Fire violations neglected since ’78

by Dennis Bloshuk

Over 500 violations of the Life Safety Code, including the storage of enormous amounts of combustible materials in every major building on campus, were discovered in a recent inspection of the campus.

The inspection, which was done in January, showed 102 of these violations were repeated from an inspection done in March, 1978.

Some of the other violations include the blocking of stairway doors, and the lack of fire alarm, smoke detector, or sprinkling system on campus. There was also the lack of fire doors, and the lack of fire alarm, smoke detector, or sprinkling system.

MSC has requested the department of higher education to support the college's Capital Budget Request Project No. 8000003. This project would provide $1.13 million for deferred maintenance. $600,000 of which would be going to meet required fire safety standards.

Possible bond issue

"There has been discussion of the possibility of a rejuvenated bond issue for capital improvements," Mininberg said. "However it probably won't come up this year, but most likely next year when they're having the gubernatorial elections."

Mininberg said that 75 percent of the items in the January report have already been corrected, 12 percent will not be corrected because of lack of funds, and 12 percent will be decided upon when John Lawler, representative for the state fire marshal, inspects the campus on Monday.

"One of the problems with this college is that it was built on one of the oldest campuses in NJ and it makes it harder for us to correct things," Mininberg said. He added another problem is that fire standards are always changing, thus making it difficult not to have violations.

Americans missing in Iraq raid

(BLOOMFIELD, NJ)—Four Americans were listed as missing in Iraq yesterday after an air raid on a petrochemical plant in the mideast nation’s oil rich gulf region.

Previous reports said the three were among a group of 10 employees of the Lummus Construction Company killed in the attack. But Arnold Vogel, a spokesman for the Bloomfield based firm, said the fate of the missing workers isn’t known.

He said the company can’t confirm if they are dead because of poor communications between Basra, Iraq, and the New Jersey office. He said the missing workers were identified after a bus convoy of about 1,000 workers arrived in Kuwait from Iraq yesterday.

The company reported yesterday that the 10 were killed in Monday’s air attack on the plant being built in Basra by Lummus for the Iraq ministry of industry and mines.

Students arrested for assault

(HOWELL TOWNSHIP, NJ)—Police in Howell Township yesterday said they picked up seven high school students and are looking for another in connection with an assault on students from a rival high school.

Howell policeman Michael Cohen said all of the youths arrested are students at Howell High School. He said they will be charged with assault in connection with the attack on students from Saint Joseph’s High School.

Cohen said one Saint Joseph’s student suffered a broken jaw in the attack and another suffered a concussion.

Police said some Howell High School students threw a brick at the Saint Joseph’s school bus. They said when the driver stopped to check the damage, the two assaulted the driver and boarded the bus.

Police said those two were joined by six others from Howell High School who then attacked six Saint Joseph’s students—all between the ages of 12 and 15.

Cohen said police believe the attack was planned and the result of a long standing rivalry between the two Monmouth County High Schools.

NJ crops hurt by drought

(NEWARK, NJ)—Farm crops in New Jersey are being threatened by water shortages, which have already reduced crop yields and shrunk the size of fruits and vegetables.

The drought resulted in 15 of the state’s 21 counties being declared federal disaster areas. The state has suffered through three straight months of above normal temperatures and below normal rainfall. Officials are warning of possible rationing in addition to the bans on nonessential use of water already in effect in the heavily populated Northeastern section of the state.

Ex-yippie makes big money

(WALTHAM, MASS.)--Remember the Yippies of the 1960’s, who criticized American society as they found it? Well, former Yippie Jerry Rubin got $1,500 this week for a speech at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass. He urged the students to make capitalism work for better social values. And not to smoke too much marijuana.

And he announced that former Yippie Abbie Hoffman will speak at Brandeis next week.

Indictments for dumping

(TRENTON, NJ) Two chemical companies in Middlesex County were indicted yesterday for allegedly dumping four million gallons of toxic chemical wastes into sewer systems.

Attorney General John Degnan said the indictments were not related to each other.

In one indictment, the Duane Marine salvage corporation of Perth Amboy and its officers were charged with discharging more than 500,000 gallons of pollutants into the Perth Amboy sewer system. The firm is also accused of dumping more than 80,000 gallons of hazardous chemicals into the Edgboro landfill in East Brunswick.

The second indictment charges Madison industries of Old Bridge with the dumping of 3.2 million gallons of untreated chemical wastes directly into the Old Bridge sewage treatment facility.

To improve the current fire alarm and detection system, a new $1 million computerized energy system will be installed.

It will regulate energy and provide a fire detection system that will indicate the location of any breaks in the system.

"We're making progress to improve the safety conditions on this campus," Minniberg said.

Minniberg said the meeting with the state fire marshal on Monday will be an important one.

"If there is something that might have to be fixed," Minniberg said, "I will order my people to do it, if needed."

Another problem, he said, was that many of the old fire alarms would go off, ring for a minute, and then shut off. Students would leave the buildings when the alarm sounded, and reenter the buildings after the alarm had stopped ringing, assuming it was safe. "Some of the alarms were so sensitive," Minniberg said, "if the windows were open and wind blowing, the alarms would go off." He said this happened often in Freeman Hall. Minniberg said the new alarm systems were installed in those buildings where the problems were taking place.

Minniberg also said that fire extinguishers in all buildings are inspected every other week they are operating correctly or need recharging.

Sister cities reunion

by Regina Brzek

Visitors from Austria arrived on campus Monday to begin a 10-day-long celebration of the sister city relationship between the Town of Montclair and Graz, Austria.

An "American Sampler" luncheon was among several scheduled events for the guests. Honorary degrees were awarded to Dr. Alexander Gotz, mayor of Graz, and Austrian consul general in NY, Thomas Nowotny. MSC president Dr. W. D. Dickson led the invocation for the visitors.

Following the luncheon the delegation of 41 people was entertained under the auspices of Overseas Neighbors, the organization which conceived the sister city relationship.

Students were welcomed to participate in the several activities held on campus. Monday's agenda included the opening exhibition of silk-screen works by Austrian artist Kiki Kogelnik. The exhibition is on display in Gallery One, and Life Hall until Oct. 31. On Tuesday, a physical fitness demonstration including discus, roller, and square dancing was held in Panzer Gym. The Graz visitors had access to the college pool and enjoyed guided tours of the campus.

Beneficial for MSC

Rhea Seagull, director of public relations, sees the Montclair-Graz sisterhood as being very beneficial for MSC students. "The anniversary celebration helps students to obtain a different perspective of a culture other than their own," Seagull said. MSC students benefit from several social events, books donated to Sprague Library by the guests, and a yearly exchange of students with the University of Graz.

The sister city relationship was conceived in 1949 by active citizens of Montclair. Graz was chosen because it is similar to Montclair with its university, opera, and mountainous topography. Another important factor concerning the choice was Graz's proximity to the Iron Curtain countries of Hungary and Yugoslavia. The Overseas Neighbors thought exposure to American culture would help combat the communist influence entering Southeastern Austria from the bordering satellite countries of Russia, Seagull said.

Campus cooperates

Nora DePalma, student public relations assistant, reported a great deal of assistance from campus organizations and hopes for further participation in the coming week. "We're hoping to impress the image of an active, hardworking student body to our guests," DePalma said. MSC participation was made possible partially due to backing from the Alumni Association.

Students out in the cold

by Dorrie T. Christman

Come Dec. 23, the majority of Freeman Hall residents may be evicted from their rooms for the duration of winter session to make way for winter session students.

According to the Residence Hall Contract, those winter session residents will be required to purchase a meal plan that costs $11 more per week than the current price for the same plan.

No action has been taken by Freeman residents yet, but many are outraged over this unprecedented procedure. One resident said, "We’re damaged if we do and we’re damaged if we don’t. I can’t afford to live here for winter break, but I don’t want to move all my stuff out either. Students who are planning to stay in Freeman are concerned over the increased price for the meal plan. Student Lori Sloan said, “I’m infuriated about having to pay this extra money, but I feel like I have no other choice.” Freeman residents Mike Galcotafiore and John Capogrosso are both planning to stay during the winter break and pay for their room. They said they won’t pay the extra cost for the meal ticket because they can eat better and cheaper at Burger King.

Lois Redd, secretary of housing said, “The price for the meal plan is still indefinite, but the increase would be due to overhead costs. The normal number of meal tickets purchased during the year is 1,500. Whether Cuisine is serving 1,500 or 70, their overhead is the same. The increased price would compensate for this.”

According to Marjorie Coleman, director of Freeman Hall, “If 100 or more people sign up for winter session by November and request to live on campus, Freeman Hall will be open for their use.”

Winter session residents will be expected to obtain a 10-meal plan from the college food service, Cuisine Ltd. Raymond Stover director of housing said, “If I can’t get the food service, if I can’t get the people to do it, if needed.”

Cheryl De Lancey, a senior living in Freeman Hall said, “I think it’s a good idea to allow winter session people to live on campus, but I think it’s ridiculous to make Freeman residents move all their stuff out, no matter how far in advance we’re notified.”

The decision to open the dorm to winter session students was made by Stover after SGA president Brian Cage recommended it last spring. Among the reasons that Freeman Hall was chosen over other dormitories were its size and the fact that it’s run by a professional director rather than a graduate assistant. Although Freeman Hall is a college residence, it is an exception to the general dormitory system.

The cost to live in Freeman during winter break will be $36 per week and $27 per week for the 10-meal plan, according to the contract.

When asked who would be eligible to stay in the dorm during winter break, Stover replied, “We would be fairly flexible in that area. Students registered for winter session courses, students practicing for winter sports, anyone working on academic projects, and even students who may have local jobs would all be eligible to live in Freeman.”

Some problems have yet to be resolved and John Sherman, assistant director of housing, will be chairing a committee for that purpose.

cont. from p. 1 allocations by about $340,000. Bunstein said he understands the proposed budget increase for the college's students; but he claims that the transfer is a traditional “matter of policy.” He states that the state board of higher education also exercised this policy in 1976 under similar circumstances.

Bunstein said, “If they accept it, we’re not going to be penalized for any errors in the ruling. The actual decision comes down to the SGA legislature to decide on the actions.”

The bill, incidentally, is passed by the Senate moved to respect the student’s ruling, he said, an appeal to the attorney general, originated amounts of intoxicants, and thus stimulate further participation. The bill would be used to defend the state colleges in the Senate. The state senate passed the bill, but a petition to rescind allocation of a percentage of tuition to tuition funds, as this wasn’t the reason for the hike in the beginning. Show them through your strength in numbers, that it is an inadvisable bill to pass.

The bill, sponsored in the upper house by Senate President Joseph P. Merlino (D-Merion) and Sen. Matthew Feldman (D-Temple), was passed by the senate and is scheduled for Assembly action Monday.

Career Corner

Experience required by Peter Prichard

The “Experience” only catch 22 is that many college students have to take it. Usually happens after graduation, but it can also take place while looking for a summer job. You might have to confront it in an interview or while looking through want ads in the newspaper.

You’ll know you’ve been through it when an employer tells you he only hires people with experience. What follows are some suggestions. Future columns will deal with resources and ideas for those students graduating in December. You might have a chance to take advantage of some of these ideas for obtaining related experience prior to graduation.

Internships—Many organizations offer paid and nonpaid internships to college students in particular fields or work settings. The Co-op Services in Life Hall has a dozen resources that list internship opportunities. These include The Student Guide to Mass Media Internships, The Directory of Public Service Internships, The Directory of Undergraduate Internships, The Directory of Internships, Work Experience Programs, and The Job I Training Opportunities. Co-op Education—Another solution for undergraduates facing the “experience only” hiring, are the Co-op Ed. Students from all academic areas can work in jobs through co-op education while making top pay. Moreover, since co-op jobs are always academically relevant, students acquire sought after experience before graduation.

This unique approach to learning internships to add participants in entering the work force with greater ease upon graduation. The co-op Ed. staff in Life Hall is forward to meeting you at its weekly information meetings, held in the Co-op Ed. Office each Monday at 10 am and Wednesday at noon. For more information call 293-4426.

Part-time employment opportunities often provides students with career related experiences. The Co-op Services has a counselor who works with students looking for part-time employment while attending school. The part-time job books are updated daily and examples of a few of the current openings are given at the end of each bimonthly issue of Internships, The Directory of Public Service Internships, The Directory of Internships, Work Experience Programs, and The Job I Training Opportunities.

Campus Police report
Break-ins plague MSC

by Chris Carroll
A female MSC student allegedly received a threat from a male on Sept. 20 at 7:30 pm. The victim stated that a male, described as being 20-22 years old with blond hair, said "I'm going to rape and kill her." She said the male was with two other males and a female when he made the threat. Officer James Founacht filed the report.

Matt LaCourte, a sophomore physical education major, reported damage and missing property from his car on Sept. 19. LaCourte parked his 1965 Mercury Comet in Lot 14 on Sept. 18. When he returned to his car the next day, he found his antenna broken, his window smashed, and his car battery missing. The total value of the damage and missing property was undetermined, the report stated. Officer Robert Williams filed the report.

Karen Weng also reported damage to her car on Sept. 22 at 1:37 am. Weng said she parked her car in Lot 14 and later found the windshield of her 1974 Chevy Vega smashed. There was no evidence as to what type of instrument was used to cause the damage, the report stated.

While on routine patrol on Sept. 22 at 1:46 am, sergeant Michael Postaski noticed the Northwest door to Chapin Hall was open. Postaski approached the door and observed that the bottom of the door was torn away, and the locking mechanism broken. The building was checked by Postaski, sergeant John Johnston, and officer Paul Cell, but no suspects or further damage were found.

Officer Williams was called by the Montclair police department on Sept. 19 at 2:30 pm and asked to make a composite sketch of the person involved in a jewelry store holdup in Montclair. Williams reported to the Montclair police department and interviewed two witnesses in the case. Two composite sketches were made by Williams to aid in the investigation, the report stated.

Prof dead at age 68

Walter K. Kops, professor emeritus and distinguished teacher of history and social studies for 31 years, died at home Aug. 16 from a massive coronary. He was 68.

Retired as of January, Kops came to MSC in 1953 after 15 years as a high school teacher. He served as chairman of the history and social studies departments and was past president of the NJ Council for the Social Studies, a member of the National Council for the Social Studies, and director of the Council for Economic Education.

An active member of the Alumni Association, Kops served on its Executive Board from 1969 to 1973, and was awarded the Alumni Bicentennial Citation for his innovative teaching methods.

As a Guggenheim fellow, Kops studied at the University of Munster in Germany. He received his BA and MA from MSC and completed his doctoral studies at Teachers College of Columbia University in NY.

Kops' wife, Marjorie, said, "He devoted his whole life to working with students in teaching." Dr. Harry Baltc-H, a professor in the political science department and longtime acquaintance of Kops', said, "He was a marvelous man. He had the highest integrity and his life was devoted to students."

Dr. Helen E. Royer of the history department is presently organizing a committee of Kops' friends and colleagues for a memorial service.

Surviving are his wife, the former Marjorie Mackerley, a son, Walter E. Kops Jr., and a daughter, Anne Sobreck.

Students teach refugees

MSC students are doing their part to aid the newly arrived Cuban refugees by volunteering to teach them English. Every Monday and Thursday night 150 refugees and eight MSC volunteers meet in Memorial High School in West New York for four courses of beginning English and one course of advanced English.

Janet Susi, coordinator of English as a Second Language (ESOL) program, said, "These Cubans show an eagerness to learn English. They are aware that knowledge of the language is a necessity." Susi said that one woman heard of the classes while grocery shopping and was so excited she raced right over.

The program, directed by Dr. Margarita Garcia of the psychology department, is administered by the International Rescue Committee, a private foundation to aid refugees. The teaching program, which began Aug. 27, was initiated by Dr. Joan Englebert of the Spanish Italian department and Janet Susi.

Six Spanish majors, Maria Alves, Lori Lang, Odalys Serrano-Fernandez, Robert Silvestri, Karla Trentin, Kathleen Vacecoio, and French major Francisco Spera Fernandez, and a recent graduate, Marcia Tugorez, are the volunteers.

Susi asks that MSC education majors who are fluent in Spanish and wish to volunteer for this program contact her at 893-1153.

WMSC may be bumped off campus

A Newark-based radio station, WBGO, has applied to the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to install a transmitter and antenna on the same tower used by WMSC. According to Mike Bobrowicz, chief engineer and professional advisor to WMSC, if WBGO is installed on the tower, WMSC might not be heard on campus because of interference caused by a more powerful station.

WBGO, a non-commercial, jazz station, applied to the FCC to transmit 2,130 watts of power from a height of 400 feet on the tower, Bobrowicz said. Currently, WMSC is transmitting 10 watts from a height of 600 feet. If WBGO gets permission to operate from the tower, Bobrowicz said, WMSC might not be heard on-campus, but will continue to be heard in the surrounding towns.

WBGO applied for their license on June 2 and is awaiting confirmation from the FCC, Bobrowicz said. "I expect they will receive permission," he added.

"There is, to make a long story short, nothing we can do," Bobrowicz concluded.

Boycott now

Something is being asked of the students of NJ's colleges and universities. It isn't a simple request, to fulfill. But then asking someone to really stand up for himself isn't done often.

Four and a half million dollars of student money may be exported to out of state schools, unless we move to protest. That means that NJ students may be faced with a $4.5 million loss of library improvements, adjuncts, and available funds. It means $4.5 million dollars less of college.

For years the majority of NJ college students have been exploited by the state, and sat idly by like so many despondent children, while one or another bureaucrat chopped a piece of a department off here, or a cut back on faculty there. Bonds are floated to build a new dorm, money can be found to put down $650,000 worth of astroturf, but the quality of education and basic facilities seem to steadily worsen. It's getting harder and harder to find a college student who can write a complete sentence, but damn it we'll give 'em three new fields to play softball on! Money can be found for that!

On Fri., Sept. 26 at 7:30 am, students and faculty are being asked to abstain from attending regularly scheduled classes. They're being asked to stand up for themselves.

Very often, after a piece of legislation has become a reality, or a tuition increase has been approved students contact their student government and ask, "Where were you?" Well, your SGA is right before you, and asking for your support. They're asking that you pay attention to what's happening to your money, to understand that you're being abused, and to realize that you don't have to comply easily accept it.

There can be no failure for this strike if it receives the support it deserves. While the defeat of Bill A 1972 is the actions' primary goal, it is not necessary for success. The very fact that colleges are about to make Trenton well aware of the fact that they cannot fall back on student monies to remedy their own bureaucratic bungling is a victory in itself. Tomorrow's strike may very well put an end to Bill A 1972, but just as importantly, it may prevent similar bills from ever reaching the Assembly floor in the future.

The strike called for by Brian Cage, SGA president, and supported by both the American Federation of Teachers and the Faculty Senate, will send a message to Trenton. It will say that NJ state college students are for education which does not supply wayward bureaucracies with ready cash to fill the holes left by their incompetence.

Surely, if the strike begins Friday, stand up for higher education in NJ; and most importantly, stand up for yourself!

On Second Thought/Meryl Yourish

Support the strike

You might have noticed a bunch of noisy students in the Student Center Mall yesterday. I wasn't exactly an example of "silence is golden" myself. If you missed it, let me explain and hopefully clear up any misunderstandings. The SGA has declared a boycott—a boycott on classes tomorrow and Monday, to protest Assembly bill 1972. This bill proposes to take up to 50 percent of the recent $2 per credit tuition hike and channel it into the Tuition Aid Grant/TAG program.

Bill A 1972 is asking state college and university students to make up TAG's deficit, but there's a slight misunderstanding here. We did not create this deficit—the TAG programs for independent, community, and out of state colleges incurred this debt. State colleges and universities actually under­spent their TAG programs by $400,000.

If we didn't make the mistakes, why should we pay for them? Why should our money subsidize students going out of state? We need your support. We cannot have a boycott if you don't honor it. We need every last one of you to either stay home or join our picket lines. We have the support of the American Federation of Teachers and the Faculty Senate. We are asking professors not to schedule exams or penalize students for boycotting classes.

For those of you who would like to join our protests, I have a few guidelines you should all follow.

First and foremost, keep the protests peaceful. Do not use any form of violence. If you don't picket, don't attack those people who choose to drive onto the campus. We have no legal right to prevent anyone from entering the college. You can persuade, you can argue, but you can't threaten. Violence and vandalism will not help our cause. It will hinder it.

Each entrance will have several strike captains chosen from SGA legislators. Listen to these captains—they are assuming responsibility for all of their volunteers.

Park off campus if you can. Use the new lot on Clove Rd. and walk to the college—there are a few噪音 students there.

Students Speak
Freedom of choice wanted

What do you think of the possibility of your professors dictating an attendance policy for classes?

"I don't like it because I don't think that students should be made to go to class. They should only teach the students who want to go to class and learn. It's better this way in the long run for the professors and the students." —Teresa Vasta, 1982/2 Business

"I don't think this attendance policy is right. I mean this is college, not high school. I think it should be up to the students if they want to show then they should go." —Mike Pisani, 1983/Undeclared

"I think we should have an attendance policy because the classes are set for you to be there and you have an obligation to make a schedule that will work for you. So, because of this, if you're not in class I think it's defeating the whole purpose of getting an education." —Gregory Hammond, 1983/Undeclared

"Well, as far as getting graded, I think the attendance policy would be a good idea because if you're not in class, how are you going to keep track of the students going on." —Alyson Orban, 1983/political science

"I don't like the idea. I feel that we the students, since we're paying for our education, should be allowed to decide on our own whether we want to go to class or not." —Carol Schiavo, 1981/psychology

"I don't like it. We are paying for our education and it should be our choice if we want to show up for class or not. People do have things to do and they don't want to make a class so why should they be penalized for not showing?" —Paul Quense, 1982/history

"I really don't think our attendance should matter to the professors. I mean going to school is for our own benefit. If we don't want to go then we will go. If we don't then we don't!" —Rob Newman, 1982/marketing

When striking out makes sense

As you probably have heard by now, the SGA is calling for all MSC students to boycott their classes on Friday and Monday in protest of the Tuition Aid Grant/TAG bill currently before the state legislature awaiting a vote.

In brief, what this bill is doing is taking over half the $9 million generated by our (surprise!) tuition hike in midsummer, and giving it to the TAG program to eliminate its deficit. There is a deficit because too much money has been used to aid NJ students going to out of state colleges and private institutions in NJ. What is happening is that some slob is going to Princeton courtesy of your money.

Now asking college students to skip their classes and sleep late is like asking a child to skip the vegetables and eat dessert. The only problem is, some of their classes and sleep late is like asking a child to skip the vegetables and eat dessert. The only problem is, some of you are concerned about a scheduled test, or missing important material. Do not be concerned! You will not be penalized for honoring the picket lines! The Faculty Senate and the teachers union have voiced their respect of the boycott, so that includes most of your teachers. If you do encounter any teacher that does not understand the situation call the SGA at 893-4202, and tell them the teacher's name and the problem.

I have yet to hear of any teacher who is not supportive of our efforts. For once, the faculty, the SGA, The Montclarion, and the student body are all on the same side.

The next problem is what to do with your new found time. Catching up on your schoolwork is out of the question, and 7:30 am is too early for Miller time. We need your body on the picket lines! The main ideas of this action is to scare the state legislators into killing the bill. The more students we have out there in front of the reporters and TV cameras, the more the politicians will sweat watching the news. With elections less than six weeks away, these people don't want to be a part of any bill that caused a complete mutiny of their state college students.

Just one rule about joining the lines, if you want to be part of the excitement on the lines, just remember that you are there to verbally persuade students not to go to class. Cackle, plead, explain, beg or promise your first born son to them, but we are completely refraining from any kind of action that might be interpreted as force, such as smashing someone's head with a sledgehammer. Avoid this kind of enthusiasm. We want the legislators to take us seriously and understand our point, not use the other half of the $9 million to bail us out of jail.

Most importantly, please honor the lines. If you are not going to picket, or work for our effort in any way, stay home and take a day off. Postponed that trip to the library, and curb that sudden desire for a slice of Rathskeller pizza. The less people we have walking around, the better we will look to the media.

You will be blatantly rippedoff if his bill passes. This is the time to cure a decade worth of apathy. The New Jersey Institute of Technology, and Trenton State College are joining us as this column goes to press. Now it's up to you.

Let's all strike out.

Camelot: an SGA learning experience
by Laura Pedalino

For those of you that have not had the golden opportunity to attend and participate in a MSC leadership conference, it's time to find out what it is all about. You're missing out—and in more ways than one.

Aside from meeting crazy people and having a wild time, something unique is gained; an education aside from the kind that is given in the classroom. It's an experience, if you dare to take it and get involved.

The MSC student government requires all legislators to attend a leadership conference each year for the purpose of becoming familiar with the SGA Constitution, statutes, parliamentary procedures, office operations, goals, history, bill writing, and much more.

Some of the speakers who participated at the conference were Dr. David W.D. Dickson, MSC president, who discussed reorganization of the schools, the new General Education Requirement (GER), and the new writing policy. Dr. Elliot I. Mininberg, vice president of administration and finance, spoke on the board of higher education; Thomas Stepnowski, director of student activities; and Nader Tavakoli, former SGA president, who gave a presentation on the SGA in retrospect. Karen Dalton, SGA vice president, did all the organizing and planning for this trip and deserves a lot of credit for its success. Having the administrators drive over two hours back and forth for that short a time should show you how much the SGA is worth to MSC.

This year's leadership conference was held in the Pocono Mtns. at the Camelot Lodge, which had its good and bad points.

The conference room, which was also used as the cafeteria, was lighted not with white lights, but with red ones. This gave the room a dark atmosphere, which is not a good idea when lectures are taking place from 10 am to 10 pm.

Aside from the red lights, green water in the pool, the paper eating goat, and the food, the Camelot Lodge made us all appreciate MSC.

If you question the purpose or expense of the leadership conference, remember: one percent of your money went into learning how to spend the other 99 percent efficiently.

If you're not satisfied by that, stop by one of our meetings, which are held on Wednesdays at 4 pm on the fourth floor of the Student Center and come see your student government in action.

The Student Center Mall was the scene yesterday. According to Sonjui Lal, director of publicity for the SGA, purpose of SGA day is doublefold. It gives organizations an opportunity to make student aware of their functions, and also to recruit new members.

This year's SGA day had an additional objective. Three-hour demonstration was to make students aware of student walkout, that will take place Fri., Sept. 26, and Mon., in protest of the college's recent tuition hike, and give it to the administration in exchange for the $4.5 million deficit. SGA night preparing pamphlets and posters explaining to students would become fully aware of the seriousness of the student walkout.

"The SGA members were sure that making SGA day would be successful, but we didn't expect a response like we received," stated Lal enthusiastically.

Don’t say goodbye to...

by Bonnie Jerbasi

"He can play the fool make a few mistakes but all the same he’ll never be a bore."

Supposedly this is Steve Forbert’s overall view of himself from the song Going Down to Laurel. Last Sunday Forbert was no fool and if he did make any mistakes no one noticed. What he did prove beyond a shadow of a doubt was that he is far from boring.

Class I Concerts, under the direction of Kevin Mulvey, presented Steve Forbert in concert at Panzer Gym on Sept. 21st. The gym was filled to capacity and the major complaint of the evening concerned the unbearable heat.

The opening band for Forbert was The Nite-Caps, who played until 8:45. This new wave rock group consisted of four people who were later joined by the Uptown Horns (two horn and piano, and the mirror images of Dan Aykroyd and John Belushi—complete with black shirts, pants, and dark punky glasses). The warm-up bands interspersed their own songs with some "classics" (ie: Let’s

Ordinary people': Extraordinary

by Donna Marino

Ordinary People

Starring Donald Sutherland, Mary Tyler Moore, Timothy Hutton, and Judd Hirsch.

Screenplay: Weis Sargent

Produced by Ronald E. Schulz

Directed by Robert Redford

Deeply emotional and realistic performances by Timothy Hutton, Mary Tyler Moore, and Donald Sutherland transformed Ordinary People into an extraordinary experience.

Each actor immersed himself so fully and completely into his character, I had to keep reminding myself that it was only a movie I was witnessing, and not a real life event. The setting for the film was an ordinary middle-class American family, consisting of four people (father, mother, oldest son.

As the family sits down to dinner, the air throughout the film is deadeningly silent, only the clinking of silverware and the empty chair at the end of the table more empty.

As the family sits down to dinner, the clinking of silverware and the empty chair at the end of the table more empty.

The heat didn’t seem to bother him because he played nonstop for close to two hours.

Now, a cold, distant stranger has taken her place; a stranger that he

The Music: adapted by Marvin Hamlisch, was beautiful and haunting; however, there wasn’t enough of it. Some scenes, especially the deeply emotional sequences, might have been enhanced with a little music.

The role of music, as Forbert and Sutherland both remark, is to act as the perfect mood enhancer, creating a sense of wonder and awe. Without it, the emotional impact of the film would have been significantly diminished.

Get it On). One has to appreciate the hard work that the actors and crew put into making this film a success.

The Nite-Caps were no exception. Even though they had a good solid rock band, they used the opportunity to mix things up a bit, giving us a taste of "FORBERT" instead of the usual rock music. They got this response after each of their songs, thus provoking the lead singer to respond: "Forbert will be on in a few minutes, we’re not done yet!" And his purring words to the audience were, "SCME of you; you’ve been nice.” (Out stage left.)

A few minutes later and they were ready to rock.

The performance was fantastic. From the opening notes of the Nite-Caps’ song, Going Down to Laurel, to the closing notes of Forbert’s song, Alive on Arrival, the audience was on the edge of their seats. The reaction was overwhelming; people were screaming and cheering for more.

Forbert walked on stage in a turquoise blue cowboy shirt and black pants, looking very cool and ready for action. He started right in with Going Down to Laurel from his first album Alive on Arrival. The end of the song he was dressed with sweat but still going strong.

He didn’t seem to bother him because he played nonstop for close to two hours.

The warm-up bands interspersed their own songs with some “classics” (ie: Let’s
Little Stevie Forbert

He moved from one number to the next, interspersing the songs from his three albums: After an Arrival, Jackrabbit Slim, and his latest, Little Stevie Orby.

The musical quality was excellent—the speakers didn’t abuse the ears, and the strength of Forbert’s unique voice carried to the back of Panzer unscathed.

The audience, now quiet, appeared, moved with the flow. For the softer, slow songs there was an uncanny silence throughout the gym (e.g. I’m in Love with You). But for the country-knee-slap slapping rockers people were standing and clapping their hands to the beat, (e.g. Steve Forbert’s Midsummer Nights Looser).

Forbert is versatile and his talents are far reaching. He did a couple of songs with just his guitar and a harmonica (which he threw into the audience at the end of the show), and a few others with Paul Frerico on accordion.

For the most part, though, Forbert worked with his band: Bobby Lloyd Hicks, drums; Shuyne Fontayne, guitar; Hugh McDonald, bass; Robbie Kondor, piano; and Paul Frerico on keyboards.

Forbert didn’t say too much but he sure did sing. Aside from an occasional one-two-three-four, he started to say, “Does anybody think…” to which an audience member completed, “…it’s hot in here!” At one point Forbert took a glass of water and poured it over his head. He was so hot he didn’t seem to notice that he was still holding his electric guitar.

The standing ovations reached their peak when Forbert sang his three popular songs from Jackrabbit Slim: the hit single Romeo’s Tune, The Sweet Love That You Give, and Say Goodbye to Little Jo.

After these he left the stage only to return two more times to do encores (which lasted for a half an hour).

Forbert was energetic and vocally superb right to the very last song. He didn’t fail to entertain his audience to the utmost, and even provoked a few of his knee-buckling jumps around the stage.

In this day of complicated music and disco beats, a refreshing sound like Little Stevie Forbert will never die!
Four tunes make it—literally

by Bonnie Jerbasi

"I’d rather be a fairy than a troll," sang Angela Forrester (Ken Arthur) and his fiancee Tracy (Gail Herbert). The play is Fourtunes and it is at the Actor's Playhouse in Greenwich Village, N.Y.C.

Fourtunes is a new musical comedy with some interesting insights on today's lifestyles and interpersonal relationships.

The theater is intimate and the stage is set up in four parts. A rock band, a very professional one, is set in the bushes behind a screen; to the left is the group's dressing room; and the right and center serve as the main stage for their performances.

The action begins with Roscoe making rather overt passes at Brad. Brad resists, but it becomes obvious that he enjoys the attention. The group is appearing at the Ohio Turnpike Dinner Theater. Brad and Tracy are worried about their careers. Roscoe and Madelaine don't worry much about anything except who is going to share their bed that night. They all have one thing in common though: they want to be rich and famous—not an easy task considering the dive where they're singing.

Brad is seen as the real killer of the group. While he worries about wealth and fame, Roscoe has the solution of the moment: record is not selling as well as expected! There is only one answer: Maddie—drugs!

Eventually Brad, too, sees the light, takes a "lude" and loosens up! It is then that he reveals his lifelong secret to Roscoe (who has been in love with Brad since the tour began). He once modeled nude for a male photographer who wanted to capture his classic Greek features on canvas. The professor proceeded to tease and arouse him with a peacock feather and Brad loved it. Result: Roscoe finds a feather and repeats the erotic experience.

Meanwhile his fiancee, Tracy, is having a hot and heavy lesbian affair with Madelaine. She is torn between feelings of guilt and ecstasy. It is obvious that not one of the Fourtunes is "the shortest distance between two points!"

Not as confusing as it may sound—basically the play deals with the bisexual relationships of the group and the feelings that are involved.

The Murrayogg stage takes quite a beating. Roscoe and Madelaine have an open marriage, to say the least, that they refer to as "funky love"—no hang-ups, no ties.

The plot follows the non-conventional genre of Bob and Carol, Ted and Alice, intermixed with an abundance of songs, jokes and dance routines.

Fortunes was directed by Ron Troutman and written by Bill Russell. The Actor's Playhouse is located at 100 7th Ave. South in the Village.

"Murder at Studio Playhouse"

by Karen Meyer

The Studio Players began their 43d season with a highly enjoyable production of Bob Barry's comedy/mystery, Murder Among Friends.

The play takes place on New Year's Eve in contemporary Manhattan. Ted Cotton and Angela Forrester plan on disposing of her overbearing ex-husband, fudging theater figure Palmer Forrester. The two lovers have set up an elaborate scheme in which they stage a fake robbery.

The small New Year's party consisting of Forrester, his wife Madelaine, producer Marshall Saidenberg with wife, Gertie, will be disrupted by the appearance of "junkie robbin". This "robbin" is actually a hitman hired by Cotton. During the robbery, Ted Cotton and Palmer Forrester are shot. The Saidenbergs, who will have been chloroformmed, will think the robber did it. The "robbin" is never found, and Cotton and Mrs. Forrester start a new life.

Sounding simple? Well, even the most carefully laid plans go awry, and the plot takes on a life of its own more exciting than the L.A. freeway. The extreme complexity of the plot prohibits any further elaborations. Suffice to say, no one is who they seem to be.

The audience has to pay strict attention to what goes on stage. Fortunately, the actors make this an easy task. Caroline Caton and Richard Jenkins, who play Mrs. Forrester and Cotton, seemed a little lost at times in their roles, and some of their "in" jokes about Sardi's and Bloomingdales, go over too well, but after 10 or 15 minutes they settled quite comfortably into their roles. They were especially funny when they were trying to act calm and normal during the party.

Another "robbin" makes Forrester so odious and hateful that you can understand why Cotton and Mrs. Forrester do away with him. Milton Kosman and Helen Stein are extremely amusing as the unassuming Saidenbergs. The role of the hit man, Barry, is played by Edgar Rivera, who is hysterical with his heavy Spanish accent.

The direction, by Norman Keller, is somewhat fast paced. This can be taxing when you're trying to follow the plot, but the plot is absorbing and keeps you on your toes throughout.

The one set used in the play, the Forrester's apartment, was excellent. It certainly conveyed the richness of tonal color and variety. The Forrester's, apartment, was a new musical comedy

One dimensional performance

by Stephen Kantrowitz

Barbara Holmquest delivered a one dimensional piano recital in McEachern Recital Hall that is soon to be forgotten. Some pieces were covered with a mantle of brilliance that were few and far between, barely rose above being serviceable.

Holmquest has not appeared in a recital for a number of years. This clearly explains the quality of her performance. She is a conservative in style and in her approach to music. Unfortunately, everything she plays sounds the same. The listener is unable to be carried away by the music itself and is distracted by her own tastes and ideas. Holmquest has not appeared in a recital for a number of years.

The performance, save some moments of brilliance that were accomplished. My biggest complaint was that Holmquest came out sounding like Schumann.

The one set used in the play, the Forrester's apartment, was excellent. It certainly conveyed that rich, Club 21 type lifestyle, from the elaborate dances entitled Davidsbundlertanze, Op. 6 by Schumann. Essentially the piece is a series of contrasts between the two characters that are described: one, the impulsive and revolutionary Florestan, and two, the youthful dreamer, Eusebius. These two people were involved in the romantic movement against classicism.

Florestan was acknowledged by joyful, almost frenzied passages, while Eusebius was typified by dreamy and charming melodies. The exciting passages were passable, but the moments of repose were so laid back that the listener expected the music to be coming from a piano player in a cocktail lounge.

After intermission, Holmquest began with Ballade in F-minor, Op. 38 by Chopin. It was a beautiful piece, full of many memorable and touching melodies. Holmquest played as well as could be expected. But for the first time in my memory, I found her playing a Chopin piece, I found her playing an interesting piece. I found her playing with a lot of energy. I found her playing with a lot of style. I found her playing with a lot of conviction. I found her playing with a lot of feeling.

Unfortunately, everything she plays sounds the same. The listener is unable to be carried away by the music itself and is distracted by her own tastes and ideas. Holmquest has not appeared in a recital for a number of years.

The rock music industry is like a treadmill; if you do not move forward, you fall behind. Although a big-time act can usually get away with rehashing the same material from album to album for a while, too, they too will eventually fall by the wayside to be replaced by a fresher sound.

Ten years ago the group Jethro Tull was on the verge of becoming a major innovative force in the rock world. Throughout the early part of the 70's, the group, led by vocalist and flutist Ian Anderson, put out a string of fine, complex musical statements.

However, since then music has changed and the genre of music that Jethro Tull helped popularize is now obsolete. Perhaps sensing that it was time for a change, Anderson made major personnel shifts in the group prior to the recording of the band's latest album. Originally slated as an Anderson solo project, A supposedly signals a return to rock 'n roll by the group.

In today's inflationary economy it is hard to find a good quality stereo system at a moderate price. For the very best sound you usually pay extra for high power and elaborate features. But now we can offer NAD.

NAD eliminates the frills and incorporates advanced circuitry to produce budget-priced components with state-of-the-art performance.

The NAD 3020 integrated amplifier and 4020 FM tuner, at $349 each, epitomize NAD's philosophy that good audio design need not cost any more than a poor or mediocre one.

The NAD 3020, for example, at a nominally rated 20 watts per channel drives low efficiency (and low impedance) loudspeakers as loud and clean as most of the expensive heavyweights. The results of stringent laboratory testing of the 3020 were reported in the July issue of Stereo Review. After successfully driving four sets of loudspeakers (with a combined impedance as low as 1 ohm at many frequencies), Julian Hirsch declared that even without knowing its power rating and price, one could well conclude that it was one of the fine amplifiers of our time.

The women's tennis team remained undefeated (3-0) as they hung on to nip Monmouth College Monmouth, 5-4, last Saturday at Monmouth.

Once again, the doubles combination of Sue Dobosh and Mary Tuff proved unbeatable as they ripped Monmouth's Patrice Murray and Dede Phillips, 6-3, 6-2, to clinch the victory.

After jumping on top early in both sets, the MSC duo let themselves relax. Monmouth's pair quickly took advantage to tie the matches. Dobosh's rocket serve and Tuff's cat like quickness on the net prevailed.

Dobosh and Tuff, the Squaws' number one and three singles players respectively, also opened the day with singles wins.

Mary Lynn DeFeo gained her third victory in as many tries by beating Phillips in straight sets, 7-6, 6-1.

After rallying to narrowly take the first set, DeFeo made quick work of her opponent in the second. The 85 degree temperature, which played an important part in the match, seemed to reduce Phillips' performance to a few brief volleys after the long, grueling first set.

The Squaws' Sands Fixer, like her teammates DeFeo, Dobosh, and Tuff, remained unbeaten in singles play by walloping Kathy Kivior, 6-1, 6-2.

The match was never close as Fixer consistently aces her opponent with her twisting overhead serves.

MSC's Diane Lant and Donna Spector have had their problems so far this season. Lant has just been outplayed in most of her matches. Spector, on the other hand, has slipped a bit after an opening day triumph vs Fairleigh Dickinson University.

In doubles, aside from the Dobosh-Tuff tandem, coach Linda Sue Galate has yet to find a winning combination.

The Squaws' next home match is against Seton Hall University on Sat., Sept. 27 at 11 am. Centenary College comes in on Tue., Sept. 30 at 4 pm.

MAYBE YOU'D GET MORE OUT OF COLLEGE TWO YEARS FROM NOW.

You went to college right after high school just as you wanted. And NOW you find it isn't really what you want. At least, not right now. So do you stick it out and get a degree but not an EDUCATION?? Or do you come back later when you're more sure of what you want? Well, a good way to do the latter is to spend two years in the ARMY. You'll learn discipline, handle responsibility and develop a lot of maturity. You can also accumulate up to $7400 for college. You see, Uncle Sam will add two dollars to every dollar you save (up to $75 per month) for college. Then you can get a generous education bonus added to that.

TOTAL: up to $7,400 for college in just two years. Plus the experience to use it wisely. It's a good way to serve your country as you serve yourself. FOR MORE INFORMATION CALL: MSG Stanley Fischer Gateway Blvd., Sweet 1616 Newark, N.J. 201-645-6586
Mercy nips Tribe in OT, 1-0

by William Delorm

One mistake that all it took to decide the winner last Friday night as Mercy College edged MSC, 1-0, in the Tribe’s opener.

After 108 minutes of hard fought action, Mercy’s Steve Younande picked up a loose ball, raced past a fallen Tom Conners, and beat goalkeeper Mike Tropeano with a low bullet for the game’s only score. “It was a lucky goal. Our defender fell and the Mercy forward came down the wing,” Tropeano recalled. “Out of the corner of my eye I saw another blue shirt making a run into the middle. I leaned a little to the left, thinking he might pass it across, but he didn’t,” he added.

Left fullback Frank Erli nearly tied the game just seconds after Mercy had gone ahead.

The Indians took possession from midfield and worked the ball quickly out to the wing. Here, Erli tapped it forward and uncoorked a 40 yard knuckle ball.

Mercy goalkeeper Ed Winhoffer was forced to fly into the upper left hand corner to stop the shot and deflect it over the net and score. An enthusiastic crowd of about 400 MSC partisans turned out to cheer on the Indians and to see what their “new” image was. What they witnessed, sitting in a chilly Sprague Field, was a hard fought, close marking contest which neither team deserved to lose.

MSC was outshot 12-8 as much of the regulation game was played in the Indians’ end. The Tribe’s defense, however, was exceptional.

Led by tricaptain Paul Laddy, Dave Cornish, Erli, and Greg Stivala, the back line continuously harassed and battered Mercy’s forwards. Cornish, the team’s stopper, set out early to show Mercy’s striker just how he intended to play. With less than three minutes gone in the first half, Cornish and Mercy’s Younande received yellow caution cards for hacking at each other’s shins.

A total of six yellow cards were issued during the match—three to each club—as the referees were determined to keep the game clean from the outset. This was seldom the case, however.

MSC’s sweeper, Laddy, played a near flawless game in leading the defense. Running all over the field, he consistently stripped Mercy players of the ball, cleared dangerous passes, headed out 30-35 balls, and kept the pressure off the goalkeeper.

Both Mercy and MSC played the game with the same type of offensive strategy—working the ball in and out, and hitting the open spaces. The atmosphere surrounding the entire game was one that has seldom been matched at an MSC sporting event.

Music was pumped throughout the field as the teams warmed up. A Budweiser/MSC sports banner hung over the press box. The scoreboard was lit, the lights were on, and the Indian band announced onto the field one by one.

Through a tunneled line of lively cheerleaders trotted the Tribe, attired in their brand new scarlet and white jerseys and carrying World Cup "Tango" soccer balls.

They stood during the national anthem, hands behind their backs, pumped with more energy than 20 live generators. And when the whistle finally blew 110 minutes later, it was obvious that they had unleashed all that was inside of them.

Football kicks off season

by Mike Ritz

The opening games for SIFC’s men’s and coed football leagues were played last week, with last year’s two champions coming through the week unbeaten.

In the men’s league, the Terrorists started the defense of their title in convincing 44-0 triumph over the Assorted Nuts. The Bomb Squad, Coed, and the Quick Sicks all won both of their games to remain unbeaten going into the second week of play.

After the first week of the fall bowling league, the Gameroom Rags lead with a 70 record. Charlie Goring tops all male bowlers with a 202 high average, 214 high game and a 606 high series. For the women, Madeline Peters leads with a 165 high average and a 176 high game.

COMING EVENTS: Men’s 3-on-3 basketball will be held on Tue. and Wed., Oct. 7 and 8 in the Student Center Ballrooms at noon. Categories include sports, movies, television, and general knowledge.

For more information, call the SIFC office, ext. 5245.

Squaws zip SCSC, 2-0

by Steve Houde

In a tight, low scoring match, the Squaws opened their ’80 season in a big way by defeating Southern Connecticut State College/SCSC on Saturday, by the score of 2-0.

Most of the first half was played in the Squaws end as the SCSC offense applied constant pressure. The first 10 minutes was all SCSC as they had several close calls but failed to score.

The Squaws’ defense was strong, and Ronnie Gudewicz made some big saves in goal to keep MSC in the game. Gudewicz made five saves in the first half.

Debbie Detch, playing her first game for the Squaws scored the only goal of the first half at 12:00 to give the Squaws a 1-0 lead.

In the second half the Squaws’ offense was more aggressive and took control. Judy Popandia displayed sharp stick handling skills and came up with the teams’ second goal to give MSC a 2-0 lead.

Following the Popandia goal the Squaws came close again on near misses by Sheila Egan and Pat Connor.

SCSC almost got on the board in the closing minutes of the game but Gudewicz held them off to preserve the shut out. Unofficially, she registered a total of 11 saves while the offense had seven shots on goal.

Beth Malekoff and Egan were standouts on defense for MSC. Coach Donna Olson was very satisfied with the team’s play. “It really was a team effort, 110 percent by all,” she offered.
Tribe continues surge

Centerfielder Tony Sabato continued his hitting streak last Thursday, going three for three with three RBIs and a home run as the Indians nipped Fairleigh Dickinson University/FDU, 7-4, at Pittser Field.

Sabato’s sacrifice fly in the seventh inning was the deciding blow. Mark Baker, who reached third on an error, scored from third on the sacrifice fly. Ace righthander, and the club’s top tobacco chewer, Roger Lope upped his record to 2-0, rendering six runs on just six hits, including two home runs.

Yielding just two runs through the first six innings, Lope began to tire in the final three. FDU’s Chuck Sanacoco and Tom Havellan reached Lope in the late innings as the Knights rallied for four runs in the last three innings. However, they fell one shy.

MSC leftfielder Gene McDonald also added four more for the Tribe.

SMOKE SIGNALS: The Indians enhanced their record to 7-1 by sweeping Fordham University last Sunday....Shortstop Mark Bunowski had two home runs on the day....The Tribe takes on Rutgers University today at 3:15 pm at Pittser Field....Monmouth College comes in on Sat., Sept. 27 for a noon game and William Paterson College makes its first appearance at Pittser Field on Tue., Sept. 30 at 3 pm.

Brett, Gossage, Jackson eye A-MVP

This year’s Most Valuable Player/MVP award will be the most difficult to decide in the American League in quite awhile. Of course, to select an MVP before the conclusion of the season is premature, but unless wild developments occur three men seem to be the top choices.

The three primary candidates are Reggie Jackson and Rich Gossage of the Yankees, and George Brett of Kansas City. All three have helped their teams to the top of the standings, but each have hidden factors which may ultimately hurt their possible selection.

On the positive side for Jackson are his home runs and RBIs totals. Through this past Sunday, Reggie has hit 37 home runs and driven in 98 runs, and batted .287. But on the negative side is Jackson’s pitiful play in the outfield. Jackson may be doing some heavy hitting at the plate, however, he’s a flop in the field. Witness his play in the recent series with the Toronto Blue Jays. Jackson misplayed a routine ball in one stretch of a pennant race. Jackson has usually been “Mr. Choke” in September and October, but since Aug. 1 he’s been in the background. And being in the background in the midst of a pennant race is sure not to be chosen MVP.

The case for George Brett is indeed substantial. Yet, remember one thing: should Brett finish below .400 he shouldn’t get the award.

Unlike the pennant race of the Yanks and Orioles, the Royals had the Western division won by Memorial Day. So, performance during a pennant race cannot apply to Brett. However, chasing the goal of batting .400 is indeed pressure, similar to that of a pennant race. It comes down to this—Brett bats .400 or higher he gets the award hands down. If he doesn’t, he may still get it, but there is another player, though a darkhorse, who merits consideration.

The other candidate is reliever Rich Gossage. Over the last month and a half the “Goose” has been laying golden eggs with constant regularity. Just look at the statistics. He’s appeared in 33 games in August and held the lead. He’s saved 31 of them and recorded a win in 27 his last 33 outings.

The Yanks lost close games last year because they did not have Brett. This season the Yanks have won close games because of his presence. His consistency in the heat of a pennant race, where every game is a must, cannot be regarded lightly.

However, on the minus side, Gossage faces an uphill fight. No reliever has ever won the MVP award, and only recently has a Goose has accomplished.

If Brett fails to reach .400, then give the MVP to Gossage. A simple look at the facts justifies his selection. Last year without Gossage the Yanks could not finish ahead of the Birds. This year, with him, they’ve got the best record in the majors.

Most sports fans are aware of the overall superiority of the American Football Conference/AFC over the National Football Conference/NFC in the National Football League/NFL. Only two NFC teams (Green Bay and Dallas) have won the Super Bowl.

To most football fans, the NFC is basically boring, with little or no flair. Consider one position—quarterback.

The AFC boasts such stars as Terry Bradshaw, Dan Fouts, Ken Stabler, Steve Grogan, Jim Zorn and Brian, Super to name a few. The QB from the NFC to match that line up is recently retired Roger Staubach.

Consider also that some of the teams from the NFC which made the playoffs last year (Los Angeles, Chicago, and Tampa Bay) would have been only .500 teams at best in the AFC. On the other side of the coin, notable AFC teams (Oakland, Seattle, Cleveland, New England) did not make the playoffs. Yet, if they were in the NFC, they very well have won any division with the possible exception of the East.

To put matters frankly, the NFL needs realignment badly.

With realignment, the NFL can ensure competitive balance and fair distribution of the good and poor teams throughout the six existing divisions. But going with realignment the NFL can guarantee quality teams for the playoffs and minimize the chance of teams qualifying on the basis of a weak division or weak schedule. In this way encounters between the conferences can be brought towards some sort of respectability. And, hopefully, the Super Bowl will be decided at the Super Bowl and not in the AFC championship game as it has been in all but two times in the last 12 years.

EXTRA INNINGS:

One player the New York Knicks should trade for draft choices or a straight deal is Marvin Webster. The “human eraser” is doing only one consistent thing—erasing the Knicks each year. Granted, he’s been injured. But the injury excuse wears thin because when he has played he’s delivered little of anything.

Webster looked good in Seattle because the supporting cast assembled by Lenny Wilkins was talented and deep. The starter Webster never had the kind of support he had in NY. In fairness, too much was expected from him, but remember one thing: Webster never had the kind of skill the Knicks hoped for. He’s not a superstar. Average? Yes, and that’s all.

Once again the Knicks’ brass wagered on the one player theory. The one player theory is based on the premise that one top player can transform an average team into a great one. The only player capable of doing that in the National Basketball Association is Kareem Abdul-Jabar. And getting him from the Lakers is like getting cheaper oil from OPEC. Forget it.
Indians blank ESSC, 16-0

Grundy rambles for 161 yards

by John Huegel

MSC snapped a five year hex, last Saturday night, that East Stroudsburg State College (ESSC) held over them, as the Indians blanked the Warriors 16-0 at Sprague Field. It also marked the first time ESSC has been shutout in 52 games.

"This was certainly a big win for us, especially after losing last week," head coach Fred Hill commented after the game. Hill was particularly pleased with his team's pass rush. Sophomore defensive end Brian Carlson led the rush, recording three sacks, including a third quarter tackle of ESSC's quarterback Barry Kennedy in the end zone, for the game's first two points.

Running back Bill Grundy made his first start for the Tribe on Saturday and was the key to MSC's surprise victory. There was no evidence of a knee injury that had kept him out of the season opener vs Wagner a week ago, as he scrambled for 161 yards in just 27 carries, including a game breaking 75 yard touchdown run.

Until this run, most of the capacity crowd that lined the fences and stood on the grassy hill beyond the end zone were put to sleep by an uneventful first half and a slim 2-0 MSC lead.

Joe Rebholz started the game at quarterback, but when he failed to put the Tribe in the end zone after four attempts from inside the five, Hill called on backup Scott Fischer. Fischer sparked the Tribe's offense, completing four of seven passes for 42 yards including a 13 yard touchdown flip to wide receiver Terry Porter late in the fourth quarter.

The defense, once again led by linebacker Sam Mills, held the Warriors to -24 yards rushing and only 91 yards in total offense. All-America placekicker, Keith "Ice" Sahlin, has been a little shaky, hitting on only one of three field goal attempts. As one teammate put it, "The 'Ice' may be melting." For the Tribe's sake, let's hope not.

EXTRA POINTS: MSC's awesome defense held ESSC to an unbelievable 24 yards rushing and a measly 91 yards in total offense, last Saturday night at Sprague Field. It was the first time in 52 games that the Warriors have been shutout.
