss, and their first two goals allowed this season. The Red Hawks left as probably the best team in the conference. They've allowed just six goals all year, and have scored 29, good enough for second best in the conference.

The men's soccer team is 9 - 1 - 1; they are currently third in the conference, and play four of their last six games against a conference opponent. It will be a telling few weeks before the first round of the NJAC tournament. The Sports Guy says that they will easily get in, and in his eyes, should be considered a team to be reckoned with.

The Red Hawk football team hit a bit of a speed bump, and The Sports Guy says that maybe they caught looking on the Red Dragons last Saturday. They gave up 51 unanswered points in the second half, blowing a 12-point lead.

The Sports Guy says that it's still a bit too early to jump to conclusions however. They are 2 - 1 overall, and the conference loss has dropped them very low in the standings, all of their remaining games come against NJAC teams. They still have one of the conference's best scoring offenses and defenses, and their turnover margin of 2.33 against NJAC teams. They still have one of the conference's best scoring offenses and defenses, and their turnover margin of 2.33 against NJAC teams.

It doesn't take a volley ball expert to know that a 1 - 3 conference record with just three more NJAC games to play, isn't what the team was hoping for when the season began.

The Sports Guy sees a pattern. You say The Sports Guy says negative things, and he says he provides humorous commentary. You cry out bad journalism, and he calls it the truth, and we all know it hurts.

If he were The Nice Guy, and not The Sports Guy, he would never even speak the Red Hawk name, as he is aware of the whole controversy. The Sports Guy up and it starts with winning.

But Tiffany Aciz and the rest of the volleyball team have a comment for The Sports Guy: the next time you decide to gang up and try to bully The Sports Guy, or what ever biting his tongue. He'd rather be cize The Sports Guy, or what ever biting his tongue. He'd rather be just another part of the United States. We have brains; we have eyes; we have mouths, and we have opinions.

His Middle Name

The Sports Guy is intended to be humorous and not offensive. Just ask the women's soccer team. Just weeks ago the team was way out of their league and The Sports Guy off it. But not these girls, they came out fired up.

The Red Hawk volleyball team played on Tuesday, and for the 17th time this season, they lost. As for the game itself, The Sports Guy has nothing bad to say about the way the Red Hawks played. They came into the match with a 6 - 16 record and The Sports Guy would have expected any team with a record like that to just wilt and play dead. But not these girls, they came out fired up and played as if it were a championship game. William Paterson was 11 - 6 coming in, and MSU took William Paterson to five games. With a few things gone the other way, The Sports Guy knows that the Red Hawks could have won the game.

But Tiffany Aciz and the rest of the volleyball team have a problem with The Sports Guy, and caved to let him hear it after the game.

"Do you know how many times I've wanted to punch you in the face in the past four years?" Aciz asked.

First of all, The Sports Guy has only been terrorizing Red Hawks for a little over one year, so The Sports Guy doesn't know where all of this extra anger is coming from.

Even further, in the past four seasons, Aciz and the volleyball team have a combined record of 22 - 75, a .221 winning percentage, and not one season above 500. The previous four seasons before Aciz's freshman year, the combined record of the volleyball team was 75 - 42, with one conference championship to boot. The Sports Guy can understand the anger and frustration of Aciz, but he thinks she may be directing it at the wrong people.

"What credentials do you have that you think you know more about volleyball than The Sports Guy?" Aciz further questioned.

Well, The Sports Guy guesses that it's the same thing that makes her think she can criticize The Sports Guy, or what makes us all think we can criticize Bush when most of us haven't been president of anything, never mind the United States. We have brains; we have eyes; we have mouths, and we have opinions.

The men's soccer team is 9 - 1 - 1; they are currently third in the conference, and sitting one spot above MSU in the NJAC. The Lady Red Hawks began the game with a 6 - 16 record, and although they left with yet another loss, they lost. As for the game itself, The Sports Guy has nothing bad to say about the way The Red Hawk played. MSU's effort could be seen throughout the game. William Paterson was 11-6 coming into this game, but killed MSU's momentum when trying to make runs.

William Paterson came into the game with an 11 - 6 record, and sitting one spot above MSU in the NJAC. The Lady Red Hawks began the game with a 6 - 16 record, and although they left with yet another loss, they didn't play like a team facing its second losing season. The Red Hawks did not play like a 6 - 16 team. MSU was fired up and excited for all five matches, and stood equal to a team with five more wins and 10 fewer losses. They played like it was a conference championship, not a meaningless match that wouldn't have done much to help their standing.

The game was decided by the defensive play of the Lady Pioneers. The team combined for 126 defensive sets which was 46 more than the Red Hawks. MSU was also out blocked. For the second straight season the Red Hawks took William Paterson to five games and lost the last game. The loss drops MSU down to sixth place in the NJAC. Their next home game is this Tuesday against Rowan.
What's Wrong With Sports?

Jose Ortiz

For as many things that are right about the games that we love to watch and pass time with, there are a few little things that if changed would benefit the sport.

These are things that we all have a way of forgetting about until the one day the rule costs your favorite team a victory. Here is a small list of things that are wrong in sports:

HOCKEY

The biggest problem with the NHL is a lack of scoring. Most games are 2 – 1, or 3 – 2. It's hard to get excited about a game when you have to wait an hour for a point. There aren't too many simple solutions to the scoring drought. Maybe without the two-line pass rule there would be more play on either side of the blue lines, rather than in between them.

The other big problem is that there is way too much fighting - not that I don't enjoy a bit of roughing attacks against the other team, backs of their fellow players. Players are pre-meditating attacks against the other team, and fights break out all the time.

As it stands now, unless someone gets injured, fighting is just a five-minute penalty. And that's the problem; must we wait until someone has to be carried out on a stretcher before the NHL decides to start instituting heavy penalties? As much as every fan loves the hits, I don't think that instituting heavy penalties? As much as every fan loves the hits, I don't think that inventing heavy penalties would benefit the sport.

The other problem in baseball is that there are athletes taking cheap shots in the back of their fellow players. Players are pre-meditating attacks against the other team, and fights break out all the time.

FOOTBALL

If I were the head honcho in the NFL and I could change anything, I would start with overtime rules. How many times can we see the same thing? Team wins the tie; they drive down 30, maybe 40 yards to get into field goal range. Then, probably without even trying for the touchdown, they kick a 45-yarder and the game is over.

If it were my way, I would do one of two things first, a college format where the overtime wasn't sudden death, and both teams would get one drive. The other solution would be to keep sudden death rules and outline field goals during OT. It wouldn't be such a bad idea to have the field goals outlined between two minutes of the second and fourth quarters. If it were a perfect world the only way you could score points in football would be by touchdown only.

BASKETBALL

The other problem in basketball is that there are too many simple solutions to the scoring drought. Maybe without the two-line pass rule there would be more play on either side of the blue lines, rather than in between them.

Regular Season Ends

Staff Writer

Intramural Badminton is closing in on the final games before playoffs. Men's singles leader, Pat, is dominating the league with 12 wins. The Youngster is up to six with little games left to catch up. Women's singles are mirroring the men's with Star doubling the second-seeded women's singles participant Tiff. With such a large amount of talent, the women's and men's singles may turn out to be a sweep for the playoffs. Doubles team Teve and T-cup have eight wins towering over their division. Playoffs for badminton will begin Wednesday night at 9 p.m. directly after the intramural entry meeting for volleyball, ultimate frisbee and team bowling.

Flag Football Update

Debbie Jones
Staff Writer

Inclement weather was a huge let down last week, cancelling out three nights of flag football. Many of the teams' games were rescheduled for later dates. Fortunately, teams began playing Sunday Oct. 3 with one week till the playoffs. Franchise and GWC swept the night with an exciting game. Both teams fully qualified for a top ranking; they left it all on the field that night.

Despite the shockingly cold weather, they drove each other to a tough match up. Frank Rinaldi (GWC) took two touchdowns in the first half scoring the point after touchdown as well. Joe Dolce (Franchise) gave his team the lead in the second half with again two touchdowns and the point after touchdown. The end score was (14 - 13) with Franchise teammate Ricky Nwosu adding that one extra point.

The playoffs will be held at Panzer Gym. To catch some of the playoff action, the games will be held in Panzer Gym at 6 p.m.

Co-ed playoffs will be short and sweet with only three teams entering into the playoffs.
