The SGA Legislature, in an effort to better familiarize themselves with legislative procedure and the internal workings of MSC, went on an excursion into the Catskill Mountains this weekend. This is the first such leadership conference in over seven years to be held off campus and, the approximate cost was $5,000.

Led by SGA President Charles Sahner, the Legislature and most of the Class One presidents attended a series of workshops on Saturday and Sunday designed to acquaint them with one another as well as with Roberts Rules of Order.

"The whole idea was to get everyone to know each other," Sahner said. "Once they were on a first name basis, they would be better able to relate." Members of the Administration were invited by the Chief Executive to give the Legislators a better perspective on the $500,000 student-run Corporation and student related problems on campus.

Sporting blue jeans and a sweatshirt, Lawton W. Blanton, Dean of Students, spoke to the delegation on Saturday morning, giving them a concise history of the SGA.

"This is a positive step toward making the SGA a tighter unit," Tom Stepnowski, Director of Student Activities, was the last Administrator to speak at the conference. He urged the students to cooperate with the Student Activities Office, and stated that if everyone worked together more could be accomplished.

Edward Martin, Assistant Dean of Students, had similar thoughts and even went to a few parties during the evening to get better acquainted with the students.

"This Legislature is a semester ahead of themselves right now, and they have this conference to thank for it," he admitted.

By a booklet outlining key Administrators and their functions, Sahner explained to the group who ran the College.

"David Dickson is the President of this college," Sahner said, "and it is indeed he who runs it.

Sahner also extended special thanks to Blanton.

"It isn't out of the ordinary for a Dean of Students to dress in a pair of jeans and shirts leaned up to the Catskills to attend a student conference."

Sahner, who realized the potential of this type of conference when he was running for office in May, extended much of the credit to his second in command, Frank Cosolito, SGA Vice President, along with Keith Ansbaecher, Treasurer, and Mary Ann Cerino, Executive Secretary.

MBA May Be In the Works

By Mary Ann DeFiore

Due to a clogged drain in the kitchen dishwasher, the Student Center Cafeteria was recently closed, causing inconvenience to many commuter and off-campus students who normally frequent the facility. It is believed that a sewer blockage in the pipes was the reason for the problem, which also caused the Second, Third, and Fourth Floor lavatories to be temporarily closed.

Thomas F. Stepnowski, Director of Student Activities, took the precautionary measure of closing down the Cafeteria and bathrooms in order to prevent any further complications from occurring. Henry Nesbitt, Food Service Director, was also glad to have the facility temporarily shut down in order to prevent the kitchen staff from slipping on the water, which overflowed onto the floor from the clogged drain.

"I personally stopped all employees from working so they would not get hurt," Nesbitt said.

The food service area of the Cafeteria was closed for approximately four and a half hours on Sept. 18, as well as for a few hours on the previous Thursday. The exact amount of lost revenue from the non-functioning Cafeteria is not known, but Stepnowski stated ...we took a beating... due to the large number of students who sought refuge in the Student Center from the rain outside. However, the dining area of the Cafeteria did remain open the entire time.

Stepnowski, sitting comfortably slouched in his chair, said that he certainly hopes this won't be a recurring problem, but there is no way to predict whether or not it will happen again. One remedy he is counting on, though, is the

MSC Gets Its Fill

By Sue Kobylarz

After years of bungling back and forth, the question of the proposed Carrino Landfill operation now remains poised in mid-air. Since its inception, angry students and residents of surrounding communities have banded together in an effort to block the project, which, though having some long-run advantages, now at best seems problematic and tenuous.

Several weeks ago, MSC advertised for bids to fill an area totaling 7 acres near the New Jersey Public Television tower, across the way from the Clove Road apartment complex. The idea was to do it at minimal cost so that the space could eventually be turned into athletic fields.

MSC received a bid from the Carillo Co. Trucking Co., of Belleville, to use sanitary landfill in the hole. When the contract was signed in February of 1975, the Dept. of Environmental Protection Agency stipulated that the entire bottom of the space must be lined with clay. Below this clay, pipes had to be installed for moisture into an underlying tank to prevent it from seeping into the ground.

Carrino was also bound by this contract to pour clay liner over each area of fill that had been dumped into the hole.

Despite all of these stipulations, the disposal of Little Falls was upset at the prospect of dumping on land which would be under the College's disposal, is technically in that city. During the Summer of 1975, the townpeople not only picketed the site but sought an injunction against Carrino to prevent dumping.

Such court action was the first in a long series that followed after Carrino started working without fulfilling its contract requirements. Garbage began flowing into the space, which Carrino had agreed to install. Later, because of the outage of the surrounding towns of Little Falls, Montclair, and Clifton, MSC also sought action. On Sept. 3, 1975, MSC President Richard Dickson sent a letter to Carrino terminating the contract, citing the violation of the contract.

Dickson admitted sometime afterward that originally the landfill seemed like a good idea, but the entire project should have been investigated more carefully before MSC became involved.

On Sept. 15, 1975, MSC filed a suit in the Passaic County Superior Court against Carrino through Sherre Gibble, the State Attorney General. The court ruled that MSC had the right to cancel the contract, and a supplemental hearing was held before the Public Utilities Commission (PUC). It seems that, in addition to the other breaches, Carrino had a contract with the New York Carillo Co. to dump on the Little Falls site, although he had previously testified before the PUC that he was the sole party involved.

Carrino appealed the decision favoring MSC, claiming that the College's main reason for its case was to keep a good relationship with Little Falls. The decision was reversed. The issue was then brought before the NJ State Supreme Court, which in February of this year refused to hear the case.

But Little Falls still had its own ideas of how to stop Carrino. Its court action involving the right to regulate landfills within its town failed but is currently being appealed. The Dept. of Environmental Protection must also give them a hearing on the situation, which it has yet to do. No further activity can legally resume at the site until Little Falls and Carrino have resolved their differences.

Sitting right in the middle of the MSC-Carrino Litte Falls triangle is the Clove Road apartment complex. Residents are upset not only at the thought of garbage trucks traveling their street all day, but at the prospective rate, insects and odors would be the duration of the contract—an estimated two to four years.

Cafeteria Flooded

During the Summer of 1975, students were able to remain open during this time, while those on the other floors were forced to close. The First Floor, being underground, has its sewage pumped up to ground level by itself. But the two highest floors have their sewage flow downward to the Second Floor which is on ground level. By cutting off these other sources, Stepnowski wished to avert any additional problems which might have occurred besides that in the Cafeteria kitchen.

Both Stepnowski and Nesbitt emphasized that there was no health hazard involved with this problem, and both are happy that the Cafeteria is running normally again.

Leadership Conference

Cosolito, the chief organizer of the conference, was pleased with the results of the weekend at the Echo Hotel.

"We hoped to establish a bond rapport within the Legislature so they would work together in the future," Cosolito explained.

"I think that everyone got something out of this conference," he said with a smile, "We learned about each other."

The learning process described by Cosolito took many forms.

For starters, the group opened the weekend with an "encounter session" led by Dick Gray from the Office of Student Personnel Services and Graduate Assistant Glenn Braswell. The purpose of the encounter session, according to Braswell, was to alleviate any tension within the group.

James Harris, Assistant Dean of Students, picked up the theme and opened a seminar on the problems of minority students on campus. Harris cited a few organizations, including the MONTCLARION, that have not done their best to actively recruit minority members.

"You really don't know what it is like to be a minority student who gets the cold shoulder from an organization," he said.

For the most part, it seemed that the legislators reacted favorably to the workshops and actually enjoyed the entire concept of an encounter/workshop weekend.

Because the nature and purpose of the conference was to get the students who will be leaders in the upcoming year familiar with one another, the social aspect on Sunday was almost as important as the workshops themselves.

Springsteen Fired

The Athletic Center at Rutgers University in New Brunswick has come under fire during the past week, according to Greg Sedlacek, Editor-in-Chief of the Rutgers Daily Targum. The $8.1 million Center was built a couple of years ago for the use of the University basketball team and the New Jersey Nets (until the Meadowlands court is built).

Students felt that the 8000 seat Center would be a good place for a concert, and they would like to hold a Bruce Springsteen concert there on October 31. Unfortunately, the Center has been booked for a basketball practice on that day, and Tom Young, head basketball coach, steadfastly refuses to move his practice to another smaller gym.

According to Sedlacek, the Student Government passed a referendum to demand an allocation committee for the Center, which would be comprised of students and administrators. In the meantime, the Athletic Dept. controls schedule for the Center and gives priority to athletics. According to Sedlacek, the Center is booked for basketball practices or games every day through April 1, 1979.

Media Turned Down

Ramapo College student organizations face a severe budget crunch this year, as all budgets were cut. Funds for two organizations were completely cut off. According to the Horizons, Ramapo's student newspaper, the yearbook and the radio station were not funded.

Monies are derived from student fees. All students pay $1.70 per credit for "Student Life." The money goes to the Student Finance Board where it is allocated to each club. The Board felt that there was not enough interest in the Yearbook to warrant giving them money. According to Neil Rubino, Editor-in-Chief of the Horizons, the radio station submitted a reduced budget, and therefore, the Board did not consider it.

According to Rubino, there is still a few hundred dollars to be allocated, so there is a possibility that the radio station will be funded.

FDU Is All Wet

A letter writing campaign is beginning at Fairleigh Dickinson's Teaneck campus. According to Fern Terlinsky, News Editor of the Gauntlet, the Student Government passed a resolution forming a committee to write letters to legislators in Trenton.

The campaign will involve the community in opposing an amendment to change the drinking age. The bill currently under consideration will raise the drinking age from 18 to 19. A vote will be conducted in approximately two weeks. A second bill is currently being written which will raise the minimum age back to 21.

Some Changes

Changes have taken place at New Jersey Institute of Technology (NJIT). According to Pat Chumbley, Editor-in-Chief of the Vector, student newspaper, the College now has its sixth President.

Saul K. Fenster was appointed NJIT President. Fenster comes to NJIT from Fairleigh Dickinson's Rutherford campus as the result of a six-month nationwide search. Fenster replaces Charles Bergmann, who retired last year.

Other changes include a new Dean of Students. Constance Murray Murray was formerly Associate Dean of Students at Cornell University in Ithaca, New York. She succeeds Arthur Shukur, Professor Physics and Acting Dean of Students.

State Rates Basic Skills

The Board of Higher Education, which funded the testing program, has not currently involved itself with setting cut-off scores for compulsory remediation. This is a function of the college faculty. Each college is free to set up and evaluate its own programs.

The Basic Skills Council and the Educational Testing Service (ETS) formulated the test. The English portion is a revision of a test currently in use in California. The Math section is new; it was developed by the Council and ETS. It is graded by ETS, unless the colleges exercise their option to grade the tests themselves. MSC did not exercise this option. "No serious objections to the tests have surfaced," Lutz reported. "I think it is better than anything around, and I've reviewed an awful lot of tests."

This is the first time this test has been administered on such a large scale; it will provide some interesting data. Never before has a testing program such as this one been conducted. Freshman class in NJ has been surveyed in such a manner. This information will identify high schools with poor college preparatory programs, and it will act as an instrument to gauge the effectiveness of the SAT's.

Finally, and most importantly, it will provide a data base from which the colleges can begin more effective remedial programs.

Brantl Remembered

By Robert Eustace

If there is one characteristic above all else that could portray George Brantl, it would be this: his emphasis of a shared humanity among men. He was a man who could relate to people from all walks of life. In essence, he wasn't afraid to be human (with all the attributes and the shortcomings that make up the human condition).

I was a student of his, twice over. While in his classes, I came to know the charm, the grace, the hilarity, the introspection, and spontaneity. He expressed a some of the anxiety that comes along with being a fine teacher of Oriental and Western philosophies as well as an active chairman. At times he could be vulgar in the way he slurred his words in rampant rushes of poetry and then he would slow down. Looking inwardly he would say something, almost to himself—like thinking out loud with all the subtle nuances of a fine actor. Then in a burst he would sing the opera Bel Canto. Classes with George Brantl were like an event not to be missed.

I cannot begin to think of all the peoples' lives he has touched and made richer in experience. I've sat down with him—not many times—but on a handful of occasions at the end of last semester. There was a time when I shared with him some drawings that had a quality similar to Zen drawing, based on empty space and spontaneity. He expressed a genuine delight in these and offered me some helpful suggestions based on his knowledge of the subject. He was a man who had the time.

In closing I'd like to say that you never realize the ultimate value of somebody or something until it is gone. But in retrospect we find something to focus back and reflect on.

Elam Feels MSC Qualifies for MBA

By Mary Ann DeFiore

MSC may be the possible site for the establishment of a Graduate Program in Business Administration, according to Houston G. Elam, Dean of the School of Professional Arts and Sciences. Among the other state colleges being considered for this program are: Jersey City State, Kean College, Ramapo, and William Paterson.

There is a need for such a program in this area, since there is no Business Administration Graduate Program in any state or public college in Northern NJ except for Rutgers (Newark). "The State Dept. of Higher Education requested a panel of three Deans from three respected universities outside of NJ to study the feasibility of a Master of Business Administration (MBA) program in Northern NJ," Elam said.

This graduate level professional degree is the most common degree in the country for businessmen. It is a two-year program consisting of 51-56 credits and allows a person to be better prepared for jobs in the business field, as well as giving him a good chance of receiving higher positions.

"The MBA provides more extensive study and more analytical depth of information," Elam commented.

As a side note, Elam proudly acknowledged that MSC's BS graduates in Business Administration are superior to those from all other NJ colleges. He also added that for the past two out of three years, MSC graduates have received the highest scores on the NJ Certified Public Accountant (CPA) exam.

The three Deans who made up the MBA Consulting Committee were given the task of deciding whether or not a program such as this would be worthwhile. They had several objectives to decide upon—Is there a need for a new MBA program? Would a new program duplicate existing resources? Would it create unfair competition for private colleges (who have MBA programs) in Northern NJ? Could a new program develop into a quality program for Northern NJ people?

Upon completion of their study of the prospective colleges, the Committee submitted their results and evaluation to the Dept. of Higher Education, who in turn made recommendations to the Board of Higher Education. Their final decision should come in the very near future.

Elam, sitting at his office conference table relaxed and at ease, said he feels rather optimistic about the Board's decision. He feels MSC is extremely well-qualified to receive this MBA program and explained in detail the presentation that was made to the Committee on their Aug. 29 visit to the College campus. It consisted of a formal presentation by the College Administration and Dept. Chairmen who spoke about various aspects of the College, such as the development of the undergraduate BS program, the ideal central location of MSC, and the many resources available at MSC.

Also included was an approximately 120 page booklet, compiled by MSC faculty and staff under the direction of Elam. This booklet noted many of the achievements of MSC, the high caliber of its faculty, the strength of its BS undergraduate program, which incidentally has been a part of the MSC curriculum for only the past seven years. It also included a proposal for the program requirements if MSC is granted permission to undertake this MBA program.

In his friendly and informative manner, Elam went on to prophesize what would probably happen if MSC were given the MBA program. A prospective list of course requirements would be offered for consideration and approval to the Board of Higher Education. This approval would most likely come within the year.

Also, MSC would have to assess all of its resources and see if any additional monies would be needed to fund this program. But, Elam said, they will see to it that the undergraduates will continue to be served adequately by the College programs.

The three Deans who did the actual evaluating were H. J. Hoffer, Dean of the University of Pittsburgh; Robert J. Senker, Dean of Fordham University; and Emery C. Turner, former Dean of the University of Missouri at St. Louis, now associated with the University of Tulsa. All three have experience with the Graduate Business Programs at their respective colleges and were appointed to the Consulting Committee upon the unanimous approval of the five state colleges being surveyed.

Committee Searches For New Calendar

By Bill Petzinger

One issue that was found to be a popular topic of discussion in the past few months the Calendar Committee has been searching for an appropriate calendar that would be suitable to the students, faculty, and administrators. But as of yet, there have been no major breakthroughs.

MSC President David W.D. Dickson has been given all the information pertaining to the conflict that arose last February, and MSC is awaiting his final decision. When this will be is uncertain.

The five members on the Calendar Committee that are in favor of keeping the present calendar are Robert Dorner, American Federation of Teachers (AFT) rep.; Harold Flint, At-large faculty rep.; Lois Reid, Student Services rep.; Kay Wilkins Faculty Senate rep.; and Nora Wilson graduate student rep. The new student rep to the Committee this school year is Keith Ambachey, SGA Treasurer.

Of the six members of the Committee that are opposed to the present calendar are Marshall Butler, Registrar's Office rep.; Frederick Kelly, chairman's rep.; Richard Lynde, Dean's Council rep. and chairman of Committee; Charles Moore, Business Services rep.; Marian Fregelitch, librarian's rep.; and William Welch, non-teaching professionals' rep.

All of those Committee members who are in favor of the present calendar are faculty or student affiliated, whereas those who support a change are all administration or staff.

Butler is opposed to the present calendar because he feels it is "not educationally sound." With the present calendar, Butler believes the students are not doing the type of college work they should be doing. By this he means the teachers may be too easy on the students by omitting term papers.

Jules Korzeniowski, student rep. to the Committee last year, favored the present calendar.

"The two best arguments to support the present calendar are the difficulty that students have coming back after Christmas and the maintenance of the present Winter Session," he said.

"I hope that the plans will be made long-range and not left to be decided at the last minute in December," Korzeniowski added.

There are basically four plans being considered by the College Calendar Committee.

The two proposals for the plan which are under primary consideration are Plan A, the calendar used at the present time where the Fall Semester begins just before Labor Day and would end before Christmas. But this plan requires unbalanced semesters of approximately 77 Fall days and 83 Spring days. Under Plan B, the Fall Semester would start after Labor Day (or September 5 of the '78 and '79 calendar), and then there would be a week or so of classes and final exams after Christmas. Both Plans A and B have three 50-minute class meetings per week.

The other two alternatives which have been discussed by the Committee are Plan C, which states that there should be a calendar of two 80-minute class meetings per week. This plan would have two 15-week balanced semesters, and the Fall Semester would end before Christmas (or about December 22). Plan D is made up of two 14-week semesters and a four-week intersession. This plan would increase the class meetings to 180 minutes per week or two 90-minute class meetings.

Out of the four plans, Plan A was preferred by the faculty and students. Formal and informal surveys indicate that Plan B is considered undesirable to the faculty members by a three to one margin.

Another problem facing the Committee concerns the Winter Session. Irwin H. Gawley, Vice President for Academic Affairs, would cut down the amount of required hours to the Winter Session. This could shorten it from three to two weeks.

Harold Flint, Assistant Professor of Economics and a faculty rep. on the Committee, believes that this is "destroying the Winter Session."

Surveys taken show that faculty opinion is in favor of keeping the Winter Session by a margin of four to one.

Flint feels strongly in favor of keeping the Winter Session because it "encourages the development of innovative courses, institutionalizes the incentive and the opportunity to develop innovative course offerings." He adds, "this is a powerful reason for keeping the Winter Session."

A survey taken shows by a margin of 90 to 19 the strong feeling of saving the Winter Session and keeping it at a length of three to four weeks.
Opportunity Knocks

For the first time in seven years, the SGA Legislature has an opportunity to accomplish something that previous student governing bodies have not had the chance to.

Thanks to Charles Sahner, SGA President, the Legislature now has a working knowledge of Parliamentary procedures, Robert’s Rules of Order and a general history of the SGA. They now have the tools to actually serve the student body they represent.

This achievement was accomplished last weekend in the Catskill Mountains at a remote resort called the Echo Hotel. During this leadership conference, Sahner made good on his promise to take the Legislature and the Class One presidents on a weekend excursion to train them for the upcoming academic year.

The response of the participants at the conference was positive and the general feeling of the Legislators was that it was a success. Certainly the executive board (Sahner, Frank Cosolito, Vice President; Keith Ansbacher, Treasurer; and Mary Ann Cerino, Executive Secretary) feels that they accomplished their objectives.

But can judgement really be passed on a seed that was planted only last week? Moreover, can anyone decide whether or not the $5,000 expenditure for a weekend of encounter workshops and technical lectures was really worth the money?

We think not.

This conference cannot and must not be judged prematurely. The proof of its value lies in the months ahead. There are many crucial issues facing the students of MSC in the upcoming academic year, such as parking, basic skills, the Master Plan and the eventual fate of the college under the Flagshipping Program. It will be these issues that truly test not only the worth of leadership conferences, but the fiber of the Legislature itself.

The pressure, then, is on the student leaders that make up the Legislature. Sahner, despite some criticism from skeptics, has done his share.

It is up to the Fourth Floor elite to make it work.

Congratulations Nadar!

The MONTCLARION would like to congratulate Nadar Tavakoli on his election as the SGA Legislature’s President Pro-Tempore for the academic year 1978.

Although his opponent, Jeff Kaplan, is a well respected and highly liked figure in the Legislature this year, we feel that the election of Tavakoli is a crucial step toward the development of the SGA as a responsible representative body for the students of MSC. The Legislature showed a lot of character by electing someone on the basis of qualifications rather than popularity.

We think it was a wise choice (even though there will be no Toga Party).

“The Basic Skills Tests were not adequate to test what should have been learned in high school. I think the tests should have been harder. Your test results tell you how you did, what you should do, and what not to do. They are helpful in placement. You don’t want to go through life and end up in an embarrassing situation. I feel the Math section was very important but also the English section because it’s important to know how to speak.”

“I thought the tests were a pretty easy. I didn’t like it at all, and I didn’t like having to go and take them, but it was required, so I did it. I don’t even know why we have to take the tests. It’s probably because it’s very easy to pass high school without having these basic skills.”

— Gary Flynn

Uncommitted/1982

“It was like any other test. It was pretty much what it said, fairly basic, not too much detail. Most of the questions were on what you should know from high school. I think it’s a good idea because the Administration should know how much a student has learned. This way, classes could be planned around what you know, and special classes could be planned for people who need help in special areas.”

Sin Loudly

By Stan Godlewski

This past Friday afternoon, I watched through a misty rain as a pair of tow trucks, contracted by MSC, hauled away two autos whose owners had committed the latest Mortal Sin on campus, that of neglecting to park a vehicle within a designated area. Apparently, Ms. Jayne Rich, MSC's new Director of Security and Safety, is making her threats directed at those commuters who find themselves in the unfortunate predicament of having a car on campus, and no place to park it. Under the supervision of our Campus Police, the trucks latched onto the offending cars before the eyes of a steady stream of homebound students who, though occasionally looking out of curiosity, appeared to take no serious interest in what was taking place.

Upon finding one of the cars locked, a member of one of the tow truck crews broke into the vehicle quite easily, using the old wire-hanger-between-the-wheather-stripping-and-the-window-trick. As he laid bare the car's interior, his buddy gave him a light round of applause, to which he responded with a bow.

A third truck now appeared on the scene, and began a methodical search of the upper parking lots. If anyone else had parked "illegally", I'm sure he found them.

Over by the Admin Bldg, the ends of the cars were raised high into the air, and the tow trucks bunched and belched their way in arrogtance toward the exit.

The rain was falling harder now, and I couldn't help but think of those who would come forward to find what had happened. They'd try to get in touch with family or friends, locate the garage which held their car, pay a minimum of forty dollars, and eventually get home feeling furious and disgrusted, to say the least.

And those who walked by and watched as it happened? They probably talked about it, maybe even complain a little (to each other), but no response of any value would come of it. The tow trucks will rumble through the campus again today, tomorrow and the day after that as well tow away the cars of whoever couldn't find a space on that morning.

The parking problems present today at MSC are no different from those of years past. Students still spend twenty minutes wandering in vain about the parking lots searching for a space, the main difference now being that there is an abundance of Campus Policemen waving us this way and that, providing a more ordered chaos than that which we've had in the past. Follow their directions and you'll find yourself out on Normal Avenue, presumably parking five blocks off campus, which is not the reason behind the purchase of a ten dollar parking decal.

Parking on any college campus has always been an ordeal, but one with which people can generally cope. They keep their cars and the towing of cars after breaking into them, however, is an offense on the part of the MSC Security Division with which it is very difficult to deal. Towing automobiles at the expense of the students will do little to solve the problem, and will in fact only create hard feelings between the students and administration. Only with improved facilities can, as Rich stated, "...problems, such as our historic traffic and parking dilemmas, be resolved."

Measures bordering on harassment will solve nothing. The Administration may have gotten a little carried away with its assault on neglecting to park a vehicle within a designated area. The towing of autos whose owners have committed the Mortal Sin of neglecting to park a vehicle within a designated area is very difficult to deal. Towing automobiles at the expense of the students will do little to solve the problem, and will in fact only create hard feelings between the students and administration. MSC's Answer To Animal House

By Matt Wilson

An advertisement for National Lampoon's Animal House bills the flick as "What everyone remembers college as, but probably wasn't." But after spending a Thursday night on the MSC campus last week, I can state with confidence that the authors of that slogan never went to a Clove Rd. party.

No, John Belushi did not show up in a pirate suit. Nor did a 13 year old woman-child attempt to seduce me on Sprague Field. Nonetheless, I was vividly impressed.

As I sat in the living room of the colleague I was visiting at 10 PM, I strained to hear some sound of the chaos that I was promised. Silence. I wondered if all the horror stories had any basis in fact.

They did. At 10:30 the action picked up considerably. The apartment was visited by an individual whose extensive experience with pot enabled her to tell me, after a mere toke and quick glance at the seeds, that the pot in question was "low grade Columbian.

Low grade indeed. Within an hour we were wearing umbrella hats (to keep the rain inside the apartment off us), sunglasses (to protect against the blinding sun), munching dry triscuts and bubbling like loons.

Outside, the noise of a few voices soon became the collective roar of a crowd, as an incredibly high-powered stereo blasted a driving disco beat. I was transfixed. It was 11:30 and time to continue my research outside.

The crowd was enormous. An apartment, built to house four, held close to 80. Lingued four abreast, people extended from the door of the apartment, down the steps, around the walk, finally spilling into the parking lot. All were trying to shove their way inside.

As I neared the door, the music which I long enough to make one yell to be heard in the parking lot, exceeded the decibel level of a landing SST. Inside the living room, which I could now see, 80 pulsating people attempted to dance without spilling beer all over themselves. They almost succeeded.

Suddenly I was propelled through the door. Bouncing off a buxom young lady I was quickly pinned to the right foot speaker. My fillings fell out.

Despite the pain, I vowed to continue. The quest to obtain facts drove me inexorably forward.

"Do you party like this often?" I screamed at one young lovely. No answer. She merely closed her eyes and did the "freak", a dance designed specifically for crowded occasions that demands only a swaying lateral movement.

Two more attempts produced similar results. I deduced that everyone was stone deaf and turned to leave.

If getting into a Clove Rd. apartment in the throes of a party can be termed an adventure, then getting out of that same space can only be called an odyssey. I had embarrassingly intimate body contact with at least 25 of the guests.

It took me 45 minutes but I finally made it to the door. Safely outside, I paused for a moment's reflection. Next week, I decided, I'll get the quotes before I get inside.

Happy Hunting

By Charles Sahner

In this era of flagshipping, plateau enrollments, and rising student fees, I feel it's time for students to stand up and ask some vital questions. Why is the MSC Administration scrambling aboard the "recruiting-marketing concept" bandwagon, when the most effective device for attracting students in the 1980's will be the impressions and enrollments, and rising student fees, I feel it's time for students to stand up and demand better treatment. Talk before you tip off.

To the Editor:

One of the more timely exhibits to be shown at MSC in many years is now appearing in the Sprague Library. In it, we are shown photographs of Nazi atrocities during W II. The group sponsoring this is the "American Federation of Jewish Fighters."

Many of these photographs graphically show what can happen to an unsuspecting democracy — the Weimar Republic — if people don't fight back, often with violence.

Although titled, "The Holocaust and Resistance," out of 33 pictures, only three showed any level of resistance. In fact, the leading nation involved in fighting back, the Soviet Union, is only mentioned once and in the following context: "The outbreak of war between the Soviet Union and Germany marked the beginning of mass extermination of Jews.

This Zionist garbage obscures the fact that the USSR, under socialism, fought the I's share of the war, and was principally involved in defeating the Nazis.

Beyond that, the exhibit never mentions the millions of Communists, Catholics; and other "non-arian" races that were slaughtered. The exhibit confines itself to the same kind of racist nationalism that killed 130 million people in WW II.

Most importantly, the exhibit never calls question to our society. With the racist Bakke decision, Proposition 13, and the ruling class's support of the Nazis and the Ku Klux Klan (resulting in their incredible growth and open terror in recent years), the exhibit never mentions the most important lesson of all. That is, that we must fight back against racism and nationalism and for violent socialist revolution. Only then can we be sure that such fascists will never raise their ugly heads again.

Frankie Plays Around

By Marion Clarke

Any student who has been around the MSC campus for a while might recognize the new SGA Vice-President's name - Frank Cosolito - but not in exclusive connection with the SGA.

Besides interweaving many of his interests with MSC, he still has some he has not shared with the student body.

Some students may have seen him playing guitar at Catacombs. He never took lessons, to which he added, "I regret not taking them," and joked, "but I haven't any career plans." In high school he sang in the Male Ensemble and has played other coffee-houses. "My brother is an incredible musician. He plays the guitar, saxophone, trombone, drums, and a little piano. My sister, who also attends MSC, also sings and plays a little piano," he said.

About four weeks from now Cosolito will be playing at a wedding with his brother, sister, and fiancee, whom he plans on marrying in May, 1980.

A Marketing and Management major with a minor in Psychology and a concentration in Political Science, he is also interested in Jyifaifet Camping, and photography.

In a karate style called Koeikan he has a second green belt. For two and a half years in high school he studied it, and in his Senior year he went to Fairleigh Dickinson in Teaneck for lessons. Upon coming to MSC he joined the Karate Club and was social director for awhile.

For four out of the five seasons Jungle Habitat was open Cosolito worked in the photography dept. He commented, "It was probably my best four years of work." He was only 16 when he applied, but was soon supervisor. This entailed setting up exhibits to photograph the animals while also doing inventory and scheduling. Shortly before it closed he was doing promotional work for Warner Brothers.

One of Cosolito's biggest interests at MSC has been the Management Club of which he was President. Last Spring he and other members of the club started a printing business, a resume and poster service which is just about ready to get underway later on this semester. They got the press on loan from the Media Center. Now they are getting the machines and needed locks, Cosolito explained, "It's practical experience for the students as well as a service to the student body." He continued, "There's no labor or overhead which means we can provide a cheaper service. The revenue we receive can be used to expand." It is located in College High.

This Summer Cosolito went by motorcycle to Niagara Falls and Lake George. He owns a Honda 400, a midsize bike, and camped along the way. He has done extensive traveling in the US. Every year his father, who is the Director of Environmental Safety for NJ, takes a month's vacation and tours the country with his family.

Cosolito also likes to ride his motorcycle on short trips. He and SGA President Charlie Sahner have ridden to Trenton together for meetings.

In addition to his work in the SGA and school he has continued to hold his part-time job off-campus.

Co-op Council Created

By Jerry Appell

The MSC Cooperative Education Advisory Council is a newly formed independent committee whose role is to act as a liaison to and from the local working community.

The Council includes representatives from both the College and local industry who furnish the Co-op Office with information related to areas such as job markets, labor relations, and changes in industrial technology. Robert McCaffrey, Council Director, feels one further function is to give the Co-op Office information concerning the type of jobs available to future graduates.

At present there are over 100 students actively involved in the Co-op Ed program. These students spend an alternate semester off-campus in full-time jobs directly related to their field of study. Furthermore, Co-op students receive eight college credits (nine in Psychology) for their work in the Co-op program, in addition to receiving a regular salary.

Margaret Russell, Director of Community Relations for the Union Camp Corporation, and a community liaison to the Co-op Ed program said, "The Co-op Ed program is a very valuable effort, and I see no problems in its implementation."

For those students who know where their interest lie, the Co-op Ed Office can offer specific job descriptions and assist students in preparing a resume. Anyone interested in becoming part of Co-op Ed should contact Freda Lasurus, Director of Co-op Ed., at 893-4426 or visit the Co-op Office in Life Hall.

The Amazing Atom Ant

By Marion Clarke

"The one thing I’d like said in this article is that the MSC Bookstore is not a rip-off," Keith Ansbacher, SGA Treasurer said in an interview in the SGA Treasurer’s Office. "I work at Barnes and Noble, and the prices here are reasonable. So, if someone wants to protest something, I’d recommend finding something else to protest."

Ansbacher, known jokingly as Atom Ant by his fellow members on the SGA Executive Board because of his resemblance to the cartoon character when wearing a motorcycle helmet, hasn’t much time to spend now on his hobbies.

When he’s not studying, working, or doing SGA duties he enjoys reading, sports, or listening to music.

A Business Administration major with a concentration in Marketing, Ansbacher said "I don’t watch much TV, I’d rather read fiction. Non-fiction bores me."

Although his family resides in Bloomfield, he managed to secure a Clove Rd. Apt. for this year. He works, and his parents help contribute to his education.

"I’ve been trying to live on-campus for quite a while, so when the apartment was available, I took it. I think that college is an extension of high school if you never live on the campus," he said.

He enjoys almost any kind of sport, either watching or playing. A former member of MSC’s Tennis Team and captain of his high school team, he explained, “I love all kinds of sports. I really enjoy watching obscure sports on TV when I get the time. My father enjoys sports also, which is probably where I picked up the interest.”

At the age of 15 Ansbacher bicycled his way to Montreal, Canada, with two friends for two weeks. The first half of the Summer he worked as a Fuller Brush salesman to take the trip. Each one of them told their parents that the other parents consented in order to get permission. On the day of the trip the parents were told the truth since arrangements had already been made.

Ansbacher commented, "I hate cars. I won one, but if there was another way I could get around all the time, such as walking or bicycling, I would. I also have a habit of leaving my car lights on.

With a few high school music theory courses behind him, the SGA Treasurer mainly listens to rock but also to jazz, and even classical when no one’s around to tell him to change the channel. He played the string bass in an orchestra, the bass in a jazz group, and the tuba in a marching band.

After graduation Ansbacher hopes to attend law school. Since he was nine or ten he’s enjoyed reading law as well as anything on the Middle Ages or mythology. He’s a member of the Pre-Law Society as well as a two-year Legislator. Last year he was President Pro-Tempore of the Legislature.

Ansbacher, who also likes the racetrack and commented wryly, “They get a lot of my money,” would like to work in the District Attorney’s Office, but sees it as an unrealistic possibility because of the low wages. He’d like to earn enough money to have freedom. "I don’t want money for the sake of hoarding money. But money would enable me to have freedom to pursue the things I want to, without having to worry about practical financial matter."

Quarry Project On Target

By Benno Miller
Plans for the Student Center Annex and Quarry Development Project were approved by the MSC Board of Trustees in May. These plans calling for an addition to the Student Center and extensive development of the Quarry were approved by the Board of Higher Education at their July 21 meeting, with one deletion from the original plans that were being considered during the Spring.

In an interview in his bustling office, Jerome Quinn, Director of Institutional Planning, expressed optimism, saying that "everything is running smoothly, essentially on target, and on time."

The project includes renovations to Pittser and Sprague Fields, an indoor tennis facility, locker room facilities, a multi-purpose athletic field, a soccer field, three softball fields and 800 parking spaces.

The deletion to the plans was that provision for an access road which the Board of Trustees rejected at that time of the approvals for the Quarry. The\nroad would have entered the north end of campus, making the campus accessible from near the Robin Hood Inn on Valley Road.

The Trustees felt that this component was not suitable for student funding because it was a capital improvement to the college.

Actual construction is scheduled to begin this coming Spring, and the completion date is predicted for Jan. 1, 1981. Funds are coming from the Student Building Fees and the price tag reads $9.1 million.

Some problems have arisen over the summer and are receiving much attention. One problem involves sewage from the tennis and locker facilities. The Health Dept., the Planning Board, and the Mayor of Little Falls are all working on solutions.

A geological problem calls for extensive testing of the ground to insure stable conditions for construction. Soil borings show the ground in the Quarry areas to have an all rock composition, and problems with Student Center diagonal faults have been cause for special concern in this area.

Primarily the project is intended to meet many existing needs for the students because of the shortage of space for student activities, and the intramural sports. Secondary in nature is the fact that this project will improve student services and make MSC a more attractive school to prospective students in the future. With the dropping enrollments predicted for the future, the quality of facilities at MSC could make a difference.

There seems to be a bit of unrest among some students about all of the future construction that present students are paying for.

Joe Klein, a Sophomore Business Administration major feels that "new construction should be funded by the state and our fees should be used for operational expenses."

Contradictory, more enthusiastic views are also evident. Harry Kagdis, a Sophomore Biology major points out, "Years ago students were paying building fees for the Student Center and most never had the pleasure of a beer at the Rathskeller, or a game of pool in the game room. As alumni have accommodated our needs, all of us who see growth as real need must look out for the future MSC students."

Sahner Sums Up Summer

By Jean Branna
When Charles Sahner officially became SGA President on June 1, he didn't wait until September to begin. While most students had escaped MSC, the new SGA Administration was at work preparing for the coming year.

Last week the President released a summarized report of the events and occurrences which took place during the Summer of 1978. Sahner stated that although all past SGA Presidents have released Summer reports, he believes this one is innovative.

"No one has ever included correspondence from the report before," he said.

The correspondence includes memos and letters from Sahner to administrators, the Tele Measurement company who installed the TV monitors, dean, and faculty of the College.

The inclusion of such information gives the SGA and Administrators a clearer idea of what was actually accomplished during the Summer months.

The 50-page document, which deals with actions taken by the SGA, covers the areas of Welfare and Internal Affairs, as well as External, Academic, Dormitory, Student Services, and Public Relations Affairs.

The report also stressed the "spirit of cooperation" necessary between the SGA and Class One Organizations. "Class One's are an arm of SGA, not independent adversaries," the report stated.

Sahner's goals for the school year include reduction of what he feels are anti-SGA fee sentiments, revitalization of the SGA Committee structure, and expanding all programming and services to Weekend and part-time students.

One of the biggest challenges as of yet for the new Administration has been "keeping control over the MAC fee and input into athletic programs," Sahner stated in the report.

Plans for the reinstitution of the Student/Faculty Relations Board, a now defunct coalition of students and faculty members who give opinions on campus issues, is also being discussed. An exchange program with the University of Puerto Rico at San Jose in cooperation with Irwin Gawley, Vice President for Academic Affairs, is also being considered.

Kitabu Collection At Library

The Kitabu Collection, a collection of books on the "Third World Experience"—more specifically, the Black Experience—"is located on the Second Floor of Sprague Library in the room facing the Amphitheater.

The Kitabu Collection was inspired by the death of Martin Luther King in 1968. Moved by the incident, Black students felt a strong need to learn more about their roots. At MSC, however, Sprague Library was found inadequate at that time.

With the help of Curtis Jackson, Assistant Director of the Educational Opportunity Fund (EOF) and Francesco Cordasco, Professor of the Educational Foundation and Comparative Studies Dept., students organized a meeting with College administrators, and it was decided that a room within the Library would be used for a collection of works on Black life.

James Harris, Assistant Dean of Students, was appointed supervisor and the Black Student Cooperative Union (BSCU) became the curator of these works. The students named the collection "Kitabu" meaning "book" in Swahili.

The purpose of the Collection is to give aid to students doing term or research papers on Black life.

Israeli Dancing

The Jewish Student Union (JSU) will again sponsor a class in Israeli dancing, starting Tues., Sept. 26.

The teacher will be Lenore Rosenbluth, a specialist in this dance form, who has taught the class for the past three years. The class will be held in Student Center Ballroom C, on Tuesday evenings at 8 through Dec. 12. The fee is 50c for students and 75c for others.

JSU will kick off its new season with a general membership meeting on Mon., Sept. 25 at 8 PM in Student Center Meeting Rooms One and Two. New members are encouraged to attend. Refreshments will be served.

The organization is part of Jewish Student Services of Metropolitan NJ, and is sponsored by the YM-YWHA of Metropolitan NJ. The Alliance of Jewish Student Organizations will hold a dance on Sat., Sept. 30 at 8:30 PM at the YM-YWHA, 760 Northfield Ave., in West Orange. The dance is entitled "5739: An Alliance Odyssey, A Galaxy of Music and Dancing." Admission will be $2.

Days of Heaven

Directed by Terrence Malick. Written by Terrence Malick, executive producer Jack Nicholson. Produced by Robert and Harold Schneider. Cinema 35 mm presented in partial color by the Academy of Motion Picture Engineers. Color mastered by Robert Goulet in Washington, D.C. Score composed by John Barry. A Paramount Pictures presentation of Cineplex Odeon Films and New Line Cinema. A Cinema 35 mm presentation of The Hornblower Company. Distributed by Paramount Pictures. Directed by Terrence Malick. Screenplay by Linda Manz. After fleeing the steely condemnation of Chicago, Abby, the farmer's young lover, and his young sister, Linda, and boards a train for the Texas Panhandle, where they join a group of migrant workers: Bill (Richard Gere), a farm worker, is a fugitive; the men labor in a Chicago steel mill, the opening sequence of Terrence Malick's Days of Heaven, is a visual metaphor for America's transmogrification. It is a Chicago steel mill, the opening sequence of Terrence Malick's Days of Heaven. Malick's film is an incisive, penetrating condemnation of American Dream, told through hauntingly beautiful images: sparse, realistic narration, and allegorical story strikingly reminiscent of Dostoevsky, but a dreamer that more heavily on consciousness.

At the base level, one can say that Malick's sensibility has European roots, and it is true that the film more closely resembles Bertolucci's 1980 than Ford's The Grapes of Wrath. But Days of Heaven is distinctively American and it transcends the aforementioned films in its progression from the level of a social statement to that of an allegory. Malick's film is a microcosm, of the entire country, and the downfall of the characters is also the country's. The figure of Abby is greatly in the thematic structure of Days of Heaven. The character of Abby figures greatly in the thematic structure of Days of Heaven. In The Little Foxes, Lillian Hellman writes, "In a sense, there are people who eat the earth and all the people on it like in the Bible with the locusts. Therefore, the farm functions as a microcosm of the entire country, and the downfall of the characters is also the country's. The character of Abby figures greatly in the thematic structure of Days of Heaven. In The Little Foxes, Lillian Hellman writes, "In a sense, anyone who confesses to a crime, or a knowledge of it, should not miss this film. Terrence Malick's Days of Heaven is a flawless masterpiece; surely the best American film since 1974's "Chaplin."
By Mike Price

It was not a promising start for CLUB week Monday night at Memorial Auditorium. Saturday Night's resident madman, Michael O'Donoghue, had cancelled his show on the spur of the moment. To make matters worse, hardly a soul had bought tickets for the substitute show, An Evening of Comedy. Finally, the management decided to open the doors free to the public, an offer met with little response. But as the show began, the tiny audience of about 50 students settled down for two solid hours of hysterics at the hands of CLUB's surrogate lunatics, Chris Rush and Gary Yudman.

Yudman took the stage first wearing black T-shirt, jeans, and an expression bordering on manic. Within a minute, he had the audience in the palm of his hand with his hilarious impersonation of Mick Jagger as a gorilla singing "Can't Get No Ripe Banana Peel." He then launched into impersonations of rock stars such as David Bowie and Lou Reed singing their versions of familiar Christmas carols. Other highlights of his act were Jackson Browne's version of the Oscar Mayer jingle and Mickey Mouse doing Brando.

It was not so much the quality of his material, but the raw energy and vitality Yudman possessed in presenting it that captured the audience.

The highlight of the evening was the off-the-wall comedy of Chris Rush, a bizarre mixture of Lenny Bruce, Don Rickles, and Curly Joe. His "avant garde" humor had the audience in stitches for the full hour he was on stage. Rush's routine focused on the favorite pastimes of "typical" college life: drugs, sex, and sports. His remarks on White Castle, which he called "the lowest form of food on earth," drew tumultuous applause from the audience; nearly everyone could identify with his collegiate humor.

The bald-headed comedian hardly gave the audience time to recover from their fits of laughter before they were hit with the next comic barrage.

Is it sick to love a pen?

Is it crazy to love marker pens that give you the smoothest, thinnest line in town, and feel so right in your hand? Is it mad to worship pens with clever little metal "collars," to keep their plastic points from getting squishy?

Not if the pen is a Pilot marker pen. Our Razor Point, at only 69c, gives the kind of extra-fine delicate line you'll flip over. And for those times you want a little less line, have a fling with our fine point, 59c Fineliner. It has the will and fortitude to actually write through cartoons.

So, don't settle for a casual relationship. Get yourself a lasting one, or two, to have and to hold... at your college book store.

Concert Series Bluegrass Returns to MSC with the McLain Family Band on Sat., Sept 23 at 8:30 PM.

Acclaimed McLains Return

This Saturday begins the MSC Bluegrass Concert Series in Memorial Auditorium. This one-of-a-kind production will open with the McLain Family Band. The program starts at 8:30 PM and tickets are $5.50, $4 with valid MSC ID, and are available at Gallery One.

The McLain Family has completed four world tours in the past five years. Bluegrass music has circled the globe through this band. From their base in Berea, Kentucky, they have reached 50 countries. In the US, they have regularly performed in 35 states at festivals, universities, and other affairs.

Versatility is the watchword of the band. Traditional material is given new, exciting arrangements with contemporary songs adapted to suit the McLain style. Original compositions by three of the band members fill out the program.

The distinctive sound of the fiddle and the banjo, married in the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee, is now a popular national music form. In fact, more than 600 Bluegrass festivals are held in this country each Summer.

Doug Tuchman and the Bluegrass Club of New York, in cooperation with the Office of Cultural Programming at MSC is producing the series.

The McLain family has been performing together for ten years. They have to their credit five albums, a one hour Educational TV Special, 25 solo performances before symphony orchestras. For five years, they produced their own radio and TV series in Kentucky. They make their home at Berea College in Berea, Kentucky, where Raymond, father or father-in-law of most of the band members, teaches music.
Who's Afraid of A Didactic?

By M. R. McVeigh

"I have learned that neither kindness nor cruelty by themselves, independent of each other; create an effect beyond themselves, and I have learned that the two combined together, at the same time, are the teaching emotion." The teaching emotion? Is that what Edward Albee wants us to learn from his two one-act calss, The American Dream and The Zoo Story? Last night at the Memorial Auditorium, the MSC community viewed the spectacle of comic cruelty, or cruel comedy of Albee's works.

Edward Albee (The Death of Bessie Smith, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, Tiny Alice) directed his own works with the almost anything., and of course, the curtain rose on (protested by most of the audience), the stark "set of love of an author and the skill of an accomplished director. After a 20 minute delay (protested by most of the audience), the curtain rose on The American Dream. As Mommy, Patricia Kilgarriff said, "People think that they can get away with a bit of Albee, but it is not. The Horde's nose" by putting the American Dream together, at the same time, are creating an effect beyond themselves, and I have learned that the two combined together, at the same time, are the teaching emotion."

This quote pretty much sums up the entire meaning of The American Dream. We see here the same cruelty found in Virginia Woolf, but less of the sensitivity and compassion. Catherine Bruno, a somewhat too animated Grandma, grabbed our attention and held it through most of the play. This comedy about youth, age, marriage, and of course, cruelty, blossomed with the fine performance of Stephen Rowe as the American Dream who tantalized us enough to get us through the intermission in anticipation of his work in The Zoo Story. (Incidentally, it was quite obvious that Albee was dangling the carrot in front of the horse's nose) by putting the more popular play second on the program.) The first play lumbered past us, highlighted only by the monologue of the young man and Grandma's witticisms. The pace was patterned and deliberate, giving the impression that Albee crammed too many suggestions of meaning into a one-act.

The second act opened to a smaller, more Albee-devoted audience. The Zoo Story shines among one-acts. It has comedy, tragedy, social significance and absurdity, as well as two demanding roles for capable actors. The intensity and high performance levels of both Stephen Rowe (Jerry) and Wyman Pendleton (Peter) were worth waiting for. Rowe captured the energy and frustration of Jerry, a man tormented by loneliness, who is only beginning to understand his own need for compassion. Kindness and cruelty gain him only solitary passage out of life. The significance of The Zoo Story is universal, and less dated that its counterpart, The American Dream. Kindness and cruelty seem analogous in Albee's plays. Perhaps this is a sign of the cynicism of the sixties. It may be possible that the decade we thought was romantic and optimistic was really cynical and obsessive. Albee shows us characters who seldom communicate, though the have many dialogues.

If the sixties were cynical, we can see the upcoming loneliness and egoism of the seventies. These two one-acts, show us ourselves as "works in progress."

Hitch's Rich Humor

By Jose M. Freire

Rich and Strange, made at London's Elstree Studios in 1932, is the third presentation of WNET/Channel 13's series Hitchcock: The Early Years. The screenplay by Alma Reville (Mrs. Hitchcock) and Val Valentine, tells the story of Fred and Emily Hill, a young and happily married couple, who receive a rather large inheritance and embark on a world cruise. Their newly acquired financial freedom, however, affects their marriage in a negative manner and they go separate ways aboard ship, each becoming involved in a series of misadventures.

There are a lot of Hitchcockian themes thrashing about on this journey, but basically it is a film centered about the education of the Hills. They long for adventure, for a taste of the exotic, but at the end of the film they come to the realization that riches are worthless. The Hills also realized on their journey that they are not very well suited partners. They had both fallen in love with another during the course of their cruise: he with an adventurous who is only interested in his money, she with a dashing, aristocratic Commander. We realize at the end of the film that their marriage is nearing its end. Hitchcock's favorite theme of appearance versus reality is here again. Money appears to be the ultimate remedy, but it is destructive; the Hill's marriage seem sound but it is not.

All in all, Rich and Strange is an intriguing film despite its myriad of flaws, and Hitchcock's humor is in full keel.

Eubie, the all-black musical which opened last night at the Ambassador Theater, is an exuberant, colorful, light-hearted romp. The star of the show—though never seen onstage—is the composer, 95-year-old Eubie Blake, whose musical career spans over 75 years.

Eubie dips into Blake's vast songbag and comes up with 23 of his favorite tunes, ranging from jazz to blues to ragtime. Nearly all of Blake's songs—written from 1899 to 1958—are recognized standards, and $3.50 for students and senior citizens.

Fortunately, a splendid cast of young singers and dancers provide enough memorable moments to conceal some flaws in the format. In a dazzling display of versatility and enthusiasm, they carry the show briskly through its constant changes of mood and costume.

Eubie looks and sounds quite a bit like Bubbling Harlem in Sugar, it's not too surprising since Co-Choreographer Billy Wilson, Costumer Bernard Johnson, Choral Arranger Jeffrey V. Thompson has all it takes—and more—to sell I'm Just Wild About Harry.

It has been said whether by poet, philosopher, or politician, that the true role of the artist in society is to fill the void left by the routine existence of our daily lives. The artist is one whose mastery transcends the empty echo of futility, but also the silence their particular medium manifests. The actor is trained not only in the timing of his lines, but in the delivery of his silences. A painter's silence is broken and resumed by the strokes upon his canvas.

Hakoshima Returns

Hakoshima's work is the perfect complement of effort and motion that stems back to his Japanese roots. Characterizing his interpretation of mime, Hakoshima emanates a gentleness and subtlety in his programs. The core of his work bears a likeness to Kyogen—a Japanese comedy art form based on the adventures of a favorite mythic character—Kyogen, the common man.

The philosophic as well as artistic influences of Hakoshima can be traced back to his native homeland, Japan. Born and educated there, his mother, an opera singer, and his father, an archaeologist and athlete, Hakoshima cultivated an early interest in literature, music, classic Japanese dance, and Noh movement.

player of the week

By Andy Kaye

Herb Lindsley and Kevin Murrell have two things in common. First of all, both play football for Wagner College. Secondly, each probably had nightmares about Sam Mills on Saturday night. Mills, MSC's superb linebacker, is the MSC athlete of the week. In addition, Sam was also named the East Coast Athletic Conference (ECAC) Co-player of the Week.

On the first play of the second quarter on Saturday, Mills crashed through the Wagner blocking line and blocked Lindsey's punt. Two plays later, MSC had their first touchdown and a 10-0 lead (they eventually won 16-6).

"I saw that their offensive men were slow. I tried to take advantage of this. I came over tackle," explained Mills. "Big plays happen on special teams. 1 like making things happen."

Mills offered a slightly different explanation of the big play. "I figure that if I play well," commented Mills, "big plays happen on special teams. I like making things happen."

Sam also was brilliant on defense. He amassed 12 tackles, several of the bone-jarring variety on Murrell, Wagner's starting halfback. Wherever the ball was, Sam was hot on the trail.

A couple of bright spots on offense were running back Mike Horn who gained 88 yards on 13 carries and one touchdown; and wide receiver Orlando Alvarez with 3 pass receptions.

We will have to make some adjustments on offense this week against East Stroudsburg, commented Hill. "We are a tailback-oriented team and will have to run better."

"Also, penalties hurt us," Hill said. The Indians were penalized 10 times for 132 yards.

E g ss has most of their defensive starters returning and have only lost three games over the last four seasons, so MSC has their work cut out for them. The Warriors are currently 1-1 with a win over Indiana State (PA) in their opener and fell to CW Post last week. MSC hasn't defeated ESSC since 1974, so the Indians will not only want to keep their unbeaten streak alive, but also end the dominance that the Warriors have had over them in recent years.

The Indians are coming off a 16-6 win over Wagner College at Giants Stadium to raise their record to 2-0. This victory, unlike their previous one, did not show the overall ineptitude exhibited in game one. "We were disappointed in our offensive showing against Wagner," noted head coach Fred Hill. "Our offense is much better than we showed. They just didn't come up with the big plays."

Offense Clouds Outlook

MSC goes for their third straight football victory without a loss this Saturday night when they host powerful East Stroudsburg State College (ESSC) at Sprague Field. Kickoff is 8 PM.

The special teams did a good job in keeping Wagner deep in their own territory. John DiPotea got off some good punts under heavy pressure at critical points in the game to keep Wagner from striking distance of the goal line.

MSC Lifter: Out Of This Country

Lou Mucardo is a member of a very strong MSC Weightlifting team. He was chosen to perform with the US Team in Yugoslavia because of his fine performance in the Senior Nationals, which is the biggest weightlifting meet in the country. He weighs 181 lbs. and his combined lift was 678 lbs (292 in the Snatch and 386 in the Clean and Jerk). Mucardo is rated number three in the Senior Nationals in the entire country.

Mucardo is a two-time National Collegiate Champion, holding the National record in the Snatch. He competed three times in the Junior World Championships and placed fifth in Poland in 1976.

"I have been influenced mainly by Coach Busch Toth and Phil Grippaldi," Mucardo said. "Phil Grippaldi himself is a three-time Olympian and a recent graduate of MSC."
Tribe Streak to be Tested

This could be a year of uncertainty for MSC's soccer team. The defense appears to be solid, but a new untested front line is a big question mark.

Last year's defense allowed just 1.4 goals per game, and with most of the starters returning, this should be the team's strength. Leading the group of returnees are Goalie Bill Muller, Halfback Tom Tracey, and Fullback Mark DiClemente. DiClemente, the team's captain, is one of only two Seniors on the squad.

"Our main goal this year is to be competitive against anyone we play," commented Head Coach Bob Wolforth. "With our defense the way it is, if we can get some scoring from the offense we shouldn't be counted out against anybody.

"I feel that our players have worked hard and have a good positive attitude," noted Wolforth. "Yet we'll still have to rely on breaks and take things game by game."

Some players who have looked good in defense in pre-season are Halfbacks Paul Liddy and Steve Reitberger, and Fullback Zenon Ulecz.

Over on offense Wolforth seemed optimistic on the play of Alvaro Tarrago, Frank Eri, Paul Delbo, and Nasr Moussa. "These are the guys that have to come through for us to have a winning season."

"With the young squad we have and the tough schedule ahead, we can't afford to let down," said Wolforth. "If we get a few things our way and the young players come through, this should be an interesting season."

The complete schedule is Sept. 20 at NJIT; Sat., Sept. 23 at Pratt Wed., Sept. 27 at Jersey City; Sat., Sept. 30 Stockton State; Tues., Oct. 3 at William Paterson; Sat., Oct. 7 at Upsala College; Wed., Oct. 11 at Keam Fri., Oct. 13 NYU Wed., Oct. 18 FDU-Teaneck Sat., Oct. 21 Ramapo; Wed., Oct. 25 Triton State Sat., Oct. 28 Glassboro State; Wed., Nov. 1 Marist and Sat., Nov. 4 at Newark-Rutgers. All home games are played at Brookdale Park in Bloomfield, except for Oct. 25, which will be played at Spring Field on campus at 8 PM.

MSC Gets Revenge

It was sweet revenge for the MSC Cross Country team Saturday, as they wallowed Stockton State College (SSC) 23-35 at Garret Mountain. Rich Wallace led the way over the hilly, five-mile course as MSC averaged last season's opening day loss to SSC.

Wallace, who clocked 26:04, took the lead early in the race and steadily built up a 150-yard lead. "Rich looked extremely strong for so early in the season," commented MSC Coach James Harris, "especially on the hills."

It was a solid team effort, however, that spelled the difference for MSC. Though Stockton runners placed second and third, MSC swept the next four places to sew up the victory. Cliff Hampson, John Kirchoff, Dan Doherty, and John Bernath made up MSC's solid pack, as the team had all five scorers in before SSC's third man had finished.

MSC's superiority on the hills was apparent throughout the race, as SSC runners continually lost contact on the long upgrades at Garret Mountain.

"The hills are usually the deciding factor in any race," said Ron Macey, MSC Captain. "Most of our runners are very strong on the hills, and that should lead to a great season for us."

A major test for the team comes this Saturday when they meet Glassboro State College at Garret Mountain. Glassboro is the defending conference champion. Race time is at 1:00 PM.

McKinley Boston—MSC's Own 'Big Mac'

By Michael Mastrogiacomo

The MSC football team should be proud to have a coach like McKinley Boston.

Boston began his football career as a player for the University of Minnesota between 1964-1968. He was a three-year starter at defensive tackle and won All-Big Ten honors during his Junior and Senior years. He was good enough to be drafted in the early rounds by the NY Giants in 1968. He was also drafted in the first round by Toronto of the Canadian Football League. Boston at 6’2”, 235 pounds was a defensive end, and he also played linebacker for the Giants.

“My goal was to play in the NFL,” Boston said. “The money was much better. I guess it was also an ego thing.”

He played three years for the Giants and injured his knee. He never regained the mobility he once had. Boston tried to make a comeback with Vancouver of the Canadian football league. He played for two years and reinjured his knee. That was the end of his professional football career.

When I asked if he was disappointed with his football career he said, “I wasn’t bitter at all. My goal was to play in the NFL, and I did. I feel I have been very lucky. I have no complaints.”

He moved to NJ and bought a home in East Orange. “I was looking around for a college to finish up credits in my Physical Education-Recreation major,” he said.

MSC had the best reputation so he finished up here. During classes he met Clary Anderson, then the MSC Football Coach. This was the beginning of Boston’s coaching career.

Mac began coaching in the Fall of 1973 and has been here since. He is in charge of the defensive line. “The players I coach, and I communicate,” said Boston. “If I have something to say, I say it because I’m an open person.”

After finishing college, he did his graduate assistant work at MSC and received his Masters in the Fall of 1974. There was a job opening for the Director of Intramurals at MSC.

“I applied and got the job in September 1974,” Boston remembered. He has been able to coach and direct intramurals ever since. MAC is now working towards his Doctorate at NYU.

Boston considers himself an understanding coach who believes in teaching fundamentals. “There are certain players you have to communicate with on different levels,” Boston said. “Rules make you say or do things that you’re sorry for. You have to be flexible.”

Boston is married and has an eight year old son who loves baseball. “I’m not going to push my son to play football. If he wants to play, he’ll play.”

Boston also has long range plans. “After I get my Doctorate, I’m interested in Urban Recreation—either consultant work, teaching, or administrative work in a major city,” he said.

diversified group and their interests are anywhere from Political Science to Speech Theatre. Only two are Recreation majors, which disproves the popular belief that they are all Recreation majors.

The cheerleaders will be doing many things and going to many places to show just how good they are. Among the many that they will be doing are traveling to Las Vegas with the Women’s Basketball team, going to Madison Square Garden, and doing background work for a full length film in which Mac began coaching.

Helping the cheerleaders out are Sue Moel on french horn, Jennifer Born on tuba, and Lovey Williams on percussion. These members show tremendous enthusiasm and have been very diligent about attending rehearsals. Repertoire includes fanfares, show themes and medleys from Beach Boys and Saturday Night Fever.

Tribe Offense Does Disappearing Act

By Ken Lambert

The MSC offense was almost nonexistent. In their first game played at Giants Stadium, the Tribe won 16-6 before a very disappointing crowd. The Indian offense only managed 177 yds in total offense against Wagner College. The Indians' record stands at 2-0, but the MSC defense had a lot to do with it. MSC Coach Fred Hill attributed the lackluster offensive showing to "...a mental breakdown. The mistakes that were made are correctable, and we felt no need to worry." Perhaps they should have.

The Indians proved that they could score points with their 31 point effort against Glassboro State College. It was obvious from Saturday's game that most of the offense was left on Sprague Field, because there was very little shown against a rather weak Seahawk team.

The 16 points that MSC did score were set up by a very aggressive defensive team. The defense was led by linebackers Vinny DeMarinis and Sam Mills, corner-back Mike Smith, and safety Jery Agee, "We always thought that our defense could do the job," said Hill.

Cornerback Mike Hensler intercepted a pass on the Wagner 47 and returned it 36 yds to the Seahawk 11. Following a run for minus yardage, a five yd. pass completion from Joe Rebholz to Orlando Alvarez, and an incomplete pass, the Indians tried a field goal, but missed.

DeMarinis also enjoyed a good day. He recovered a Wagner fumble on the 37 yd. line and MSC scored quickly. A pitchout to half-back Mike Horn, a 37 yd. scamper, and the Tribe had their second touchdown. The extra point was missed and MSC now had a comfortable 16-0 halftime lead.

Horn had a very good game. He had 88 yds. in 14 carries. In his two games this season, he has carried the ball 24 times for a total of 190 yds. and a 7.9 yds. per carry average.

In the second half it was the Seahawks' turn to make the game look interesting. A reception by an MSC receiver and a fumble out of the end zone gave the Seahawks the ball on the 20-yard line. In ten plays they scored on a three-yard run. The extra point was missed and MSC led 16-6. A Seahawk onside kick and recovery on their own 49 gave them another chance to move.

Brass, Brawn And Beauty

The Dallas Cowgirls they may not be, but MSC still has plenty of reasons to be happy with their cheerleaders. "These kids are dedicated and serious about what they are doing. They put in long hours individually and with their partners until the routine is done to perfection, said advisor Trade Wolfarth. Eleven of the cheerleaders went to the University of Tennessee's National Cheerleading Camp, where they were among 700 of the best from many bigger schools.
