Black Friday!

Today is Friday the 13th—but it seems to be a good luck day for some people. At least that's what some MSC students say. A poll of local hospitals and insurance companies revealed no significant increase in personal accidents on the 13th, also known as Black Friday.

A person need not be superstitious to be "intellectually curious" about some of the customs that have cloaked this day in mystery for ages.

One popular taboo concerns the color black on the 13th, which is thought to invite bad luck, broken bones, or even death.

Black cats, walking under ladders, or whistling in a cemetery at night. It seems that occult folklore is still alive.

NEW DEMANDS

AT TRENTON

TRENTON — The resignations of President James Heaster and the entire Board of Trustees are among demands of striking faculty and students at Trenton State College.

Other demands include action on 25 demands submitted Dec. 18 and the postponement of a tuition hike.

Today's action follows yesterday's demonstration and leafleting at Green Hall, the main campus building, and an all-nite sit-in at Cromwell dormitory Wednesday.

PROFS MARCH

AFTER REJECTION

TRENTON — A meeting in Trenton of 750 representatives from New Jersey's six state colleges resulted in a mass march after the rejection of the State Board of Higher Education's latest salary offer yesterday.

Declared an "irresponsible proposal" by Don Duclos, negotiations chairman for the Association of New Jersey State College Faculty, the offer would provide for a 2% increase plus regular increments.

In addition to a meeting to be held Mon., Feb. 16 with the Board of Higher Education at 11 a.m., the negotiations team will meet with the state representatives Fri., Feb. 20. It has been indicated that the teachers' representatives will have the power to call a strike of all six colleges if the state's offer proves unacceptable.

APPOINT EXEC

AT ESSEX COLLEGE

NEWARK — Mr. J. Harry Smith has been appointed chief executive officer of Essex County College by the Board of Trustees. This comes in the wake of the acceptance of the resignation of Dr. Ellis F. White, college president, Monday.

White, second president to resign at the college, told the board in his letter of resignation that he was resigning "in an effort to restore harmony and order as quickly as possible, and in the best interest of the students and all other interested parties of the Essex County College." Smith will retain his position until a committee chooses a new president.

The ouster of White and Smith had been the object of a 10-day student strike at ECC which ended last Wednesday.

Compulsory faculty evaluations by students have been "tabled" for the current semester.

Many faculty, according to Mrs. Mary Bredemeier, assistant professor of education, feel that compulsory evaluations would infringe upon academic freedom, and thus, postponed a decision and the proposal. Other faculty gave a lack of time for discussion and publication of the evaluations as reasons for tabling. Still other faculty were against student evaluation of faculty altogether.

Edwin Mills, assistant professor of education and former chairman of the faculty evaluation committee, stated that some of the faculty might be afraid of being "ramrodded or pushed," if students had an opportunity to obtain a published evaluation of their professors before signing up for a course.

Now that the proposal has been tabled, said Mrs. Bredemeier, attempts will be made to discover the proportion of faculty members who approve of the idea of evaluation.

Mills stated that the primary goal of evaluation is "increased evaluation," and he believes that students are concerned with learning, and can express a "perception of faculty members. Evaluations can be educative for the faculty and meaningful to the students."

Mrs. Bredemeier said that she had received many letters supporting evaluations, and said evaluation was "a very alive issue here," and was optimistic that some form of proposal would be developed this year.

The MONTCLAIR.

Lillian Calca: "Having a Good Time"

BY ROBERTA KUEHL

What is Lillian Calca, former chairman of the fine arts department, doing now?

"Having a real good time!" she cheerfully reported in a recent interview, "straightening my art and book collections; gathering material for a book I've been working on for the past five or six years on resources read in art education; raising my hothouse plants, which include amaryllis and azalea."

A 1925 graduate of Montclair State when it was still a normal school, Mrs. Calca viewed MSC's growth and expansion as "just fine, I'm very proud to be an alumnus. We have some progressive-minded teachers following the Dewey system at the normal school," she recalled with approval.

Following her graduation from MSC, Mrs. Calca received her BA and MA at Columbia University and her EdD at New York University. A teacher in Passaic and Paterson for 10 years, a member of New Jersey State's faculty for 20 years and chairman of his fine arts department, in 1955 Mrs. Calca returned to MSC. Her major contribution to the school was the visual arts center. "I may be called back," was all she would reveal on that topic.

Art and education still occupy Mrs. Calca's time, as they have done for most of her life. Recently she spoke to Hawthorne teachers on art in the elementary grades, showing slides of the evolution of children's drawings with their development of space understanding. Mrs. Calca is a life member of National Education Association, founder and past president of N.J. Art Education Association, member of the Association for Supervision and Salary considerations, calling for a $2000 raise retroactive to Sept. 1, 1969, and a $10,000 minimum salary for teachers with a bachelor's degree, as well as reduced class sizes and supplementary programs making schools more effective and beneficial to the student are but a small part of the demands in a package of some 500 items.

With school elections due this week to decide on board members and budgets, factfinding continues in Bergen County districts in an attempt to settle wage disputes of the 1970-71 contract, with teachers working, record high salaries for those holding college degrees. Agreements on money have been reached in 15 of the 22 districts, while others still negotiate salary demands for the coming school year, and all districts continue bargaining on the fringe benefit portion of the contract.

On the college level, students have joined in faculty protest and all but closed down several state schools. Recently, the directors of five of the six divisions of the Essex County College signed a statement requesting the resignation of college president, Dr. Ellis White. This demand, as well as the coalition in support of the Newark teacher strike, saw classes deserted last week, then the college was officially open (See later story on page one.)

Carried on by a loose coalition of students and faculty group bridging the gap to the militants, support continued for the admission of underprivileged men and women, and while decisions were made to grant amnesty for students and other protesting students and other protesting students and others participating in the legal boycott. While a third met this weekend was the settlement of the strike to the satisfaction of the students. Classes resumed and returns were made to the Teaneck campus Monday.

Meanwhile, a strike has been declared by students and faculty in closing that town's schools, after negotiations broke off late last week.

Reportage: Another Side to 'Sade' in Philly

Editor’s Note: There was another side to the Philadelphia story. It was one filled with devotion to an artistic endeavor. Gigi Doucette, who played Coulminer in "Maxim/Sade," tells the story.

Of the 7000 miles, or so, that I’ve spent traveling on SGA business, the trip that excited me the most was a recent three-day junket to Philadelphia. On Jan. 16, 17 and 18, Players, one of the many activities funded by SGA, took its production of "Maxim/Sade" to Temple University to participate in the regional final of the American College Theater Festival. On the surface, taking a play to a city a few hundred miles away sounds easy — even fun. I wish I knew.

When I was informed by Mr. Scott MacConnell, one of Players’ advisers, that I was to organize to leave "bright and early” Friday morning, I responded with a happy "Right, Boss, I’ll be here by 11.” Quoth MacConnell, "You’re leaving at six." The look in his eyes made me realize that the floor was not open for discussion. You can’t begin to imagine the hate I felt for Herb Oscar Anderson when he had the nerve to scream his calls at me at 5 a.m. At that hour of the morning, I’m barely capable of finding the "off" switch on my clock-radio much less the city of Philadelphia, however, I was assigned to ride "shot-gun" on one of the trucks and translate the funny lines on my map into some sort of logical sense. Surprisingly enough, we managed to find Philadelphia in only three hours.

PASSING A TROLLEY

Once inside the city limits, we had the misfortune to be stuck behind a slow-moving trolley car. The first thing it stopped, we did the obvious thing, we passed it. Unfortunately, Philadelphia doesn’t take kindly to people who pass their trolley cars. A cop pulled us over and asked for the driver’s license and the truck’s registration number.

After a little searching, we found the license, and a very official-looking paper in the glove compartment. We gave him both. He asked if we knew it was illegal to pass a stopped trolley car. We tried to explain that Philadelphia was new to us, but he wasn’t interested. He tried desperately to give us a ticket but found it impossible. It seems that the official document organization behind the trolley car compartment wasn’t the registration, it was a nice little performance piece that paid all the necessary road taxes for the State of Missouri. Our cop was truly glad to hear that, but didn’t quite know what to do with the little ticket that represented the "registration number.” "It’s a rented truck," we assured him. He was still annoyed. I guess it got to be time for his coffee break because he finally let us go without even hollering at us, much.

BREAKFAST AT WHITE TOWER

About 12:30 that night, rather than the following morning, we finished our work and went to a nearby White Tower for breakfast at one o’clock in the morning. But, somehow, we managed and then retired to the palatial Central Philadelphia YMCA. After what seemed to be a few moments of sleep, we returned to the theater and put finishing touches on the set.

Then it was a music rehearsal in an adjoining room, a technical rehearsal on stage, and another drive across the street called "Country Inn," a short run in a basement lounge of the theater, makeup, costumes, a performance piece that paid the Royal Shakespearean Company proud, a repulsion with the audience, the dissimulating of the set, loading it in the trucks and another breakfast at White Tower. By 4 a.m. we were in the bed of the "Y" seemed comfortable.

When a group of people devote that much blood, sweat and tears to an endeavor, especially an artistic endeavor, it becomes an extension of themselves. Thus, although we worked almost to the point of collapse, we were happy. The show had gone very well and we all were happy that morning, that was the same thing as loving us. It made the whole experience of the exhausting tour worth it.

We know that educators across the United States continue to visit the American College Theater Festival closely and we felt they were right to do so. We went to Philadelphia with the intention of making the entire nation crazy, the artistic endeavors of the students of MSC. We returned home with the feeling that we had accomplished our goal.

Misunderstood Philosophy

This is the first of a series of articles which will appear in this column. The articles will deal with a little known, little understood, philosophical—political that of conservatism in America today. The importance of modern American conservatism is found in the fact that it is adhered to by a large number of political leaders as well as a multitude of American citizens.

There are three problems with modern American conservatism. First, Modern American conservatism is not a reactionary conspiracy on the part of the radical right to "take over" this country or to deprive any segment of the population of their Constitutional rights, freedoms or liberties. Nor do conservatives vow blind allegiance to the status quo. And reality is something that conservatives look nostalgically to the past, they do not seek to halt progress, or return this nation to some bygone age. Before a conservative approach, the famous Barry Goldwater, "is to apply the wisdom and experience of the past to the problems of today." And this approach does not imply a return to some bygone "old ways" but should be done away with solely because they are "old."

Program should take place, but not in an untried, reckless and destructive manner. It would be impossible, in this column, to present an objective study of modern American conservatism, so no attempt will be made to make it objective. Nor will it be possible to present this philosophy in one article, or even two. The only way to understand modern American conservatism is to examine the eyes and minds of those who adhere to it, who believe it, who are working for the day when it becomes the dominant political philosophy in the United States.

There are many approaches, many bygone "old ways" should be understood in order to have a thorough understanding of conservatism. The conservative attitudes towards man, the state, politics, the role of the United States, the role of the United States as a world power and these are essential elements of this philosophy.

War Tax Resistance and the Law

Fischer

"If a thousand men were not to pay their tax bills this year, that would be a violent and bloody measure as it would be to pay them and enable the State to commit violence and shed innocent blood," Henry David Thoreau. In April it will be four years since the government has added 10% to our telephone bill each month to finance the war in Vietnam. There are some 6000 people today who are refusing to pay this tax. Joan Baiz Harris refused to pay this tax and, long before that, portion of her income tax that is destined for the Defense Department.

For those involved in war tax resistance, the least of their resistance is not to pay voluntarily $5 or more of federal tax. The government actively attempts to recoup even the smallest amount. When dealing with the telephone tax, Bell telephone usually sends notice and on occasion has called the resistor to notify him they will be forced to cut off service. This time around, the Revenue Service. Eventually, IRS will send a representative to find your place of work.

WHAT THE LAW SAYS

The law says a revenue agent may request an assessment, seize either your clothes, furniture, guns or unemployment check. However, he may seize your car, real estate or Social Security check. When the assessment is small he will attempt to seize your checking or savings accounts. However, if you have insufficient funds, even if you have in your account recently, the revenue agent must attempt to find your place of work. If, in the case of some persons, wages are paid in cash and the employer is willing to assist, no tax will be collected. What all this amounts to is in most cases, it has cost the government money, in the person of a highly-paid revenue agent, than it has gained in collecting the tax. Those participating feel that even in this small way they are doing something. This group is presently concerned with spreading the movement for war tax resistance. They feel the movement grows, the more it costs the government, and, they feel, the quicker the war will end.
Thumbs Down on Inflation --and Education, Too

Last week President Richard M. Nixon appeared before a nationwide radio and television audience to veto a health-education-welfare bill that was termed "inflationary."

This was indeed a crucial bill for Nixon and academic communities around the country. Money that might have been earmarked as aid to disadvantaged urban schools and remedial college programs has been slashed as a result of this veto. Consequently, financial channels are drying up despite greater pressure upon educational institutions to aid deprived students in obtaining college training.

A Veto from the President

The choice was undoubtedly hard for Nixon and was obviously not a political move to wow the votes of educators. Governmental analysts are predicting that prices will rise 5% this year and inflation could get out of control without governmental curbs. By keeping a tight lid on federal spending, Nixon is hoping to counter analysts are predicting that prices will rise 5% this year and inflation 'could get out of control without governmental curbs. Aid to education could come from other unforeseen sources. Experts say that by 1975, an estimated $50 billion surplus will be in the U.S. budget as a result of America's phase out of Vietnamese commitments. At least part of the sum should be applied to educational projects at the college level. By keeping a tight lid on federal spending, Nixon is hoping to counter

OK the Extra Fee

The State Board of Higher Education has recently approved an increase in MSC's student union fee. The fee will be raised from $20 to $45 per year at the time of the building's opening. The increase has been approved by the administration and the SGA.

We feel that the increase is just. The burden of the extra $45 should not prove too great for the MSC student. The $4.5 million union building, now scheduled for completion in September 1972, is well worth the newly-established price.

$45 Is Cheap

Many state colleges and universities have union fees higher than those of N.J. -- even some of our sister state colleges have fees as high as $80.

$45 Is Enough

The current union building, Life Hall, was financed by fees paid by previous students of this college who also "did not get to use the building." We feel we have the same responsibility.
College Will Sit Out Effects of Nixon's Ax

By Cheryl B. Brocking

The effect of President Nixon's veto of the controversial health, education and welfare bill on the New Jersey schools, especially Montclair State, "is hard to determine," according to Vincent B. Calabrese, vice-president of business and financial services.

Calabrese stated that, at the present time, it is very difficult to project how the President's veto will affect MSC and it is necessary to wait until the companion bill, designed to replace the rejected bill, is completely written and made public.

"We have no way of knowing, at this time, what appropriations will be cut and which ones will remain," stated Calabrese. Nixon aides say that educational spending must definitely be restricted, in the interest of curbing inflation, for at least the next few years.

While making cuts in educational programs, the administration also plans to simultaneously change emphases in existing programs, in the hope of eliminating overspending in some areas.

Toward this end, Nixon plans on setting up a National Institute of Learning which will closely follow the course of federal educational spending over the course of the next few years, in order to discover which programs would be eliminated and which programs are, in effect, a waste of money. At the end of this observation period, educational programs will be reorganized and those which have been proven ineffective will be eliminated with new programs, indicated by research results, replacing them.

The new institute will operate under the auspices of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare and its entire function will be research, operating along similar lines to the National Institute of Health.

Certain phases of the research will be conducted by researchers within the Institute, whereas others will be passed on to universities and other national institutions.

WASHINGTON (CPS) — The President of the United States continues to demonstrate his fetish for football. The latest developments include:

— Indiana University football coach Ara Parseghian was offered and has turned down the directorship of the Selective Service System. The offer was made to John Pont by presidential aide Peter Flanigan.

— Look magazine reports that Nixon may take a part-time position as a sports broadcaster after his days in the White House are up.

— On Super-Bowl day, the President called Kansas City Chiefs Quarterback Len Dawson, whose name has been mentioned a few days before in connection with a gambling ring, to tell Dawson he had faith in him.

— CBS news reported that a Nixon adviser says the President thru the international and national news sections of the daily paper to get to the sports section where he "feeds.

DURING THE FALL, Scripps-Howard newspapers reported that Nixon wanted Ohio State football coach Woody Hayes to head the Selective Service and former 49ers sports commentator Bud Wilkinson has been appointed one of Nixon's closest advisers.

Nixon, in recent months, has given controversial football awards, has been a guest speaker at a football banquet and, of course, has watched football throughout the nation's largest war protest Nov. 15.

Perhaps the President is coming to the same conclusion as August Wolf who said, in declining the Selective Service Post, "I decided I wanted to coach football, it's still my first love."
Winter Weekend came to its peak with the Saturday evening concert. Ing, an acid rock group with an album out this month called "Never Be The Same," started things off. WASHINGTON — The predominant theme of campus conferences is shifting from the "campus unrest" to the "environmental crisis."

The shift does not indicate the same sort of problems that still put students at odds with administrators as much as it indicates a discovery that no students or administrators will remain to tangle if America denatures itself out of existence.

The largest nationwide effort planned so far is the "Environmental Teach-In" originated by Sen. Gaylord Nelson (D-Wis.) for April 22. The plan is for students on their own campuses to develop their own programs for studying, exchanging ideas and initiating action on environmental problems, particularly those facing their own community. Like the Vietnam moratorium the teach-in is a national idea developed on a local level.

Other conferences on the environment will precede the April teach-in. The U.S. Student Press Association annual college editors' conference will consider action in the light of "What's the Difference if We Don't Wake Up?" as it offers editors and other interested students a "death trip" in Washington, Feb. 27 thru March 2. Mixed media presentations will be used to demonstrate the country's ecological plight. Students of the Northeast will meet in the second seminar of the Student Council on Pollution and the Environment at Columbia University on Feb. 21. Politicians are also becoming involved with ecology, demonstrated at its peak by the State of the Union message by President Nixon in which he called it the most important issue of the decade. Democratic congressmen seemed to agree in their own edition of the State of the Union last Sunday over nationwide TV.

One of the first moves to come from this Congress should come this winter as Rep. John Brademas (D-Ind.) opens hearings aimed at helping elementary and secondary schools teach about conservation, pollution control and other environmental problems.

The measure would provide federal grants for developing teaching materials and teachers in environmental studies. The bill would also authorize ecological study courses for community and industrial leaders.

Water — A Dirty Problem

For Jersey's Legislators

Montclarion Special Report

With the threat of environmental annihilation literally hanging over the cities, New Jersey cannot plead innocent. Two out of the ten dirtiest rivers of America, listed in Newsweek last month, are the Passaic and the Arthur Kill, both waterways of this state. Recent developments as a result of the tugboat strike are further adding to pollutants to the water boundaries of New Jersey.

Gov. William T. Cahill expressed the fear that a long strike will render the holiday beaches of Ocean and Atlantic counties useless, since they will be covered with garbage.

Furthermore, the 16-mile stretch of the Delaware River, from Trenton to Wilmington, Del., was the receptacle for one million pounds of wastes last year, daily deposited by 100 industries and municipalities. The Delaware River Basin Commission, alarmed at this statistic, has devised a plan to reclaim the river for recreational purposes. The plan, which will not take effect until 1973 or 1974, will limit the daily discharge to 330,000 pounds. This requires new sewage treatment plants to eliminate the present amounts of detergents, pesticides, radiation and thermal poisoning. And sewage plants require more money. The U.S. spent $5.4 billion over the past 12 years and this amount has proved to be minimal.

Part of the interest in stemming pollution has been initiated by students. These at Upsala College organized Students for an Ecologically Aware Society to inform the public about our overpopulated and polluted environment. Gordon Paulby of Verona and Frank Panek of Clifton, cofounders of the group, stated their aim is to identify local polluters, produce photographic evidence and demonstrate the laxity of present laws and penalties. They have future plans to address local schools in Essex County and broadcast weekly over the campus radio station WFMU.

Newark State College has indicated their interest in the announcement of acting president Nathan Weiss, who declared April 22 as "Earth day" and pledged the college's resources in the fight against pollution.

Rutgers University has formed the Environmental Crisis Coalition, which Montclair State will be a part of, in order to coordinate statewide activities for the teach-in in Washington on April 22, under the direction of Sen. Gaylord Nelson.

The Northeast contingent of the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration will study the situation at Columbia University, New York City, at McMillan Hall, on Sat. Feb. 21, at which time elections will be held to choose regional representatives in the national fight against pollution.

NEW LIGHTS BRING BRIGHTER CAMPUS

Students at MSC can look forward to a brighter campus in the near future. McGinty, chief of building and maintenance, announced that old lights and installation of new lights will be completed in the near future. "These new lights will make the campus safer for students to walk around after dark," said McGinty.

McGinty added that the old green incandescent lamps are being replaced by mercury-vapor lamps. The latter are bigger and more powerful and hold a vast advantage in the amount and range of light they produce. The replacement process has been a gradual one. According to MSC adviser, the new lamps cost $1500 apiece.

The only area of campus which remains to be "brightened" is the lower area of the freshman parking lot, says McGinty. He pointed out that this area had not been properly lit. Within the next few months, predicts McGinty, the night visibility will be improved 100%.

The topic discussed by King was the "Corsetia Approach to S lonving Pb Problems for Minority/Poor Students." Other members of the panel included Mr. Foster F. B. SCUBA DIVING COURSE WILL BE OFFERED AGAIN

Basic skin and scuba-diving will be offered again this semester. According to Henry Schmidt of Montclair State's physical education department, the large student response caused a repeat of the course, previously offered last semester.

All of the theoretical and practical skills, both skin and scuba diving will be covered along with lectures on local and tropical marine environment. Students who complete the pool training will be required to make one ocean dive. Those who fulfill the training requirements will be issued a nationally recognized certification by the National Association of Underwater Instructors (NAUI), minus the course, starting Feb. 10, will be given on Monday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m., and continue for eight consecutive weeks.

The courses will be taught by professionally-certified NAUI instructors. The fee for the eight-week course is $500 and all equipment rental will be supplied by the college. All interested students can inquire at the athletic office at MSC or register at the first session on Feb. 10.

EVALUATION SLATED FOR JERSEY EDUCATION TREN TON

A major evaluation of the state's educational needs has been authorized by the N.J. State Board of Education last week.

Dr. Bernard Kaplan, director of the office of planning for the State Department of Education, will act as project director. He stated that the project will provide the first in a continuing series of examinations of the state's educational systems.

The project will be carried out by the Department of Education with special assistance from an advisory council designed to develop a set of objectives for New Jersey education.

During March, a preliminary meeting will be held to discuss tentative goals for the committee. Approximately 50 representatives from business, labor, education, and civic organizations will be invited to attend.

State Education Commissioner Carl L. Marburger told the Board of Education that as of now, there are no clearly defined goals for New Jersey education but that federal education programs often require goals and objectives before financial aid will be given.

NIGERIAN AID APPEAL

NEW YORK—The U.S. Committee for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (UNICEF) has issued a nationwide appeal for public contributions to help support a massive rehabilitation program in the Biafran area of postwar Nigeria. Noting that the Nigerian government has expressed its appreciation of UNICEF's "good and altruistic humanitarian work," over the past two years of the tragic civil war, Mrs. Gladys Tapalonge, director of the U.S. UNICEF Committee, said, "We are concerned by the continuing expressed concern by the American people over the plight of Nigerian mothers and children who have survived a period of great suffering and hardship. Now we must do our part in helping to raise the millions of dollars needed to maintain and expand UNICEF programs in western Nigeria during the critical months ahead."

Contributions may be sent to UNICEF, Nigerian Relief, P.O. Box 1618, Church Street Station, New York, N.Y. 10007.

FDU Council OKs Demands: Up to Trustees for Finale

By Carol Sokwitz Staff Reporter

TEANECK — The student boycott at Fairleigh Dickinson University has ended here.

The decision to end the boycott followed an emergency meeting of the FDU maintenance council, held Feb. 7, in which all of the students' demands were passed and referred to the Board of Trustees for final approval. The board met yesterday to give its decision.

The boycott was the result of a sit-in, hanging a "Mommy red tape." According to SGA President Hal Lichtenstein, "we tried to go through the proper channels."

Two weeks ago, the decision was made to strike. Originally, there were twenty-five demands drawn up by the students and given to the administration on Feb. 2.

Among these demands were:

- One student trustee from each campus; one student trustee meetings with a voice but no vote; Mealticket administration at students' option; Financial and administrative autonomy of the Teaneck campus; and line by line explanation of the university budget.

FDU's Student Government Association, also in sympathy with the strikers, did not sanction the boycott until three demands were added; a resolution of current labor dispute, total amnesty for all those participating in the strike, and that a position of ombudsman be created.

A heated meeting was held on Feb. 4, in which 12 of the 28 demands were agreed to. The remaining demands were sent to university council.

The following day, a faculty meeting was called and the teachers gave the students 100% backing. The school was officially closed Feb 5 and 6.

The student boycott resulted from students striking in sympathy with the current labor dispute. According to Lichtenstein, "the unionization spirited the strike."

Maintenance men at FDU (Teaneck) have joined Local 29 of RWDSU AFL-CIO and have demanded recognition of the union as their sole bargaining agent.

Due to a conflict between the union and the university as to an arbitration board, the union has filed a court action and further action will be delayed until the resolution of that case.

The university council is comprised of faculty members from the three campuses who have achieved tenure.

Blacks to Board of Ed: Here's 9 Demands

By Michael Taub

The immediate resignation of Paul Shelly, Montclair superintendent of schools, and Charles Edgerton, Montclair High School principal, has been one of nine demands made by the black community of Montclair. The nine demands have been issued to the Montclair Board of Education.

These demands, printed on handbills and distributed last Thursday by black residents, call for the establishment of a committee of black parents and citizens to meet periodically with school administrators on questions and problems brought up by students.

Also called for is the end to suspensions and expulsions of all pupils, regardless of suspending students; and an explanation of police abuses of the black community interested in educational welfare.

Further action demands that a plan be made to "insure positive action against the use and sale of drugs in the school system; a written report of all policies governing students and administrators; the establishment of a uniform grading system; elimination of the tracking system; and an end to the encouragement being given to white parents "to press charges against black students accused of assault and other minor offenses."

The resignation of Shelley and Edgerton was called for as a result of the "gross inefficiencies" mentioned in the other eight demands.

List Demands by Blacks

Black students, the Croy Club of Montclair and black citizens of Montclair met Sunday night at the Montclair High School auditorium to hear and evaluate demands of the school's Black Student Union.

The meeting was held because of the recent demonstrations by blacks at MHS and was primarily attended by blacks.

Sterling Satterwhite, president of the BSU, read and explained the 11 demands stating that the first and most important of these demands is the first one concerning the "suspension system."

There was a question and answer session directed to Satterwhite after the demands were read. Satterwhite stated that most of the schools 800 blacks were in support of the BSU. The audience was asked to stand if they supported the BSU's demands.

The response was overwhelming. The 11 demands listed were:

1. Strict enforcement of the new cutting system and all students suspended on previous system should be reinstated in school.
2. All students should be allowed to make up work upon readmission to school.
3. A reviewing board composed of students, teachers and administrators to review all cuts, upon request by students.
4. Acceptable rooms for the Black Student Union tutoring program.
5. Acceptable room for a Black Resource Center.
6. Reassignment of black students on the senior level to the guidance counselors for college.
7. A percentage of black teachers on the faculty proportionate to the percentage of black students in the school.
8. A course in black culture taught by a black teacher.
10. End to all tracking and grouping.
11. Acceptability for all students who participated in the...

Simone and Garfunkel began to experiment with their musical style on side one of Bookends. The extended composition has carried over their latest album, Bridge Over Troubled Water. The album as a whole is refreshing. The majority of the songs contain a good deal of orchestration and are of various moods and melodies. They range from "Oceello" with its Jamaican beat to the blaring horns of "The Customer Satisfied" to the soft strains of "So Long, Frank Lloyd Wright" to the "Eye Conponsor Paua," an arrangement of an 18th-century Ponapian folk tune, English lyrics by Paul Simon.

GARFUNKEL FEATURED
The title number, originally performed on their television special awhile back, features Art Garfunkel. The result is the most beautiful song that Simon and Garfunkel have recorded since "For Emily on Paradise, Sage..." Many of Simon and Garfunkel's songs are New York City oriented. They either are about New York or remind one of it. The album contains what is undoubtedly their most New York found New York City, "The Boxer." ("I came looking for a job, but I got no work, so I went home...come on from the whoros on Seventh Avenue.")

Anyone who has ever been at a Simon and Garfunkel concert knows that they invariably get around to doing "Bye Bye Love." The version on the album has been taped from a live performance and is complete with handclapping to back them up. The final song on the album is short (1:39) but very beautiful and it worth repeating in its entirety.

Heikoop as the mother missed on everything. If I hadn't read the credits I couldn't have known that she had ever been inside a theater.

A GOOD NOTE
On a good note, Kathryn McAsfer and Jason Price as the "Girl" and "Little Boy" respectively, fought thru almost insurmountable odds to give very good performances.

The Studio Players of Alvin have a long way to go. I hope they make it.

"Summertime: slowly shows soldier's death"

"Summertime," an antigay play by Ron Cowen, encompasses the life and death of a young man sent off to fight a war he doesn't want--but he eventually deserts the soldier.

Psychiatrist comes apart in cinema

"Coming Apart," the first film that psychiatrist Rip Torn's many sexual exploits--a psychiatrist filming his own impending mental collapse--but fails both in development and fulfillment of its initial promise.

BÖREDOM
The exposure of the character is handled thru a series of sexual encounters. At first these are genuinely funny, if a bit perverted, and satirical of the current plethora of pornography. This aspect rapidly loses its momentum as the film descends into bordon, ignoring the few opportunities it has to recover.

Throughout the film we observe from behind the doctor's camera, facing a large mirror. This mirror, in which we see most of the film's events reflected, is somehow representative of the main character. This technique is effective, though the parts of people blackouts and white-outs, adjustment of sound and focusing of the picture done by the doctor to his camera are annoying and gimmicky.

FRAGMENTATION
The overall effect is that of fragmentation. Rip Torn, Sally Kirkland and Viveca Lindfors in the principal roles are limited in their portrayals by the editing which cut characterizations in midstream.

Ginsberg's premise that any sexual treatment of a psychological problem is automatically interesting is misconception. The film is a disappointment in its superficiality in dealing with its subject, and in its failure to pursue its crucial points.

Salute to Sienkiewicz
Set Feb. 24

Plans to honor captain Bob Sienkiewicz at "senior night" on Tues. Feb. 24 at the Montclair State College Bloomfield College basketball game have been announced by Bill Dioguardi, director of athletics.

Sienkiewicz, former East Rutherford High School standout, will be appearing in his final regular season home contest in the Bloomfield game.

In making the announcement of the salute to Sienkiewicz, Dioguardi said: "Bob Sienkiewicz has made a tremendous contribution to our basketball program over the last four years and we want to take this opportunity to salute him."

One of Bergen County's top basketball high school players while at East Rutherford under Coach Dick Vitale, Sienkiewicz is one of the main reasons for the rise to national prominence of Montclair State in basketball.

As a freshman, the former East Rutherford High School standout led the Indians from a brilliant 20-0 mark. He was the team's top scorer with 486 points. In his first varsity season, Sienkiewicz made a heavy contribution to a 20-8 record as the Indians won a berth in the District No. 31, National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics playoffs and the New Jersey State College Conference championship.

Last year, Bob played outstanding ball for Coach Ottie Galen as Montclair State sped to a 24-3 mark and a second-straight NJSCC crown. In addition, the Indians won the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Eastern Area championship at Syracuse, New York and played in the National College division NCAA tournament at Evansville, Ind.

Despite an injury to his ankle which sidelined him for six games this season, Sienkiewicz still has a fine chance of becoming the fourth player in MSC history to score 1,000 points in a three-year career.

He enters the last seven games of the current season with 875 points having scored 180 tallies.

TO VICTORY: Co-captains Bobbie Baxter (above) and Ten Gassett led MSC's swim team to victories over Newark State College, 50-18, and a tough Adelphi College, 42-35.

CORTLAND DEFEAT: Ron Poling (above) and Tom Fiorentino tied for first place in still rings for the first time in their collegiate careers. Sienkiewicz at "senior night" on Tues. Feb. 24 at Bloomfield.

Captain of the fencing team for four years, he is regarded as one of the top sabre fencers in America. But in midseason when he switched weapons and now competes in the epee event, his versatility has borne fruit but the benefits to the team.

What the Weekend Saw

This weekend saw Army defeat MSC's fencers in a close contest. But the year has seen Montclair State establish itself as possessing one of the top fencing contingents in the U.S.

The swashbucklers have an 81-1 record. And in the light of dual-meet action, the team has emerged as a ranking power in America.

There is no doubt that the top three teams in the country are Columbia, NYU and Navy. Princeton and Buffalo round out Columbia, NYU and Navy.

The team has grown into a national power under the tutelage of Coach Alan Macke and captain Dale Rodgers.

Macke is a stern taskmaster. He works the squad hard and long and is known for his no-nonsense attitude.

More than anyone, Dale Rodgers personifies the ultimate of an athlete at MSC. The senior has distinguished himself in cross-country and in track at Montclair. His most amazing accomplishment is his 14th place finish at the Olympic trials in the military pentathlon. His chances for competing in the '72 Olympics are excellent.

MASCFAVORED

This year's tournament attracts the largest team and individual entry in the history of the NAFC championships.

The battle for the team championships will be waged among no less than 8 of the 14 teams entered.

MASC occupies the favorite role. Buffalo, Penn State, and Syracuse will give the stongest competition. Cornell, John Hopkins, Newark-Rutgers, and NCE rate outside chances.

Also entered are Seton Hall, Rochester Institute of Technology, Jersey City State, Patten State, Pace, and Hobart.

New Jersey Schaefer Tourney

By Mike Galos

TRENTON – Montclair State College's basketball team took a big step towards its third straight New Jersey state college athletic conference crown Wednesday night. Sparked by the hot shooting of Bob Heck and Phil Bacarella, the Indians overcame a 7-point halftime deficit to edge second-place Trenton State, 64-60, at TSC's Kaiser gym. The victors upped their season mark to 17-2, while the Lions fell to 8-10.

More important, MSC's NJSCAC mark is now 6-1, compared to TSC who dropped into a second place tie with Jersey City State. Both quintets sport 4-3 conference logs.

A win at home against Glassboro State on Saturday night will assure the Indians of no less than a deadlock for the conference championship. The Lions flew to a 35-28 halftime edge on the wings of a 22-12 shooting performance from the floor. Guard Vin Masco, with 16 points on 6 of 8 from the field, and center Ralph Brateris, hitting 5 of 7 from the field and 3 foul shots, paced the Lion's first-half attack.

Bruce Davis hit a jump shot from half court at the buzzer to narrow the gap to seven at the halftime for the Indians.

The Indians bounced back with Bob Sienkiewicz hitting a jumper, Davis a layup, and Willie Moss a short jump shot to tighten the gap to 35-34 early in the second half.

A three-point-play by Sienkiewicz knotted the count at 39 all with 16:03 left on the clock.

The lead changed hands twice and there were two ties before a jumper by Heck with 5:33 in the game put the Indians ahead 48-46, and gave them the lead for good.

The Lions challenged, but buckets by Heck, Bacarella and James held them off. Bacarella was the Indians' top scorer with 17, Sienkiewicz followed with 13.
