Willings Wrote of Travel In Afghanistan, Ceylon

The following letter was sent by Dr. Richard Willings, assistant director of students and track and field coach at Montclair State College, who is currently on leave of absence serving as a State Department representative for the promotion of track and field. The letter was sent to Mr. Morton McGeary, director of Public Relations at Montclair State College.

I was very pleased to hear from you, Moe, and I shall be happy to relate a few of our experiences in case, as you suggest, you might wish to include some of them in the Alumni News and Montclarion.

The weather in Afghanistan is very suitable to clear the snow covered peaks of the Hindu Kush. I soon discovered, though, that even the once-a-week DC-3 plane was an insignificant step in a land of camels, donkeys and horses. A few World War I trains, for instance, had covered peaks of the Hindu Kush.

A Milestone...and a Challenge

Today our Senior Class reaches a milestone in its training for the teaching profession.

For three and a half years we have studied for that time when we would take the place of the teachers in the classroom situation. We have built up a background in the liberal arts, have delved extensively into our major fields, have gone somewhat less into our minor areas, and have studied the child and the methods by which we may best teach this child.

In addition, we have engaged in extra-curricular activities within the school and the community, have met many people, have extended ourselves into our minor areas, and have studied the child and the methods by which we may best teach this child.

Now everything is about to change. On February 1 we will be practice teachers. Our extensive scholastic background should make us not only cultured, educated persons and "experts," as the word is used today, in our particular fields, but effective teachers as well. And our participation in extra-curricular activities will have broadened our background. Therefore, we are entering the profession as well-rounded, educated individuals prepared to teach.

The challenge of the teaching profession is now before us. It is our obligation not only to meet this challenge, but to meet it successfully. And it is our further obligation to be teachers Montclair State can be proud of, and ones we ourselves can respect.

We are happy to see that Standard Oil Company will sponsor WNTA-TV's series "Play of the Week."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

(Letters were sent to Dr. Edward Shore by Bob Blumenheim, a former student at MSC.)

Dear Dr. Shore:

I am in the mood to put one of MSC's future teachers on the back—and believe me, I truly deserve it!!!

His name is Ron Kulik, and the reason he deserves a pat on the back is because of the way he represented MSC while at the National AAI Truck Meet in Boulder, Colorado, have, no doubt, had some unforgettable experiences, and have, for the most part, loved our lives as students.

Bond Issue Biggest Story In Education

The college bond issue was the biggest "education news story" in New Jersey in 1959, according to the New Jersey Education Association.

"College problems got the lion's share of press attention during the year," Mr. M. R. D. Smith said in a year-end review of education developments in the state.

Other college problems got their share of the headlines too. A shocking accident made headlines not of the New Jersey Review but newspapers across the nation as well. Eleven students and Professor Ernest F. Sixta of Trenton State College were killed in a bus accident while returning from a New York theater party.

A less unfavorable college headline was the selection of a new president of a college scholarship program which provides $400 a year for one-fifth of the children of members of the administrative staff to live in the city. When he was selected president of Rutgers University. Angry Young Men at MSC by Bob Freda

The most popular and universally applicable division to be practiced by college students or generally acute persons should be, if we see, purposeful, enjoyable contemplation, and more important, the partaking of frequent discussion with friends whenever possible. Just what should one contemplate and discuss with one's friends? There is the probabilities of many number of meaningful social and subjective experiences, and events of all sorts which transpire during one's life from which one can choose. If this diversification is not practiced extensively by said persons assumed consideration, it is possible. Perhaps, in the running which makes us share not seeing the value in being over-sensitive or serious about life because it all ends too soon, there is the complex way with society apt and when one is potentially able to be serious-minded and disturb the scenes of expressing ourselves qualitatively.

I am said to say that I have not noticed a society at large (relative to my socio-economic environment), that young college students are prone to the purposeful, enjoyable contemplation and discussion of the world at large, aside from doing it perfunctorily for a grade. Unqualified, this last statement might seem too great to be, for undoubtedly there must be a number of people who are seeking the truth and power of the society. Thus, merely experiencing the sensations and the world at large reveals to us that there is the potential for intellectual and emotional development of the world. I am the type of person who is skeptical about the use of one's own words without expressing ourselves qualitatively. Therefore, I am prepared to say that I have not noticed a society at large (relative to my socio-economic environment), that young college students are prone to the purposeful, enjoyable contemplation and discussion of the world at large, aside from doing it perfunctorily for a grade.

Some college problems were solved by the use of a bicycle, walking, or jogging, but even these were not fun. The most common problem was the lack of public transportation. Several students started carpooling to campus, but they found it difficult to schedule. Few students had cars or could afford the gas. On the other hand, the cost of public transportation was a constant problem. Many students found that the bus or train systems were not reliable, and they often had to wait for hours to get to campus.

The most pressing problem, however, was the lack of affordable housing. Many students, especially those from out of state, found it difficult to find a place to live. The cost of rent was often out of reach, and many students were forced to live in crowded dormitories or share an apartment with multiple roommates. This situation often led to conflicts and reduced the quality of life for many students.

The University administration was aware of the housing problem and had plans to build more dormitories and student housing. However, it was a slow process, and many students continued to struggle with finding affordable and safe housing.

Overall, the year was characterized by a variety of problems, but the students remained resilient and continued to push for improvements in their community and their education.
Coaches Thomas Bilee was not about to let his hard-earned team be set back and quickly instructed his players to recover from an early season–long injury to Maria Lisch, who hurt her back in an auto accident, and to Hector, who is still recovering from a shoulder injury. Mr. Rillo was kept from participating in the season’s Elite. Mr. Rillo was very unhappy about this decision, but he accepted it and decided to do his best to recover from his injury.

Mike Moran, a junior at the Montclair High School, is a defensive end where he was playing for the football team. Mike entered MSC in September 1957 and became an important player for the team, helping them to win numerous games.

Mike has not lost sight of his education at the university. After all, these sports achievements only reflect the way he spends his time, and his academic achievements are not too much to give in return.

The McGinnis gymnasium is one of the best places to train and get ready for the important match that Mike will play in February. Mike has already shown his dedication to the team by attending practices and games every day, and he is sure to perform well in the upcoming match against the rival school.

Gymnastics Men, Women Excell

On January 8, 1980, Mr. Gene Ganz's men and women's novice and junior gymnastics teams traveled to the Panzer School of Physical Education. In this third meet, the teams faced some of the most difficult opponents they have ever encountered.

The women's junior team performed well, and they dominated the meet, sweeping every event except one. Maria's Hensko garnered first place in the balance beam, uneven parallel bars, and the vaulting competition. The rhythmic calisthenics routine was won by Linda Scon, and Helen Kornboe won third place in the routine, balance beam, and uneven parallel bars.

Helen also placed second in the vaulting competition. Navin Krieger placed second in the balance beam and third in the vaulting event. Pat Krieger also placed second in the rhythmic calisthenics routine.

Helen, who collected a total of five medals and received a total of 285 points for her efforts, was chosen as the outstanding gymnast.

Mike Moran, a senior at Montclair High School, was named as the outstanding gymnast of the week.
