NJSA: Will You Pay?

by Mary Ann DeFiore

A referendum requiring all state college students to pay a mandatory refundable $1 fee per semester to be used by the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA) is appearing on this year's SGA election ballot.

If approved by students on the eight state college campuses, this mandatory fee would take effect this coming September. It would be collected along with the other student fees paid during the semester fee to be used for the college students to pay a mandatory fee would take effect this registration period.

The NJSA has proposed a $1 per semester fee to be used by the New Jersey Student Association to provide concentrated lobbying effort in Trenton over student related bills in the state assembly and senate. Also, the organization will improve communication with the average student by increasing its service to them.

However, this $2 per year is refundable for those students who do not wish to contribute to the NJSA.

David O'Malley, executive director of the NJSA, encouraged students to support this referendum when he addressed MSC's SGA legislature recently. He explained that NJSA's current $22,000 budget would be hopefully expanded to approximate figure of $81,000. These additional revenues would be used to hire another employee whose specific job would be to lobby in Trenton on behalf of the 70,000 students attending state institutions.

"I strongly recommend that all students vote yes for this referendum to ensure that their rights are being looked after in the state capitol. Their rights in regards to financial aid, the tuition increase, basic skills, registration and the draft, and the drinking age will all be addressed," O'Malley said.

According to O'Malley, if the referendum does not pass at MSC but does pass at the other college campuses, MSC will continue to be represented by NJSA but will not receive any of the additional services which they will offer.

MSC presently pays a total of $4,000 to the NJSA, which is the highest contribution of a state college. Under the new system, MSC would pay $18,000 annually to the organization. O'Malley feels this is a fairer method of contribution because each college would be paying an amount based on the number of full time undergraduate enrolled in their institution.

"Frankly, I just want out of the whole issue now. I think people are sick of the idea and maybe it would be better to just forget it," he said. Ansbacher also expressed some distress over the amount of money which would be necessary to spend.

Burkhart claims, "I don't feel that people on this campus have forgotten the issue. If the SGA can't get the audit done, I feel that the people on the staff deserve a public apology."

Fraud Audit Still in the Air

by Naedine Hazell

The SGA is continuing in its effort to complete the MONTCLARION fraud audit which was approved by the SGA last November.

The SGA has still not been able to find an accounting firm which is willing to do the audit. Despite frequent protests from every member of the newspaper who is anxious to complete the audit, SGA treasurer Keith Ansbacher can not get an agreement from any of the firms he has spoken to do the audit.

Ansbacher feels the whole incident is unfortunate. "I really don't know what to do now," he said. He explained that the accounting firms can no longer hide behind the excuse that it is tax season, but still he can't find one to do the audit. "It's like a great conspiracy." Ansbacher said in frustrated tones.

"I'm really disappointed in the lack of action that has been taken on this audit, it looks like a great conspiracy." Ansbacher said in frustrated tones.

A Team Effort

The MSC women's softball team recently defeated William Paterson College (WPC) raising their won-loss record to 8-2. The women's softball team now has the best record of any of the spring athletic teams. Read the account of the WPC game on page 29.

SGA Elections: A Bird’s Eye View

by Mary Ann DeFiore

This past week has been one of increased activity on the fourth floor of the Student Center and throughout the entire MSC campus, as the prospective candidates for the SGA executive board enthusiastically launched their campaigns on their fellow students and potential voters. Although the sweet taste of victory is not yet upon them, the 11 candidates have had a taste of the hard work that goes into running a hopefully successful campaign.

News Analysis

During this past week, all the candidates have been giving their campaign speeches at various locations around campus. The issues discussed ranged from reducing the prices in the Bookstore and the Rat to improving the everlasting parking and shuttle bus problems to ending all corruption in student government.

The two major themes which all the candidates seemed to be concerned with in their campaigns are the need for an improvement in the SGA image and an increase in pride in MSC and its student government.

The hopeful candidates visibly gained confidence and poise during each successive speech they gave. Their student audiences seemed somewhat attentive, and expressed their approval or displeasure at the various comments made by the candidates.

Those running for the position of president include Frank Cosolito, William Johnson, Chuck Schwarz, Carmen Santiago for Secretary and Brian Cige for student representative to the Board of Trustees.

The two vice presidential candidates are Dennis Galvin and Michele Gierla. Running for the position of treasurer are Scott Garrett and Donna Soranno.

Both running unopposed are Nader Tavakoli and Edward Willis. The two vice presidential candidates are Dennis Galvin and Michele Gierla. Running for the position of treasurer are Scott Garrett and Donna Soranno.

The elections have been described as the “cleanest in years,” according to Larry Blackburn, attorney general of the SGA. In this position significant nature to call for disqualification from the race. “However, I will be watching carefully in the next few days for the continuation of these infractions. Although I am sure I will not have to bring any of these problems before the SGA legislature for a decision, I would not hesitate to do so,” he emphasized.

The candidates also participated in a press conference sponsored jointly by WMSC and the MONTCLARION. The entire conference was broadcast live over WMSC fm 90.3. During this one and a half hour session representatives from these two media questioned the student candidates about their platforms and specific plans for the improvement of the SGA.

Elections are being held for five days, beginning on Sat., April 28 and ending on Wed., May 2. Blackburn strongly urges all students to go out and vote and therefore take an active role in their student government.

Salary Problems Waging

by Kathleen Ryan

"If we were to pay minimum wage prematurely, that would reduce the number of students who would be available for the College Work Program (CWP)." Randall Richards, director of financial aid, stated.

Historically, July 1 of each year is the date on which student's salaries are adjusted to meet the federally minimum wage. The reason why students have been paid the base salary of $2.65 until July 1 is that the CWP can then provide added work opportunities for needy students. If last January's minimum increase to $2.90 was paid, the CWP could then only provide limited access to some students.

Some six or seven years ago the CWP practiced a wage differential which proved unsuccessful. Supervisors were instructed to pay their workers based on working skills. Disaster arose as supervisors were unable to properly decide which students deserved increased earnings.

Richards views a student's work experience as a tremendous benefit to his work attitudes for later life. Richards also noted that many employers will be more interested in the recommendations rendered by a student's supervisor rather than a faculty member. A future employer is more concerned as to whether or not an employee will be a reliable worker. This type of judgment can clearly be made by a former college employer.

Richards encourages supervisors to work cooperatively with students. The hard working director is proud of the spirit of enthusiasm and positive image that the CWP has developed.

Usually there are about 900 applicants for work programs. At any given time there may be 700 or 800 students actually working.

Semester breaks and vacations determine the actual number of working students. Substantial turnovers arise as a result of graduation and exam periods. Richards commented that the paper work at these times tends to be cumbersome.

The second large-scale minorities demonstration took place at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, according to Bruce Bologna, a news editor for the Targum. The minorities are charging the administration with having some prejudiced attitudes towards blacks. In the first protest several weeks ago, the students rallied 900 strong in front of the mansion of college president Edward Bloustein. After presenting him with a list of demands, the students proceeded to take over one of the dining halls.

Last week, approximately 400 students marched throughout New Brunswick, holding rallies at the various Rutgers campuses. They did not, however, camp out on the lawn of Bloustein's mansion as they had threatened to do if their demands were not met.

The protestors who feel more blacks students should be recruited to Rutgers, and more black teachers hired, have not as of yet received satisfaction from the administration. According to the Targum, they are uncertain as to how long these demonstrations will persist.

On April 10, a motion was made to remove the president of the student congress of Rutgers (Camden), Lee Krystek, news editor for the Gleaner reported.

The president, Don Panuski, was charged with constant absenteeism from meetings. Also, he was accused of holding an emergency meeting which all congress members weren't informed about.

According to Krystek, the actual trouble began when the treasurer of the congress took it upon himself to institute election guidelines. However, he had not been authorized to act as chairman of the elections committee. Thus, these guidelines were invalid.

When Panuski heard of the treasurer's action, he called an emergency meeting over the weekend at which he appointed his own chairman. However, this chairman was also "illegal" because the meeting was not held according to procedure, as all congress members were not informed of the meeting.

In view of the president's action, a motion was made to ask for Panuski's resignation from office. The motion was defeated by a small margin, and a new chairman was elected for the election committee.

ISO Brings Culture to MSC

by Shari Kirkup

In an effort to expand, the Italian Club at MSC has recently made a few changes. They recently changed their name to the Italian Student Organization and will be holding Italian week for the first time in the history of the organization.

The major reasons for these changes is to get more students involved. In the past the majority of the club was made up of Italian students and those who were studying Italian.

Eileen Coccari, president of the Italian Student Organization, discussed these changes and described the events of the upcoming Italian week.

The changes that have been made have resulted in the greater involvement of students. Italian week will give all of the students a chance to experience Italian culture first hand.

"The major reason for the changes was so that more students could get involved. We also changed the types of events that we sponsor, but the major change was in attitude. We want all students to know that they are welcome to join us no matter what their nationality or course of study is," Coccari said.

She also explained that the organization holds two types of events. The first is cultural events. This entails movies, lectures, poetry reading contests and art exhibits. The second is social events such as dances, picnics, bus trips, and fund raising activities.

"One of the major social events will be Italian week. Italian week has been discussed in the past, but it was only until this year that we got the cooperation we needed to have it," Coccari explained.

She explained that it will take place between Mon., April 30, and Thurs., May 3. On Mon., April 30, the week will begin with a pastry sale from 10 am to 3 pm in the Student Center Mall. There will also be a car exhibit in the center mall at the same time.

The second day will consist of a spaghetti eating contest to be held from 11:30 am to 2 pm in Ballroom A of the Student Center. The car exhibit will also still be going on in the mall.

There will be an arts and crafts exhibit on Wed., May 2, from 10 am to 3 pm in Ballrooms A, B, and C. A poetry reading contest will be held that same night from 5:30 pm to 8 pm in Ballrooms A, B, and C. Thursday, May 3, will be the last day during which a village scene will take place from 10 am to 3 pm in the center. A bocce tournament and a soccer game will take place outside on the lawn.

Coccari explained that the major reason for having Italian week is to offer a series of social and cultural events in an organized format in order to get the campus interested and participating in Italian culture.

The MONTCLARION would like to correct misstatements made in last week's article about Maryann Cerino, SGA secretary.

She did not stop the bilingual newsletter because of the Spanish news section of the paper; it was a combination of that and the production of the Spanish MONTCLARION that was put out by the Spanish department.

Discounts in Student Center Dining Room

by Mariana Dumanovsky

"Without a very fancy title, we thought we'd call it what it is, a dining room," Thomas F. Stepnowski, director of the Student Center, remarked about the name change taking place in the Formal Dining Room.

The Formal Dining Room, located on the second floor of the Student Center, will now be referred to as the Student Center Dining Room.

Stepnowski, in his fourth floor office in the Student Center, discussed reasons for the change. He also briefly explained discount rates for students and ways in which students can help.

Stepnowski explained that, for approximately the last three years, students have voiced their opinions about the name of the room. "They (students) suggested that the room was too formal and that possibly students were not welcome," he said. Although last year there was a contest for someone to come up with a name for the dining room, "the suggestions did nothing," he said. Stepnowski explained that names were handed in like "La Crepe" and "The Green Room."

"It was like looking at a New York restaurant directory," he laughed. Since students wanted the name changed, it was the main reason, according to Stepnowski. The Student Center Dining Room, seating between 150 to 175 people, does have its advantages. For example, there will be a 10 percent discount on Mondays and Fridays for students, although it will not be effective between noon and 1 pm.

"According to Stepnowski, the prices in the dining room are slightly higher because they incorporate difference in labor costs, the menu is different, and the food is cooked to order."

In conclusion, Stepnowski stated, "We want students to realize that the dining room is there for them. If they can make suggestions for anything at all, please let us know. We want to improve service, image and menu."
Nuclear Plants: How Safe Are They?

by Bonnie Jerbasi

In view of the recent accident at Three Mile Island in Harrisburg, Pa., it is hard to remain objective about nuclear power plants. The public is quickly becoming aware of the dangers and effects, whether they be imminent or gradual, and fear another such disaster.

A lot of attention is now focused on the subject and more people are taking action. The feeling of Ludwik Kowalski, a professor in the Physics/Geoscience department, is that this action can sometimes be misleading because most people are influenced by their emotions. Kowalski, who has his PhD in nuclear physics, would like to see the public receive more information and facts concerning nuclear power. He stresses that, at lower levels of exposure, the problem of radiation is a case of “benefits against risks.”

It is true that nuclear plants create radioactive by-products that cause cancer, leukemia, birth defects, heart disease and premature aging. The amount of biological damage depends on the number of millirems (mrem) received. Death within hours is certain if a whole body receives a dose of one million mrems, Kowalski said. A single diagnostic X-ray usually gives the patient about 50 to 1,000 mrems just from cosmic rays and the natural radioactivity of the soil, according to Kowalski. This amount varies with geographic location.

Kowalski explained that the large nuclear power plants contain as much radiation as 1,000 Hiroshima-type bombs. The possibility of a “meltdown” would release some of this radiation and contaminate the land and water as well as exposing the population to well over a safe number of millirems.

These structures also affect animal and aquatic life because the wastes produced under normal conditions. These wastes can only be permanently and safely disposed of by burying them in rock formations. This will not be accomplished until 1995. There is now 30 years of waste lying around in this country, Kowalski said.

The US currently has 67 operating nuclear power plants which supply about 8% of our national electricity. Many alternatives to this source of energy have been suggested such as solar, wind, bioconversion (using agricultural wastes), cogeneration (steam), and even electricity generated by garbage. Conservation of energy by Americans would also help the situation until safer sources are established, Kowalski added.

There are many people who feel that the nuclear program should continue. In spite of the evacuations and threats caused by accidents the program is strongly defended because it has the potential to be a cheap and abundant source of energy for future generations.

The benefits as well as risks must be weighed as in any other American venture, Kowalski rationalized. For example, people travel in airplanes and ride in cars despite the fact that about 50,000 Americans lose their lives in accidents each year.

The concerned MSC student may become acquainted with the scientific aspects of these current issues in a number of ways. The social, political, economic and ethical sides of nuclear power will be dealt with in a series of lectures planned for Fall 1979. The School of Mathematics and Science will present “Implications of an Unstable Nucleus” and feature a number of guest speakers. The lectures will be scheduled periodically throughout the fall semester at 8 pm on a mid-week evening.

Holocaust Remembered

A film and discussion in remembrance of the six million Jews killed by the Nazis in World War II is being presented at MSC on Tues., May 1, from 1 to 3 pm in Meeting Room 2, Non Print Media Area, Sprague Library.

At 1 pm a famous documentary film, The Warsaw Ghetto will be shown. It consists of actual films made by Nazi photographers of the Ghetto, assembled and narrated by an actual survivor of the uprising. At 2 pm a discussion on the significance of remembering the Holocaust will be led by Theodore Price, assistant professor of English, and Father Kenneth Herbus, Catholic chaplain at the college.
MAGAZINE Makes Debut

The MSC campus community received an alternate voice and creative outlet for serious writers, artists, and photographers, as the first issue of THE MAGAZINE made its debut on campus yesterday. A publication of the MONTCLARION, the monthly is a long-time goal finally achieved, as another publication has long been overdue.

Clarifying the concept and idea behind THE MAGAZINE, editor Pat Vierschilling stated "through a monthly magazine we can do expose type pieces, develop features, and play Woodward and Bernstein through investigative reportages. By having a month to do their stories, the writers also have more time to polish their writing.

"Our first priority is to serve the campus community. We hope to strike a careful balance of close reporting and criticism as well as spotlight the positive features and information. One such example is the Portrait column. Each month we will feature a faculty member and student who is engaged in some interesting activity or pursuit. There are a lot of interesting people on this campus—professors are having books published, directing shows, finding alternatives to the energy problem, etc."

"By an alternative editorial voice we can show the lighter side as well as the more serious concerns of an issue. As the campus newspaper, the MONTCLARION must adhere to objectivity in its reporting. We can paradoxically forsake objectivity for the truth and vice versa. More importantly we can give equal time as we have a month to plot and plan."

Presently the most important concern of THE MAGAZINE is that the publication gains sufficient support, i.e., through submissions of prose, poetry, reportages, artwork, etc., from students as well as faculty.

"We need warm bodies and new blood," Vierschilling commented.

Those unsolicited manuscripts in your desk drawer and under your bed are being solicited. Probably the greatest dream that could be realized is the respect of the campus community.

AA Group Now on Campus

Gillian Woolston is a student at MSC, an English major, and an alcoholic. She is currently attending Alcoholics Anonymous (AA) and is recovering from her disease. She is now starting an AA group here on campus, because she feels there is a great need for it. She thinks that if there were a group on campus, it could help people to find out if they have an alcoholic problem.

"I can't tell you how AA works," she said. "It just works through groups and meetings." As an example, she said that the first meeting on campus would probably consist of discussing AA's 12 steps to recovery, with concentration on step one. Step one is when the alcoholics say, "We are powerless over alcohol and our lives have become unmanagable."

The first meeting will be on Mon., April 30 in the Purple Conference Room on the fourth floor of the Student Center at noon.

Woolston received permission from Lawton W. Blanton, dean of students, to start the group. She said Blanton thinks it is a good idea, but he didn't say much about it. "He doesn't know about alcoholism," she said. "I know about it."

Woolston will be running the meeting, and there will be other alcoholics there who are also recovering from the disease. AA will meet every other week regardless of whether or not other people show up.

"We will meet every week if nobody comes, and we'll continue to meet until somebody does," she said. She emphasized that it is not just a temporary seminar, but an on-going group.

All the meetings are open discussion meetings. Woolston said that she would like anyone—faculty, students, or office staff, who think they might have a problem with alcohol or if they are just curious—to attend the meeting and investigate alcoholism "on a personal level."

Woolston estimates that there are nine to 12 million alcoholics in the US. And she says this number is growing. She said the alcoholic not only hurts himself, but also those around him.

SGA Candidates Discuss

These questions and answers were taken directly from the WMS-MONTCLARION press conference broadcast live on Tuesday April 24 at noon on the third floor lounge of the student center.

The presidential candidates who attended were: Frank Cosolito, Bill Johnson, Nadar Tavakoli and Ed Willis. These questions were generally directed to all the candidates for each position.

Q: You all feel there should be an increased communication between the Executive board of the SGA and the legislature. Could you all specify how you intend to get this done?

Bill Johnson: Increased communication comes from having an effective cabinet and if your cabinet is effective and is doing what they're supposed to be doing and are hard at work for you, doing the investigating then that means you have an active legislature. That means you have a legislature that cares what goes on for the student body and is out representing their constituency.

Ed Willis: I think that the executive board has a certain image that they're supposed to uphold. And also, the legislature. Now, I'm not saying that the legislature and the executive board should agree all the time on various interests and points of view but they should be able to work together as a working body. If you can't work together you can't get anything accomplished. I'm not saying again that everyone has to agree on the various issue, but we should try to work together, try to have a working relationship and Nancy Reamy answers understanding that way we can get issues and answers and solutions to problems here on campus.

Nader Tavakoli: As I think that the student government can no longer afford to have a president that refuses to sit at the table during the SGA meetings; a president who sits around the room and clowns around while the meetings are going on. The most simple way for the president, the executive board and the legislature to converse and communicate is for the president to sit up there and simply inform the legislature. This hasn't happened this year. Next year, as SGA president, I will make sure that this happens.

Frank Cosolito: A: I believe it is a two step process: the first of which is the cabinet which I believe Bill already referred to; your cabinet must be filled in by the president and the rest of the executive board so they can present to the various committee's and various legislators that need information, different aspects of what is going on as far as SGA is concerned. The second is the president, we need a president that's willing to spend time in his office, a person that's devoted enough so that when a legislator does have a question or a problem that he'd like some information on, that he can get it. I believe the president has to prepare reports that are adequate and that put a little consideration into it. We need to present to the legislature on a weekly basis the events that are taking place and get their responses on them. It's communication between your cabinet and your president and ultimately, let's face it, it's the presidents responsibility in this area. I feel that I can take care of that.

The vice presidential candidates are Michele Gierla and Dennis Galvin.

Q: What is the most important issue, on this campus, to you personally, right now, and what do you plan to do about it?

Michele Gierla: A: I feel that one of the most important issues to me at this time is the Quarry Development program. We've had a lot of problems with parking and with electrical blackouts. I feel that if I can work on trying to solve those problems before they start we know construction is going to start this summer, and we're going to be hit very hard in the fall. That's why I plan to do as one of my main commitments.

Dennis Galvin: A: The major issue I'd like to work on is basically the respectability of the SGA and increasing our student pride in our school. I think this is an important issue, because what is at stake here is our reputation as a fine school. We are known as the best in the state and I intend to keep it that way. At the same time, I believe that if we can increase our respectability and increase our respectability in the SGA, we can increase our job opportunities and graduate offerings and that will build a good reputation and this will continue to advance our students into areas in which they want to endeavor.

Candidates for Treasurer are Dona Seranno and Scott Garrett.

Q: Do you feel the present bookkeeping and accounting system used by the SGA is satisfactory? Is it in need of any improvements?

Dona Seranno: A: We have found through the past and through past administrators that the cash basis was the most efficient for the student government. I don't know if anyone understands, if we're talking in accounting terms, maybe being an accounting major I do understand it. OK? The cash system is a simpler system, easier for a student to work, and easy for anyone to come up and understand. And I...
Views

think it's a good system and I think we shall stick with it. Maybe need to be more efficient in getting vouchers out and be more efficient in notifying students.

Scott Garrett
A: I've looked at the SGA system. This year we are trying to switch over to a system which I think would be much better than a cash-basis system. We'd be able to get better information as to actual position accounting-wise. This will help us as far as investments. We'll be able to increase our investments. Interest earned on investments in the future. I would like to strive for this next year.

The candidate for secretary is Carmen Santiago.

Q: Two points you emphasized in your speech yesterday were unity and information. It is easy to say those are your goals but how do you intend to achieve them?

Carmen Santiago
A: I think I can achieve unity by finding out what the students want, what their grievances are and their ideas and bringing them to the SGA. I can let the students know about the SGA by somehow letting them know about the SGA activities and informing them (as I said) in detail of the service available to them.

The candidate for Board of Trustees Rep is Brian Cige

Q: Why specifically do you feel that the position of Board of Trustee's Rep is in danger?

Brian Cige
A: The reason I see it in danger is because when the position was started 8 years ago it was seen as very important to the best of my knowledge students used to be student government presidents and the year after they would become student rep. to the board of trustees. It was thought of as very important, very influential position. Originally they were invited to all the private sessions, including those that discussed tenure, those that discussed contracts and policy making. Because of desires to expand those rights they've questioned the rights that the rep. had already and started saying 'hey, you have nothing to do with contracts,' which I don't believe is correct. I believe we're affected by all the contracts and construction that goes on on campus. They (we?) said "Hey, you don't have anything to do with that. We'll only ask you your opinion when we want it." I think that kind of attitude has got to stop, and that kind of attitude is what's taking away a lot of the potential of the position.

Bond is Reborn

by Donna R. Mangia

Van Reyper Bond House on Valley Road appears destined for restoration and renovation when plans are formalized. Already designated a historical landmark, committees were organized by the project originator, Barbara Ryan, former director of college development to delve into the scope of such an undertaking.

"The Victorian-style house will be restored in certain areas, to its original stature and splendor," Kelsey Murdoch, the present director of college development said.

"The first floor parlors will be restored as closely as possible in the original style," he said. "The rest of the house will be renovated and decorated to be reflective of the period."

"The offices will be painted in colors that would have been commonly used in Victorian buildings. The spirit will be Victorian throughout the house," Murdoch explained. Although no ghost stories have been passed down concerning this weathered edifice, it is none the less endowed with local importance. Since it was first erected by Thomas C. Van Reyper in 1872, this link to the past has witnessed more than 100 years of changing America.

Van Reyper, farmer and master-builder, constructed the house with the assistance of local artisans. The laborers were hired at a wage of one dollar per day. Construction workers have come a long way since Van Reyper's era. George C. Bond became the second owner of this "Veneer Villa," as it was formally classified, in 1951. Elsie Van Reyper, sole surviving heir, sold the house to Bond. Fifteen years later, the property was sold to MSC. This transaction was in compliance to Bond's wishes, who had been closely associated with MSC.

"Money sources," he continued, "are still under discussion. "The shape, thrust and size of the project must be estimated in precise terms before this can be done."

Gifts of materials and labor have been donated, to help maintain the house. No funding or appropriations have been obtained at this time, however.

"Because the State owns the property, we are not eligible for federal moneys for this project," Murdoch stated. Committees have been organized that will deal with fund raising, promotion and publicity.

According to a newsletter written by Ryan in February, committees have tried to locate some of the distant relatives which might be interested in making donations to the project.

Murdoch added that lists have been made concerning the work that must be done. "Since none of the original furnishings or fixtures remain in the house, the committees have tried to locate some of the distant relatives, inquiring whether they have original pieces," Ryan said. Some were donated and placed in storage.

One thing that has been stressed in both this interview and in Ryan's newsletters, is that the house will not be a "museum."

The specific use of the house is not to create a museum, but to make a tasteful, adaptive use of a gracious building, suitable for many of the diverse activities within the community.

Independent volunteer groups or other organizations may choose to join the project and have use of the house's facilities later on.

Van Reyper/Bond House is not only a link to the past but it will serve as a stronger link between the community and MSC.

Come Spend the

by Dennis Blood

Is there life at MSC after 5:30 pm on Fridays? The answer is yes, and it is called Weekend College. Weekend College is a unique experience. Imagine going to classes three days a week and being able to park your car anywhere you like and still be working towards your degree.

According to John J. Sanz, director of Weekend College, the purpose of it is "to offer the opportunity to Hispanic people to continue their education. Those persons who work." He added that it also offers an opportunity to Hispanics to continue their education.

Abraham Diaz, a business administration major, is very enthusiastic about the Weekend College program. "I feel great," he said, "the atmosphere is relaxed, there are no problems, and the people here are very friendly." Diaz has been here for two years, and this semester is taking 12 credits. Before coming to MSC's Weekend College program he had been working in a factory. He heard about the program from a friend, got some information, applied, and was accepted. Diaz is very happy about the program and wants to learn more about business so that he can get a better job in the future.

Courses for Weekend College are offered on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays. Classes last about two hours. On Fridays, classes run from 5:45 to 8:15 pm and from 8:30 to 11 pm. On Saturdays and Sundays classes run from 8:30 to 11:15 am and from 11:30 to 2 pm. The classes are held mainly in Partridge Hall.

Weekend College offers many courses at different levels (100-400 level). On the 100 and 200 levels, the courses are taught in both Spanish and English. These help those who speak Spanish learn by offering English as a second language. On the 300 and 400 levels all courses are taught in English.

The Weekend College program offers approximately 80 courses a semester. Some of the courses offered are: sociology, psychology, history, political science, biology, chemistry, business administration, English, and Spanish. There are also BA degrees offered in sociology, psychology, business administration, and mathematics.

According to Sanz, the Weekend College Program started out as the B-2 Program (meaning bi-lingual). However, the program, which was started in 1969, was discontinued in 1974 because it was only for graduates. The present Weekend College Program started in 1972 and had 250 people enrolled in it. It is for undergraduates.

Presently, there are 600 people involved with the program, most of which are of Spanish background. According to Sanz, the Weekend College is now getting away from the idea of being mainly for Hispanics. "The Weekend College Program is open to everyone," he said, adding, "It's a very good program because the professors are really good, and the students really come to learn." She said that she never gets bored with the program because it is something else for her to do besides sitting home and not doing much. She plans to graduate sometime next year and doesn't mind going to school for a couple of more years to get her Masters. She looks forward to the day when she can get a good job using her college education.

Marinilda Marin, an accounting major, has been here for only seven months. She is a bit disappointed because she is Portuguese and most of the people speak Spanish. However, she says that the people are very friendly and when she graduates she intends to go back to Brazil as an interpreter to work in accounting.

Max Perez, who is the head of the Weekend College Student Association, has been here for three years and so far has 90 credits. He feels that the atmosphere at Weekend College is warm and open. "The people who don't speak Spanish get along with the others very well," Perez said. "Communication is good, and we feel we've learned a lot. We've learned to simulate the ideas of other people, and we'd like everyone to be together.

Perez became president of the Weekend College Student Association two years ago. "They have elections just like everyone else, stated Perez. "They just happen to be on the weekends." The Weekend College Student Association is a Class Two Organization of the SGA and is like any organization with its procedures. Some, however, feel that it isn't getting enough attention.

Weekend College students do pay SGA fees and often sponsor events on campus. These activities include movies, lectures, and dances. They are the main source of the cash flow that keeps the Weekend College Student Association going. They do get some money from the SGA but Perez feels that more is needed because some activities cannot be subsidized.

Perez feels that the program is a very good one, especially for those who speak Spanish. "Basically, as I see it," he said, "it benefits those who speak the language. It gives them the chance to take courses and helps them getacquainted with college life."

"We feel we are being mistreated," he stated, in regard to the SGA. "Communication is very poor. The SGA and other offices have not paid attention to our needs." One of these needs was an application for a Class One charter in March. According to Perez, there has not been much of an effort on the part of the SGA to get it passed.

Perez feels that the Weekend College Program does have other problems. One is that the student services are very limited on the weekends. Another is that the transportation is limited. "Many of the people don't drive," Perez stated, "and the buses don't run on Sundays." He also added that there is little contact between the SGA, the administration, and the Weekend College people.

Sanz feels that there are problems, too. One of the most important is that most of the courses are taught by adjunct faculty. Since there are 600 students, Sanz would like to see more full-time faculty teaching Weekend College.

The Weekend College Program, which was at first funded by the state, is now part of the regular college program. It primarily funds itself, and the program graduates approximately 40 to 50 students a semester. Although the program is small, it is growing every year and is one of the most progressive programs that MSC has to offer.
The Best Man is Hard to Find

by Stan Godlewski

Attempting to project himself as a prospective SGA president who “will not be a puppet to the administration of this college,” Charles Schwarz has adopted a campaign stand espousing a reversal of what he considers to be the trend of “the college administration taking more and more power away from the students every year.”

“I plan on more rights for the SGA,” says Schwarz. “After all, it is the students’ association, by and for the students. It’s not the administration’s association.”

Declaring that “a lot of the students’ money is being wasted,” he believes that “It would not be surprising to me at all to find a lot of the money going into the wrong hands.”

Schwarz says he can’t understand why, for instance, the building designation signs should have cost $600 each. “I could’ve put up really nice looking signs for about one-sixth of that,” he said.

Schwarz believes that some serious investigation in order. Asked if he would actively seek out the corruption that he alleges exists within the college administration, he replied, “Most definitely.”

Considering a misallocation of funds to be a major cause of much of the college’s shortcomings, Schwarz asserts that the money is available for parking grace period, and curb the extensive towing.

The main thrust of Ed Willis’ campaign for SGA president, in his own words is “to bridge the gap between the SGA and the average student.”

The 21-year-old history major feels he is well qualified for the position of president, because he has been president of two other campus organizations. Currently he is president of both the Black Students Cooperative Union (SCU) and Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity.

Wills’ campaign promises include trying to extend the one-year parking grace period, and curb the extensive towing. He hopes to use the tv monitor system to televise SGA meetings. He wants to work on lowering the prices in the bookstore and Rathskeller. He plans to work for dormitory students by extending food service through exam periods and to plan more weekend activities.

Wills fells that this year, there have been a lot of problems from “outside influences.” He was referring to threats from Trenton regarding the tuition hike. Without going into detail, he mentioned the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA) and said that he doesn’t want to put it down, but if he were elected president, his first emphasis would be on improving the SGA’s reputation.

Nader Tavakoli, candidate for SGA president and the present President Pro Tempore of the SGA legislature, feels that the SGA has lost touch with the students it represents.

The 21-year-old junior political science major would like to change that and improve the image of the SGA.

“I think the main problem with SGA this year, as in the past, has been a lack of touch with the students. I think the way to improve that is to change the image of the SGA, to bring it back to the students, to stop the politics that are going on in the fourth floor.”

One way he would accomplish this would be to not appoint Class One executive officers to the SGA legislature. He feels much of the friction this year was caused by the Class One factions, and that to have an executive member of a Class One in the legislature is a conflict of interest.

Tavakoli would like to create a director and committee for off campus housing to organize the present system for attaining off campus rooms. He said that as it stands now, there is no real organization to represent off campus residents, which he considers the “forgotten constituency.”

This committee would work on representing the needs and the procedure to get things done. This is why he feels qualified to run for SGA president.

As vice president of the SGA, Frank Cosolito is aware of the issues, the improvements needed and the procedure to get them done. This is why he feels qualified to run for SGA president.

I’ve learned from being in SGA that you can make all the promises you want but you have to work along with the administration and the Board of Trustees, who restrict you to a certain degree,” Cosolito said, speaking from experience.

The president must make himself available to the students. If the president is not there, he cannot know what the students need, Cosolito said.

As vice president, Cosolito claims he made a point to be in the office every school day as much as possible and plans on doing the same if elected president.

Being aware of the parking problem, Cosolito is not promising more spaces but would like to see the gravely lots paved.

Cosolito also believes the shuttle service needs improvement. He would like to increase its service and possibly add a third shuttle bus.

The “professionalism” of the SGA also needs improvement, according to Cosolito. Fine facilities exist, but what is needed is the upkeep of them.

Pushing for Prestige

Tavakoli would like to extend the library hours and implement weekend shuttle service to benefit these students. He would also like Class One's to diversify their programming more to include part-time and weekend students.

He also feels that there are a number of areas in the dorms that bear investigation, such as food service, meal tickets, damage deposits, and classes in the dorms.

Tavakoli would like to eliminate classes in dorm lounges, stating that they are unfair to both the students that live in the dorms and the students that attend what amount to inadequately equipped classrooms. He would also like to substitute a food coupon system for the mandatory meal tickets now in use. These coupons would be able to be returned if a student doesn't use all of them, unlike the present meal ticket system.

Failing that, Tavakoli would likely decrease the present minimum 10-meal ticket to five.

Besides being President-Pro-Tempore of the SGA legislature, Tavakoli is also the chair of the steering and constitutional review committees of the SGA, and chaired the appropriations committee last year. He was the campus coordinator for Bill Bradley's successful campaign for US Senate.

Tavakoli intends to be an active SGA president, and would like being back the SGA's prestige.

"What I would like to do," he stated seriously, "is try."

MSC

Wills is very concerned about the traffic problem at MSC. He was relaxed and friendly as he outlined his plan of action. Wills feels that the Campus Police did not give new students enough time to get used to the campus traffic. Wills feels that cars should only be towed if they are blocking traffic. If a car is towed, Wills wants to see it to that it is brought to a place that is accessible by the public transportation so the students can retrieve their cars with fewer problems.

Since the main concept of his campaign is better communication, Wills wants the SGA meetings televised so students can see first hand what is accomplished at SGA meetings.

"Sometimes the newspaper can be biased," Wills said carefully. "I think students should see what's going on first hand and make a decision for themselves as to whether or not the SGA is doing a good job."

As a member of the Student Activities and Advisory Board (SAAB), Wills hopes to learn how he can best reduce prices in the Rathskellar and bookstore. "The Student Center should be serving the students," Wills said. He feels that students pay enough in student fees—they shouldn't have to pay higher prices on campus.

Wills has been a Resident Assistant (RA) during the summer, for two years, for Educational Opportunity Fund (EOF) students. He was a member of a Search Committee and on the varsity football squad for three years.

If elected, Wills said he would encourage the Class One presidents to schedule more weekend activities. Wills has lived in the dorms for four years, and he said he can see how his fellow students are easily bored on weekends.

He has also spoken with Skip Usignol, director of Cuisine Food Service at MSC, about the possibility of extending dorm food service through final exams. Usignol said that he could look into it, and that it was the administration that was preventing it as of now, according to Wills. Wills said with this knowledge, he wants to proceed further and attempt to extend the food service.

MONTCLAIR SGA ELECTION INSERT
Thurs. April 26, 1979
Rep: Endangered Species?

by Mary Ann DeFiore

"A vote for me is a vote for student rights," Brian Cige, unopposed candidate for the position of student representative to the Board of Trustees, emphasized in his campaign speech.

The 20-year-old political science major said that he is not campaigning so much for himself as for the position of student representative. Cige explained the position is presently in danger of being eliminated. The board is waiting for a decision by the NJ state Attorney General on whether or not there should be a state representative.

One of his major plans for next year includes having a monthly column in the Montclairion. In this column he would inform students about what exactly was happening with the board and express his opinions on the situations.

He also plans on maintaining a strong connection with the SGA and will depend heavily on the SGA for a reflection of the general student feeling. He hopes to attend all SGA cabinet meetings, since the student representative is an ex-officio member of the president's cabinet.

Cige has a cynical attitude toward the board. He feels that they intimidate their audience and have no eye-to-eye contact with their speakers, thus making a bad impression. And Cige says, "It takes just as little effort to make a good impression as it does a bad."

In conclusion, the somewhat bashful Cige said, "I could slide into this position. But I want everyone to know that I am their student representative. "I have no power. All I can do is communicate. My only power is in my ability to persuade," he added optimistically.

She Wants to Earn it

by Ann Marie Gentile

"I had a lot of complaints about the way things were being run. Finally, I realized I didn't have to sit back and watch any longer—I could do something about it." That is how Carmen Santiago decided to run for the position of secretary of the SGA.

Santiago, a distributive education major, is running unopposed for the election, yet, she said, she still wants to earn her vote. "I was ready and looking forward to competition. It would have given me a chance to show the students I'm capable of doing the job and how much I want to do it," she said.

She will still be campaigning actively to prove that her intentions are still strong and that the job "was not just given to me."

As secretary she will be responsible for maintaining communication between the SGA and the students, hopes to pursue a career in the fashion industry. She sat in her Freeman Hall room, creatively decorated with plants and some of her own artwork, as she spoke about herself and her outlook on the future. A tone of earnestness and enthusiasm was clearly evident.

She said she is looking forward to a year in office not only because she feels she can contribute to the SGA, but also because she hopes to benefit personally. "By having responsibilities such as this now, I will be ready to handle future ones," she said, and then added with a quick laugh, "I know it will cut into my social life, but it will be worth it."

She has been a resident of Freeman Hall for the past two years. Recently, she, like hundreds of other residents, was denied housing for next year. "The lottery is unfair," she said. "Students who live in Paterson and Newark were granted housing, while people who come from other countries were not. Hopefully, my voice in the SGA may help do something about this," she said.

A former member of the Latin American Student Organization (LASO) and currently involved in the dorm council organizations, Santiago refused to make any promises. "I'm not sure what students want, and I don't want to do that," she said. Instead, she vowed to do her best to serve the students in their best interest.

She added, "I'm hard working, and I have perseverance. But more importantly, I'm a student and I know what students want, and I'll work hard to make the SGA work for them."

Gierla: Experience Is the Key

by Jean Branna

"I have the experience and the enthusiasm to handle the SGA vice presidency," Michele Gierla, one of the two vice presidential candidates, stated confidently. As an SGA legislator, Gierla has served on various committees as well as being part of other campus organizations. As SGA vice president, Gierla plans to be a viable member of the Executive Board. "Without a strong Executive Board, the SGA can't function," she stated.

Casually attired in dress jeans, Gierla explained her platform during an interview in the Rathskellar. "My goal is to create a stronger legislature. From my experience in SGA, I see a need for this. If I can educate and train the legislators through workshops and make them aware of their importance, it will motivate them to increase the representation of students," she stated.

Presently, Gierla is an SGA legislator, the chairman of the external affairs committee, and the secretary of the government and administration committee. She is also the council on International and National Affairs (CINA) historian and the treasurer of the Economics Club. She has also been a member of the Pre-law Society and a WMSC newscaster.

"The real power of the SGA lies within the legislature because it is the students' direct voice. It needs to be enhanced," she continued.

According to Galvin, there are several issues which he considers important. One of the more important is relations. According to Galvin, if he is elected, he would try to improve the relations between the SGA and the MONTCLAIR students, and the administration.

"We should provide a more open platform of uniting the student voice, building a strong legislature, and being open to the opinions of all students," Gierla stated. "I've been on campus for three years," she added. "I know the system well enough to make realistic improvements in it."

Increase Respect and Pride

by Dennis Bloshuk

"I want to uplift the respectability of the SGA and to increase student pride in MSC and the SGA," Dennis M. Galvin, SGA vice-presidential candidate, said he described his main goals if elected.

Galvin, a junior political science major, feels he is very qualified for the position of vice-president and has exhibited his leadership qualities in his activities. He has been the head of numerous organizations in high school and in Middlesex County College before he transferred here. Presently, he is on the Freeman Hall Dorm Council, a member of the cross country team, and a member of the Parking and Damage Committee.

Galvin was also an aide to assemblyman George Otolowski. Although he said he doesn't have much experience with the SGA, Galvin is still positive. He has attended the last six meetings of the SGA legislature, sat down with several of the legislators, and read through the SGA constitution and the statutes.

"I know enough now to be a good legislator," Galvin stated. "And I don't think that any person knows what he or she is getting into until they get into the offices and perform the functions and duties of that office."

According to Galvin, there are several issues which he considers important.

One of the more important is relations. According to Galvin, if he is elected, he would try to improve the relations between the SGA and the MONTCLAIR students, and the administration.

"We should provide a more open platform of uniting the student voice, building a strong legislature, and being open to the opinions of all students," Gierla stated. "I've been on campus for three years," she added. "I know the system well enough to make realistic improvements in it."

Finally, Galvin hopes to see a need for this. If I can..."
Garrett to Open Books

by Jeryl Ann Franco

"Efficient, open, and honest" is the slogan of sophomore Scott Garrett, a candidate for SGA treasurer. A political science major, Garrett is a former SGA legislator, an active member of the Council on International Affairs (CINA) and is involved in Sussex County politics.

Garrett became a member of the SGA legislature in the fall of his freshman year. He joined the External Affairs Committee and became its chairman. Garrett's first involvement was with his freshman class and became its chairman. Garrett stated, "next year approximately $430,000 will go to Class One Organizations. Therefore, a lot of time must be spent on the Class Ones."

The second point concern an informal routine he feels should be created to oversee purchasing by Class Ones. It will pool information obtained by Class Ones concerning purchases, "If one organization looks into prices and quantities of typewriters, for example, then another organization wouldn't have to waste time obtaining the same information before buying one," Garrett said in explanation of the plan.

Garrett stressed the fact that he will not interfere with purchasing, only help in providing information on the purchase.

Garrett prefaced point three with a smile, saying, "It's clichéd, but important. I want the treasury to be open to all students. I am open for comment and questions for any suggestions for improving the office." Initially, under accessibility, Garrett's attitude toward non-groups and organizations other than Class Ones is very open. Garrett stated, "They too would like to use SGA funds effectively." Garrett stated, "If their group doesn't know how to, I will be open to speak to any organization on the position of treasurer and SGA workings." Fifth on his list Garrett plans to establish a monthly newsletter which will inform the students as to exactly where their SGA fee is going. Finally, Garrett intends to keep a good deal of office hours during the week and hours on the weekends. Garrett added, "I will be open to the students, and I will open the books to them also.

Garrett feels he has more than sufficient business background for the job. He has taken economics courses at MSC, he did inventory and accounts receivable for Hinton's Distributors in Sussex, and has been doing the accounting for his family's pig farm since high school. "When you're a legislator, you own your own business, you run into everything," Garrett commented. "You deal with all phases of finance and learn how to make important, practical decisions."

Garrett hopes to continue current SGA treasurer Keith Ansbacher's practice of investing in certificates of deposit which pay higher interest than the five and one-half percent formerly received by investing in savings accounts. Garrett added, "We will seek more deeply into certificates of deposit and find ones where the money is more accessible."

In closing Garrett said, "Executive treasurer is a political position. You must be a good diplomat and be able to compromise your ideas with people without compromising your position."

He continued, "Both finance and diplomacy play an important role in the job of treasurer. In that position, or any position, you must know your place and be mature enough to handle it."

High Communication Level Is Best Qualification

by Jeryl Ann Franco

Dona Soranno, candidate for SGA treasurer, sports an outgoing personality as well as a long list of business and leadership related qualifications. The junior accounting major and economics minor is an active member of the SGA legislature, MSC's Accounting Club, and the Student Activities Advisory Board (SAAB). She is the treasurer of the Class Ones Organization, an active member of the SGA and a member of Alpha Kappa Psi, the 1977-78 professional business fraternity. A political science major, Soranno said, "not just a group of chosen people."

To become involved she feels that it is necessary for students to be more informed. "It is the treasurer's responsibility to communicate the financial background knowledge in business practices and accounting procedures. "The SGA is a registered corporation. The treasurer handles over $500,000," Soranno stated. "It should be handled in a professional manner. College is the stepping stone to the outside world-a learning experience," she added. As a legislator and treasurer of a Class One Organization, Soranno feels she has thorough knowledge of how the system works.

Concerning the books, Soranno says that they have always been open to the students but that they don't know about it, "Each student has the right to know where his money is going," she feels.

When asked if she foresees difficulty because her opponent is a man, Soranno answered, "It is an automatic assumption that business is a man's world. There is no grounds for this. It is how much you know." She added, "More and more women are entering the business world as executives and doing a good job. Sex is nothing. I feel that it will be no hold-back." Soranno smiled and her eyes twinkled, "The books aren't so heavy that I can't lift them or open them."

In conclusion, Soranno expressed the belief that she researches before making a statement. "I will not take a political stand until I have the facts to back it up. I don't talk unless I know what I'm talking about. I feel that is important in any position or off this campus but especially for the SGA treasurer."
The weekday crowds are gone. One student takes advantage of an empty couch to relax before class.

Weekend and weekday college have the same standards in higher education. However, those held Friday evening through Sunday have a few benefits that make this form of pooling a desirable experience. The congenial atmosphere, problem-free parking, and class not offered during the week are a few. Some participants feel their weekend classes.

Our Choice Is Nader

This year's choice for SGA president is a simple one. It has to be Nader Tavakoli.

Many may feel that five people running for the position of president offers every voter a good selection as he shops for the next chief representative of our student government. Actually, the wealth of candidates, many wearing the same labels, will probably confuse most voters. Some may decide not to vote after all.

But being SGA president is too serious a business for just anyone to do. We choose Nader.

Nader and his many campaign workers have run an organized and highly polished campaign, contrary to the other candidates who can't seem to pull their campaigns together. Furthermore, there's nothing wrong with T-shirts, buttons, and flyers. They've been used extensively by everyone in the American political process for 203 years.

Nader has already shown throughout his campaign his ability to organize and to lead effectively. There are countless indications of his outstanding leadership qualities; the clearest proof lies with the strong support of the many campaigners out working for him—the average students who know the problems we all have here at MSC. They believe, and we agree, that Nader is the only one who will truly represent us all, no matter who we are.

Nader's qualifications are as varied as the numerous issues he's addressed during his campaign.

He has been with the SGA for three years and he's seen the best of SGA and the worst of SGA. He is currently the President pro-tempore, the president or speaker of the legislature, who directly leads the people who represent you as legislators.

He's chaired the most important committees of the SGA legislature: the Appropriations Committee that distributes your money for the various activities, the Constitutional Review Committee that approves the charters of each organization, and the Steering Committee, which organizes all the work of the many committees.

He's worked as an assistant to the Director of Affirmative Action, so he knows first-hand the problems minorities face. He's been involved on the state level as the MSC campus coordinator for the successful campaign of Bill Bradley for the US Senate. He knows state issues thoroughly from his work with the SGA for three years.

He played an instrumental part in helping to introduce the new para-legal program here at the college.

He has introduced countless bills into the legislature, so many that he can easily be called the most active of legislators.

Nader will bring a fresh viewpoint to the executive board. Nader's ideas are forceful, yet realistic. Nader is not intimidated by offending the present "establishment" of the SGA. Nader may not always agree with current SGA personnel, but then again, mavericks are never readily accepted by those legislators and executive board members who have no conceptions of what the average students really want or need.

Inherent in any decision to choose one person come the reasons not to choose the others.

A vote for Frank Cosolito will be a vote to continue the work of the present SGA executive board. Cosolito held the position of vice president, a position whose duties aren't much different from those of the president. Cosolito has had his chance to prove himself already, and, unfortunately, he has failed several times over the past year. Another year will not give us all a change, and a change is desperately needed to save those remnants that are left of SGA after this year.

Ed Willis has too many close attachments with the present SGA president, and this is his chief drawback—attachments that are too close for comfort. Willis has limited the bulk of his work to serving in the Black Student Cooperative Union (BSCU) and Phi Beta Sigma fraternity. Willis has done little as an SGA legislator, and has played no role in any significant work of the SGA proper.

Charles Schwarz seems to be running on only one major issue—to smear the MONTCLARION. Schwarz has never participated in any way in the workings of your SGA, and is sadly misinformed in even the basic structure of the entire organization. Schwarz doesn't know the first thing about newspapers, nor does he know the first thing about your student government.

Bill Johnson has several very attractive qualifications for the position, and would do an adequate job if elected. One major disadvantage for Johnson is the confusion over whether he wants the job. Johnson's intentions in this campaign are well-founded and we should all learn a lesson from his only platform—vote for the right person for the job, because you're the one who has to live with him.

Yes, Bill, we will all have to live with the next SGA president. That is exactly why this election is so vital, and why Nader is the only viable choice we can advise the campus to make. And yes, each SGA fee-paying member who closes that curtain on the voting booth on April 28-May 2 must vote for the right person. This year's choice for SGA president is indeed a simple one... It's Nader, naturally.
How to Get Involved in Your SGA

by Meryl Yorough

On April 18 our MSC campus was blessed with the presence of one of the most dynamic professional women in America today, Edith V. Francis, PhD. Francis is superintendent of schools in Ewing (Trenton) Township in NJ. Among her many accomplishments: 1) she has a PhD and a JD, 2) two honorary doctorate degrees, 3) charter member Hunter College Hall of Fame—she received her BA and MA from Hunter College—and 4) Woman of the Year by Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity, Inc., and Zeta Phi Beta Sorority, Inc. The theme of her lecture was “Women in America Today.” Francis spoke about many areas dealing with both men and women in America. She commented upon the traditional roles of men and women in America and how if we stick to these roles America as a whole will always limit itself in its strive for total freedom. “As long as one group of people is in slavery—we are all in slavery,” Francis said. About the middle of the lecture, Francis said, “America is sexist, and women can make it as long as they remember to be strong.”

Next, the small but very involved audience was given an extra treat as Francis’ husband, Gilbert H. Francis, MD, PhD, gave the audience a few words of wisdom. The lecture was then turned over for a question and answer period. This period was then turned over to a rather interesting period as questions ranging from the Bakke decision to making it in a white-oriented world were brought to surface.

Even with the small turnout, it was a very enlightening experience to the few who attended, and we give thanks to Zeta Sister, Francis, Sigma Brother, and Francis’ husband, for placing their knowledge on MSC.

Who’s to Blame?

by Matt Wilson

Here in the third floor lounge of the Student Center—three hours before the SGA Executive Board positions will swarm in for a press conference—the conversation has nothing to do with the impending elections.

Here the talk is about courses, the weather, summer, and jobs.

Others aren’t talking. Most of these people are reading, though some lay curled in corners or engaged in the rites of spring.

And so, it would appear, that another SGA election is going to thunder past these people unnoticed. This would be no great tragedy were it not for the fact that these people are MSC.

This amorphous mass called the commuters comprise something like 90 per-cent of the school’s population. They should, by right of their overwhelming majority, dominate MSC’s politics as well.

They don’t. Why the commuters don’t exercise their political muscle is disputed.

The major reason commuting students don’t vote in SGA elections is not apathy but rather the arrogant and inept politics practiced by student leaders.

An example of this style of politics was displayed last month during the anti-tuition hike rallies at MSC. Faced with a tremendous opportunity to reach the voter, the SGA leaders promptly blew it.

Instead of personal contact, the leaders opted for rhetorical ravings denouncing student concern and knowledge on the issue. And after the speeches, when some follow-up was in order, our politicians stumped back onto the elevator and ascended to the fourth floor.

Not once did it occur to them that it was their job to educate the students as to the importance of the tuition hike. Nor did it seem to concern them that they were insulting the very students they were supposed to educate. It is in full flower. More speeches, posters, T-shirts, and irrelevent issues dominate the political atmosphere.

I’ve been sitting in the third floor lounge for over an hour now. Not one candidate has been here, nor have any of their supporters.

But when this election is over, and again the turnout is less than 20 per-cent, our politicians will know where to place the blame. On you, the apathetic non-voter.

Well candidates, the political process doesn’t work that way.

To the Editor:

Tuesday afternoon, when I spoke with you in the SGA office, you asked me if I have had any experience with the SGA or whether or not I was currently active in any SGA committees. My answer was "No." However, because you did not ask if I was involved with any student activities, there was no reason for me to say that I am a member in good standing of Class One Concerts and a film projectionist for the college Media Center. Printing that I am "involved in no student activities this year" is not the truth. The concise statement on the front page of the MONTCLARION was a bit shocking to me. I think it is only fair that you place an apology/correction on the front page of this coming issue.

By the way, since candidates signed their written views on the front pages of their petitions in order to "give the MONTCLARION permission to make public my statements," I was under the impression that our sentiments would be published. This would give readers better understanding of the candidates and their views.

Again, I hope you will see that the error is corrected. A good journalist always gets the facts straight. Mary Ann DeFiore's article didn't report the facts. You ladies didn't seek the truth before reporting. I was asked a different question and gave the correct answer. As the only campus newspaper and the primary source of communication throughout the college, the MONTCLARION is not the man. Please take more care when writing about a probable next SGA President. Thank you for your cooperation.

To the Editor:

"Fight hunger now, the time to take action has come," is a slogan in our campaign drive for World Hunger Day, May 4. DeFiore and Lisa Burkhart. He repeatedly replied, "No."

In our opinion, this does not warrant a retraction, since Schwarz had several opportunities to relate his activities and failed to do so.

To the Editor:

"Fight hunger now, the time to take action has come," is a slogan in our campaign drive for World Hunger Day, May 4. DeFiore and Lisa Burkhart.

The time to take action has come. As many people realize, two-thirds of the world's population is malnourished. One half of the children in underdeveloped countries die before the age of five.

How long are we going to sit back and let this happen? When are we going to believe in ourselves enough to work for the common good of everyone regardless of race, color, creed, age, nationality, and say that we love no longer be a meaningless word but rather a living, breathing reality that will end the sicknesses of our strife ridden humanity?

The purpose of World Hunger Day is not only to raise awareness and mutually educate people to the fact that these problems do exist. Most people are already aware of that. We are interested in awakening a deep concern in people and an undying commitment toward what is called "hunger in action."

The money raised from this effort will for the most part go to Crop, Essex County Hunger Organization, and World Hunger Year. Crop is a nationwide organization that is affiliated with the Church World Services. Seventy-five per-cent of the aid received by Crop goes to self help and development programs. Crop believes that people can do a better job if they have the resources to help themselves, rather than making welfare payments that are dependent on the rest of the world to take care of them.

We need as much help as possible in making World Hunger Day 1979 successful. We have already begun several projects at this time. Whatever it is you want to do for World Hunger Day, whether it is to be something independent, or you just have questions, call Peter Brach at 746-4190 in order to make this hunger drive as organized and cohesive as possible.

Don't Buy Papers

by Irwin H. Gawley

The bulletin boards at the college periodically have circulars attached from firms selling material for term papers.

The college administration is concerned about these advertisements and will make every effort to remove them. Recently, the US Attorneys for NJ and the US Postal Service have successfully obtained consent orders regarding the operation of the two largest term paper mills in this state—the Research Exchange, operating in Jersey City, and the Academic Research Group, Inc., of Rutherford.

The terms of the consent orders provide that these companies must keep comprehensive lists of the clients they serve. These lists must include the client's name, the school he or she attends, the date on which the client secured the material from the company, and the type of material secured. The orders further provide that the institution or faculty member may request copies of these lists when the request is made on the official letterhead of the college.

In addition, the institution or faculty member may obtain copies of the material sold to the particular individuals by paying the cost of copying such material. The terms of these orders allow the college to make a reasonable attempt to halt the use of such papers by students enrolled on this campus.

The college administration urges students not to seek the services of such companies. We also urge that the faculty exercise its rights under the provisions of the consent order if there is suspicion of a plagiarized paper. The faculty should also see that cases of plagiarism are dealt with in accordance with college policy.

In order to gain the maximum educational benefits available, the student should complete the assignment himself. The process—learning how to do it—is perhaps more important than the product—the completed term paper.

Come to the Aid of Your Earth

by Kathleen Ryan

All of us love days of celebration. Yet, most holidays can only be enjoyed by some groups. It’s grand to be a wreaper of green on St. Patrick’s Day. A Valentine’s Day sweetheart creates heavenly bliss, and a last name which ends in a vowel is tres chic when Columbus Day sails by.

Today’s special celebration prepared for us by MSC’s active Conservation Club is an event all nationalities and age groups can participate in with equal fervor. Between 9 am to 5 pm Ballrooms A, B. and C in the Student Center will be alive with Earth Day festivities. All inquisitive earnings are encouraged to visit these rooms which will house a wealth of environmental information.

Frank Kelland, Ph.D., faculty advisor to the Conservation Club, is very proud of his students’ involvement in Earth Day. The self-spokened Kelland describes the aim of Earth Day, a Founder of his, as "a way to acquaint students that there are concerned people on campus who are worried about the continuing deterioration of the environment.”

In an office decorated with conservation messages such as "Save the Earth," Kelland described today’s events as an excellent opportunity to bring in diverse groups and let them present their approaches and what they are doing. Kelland observed, “Students will be exposed to the fact that we’re not the only ones who are concerned about maintaining a decent environment.”

Kelland recalled that the initial Earth Week began in 1970 by a group in Washington D.C., was mostly prompted by air and water problems. However, disasters such as the Santa Barbara oil spill, Kelland added. “The realization by more and more people that nuclear power plants are just not-technically developed resulted in the creation of Earth Week.” In light of the recent occurrence at the Three Mile Island Nuclear Plant, the concerned geoscience professor feels that we are becoming aware that technology hasn’t answered all our questions.

Reflecting further on the formation of Earth Day, Kelland views this time as a backlash against the ruthless destruction of the earth’s precious resources. “After all, there is more to life than paved parking lots,” stated the expressive professor.

MSC’s Conservation Club urges all students and faculty to visit the ballrooms today for an experience they will long remember. John Hofgesang who was involved in last year’s Earth Day events promises a “super interesting day.” A voted "watchdog" of the MSC, Hofgesang chooses to ride his bicycle to college each day. Hofgesang is confident the MSC community has a concerned interest in environmental matters and will show an active support in today’s program.

Hofgesang praised his club’s vice president, Judy Wehrell, for her outstanding preparation for this year’s Earth Day festivities. Wehrell, an outdoor recreation major, has been working loyally since last September to present today’s activities.

Last year’s Earth Day was a rewarding success as hundreds of people came to participate in the events. Hofgesang feels that interaction between students and organization representatives results in a beneficial experience.

Today’s festivities are promising to be even better than previous years. While last year had 17 exhibits, today there will be 30 different groups on hand to distribute pamphlets and answer all questions concerning their organizations’ activities.

A few of the organizations which will hold exhibits in the Ballrooms are the Animal Welfare League, Sea Alliance, The Passaic River Coalition, NJ School of Conservation, Montclair Organization for Conservation, and MSC’s Geoscience Club. There will also be nationwide groups sending information although none of their representatives will be present.

One of the day’s biggest attractions will be an exhibit by the Sierra Club. In the past they have delivered enlightening slide presentations on animal protection and land which is being saved for natural parks.

Another member of the conservation club, Deanna Baron, described the Sierra Club as one of the oldest preservation groups which tries to promote conservation and outdoor recreation.

Sitting in the club’s windowless Life Hall headquarters, Baron stated the Club’s philosophy that "man must remember he is visitor here on earth and must therefore walk softly.”

Kelland voiced his belief that students are more apt to be active in environmental concerns. “The youth of today unlike business people are not trapped in economic strait-jackets,” observed the involved professor. As a result, Kelland feels young people are more willing to experiment with ways that will be advantageous to environmental safety.

Manager Enjoys Job

by Teresa Gundersen

You very rarely run into someone who is in love with their job; especially if it isn’t a career based position and just a part-time money maker helping you get through college.

The position of building manager of the student center doesn’t sound great, but Tom Toronto, one of the four “watchdogs” of the center, says it can be a super job. Outgoing, energetic, open-minded, responsible, and friendly are the best qualities for a person in this position to possess. Toronto said, “I feel like a member of every organization of the student center; I’m friends with everyone here and I’ve met so many new people.” He often gets involved in activities, such as volleyball intramurals, and group-sponsored trips.

Usually, employees of the center gradually work their way up to the managerial position. But Tom Stepnowski, director of student activities, took a chance, a year ago, on hiring Toronto. He was a newcomer, being at the right place at the right time, who had previously been working in a stained glass studio “cartooning” and cutting glass. Since then, Toronto has proven himself worthy and has even gotten a pay raise.

At first, the tall, and well-built senior worried about all the responsibilities the job of “overseer” included, but since then he’s gained more confidence in himself.

His future plans may have stemming from his involvement with people at the student center and his political science studies. He has applied for the Peace Corps and is awaiting the reply. Tom says that MSC has been tough and he sees a great change in himself. He reflects, “The guy thinking about the Peace Corps as a freshman couldn’t have done it until now.”

A year two commitment to the Peace Corps will take him to another part of the world. He lives in Lodi with his brother. They often visit their parents who leave Toronto for Florida, during the colder months of the year.

The brothers share the household chores but don’t let them take up too much of their time.

Tom isn’t a “stay at home” type. His interests, which range widely from sports to theater, take him to various places. His leisure time is spent on things like soaking in NYC’s cultural offerings or visiting friends in Boston. He also gets involved politically, volunteering his services to local congressmen. He tries not to take a back seat in life. This explains the philosophy of some of which he calls “corny.” “To know life is to love many things.”

Toronto loves involvement and he thinks the student center is the place to find it. He exclaimed, “So many people give so much of their time to the various student organizations...and they don’t receive a cent!”

The one thing that does bother him about the building is the insensitivity of some students. About this he commented, “This is their building and they don’t realize it...They’ll leave garbage around or put out cigarettes on the rug.” He sees how hard the maintenance crew works and feels pitched in himself. “One should never put themselves above their workers,” he said.

Consequently, he’s become somewhat of a “jack of all trades.”

Will he miss his job, friends, family, and the social life when he embarks upon a journey with the Peace Corps? Taking a minute to think about this he mused, “I’ll be involved with different people of different cultures. I see it as growing, not just talking about social problems, but really doing something about them. I look ahead positively in entering an all-together new experience.”

Toronto has found himself in a number of difficult situations. Recently he apprehended two juveniles breaking into the candy store. Another time he assisted a woman experiencing respiratory difficulty. His way of overcoming the type of problems is “Keep calm...If you come across a vandalist, you can’t just attack him, you must feel out the situation.”

The student center is open about 76 hours a week and sees 12,000 people daily. With such a schedule, problems are bound to occur and although this isn’t very often,
Variety Showcase

“Dancers, Magic & Music” will be featured when the MSC Staff Association puts on its ’79 Variety Showcase on Fri., April 27. Talented members of the administration, faculty, staff, and student body will perform in the college’s Studio Theater at 8 pm. Tickets at $2 general and $1.50 for senior citizens and students may be reserved by calling 893-5106.

Veronica Peralta of Little Falls, a bilingual secretary in the School of Humanities, is coordinating the showcase.

Among the stars will be Robert Campbell of Glassboro, a former juggler and clown with Ringling Brothers, who is now a student at MSC. Clowns will also be featured in Reader’s Theater production of “A Clown Show” by students from the speech and theater department and Wordmasters of MSC under the direction of Professor Gerald Lee Ratliff of Cedar Grove.

Larry Shagawat, a student from Clifton, will present a magic act. Dance students will be seen in a number entitled “Glory to the Lord,” choreographed by Debra Hayes of Hackensack.

It seems as if every time George Bernard Shaw opened his mouth it was something worth quoting. One of the many notable quotables on the wall of the Studio Theatre’s lobby said that “my education was only interrupted by six years of schooling.” Shaw saw the whole of life as an educational experience, full of possibilities, often unexpected ones.

His characters learn about themselves, as we do when we watch them, even at their most absurd, we see a part of ourselves at work. The Shaw Festival, which produced five one-act Shaw plays for our scrutiny, ran April 23 to 25. After being treated to some songs from Shaw’s creative period by the Once Over Lightly Quartet (who also performed between acts) the first play, Shakes Versus Shaw was presented. It wasn’t the brightest of openings, but it was, like the other four, quite competent in its execution.

The play is a face-off between two authors: William Shakespeare and Shaw himself, played by Marc Mattaliano and Stephen W. Clark, respectively. The former is convinced (as only Shaw would have him do) of his superior verse in the face of this new, young upstart. Both came out on strings, as marionettes. After a couplet of quickie examples of both men’s works were enacted by Shakes proclaiming one more time, “out, brief candle.”

How He Lied to Her Husband concerns the highly unlikely situation of a husband’s disappointment over his wife’s lover’s faint praise. Denise Simone was perfect as the bitchy, flippant wife who bowis her romantic gigolo over by informing that she hadn’t quite gotten around to reading his last couple of poems written to her. Mattaliano was charming in his portrayal of the husband. But the show really belonged to Robert Longstreet as the sap who realizes finally that he’s not being taken seriously. He calls what he’s going through “growing pains,” the pain of being dealt a losing hand by the powers above. We aren’t to take his pains too seriously, of course. And Longstreet is up to the comedic possibilities of the play—his naive, heart-wounded expressions make it click.

The forthcoming Music-Cure was hardly “utter nonsense,” as Shaw put it. Rather, it allowed those present to see another side to Simone, matter-of-factly going through the Doctor’s rounds as a neurotic young failure named Reginald Fitzamby (Clark again) whimper over his recent financial failure. Enter the shrill concert-pianist (Katharine Donegan) who helps him out, promising to beat him regularly—his-and-hers-fantasies come true.

The more elaborate Shrewing Upol Blanco Posnet allowed the whole company to hear how it up through the trial of a horse thief. It seems as if every time George Bernard Shaw opens his mouth it was something worth quoting. One of the many notable quotables on the wall of the Studio Theatre’s lobby said that “my education was only interrupted by six years of schooling.” Shaw saw the whole of life as an educational experience, full of possibilities, often unexpected ones.

Much Ado at MSC

For its final production of the 1978-79 season the Major Theatre Series will be presenting one of William Shakespeare’s sunniest comedies, Much Ado About Nothing.

The play is a feast of wit centering on the two quintessential lovers, Beatrice and Benedick. The story is a tangle of maneuvers and misinformation that dazzles with its variety of character, invention, and incomparable repartee.

Denise Simone cools Robert Longstreet’s ardour.

Simone is impatient with the psychotic Stephen W. Clark.

Concerts and Quizzes

The Judy Collins concert at Avery Fisher Hall (April 13) was tremendously satisfying. While Collins struggled with some of her material, her appearances are always among the finest shows of the year. For a more detailed account of the concert, see this month's issue of THE MAGAZINE....Another lady with a unique and gifted voice has just released her first album. Rickie Lee Jones is somewhat eccentric, but definitely pleasing to the ear. She's sort of a female Tom Waits with her jazzy characterizations and smooth, fluid voice. The best cuts on Rickie Lee Jones are "Chuck E's in Love," "Easy Money," "The Last Chance Texaco," and "Danny's All-Star Joint.

Pick up this album. It's a winner, and you'll be hearing a lot from Rickie Lee.... I've always been a freak for weird song titles, and my latest rave is "The Last Chance Texaco," "Danny's All-Star Joint," "Born To Be Wild." 2. What was the original location of CBGBs?

3. Who wrote about a 60's musical event without ever having been there? The event?
4. How many more albums have the individual members of The Beatles released since their split than did the Beatles as a group?
5. True or False? Cindy Bullens toured with Elton John.
6. Which album has sold more copies: Sgt. Pepper's (Beatles) or Main Course (Bee Gees)?
7. True or False? Joan Baez wrote "Our House" for Graham Nash.
8. What popular album has been taken off K-mart's shelves because of public complaints of profanity and lewdness?
9. Robert Fripp, Peter Sinfield, Ian McDonald, Michael Giles, and ______ made up the original King Crimson?
10. "Midnight at the Oasis" is a big hit for Maria Muldaur. Can you name the guitar player that made it so memorable?

All entries which have a perfect score will be placed in a hat, and the winner will be picked. Based upon response, there may be another contest soon. Oh, the prize? A $15 gift certificate at Sam Goody's. So get cracking, and I'll see you again in two weeks.

Parker Spits With R&B

Graham Parker and the Rumour, Squeezing Out Sparks Arista AB-422

by Mark Leo

Graham Parker and the Rumour’s latest release, Squeezing Out Sparks, does exactly that. His fourth studio effort is his first on a new label, Arista, and the change seems to have restored new energy into his work. Squeezing Out Sparks marks a return to his earlier Mercury recordings (which were never sufficiently promoted) – urgent, passionate rhythm and blues-styled rockers with an accent on rough, respy vocals.

Parker’s material is deeply personal while containing an abundance of sarcasm and arrogance. Like one of his fellow British contemporaries, Elvis Costello, Parker is also a very angry young man. Often his anger is directed at women who have treated him unkindly. In a jumping, swinging, “Local Girls,” Parker playfully talks about not “bothering” with the neighborhood ladies.

On the album’s only acoustic number, a quiet, delicate ballad entitled “You Can’t Be Too Strong.” Parker strums a simple progression backed by Bob Andrew’s floating piano lines. Parker’s vocals are filled with self-doubt and anguish while he discusses the dangers of the faculty of being too strong, too rough, too tough” to accept love.

But “Passion Is No Ordinary Word” is the record’s outstanding cut. Belmont’s and Schwarz’s dual leads kick off this blues-rock flavored tale of deception and lies. Parker’s virtuosity accompanied by strong electric bass and drums. The song is vintage material for Parker’s virtuosity accompanied by strong electric bass and drums. The song is vintage material for Parker’s material.

Seawind Touches All

Aloha at Last
Horizon SP-734

by Lori Scutti

There have been successful innovations in the past of disco and jazz, gospel and rock, and pop and rock. But is it possible to coalesce all five of these sounds into one driving album? Seawind has proven that it is not only feasible but a very good idea.

In their first album Light the Light, this group from Hawaii imports to the mainland seven musicians who exhibit all the splendor and color characteristic of their home. Two members of the band particularly shine — Pauline Wilson and Kim Hutchcroft. Wilson, the lead singer, sounds like a cross between Stevie Marriott and Peppi Marchello. Her power and versatility lend itself to the band’s unique blend of styles. One of the pulsating cuts “Free,” her voice resounds with such electricity and conviction that the listener is soon convinced of her vocal supremacy. Her remarkable range and sensitivity, flaunted on “Follow Your Road,” puts Pauline among the ranks of a top professional.

Neel Paints With Passion

by Robert Yeo

Train Your Memory

— Alice Neel (April 19 Art Forum)

Seventy-nine-year-old Alice Neel captured and tickled Art Forum’s audience with her witty comments and array of outstanding portraits of individuals and groups from the rich and famous to the poor and anonymous. Neel, an artist who has eaten, drunk, and danced with art for over 50 years, studied academic art in the 1920’s and in the 1930’s worked with the Workers Program Administration (WPA). WPA paid her $26.83 a week for the paintings depicting the desolation and despair of city life during the depression.

Those were the hard times. Today she commands $15,000 to $25,000 per painting, and has just recently received the Women’s Caucus Art Award. In 1974 she had a retrospective exhibition at the Whitney Museum and has had countless one-woman exhibitions.

Neel’s lecture was not an abstract monologue nor a mystifying of art, but a down to earth, clear, and enganging old talk about emotions, characters, and real people. She was consistent in her thought, attitudes, and style of art. We probably all felt that the same afternoon the presence of a genuine person, a free spirit, and the immense devotion one human can have towards art.

Neel’s subject matter — the figure — came from any and all social classes, middle class families, bohemian poets, new immigrants, serious intellectuals, etc., etc., up and down the social scale. It looks as though no one escaped because she had them all at the end of her brush. Her portraits went beyond basic realism into comic and serious, truthful images of her sitters. She didn’t hide the less favorable qualities or glorify her sitters. She was tough, honest, and stuck to her vision, stating “I was never commercial,” and that “Freedom was my main purpose.” She painted workers as workers, (the exploited), people of authority as ambitious, clever, and inbred with worry, artists took on the qualities of eccentricity (Andy Warhol with female breasts).

I think that Neel’s art appealed to mostly everyone because it was about people, and we all relate to common human qualities she expressed in her work. She was an outspoken person and unafraid of doing what she wanted to do. If you get a chance to see her work, don’t pass it by. (Montclair Art Museum has a painting by Neel. She is also represented by Graham Gallery in New York.)

As Night and Dawn are Wed

by Dirk Bender

The opening credits to Dawn of the Dead are flashed intermittently across the faces of a few people in a television studio. These are tired, confused, and angry faces; their words give the audience an idea of the anarchy occurring outside.

When the credits are finished, one man turns to a woman there and tells her that he wants to abandon ship—"our responsibilities are finished here."

Then there's a flash to the real world, a housing project in a Philadelphia ghetto, where the tenants have refused police orders to surrender themselves and their dead. The former have come out to fight the SWAT teams, led by a fanatical redneck who just wants to "get in there and kill those niggers." The latter have been locked in the basement.

Anyone who saw George Romero's original Night of the Living Dead, knows why the dead have been locked up. For two hours we are to allow ourselves to consider a world where our dead no longer die peacefully, but rather come back as live-flesh (they do not eat themselves) eating zombies. This concept was easier to take in the original, which was shot in grainy black-and-white and concerned itself with one night.

Eleven years later, Romero has a $1.5 million budget to work with, and it deals with a much longer period of time; and instead of being holed up in a farmhouse, the two aforementioned TV people and a couple of conscientious members of the SWAT team board a helicopter, pass over Harrisburg (strange—in the original the zombie syndrome was partially explained by "outside radiation from a satellite—is interesting that the concept of domestic radiation was never explored) and hole themselves up in a mall, where many zombies still hang out.

Anyone who saw George Romero's original Night of the Living Dead, knows why it's great fun to watch the zombies haphazardly using the escalators, walking through the clothing stores, and knocking down the mannequins. Our fearsome foursome who are still alive (that's Ken Foree and Scott Reiniger from the SWAT team and David Emge and Gaylen Ross as his pregnant girlfriend) eliminate the creatures anyway and keep the mall for themselves.

It works for a few months with the outside entrances blocked off. These people set up residence in the back room of a Penney's store and arm themselves to the teeth (the only way, it seems, to put a zombie out of commission is to shoot him/her/it in the head) in one orgasmic sequence shot in a gun shop.

Aside from Reiniger's death by zombie-bite when the boys are out playing "convoy" with the semi-trailer trucks to eliminate traffic into the mall, life remains peaceful. The little home gets a designer treatment, and the occupants prance around in Penney's leisure wear. All's fine till some surviving Hell's Angels see our heroes engaging in some helicopter maneuvers atop a mall building. Espousing the Angels' philosophy that it's not nice not to share your belongings with those less fortunate, the army of leather-jacketed bikers breaks into the mall, letting the teaming zombies in with them.

One SWAT man and the pregnant lady escape with the helicopter and fly into the sunrise—that's the ending. If it seems indefinite, well, there's a reason—there's going to be a sequel. It will probably be just as gory and immature as this one was. And I'll probably wait in line to see it, too.

Dawn of the Dead is full of horrifying suspense. It runs a full 125 minutes (so you don't feel cheated), and Romero makes much of gleaming mall shots. Go see it with someone you're not sure of. You will be when it's over.
Injuries Hurt

by Frank Penotti

Like a horticulturalist with an enduring supply of patience, George Petty, PhD, is cultivating a youthful group of tennis players who comprise the MSC tennis team. Unfortunately, the team has yet to blossom this year into a tennis power to be reckoned with.

By virtue of Wednesday's whitewash of Monmouth College with scores being 6-3, 9-0, and 5-4, and Saturday's victory over the Indians at the glassboro and Ramapo College, and Kean College team saw the tables turned as Upsala recorded a 9-0 victory over the Indians at the sun drenched and wind whipped MSC courts. Upsala swept all of the singles matches in straight sets and did the same with the three doubles.

MSC's number one singles man, Ken Boyle, was the only one to avoid a sweep as he won his second set by a score of 6-2 Boyle has been suffering through some frustrating days of tennis as have been most of the underclassmen on the team. Injuries have also hit sophomore Tony Davino and Jim Coyle, the number three and four singles players for MSC. With these players out, the relatively inexperienced MSC team has had to do battle with some newcomers to the collegiate scene. Individually, freshman Bill Homestead and senior Bob Cook have been playing well, as Homestead has shown great promise and Cook has provided some needed balance as the number two singles man and the other half of the number one doubles team. Ken Boyle is the other half of the combination.

In Grundy's match yesterday against Monmouth, he won his singles match by a score of 6-0, 6-2. More winning efforts such as that are hoped to be gotten from Grundy, along with senior captain Bob Maloney and freshman Tim Kristeck, to thwart any more debacles such as the Upsala and Glassboro State College (GSC) washouts.

The Indians, trying to get back on the winning tract won two games from Jersey City State College (JSCS) this past Friday and Saturday by scores of 10-0 and 12-2 respectively, but lost to Adelphi University (Adelphi) on Sunday 12-1. This left the Indians record at 11-10.

The Indians, on the other hand, had a great day offensively as they managed 12 runs, with three of them coming in the first inning, on three hits. In the fifth, five runs were registered on five hits as the Indians put the game away early.

Mark Bujnowski went three-for-four on the day with two rbi's. Eddy Zangari had two rbi's, going three-for-five, with two doubles and a single. Tom Basil, Bob Fortunato, and Pete Spear all had one rbi apiece, with Spears connecting for a home run.

On Saturday, in Jersey City, the Tribe won by that 10 run margin again, with Glen Roe going eight strong innings before giving way to Steve Wacker.

Roe the freshmen phenomenon, in gaining the victory raised his record to 3-2. Mike Cozza now 2-2 absorbed the lost for JCSC. Roe limited JCSC to five hits.

However, on Sunday the Indians short three game winning streak came to an end, as they were blasted by Adelphi 12-1.

The lone run for the Indians was scored and produced by Eddy (Z-man) Zangari. The Z-man pounded a solo home run to lead off the game. The 5'10" 155 pounder senior lefty also struck out four in the game.

MSC Trio Qualifies

Three MSC track and field competitors have qualified for the NCAA Division III championships, to be held May 23 to 26 in Cleveland, Ohio. Co-captains Rich Wallace and Bob O'Dell and javelin thrower Lance Sorchik will lead the MSC contingent to the championships, and MSC coach Dick Grey expects at least two more of his athletes to qualify for the meet.

Sorchik and O'Dell have met the qualifying standards in their events several times, Sorchik having thrown 208', O'Dell clearing 6'9" in the high jump. O'Dell placed eighth in the 1978 nationals and is sure to continue.

Wallace qualified last Friday at the prestigious Rutgers Relays, placing to a 1:52.32 clocking in the 800 meters, one of the fastest times on the East Coast this spring. Wallace placed seventh in the year's nationals at Calvin College, Grand Rapids, Michigan. He was third in his section at the Rutgers Relays, and also led the MSC mile relay team to a third place finish at Rutgers.

Doherty also had an outstanding day on Friday, placing fourth in his section of the 1500 meter run. Doherty clocked 3:55.2 in the race, barely missing the NCAA qualifying standard of 3:54.9.

Doherty and intermediate hurdlers Tyrone Sherrod and Tim MacMahon are good bets to reach the qualifying marks in their events, and the mile relay team is also close to meeting the standard.

The mile relay team will compete at this weekend's Penn Relays in Philadelphia. O'Dell and Sorchik will also compete in their specialties, and MSC will field teams in the 800 meter and 400 meter relays.

Krause Leads Squaws to Win

by Kenneth Lang

The women's softball team continues to excel this spring at MSC as the Squaws won three games last week. Their most recent victory over William Paterson College (WPC) raised their won-lost record to 9-2.

MSC defeated WPC 6-5 on Tuesday afternoon at Brookdale Park. Dawn Lacey, who's been the top pitcher for the Squaws, got the victory.

MSC opened the scoring in the game with four runs in the second inning. With two out in the inning, Sue Schota tripled and scored when the pitcher for WPC balked. Robin Krause walked, Karen Festa reached on an error. Then Squaw Nancy Olson came up with the second big hit of the inning, another triple, scoring Krause and Festa. Olson then scored on a Pioneer error.

MSC added two more runs in the fourth, Krause singled, but was forced at second base by Festa. Then Olson came up with a two-run home run to up the lead to 6-0.

WPC scored three times in the fifth. Linda Diino singled as did Diane Saggase. Wendy Simone singled in one run, with Simone moving to second base. With runners on second and third, Sandy Horan singled in two runs.

The loss dropped WPC's record to 5-3.

MSC played Lehman College in a game re-scheduled by an earlier rainout. They defeated Lehman College 6-1 as MSC pitching gave up only two hits in the game, both coming in the inning Olson scored their run.

MSC opened the week with a 4-0 victory over the Lionettes of Trenton State College (TSC). They gave up only three hits to TSC in the game. MSC's women's softball team is fast becoming the winningest team on campus.

Cheering is Fun

by Ken Lambert

When the sport season comes to an end, it is mentioned how well the season went, how the athlete did individually, and whether any records were broken. One thing that is not mentioned is how much time and effort was put in by the cheerleaders.

The cheerleaders go through practice everyday, they also go over routines until they are perfected, and like some sport teams, they also have a pre season. "Just as the sport season comes to an end and begins again, so does cheerleaders tryouts. Tryouts were held from Wed., April 18, with the final decision made on Mon. April 23.

There were also eight males, and all eight were kept, because there are a lot of routines that are added. The judging was done by three people, two who aren't members of the school, and one a graduating senior. It was done in this form to assure the participants of fairness.

The participants were judged on many different things, including cheers, dance routine, lifts, floor exercises, mini-trampoline, appearance, personality and the all important, enthusiasm.

The MSC cheerleaders as the attempt to get some spirit into the crowd.

Ann Fuhrman, a freshman nutrition major, Joyce Moskowitz, a junior recreation/therapy major, and Barbara Keenan, a sophomore primary education major, completed the women's roster.

Some of the things that the cheerleaders will do include, a meeting on Monday, practice during the summer, going to a National Cheerleading Camp in Tennessee in August.

"They are a great bunch of hard working kids who represent the school very well, they try to promote school spirit going," advisor Trude Wolfarth, said.

"I would like to thank the fellas for coming out and strengthening our cheerleading squad," she added.

Athlete of the Week

by Andy Kaye

About six years ago, a gentleman in Clark, NJ, known affectionately as "Mr. C." started a lacrosse club at Clark High School. One of the young men who "Mr. C." (for Carvelano) had on his team was inexperienced Bob Gillespie. Since those embryonic days of Gillespie's lacrosse career he has gained enough experience and developed enough talent for MSC coach Spencer Willard to call him, "Possibly the best lacrosse player MSC has ever seen." Gillespie is this week's MSC Athlete of the Week.

Gillespie joins football's Sam Mills and wrestling's Ken Mallory in a select group that have won the Athlete of the Week honor twice. He is the first athlete to win the honor two weeks in a row.

Gillespie's career came to an abrupt halt last year when an ankle injury sidelined him for an entire season. It was a frustrating time for the two-time All-Knickerbocker Conference performer as he stood helplessly on the sidelines. Looking back on those days, Gillespie notes with a broad grin on his face, "It was driving me crazy. However, I did learn things about the game from a coaching point of view. You see certain things on the sidelines that you don't see when you're playing."

But his value to MSC lacrosse is not as a coach or cheerleader, and so his return to the playing field was anxiously awaited. He hasn't been disappointed.

He has consistently been MSC's most outstanding player.

It appears he is totally over his injury although he admits that subconsciously he still thinks about it. "You try not to think about it, but subconsciously I guess you have to," he said.

This past week, Gillespie led MSC to three straight victories as the squad upped its record to 7-2. The week opened with a hard fought road victory over Villanova. A four goal performance by Gillespie highlighted a 13-11 MSC win. "We knew we had the potential to win if we played as a team," Gillespie commented. "It was our best defensive game. We concentrated on controlling the ball and working our plays."

After an easy 16-5 victory over New York Maritime (four more goals for Gillespie), MSC traveled to Madison to face Fairleigh Dickinson. In a game they'd never beaten before, MSC came away with a 14-13 overtime victory.

While Gillespie played his usual standout game, much of the credit for the victory must be given to reserve Mike Bocech. Bocech, playing for the injured George Nucera, came up with a five point performance. "He just had a hell of a game," Gillespie noted.

While MSC is going quite well, they still have a tough part of their schedule coming up. Gillespie isn't worried though. "We'll show people just how good we are."

Gillespie is one guy who won't have to show people how good he is-they already know!!!
by Dave Yourish

“‘It feels great,’” an ecstatic Alan Geissel stated after his overtime goal lifted MSC’s lacrosse club to a 14-13 first ever victory over Fairleigh Dickinson University (FDU)-Madison, at the Madison campus.

The victory could be the biggest game of the stickmen’s career as they are headed for their best season ever. “It was one of the best games we ever had, it was a team effort,” coach Spencer Willard commented about the victory.

The Red-and-Whites now stand at 7-2 tying their 7-2 season record of 1974, and the stickmen still have five games remaining.

In the first quarter FDU was called for a slashing penalty with only seven seconds gone. This set the tone for the game, which was to be rough, with crisp body checks.

George Nucera was hit with a fierce body check just as he let a shot go, and unfortunately for both Nucera, a top scorer on the club, and the stickmen, he suffered a concussion on the play and was lost for the rest of the game.

Mike Bocech opened the scoring for its best on this warm, sunny day, and as a result FDU came back again and at the end of the third led 9-7 with Gillespie scoring again for MSC.

FDU made it 10-7, but MSC came back one more time to pull within one goal, 10-9. With an FDU player in the crease and the referee not making a call, the Knights scored for an 11-9 lead.

However, Tony Orlando scored to close it to 11-10. Orlando scored on a bounce shot after Coach Willard had been yelling for the players to shoot bounce shots, in order to up the chances for more goals.

The Knights scored on a picture perfect play to pull ahead 12-10 and things looked bleak for MSC with only about five minutes left in the game.

But scoring once again for the stickmen was Gillespie and Bocech, with Bocech scoring after a steal from right in front of the goal. “It was the most beautiful play,” Willard explained. “He (Bocech) heard the goalie calling for the ball and made the steal. It was a smart play,” Willard added.

All the scorers could be considered heroes, and Willard summed up the win best. “It was a team effort,” he said simply.

Finally, with about 20 MSC fans looking on, Geissel ended the game in sudden death overtime. “I always wanted to beat them,” he commented after getting a big kiss from his girlfriend.

STICKMEN CHATTER: Gaykowski had at least three crunching checks for the defense. Games coming up: This Saturday, Upsala home at 2 pm; Tues., May 1, Kutztown at 3 pm; Fri., May 4, arch-rival Kean at 3 pm; and Mon., May 7 at 3 pm. All three games are away. Nick Tropiano’s still out with broken leg—should be back for Kean game. In the Villanova game—which MSC won—Garry Gelston played goal because Buonocore’s car broke down. Gelston’s lifetime record, now 1-0. Buonocore was excellent in goal as usual against FDU.
