The Editorial Board of the Summit Fourth Graders this week sent a sample of poetry to the students of Montclair State College. They were interested in the full issue of Montclair’s Quarterly. We thought you would be interested in reading one of our poems.

Doris Cochran wrote “Trees” and Louis Szabo illustrated it.

More than fifty Montclair State College Students will be barred from spring registration unless they straighten out their affairs with the Personnel Office. This announcement came as a consequence of numerous parking infractions which have been committed by students since November 1, but which were never paid for or contested by the students.

Beginning on Wednesday, January 25, through registration, the names of the violators will be forwarded to the Personnel Office for the benefit of those who may have not only received the violation notice, Student-dentilists are also asked to check this list and settle any outstanding violations before registration day and avoid later inconvenience.

A Milestone . . . and a Challenge

Today our Senior Class reaches a milestone in its training for the teaching profession.

For three and a half years we have studied for that time when we would take the place of the teachers in the classroom situation. We have built up a background in the liberal arts, have delved extensively into our major fields, have gone somewhat less into our minor areas, and have studied the child and the methods by which we may best teach this child.

In addition, we have engaged in extra-curricular activities within the school and the community, have met many people, have had unforgettable experiences, and have, for the most part, loved our lives as students.

Now everything is about to change. On February 1 we will be practice teachers. Our extensive scholastic background should make us not only culturally educated persons and "experts," as the word is used today, in our particular fields, but effective teachers as well. And our participation in extra-curricular activities will have broadened our background. Therefore, we are entering the profession as well-rounded, educated individuals prepared to teach.

The challenge of the teaching profession is now before us. It is our obligation not only to meet this challenge, but to meet it successfully. And it is our further obligation to be teachers Montclair State can be proud of, and ones we ourselves can respect.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

This letter was sent to the Ed. Euston Street by Bob Blumenstein, a former student at M.S.C.

Dear Dr. Shem: It is in the mood to put one of M.S.C.'s future teachers on the book—and believe me, I truly deserve it. His name is Ron Kalki, and the reason he deserves a put-on the book is because of the way he represented M.S.C. while at the National AAU Track Meet in Boulder, Colorado.

From the first day he arrived out here till the day he left he was a gentleman from soul to crown.

He trained, kept good hours, and put in a fine showing for the competition against which he was matched.

He was photographed and there were pictures of him in action on KLT, one of the major TV stations in Colorado. It was a unique thrill to be at the meet, and he definitely cheated omissions from M.S.C.

Ron truly put in a fine effort. I have had my doubts, and I had not for the rainy weather and strike high altitude (that he'd quite hit to get used to), he might have done even better; come spring he should be ready for the real winter.

I am enclosing a picture of Ron just before we left on the track for the meet—I hope at least

Ron Kalki will get him some recognition in the Montclarion or La Campus for all to see and all to be proud of.

Oh well, I feel better now. This has been on my mind since Ron left for home nearly six months ago.

Sincerely, Bob

Bond Issue Biggest Story In Education

The college bond issue was the biggest "education news story" in New Jersey in 1959, according to Lawrence M. Johnson, editor of the New Jersey Education Association.

"College problems got the lion's share of press attention during the year," Mr. Johnson said in a year-end review of education developments in the state.

Other college problems got their share of the headlines too. A shocking accident made headlines not of only the NJEA Review but newspapers across the nation as well. Eleven students and Professor Ernest F. Sixta of Trenton State College were killed in a bus accident while returning from a New York theater party.

A less fortunate college headline was the withdrawal of one of a college scholarship program which provided $100 a year for one-half of high school graduates. This program was enacted only after lengthy controversy about control and its scope. Already, however, a Scholarship Commission has been established, a director appointed and the first scholarship awards are expected in February.

Dr. Mason W. Gross made headlines when he was selected president of Rutgers University. According to Mr. Johnson, this "naut means the emergence of a leader of development of the State University."

News was made last September when more than 1,200,000 pupils enrolled for the first time in elementary and high schools. It was the first time enrollments have passed the million mark. For 1960, predictions are being made for more than 1,250,000 pupils.

The college bond issue was also headlines when it was signed in December by Governor Meyner. This was the first book in State help for public libraries.

A residency rule also made headlines as many associations, among them the Newark Teachers Association, New Jersey Education Association and the National Education Association, are contesting the rule. The new ruling is a new rule that requires members of the administrative staff to live in the city.

Coincidently, Bucky Mizerek's gym choral group was preparing for one of the newer highlights of MJC, the annual Princeton University contest. Bucky and several other members of his choral group were selected to participate in this event, which is held every spring.

On January 8, 1960, Mr. Gene Garza's men's and women's novice and junior gymnastics team traveled to Scranton, Pennsylvania, to compete in the annual Princeton University contest. The men's team was composed of five members, while the women's team consisted of four members.

The boys' team was led by Bucky Mizerek, who had just recently recovered from an injury that had kept him out of the meet. He was very pleased with the performance of Bob Mizerek and Charlie Welsh, who had not wrestled in high school for some time. The girls' team was led by Terry Thompson, who was very active in sports and had recently returned from a trip to Europe.

In contrast to the academic aspect of the contest, which was taken very seriously, the boys' team was more interested in the social aspect of the event, which included parties and other social gatherings. The girls' team was more focused on the gymnastics competition, which was the main event of the evening.

During the competition, the boys' team performed a routine in the balance beam and uneven bars, while the girls' team performed a routine in the vault and floor exercise. Both teams were very competitive and put in their best efforts, resulting in a very exciting and memorable night for all involved.

The Princeton University contest is an annual tradition that brings together some of the best gymnasts from schools across the country. The boys' and girls' teams from MJC were able to showcase their talents and skills, while also enjoying the social aspects of the event. Overall, it was a very successful and enjoyable experience for everyone involved.
