Director's Views Irk Students

By Sylvia Endick

Is the Educational Opportunity Fund (EOF) office at MSC practicing reverse discrimination?

A recent article in the MONTCLARION - "Minority Men Speak on White Women" - has raised this question among concerned students. During a Women's Center panel discussion, Reuben Johnson, Director of the EOF program, expressed his personal views on racial discrimination, male superiority and interracial marriage.

Letters protesting Johnson's attitudes have been received by the MONTCLARION, in addition to complaints lodged with the EOF office. Johnson politely declined an interview earlier this week. He said he would later issue a statement but could not be reached for comment as the MONTCLARION went to press.

Dickson said that this kind of comment doesn't seem to be altogether responsible. He added that sometimes people just say things to stimulate discussion.

Randall W. Richards, Director of Financial Aids, also commented on Johnson's remarks. "I can't say I'm upset because everyone is entitled to their own opinions," Richards said.

Richards referred to Jesse Owens, an American black athlete who won medals at the 1936 Berlin Olympic games. Adolf Hitler at the time refused to shake hands with Owens because he is black. Owens' response was, "You can't legislate changes in a man's heart."

"I can't say with any degree of certainty that someone's viewpoints have an impact on their job responsibilities in the college," Richards explained.

EOF provides educational opportunities and financial assistance to educationally and financially disadvantaged state residents.

Currently approximately 60 percent of the students enrolled in EOF are black, 20 percent are Hispanic and 20 percent are white. The exact figures were not available.

CLUB Daytona Trip Encounters Turbulence

By Lisa Burkhart

This year College Life Union Board(CLUB) will again allow many students to enjoy "fun in the sun" during spring vacation in Daytona Beach, Florida.

At a meeting held Monday in Ballrooms C, final decisions were made on several options and sight-seeing trips. Those going by plane were also informed of a possible price increase of $36. One other problem discussed was the possible switch to a Friday/Friday schedule.

Since all who attended the meeting made deposits of $50 by February 14, they were given the option of cancelling their registration, or changing to the bus trip.

Some students were uncertain whether they would still take the trip. Dave Landman, CLUB's head of the Daytona trip, anticipated that all changes would be settled by later this week.

Ralph DeMomo, representative for Cosmic Travel, explained to the group that the original price of $209 was based on an Eastern Airlines charter, but they now claim a shortage of equipment. In order to charter other airlines who do not own rights to land in Daytona, the additional $36 per person may have to be paid.

Some students voiced unhappiness with the increase but it did not change their plans. Linda Zuber, a senior biology major stated, "I got a paid vacation from work, and I'm stuck with it. Besides, I want to get away from my family."

Others agreed with Maria Salmon, a sophomore home economics major, who said, "I worked all the way through school. I can't say I'm upset because everyone is entitled to their own opinions." Salmon referred to Jesse Owens, an American black athlete who won medals at the 1936 Berlin Olympic games. Adolf Hitler at the time refused to shake hands with Owens because he is black. Owens' response was, "You can't legislate changes in a man's heart."

"I can't say with any degree of certainty that someone's viewpoints have an impact on their job responsibilities in the college," Richards explained.

EOF provides educational opportunities and financial assistance to educationally and financially disadvantaged state residents.

Currently approximately 60 percent of the students enrolled in EOF are black, 20 percent are Hispanic and 20 percent are white. The exact figures were not available.

Students Learn Ropes at Cable TV

By Bill Mezzomo

For some, it’s the opportunity of a lifetime: the chance to appear before a camera and to be involved in the off-stage production of a television show. But for a number of MSC students this opportunity is more than a dream — it is a vital part of their college curriculum.

The project is for student internship at local cable television stations designed to prepare speech and theater majors (who specialize in broadcasting), for future job opportunities in this field. The students are involved in the editing, producing and directing of various programming and newscasts in order to obtain on-the-job experience while remaining in an academic environment.

According to Christopher Stasheff, one of the two-member broadcasting staff in the department, the project is sponsored by UA Columbia Cablevision.

“Our students are responding quite well. We have had a number of people who have gone on to work professionally in this area,” he said.

Approximately 35 MSC students have spent between 12-40 hours a week at cable stations (primarily in Pompton Lakes and Morristown) since the project began two and one half years ago.

One credit hour is allotted for approximately every three hours of actual work in the studio or out in the field. The total ranges around 12 credits over the course of a semester.

“Ideally we like to see the students finish their required courses in their first three years here before they become involved in the actual field experience,” Stasheff noted. “It is designed to be a transition into the outside world. We are trying to acquaint the individual with the realities of the business.”

The internship is not limited to cable television. The student may choose to work in radio or any other similar project but there has been a steady stream of interns to the easily accessible cable outlets that desire this free help.

Dean Lowell, station manager of UA Columbia Cablevision in Pompton Lakes, explained that his program is "out of necessity.

“We needed people who were really willing to work at the same time, qualified for the job,” he said. “I was a graduate of MSC so I knew a lot of people and had the ability to be interested in the work.”

Hovell indicated that the student is involved in all the facets of a broadcast, particularly in a news show.

After a decision has been made as to the nature of the assignment, the individual will go out on location, shoot an interview, return to the studio to edit the tape and finally, see to the technical aspects of the on-air production.

“The interns are generally well prepared before they even come here,” Hovell said. “The only problem is the transition from small formation black-and-white production to full-color television. This requires some on-the-job clarification and teaching.

“The technical aspects of some camera work and film editing must be explained and then practiced upon,” he continued. “But on the whole, the emphasis is on actual experience, not learning.”

Janet Bertoldi, a recent MSC graduate who interned last year while receiving credit through English Independent Study, felt that her experience was worthwhile.

“I got a chance to do just about everything — work cameras, edit tapes and appear live. In a small station (Morristown) the opportunities are always present.”

“When looking for jobs I’ve gotten a positive response,” she indicated. “But this is a competitive field and most places are looking for people with paid experience. I would, however, encourage anyone who was interested to get involved.”

Student Rep. to Higher Ed. Board: A Refreshing Change

By Eileen Curtis

Establishing a non-voting student representative to the New Jersey Board of Higher Education will be discussed at the Board's public session on March 16, according to Sam Crane, New Jersey Student Association (NJSAs) Executive Director.

The issue has already been discussed and turned down on more than one occasion by the Board.

Crane commented in his borrowed SGA office, “The Board would be benefited by a student representative, who would really help the Higher Education Board understand students. It would be a refreshing change.”

He added, “Students would also get a better understanding of the things the Board deals with.”

The student representative to the Board would serve as an informative, nonvoting student voice, offering viewpoints concerning pressing educational issues — the very issues that directly affect students, according to Crane.

The former SGA President commented pensively, “There’s some opposition to the idea. I’m not really sure how it will go. I think in’s been turned down in the past because if one constituency, namely students, is allowed to influence the Board, other forces will want representation.”

Crane remarked, “There is a definite hesitancy on the Board’s part to have a student acting as an equal. Maybe they’re a little threatened by it.”

Frosty Ground, Faulty Line Delay Fountain Flow

By Joanne Swanson

Warmer weather brings with it a trickle of hope that the fountain in front of Sprague Library may yet begin to flow.

Although the physical construction has been completed, water still does not run through the fountain. According to Anne Chapman, associate professor of fine arts, the sculpture itself is complete. The problem has moved out of the art department and into the maintenance department.

“The problem involves a broken water line which supplies the fountain with water,” according to Joseph McGinty, Engineer-in-Charge of Maintenance. He explained that the broken line runs along the side of Sprague Library.

He added that the frost must be completely out of the ground before anything can be done to repair the line.

We will begin work to fix it as soon as it gets warm enough. Nothing can be done about it in the cold weather,” McGinty said.

The fountain has been under construction since the spring of 1974. Chapman and Brian Watkins, assistant professor of fine arts, began the execution of the engineering design and the paper work in the fall of 1973. Chapman and Watkins were commissioned by the Class of 1970 to produce the sculpture for presentation as the class gift.

The fountain project originally started as part of the mall construction in 1971-1972. However, the state announced that the fountain project would have to be postponed.

The present location for the fountain was chosen because the fountain was no longer needed to recycle the water for library air-conditioning as planned. Water will flow down the diagonal slopes into the pond at the bottom, Chapman said.

CAR Charter Vetoed

By Eileen Curtis

“Veto” was the decision from Maryanne Preztunik, SGA President, concerning the Committee Against Racism’s (CAR) Class Three membership, which was granted by the Legislature on Feb. 3.

Preztunik, admittedly an “old-line SGA politician,” had 10 school days to decide and waited until the final day to issue her “thumbs down” verdict in an unusually tense SGA meeting yesterday afternoon.

It will be brought up for consideration next week by the Legislature which could conceivably override Preztunik’s stalled veto, according to an SGA source. Preztunik, however, commented, “I’m confident my veto will be sustained.”

In waiting the full 10 days, Preztunik lobbied for votes so her veto can’t be overridden, according to many Legislators.

Preztunik explained her CAR charter denial: “My experience with CAR is that it’s political, not a student oriented organization and that it misrepresents the facts.”

Patti Cioffi, SGA Legislator, pointed out some of CAR’s inadequacies in the now sparsely attended meeting that failed quorum at the end of the meeting. She also questioned the Constitutional Committee’s integrity in approving the CAR charter.

John Slorance, Constitutional Committee Chairperson, defended the Committee’s dealings with CAR and indicated that “a lack of communication” exists in the SGA Legislature itself.

The lecture and slide show were co-sponsored by BSCU and JSV.

THE FALASHAS: Rabbi Haile Haras, foremost authority on the Falashas — the black Jews of Ethiopia — lectured last Wednesday. The lecture and slide show were co-sponsored by BSCU and JSU.

Sexuality Counseling

Kathy Clarke of Planned Parenthood in Essex County will be giving human sexuality counseling at the MSC Health Center on Wednesday from 1 to 3 pm. She will answer questions concerning birth control, venereal disease, pregnancy, or any other questions on sex. There is no charge for the service and no appointment has to be made.

‘High Noon at WPC’
Protesting the arrest of three students at William Paterson College (WPC) for possession of marijuana, 200 WPC’ers staged a "smoke-in" on Feb. 23. The smoke-in was staged at high noon in front of the WPC Student Center. Reportedly, 20 to 30 people were actually smoking marijuana, while the others smoked herbal tea and other organic substances.

Three members of the campus security at WPC watched the smoke-in but did not attempt any arrests due to the large number of students involved.

TSC Studies Options
The Academic Policy Committee at Trenton State College (TSC) has recommended that the Pass/Full option now open to TSC students in subjects outside of their major be dropped.

The Committee will forward their recommendation to the Faculty Senate this week. After their final decision is made, the matter will be turned over to the President for a final policy change.

The Tables Turn
At Ramapo College, two students who lived in the campus dormitory lost a stereo set and speakers when they were robbed by another student.

After deciding on the identity of the robber, they entered his dorm room and proceeded to teach a lesson to the student they thought had robbed them.

Now, the two Ramapo students are being charged with breaking and entering and atrocious assault. No charges are being pressed against their victim, who is in the hospital.

O’Davis Gets Shaft
The term of Clyde O’Davis, a representative on the Board of Trustees at Glassboro State College (GSC) expires in June of 1977. The State did not inform O’Davis that he would be reappointed to the GSC Board. Now the State has appointed another representative to O’Davis’s seat on the Board.

According to the Whit, the student newspaper at GSC, O’Davis has repeatedly voted against the suggestions of Ralph E. Dungan, Chancellor of Higher Education.

Stockton Profs Make List
Robert Dufala, a self-described hit man for the John Birch Society in South Jersey and Pennsylvania, was arrested in June.

Dufala testified in Camden County court on Feb. 28 and spoke of a list of targets for himself and other hit men in the area. The list included Henry Kissinger, Nelson Rockefeller and two liberal professors from Stockton State College.

Meeting Problems at JCS
The SGO at Jersey City State College (JCS) has 21 members. Nine present members is considered quorum at any SGO meeting.

However, the SGO has been unable to achieve quorum at any of their weekly meetings this semester. Therefore, no legislation has been passed at JCS.

When SGO does achieve quorum at a meeting, they will vote on charters for various organizations. This year, the Revolutionary Student Brigade (RSB) and Iranian Student Union are applying for SGO charters.

Prof on Househusbanding

By Sylvia Endick

“I wasn’t prepared for men’s reactions. It was difficult for them to comprehend what I was doing,” Ed Mills reflected.

Mills, an assistant professor in MSC’s student personnel services department, shared his “Experiences as a Househusband” with a Women’s Center audience last Wednesday.

Mills and his wife traded roles for two years after the birth of their son. He stayed home and took full care of the baby during the day and taught nights at MSC. His wife worked full-time during the day.

Mills, whose three and a half year old son stayed by his side during the lecture, spoke highly of the experience.

“Many men I know never know their children. They leave their house at 6:30 am and return at 8 or 9 pm,” Mills said.

“The experience has taught me a lot of things,” Mills continued. Mills spoke of the “intense responsibility” it was to take care of a baby. “His life was in my hands,” Mills declared.

Mills believes that most males don’t go through the experience of giving comfort to another person who is hurt or sick. “I really appreciate mothers now,” Mills said.

Mills said that he learned how to tolerate and co-exist with changing a “squirming baby” and feeding him. “The food goes all over—in your hair and in theirs,” Mills chuckled.

“As you get older, though, you forget the negative and remember the positive,” he continued.

Another difficulty was his wife’s reaction. His home son learned to react and go only to him.

Mills had to create conditions where his son would react to his mother. For instance, whenever the child hurt himself Mills would quickly hand the child to his wife for comforting.

Mills found it difficult to identify the developmental phases of his first child. With his second son, now eight months old, Mills believes it’s a lot easier. “No one should have a first child,” he joked.

Mills traded roles again with his wife. Now she stays home with the children and he teaches full-time at MSC. “She felt she wanted a similar experience,” Mills explained. “But I’m still home more than the average father,” he continued.

“I don’t want to give you the idea that I’m a super-father,” Mills said as he packed up his red tote bag full of peanuts, crayons, a washcloth in a baggie, etc. and concluded the lecture.

McKay on Cosell, Olympics & Trivia

By Kevin Kesby

Jim McKay is usually seen broadcasting from a ski slalom in Austria or an auto race in Monaco but he seemed to feel at home last Wednesday night speaking to a sparse but receptive audience in Memorial Auditorium.

In a talk peppered with humorous anecdotes and "one-liners" ABC's "Wide World of Sports" host since 1961 presented viewpoints on sports, the Olympics and fellow sportscasters - views acquired in some 3,750,000 miles of travel in reporting on over 100 different sports in 40 countries.

The 90 minute lecture and question and answer period cost the Council on International and National Affairs (CINA) $3,250.

McKay was not hesitant to express a view and when queried on the abilities of fellow sportscaster Howard Cosell quipped, "Cosell dwells on Mount Olympus, far above us mere mortals and comes down only to enlighten us."

McKay admitted to mixed feelings on the Olympics. He expressed strong approval of the concept of the games and while admitting that some political rivalry was healthy, felt that the overt political overtones of the recent Olympics were detrimental.

Naturally disappointed that NBC rather than ABC had obtained the rights to the 1980 Olympics in Moscow, McKay stated that "while everyone was not a Barbara Walters," if offered the right amount of money he would consider hosting the games for NBC.

The Olympics should remain restricted to amateurs, McKay stated but he agreed that athletes could receive a "living allowance."

That concept would allow an athlete to receive from the Olympic Committee an annual income based upon what they might conceivably be earning in another profession outside of the sport. The income would be granted regardless of this performance as an athlete and would allow financially-pressed athletes the chance to participate in the games.

McKay stated that government funding was not the best answer to the Olympic teams shortage in training facilities and equipment but rather, he counted on public support to meet the teams' needs.

Surprisingly short of build and barely rising above the podium, McKay nevertheless seemed well in command throughout the talk and showed an extensive knowledge of sports trivia during the question and answer period.

In 1968, McKay became the first sports commentator to win an Emmy Award and since then he has added six more to his collection. One of these came from his sports coverage of 1972 Olympic Games in Munich and another for his news reporting of the tragic events that occurred during those games. His work there also brought him the George Polk Memorial Award for Journalism and West Germany's Officer's Cross of the Legion of Merit. In all he has covered seven Olympics.

A graduate of Loyola College and a former Navy Officer, the sportscaster started his television career in Baltimore in 1947 and moved to New York three years later. The father of a son and daughter, McKay was with CBS before joining the ABC staff. McKay and his wife live in Westport, Conn.

When it was over, Jean Lazo had eaten 17 “munchkins” in one minute, giving him sole bragging rights as MSC’s first “Dunkin Munchkins” eating champion.

Not far behind in the Student Intramural Leisure Council (SILC) contest Wednesday, were three munchkin-eaters tied at 14 apiece. What, you may ask, are Dunkin munchkins?

Doughnut holes — or more precisely the centers taken out of a doughnut to make the holes — which come in assorted varieties and tastes.

Outside, it was one of those clear, crisp afternoons that wet early morning appetites. Inside the Student Center ballroom, the contestants — 20 guys and two girls — were seated and ready shortly after the 11 am starting time. The 60 plus crowd buzzed with anticipation as they gathered around the four tables of competitors. Contestants took small swigs of water and eyed the 20 mouth-sized pastries on each one’s paper plate.

They had come to eat and eat fast. They had to. Debbie Agnello, a SILC member, took up a bull-horn to amplify her last minute instructions: “... One at a time — and you gotta swallow each one. The first one done with the plate of munchkins in front of you has to stand up and say you’re finished — if no one is finished when one minute is up the winner will be the one who has eaten the most...”

Sixty seconds later everyone was still sitting. And so the counting began and the post-contest congratulatory slaps on the backs.

Lazo, a freshman psychology major, was asked how he felt; “Just great,” came the reply. Did he eat breakfast? “No,” Lazo fielded the questions like a veteran of post-game interviews, casually joking that he was “in training for three weeks.” No one took him too seriously, it was that kind of affair.

In second place: Jerry Melillo, a senior industrial education major; Steve Richardson, a junior business administration major; and Mike Petrucci. Richardson entered on a spur of the moment. Asked how the 14 munchkins made him feel, he answered, “Full.”

Lazo got $15 for finishing first; the three second place finishers each received $10 apiece. Lazo said he was going to take his prize money and “get wasted.”

When they started there were 585 munchkins. As the ballroom emptied, SILC members passed the bucket of leftover munchkins — some brunching, others licking their fingers. And the contestants still milling around, gladly declined the offer.

The SGA Beat

The following is a summary of SGA actions at last Wednesday’s SGA Legislative meeting:

Maryanne E. Preztunik, SGA President informed the Legislature that the asbestos ceilings in Bohn Hall will be removed during the summer months, according to a recent memo from MSC President David W.D. Dickson.

Jose Fuentes, SGA Vice President for Academic Affairs, announced that course information booklets will be made available in the fall, including “work-load” information about specific courses.

Teacher certification interviews are also being examined in regard to “fairness to the student,” according to Fuentes.

A new SGA election rule was discussed in depth by the Legislature, stating that an individual can only petition for one of the five executive offices and will be eligible for up to $25 in SGA supplies.

Bob Hicks, SGA Legislator, introduced and later withdrew a bill, calling for a governmental “Code of Ethics,” learned an individual to back up every SGA related statement, since “certain fabrications” had been made by Legislators which had influenced voting, according to Hicks. Hicks’ bill, which he felt “made a point,” represents a new SGA emphasis on “honest politicking.”

Anti-Cancer: Isidor’s ‘Chemical Theme’

By Barbara Cesario

John L. Isidor is working to wipe out cancer in your lifetime. As the recipient of two private foundation grants, the new Chairperson of the chemistry department has been busy conducting anti-cancer research, instructing three classes and holding up the administrative end of the department since September.

Finding new drugs for chemotherapy, the treatment of internal disease by chemical substances, is one of the specifics of his research, which is being funded jointly by the American Chemistry Society (ACS) and the Research Corporation at a cost of over $14,000.

Humanitarian goals such as these are central to what Isidor calls “the chemical theme” of this generation of chemists.

“The thrust of the chemical community today focuses on alleviating human suffering, not on luxurious technology,” Chemists are saying: instead of making better paper cups let’s alleviate human suffering, not just that.

Within the last four years I can’t think of anyone of our graduates who didn’t find a job or get into graduate school, he said. He was quick to add that MSC has the only state college chemistry department with a program accredited by the ACS, a definite plus when seeking placement after college.

Isidor said that he became interested in chemistry at a very early age and credits science with expanding his horizons. Teaching, Isidor, the father of three, enjoys tinkering with electronics and participating in sports although, he admits, time for such activities is scarce.

Most chemists are research chemists, according to Isidor and he is no exception. Teaching three courses as an assistant professor and carrying out the administrative duties of Chairperson leave little time for his research, even though he is often aided by chemistry majors who work part-time as lab assistants.

“I wish I had more time to do what I was trained to be, an educator and researcher,” he reflected.

Before becoming Chairperson, Isidor was instrumental in developing a program in Forensics, the science of criminal investigations, in which ballistics and drug analysis would be taught. Although approved by the Board of Higher Education, Isidor says “the state will not provide funds for new programs at this time.”

Clove Rd., One 'Holey Hazard'

By Renee Vartan

Those who use the Little Falls campus entrance to MSC know the condition of Clove Rd. — especially if they come or leave via Rt. 46.

The two-way road that runs past the "on-campus" Clove Rd. Apartments, is windy, narrow and strewn with potholes that could easily damage cars or cause accidents.

So far nothing has been done about it.

But according to Frank Loscalzo, Assistant County Engineer of Passaic County, the potholes and drainage problem on Clove Rd. should be fixed "in about two weeks."

Informed of the hazardous conditions by the MONTCLARION, Loscalzo responded: "I'll have the inspectors stop by within the next few days and see if the road is in bad condition and take care of it."

Although the road bisects the campus and apartments, the college claims no responsibility for the road. And surprisingly, Little Falls also claims no responsibility for the road's maintenance or lack of it.

Walter Romaine, Superintendent in Charge of Public Works in Little Falls, explained, "It's a county road. Little Falls has nothing to do with fixing the holes. The Passaic County Road Department are the ones who would take care of it."

According to Loscalzo, there is talk about rebuilding the entire road — including widening — sometime in the future.

"We'll maintain what's there right now," he added.

Loscalzo said that county inspectors are constantly assigned to check out road conditions and spot potholes. He also said they receive reports from police and residents about emergency road problems.

Why the repair delay then?

Loscalzo responded: "I don't have enough men to immediately repair all the potholes," he said.

Alumni Association Serves the Undergraduate

By Fran Fleischer

Mention the MSC Alumni Association and most people, logically enough, think of an organization serving MSC graduates. But surprisingly, the Alumni Association has much to offer undergraduates as well - particularly in the area of financial assistance.

"Active students who will be seniors in the fall can apply for Alumni Association scholarships," Dean Hathaway, Director of Alumni Relations, said.

The scholarships are awarded annually to students with outstanding records of academic achievement, extracurricular activity and community service. Up to $500 is awarded to each recipient to help meet senior tuition costs.

"Twenty-eight students have received scholarships in the last four years," Hathaway noted. 1976-77 winners included seniors Linda Astorino, Patti Cioffi, Denise A. Espostio, Donna Hoffman, Maryanne Pretzunik, Esther Schwarzberg and Arlene Tyler.

The deadline for 1977-78 scholarship applications is Fri., March 18. Applications may be obtained at the Alumni House, 34 Normal Ave., the Dean of Students Office, the Financial Aid Office or in the Student Center.

The Charles E. Hadley Memorial Fund for Independent Student Research has just been established by the Alumni Trustees. For biology majors only, the Fund, chaired by Marie Kuhnen, biology professor, recently awarded four $50 grants to students Nancy Dorato, Stephanie Rydzaj, Norma Legren and John Chapman.

Applicants will be recommended by the Committee, consisting of four alumni and one undergraduate, to the Alumni Association Board. Applications for summer and fall projects must be submitted on or before April 29. Winter and spring project proposals are due October 15.

Limited funds allow the Alumni Association to sponsor a variety of events. "The Senior Wine and Cheese Party, which this year is on Thurs., May 12, is always sponsored by the Alumni Association," Hathaway said.

Fall Homecoming is jointly sponsored by the Association and the College Life Union Board (CLUB) according to Hathaway.

General Ed. Made Simpler

By Joanne Swanson

The class of 1981 can look forward to a simpler and more effective program of general education requirements.

The new system will replace the complex school and common core selections which have baffled students since 1971.

Irwin Gawley, Vice President for Academic Affairs, discussed the details of the program. He explained that all aspects have not yet been finalized.

Gawley explained that the basic difference is that there will now be three major areas of study. These include humanities and the arts, theoretical and applied sciences and social and behavioral sciences.

Students will take 12 credits from each of the three areas from a minimum of three disciplines.

School identifications have been dropped and specific disciplines instead of departments will be listed. For example, Gawley explained that a specific area might include "Drama" or "Radio and Television" rather than only a specific department or major.

The Curriculum Committee is working on composing a list of the various disciplines within the three major areas. This has not yet been finalized.

Certain requirements will still be maintained, according to Gawley. These include the communication requirement and the physical education requirement. In addition, it will be necessary to take two courses from a single discipline. This is similar to the present sequential course requirement.

"Every student will now be given some opportunity to gain a basic knowledge in each area," Gawley said. "He can no longer eliminate an area completely."

The program was formulated by the Curriculum Committee which is made up of administrative representatives, the deans of each school, the six chairpersons of the School Curriculum Committees or a representative and a student representative from each of the schools.

The Committee is also composing a new list of courses that will fit the general education requirement.

"All courses in all majors would not all be suitable to fill the requirement," Gawley said.

According to Gawley, the new system will provide students with a greater variety of course selection.

Catacombs: Weekly Freebies

By Mary Valenti

Nowadays it is very unusual to get something for nothing. But it’s even more unusual to get something worthwhile for nothing.

Catacombs, a weekly coffeehouse sponsored by the College Life Union Board (CLUB), breaks the monotony of the week without putting a dent in your budget.

Every Wednesday evening, beginning at 8 pm, the third floor of the Student Center is converted into a dimly-lit catacomb-basement atmosphere. Free food and live entertainment satisfy the nearly 250 persons a week that have been turning out.

"I come up here for the food. I also enjoy it because there’s a good atmosphere," Carmen Ficarra, an English major, explained.

Since CLUB has been in existence, it always provided a coffeehouse for students to enjoy. The original Catacombs met in the basement of College Hall and provided a truly authentic "catacomb" atmosphere before moving to Life Hall.

Although it was fairly successful, the crowd began to dwindle.

Joan Schulhafer, former CLUB Chairperson, revived the dying activity by bringing it to the Student Center.

"I think it’s a lot better than it used to be. It could use a little more diversity in the talent but the atmosphere is good," Dave Thompson, a junior psychology major, remarked.

The performers are usually mellow acoustic acts that contribute to easy listening and the ability to converse with others.

All kinds of crowds constitute Catacombs. There are those who stay from beginning to end, those who drop in and stay for an hour or so and those who come especially to see their favorite group.

"The bands consist mainly of students from MSC although often outsiders request to perform. They perform voluntarily for experience and enjoyment. Catacombs also serves as an outlet for the performers, being a midpoint from rehearsing at home to performing professionally."

"To play for an audience is great! It’s like being in heaven," exclaimed Nick Valente, a senior humanities major and member of the popular duo "Sierra." "I come here because there’s a crowd that listens," he added.

"I think that Catacombs provides an opportunity for both the performers and the audience. It’s a good place to meet people and a good place to entertain in," Mark Dacey, graduate of Canaan College and the other half of "Sierra," added.

"It’s hard to get everything organized and running smoothly but it’s all worth it in the end. After you see people enjoying something you’ve made possible, it’s a good feeling," Paul Hady, Chairperson of the Catacombs reflected.

Relax, unwind and enjoy. Every Wednesday is open house on the third floor of the Student Center. Between 8 pm and midnight; food, coffee, tea and live entertainment are at your disposal — and it’s all free.
Johnson’s Remarks

The statements made by Educational Opportunity Fund (EOF) Director Reuben Johnson in the article “Minority Men Speak on White Women,” which appeared in the February 24th issue of the MONCLARION, has many people up in arms. Crises of racist and sexist have been aimed at Johnson. Since he is the Director of EOF individuals feel he should resign since statements of this nature shouldn’t be part of the character of one in such a position.

What Johnson said is considered both racist and sexist. But are his statements worthy of the controversy that now surrounds them?

All people are entitled to their opinions. The question that arises is whether Johnson, as EOF Director, should express such controversial feelings publicly.

Johnson didn’t go to the Women’s Center as a representative of EOF. He went merely to talk. However since Johnson is the Director no matter where he goes he reflects EOF.

Being in a position of power, where he can easily make his opinions known, Johnson should have been more careful when expressing his views.

Some students, as indicated in the MONCLARION Soapbox this week, feel Johnson should resign. They suggest that a person with this type of opinion shouldn’t be Director of EOF.

The call for resignation is more emotional than it is practical. In Johnson’s favor is the fact that so far there haven’t been documented complaints made about the way he runs the program. He seems to have done his job efficiently and no racial prejudice has been openly discovered.

Yet since he is the Director of an organization which is supposed to be fair to students of any race, his qualifications as Director should be re-evaluated by a search committee. MSC President Dickson and the administration must take the initiative in seeing that this task is done.

Before the question of resignation is raised or the entire issue is dismissed without action, Johnson should be given his work. If it is found that they do then action must be taken.

G. E. Made Easy

Too bad our little brothers and sisters won’t be able to appreciate the bonus the College will be giving them next year.

The Class of ’81 will be presented with a simplified version of the General Education requirements.

Students since 1971 have struggled with the “one from Column A, two from Column B” method of selecting courses.

Commendations go to the Curriculum Committee for designing the new program. They were able to see that it is not essential for a system to be complicated in order to be effective.
Racism is a word that is used too often and practiced too frequently by too many groups. I feel that prejudice is hiding; people hiding behind their stereotyped roles, letting stereotyped words protect them. And in the last two issues of the MONTCLARION the stereotypes were really at work. I'm referring specifically to the Spring Ball. We’re not having and to Rubeen Johnson’s statement “Men are superior to women, and black men are more superior.”

First of all, let’s straighten out why we’re not having a Spring Ball. The reason is because College Life Union Board(CLUB) felt it wasn’t as necessary as another programming. I authored the bill to give CLUB the money to fund a Spring Ball. The legislature agreed with CLUB’s decision that it wasn’t important. The Latin American Students Organization (LASO) and the Black Student Cooperative Union(BSCU) will hold their spring events because they budgeted them. If they hadn’t budgeted them they would not sponsor them.

But that doesn’t mean that there isn’t any tension between the three organizations because a rivalry does exist. That rivalry is both understandable and inexusable. It is understandable because the three organizations, in reality, serve three basically different groups. BSCU’s purpose is to educate the college community about the black culture. CLUB’s purpose is to provide social programming for the entire college community. LASO is supposed to give the entire college community exposure to the Latin culture. Notice how each organization is for the entire college community. Yet what groups usually attend these events? Blacks attend BSCU’s events, whites attend CLUB’s events and Latinos attend LASO’s events. There is a mixture at these events but it is minimal. This is inexusable! The programming is there for everyone yet only certain groups will take advantage of certain events: Why?

Because we are all hiding behind our stereotyped roles. We are afraid to admit to ourselves and our friends (God forbid!) that we find another culture interesting. We are afraid to admit that there may be a similarity between cultures or even worse, that a culture may have something of value to offer us.

We are afraid to admit that there may be a similarity between cultures or even worse, that a culture may have something of value to offer us. We are afraid to admit that there may be a similarity between cultures or even worse, that a culture may have something of value to offer us.

Let your soul fly, watch out for LASO’s Latin Week. And if you want to party with a lot of friends and have a few rides and drinks then go to CLUB’s carnival.

Spring Ball Surprise!

By Victoria Smith

We are afraid to admit that there may be a similarity between cultures or even worse, that a culture may have something of value to offer us. At our college there is a huge gap between our various cultures and it’s because college students are afraid to admit that there may be a similarity between cultures or even worse, that a culture may have something of value to offer us.

At least 80% of the student body is living on campus and they come from various countries or even worse, that a culture may have something of value to offer us.

Men are superior to women, and black men are more superior!

To the Editor:

I am writing to express my outrage at the racism and sexism espoused by Reuben Johnson, Director of the Educational Opportunity Fund (EOF), in your recent article of February 24, 1977. To think that a man in his position would reveal such discriminatory and prejudiced attitudes toward women is incomprehensible to me.

I find it abominable that an administrator whose president is a small mind. There is no "issue" between CLUB and this organization. Statements made by legislators on the floor of SGA have been misconstrued and subsequent statements made to your reporter led to these falsehoods being printed. Just because a legislator is black does not mean he or she represents and speaks for the BSCU or its executive board. Any comments or personal opinions that legislators may make should not be misconstrued as such.

No Ngunjiri?

Dear Editor:
The article on the Committee Against Racism (CAR) in the Feb. 17 issue of the MONTCLARION sounds very good but I hope with all their boasting they have not lost touch with reality. All right, so they have been successful in instituting a Swahili program at MSC. What if anything are they doing about the non-retention of Ngari Ngunjiri, the only man on campus qualified to teach Swahili? What will happen to the program now? Is anyone doing anything about this racist action? For more information on the functioning of this organization since this is the way that facts and not misconceptions will come to light.

To the Editor:
The Weight Reduction Club of the home economics department has once again opened up its facilities to both the student population and the local public. Under the supervision of Ruth Carol, a registered dietitian and Associate Professor, students majoring in foods and nutrition will be doing the actual counseling.

This service will consist of one-to-one confidential meetings with those people interested in losing weight. Proper nutritional practices will be stressed, along with personally formulated diets. This semester the club hopes to incorporate some group counseling sessions, along with a suggested exercise program. The Weight Reduction Club, which has been operating successfully for over a year is located in the Life Skills Center in Finley Hall, room 110 and is free of charge.

Please help us to help you! Applications are available through the home economics department. For more information feel free to stop by.

Ginsberg Reads . . . And Speaks

By Laurie Velger
and Thom Olsen

Renowned poet Allen Ginsberg and his brother, poet/lawyer Eugene Brooks, read to a tightly packed audience of more than 200 people last Thursday in Ballroom A of the Student Center. The highly successful free poetry event was sponsored by Quarterly, MSC’s literary magazine and the Art Forum.

Ginsberg, the author of such well-known works as Howl, Kaddish, The Fall of America and First Blues, among others, and Brooks, the author of Rites of Passage, were both welcomed warmly by the highly enthusiastic and appreciative audience.

Ginsberg and Brooks were introduced by Harry Rosenzweig of Cultural Affairs, who mentioned the brothers’ affinity with MSC. Brooks himself graduated from MSC in 1949 and Ginsberg actually mentioned “Montclair State College” in his work Kaddish.

Each poet read for two 20 minute sets, divided by a brief intermission. Brooks began each set with a subdued tone. Ginsberg proceeded with a more energetic delivery, Ginsberg as well as Brooks’ works contained the statement “My life is my poem”.

For his first selection Ginsberg read his well-known work “America.” His delivery was, to say the least, spirited and exuberant and thoroughly delightful. Toward the end of the piece Ginsberg ad-libbed references to MSC and Timothy Leary, among others. Ginsberg gave the poem, originally written in 1956, in an on-the-spot sense of freshness and vitality. He then read “A Supermarket in California” a perceptive piece about his father. Brooks’ tone became more subdued during the second half of the ballroom to be overaudibled with distortion. However, despite the poor physical sound, both Ginsberg’s and Brooks’ works came through with a great clarity of image and spirit.

Allen Ginsberg will be considerably the conditions for inspiration.”

When asked about living in the moment and making oneself as clear a channel as possible for whatever is coming through, Ginsberg stated, in no uncertain terms, “Well nothing is coming through, you’re just there. Coming through from somewhere, some universe? You’re here already. There’s no being outside what’s here already, anyway. There’s no abstract thing that’s coming through. I don’t like that image, making oneself a clear channel, because it’s an image derived from radio/television. Some Madison Avenue conception.”

When countered with the thought that the prophets have been considered as clear channels, Ginsberg replied “I think they were full of shit, because they were talking about God and I don’t believe in God. I don’t believe in another universe than the one we’ve got right here.”

Ginsberg still believe that drugs are useful, if combined with clear open-minded meditative practices. Not Kundalini zaps or saying that “oh my chakras are opening, I see the 15th moon on the 14th planet, I hear voices.” Horror. It’s all egoism, just trying to get something from the universe. Anyone who claims to have seen God, just saw his own big ego and is trying to get either love and money for it. All those God preachers, God peddlers, God-salts, cosmic unity peddlers, myself foremost among them and the most corrupt.”

Asked to explain himself a little more, Ginsberg said softly “It’s not important. Rent your mind, it’s not important. You don’t have to understand me because I don’t understand myself. So there’s nothing to understand. Everything’s clear. There’s no mystery. We’re already here so there’s nothing to misunderstand or understand.”

Ginsberg stressed his dislike of generalizations and vaguities. “Poetry is not composed of generalizations, it’s composed of specific things, if anything.”

Ginsberg himself, along with William Burroughs and Ron Padgett, will be teaching courses this summer at Naropa.

New Riders of the Purple Sage
Who Are Those Guys? (MCA 2248)

One of the oldest bands in the field of country rock music is the New Riders of the Purple Sage. Their latest album, Who Are Those Guys?, is an example of a group going stale. Of the 10 songs on the LP, five are fair to good while the remainder are offensive. The worst part is that they're mixed together and you have to skip around.

The flaw I find in the record is that the New Riders are erratic, the songs don't even sound like the same band is doing them. At times their harmonies are beautiful and the guitar playing by vocalists John Dawson and David Nelson excels on the rocking "Love Has Strange Ways." This selection along with a "New Kid in Town" sound alike "(Just) Another Night in Reno" help to salvage the disc.

Sounding like the Eagles is no great accomplishment when the group turns around and cranks out some fine "down home" material, and is a perfect example of the typical southern rockie type "Red Hot Women and Ice Cold Beer" or an updated version of "Peggy Sue," that's where I draw the line. I think these guys are suffering from the nihilistic/anarchistic Pistols are at the vanguard of the punk movement, trying to concern myself with the painting, commercial art and presentation for a long time. The artist received a BA in art education from MSC in 1969, then he spent a short time at the Art Institute of Chicago as a graduate painting major before beginning a teaching career in the public school system of NJ. At present Orlando is teaching painting, commercial art and general art at West Morris Mt. Olive High School in Flanders.

The Marshall Tucker Band Carolina Dreams Capricorn (CFS 0180)

While The Marshall Tucker Band continues to record some fine "down home" original songs and issue very pleasant albums, they still can't seem to capture what they do live on stage on vinyl. Their sixth LP, Carolina Dreams, is a perfect example of this.

This album is very enjoyable. But MTB music should be foot-stompin' and hand clappin'. In concert, this is truly the case, on Carolina Dreams it isn't.

The closest they come to this is the song "Life in a Song," which features some tocuching sax (Jerry Eubanks) and horn (guest arranger, Leo La Branch) play and the burning guitar of Toy Caldwell.

Once again, though, it is the usual MTB album. The best tunes on the LP are the Toy Caldwell originals. The other songs (three of a total seven), were penned by some combination of other band members Doug Gray (lead singer), George McCorkle (vocals) and Eubanks (sax and flute) or Toy's brother, Tommy Caldwell (bass). Toy's written a couple of smooth southern root songs that go over well. "Heard it in a Love Song" is very sentimental while "Tell It to the Devil" seems like a reformation tune as Toy promises: "I'm gonna clean my soul up, Lord." Both cuts go over well on the album and are performed virtually flawlessly. But this does not seem to be what MTB really are.

Maybe the band had the right idea when they released Where We All Belong which featured a studio side along with a live side.

The flaw I find in Carolina Dreams is that I discover myself dreaming of Carolina instead of foot stompin' around the room.

Sex Pistols Anarchy in the UK/I Wanna Be Me (EMI 2556)

If not the best, "Anarchy in the UK" is probably the most important single of the year from England. Sex Pistols are at the vanguard of the "new wave" of British bands and their contract with prestigious EMI confirmed the nihilistic/anarchistic stance most of these bands adopt.

Unfortunately, the anarchy as ecstasy theme of the single coupled with the band's appearance on a live TV show that descended into total obscenity (anarchy in the TV!) caused EMI to drop the band and withdraw the record. (The band couldn't have salvaged their contract with a public apology but refused, saying that to do so would have been too dishonest. If more of our "rock stars" shared such sentiments, perhaps rock would not be enduring the placid doldrums it now suffers.)

Forget the politics, which are minimal anyway and get this record while you still can. Loud, dynamic and exciting, "Anarchy in the UK" is a definition of what a rock 'n' roll 45 should be.

Landscapes By Orlando

By Nina Lacy

Recent landscapes by Ron Orlando will be on view in the foyer of Sprague Library, MSC, through Mon., March 21. The exhibit is open to the public without charge during library hours.

Professor Leon De Leseau arranged the exhibit for his former undergraduate student and present graduate student, Orlando, who plans to complete work on his MA at the end of the current semester.

The artist, whose untitled landscapes decorate the walls of the gallery, concerns himself with constructing forms by means of color and values. One of the techniques the abstract expressionist uses is the repetition of small forms. This has very much to do with the structure of the painting. There are still landscapes in his mind but the image is beginning to break up. He says, "They strike me as being more like magnifications of natural objects that reveal the marvelous underlying structure that is the strength of that object."

Orlando adds, "In the past I have been very concerned with the landscape itself, trying to create an image that would invite the viewer to enter the canvas and explore ... in my most recent paintings, I have tried to concern myself with the structure of the work, trying to build a good painting rather than painting a landscape."

The artist received a BA in art education from MSC in 1969, then he spent a short time at the Art Institute of Chicago as a graduate painting major before beginning a teaching career in the public school system of NJ. At present Orlando is teaching painting, commercial art and general art at West Morris Mt. Olive High School in Flanders.

Sprague Library hours are 7:30 am-10 pm, Mondays-Thursdays; 7:30 am-4:30 pm, Fridays; 10:30 am-4:30 pm, Saturdays and 2-10 pm, Sunday.

Try For A 'Match'

By Jeryl Ann Franco

Thornton Wilder's, The Matchmaker, directed by Jerome Rockwood, is 1977's gala, Spring Major Theatre Series presentation.

The Matchmaker, which was made into a highly successful musical, Hello Dolly!, is a delightful and busy comedy of love and marriage provoked anywhere from a rich man's home to a millinery shop.

The flicker of passion can be found in the crotchety Horace Vandergelder (Donald Sobolic) to his young, impressionable niece, Emegarde (Claudia Knowles), stopping off somewhere along the way with the zany Bronx-lover, Cornelius Hackl (Robert Longstreet, who most recently starred in the Players' Company). All of this, of course, having a Cupid bound instigator, namely Dolly Levi (Susan Speidel, also of Company).

The light-hearted and hilarious saga of Emegard and Ambrose Kemper's (Mark Speer) somewhat forbidden marriage (after all he's an artist!) triggers off the calamities, coupled with Vandergelder's steadfast decision that it is time he married. The story culminates to a happy ending preceded by the introduction of many impulsive and loveable characters.

Along with those already mentioned, the cast includes: Tony Salerno, Athena Droogas, Marc Mattaliano, Wayne Diana, Cheryl Clark, Sheila Connolly, Bruce Matthews, Patrick Christiano, John Carrington, Rita Cadorin and Lori Smith.

The cast and crew of Matchmaker have worked long, hard hours insuring it to be an exceptional and high spirited two hours of entertainment. The play will run from Wed., March 9 through Sat., March 12 in Memorial Auditorium. Curtain time is 8:30pm each evening, with a 2:30 pm matinee on Fri., March 11.

MSC Musicians Go Dutch

By Richard Galasso

MSC's second Carnegie Recital Hall concert will consist of contemporary Dutch and early Flemish music. The Sun., March 6 performance is under the patronage of the Consulate General of the Netherlands in New York.

MSC professor and New York Philharmonic violinst, Oscar Ravina, who coordinated the entire series has organized the Dutch program. "I set up the program to represent the living contemporary Dutch composers," Ravina said.

Gerard Schwarz will again conduct the Montclair College Chamber Orchestra during Hans Kox's "Cyclophony VIII."

In addition to the one orchestra number and a vocal ensemble program, four MSC faculty members will perform in duos and clarinetist William Shadel will play solo.

Ravina accompanied by Chaim Zemach (cello), will play Henk Beding's "Duo for Violin and Cello." "He is considered the father of the contemporary Dutch composers," Ravina said. "Although he lived in Germany, he was educated in Amsterdam and is one of the finest contemporary composers."

In organizing the program, Ravina has reversed the format from the first Carnegie concert. This performance and the final concert on Sun., March 27 (Italian composers) is of contemporary music that holds to patterned classical forms. The music is not as modern as the first concert.

A vocal group, the Montclair College Early Music Ensemble will play and sing works by early Flemish composers. The 13 vocalists under the direction of MSC professor Brenda Fairaday will be backed by two viola players, an organist and a lute player.

"The ensemble has been formed for this specific concert but we expect to continue with it," Fairaday said. "The compositions we are playing are from the 15th and 16th centuries." Fairaday also explained that the Early Music Ensemble performs music written before 1700.

Clarinetist William Shadel is featured in a duet with Rosalie Pratt (harp) will also perform solo on Rudolf Escher's "Sonata for Clarinet."

The 11 minute composition has no key center and was chosen by Ravina. "It's a long atonal piece written in three movements," Shadel said.

In reference to his duet with Pratt on Henri van Praag's "Sonatina," Shadel said, "I've never played with a harpist before but I'm looking forward to this arrangement. "It isn't a common duo but the instruments do go together."

Shadel and the others are all anticipating their return to Carnegie Hall. The first concert was a huge success and masterfully performed. Tickets for Sunday's show are $2 for students, $4 for others and may be obtained in the Music Building.

Zinn’s Zanies Were Just ‘Zinfu!'

Or, why did Cultural Affairs promote Zinn’s Zany First and Foremost Versatile String; musicians weren’t that bad but, selections and the dry dull HOW ABSURD!: Zinn’s Zanies, a quartet at MSC last Friday night.

not only bored but angry. The music the Zinn’s played was to represent four different periods: Classical, Ragtime, Marches and Western. An approximate audience of 100 people listened to the Zinn’s open with Francis Scott Key’s “Star Spangled Banner.” It was very unique, very like drugged Doughboy’s. The set finished with “Stars and Stripes Forever.” Eleven more people left.

The final set was supposed to represent western music. Brian Zinn dressed as a woman came out of the audience to play with his family. Thirteen people left. The Zinn’s played one song.

“Say a few words Charlie,” said Zinn to the toy monkey. The monkey clapped his symbols. Six people left.

Dressed in Gay 90’s suits, the Zinn’s failed to transform compositions by Scott Joplin and Eubie Blake. Their four string instruments could not make the transition. The monkey clapped his symbols to “The Sting,” the celloist played “Hava Nagilla” between “The Chevy Chase,” Bill Zinn played violin on his knees on “New Rag” and eight more people left during “Chile Sauce.”

Set three consisted of John Phillip Sousa marches. The foursome marched on stage in World War I uniforms, formed a chorus line and began to dance. Decomposed Rockettes died again. The Zinn’s unfortunately loved. Bill Zinn became tired. Five people left.

During the Zinn’s first march selection the quartet harmonized in some form of lyrical song. They sang, danced and looked at each other in confusion. “You can’t dance on your hands,” the cellist played “Chili Sauce.”

Fledermous Overture was the only piece of music the Zinn’s almost played straight. The light overture contained several waltz melodies between several refrains. The foursome stopped in the middle of the number, stared at the audience and continued to play as two people left.

The last classical number was Joseph Haydn’s “Un Bow Serenade.” As the title indicates only one bow is used in the string quartet. The Zinn’s exchanged the one bow between themselves. As the bow moved from man to man the others plucked their instruments. This did not have the audience rolling in the aisles. Two more people left.

A barber pole, a telephone and a mechanical toy monkey exchanged the one bow between the performers. The Zinn’s finally lived.
'Mr. Billion' A Few Thousand Short

By Jeryl Ann Franco

There is a fine line between simplicity (entertainment for entertainment's sake) and simple-mindedness (trivial amusement). Unfortunately, Mr. Billion, a Twentieth Century-Fox release written by Ken Friedman and Jonathan Kaplan, goes just a hair over in the wrong direction.

Think back to the good ol' days, if you will, when you believed Frankie and Annette and Beach Party Bingo was real life college stuff. Try to imagine this ideal "American Dream" plot where boy gets girl, money, fame, happiness, national prestige, the "bad guys" and even a chance to imitate John Wayne.

Falcone, the owner of a multi-billion dollar loan association has died. John Cutler (Jackie Gleason) has been his right-hand man for years and is sure the will has to name him as the head of the firm. But (alack and alas!) it does not. Instead, Falcone has left everything to his unknown nephew still residing in Italy, Guido Falcone (Terence Hill), because "the sugar and spice, Guido inevitably falls in love. Rosie (Valerie Perrine) is hired at quite a price by Cutler to seduce Guido into signing a release on the firm. Of course, in the midst of all this Guido and Rosie fall in love. She decides to drop the job (risking life and limb under Cutler's wrath) to which her male partner in crime's (now out $25,000) response is, "Aw, Rosie, are you falling for the guy?" Gee wiz.

There are some mildly funny scenes in the movie and even some almost romantic ones. However, not enough to excuse the incredibility of the plot. It was the silliest part of each "good wins out" movie rolled into one.

Looking from a feminine viewpoint, there was Hill, noted as the father of "Spaghetti Westerns." In his first American film, Hill's looks are very exciting. Penetrating blue eyes and all that goes with them.

Mr. Billion, a Pantheon Pictures-Kaplan/Friedman Production, directed by Jonathan Kaplan is now playing at Radio City Music Hall.

lot more to the MSC game than their famous forward.

"A lot of people tend to overlook the fact that we have four other players who complement each other very well," she said. "Admittedly we don’t have a center, but we have three forwards who can do everything well."

The Knights are more than a one player team also. In addition to Gwyn there is lanky Donna Simmons a 6-foot forward.

"Donna is a fine player who has done a lot for us," Queens coach Lucille Kyvallos noted. "She runs and jumps well."

The Knights backcourt is composed of Donna Geils and Valerie Schneider. Geils, who has been bothered lately by the flu, has 322 points in 18 games so far this season for a 17.9 average. The 5’6 Schneider does the bulk of the ball-handling and play-making for Queens.

“Our season has had moments of brilliance and hours of boredom," Kyvallos kidded. "But if we got hot we could pull an upset."

Swimmers: Tough Season

By Mary King

It’s been a tough season for MSC’s women’s swimming and diving team. But, coach Kay Meyer was not making excuses for herself. She knew what she expected for the season, what she was up against and what went wrong.

What Meyer aspired to be her best season to far, turned out to be a disappointment. Although the team exhibits a dismal record (tied one meet and lost the rest), it was not the result of any lack of effort by team members according to Meyer.

“All of the girls really put out and consistently tried their best,” emphasized Meyer. “The main problem seemed to be that there were not enough swimmers in events.”

This was partly due to an abundance of sickness among team members. However, Meyer was quick to mention that no more than the usual amount of sickness had occurred this season.

A few unexpected disappointments, namely the absence of three key swimmers from last year, confirmed Meyer’s worst fears. Among them was senior Denise Kileen, who ranked high in the Easterns last year. Kileen left a void in the butterfly, an event Meyer was counting on to be one of her team’s strongest.

In addition to the loss of these swimmers, the competition that the team swam against was some of the stiffest in the sport. However, Meyer felt that by having a rougher schedule to compete against, including such teams as Rutgers, Princeton, Monmouth, Delaware and Yale, more swimmers would be attracted to the team, more experience would be gained, and the quality of the swimming and diving program would improve.

“Montclair is fairly new to swimming compared to some schools,” Meyer added. “State colleges like Montclair do not offer scholarships in swimming, as many other colleges and state universities.”

Of the swimmers left to fill the gaps this season is three-year veteran Beth Schnur, an all-around swimmer who holds four or five school records. Her best events are the breast-stroke and the individual medley.

Sophomore Jeannette Wida, who recently came out of a leg cast, carries the backstroke, while two freshmen swimmers, Meg Leonard and Mary McKenna are counted on in the freestyle and butterfly, and the breast-stroke and freestyle, respectively.

In the developing diving competition, a ray of brightness stands out in the form of promising freshman Karen Van Schuack, who has proven herself by winning all of her competitions expect for one. She took third place in the New Jersey State AIAW Championships, ranking among top divers from schools like Princeton and Monmouth, schools well-regarded for their high-ranking divers.

Fencers To Nationals

The MSC Women’s Fencing team qualified for the National Collegiate Fencing Championships by placing second in area competition held at William Paterson College last Saturday. The Squaws finished with 19 points, two behind Fairleigh Dickenson University.

Riders Take Fourth

Montclair State College sponsored its annual collegiate riding competition, at Bear Ridge Riding Club, in Pleasantville, New York, on Sunday Feb. 27. Twenty-two colleges competed in the competition.

Montclair ranked fourth in total points, Suffolk Community College and Brooklyn College tied for first, while SUNY Stonybrook placed third.

MSC’s three first place winners were Patti Cioffi (novice horseman on the flat), Donna Cece (Beginner Alumni on the flat), and Anne Butcher (Beginner walk-trot-canter.)

 MSC's Fatal Finale

"My day started when John Minnema called to tell me that he couldn't make the trip because of root canal work. It went downhill from there," said MSC basketball coach Ollie Gelston.

In case you couldn't figure out how the evening went for Gelston — MSC lost another contest. This time the Indians were 5-4 in conference play and out of contention. The Profs took advantage of the club's dismal performance after the WPC contest.

Gelston's decision may have cost some of the younger players a bit of playing time. And it didn't improve the won-lost mark. But Gelston chose the road less travelled — he stuck with his players.

"I want to tell you what I want Gelston said in explanation. "That crap (demoting starters near the end of an unsuccessful season) is for guys on ego trips who think they win ballgames."

In two lines, Ollie Gelston has summed up his coaching philosophy.

Gelston isn't in coaching to show up on his own ego, he doesn't go to Gelston, coaches for his players — which is how it is supposed to be.

In a competitive, often cut-throat situation, where the won-lost column is the only thing that matters, Gelston finds his players human feelings more important. In a small world dominated by Woody Hayes who pay lip service to the virtues of inter-collegiate athletics, Gelston carries them out in fact.

"But does he win games?" The cynics might scoff and ask. But does he win games? The answer is yes. Since arriving at MSC Gelston's record is 158-94, and he has won four conference titles. Not too bad for a nice guy.

Gelston's road is less travelled for a good reason — it leaves him wide open to the critics. This season the questions will fly in light of the club's dismal performance after the WPC contest.

Gelston's decision may have cost some of the younger players a bit of playing time. And it didn't improve the won-lost mark. But put in terms of human feelings — it has made all the difference.

MSC's Fatal Finale

The Indians were paced by Keith Murray's 17 tallies, Reggie Belcher had 11 and Doug Brown added 12 for MSC.

"We ran out of gas," said Gelston. "We were thin. Belcher had to play the whole game and John Manning got into early foul trouble."

The Profs took advantage of MSC problems and regained control to hammer out their second consecutive title.

Gelston offered no excuses for the loss.

"It was not a performance to be proud of. We didn't concentrate and lacked intensity after they jumped on us in the first half. We just played poorly," he concluded.

If you think back, you will remember that one year ago the MSC wrestling team outdistanced John Carroll University, 143-108, to win the NCAA Division III Nationals.

Winners Vince Tundo, Ricky Freitas, Dante Caprio and Dom DiGiacobino, runnerup Mike Blackey, and third place finishers George Kacavas, Greg DiGiacobino, and Steve Caldwell provided the strength needed to take home that coveted award.

It is again that time of year, and team captain Ricky Freitas will lead the grapplers in their quest to defend their national title. The action gets under way on Friday at State University of New York at Binghamton, and continues on Saturday with the 10 winners and three wildcards advancing to wrestle in the NCAA Division I Championships next week at the University of Oklahoma.

The Indians will enter the tournament with eight wrestlers, which will make the task of retaining the title a little more difficult than if they had a full team. The toughest team opposition in this tournament will be from John Carroll University and Millersville State College.

The MSC lineup will start with Marc Maleck (7-14) at 118. Maleck qualifies by virtue of his third place finish in the Mets.

Jeff Mase (18-3-1) will wrestle at 126 for the Indians. Mike Blackey (19-7-1) and Ken Mallory (26-2-1) will wrestle off for the 134 pound slot. Blackey, who finished second last year to JCU's Mark Hayward-Cale, got a wildcard berth in 1976 and therefore went to the Division I championships.

Returning to defend his national title, Freitas (17-8) will wrestle at 142.

Walt Bennett (7-4) returns to action to represent the Indians at 158. Roger Bogsted (12-11), a runnerup in the Mets, will grapple at 167.

Rounding out the team, Art Sopela (21-8-6) will trip up in the unlimited weight class.

In wrestling action last week, MSC dropped two decisions to Wilkes College, 30-15, and Penn State University, 41-7. Mase won two decisions for the Indians, Mallory won one and tied one, and Sopela pinned his Wilkes opponent while settling for a draw with the Penn State heavyweight.

TAKEDOWNS: The MSC wrestlers finished with a 9-8 dual meet record in this, a somewhat disappointing season for rookie coach Rich Sofman ...

Squaws Take Two

It's now 20 victories in 22 games as MSC's women's basketball team took two more contests during the past week.

On Saturday the Squaws defeated Southern Connecticut State College by a score of 99-83 at Panzer Gymnasium. MSC then travelled to St. John's University Tuesday night and gained a 76-60 victory. The wins extend the Squawks streak to eight straight games.

In Saturday's contest, MSC led by 17 points at half-time and seemed to be breezing along. But the nation's fourth ranked team got into a jam late in the game and let Southern Connecticut close to within five points of their once comfortable lead.

But when Jan Ternyik came off the bench to relieve Wanda Szeremeta (four foul trouble) the game swung back into MSC's favor. Ternyik scored three big baskets, for a total of seven points, to spark the victory.

"Jan did a fine job when we needed it," Squaw coach Maureen Wendelken noted. "Her three quick baskets cooled them off."

Carol Blazejowski once again led all scorers with 38 points. The All-American forward hit on 16 of 28 field goals. Pat Colanardo led the game in rebounds with 15, grabbed five steals and also picked up 18 points. Szeremeta rounded out the double figure scoring with 20 points on the day.

If Saturday's 38-point performance wasn't impressive enough, Blazejowski topped that effort against St. John's in Jamaica New York. She racked up a total of 47 points and simultaneously collected 16 rebounds - both obviously game leading figures.

Szeremeta added 10 points and pulled down 11 rebounds for MSC.

For St. John's, Sue Brethauer was the leading scorer. She collected 18 points for her team. Hou Lingling chipped in 12 points. St. John's drops to a very impressive 18-6.

NOTES: Last MSC lose came at the hands of Immaculata College back on Feb. 5. Next opponent is Queens College this Sunday at Madison Square Garden at 11:00 AM. This game is the first half of a twinbill which includes a contest between top-ranked teams Delta State College and Immaculata. The Nationals begin next week and the Squaws are second seeded in the Regionals.

BASKETBALL MOUNTAIN: Wanda Szeremeta(23) and Jill Jeffrey(10) poised for action on the opening tipoff in Saturday afternoon's contest.

Bright Lights, Big City

By Bill Mezzomo

In case you're not up on the latest official proclamations, it was proclaimed Women's Basketball Week in New York City this Tuesday. And it's no coincidence that the year's biggest women's doubleheader will be played at the Mecca of Eastern basketball Madison Square Garden this weekend. It is also no coincidence that the Garden staged a full-fledged press conference to announce this occasion.

The participants: Delta State College, Immaculata College, Queens College... and yes, MSC. Just three out of the nations' four top teams.

The Squaws will face Queens College this Sunday in the first half of this twinbill starting at 11:00 AM. Although MSC beat the Knights twice last season (and their opponents sport a moderate 15-10 record), this game will be no cakewalk.

"Their record isn't really any indication of how well they can play," Squaw coach Maureen Wendelken noted. "Queens lost some early games, but they're really a fine team."

Fine enough to employ the national's leading rebounder. Not just the leading rebounder in women's basketball, but THE leading rebounder in the country (that's women's and men's). She is 6'-foot-2 Althea Gwyn who hauls in 19 a game.

"We'll attempt to neutralize their rebounding by mixing it up with a number of defenses," Wendelken said. "We'll use a zone at times and man-to-man coverage depending upon the situation."

"We would like to fast break against Queens as often as possible, but it depends on how well we do off the boards."

Wendelken isn't worried about her team's performance in the prestigious and pressure-filled atmosphere of the Garden.

"Our game at the Spectrum (a loss to Immaculata) was a big game too, so we shouldn't be bothered by the pressure. The crowd didn't effect us then, we just committed turnovers at the end of the game."

Needless to say, the Squaws will once again be led by Carol Blazejowski and her 33-point a game scoring average. But according to Wendelken there's a.....

Now The Nationals

The culmination of the wrestling season begins this weekend and the MSC matmen are once again heading for the Nationals in quest of the Division III crown. For a preview of the upcoming action, turn to Dennis Buckley's article on page 23.

No Ego Problem

Some coaches have ego problems, but there are some coaches who turn their efforts toward the emotional welfare of their players. According to writer Matt Wilson, MSC has one of the latter. To learn more, flip over and read "On the Run" on page 23.
